IV. But if there wanted ſuch an elder ſo well skill'd in reading or reciting, that it became neceſſary for a ſervant or woman, or ſome more skilful boy to lead up, then let us hear what they did in that caſe. e If a ſervant or woman, or boy ſhould lead in ſinging עונה אחריהן מה שהן אומרים Every one in the Congregation recites thoſe very words which he had ſaid. אם היה גדול. If a more antient perſon, or one of greater note do ſing or read עונה אחריו הללויה they anſwer after him Hallelujah Now the reaſon why the words recited by e Talm. Succath. fol. 38. 1.

by a ſervant, Woman, or Boy, ſhould be repeated after them Verbatim, was this, becauſe ſuch an one was unfit to repreſent a Congregation, and his action could not avail for the reſt, ſo that it behoved every perſon to recite ſingly for himſelf, that he might perform his duty.

V. When they came to the words now in hand ברוך הבא בשם ה' Bleſſed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord, if it be a boy or a ſervant that is the præcentor: הזן אומר ברוך הבא והן אומרים בשם ה' He ſaith, Bleſſed be he that cometh, and the reſt anſwer, in the name of the Lord. And this is that for which I have ſo long ventured upon the Reader's patience, that he may obſerve what is done differently from the reſt, when this clauſe is recited. It is cut in two, which is not done in others. And the firſt words are not repeated after the præcentor, as they are in other clauſes. And whether this cuſtom obtained only in families where ſervants or boys led up in ſinging, we may judge from this following paſſage.

f They askt R. Chaijam bar Ba, how doth it appear, that he who heareth, and doth not anſwer, perform his duty? From this ſaith he ראנן חמין רבנין דברביא קיימין בציבורא that we ſee the greateſt Rabbins ſtanding in the Synagogue, ואילין אומרין ברוך הבא and they ſay bleſſed be he that cometh, ואילין אומרין בשם וגו' and they anſwer, in the name of the Lord, and they both perform their duty. Midras Tillin leaves theſe laſt words בשם וגו wholly out. For ſo that hath it: The men of Jeruſalem ſay from within, אנא יי הושיעה נא ſave us now O Lord we beſeech thee. The men of Judea ſay from without אנא יי הצליחה נא proſper us now Lord we beſeech thee. The men of Jeruſalem ſay from within, ברוך הבא bleſſed be he that cometh; and the men of Judea ſay from without, we have bleſſed you out of the houſe of the Lord. f Hieroſ. Succab. fol. 54. 1.

I will not confidently aſſert that theſe men had any ill deſign when they thus mangled this famous clauſe; but ſurely there is at leaſt ſome ground of ſuſpition, that they hardly referr the words to the right object. R. Solomon aſſuredly doth not. For, ſo it ought to be ſaid (ſaith he) to thoſe that bring their firſt-fruits, and go up to the Feaſts.

1. To come, is oftentimes the ſame with them as to teach; g If any one ſhall come in his own name, him ye will receive: i. e. If any one ſhall teach. And ſo it is frequently in the Jeruſalem Talmud, concerning this or the other Rabbin אתא he came, and בר אתא when he cometh. Which if it be not to be underſtood of ſuch an one teaching, I confeſs I am am at a loſs what it ſhould mean elſe. g Joh. v. 43.

2. Thoſe Doctors did not come and teach in the name of the Lord, but either in their own name, or in the name of the traditions of ſome Father. Hence nothing more familiar with them, than, R. N. in the name of R. N. ſaith: as every leaf, I may ſay almoſt every line of their writings witneſs. If therefore by cutting ſhort this clauſe, they would be appropriating to themſelves the bleſſing of the people, whom they had taught to ſay, Bleſſed be he that cometh, letting that ſlip, or omitting what follows, in the name of the Lord; they do indeed like themſelves, cunningly lying at catch and hunting after fame and vain-glory.

Let the Reader judge whether Chriſt might not look this way in theſe words. However, I ſhall not ſcruple to determine that they ſhall never ſee the Meſſiah, as to any advantage to themſelves, till they have renounced the Doctrines of coming in their own name, or in the name of the Traditions of their Fathers, embracing his Doctrine who is come in the name of the Lord. Which whether they ſhall ever do or no, let him determine, who can determine whether that Nation ſhall ever be converted.

VERS. I.

Σαββάτῳ φαγεῖν ἄρτον. To eat bread on the Sabbath day.

THE Jews tables were generally better ſpread on that day than on any others: and that as they themſelves reckoned, upon the account of Religion and Piety. I have ſpoken to this elſewhere; take here a demonſtration. a Rabba bar Rabh. Honna went to the houſe of Rabba bar Rabh. Nachman. He ſet before him three meaſures of rich cake; to whom he, how did you know of my coming? the other anſwered is there any thing more valuable to us than the Sabbath? The Gloſs is: we do by no means preferr thee before the Sabbath. We got theſe things ready in honour of the Sabbath, not knowing any thing of thy coming. a Schabb. fol. 119. 1.

Rabh.

Rabh, Abba bought fleſh of thirteen Butchers for thirteen ſtaters ומשלים להן אצינורא דרשא and paid them at the very hinge of the door. The Gloſs tells us, That he bought of thirteen Butchers that he might be ſure to taſte the beſt, and before they could come that ſhould bring the fleſh, he had gotten his money ready for them, and paid them at the very gate, that he might haſten dinner: and all this in honour of the Sabbath day.

R. Abhu הוה יתיב אביתקא דשתא וסושיף נורא ſate upon an Ivory throne, and yet blew the fire. That was toward the cooking of his dinner, in honour of the Sabbath. It ought not to be paſſed by without obſervation that Chriſt was at ſuch a dinner, and that in the houſe of a Phariſee, who doubtleſs was obſervant enough of all Ceremonies of this kind.

VERS. III.

Ἐξέστι τοῖς σαββάτῳ θεραπεύειν. It is lawful to heal on the Sabbath day?

A Jew will be ready to cavil againſt the truth of the Evangeliſts, upon the occaſion of this and ſuch like queſtions they report from our Saviour. What need had he (will ſuch an one ſay) to ask this queſtion, when he could not but know, that in danger of life it was permitted them to do any thing toward the preſervation of it: Nay, where there was no imminent danger, they were allowed to apply Medicines, Plaſters, &c. eſpecially, which I muſt not omit גומרתא נותנין עליה חמץ בפסח to apply leven even in the time of Paſſover, to a Gumretha b, ſome very burning diſtemper.

b Hieroſ. Schabb. fol. 14. 4. & Avodah Zarah, fol. 40. 4.

This is all true indeed, and this no doubt, our Saviour underſtood well enough, but withal, he could not but obſerve, with how ill an eye they lookt at him, and would not allow that in him, which was lawful in another man. He was always accuſed for healing on the Sabbath day, which, whiles he did it with a word ſpeaking, he could not violate, ſo much, as even their own Canons permitted him; And wherefore then ſhould they accuſe him? In mere hatred to his perſon and actions. There are two little ſtories we meet with in places quoted before, which perhaps may ſerve in ſome meaſure to illuſtrate this matter.

The Grandchild of R. Joſhua ben Levi had ſome diſeaſe in his throat בשמיה אתאחך ולחש ליה ישו בן פנדירא ואינשם There came one and mumbled to him in the name of Jeſus the Son of Pandira, and he was reſtored.

Here we ſee the vertue and operation of Jeſus not ſo utterly exploded, but they did allow of it.

When R. Eliezer ben Damah, had been bitten with a Serpent, and Jacobus Capharſamenſis came in the name of Jeſus the Son of Pandirah to heal him, R. Iſmael forbad it: And ſo the ſick man died.

VERS. V.

Τίνος ὑμῶν ὄνος ἢ βοῦς εἰς φρέαρ ἐμπεσεῖται, &c. Which of you ſhall have an Aſs or an Ox fallen into a pit, &c.

IT being an undoubted maxim, That they muſt deal mercifully with an Iſraelite's goods: The Doctors in many things diſpenſed with the Sabbath for the preſervation of a Beaſt c. אין מילדין את הבהמה ביט אבל מסעדין They do not play the midwives with a Beaſt that is bringing forth its young on a Feaſt-day, but they help it. כיצד מסעדין: How do they help it? They bear up the young one, that it doth not fall upon the ground: They bring wine and ſpirt it into the noſtrils, they rub the paunch of the damme, ſo that it will ſuckle its young.

c Schab. cap. 18. hal.

d A firſtling if it fall into a ditch (on a Feaſt-day, or the Sabbath) let the Mumcheh look into it, and if there be any blemiſh in it, let him take it out and kill it: if not, let him not kill it. He draws it out however, that it might not be loſt. And ſo they deal with other Beaſts, only the Mumcheh, or he that is to try them for their blemiſhes, is not made uſe of.

VERS. VIII.

Μὴ κατακλιθῇς εἰς πρωτοκλισίαν. Sit thou not down in the higheſt room.

THEY were ambitious of the higheſt room in honour of their wiſdom. e There were three perſons invited to a Feaſt, a Prince, a wiſe man, and an ordinary perſon: the wiſe man ſate next to the Prince: being askt by the King why he did ſo? he anſwered, becauſe I am a wiſe man. f Janneus the King ſitting at table with ſome of the Nobles of Perſia, f Hieroſ. Beracoth, fol. 11. 2.

Perſia, Simeon ben Shetah that had been invited, placed himſelf betwixt the King and Queen, being asked why ſo? He anſwered, in the book בן סירא of Ben Sirah it is written ותרוממך ובין כרובים תושיבך סלסליה Exalt wiſdom, and ſhe ſhall exalt thee, and make thee to ſit among Princes.

It is much ſuch advice as this of our Saviour's that is given us in Prov. XXV. 7. upon which place we have this paſſage: g R. Aquilah in the name of R. Simeon ben Azzai thus expounds it; go back from thy place two or three ſeats, and there ſit, that they may ſay unto thee, go up higher, &c.

g Vajer. rabb. fol. 164. 4.

VERS. XVIII.

Ἀπὸ μιᾶς παρῃτήσαντο. With one conſent to make excuſe.

A Very ridiculous, as well as clowniſh and unmannerly excuſe this, if it grew toward night, for it was ſupper time. A very unſeaſonable time to go ſee a piece of ground new bought, or to try a yoke of Oxen. The ſubſtantive therefore that ſhould anſwer to the adjective μιᾶς, I would not ſeek any other where than as it is included in the word παρῃτήσαντο, ſo that the ſenſe of it may be ἤρξαντο ἀπὸ μιᾶς αἰτίας παραιτεῖσθαι, they began all for one cauſe to make excuſe, i. e. for one and the ſame averſation they had to it.

VERS. XXIII.

Ἔξελθε εἰς τὰς ὁδοὺς καὶ φραγμούς. Go into the high-ways and hedges.

INTO the high ways that he might bring in אורחים the travellers: but who were thoſe that were among the hedges? we have a parallel place, 1 Chron. IV. 23. Theſe were the Potters. יושבי נטעים וגדרה. In Greek, οἱ κατοικοῦντες ἐν Ἀταὶμ καὶ Γάδερα, Thoſe that dwell in Ataim and Gader: But the vulgar, Habitantes in plantationibus & ſepibus; dwelling in Plantations and Hedges. To the ſame purpoſe R. Solomon, and Kimchi. They employed themſelves in making pots, in planting, in ſetting hedges, and making mud-walls. The Targumiſt here is very extravagant. Theſe are thoſe diſciples of the Law, for woſe ſake the world was made, who ſit in judgment, and ſtabliſh the world, and their daughters build up the waſt places of the houſe of Iſrael, with the preſence of the Eternal King, in the ſervice of the Law, and the intercalation of months, &c.

VERS. XXXIV.

Ἐὰν δὲ τὸ ἅλας μωρανθῇ, &c. But if the ſalt hath loſt its Savour.

THIS hath a very good connexion with what went before. Our Saviour had before taught, how neceſſary it was for him that would apply himſelf to Chriſt and his Religion, to weigh and conſider things before-hand, how great and difficult things he muſt undergo, leſt when he hath begun in the undertaking, he faint and go back; he Apoſtatize and become unſavoury ſalt.

Μωρανθῇ ſuits very well with the Hebrew word תפל which both ſignifies unſavoury and a fool. h אם יאכל תפל Can that which is unſavoury be eaten without ſalt? i Thy Prophets have ſeen for thee, ותפל שוא vanity and that which is unſavoury. The Greek, μάταια καὶ ἀφροσύνας, vain things, and folly. k לא נתן תפלה לאלהים He gave not that which is unſavoury to God. The Greek, οὐκ ἔδωκεν ἀφροσύνας τῷ Θεῷ. He did not give folly to God.

VERS. IV.

Ἐννενηκονταεννέα. Ninety and nine.

THIS was a very familiar way of numbering and dividing, amongſt the Jews, viz. betwixt one and ninety. I have given inſtances elſewhere, let me in this place add one more. a Of thoſe hundred cryes that a Woman in travail uttereth, ninety and nine of them are to death, and only one of them to life.

a Pajicr. rabb. fol. 157 2.

VERS. VII.

Οἵτινες οὐ χρείαν ἔχουσι μετανοίας. Which need no repentance.

HERE we are to conſider the diſtinction commonly uſed in the Jewiſh Schools. I. All the good, and thoſe that were to be ſaved at laſt they called צדיקים juſt perſons. [It is oppoſed to the word רשעים wicked perſons, as we may obſerve more than once in the firſt Pſalm.] Hence this and the like paſſage very frequently, גן ערן לצדיקים Paradiſe is for the juſt. גנוזים לצדיקים Good things laid up for the juſt.

Let us by the way play a little with the Gemariſts, as they themſelves alſo play with the letters of the Alphabet, and amongſt the reſt eſpecially the letterr צ Tſadi. b צדי כפופה וצדי פשוטה There is Tſadi that begins a word (or the crooked צ) and Tſadi that ends a word (or the ſteight ץ) What follows from hence? צדיק כפוף וצדיק פשוט There is the juſt perſon that is crooked (or bowed down) and there is the juſt perſon that is erect (or ſtreight.) Where the Gloſs hath it, It is neceſſary that the man that is right and ſtreight, ſhould be bowed or humble, and he ſhall be erect in the world to come. Aruch acknowledgeth the ſame Gloſs, but he alſo brings another, which ſeems of his own making. That there is a juſt perſon who is ענו mild or humble; but there is alſo a juſt perſon who is not ſo. Let him tell if he can, what kind of juſt perſon that ſhould be that is not mild or humble. But to return to our buſineſs.

b Schabbath; fol. 104. 1.

II. They divide the juſt into צדיקים thoſe that are juſt and no more: and צדיקים גמורים thoſe that are perfectly juſt. Under the firſt rank, they place thoſe that were not always upright, but having lived a wicked and irreligious life, have at length betaken themſelves to repentance and reformation. Theſe they call בעלי תשובה Penitents. Under the latter rank are they placed, who have been always upright, and never declined from the right way: Theſe they call צדיקים גמורים perfectly juſt, and צדיקים מעיקרא juſt from their firſt original. As alſo, חסידים ואנשי מעשה holy or good men, and men of good works. Such an one did he account himſelf, and probably was ſo eſteem'd by others, that ſaith, theſe all have I kept from my youth. c And ſuch an one might ההוא חסידא that holy man be thought, d אשר לא עבד חובה מן יומוי who never committed one treſpaſs, all the days of his life: excepting this one misfortune that befel him, שהקדים תפלין של ראש לתפילין של יד that once he put on the Phylacteries for his forehead, before the Phylacteries for his arms. A wondrous fault indeed! and what pity is it that for this one treſpaſs of his life he ſhould loſe the title of חסיך גמור one perfectly holy. Yet for this dreadful crime is the poor wretch deprived of a ſolemn interment, and by this was his attonement made.

d Hieroſ. Chagigah, fol. 77. 4.

We meet with this diſtinction of juſt perſons in Beracoth e. R. Abhu ſaith, in the place, where ſtand בעלי תשובה the Penitents, there do not ſtand צדיקים גמורים the perfectly juſt. This diſtinction alſo appeared both in the tongues and perſons of thoſe that were dancing in the Temple at the Feaſt of Tabernacles. f Some of them ſaid, bleſſed be our youth that have not made our old men aſhamed. אילו חסידים ואנשי מעשה theſe were the holy, and men of good works. Others ſaid, bleſſed be our old men, who have expiated for our youth. אילו בעלי תשובה theſe were they who became Penitents.

f Sucah, fol. 55. 1.

This phraſe of צדיקים גמורים perfectly juſt perſons, puts me in mind of that of the Apoſtle g, πνεύματα δικαίων τετελειωμένων, the ſpirits of juſt men made perfect. Where (if I underſtand aright, the ſcope of the Apoſtle in the argument he is upon) he ſpeaks of juſt men who are ſtill in this life, and ſhews that the ſouls or ſpirits of believers, are made perfectly righteous by faith; contrary to what the Jews held, that men were compleat in their righteouſneſs, by works, even bodily works.

g Heb. XII. 23.

Seeing thoſe whom they accounted perfectly juſt, are termed אנשי מעשה men of works: ſo that perfectly juſt, and men of works were convertible terms, it may not be improbable

but

but the Essenes, or Essæi, may have there name from מעשה so that they might be called עשאי that is workers, and by that be distinguisht from the penitents. But of that matter I will raise no dispute.

III. Now which of these had the preference, whether perfect righteousnes to repentance, or repentance to perfect righteousnes, it is not easie to discern at first view, because even amongst themselves there are different opinions about it. We have a disputation in Beracoth, in the place newly cited, h in these words. R. Chaiah bar Abba saith, R. Johanan saith, All the Prophets did not propheste, אלא לבעלי תשובה unless for those that repent. אבל צדיקים גמורים as for those that are perfectly just, eye hath not seen besides thee O God i. But R. Abhu contradicts this, for R. Abhu saith, the penitent do not stand in the place where the perfectly just stand, as it is said, Peace, peace to him that is far off, and to him that is near. לרחוק וגם לקרוב He names him that is far off first, and then he that is nigh. But R. Johanan, Who is he that is far off? He that was far off from transgressing מעיקרא from his first original. And who is he that is nigh? He that was next to transgression but now is afar off from it.

k Isai. LVII. 19.

These passages of the Talmud are quoted by Kimchi upon Isai. LVII. 19. and out of him by Drusius upon this place, but as far as I can perceive, very far wide from the mind of Kimchi. For thus Drusius hath it; R. David Isai. 57. 19. Hoc in loco, &c. In this place the penitent is said to be far off, and the just to be nigh; according to the antients: but he that is far off is preferred; whence they say, the penitents are better than the perfectly just. As if this obtained amongst them all as a rule or maxim, when indeed the words of Kimchi are these: He that is far off, that is, he that is far off from Jerusalem, and he that is near, that is, he that is near to Jerusalem— But their is a dispute in the words of our Rabbins about this matter, And some of them interpret it otherwise; for they expound him that is afar off, as to be understood of the penitent, and him that is near, as meaning the just; from whence they teach, and say, that the penitent are better than those that are perfectly just.

Some indeed that do so expound it, they say that those that are penitent are to be preferred before those that are the perfectly just, but this was not the common and received opinion of all. Nay the more general opinion gave so great a preference to perfect righteousnes, that repentance was not to be compared with it. Hence that of R. Johanan, approved of by R. Chaijah the great Rabbin, that those good and comfortable things concerning which the Prophets do mention in their propheses, belong only to those who were sometimes wicked men, but afterwards came unto repentance; but they were far greater things that were laid up for perfectly just persons, things which had never been revealed to the Prophets, nor no prophetick eye ever saw, but God only; things which were indeed of an higher nature than that they could be made known to men; for so the Glos explaineth those words of theirs.

In this indeed they attribute some peculiar excellency to the penitent; in that, although they had tasted the sweets of sin, yet they had abandoned it, and got out of the snare; which it might have been a question whether those that are perfectly just would have done, if they had tasted and experienced the same. But still, they esteemed it much nobler, never to have been stained with the pollutions of sin, always to have been just, and never otherwise than good. Nor is it seldom that we meet with some in the Talmudists making their own perfection the subject of their boast, glorying that they have never done any enormous thing throughout their whole life: placing those whom they called חסידים holy or good men, who were also the same with צדיקים גמורים perfectly just, placing them (I say) in the highest form of just persons.

IV. After all this therefore judge whether Christ spoke simply or directly of any such persons (as if there were really any such) that could need no repentance; or rather whether he did not at that time utter himself according to the common conceptions that nation had, about some perfectly just persons, which he himself opposed. And this seems so much the more likely by how much he saith, I say unto you, as if he set himself against that common conceipt of theirs: And that example he brings of a certain person that needed no repentance, viz. the prodigal's Brother, savours rather of the Jewish Doctrine, than that he supposed any one in this world perfectly just.

VERS. VIII.

Γυνὴ ἅπτει λύχνον. A Woman lighted a Candle.

THere is a parable not much unlike this in Midras Schir, l R. Phineas ben Jair expoundeth. If thou seek wisdom as silver, that is, If thou seek the things of the Law as hidden treasures---- A Parable. It is like a man אם מאבד סלע או פלרין who if

he loſe a ſtone, or ornament in his houſe, he lighteth ſome Candles, ſome Torches, till he find it. If it be thus for the things of this world, how much more may it be for the things of the world to come.

VERS. XI.

Ἄνθρωπός τις εἶχε δύο υἱούς. A certain man had two ſons.

IT is no new thing ſo to apply this parable, as if the elder Son denoted the Jew, and the younger, the Gentile. And indeed the elder ſon doth ſuite well enough with the Jew in this, that he boaſts ſo much of his obedience, I have not tranſgreſſed at any time thy Commandment: as alſo, that he is ſo much againſt the entertainment of his Brother, now a penitent. Nothing can be more grievous to the Jews, than the reception of the Gentiles.

VERS. XIII.

Διεσκόρπισε τὴν οὐσίαν αὐτοῦ ζῶν ἀσώτως. He waſted his ſubſtance with riotous living.

OUght not this Prodigal to be looked upon as that בן סורר ומורה ſtubborn and rebellious ſon, mentioned Deut. XXI. 18? by no means, if we take the judgment of the Sanhedrin it ſelf. For according to the character that is given of a ſtubborn and rebellious ſon in Sanhedrin. m Where there is a ſet diſcourſe upon that ſubject, there can hardly be ſuch an one found in nature as he is there deſcribed. Unleſs he ſteal from his Father and his Mother, he is not ſuch a Son: Unleſs he eat תרשימר בשר half a pound of fleſh, and drink half a log of wine, he is not ſuch a Son. If his Father or Mother be lame or blind, he is not ſuch a Son, &c. Half a pound of fleſh? VERS. I.

Ὅς εἶχεν οἰκονόμον. Who had a ſteward.

THIS Parable ſeems to have relation to the cuſtom of letting out grounds, which we find diſcourſed of: a where it is ſuppoſed a ground is let by its owner, to ſome tenant upon this condition, that he pay half, or one third or fourth part of the products of the ground, according as is agreed betwixt them as to the proportion and quantity. So alſo he ſuppoſes an Olive-yard let out upon ſuch kind of conditions. And there it is diſputed about the payment of the Tithes, in what manner it ſhould be compounded between the owner and him that occupies the ground.

a Demai. cap. 6.

Οἰκονόμος with Kimchi is פקיד Pakidh. b where he hath a Parable not much unlike this. The world (ſaith he) is like unto an houſe built, the Heaven is the covering of the houſe. The Stars are the Candles in the houſe. The fruits of the Earth are like a table ſpread in the houſe. The owner of the houſe, and he indeed that built it, is the holy bleſſed God. Man in the world is כמו פקיד as it were the Οἰκονόμος, ſteward of the houſe into whoſe hands his Lord hath delivered all his riches---- If he behave himſelf well, he will find favour in the eyes of his Lord, if ill יעבירנו מן פקידתו he will remove him from his ſtewardſhip.

c Cap. 6. & 6.

skilled in no other handicraft; but that if should be forced to seek a livelihood he must be necessitated, to apply himself to digging in the Vine-yards, or Fields, or Olive-yards.

VERS. VI.

Δέξαι σου τὸ γράμμα, &c. Take thy bill, &c.

THAT is, take from me שטרך the schrol of thy contract which thou deliveredst to me, and make a new one, of fifty measures only, that are owing by thee. But it seems a great inequality, that he should abate one, fifty in an hundred measures of Oyl, and the other but twenty out of an hundred measures of Wheat. Unless the measures of Wheat exceeded the measure of Oyl ten times: so that when there were twenty Cori of Wheat abated the debtor, there were abated to him two hundred Baths or Ephah's.

VERS. IX.

Ἐκ τοῦ Μαμμωνᾶ τῆς ἀδικίας. Of the Mammon of unrighteousness.

I. WEre I very well assured that our Saviour in this passage, meant riches well gotten, and Alms to be bestowed thence, I would not render it Mammon of unrighteousness, but hurtful Mammon. For ἀδικεῖν signifies to hurt, as well as to deal unjustly, d Μὴ ἀδικήσατε τὴν γῆν. Vulg. Nolite nocere terræ: hurt not the earth; and so, riches even well got may be said to be Μαμμωνᾶ ἀδικίας, hurtful Mammon, because it frequently proves noxious to the owner. It is the Lawyers term נוק ממון the dammage of Mammon (Maimonides hath a Treatise with that title נוקי ממון) that is, when any person doth any way hurt or damnifie anothers estate. And in reality, on the contrary ממון נוק hurtful Mammon, i. e. when riches turn to the hurt and mischief of the owner. And if I thought our Saviour here speaks of riches honestly gotten, I would suppose he might use this very word נוק, only that the phrase of ממון נוק is not so usual amongst the Jews as נוק ממון.

d Revel. VII. 3. See also Rev. XI. 5. Luke X. 19.

II. Or perhaps he might call it Mammon of unrighteousness in opposition to Mammon צדקה of righteousness, i. e. of mercy, or alms-giving; for by that word צדקה righteousness, the Jews usually expressed charity or alms-giving, as every one that hath dipt into that language knows very well. And then his meaning might be, make to your selves friends of the Mammon of unrighteousness, i. e. of those riches which you have not yet laid out in צדקה righteousness, or alms-giving. But it is beyond my understanding to think, what one word he could express ἀδικίαν by, in this sense.

III. I see no reason therefore, why we may not, nay why indeed it is not necessary to understand the words precisely, of riches ill gotten. For,

1. So the application of the Parable falls in directly with the Parable it self. That Steward, gained to himself friends by ill gotten goods, so do ye; make to your selves friends of the wealth you have not well got.

Object. But far be it from our Saviour to exhort or encourage any to get riches unjustly; or to stir them up to give alms out of what they have dishonestly acquired. Nemo non fatebitur (saith Heinsius) no man but will confess, our Lord meant nothing less, than that any one should make friends to himself of riches unjustly gained. Yet for all this I must acknowledge my self not so very well satisfied in this matter.

2. Let us but a little consider by what words in the Syriack our Saviour might express Μαμμωνᾶ ἀδικίας, especially if he spoke in the vulgar language. It was a common phrase, ממון רשקר Mammon of falsity, or false Mammon; at least if the Targumists speak in the Vulgar Idiom of that nation, which none will deny. It is said of Samuels Sons, that they did not walk in his ways ואיתפניאו בתר ממון רשקר but turned after false Mammon g. He destroys his own house מכנס ממון רשקר whoso heaps up to himself the Mammon of falshood h. To shed blood and to destroy souls בדיל לקבלא ממון רשקר that they may gain Mammon of falshood i.

g 1 Sam. VIII. 3. h Prov. XV. 27. i Ezek. XXII. 27.

There needs no Commentator to shew what the Targumists mean by Mammon of falsehood, or Mammon of unrighteousness. They themselves explain it when they render it sometimes by ממון אונסין Mammon of violence *. Sometimes by ממון דרשע Mammon of wickedness k. Kimchi by ממון שֶׁל גזל Mammon of rapine, upon Esai. XXXIII. By the way I cannot but observe that that expression Hoseah, V. 11. אחרי צו after the Commandment, i. e. of Jeroboam or Omri; is rendred by the Targumists בתר ממון רשקר after the Mammon of falshood. Where also see the Greek, and Vulgar.

* Ib. ver. 13. k Hab. II. 9.

Seeing it appears therefore, that Μαμμωνᾶ ἀδικίας the Mammon of unrighteousness is the same in the Greek with ממון רשקר in the Targumists, who speak in the common language of that Nation, there is no reason why it should not be taken here, in the very same sense. Think but what word our Saviour would use to express ἀδικίας by, and then think if there can be any word more probable, than that which was ſo well known, and ſo commonly in uſe in that Nation. The Syriac hath it עולא which doth not in the leaſt diminiſh the ſenſe of the other. Indeed the word ἀδικ@ in this place is ſoftned by ſome that it ſhould denote no further than falſe, as not true and ſubſtantial: ſo that the μαμωνᾶ ἀδικίας ſhould ſignifie deceitful Mammon. Not oppoſing riches well got to thoſe that are ill got, but oppoſing earthly riches to ſpiritual: which rendring of the word took its riſe from hence eſpecially, that it lookt ill and unſeemly that Chriſt ſhould perſwade any to make to themſelves friends by giving alms out of an ill gotten eſtate: not to mention that verſ. 11 ἀδικ@ unrighteous Mammon is oppoſed τῷ ἀληθινῷ to true riches.

III. It is not to be doubted but that the Diſciples of Chriſt did ſufficiently abhor the acquiring of riches by fraud and rapine; but can we abſolve all of them from the guilt of it before their converſion? particularly Matthew the Publican? And is it ſo very unſeemly for our Saviour to admoniſh them to make themſelves friends by reſtitution, and a pious diſtribution of thoſe goods they may have unjuſtly gathered before their converſion? the diſcourſe is about reſtitution and not giving of alms.

IV. It is a continued diſcourſe in this place with that in the foregoing Chapter, only that he does more particularly apply himſelf to his Diſciples, verſ. Ἔλεγε δὲ καὶ πρὸς τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ. He ſaid unto his Diſciples; where the Particle καὶ, and, joyns what is diſcourſed here, with what went before. Now who were his Diſciples? not the twelve Apoſtles only, nor the Seventy Diſciples only: but πάντες οἱ τελῶναι καὶ οἱ ἁμαρτωλοὶ, Chap. XV. 1. all the Publicans and ſinners that came to hear him. For we needs muſt ſuppoſe them in the number of Diſciples, if we conſider the diſtinction of the Congregation then preſent, being made between Scribes and Phariſees, and thoſe that came to him with a good mind to hear: beſides that we may obſerve how Chriſt entertains them, converſeth with them and pleads for them, in the Parable of the foregoing Chapter. Which plea and apology for them againſt the Scribes and Phariſees being finiſhed, he turns his diſcourſe to them themſelves, and under the Parable of an unjuſt Steward, inſtructs them, how they may make to themſelves friends of the wealth they had unjuſtly gained, as he had done. And indeed what could have been more ſeaſonably urged before the unjuſt and covetous Phariſees, than to ſtir up his followers, that if they had acquired any unrighteous gains before their converſion, they would now honeſtly reſtore them, piouſly diſtribute them, that ſo they may make themſelves friends of them, as the unjuſt Steward had done?

And for a Comment upon this Doctrine let us take the inſtance of Zacheus, Chap. XIX. If Chriſt whiles entertained in his houſe, had ſaid to him what he ſaid to his Diſciples here, Zacheus, make to thy ſelf friends of the Mammon of unrighteouſneſs; would Zacheus himſelf, or thoſe that ſtood by, have underſtood him any otherwiſe, than that he ſhould make friends to himſelf of that wealth he had gotten diſhoneſtly? and why they may not be ſo underſtood here, I profeſs I know not. Eſpecially when he diſcourſes amongſt thoſe Diſciples, that had been Publicans and Sinners, and ſcarce any of them, for ought we know, but before his converſion, had been unjuſt, and unrighteous enough.

Were it ſo, that by the Mammon of unrighteouſneſs could be underſtood an eſtate honeſtly got, and the diſcourſe were about giving of Alms, yet would I hardly ſuppoſe the poor to be thoſe friends here mentioned, but God and Chriſt l. For who elſe were capable of receiving them into everlaſting habitations? As for the poor (upon whom theſe Alms are beſtowed) doing this, as ſome have imagined, is meer dream, and deſerves to be laught at rather than diſcuſt.

l Vid. Matth. XXV. 35, &c.

In Bava Kama m we have a diſcourſe about reſtitution of goods ill gotten, and amongſt other things, there is this paſſage: The Rabbins deliver הגזלנין ומלוי וכו׳ thoſe that live upon violence (or Thieves) and uſurers, if they make reſtitution, their reſtitution is not received. And a little after, רועין והגבאין ומוכסין For Shepherds, Exactors, and Publicans, reſtitution is difficult. (The Gloſs is, Becauſe they have wronged ſo many that they know not to whom to reſtore their own.) But they do make reſtitution to thoſe, who know their own goods that were purloyn'd from them. They ſay true, they do make reſtitution: but others do not receive it of them, To what end then do they make reſtitution? לצאת ידי שמים That they may perform their duty toward God.

m Fol. 54. 2.

Upon what nicety it was that they would not allow thoſe to reſtitution from whom the goods had been purloyn'd, I will not ſtand to enquire. It was neceſſary however, that reſtitution ſhould be made; that that which was due and owing to God might be performed; that is, they might not retain in their hands any ill gotten goods, but devote them to ſome good uſe; and accordingly theſe things that were reſtored (if the owners could not know them again) were dedicated to publick uſe, viz. לצורכי ציבור to the uſe of of the Synagogue: and ſo they made God their friend, of the μαμωνᾶ ἀδικίας, goods that they had gained by diſhoneſty, and unrighteouſneſs.

VERS. XI.

Εἰ οὖν ἐν τῷ ἀδίκῳ Μαμωνᾷ, &c. If ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous Mammon, &c.

THE Vulgar, Si in iniquo Mammona fideles non fuiſtis; If ye have not been faithful in the unjuſt Mammon: It is not ill rendred. But can any one be faithful in the unrighteous Mammon? As to that, let us judge from the example of Zacheus. Although he was not faithful in ſcraping together any thing unjuſtly, yet was he eminently faithful in ſo piouſly diſtributing it.

VERS. XII.

Εἰ οὖν τῷ ἀλλοτρίῳ πιστοὶ οὐκ ἐγένεσθε, &c. If ye have not been faithful in that which was another mans, &c.

TO apply τὸ ἀλλότριον, another mans, to that wealth which is given us by God, is ſomething harſh and obſcure; but to apply it to the riches of other men, makes the ſenſe a little more eaſie. If ye have been unjuſt in purloyning the goods of other men, and will ſtill as unjuſtly keep them back, what reaſon have you to think that others will not deal as unjuſtly with you, and keep back even what is yours?

VERS. XVI.

Καὶ πᾶς εἰς αὐτὴν βιάζεται. And every one preſſeth into it.

THESE words may be varied into a ſenſe plainly contrary, ſo far that they may either denote, the entertainment, or the perſecution of the Goſpel. Quivis in illud vi perrumpit, ſaith Beza: Every one breaketh into it by force: which points at the former ſenſe of theſe words. Vulg. Quivis in illud vim facit: Every one commits violence upon it: which points to the latter. I have admitted of the former, as that which is the moſt received ſenſe of that paſſage in Matth. XI. 12. but the latter ſeems more agreeable in this place, if you will ſuppoſe a continued diſcourſe in our Saviour from verſ. 15. and that one verſe depends upon another. They do indeed ſeem independent, and incoherent one with another: and yet there is no reaſon why we may not ſuppoſe a connexion though at the firſt view it is not ſo perſpicuous. We may obſerve the manner of the Schools in this very difficulty. In both the Talmuds what frequent tranſitions are there, infinitely obſcure and inextricable at firſt ſight, and ſeemingly of no kind of coherence; which yet the Expoſitors have made very plain and perſpicuous, very coherent with one another.

I would therefore joyn and continue the diſcourſe in ſome ſuch way as this. "You laugh "me to ſcorn n, and have my Doctrine in deriſion, boaſting your ſelves above the ſphere "of it, as if nothing I ſaid, belonged at all to you. Nor do I wonder at it, for where- "as the Law and the Prophets were until John, yet did you deal no otherwiſe with "them but changed and wreſted them at your pleaſure by your traditions and the falſe "gloſſes ye have put upon them. And when with John Baptiſt the Kingdom of Heaven "aroſe and made its entry among you, πᾶς εἰς αὐτὴν βιάζεται; Every one uſeth violence "and hoſtility againſt it, by contradiction, perſecution, and laughing it to ſcorn. And "yet, though you by your fooliſh Traditions have made even the whole law void and "of none effect, it is eaſier certainly for Heaven and Earth to paſs away, than that one "tittle of the Law ſhould fail. Take but an inſtance in the firſt and moſt antient precept "of the Law, the man ſhall cleave unto his wife; which you by your Traditions and ar- "bitrary Divorces have reduced to nothing: but that ſtill remains, and will remain for "ever in its full force and vertue; and he that puts away his wife (according to the licen- "tiouſneſs of your Divorces) and marrieth another, committeth adultery.

n ἐξεμυκτήριζον αὐτὸν v. 14.

VERS. XIX.

Ἄνθρωπός τις ἦν πλούσιος, There was a certain rich man.

WHoever believes this not to be a Parable, but a true ſtory, let him believe alſo thoſe little Friers, whoſe trade it is to ſhew the Monuments at Jeruſalem to Pilgrims, and point exactly to the place where the houſe of the rich Glutton ſtood: moſt acurate keepers of antiquity indeed! who after ſo many hundreds of yeass, ſuch overthrows of Jeruſalem, ſuch devaſtations and changes, can rake out of the rubbiſh the place of ſo private an houſe, and ſuch an one too that never had any being, but meerly in Parable. And that it was a Parable, not only the conſent of all Expoſitors may aſſure us, but the thing it ſelf ſpeaks it.

The main ſcope and deſign of it ſeems this, to hint the deſtruſtion of the unbelieving Jews, who though they had Moſes and the Prophets, did not believe them, nay would not believe though one (even Jeſus) aroſe from the dead. For that concluſion of the Parable o abundantly evidenceth what it aimed at. If they hear not Moſes and the Prophets, neither will they be perſwaded, though one roſe from the dead.

But perhaps there may be ſomething more aimed at in the name: when the diſcourſe is concerning Abraham and Lazarus, who would not call to mind Abraham and Eleazar his ſervant? r one born at Damaſcus, a gentile by birth, and ſometime in poſſe, the heir of Abraham; but ſhut out of the inheritance by the birth of Iſaac; yet reſtored here into Abraham's boſom. VERS. XXII.

Καὶ ἀπενεχθῆναι αὐτὸν ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀγγέλων. He was carried by Angels.

THE Rabbins have an invention that there are three bands of Angels, attend the death of wicked men, proclaiming, there is no peace ſaith the Lord unto the wicked x. But what conceptions they have of Angels being preſent at the death of good men let us judge from this following paſſage.

x Bemidb. rabb. fol. 245. 4.

y The men of Tſippor ſaid, whoever tells us that Rabbi [Judah] is dead, we will kill him. Bar-kaphra looking upon them with his head veiled with an hood, ſaid unto them, Holy men and and Angels took hold of the tables of the Covenant, and the hand of the Angels prevailed: ſo that they took away the tables. They ſaid unto him, is Rabbi dead then? The meaning of this parabolizer was this; Holy men would fain have detained R. Judah ſtill in the land of the living, but the Angels took him away.

Εἰς τὸν κόλπον τοῦ Ἀβραάμ. Into Abraham's boſom.

So verſ. 23. in the plural number ἐν τοῖς κόλποις, which doth not alter the ſenſe, but ſtrengthens it. The Jewiſh Schools diſpoſe of the Souls of Jews under a threefold phraſe, I can hardly ſay, under a threefold ſtate.

I. בגן ערן In the garden of Eden: or Paradiſe. Amongſt thoſe many inſtances that might be alledged even to nauſeouſneſs, let us take one, wherein this very Abraham is named. 2. He ſhall be as a tree planted by the Rivers of waters. This is Abraham, whom God took and planted in the land of Iſrael: or whom God took and planted בגן ערן in Paradiſe. Take one inſtance more of one of equal fame and piety, and that was Moſes. [a] When our Maſter Moſes departed לגן ערן into Paradiſe, he ſaid unto Joſhua, if thou haſt any doubt upon thee about any thing, enquire now of me concerning it.

II. תחת כסא הכבוד Under the throne of glory. We have a long ſtory in Avoth R. Nathan [b], of the Angel of death being ſent by God to take away the ſoul of Moſes which when he could not do, God taketh hold of him himſelf, and treaſureth him up תחת כסא הכבוד under the throne of glory. And a little after: Nor is Moſes his ſoul only, placed under the throne of glory, but the ſouls of other juſt perſons alſo, are repoſited under the throne of glory.

[b] Cap. 10.

Moſes in the words quoted before is in Paradiſe; in theſe words, he is under the throne of glory. In another place [c], he is in Heaven miniſtring before God. So that under different phraſes is the ſame thing expreſt; and this however made evident, that there גן ערן the garden of Eden, was not to be underſtood of an earthly, but an heavenly Paradiſe. That in Revel. VI. 9. of ſouls crying under the Altar, comes pretty near this phraſe, of being placed under the throne of glory. For the Jews conceived of the Altar as the throne of the Divine Majeſty, and for that reaſon the Court of the Sanhedrin was placed ſo near the Altar, that they might be filled with the reverence of the Divine Majeſty ſo near them, while they were giving judgment. Only, whereas there is mention of the Souls of the Martyrs that had poured out their blood for God; it is in alluſion to the blood of the Sacrifices that were wont to be poured out at the foot of the Altar.

III. בחיקו של אברהם In Abraham's boſom. Which if you would know what it is, you need ſeek no further than the Rhemiſts, our County-men (with grief be it ſpoken) if you will believe them. For they upon this place have this paſſage: The boſom of Abraham is the reſting place of all them that died in perfect ſtate of grace before Chriſt's time, heaven before, being ſhut from men. It is called Zachary, a Lake without water, and ſometimes a priſon, but muſt commonly of the Divines Limbus patrum, for that it is thought to have been the higher part, or brim of hell, &c.

If our Saviour had been the firſt author of this phraſe, than might it have been tolerable to have lookt for the meaning of it amongſt Chriſtian Expoſitors; but ſeeing it is a ſcheme of ſpeech ſo familiar amongſt the Jews, and our Saviour ſpoke no other than in the known and vulgar dialect of that Nation, the meaning muſt be fetcht thence, not from any Greek or Roman Lexicon. That which we are to enquire after is, how it was underſtood by the auditory then preſent: and I may lay any wager, that the Jews when they heard Abrahams boſom mentioned, did think of nothing leſs than that kind of limbo we have here deſcribed. What? Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob, Moſes, &c. in a lake without water, in priſon, on the very brim of Hell? Is this to be בגן ערן in Paradiſe? is this to be תחת כסא הכבוד under the throne of glory? And was Lazarus carried thither by Angels, when he was carried into Abrahams boſom?

We meet with a phraſe amongſt the Talmudiſts [d]. Let us borrow a little patience of the Reader to tranſcribe the whole paſſage.

[d] Kiddushin, fol. 72. It is quoted alſo from Jachaſin, fol. 75. 2.

Rabbi [Judah] ſaith to Levi הראני פרסיים repreſent the Perſians to me by ſome ſimilitude. He ſaith, they are like to the hoſt of the houſe of David. הראני חבורין Repreſent to me the Iberians. They are like למלאכי חבלה to the Angels of deſtruction. Repreſent to me the Iſmaelites לשעירים של בית חבסא They are like the Devils of the ſtinking pit. Repreſent to me the diſciples of the wiſe that are in Babylon. They are like to miniſtring Angels כי הוה ניהא נפשיה דר When R. [Judah] dyed, he ſaid הומניא איכא בבבל Hemnia is in Babylon and conſiſts of Ammonites wholly. מסגריא איכא בבבל Meſgaria is in Babylon, and wholly conſiſts of ſpurious people. ברקרה איכא בבבל Birkah is in Babylon, where two men interchange their wives. ברתא רסטיא איכא בבבל Birtha Sataia is in Babylon, and at this day they depart from God. אקרא דאגמא איכא בבבל Acra of Agma is in Babylon. אדא בר אהבה יש בה היום יושב בחיקו של אברהם Ada bar Ahava is there

This

This day he ſits in Abraham's boſom היום נולד רב יהודה This day is Rabh Judah born in Babylon.

Expoſitors are not well agreed neither by whom, nor indeed concerning whom thoſe words are ſpoken; this day he ſits in the boſom of Abraham. And for that reaſon have I tranſcribed the whole period that the Reader may ſpend his judgment amongſt them. The Author of Juchaſin thinks they may be the words of Adah bar Ahavah ſpoken concerning Rabbi Judah. Another Gloſs ſaith they are ſpoken of Adah bar Ahavah himſelf. Let us hear them both. e The day that Rabbi dyed, Rabh Adah bar Ahavah ſaid by way of Propheſie, this day doth he ſit in Abraham's boſom. f There are thoſe indeed that expound, this day doth he ſit in Abraham's boſom thus, that is, this day he dyed. Which if it be to be underſtood of Adah bar Ahavah, the times don't ſuit---- It ſeems to be underſtood therefore, this day he ſits in Abraham's boſom: that is, this day is Adah bar Ahavah circumciſed, and entred into the Covenant of Abraham.

But the Reader may plainly ſee, having read out the whole period, that theſe words were ſpoken neither by Adah nor of him; but by Levi of whom we have ſome mention in the beginning of this paſſage, and ſpoken concerning Rabbi Judah that was now dead. It is Levi alſo that ſaith, that in his room, on that very ſelf-ſame day was Rabh Judah born in Babylon, according to the common Adage of their Schools, which immediately follows; A juſt man never dyes till there be born in his room one like him. So ſaith R. Meir, when R. Akibah dyed, Rabbi [Judah] was born. When Rabbi Judah dyed, Rabh Judah was born. When Rabh Judah dyed, Rabba was born: When Rabba dyed, Rabh Iſai was born.

We have here therefore, if we will make up the ſtory out of both Talmuds, another not very unlike this of ours. In the Jeruſalem Talmud, Rabbi Judah is conveighed by Angels: In the Babylonian he is placed in Abraham's boſom: neither would the Gloſſer have doubted in the leaſt either of the thing or of the way of expreſſing it, ſo as to have fled to any new expoſition, had he not miſtook the perſon concerning whom theſe words were uttered. He ſuppoſeth them ſpoken of Adah bar Ahavah (wherein he is deceived) and becauſe the times do not fall in right, if they were to be underſtood of his death, he therefore frames a new interpretation of his own, whiles in the mean time he acknowledgeth that others expound it otherwiſe.

We may find out therefore the meaning of the phraſe according to the common interpretation, by obſerving firſt, that it was univerſally believed amongſt the Jews, that pure and holy ſouls when they left this body, went into happineſs, to Abraham. Our Saviour ſpeaks according to the received opinion of that Nation in this affair, when he ſaith, Many ſhall come from the Eaſt and from the Weſt, and ſhall ſit down with Abraham.

Give me leave to tranſcribe a Story, a little more largely than uſual. g There was a Woman the Mother of ſeven Martyrs. (So we find it alſo 2 Maccab. VII.) When ſix of her Sons were ſlain, and the youngeſt brought out, in order to it, though but a child of two years and an half old: The Mother ſaith to Cæſar, by the life of thy head, I beſeech thee, O Cæſar, let me embrace and kiſs my child. This being permitted her, ſhe plukt out her Breaſts and gave it ſuck. Then ſhe, by the life of thy head I entreat thee, O Cæſar, that thou wouldſt firſt kill me and then the child. Cæſar anſwered, I will not yield to thee in this matter, for it is written in your own Law, the Heifer or Sheep with its young one, thou ſhalt not kill on the ſame day. To whom ſhe שוטה שבעולם O thou fooliſheſt of all mortals, haſt thou performed all the commands that this only is wanting. He forthwith commands that the Child ſhould be killed. The Mother running into the embraces of her little Son, kiſſed him and ſaid בני לך אצל אברהם אביך Go thou, O my Son, to Abraham thy Father, and tell him thus ſaith my Mother: do not thou boaſt, ſaying, I built an Altar and offer'd my Son, Iſaac. For my Mother hath built ſeven Altars, and offered ſeven Sons in one day, &c.

This Woman queſtionleſs did not doubt of the innocence and purity of the Soul of this Child, nor of its future happineſs (for we will ſuppoſe the truth of the Story) which happineſs ſhe expreſſeth ſufficiently by this, that her Son was going to his Father Abraham. There are ſeveral other things to the ſame purpoſe and of the ſame mould that might be produced, but let this ſuffice in this place. However ſee Notes upon Verſ. 24.

Now what this being in Abraham's boſom may ſignifie amongſt the Jews, we may gather from what is ſpoken of the manners and the death of this R. Judah concerning whom it is ſaid היום יושב בחיקו של אברהם this day he ſits in Abraham's boſom. h Rabbi Judah had the Toothach thirteen years, and in all that time there was not an Abortive Woman throughout the whole land of Iſrael. For to him it is that they apply thoſe words of the Prophet, i He was a man of ſorrows, and hath borne our griefs. And for theſe very pains of his, ſome had almoſt perſwaded themſelves that he was the Meſſiah. At length this Toothach was relieved by Elias appearing in the likeneſs of R. Chaijah Rubbah, who by touching his Tooth cured him. When he dyed and was to be buried on the Evening of

of the Sabbath, there were eighteen Synagogues accompanied him to his grave. בעשו ניסין ותלת לון יומא miracles were done; the day did not decline till every one was got home before the entrance of the Sabbath. Bath kol pronounced happineſs for all thoſe that wept for him, excepting one by name; which one when he knew himſelf excepted, threw himſelf headlong from the roof of the houſe and ſo dyed, &c. But to add no more, for his incomparable learning and piety he was called R. Judah קדוש the holy. And whither would the Jew think ſuch an one would go, when he went out of this world? Who amongſt them, when it was ſaid of him that he was in Abraham's boſom, would not without all ſcruple and heſitancy underſtand it that he was in the very embraces of Abraham (as they were wont at table one to lie in the others boſom) in the exquiſite delights, and perfect felicities of Paradiſe: not in a lake without water, a priſon, the very brink of Hell.

VERS. XXIII.

Ὁρᾷ τὸν Ἀβραὰμ ἀπὸ μακρόθεν, καὶ Λάζαρον. He ſeeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus.

INſtead of Commentary take another Parable. k "There are wicked men that are "coupled together in this world. But one of them repents before death, the "other doth not; ſo the one is found ſtanding in the aſſembly of the juſt, the other in "the aſſembly of the wicked. The one ſeeth the other (this agrees with the paſſage "now before us) and ſaith woe! and alas! here is accepting of perſons in this thing. "He and I robbed together, commited Murder together, and now he ſtands in the Con-"gregation of the juſt, and I in the Congregation of the wicked. They anſwer him, "שוטה שבעולם O thou moſt fooliſh amongſt mortals that are in the world! Thou "wert abominable, and caſt forth for three days after thy death, and they did not lay "thee in the grave; the worm was under thee, and the worm covered thee, which when "this companion of thine came to underſtand, he became a Penitent. It was in thy "power alſo to have repented, but thou didſt not. He ſaith unto them, let me go now, "and become a Penitent. But they ſay, O thou fooliſheſt of men, doſt thou not know "that this world in which thou art, is like the Sabbath, and the world out of which "thou cameſt, is like the evening of the Sabbath? If thou doſt not provide ſomething "on the evening of the Sabbath, what wilt thou eat on the Sabbath day? Doſt thou "not know that the world out of which thou cameſt, is like the Land, and the world "in which thou now art is like the Sea; if a man make no proviſion on Land for what "he ſhould eat at Sea, what will he have to eat? He gnaſht his teeth and gnaw'd his "own fleſh.

VERS. XXIV.

Καὶ αὐτὸς φωνήσας εἶπε. And he cryed and ſaid.

WE have mention of the dead diſcourſing one amongſt another, and alſo with thoſe that are alive. l R. Samuel bar Nachman ſaith, R. Jonathan ſaith, How doth it appear that the dead have any diſcourſe amongſt themſelves? It appears from what is ſaid: And the Lord ſaid unto him, this is the land concerning which I ſwear unto Abraham, to Iſaac, and Jacob לאמור ſaying, m what is the meaning of לאמור the Holy bleſſed God ſaith unto Moſes, go thou and ſay to Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, the Oath which I ſware unto you, I have performed unto your Children. Note that, Go thou and ſay to Abraham, &c. There is a Story of a certain pious Man, that went and lodged in a burying place, and heard two ſouls diſcourſing amongſt themſelves: ſaid the one unto the other, come my companion, and let us wander about the world, and liſten behind the veil, what kind of plagues are coming upon the world. To which the other replied, O my companion, I cannot, for I am buryed in a Cane Mat, but do thou go, and whatſoever thou heareſt, do thou come and tell me. The ſoul went and wandred about the world, &c.

The year following he went again, and lodging in a place of burial, he heard two ſouls diſcourſing between themſelves. Saith the one unto the other, O my Companion, come, let us wander about the world, and hearken behind the veil, what kind of plagues are coming upon the world. To which the other, O my Companion, let me alone, for the words that formerly paſt between thee and me, were heard amongſt the living. Whence could they know! perhaps ſome other perſon that is dead, went and told them.

There was a certain perſon depoſited ſome Zuzees with a certain Hoſteſs, till he ſhould return, and went to the houſe of Rabh. When he returned ſhe was dead. He went after her to the place of burial and ſaid unto her, where are my Zuzees? She ſaith unto him, go take it from under the hinge of the door, in a certain place there. And ſpeak to my Mother to ſend me my black lead, and the reed of paint by the Woman N. who is coming hither to morrow: but whence do they know that such an one shall dye? דומה קרים ומכריו להו Dumah (that is the Angel who is appointed over the dead) comes before and proclaims it to them.

The Zuzees that belonged to Orphans were depositted with the Father of Samuel (the Rabbin:) He dyed, Samuel being absent. He went after him to the place of burial, and said unto them (i. e. to the dead) בעינא אבא I look for Abba. They say unto him, אבא טובא Abba the good is here. I look for Abba bar Abba. They say unto him, Abba bar Abba the good, is here. He saith unto them, I look for Abba bar Abba the Father of Samuel; where is he סליק לסתיבתא דרקיעא He is gone up to the Academy of the firmament. Then he saw Levi (his Collegue) sitting without. (The Gloss hath it; the dead appeared as without their Graves, sitting in a circle, but Levi sate without the circle.) He saith unto him, why dost thou not ascend? He answered him, they say unto me, because there want those years wherein thou didst not go into the Academy of the Rabbi----- When his Father came, he saw him weep--- He saith unto him, why dost thou weep?----- He saith unto him where is the Orphans money? He saith unto him, go and take it out of the Mill-house, &c. But I fear the Reader will frown at this huge length of trifles.

Καὶ καταψύξῃ τ γλῶσάν μυ. And cool my tongue.

n Hieros. Chagigah, fol. 77. 4.

n There was a good Man and a wicked Man that dyed. As for the good Man לא איתנמר לוה חסך he had no Funeral rites solemnized: but the wicked man had. Afterward, there was one saw in his dream, the good man walking in Gardens, and hard by pleasant Springs: but the wicked man לשני שותה על פי הנהר בעי ממטי ולא מטי with his tongue trickling drop by drop, at the bank of a River, endeavouring to touch the Water, but he could not.

VERS. XXVI.

Χάσμα μέγα ἐστήριχται. A great gulf fixed.

IT is well known from the Poets, that Ἅιδης in the Greek, and Inferi among the Latines comprehend the seat both of the Blessed and the Damned, denoting in general, the state of the dead: be they according to the quality of their persons allotted either to joys or punishments. On this hand, Elysium for the good; on that hand, Tartarus for the wicked, the River Cocytus, or Acheron or some such great gulph fixed betwixt them.

o Midras Cohelleth, 103. 2.

The Jews seem not to have been very distant from this apprehension of things. o God hath set the one against the other [Eccles. VII. 14.] that is, גהינום וגן עדן Hell, and Paradise. כמה ביניהם טפח How far are they distant? an handbreadth. R. Johanan saith, מחיצה a wall is between. But the Rabbins say, שוות ברי שיהו מציעות זו מזו they are so even with one another, that you may see out of one into the other.

That of seeing out of the one into the other, agrees with the passage before us; nor is it very dissonant that it is said, they are so even with one another: That is, they are so even, that they have a plain view one from the other, nothing being interposed to hinder it, and yet so great a gulf between, that it is impssible to pass the one to the other. That is worth noting, Revel. XIV. 10. shall be tormented with fire and brimstone, in the presence of the Holy Angels, and in the presence of the Lamb.

VERS. XXIX.

Ἔχουσι Μωσέα καὶ τοὺς Προφήτας. They have Moses and the Prophets.

THE Historical Books also are comprehended under the title of the Prophets, according to the common acceptation of the Jews, and the reading in their Synagogues.

p Gloss. in Bathra, fol. 13. 2. q Ibid. fol. 14. 2.

p All the Books of the Prophets are eight, Josua, Judges, Samuel, the Kings, Jeremy, Ezechiel, Isaiah, and the twelve. So the Gemarah also reckons them q. So we find ὀκτάτευχος Προφητῶν, the Octateuch of the Prophets, as well as Πενταπλοῦς Μωσαϊκὸς, the Pentateuch of Moses in Photius r, of which we have spoken elsewhere.

r Cod. 230.

But are the כתובים the Hagiographa excluded, when mention is made only of the Law and the Prophets? Our Saviour speaks after the usual manner of their reading Moses and the Prophets in their Synagogues; where every ordinary person, even the most rude and illiterate met with them, though he had neither Moses, nor the Prophets, nor the Hagiographa at his own house. Indeed the כתובים or the holy Writings, were not read in the Sgnagogues (for what reason I will not dispute in this place) but they were however, far from being rejected by the people, but accounted for Divine Writings, which may may be evinced, beſides other things, even from the very name. Our Saviour therefore makes no mention of them, not becauſe he lightly eſteems them, but becauſe Moſes and the Prophets were heard by every one, every Sabbath day, and ſo were not the Hagiographa.

VERS. XXXI.

Οὐδὲ ἐὰν τις ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστῇ πεισθήσονται. Neither will they be perſwaded though one roſe from the dead.

ANY one may ſee how Chriſt points at the infidelity of the Jews, even after that himſelf ſhall have riſen again. From whence it is eaſie to judge what was the deſign and intention of this Parable.

CHAP. XVII.

VERS. II.

Εἰ μύλος ὀνικὸς περίκειται περὶ τὸν τράχηλον αὐτοῦ. That a Mill-ſtone were hanged about his neck.

THERE is mention among the Talmudick Authors concerning רחיים של חמור an Aſs-mill, and it is diſtinguiſht from an Hand-mill. a Whoſo hireth an Houſe of his Neighbour, he may build רחיים של חמור an Aſs-mill, but not רחיים של יד an Hand-mill. a Aruch in voce רתם Bava Mezia.

To have a Mill-ſtone hanged about his neck, was a common Proverb. b Samuel ſaith, it is a Tradition, that a man may marry, and after that apply himſelf to the ſtudy of the Law. But R. Johanan ſaith, No. רחיים בצווארו ויעסוק בתורה Shall he addict himſelf to the ſtudy of the Law with a Mill-ſtone about his neck? b Kiddushin, fol. 29. 2.

Suidas tells us, ὅτε καταπόντιζον τινὰς, λίθους ἀπὸ τῆς τραχήλων ἀπεκρέμαζον: when they drowned any in the Sea, they hung ſtones about their necks. And quotes that of Ariſtophanes:

Ἆρας μετέωρον εἰς τὸ βάραθρον ἐμβαλῶ
Ἐκ τῆς λάρυγγος ἐκκρεμάσας ὑπερβολον.

Liſting him up, I'll plung him to the deep.
* A Stone hung at his neck——

* For ſo Suidas takes ὑπερβολον and renders it by λίθον a Stone. But this Interpreter ingeniouſly remarks, that Suidas ſeems to have reached the place and meaning of the Poet; for ὑπερβολος ſignifies not a Stone hung about the neck of him that is to be drowned in the Sea: but when he ſhould have ſaid λίθον ἐκκρεμάσας, hanging a Stone, he does by way of jeſt and beſide all expectation, for laughters ſake, ſay, ἐκκρεμάσας ὑπερβολον, hanging Hyperbolus; that is, a litigious fellow about his neck, whom for his peculiar wickedneſs he would repreſent as the moſt burthenſome thing that could be to all the Athenians, hanging about them like an heavy Stone that is hanged about the neck of one condemned to be drowned; one indeed that deſerves that fate himſelf that he might no more vex and diſturb the Commonwealth.

VERS. III.

Ἐπιτίμησον αὐτῷ. Rebuke him.

THE Rabbins are not ſparing in granting the lawfulneſs of repeating rebuke upon rebuke, but they are moſt ſparing about forgiveneſs where any hath given an offence. They allow from Levit. XIX. 17. that a man may rebuke an hundred times if there be any need for it; nay that it is the duty of a Diſciple to rebuke his Maſter if occaſion be c. But as to forgiving him that offends, they abuſe the words of the Prophet Amos I. 2. for three tranſgreſſions: and that of Job XXXIII. 29. Lo, all theſe c Bava Mezia, fol. 31. 1.

things worketh God three times with man, and teach that a man is not bound to forgive a forth treſpaſs d.

d Joma, fol. 86. 2.

VERS. VI.

Ὡς κόκκον σινάπεως. As a grain of Muſtard ſeed.

A Phraſe greatly in uſe. Sometimes we have it כורע חרדל like a ſeed of Muſtard. Sometimes כגרגיר חרדל like a grain of Muſtard ſeed. Sometimes כטיפת חרדל like a drop of Muſtard.

When our Lord had been teaching his Diſciples concerning charity toward their offending Brother, they beg of him Πρόσθες ἡμῖν πίστιν, increaſe of Faith. Which words (ſaving that I would not wrong the Faith of the Apoſtles, as if they begged of their Maſter an increaſe of it) I would enquire whether they might not be put into ſome ſuch ſenſe as this: Lay down or add ſomething concerning the meaſure of our Faith, as thou haſt done concerning the meaſure of our Charity. Which therefore he doth in his following diſcourſe.

VERS. VII.

Ἐρεῖ εὐθέως— παρέλθων ἀνάπεσαι; Will ſay ſay unto him by and by— Go and ſit down to meat?

e Maimon. Avadim. cap. 9.

SOme there were of old that were wont to do thus. e The wiſe men of old were uſed to give their ſervant, ſomething of every thing that they eat themſelves. This was indeed kindly done, and but what they ought; but then it follows: They made their Beaſts and their Servants take their meals before themſelves. This was ſupererogation.

VERS. XI.

Διήρχετο διὰ μέσου Σαμαρείας καὶ Γαλιλαίας. He paſſed through the midſt of Samaria and Galilee.

IF it had been ſaid through the midſt of Galilee and Samaria, there had been no difficulty, but being ſaid through the midſt of Samaria and Galilee: it raiſeth that doubt to which I have formerly ſpoken, viz. whether through Galilee in this place ought not to be underſtood through Perea. The Syriack and Arabick ſeem to to have been aware of this difficulty; and therefore to accommodate the matter have rendred διὰ μέσου, through the midſt, by בין between: in which ſignification διὰ μέσου is very familiar in Greek Authors. So that the ſenſe they ſeem to make of it, is this: That Jeſus in his journey to Jeruſalem took his way in the very extreme borders of Galilee and Samaria, i. e. that he went between the confines, and as it were upon the very brink of each Country, for a good way together. He did indeed go to the Scythopolitan bridge, by which he paſſed over into Perea: but whether διὰ μέσου will allow of ſuch a rendring, let the more skilful judge.

VERS. XII.

Δέκα λεπροὶ ἄνδρες. Ten men that were Lepers.

I. IT is provided by a Law in Levit. XIII. 46. That he that is a Leper ſhall dwell alone and without the Camp. How then came theſe ten to converſe thus together? as alſo thoſe four together, 2 Kings VII. 3.

f Peſachin, fol. 67. 1.

f שלא יהו טמאין Other unclean perſons muſt not live with him: i. e. Thoſe that are unclean by other kind of defilements: which alſo is intimated by the Gemariſts in theſe words: Shall thoſe that have their iſſues, and thoſe that are defiled by the dead, be ſent out into one and the ſame place? The Text ſaith, They ſhall not defile their Camps, Numb. V. 3. to aſſign one Camp for theſe, and another for them.

The Lepers might be Converſant with Lepers, and thoſe that had Iſſues with thoſe that had Iſſues; but thoſe that were under different defilements, might not converſe promiſcuouſly. Which confirms what I have conceived concerning the five Porches at the Pool of Bethesda, viz. That they were ſo framed and diſtinguiſhed at firſt, that there might be a different reception for thoſe that had contracted different kinds of defilements, and were there waiting to be cleanſed in that Pool.

That there were certain places where they that were unclean by that Diſeaſe of the Leproſie were ſecluded, reaſon might perſwade us: for it were an inhumane thing to caſt the the Leprous out of the City, without any proviſion of a dwelling for them, but that they ſhould always lie ſub dio, and in the open air. Whether there was any ſuch thing in this place, I will not determine. It ſeems as if theſe ten Lepers having heard of our Saviour's coming that way, were got but lately together to attend him there. For when the Seventy Diſciples, had before hand openly proclaimed in all the places where he was to come, that he would come thither, it is eaſie to conceive in what infinite throng, the ſick and all that were affected with any kind of diſtemper would be crowding thither for a cure.

II. g מצורע שנכנס לפנים ממחיצתו בארבעים The Leper that tranſgreſſeth his bounds, let him receive forty ſtripes. Thoſe that have their Iſſues, Men or Women if they tranſgreſs their limits, let them alſo receive forty ſtripes. Where the Gloſs is, The limits for thoſe that have their Iſſues, are the mountain of the Houſe, or the Court of the Gentiles. For they are forbid to enter into the Camp of the Levites. The unclean are not excluded but from the Court: excepting thoſe that have their Iſſues, and a Gonorrhea upon them, they are excluded even from the mountain of the houſe: and the Leper, who is excluded from the Camp of Iſrael, that is, from the City. g Peſachin ubi ſupr.

Now the Camp of Iſrael, out of which the Leper was to be excluded, they interpreted to be every City that had been walled from the days of Joſhua. For (ſay they) Joſhua ſanctified the walled Cities with the holineſs that was aſcribed to the Camp of Iſrael; but he did not ſo to the reſt of the Land, nor the Cities that had no walls. This was a Village and not ſuch a City where theſe ten Lepers meet our Saviour; and if they were within this Village it was neither beyond the cuſtom nor the rule, provided that they kept but their diſtance.

h A Leper enters into the Synagogue: they make him מחיצה ſome Grates, or bounds, ten hands high, and four cubits broad: he enters the firſt, and goes out the laſt. The Gloſs is, Leſt they ſhould be defiled that ſtand in the Synagogue, &c. h Negaim. cap. 13. hal. 12.

VERS. XX.

Οὐκ ἔρχεται ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ μετὰ παρατηρήσεως. The Kingdom of God cometh not with obſervation.

THE Kingdom of God, or of Heaven hath eſpecially a twofold diſtinct ſenſe in the Holy Scriptures. In ſome places it ſignifies the propagation of the Goſpel by the Meſſias, and his Followers, and that eſpecially amongſt the Gentiles: In other places it denotes the Meſſiah's victory and vengeance upon the Jews, the enemies of this Goſpel. But in the Jewiſh Schools, this was their conceit of him: that when he came he ſhould cut off all thoſe Nations that obeyed not his, i. e. the Jewiſh Law; redeeming Iſrael from the Gentile yoke, eſtabliſhing a Kingdom and Age amongſt them, that ſhould be crowned with all kind of delights whatever. In this they were miſerably deceived, that they thought the Gentiles were firſt to be deſtroyed by him, and then that he himſelf would reign amongſt the Iſraelites. Which in truth fell out juſt contrary, he was firſt to overthrow Iſrael, and then to reign amongſt the Gentiles.

It is eaſie to conceive in what ſenſe the Phariſees propounded that queſtion, when the Kingdom of God ſhould come? that is, when all thoſe glorious things ſhould be accompliſhed which they expected from the Meſſias? and conſequently we may as well conceive from the contexture of his diſcourſe, in what ſenſe our Saviour made his reply. You enquire when the Meſſias will come? His coming will be as in the days of Noah, and as in the days of Lot. For as when Noah entred the Ark, the world periſht by a deluge, and as when Lot went out of Sodom, thoſe five Cities were overthrown, ſo ſhall it be in the day when the Son of Man ſhall be revealed. So that it is evident he ſpeaks of the Kingdom of God in that ſenſe, as it ſignifies that dreadful revenge he would e're long take of that provoking Nation and City of the Jews. The Kingdom of God will come, when Jeruſalem ſhall be made like Sodom, verſ. 29. when it ſhall be made a Carkaſs, v. 37.

It is plain to every eye that the cutting off of that place and Nation is emphatically called his Kingdom, and his coming in glory. Nor indeed without reaſon: For before he waſted the City and ſubverted that Nation, he had ſubdued all Nations under the Empire and obedience of the Goſpel; according to what he foretold, i That the Goſpel of the Kingdom ſhould be preached in all the world, and then ſhould the end (of Jeruſalem) come. And when he had obtained his dominion amongſt the Gentiles, what then remained toward the conſummation of his Kingdom and Victories, but to cut off his Enemies the Jews, who would not that he ſhould rule over them? Of this Kingdom of God he ſpeaks in this place, not anſwering according to that vain apprehenſion the Phariſee had when he propounded the queſtion, but according to the thing its ſelf and the truth of it. There are two things he ſaith of this Kingdom. i Matt. XXIV. 14.

1. That

1. That it comes not μετὰ παρατηρήσεως, not with observation. Not but that it might be seen and conspicuous, but that they would not see and observe it. Which security and supineness of theirs, he both foretells, and taxeth in other places once and again.

2. He further tells them βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐντὸς ὑμῶν ἐστι, this Kingdom of God is within you: you are the scene of these triumphs. And whereas your expectancies are of that kind, that you say, behold here a token of the Messias in the subduing of such a Nation, and behold there in the subduing of another; they will be all in vain, for ἐντὸς ὑμῶν ἐστι, it is within you. Within and upon your own Nation that these things must be done. I would lay the emphasis in the word ὑμῶν, you, when commonly it is laid in ἐντὸς, within.

Besides, those things which follow, vers. 22. do very much confirm it that Christ speaks of the Kingdom of God in that sense wherein we have supposed it; they are spoken to his Disciples, that the days will come wherein they shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of Man, but shall not see it. ἡμέραι τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ Ἀνθρώπου The days of the Son of Man in the Jewish stile are ימות המשיח the days of the Messias: days wherein they promise themselves nothing but pleasing, prosperous, and gay enjoyments: and questionless the Pharisees put this question under this notion only. But our Saviour so applies the terms of the question to the truth, and to his own purpose, that they signifie little else but vengeance and wrath, and affliction. And it was so far from it, that the Jews should see their expected pleasures, that the Disciples themselves should see nothing but affliction, though under another notion.

CHAP. XVIII.

VERS. I.

Καὶ μὴ ἐκκακεῖν. And not to faint.

THE discourse is continued still, and this Parable hath its connection with the Chap. XVII. concerning Christ's coming to avenge himself upon Jerusalem. Which if we keep our eye upon, it may help us to an easier understanding of some more obscure passages that occurr in the application of this Parable. And to this doth the expression μὴ ἐκκακεῖν, not to faint, seem to have relation, viz. that they might not suffer their hopes and courage to languish and droop, upon the prospect of some afflictions they were likely to grapple with, but that they would give themselves to cōntinual prayer.

VERS. II.

Κριτής τις ἦν, &c. There was a certain judge, &c.

IF the scene of this Parabolical History must be supposed to have been amongst the Jews, then there would some questions arise upon it. 1. Whether this Judge were any way distinguisht from זקן an Elder, or Presbyter: For the Doctors are forced to such a distinction from those words in Deut. XXI. 2. זקניך ושופטיך The Elders and Judges: a If דיין or שופט a Judge, be the same with זקן an Elder, which the Babylonian Sotah b approve of; then might it be enquired, whether it was lawful for one Elder to sit in judgment, which the Sanhedrin deny c. But I let these things pass.

a Hieros. Sotah, fol. 23. 2. b fol. 44. 2. c Cap. 1.

The Parable propounded is of that rank or order that commonly amongst them the Jews had the title קל והומר and usually ended in על אחת כמה וכמה that is, when it is argued from the less to the greater. If that judge, the wickedest of men, being overcome by the endless importunity of the Widow, judged her cause, will not a just, merciful, and good God appear for his own much more, who continullay solicite him?

Τὸν Θεὸν μὴ φοβούμενος, &c. Who feared not God, &c.

d Maimon. Sanhedr. cap. 1.

How widely distant is this wretch from the character of a just Judge? d Although in the Triumviral Court, all things are not expected there which are requisite in the Sanhedrin; yet is it necessary that in every one of that Court, there should be this seven fold qualification, qualification: Prudence, gentleneſs, piety, hatred of Mammon, love of truth, that they be beloved themſelves, and of good report.

VERS. V.

Εἰς τέλος ἐρχομένη. Leſt by her continual coming.

SO is the word לנצח rendred by the Greek Interpreters, εἰς τέλος, Job XIV. 20. תחקפהו לנצח thou prevaileſt againſt him for ever. Greek, Ὅσας αὐτὸν εἰς τέλος *. Hence לנצח in the titles of Pſalms is rendred εἰς τὸ τέλος. Which whether it be rightly rendred in finem, to the end, is a queſtion.

* Vid Job XX. 7. Pſal. XLIV. 24. & XLIX. 10.

VERS. VII.

Καὶ μακροθυμῶν ἐπ' αὐτοῖς. Though he bear long with them.

SO 2 Pet. III. 9. Μακροθυμεῖ εἰς ἡμᾶς: is long-ſuffering toward us: In both places the diſcourſe is concerning the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and the times immediately preceding it: In which the Lord exerciſed infinite patience toward his elect. For in that ſlippery and unſteady ſtate of theirs, when Apoſtacy prevailed beyond meaſure, and it was an hard thing to abandon Judaiſm, people were very difficulty gained over to the Faith, and as difficulty retained in it, when they had once embraced it. And yet after all this μακροθυμία long-ſuffering and patience, εὑρήσει πίστιν ὅτι ἐν γῆς, ſhall he find Faith on Earth?

VERS. XII.

Νηστεύω δὶς τοῦ Σαββάτου. I faſt twice in the week.

I. THERE were תעניות הציבור Faſts of the Congregation, and תעניות היחיד Faſts of this or that ſingle perſon. And both principally upon the account of צרות afflictions or ſtreights. e These are the calamities of the Congregation for which they faſt. Being beſieged by Enemies, the Sword, Peſtilence, an hurtful Beaſt, Locuſts, the Caterpillar, Mildew, Blaſting, Abortions, Diſeaſes, ſcarcity of Bread, Drought. f As the Congregation Faſts upon the occaſion of general calmities, ſo does this or that perſon, for his particular afflictions. If any that belong to him be ſick, or loſt in the wilderneſs, or kept in priſon, he is bound to Faſt in his behalf, &c.

f Ibid. cap. 1.

II. g The Faſts appointed by the Congregation by reaſon of general calamities, are not from day to day, becauſe there are few that could hold out in ſuch a Faſt, but בשני ומחמישי on the ſecond and fifth day of the week. On thoſe days they aſſembled in their Synagogues to Publick Prayers: and to this I would refer that of Acts XIII. 2. λειτουργούντων αὐτῶν καὶ νηστευόντων as they miniſtred before the Lord and Faſted; much rather than to the celebration of the Maſs, which ſome would be wreſting it to.

g Ibid.

III. It was very uſual for יחיד the ſingle perſon to devote himſelf to ſtated and repeated Faſts, for Religions's ſake, even when there was no affliction or calamity of life to urge them to it. And thoſe that did ſo, choſe to themſelves thoſe very days which the Congregation was wont to do, viz. the ſecond and the fifth day of the week. h יחיד שקיבל עליו שני וחמישי ושני של כל שנה The ſingle perſon that taketh upon him to faſt, on the ſecond and fifth day, and the ſecond day throughout the whole year, &c.

h Taanith, fol. 12. 1.

Let me add this one thing further about theſe Faſts. R. Chaſda ſaith, the Faſt upon which the Sun ſets, is not to be called a Faſt. And yet they take very good care that they be not ſtarved by Faſting, for they are allowed to eat and drink the whole night before the Faſt. i It is a Tradition. Rabbi ſaith, it is lawful to eat till day-light.

i Hieroſol. Taanith. fol. 64. 3.

Ἀποδεκατῶ πάντα ὅσα κτῶμαι. I give Tithes of all that I poſſeſs.

This Phariſee in the profeſſion he maketh of himſelf imitates the profeſſion he was to make that offered the firſt-fruits. k I have brought away the hallowed things out of mine houſe, and given them to the Levite and to the ſtranger, to the Fatherleſs and to the Widow, &c. But tell me O thou Phariſee, doſt thou thus ſtrictly give Tithes of all things, out of an honeſt mind and pure juſtice, viz. that the Prieſt and Levite, and poor may have every one their own; and not rather out of mere fear and dread, becauſe of that rule, He that eateth of things that are not tithed, is worthy of death l.

VERS.

VERS. XIII.

Καὶ ὁ τελώνης μακρόθεν ἑστὼς, &c. And the Publican ſtanding afar off, &c.

I. THAT the Iſraelites when they went into the Temple to put up their own private Prayers, went beyond the outward Court, or the Court of the Gentiles, into the Court of the Women, This amongſt other things makes it evident, viz. That in that Court were placed שופרות thirteen Eleemoſynary Cheſts, into which they threw in their voluntary Oblations: which was done by the Widow with her two Mites in that place.

II. It is a queſtion whether any perſon for his private praying, might come as far as the Gate of Nicanor, or the Court of Iſrael; much leſs, into the Court of the Prieſts, unleſs the Prieſts only. We read of our Saviour's being in the Court of the Gentiles, viz. in Solomon's Porch: and that he was in the Treaſury, or the Court of the Women, but you will hardy find him at any time in the Court of Iſrael. And the negative upon their entrance into that Court is confirmed, at leaſt if that rule avail any thing which we meet with in Hieroſ. Beracoth m. R. Joſhua ben Levi ſaith, he that ſtands to pray, it is neceſſary that he firſt ſit down, becauſe it is ſaid אשרי יושבי ביתך bleſſed are they that ſit in thy houſe. Now it was lawful for no perſon to ſit down in that Court, but the King only.

m Fol. 8. 4.

III. That therefore this Publican ſtood ſo much further off while he prayed, than the Phariſee, was probably more from his humility, than any neceſſity that lay upon him ſo to do. For though the Heathen and Publican go together, in thoſe words of our Saviour, Let him be unto thee as an Heathen and Publican, yet it is a queſtion whether the Publicans if they were Jews, were bounded to the outward Court only, as the Heathens were.

Οὐκ ἤθελεν οὐδὲ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν ἐπᾶραι. He would not lift ſo much as his eyes up to Heaven.

What needed this to have been added, when this was the very rule of praying, n Let him that prayeth cover his head and look downward. o The Diſciple of the Wiſe men, when he ſtands praying, let him look downward. But were thoſe of the Laity, or of the common people to do thus? If not, our queſtion is anſwered: that this man (otherwiſe than the vulgar was wont) in deep humility, and a conſcience of his own vileneſs, would not lift up his eyes. But if this was the uſage of all in common, that whiles they were actually praying they muſt look downward; yet probably, in the time that they were compoſing themſelves to prayer, they might be a little lifting up their eyes toward Heaven. p If they pray in the Temple, they turn their faces toward the Holy of holies; if elſewhere, then toward Jeruſalem. And it would be a ſtrange thing if they were not to have their eyes toward Heaven at all; indeed when they began to pray, then they looked downward.

VERS. XV.

Ἰδόντες δὲ οἱ Μαθηταὶ ἐπετίμησαν αὐτοῖς. But when his Diſciples ſaw it, they rebuked them.

q WIcked Iſraelites little ones ſhall not come into the world to come.---- Wicked Heathens little ones, all men confeſs, they ſhall not come into the world to come.---- קטון מאימתי בא לעולם הבא From what time is a little Child capable of the world to come? R. Chaijah, and R. Simeon bar Rabbi, one of them ſaith, משעה שנולד from the time wherein he is born. The other ſaith, from the time that he can ſpeak---- Rabbona ſaith, from the time it is begot.---- Rabh Nachman bar Iſaac ſaith, משעה שנימול from the time he is Circumciſed: R. Meir ſaith, משעה שיאמר אמן from the time that he can anſwer, Amen.

q Sanhedr. fol. 110. 2.

Whether this queſtion was handled in the Schools or no in the times of the Apoſtles, it is very probable, they took this bringing of little Children to Chriſt ill, becauſe (if they might be judges) they were not capable of the Kingdom of Heaven. And indeed our Saviour's anſwer to them ſeems to favour this conjecture of ours: Is it ſo indeed, that you ſuppoſe ſuch as theſe unfit and uncapable? I tell you that of ſuch is the Kingdom of God.

VERS. XIX.

Τί με λέγεις ἀγαθόν; Why calleſt thou me good?

I. FOR the better underſtanding our Saviour's ſenſe and meaning in theſe and the following words, I would affirm (and who can argue it to the contrary?) That this man acknowledged Jeſus for the true Meſſias.

1. This, ſeveral others did alſo, who as yet were not his Diſciples: So thoſe blind men when they call him the Son of David, Matth. XX. 30. not to mention others. And what reaſon can there be for the negative upon this man? eſpecially when he appears to be a perſon of more than ordinary parts and accompliſhments, not only from what he tells us of himſelf, but from that kind and affectionate reception he met with from Chriſt.

2. This was no vulgar or ordinary queſtion he put here: What ſhall I do that I may inherit Eternal Life? For it ſeems plain that he was not ſatisfied in the doctrine of their Schools, about the merit of good works, and juſtification by the Law; but he thinks there is ſomething more requiſite toward the obtaining Salvation, becauſe, after he had (as he tells us) performed this Law from his youth up, he yet enquireth further, what ſhall I do, &c. in which, that he was in earneſt, our Saviour's behaviour toward him ſufficiently teſtified: as alſo that he came to Jeſus, as to no ordinary Teacher, to be inſtructed in this affair. r r Vid. Mark X. 21.

3. It was very unuſual to ſalute the Rabbins of that Nation with this title. For however they were wont to adorn (not to ſay load) either the dead, or abſent with very ſplendid Epithets, yet if they ſpoke to them whiles preſent, they gave them no other title than either Rabbi, or Mar, or Mari. If you turn over both the Talmuds, I am deceived if you once find either good Rabbi, or good Mar.

II. So far therefore is our Lord in theſe words from denying his God-head, that he rather doth as it were draw this perſon in, to own and acknowledge it. Thou ſeemeſt in thy very addreſs to me, and the compellation thou gaveſt me to own me for the Meſſias, and doſt thou take me for God too as well as man, when thou calleſt me good, ſeeing there is none good but God only? Certainly he ſaw ſomething that was not ordinary in this man when it is ſaid of him that ἠγάπησεν αὐτὸν, Mark X. 21. he loved him: i. e. he ſpoke kindly to him and exhorted him, &c. See 2 Chron. XVIII. 2. and Pſal. LXXVIII. 36. ἠγάπησαν αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ στόματι αὐτῶν they flattered him with their mouth. Hebrew, ויפתוהו. Nor is it an ordinary affection this young man ſeemed to have for the bleſſed Jeſus, in that, he departs ſorrowful from the counſel that had been given him: and that he had the perſon that had counſel'd him in very high eſteem, appears in that he could not without infinite grief reject the counſel he gave him.

VERS. XXXI.

Παραλαβὼν δὲ τοὺς δώδεκα. He took unto him the twelve.

THIS falls in with that of John XI. 7. Let us go into Judea. What? ſay they, into Judea again, where thou waſt lately in ſo much danger? However he comes out and goes on, his Diſciples following him wondring, and fearing the effects of it, Mark X. 32. He mentioned only at preſent his journey into Judea, to ſee Lazarus; but as they were going he foretells his progreſs to Jeruſalem and what was to be done with him there. It is probable he was at Bethabarah when the meſſage came to him that Lazarus was ſick. And from thence, his way lying conveniently over the Scythopolitan Bridge, and ſo through part of Samaria, he chuſeth the transjordanine way to the Fords of Jericho.

CHAP. XIX.

VERS. II.

Ζακχαῖος. Zaccheus.

THERE is mention of one of the ſame name Zacchai, a Father of a numerous Family, Ezr. II. 9. and about the time wherein our Zaccheus lived, there was one Zacchai the Father of Rabban Johanan, than whom there was hardly a more noted Rabbin in the whole Catalogue. This man brought up his Son Johanan in Merchandiſe, wherein he had employed himſelf for forty years before he gave himſelf either to Letters, or Religion. From whence there might ariſe ſome conjecture, as if that Zacchai was this Zaccheus here mentioned, but that theſe two things make againſt it.

I. Becauſe he was a Rabbin, or preferred to be one of the Elders, as the Author of Juchaſin in the word בן זכאי doth, not without reaſon, conjecture. Now whereas the very employment of Publicans lay under ſo ill a name univerſally in that Nation, it is hardly credible that that ſhould conſiſt with the degree of Rabbin: to which I may add that that Zacchai was of a Prieſtly deſcent, and what a monſter would that ſeem amongſt them, a Prieſt and a Publican.

II. We may judge from the character of that Zacchai whether he did not live and dye a Jew as to his Religion, in every punctilio of it. a R. Zacchai's Diſciples asked him (where note, he bears the title of Rabbi) How doſt thou attain to old age? He anſwered them, I did never in my whole life make water within four Cubits of the place of Prayer. I never miſcalled my neighbour. I never let ſlip קידוש יום the conſecration of a day. My Mother was a very old Woman, who once ſold her Hair-lace, and bought wine with it for me to conſecrate a day with. There is a Tradition; that when ſhe dyed, ſhe bequeathed to him three hundred Hogſheads of wine: and when he dyed, he bequeathed three thouſand Hogſheads to his ſons. The Gloſs is: He that is conſtant in the conſecration of a day, by the merit of that, obtains Wine.

a Megillah, fol. 27. 2.

Ἀρχιτελώνης. Chief among the Publicans

A few things concerning the degree of Publicans.

I. The Lexicographer tells us, that they called thoſe the greater Publicans, who redeemed at a certain fixed price the Tax and other Revenues of the Romans: theſe were commonly called the Deciarii.

b Theſe are perſons not capable of giving any publick teſtimony רועין והגבאין ומוכסין Shepherds, Exactors, and Publicans. Upon which words R. Gaon hath this paſſage: The Rabbins do not exclude the Publicans, upon the account that they exact more than is appointed to them, for then they would be the ſame with גבאין Exactors. But when the King lays a Tax upon the Jews, to be required of every one according to the proportion of their eſtates; theſe Publicans in whoſe power it is to value every one's Eſtate, will favour ſome in the mitigation of their Tax, and burden others beyond all meaſure.

III. There were Publicans (to omit thoſe who collected the Taxes in every Town) who ſtood at Gates and Bridges, requiring Tribute of all Paſſengers, concerning whom we meet with ſomething in Schabb. c. Where there is alſo mention of מוכס גדול ומוכס קטן the greater, and the leſſer Publican. Concerning whom the Gloſs ſpeaks thus; Sometimes there is a greater Publican to whom it is very grievous to ſtand at the Bridge all the day long, he therefore ſubſtitutes an inferior, or leſſer Publican. Let us take this ſtory out of this ſame Tract d.

d Schabb. fol. 33. 2.

R. Judah, R. Joſeh, R. Simeon and R. Judah ben Garis ſitting together; R. Judah began and ſaid, O how great are the works of this (Roman) Nation: they build Streets, and Bridges, and Bagnioes. R. Joſe held his tongue, and ſaid nothing: But R. Simeon ben Jochai anſwered and ſaid, whatſoever they have built, they have built it for their own advantage---- They have built Bridges that they might gain a Tolle by them. R. Judah ben Garis went and told this to the Roman Empire, who thus decreed: Let R. Judah who hath magnified the Empire be promoted. Joſe that held his tongue יגלה לציפורי (which I imagine ought to be rendred) Let him be baniſht to Cyprus: And for Simeon that reproacht it, let him be killed. Simeon hearing theſe things betook himſelf into a Cave, and there lay hid with his Son for the ſpace of thirteen years.

Now

Now as to what order or degree amongſt the Publicans, our Zaccheus held, it is neither eaſie nor tanti to determine it. The title of Ἀρχιτελώνης chief among the Publicans, will hardly bear it, that he was one of thoſe that received Toll or cuſtom at Bridges, though even amongſt thoſe there were who had the title of the greater Publicans. He may rather be eſteemed either of the firſt, or the ſecond Claſſe of thoſe I have already named. In either of thoſe it was eaſier for him συκοφαντῆσαι to raiſe falſe accuſation againſt any (which he chargeth himſelf with) than at the Bridge or ſo.

VERS. VIII.

Τὰ ἡμίσια τῶν ὑπαρχόντων μου δίδωμι τοῖς πτωχοῖς· The half of my goods I give to the poor.

I. A Diſtribution amongſt the poor of thoſe goods that had been ill got was neceſſary. In Sanhedrin e there is a diſcourſe of reſtitution, and diſtribution of diſhoneſt gains, eſpecially what wealth had been got by Merchandiſe of fruits of the ſeventh year which was forbidden. And this is the form of reſtitution. J. N. the Son of N. ſcraped up ſuch a ſumm by the fruits of the ſeventh year, and behold I beſtow it all upon the poor.

e Fol. 25. 2.

II. Alms were to be given to the poor out of wealth honeſtly acquired: but according to the rules and precepts of the Rabbins they were not bound to beſtow above one fifth part. f As to what help is to be afforded by Mammon, there is a ſtated meaſure חומש ממונו viz. a fifth part of his Mammon. No one is bound to give more than one fifth. And they ſay, That it is decreed in Uſha, that a man ſhould ſet apart חומש נכסיו לצדקה the fifth part of his eſtate according to the command.

f Rambam in Peah, cap. 1.

This fifth part was ſo ſtated and decreed, That, 1. ſo far they ought to go upon the account of a command. 2. No man is bound by the Law to go further. But, 3. He may do more, if he pleaſe, on his own accord. Which this Zaccheus did in a large and generous meaſure. The reſtitution of four fold for his Sycophancy agreed with the Law about theft.

VERS. IX.

Ὅτι σήμερον σωτηρία τῷ οἴκῳ τούτῳ ἐγένετο. This day is ſalvation come to this houſe.

IT is ſaid Verſ. 7. That they all murmured that Chriſt was gone to be gueſt with a man that is a ſinner. What then did they think of the houſe it ſelf that belonged to this ſinner? Do we think they would enter in, when they deſpiſed any thing that belonged to Publicans? Perhaps that expreſſion σταθεὶς δὲ Ζακχαῖος εἶπε Zaccheus ſtood and ſaid, may ſeem to hint, that he came forth and ſtood talking with thoſe that were without doors and would not enter. However, if we well conſider how meanly they accounted of the houſe of a Publican, we may the eaſilier underſtand, what the meaning of that expreſſion is, this day is ſalvation come to this houſe.

Καθότι καὶ αὐτὸς υἱὸς Ἀβραάμ ἐστιν. Foraſmuch as he alſo is a Son of Abraham.

That is, ſay moſt, the Son of Abraham by Faith; which indeed is moſt true. But I doubt however, that this is not directly the ſenſe of theſe words. For I queſtion whether the Jews knew of any kind of relation to Abraham, but that which was according to the fleſh, and by way of ſtock and off-ſpring. The Son of Abraham by Faith was a notion unknown and I ſcarce believe our Saviour would ſpeak to them in an unintelligible dialect. To which we may add that if it had been ſaid αὐτὸς υἱὸς Ἀβραάμ ἐγένετο (as it is ἐγένετο in the former clauſe) we might the eaſilier have inclined to that ſenſe and applied it to his converſion by which he was made a Son of Abraham by Faith. It would argue that his relation to Abraham was changed, and become other than what it was before, ſo as ἐγένετο in the former clauſe argued the condition of the houſe altered: But whereas it is ſaid, υἱὸς Ἀβραάμ ἐστιν, he is, and not he is made a Son of Abraham, I would take it in the ſame ſenſe with that, Chap. XIII. 16. This Woman being a Daughter of Abraham, that is, in the literal ſenſe of it: as if he ſhould ſay, Although you murmur, having this chief Publican in ſo much contempt and indignation, as if he was an accurſed thing, yet is he of the ſeed of Abraham as well as you your ſelves. He is not an Heathen Publican, but an Iſraelite: and ſeeing the Son of Man cometh to ſeek and to ſave that which is loſt, eſpecially the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, Salvation is come to his houſe this day, for he alſo is a Son of Abraham.

VERS. XI.

Καὶ δοκεῖν αὐτὸς ὅτι παραχρῆμα μέλλει ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ ἀναφαίνεσθαι. And because they thought that the Kingdom of God ſhould immediately appear.

g Midras Schir. fol. 7. 2.

g הגיע זמנה של מלכות שמים שתגלה The time draweth nigh that the Kingdom, of Heaven ſhall be revealed. We have obſerved elſewhere, that it was the Nations univerſal opinion, that that very time wherein Chriſt did appear, was the time wherein they expected the coming of Meſſiah, being ſo taught by the Propheſie of Daniel. Which however the more modern Jews would now indeavour to evade, as alſo other more illuſtrious Predictions that concern our Jeſus, yet were thoſe times then more truly and more ſincerely interpreted. Hence that conflux of Jews from all Nations to Jeruſalem, Acts II. 5. And to this doth that in ſome meaſure atteſt which the Talmudiſts relate concerning the Paraphraſt of the Prophets, that when he went about to paraphraſe alſo the Hagiographa or Holy Writings, he was forbidden by Bath Kol (a voice from Heaven) ſaying, That he muſt abſtain from that, for in thoſe Books was the end of the Meſſiah, viz. Dan. IX. 26.

VERS. XIII.

Ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς δέκα μνᾶς. And delivered to them ten pounds.

THIS Parable of the pounds hath for the general the very ſame ſcope with that of the talents, Matth. XXV. That Noble-man or King that went into a far Country to receive for himſelf a Kingdom, is Chriſt in his Goſpel going forth to call in the Gentiles to his obedience: returning, he cuts off the Nation of the Jews that would not have him to reign over them, verſ. 27. And whiles they were now in expectation of the immediate revelation of the Kingdom of Heaven, and were dreaming many vain and ſenſeleſs things concerning it; our Saviour by this Parable warns and admoniſheth them, that he muſt not look for any advantage by that Kingdom who cannot give a good account of thoſe Talents which God had committed to his truſt and improvement.

All thoſe great good things that were promiſed to mankind, were promiſed as what ſhould happen in the laſt days, i. e. in the laſt days of Jeruſalem. Then was the Meſſiah to be revealed k. Then was the Holy Ghoſt to be poured out l. Then was the Mountain of the Lord to be exalted, and the Nations ſhould flow in to it m. In a word, then were to be fulfilled all thoſe great things which the Prophets had foretold about the coming of the Meſſiah, and the bringing in of the Goſpel. Theſe were the times of Jeruſalem's Viſitation, if ſhe could have known it. But ſo far was ſhe from that knowledge, that nothing was more odious, nothing more contemptible, than when indeed all theſe ineffable benefits were diſpenſed in the midſt of her. they were with black and dreadful indications as to the perverſneſs and obſtinacy of that people. They were the beſt of times, and the worſt generation lived in them. CHAP. XX.

VERS. I.

Οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς ἢ οἱ Γραμματεῖς σὺν τοῖς Πρεσβυτέροις. The chief Prieſts and the Scribes with the Elders.

SO it is in Mark XI. 27. but in Matth. XXI. 23. it is Ἀρχιερεῖς ἢ Πρεσβύτεροι τοῦ λαοῦ· The Chief Prieſts and Elders of the people. Now the queſtion is, who theſe Elders ſhould be, as they are diſtinguiſht, from the Chief Prieſts and the Scribes. The Sanhedrin conſiſted chiefly of Prieſts, Levites, and Iſraelites, although the original precept was for the Prieſts and Levites only. a The command is, that the Prieſts and Levities ſhould be of the great Council, as it is ſaid, thou ſhalt go unto the Prieſts and Levites: ואם לא מצאו but if ſuch be not to be found, אפילו היו כולם ישראל הרי זה מותר although they were all Iſraelites, behold, it is allowed. a Maimon. in Sanhedr. cap. 2.

None will imagine that there ever was a Sanhedrin, wherein there were Iſraelites only and no Prieſts or Levites; nor on the other hand, that there ever was a Sanhedrin wherein there were only Prieſts and Levites, and no Iſraelites. The γραμματεῖς therefore or the Scribes, ſeem in this place to denote either the Levites, or elſe, together with the Levites thoſe inferior ranks, of Prieſts, who were not the Ἀρχιερεῖς or Chief Prieſts: And then the Πρεσβύτεροι, Elders, may be the Iſraelites, or thoſe Elders of the Laity, that were not of the Levitical Tribe. Such an one was Gamaliel the preſent Preſident of the Sanhedrin, and Simeon his Son, of the Tribe of Judah.

VERS. XLII.

Εἶπεν ὁ Κύριος τῷ Κυρίῳ μου, &c. The Lord ſaid unto my Lord, &c.

WHereas St. Matthew tells us, c That no man was able to anſwer him a word, to that Argument whereby he aſſerted the Divinity of the Meſſias, it is plain that thoſe evaſions were not yet thought of, by which the Jews have ſince endeavoured to ſhift off this place. For the Talmudiſts apply the Pſalm to Abraham; the Targumiſt (as it ſeems) to David: others (as Juſtin Martyr tells us) to Hezekia, which yet, I do not remember I have obſerved in the Jewiſh Authors. His words are in his Dialogue with Tryphon d. Καὶ τοῦτον τὸν Ψαλμὸν ὅτι εἰς τὸν Ἐζεκίαν τὸν Βασιλέα εἰρῆσθαι ἐξηγεῖσθαι πολμᾶτε οὐκ ἀγνοῶ· I am not ignorant that you venture to explain this Pſalm (when he had recited the whole Pſalm) as if were to be underſtood of King Hezekiah. c Matt. XXII. 46. d Pag. 290.

The Jewiſh Authors have it thus: e Sem the great, ſaid unto Eleazar (Abraham's ſervant) when the Kings of the Eaſt and of the Weſt came againſt you, what did you? He anſwered e Sanhedr. fol. 148. 2.

and ſaid, The Holy bleſſed God took Abraham, and made him to ſit on his right hand. And again, f The Holy bleſſed God had purpoſed to have derived the Prieſthood from Shem; according as it is ſaid, thou art the Prieſt of the moſt high God, [Gen. XIV.] but becauſe he bleſſed Abraham before he bleſſed God, God derived the Prieſthood from Abraham. For ſo it is ſaid, And he bleſſed him and ſaid, Bleſſed be Abraham of the moſt high God, poſſeſſor of Heaven and Earth, and bleſſed be the moſt high God, Abraham ſaith unto him, who uſeth to bleſs the ſervant before his Lord? Upon this God gave the Prieſthood to Abraham, according as it is ſaid, The Lord ſaid unto my Lord, ſit thou on my right hand. And afterward it is written the Lord ſware and will not repent, thou art a Prieſt for ever for the ſpeaking (for ſo they render עַל דִּבְרָתִי) *of Melchizedech. VERS. XXIV.

Ἄχρι πληρωθῶσι καιροὶ Ἐθνῶν. Until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.

JERUSALEM ſhall be troden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled: And what then? in what ſenſe is this word ἄχρι, until, to be underſtood? Let every one have his conjecture, and let me be allowed mine. I am well aſſured our Saviour is diſcourſing about the fall and overthrow of Jeruſalem; but I doubt whether he touches upon the reſtauration of it: Nor can I ſee any great reaſon to affirm that the times of the Gentiles will be fulfilled before the end of the world it ſelf. But as to this controverſie, I ſhall not at preſent meddle with it. And yet, in the mean time cannot but wonder that the Diſciples having ſo plainly heard theſe things from the mouth of their Maſter what concerned the deſtruction both of the place and nation, ſhould be ſo quickly asking, Lord wilt thou at this time reſtore the Kingdom to Iſrael? Nor do I leſs wonder to find the Learned Beza, expounding the very following Verſe after this manner: Then ſhall there be the ſigns in the Sun, &c. That is after thoſe times are fulfilled which were alloted for the ſalvation of the Gentiles, and vengeance upon the Jews, concerning which St. Paul diſcourſes copiouſly, Rom. XI. 25, &c. When indeed nothing could be ſaid clearer for the confutation of that Expoſition than that of Verſ. 32. Verily I ſay unto you, this generation ſhall not paſs away till all be fulfilled. It is ſtrange this ſhould be no more obſerved, as it ought to have been by himſelf and diverſe others, when in truth theſe very words are as a gnomon to the whole Chapter. All the other paſſages of the Chapter fall in with Matth. XXIV. and Mark XI. where we have placed thoſe Notes that were proper, and ſhall repeat nothing here. Which method I have taken in ſeveral places in this Evangeliſt, where he relates paſſages that have been related before, and which I have had occaſion to handle as I met with them.

CHAP. XXII.

VERS. IV.

Καὶ τοῖς στρατηγοῖς. And Captains.

THEY are called στρατηγοὶ τοῦ ἱεροῦ, verſ. 52. Captains of the Temple: And in the ſingular number, the Captain of the Temple, Acts IV. 1. but who ſhould this, or theſe be?

I. All know, that there was a Roman Garriſon in the Caſtle of Antonia, whoſe charge eſpecially was to ſuppreſs all Tumults and Seditions in the Temple: but was the Tribune or the Centurions of that Garriſon called by the name of στρατηγοὶ τοῦ ἱεροῦ the Captains of the Temple? Surely rather στρατηγοὶ τῆς Ἀντωνίας, the Captains of the Caſtle of Antonia. And indeed it appears not that the Roman Captains had conſpired againſt the life of Chriſt, that Judas ſhould betake himſelf to them to make a bargin for the betraying of him.

II. The conjecture might be more probable of thoſe Rulers in the Temple, concerning whom we have this mention. a Theſe are the Rulers that were in the Temple: Johanan ben Phineas Governour of the Seals, Ahijah ſet over the drink offerings: Matthiah ben Samuel that preſided over the Lots, &c. But to me it ſeems beyond all doubt that the Captains of the Temple, were the Captains of the ſeveral Watches. b In three places the Prieſts kept Watch and Ward in the Temple, viz. in Beth Abtenes, Beth Nitſots, and Beth Mokad. The Levites alſo in one and twenty places more. Whereas therefore theſe Watches or Guards conſiſted every one of ſeveral perſons, there was one ſingle perſon ſet over each of them, as their Captain or the head of that Watch. And this way looks that of Pilat. Matth. XXVII. 65. ἔχετε κουστωδίαν, ye have a watch of your own, let ſome of them be ſent to guard the Sepulchre.

b Middoth cap. 1.

III. The Captain of the Temple therefore, diſtinctively and by way of eminence ſo termed, I would ſuppoſe him whom they called איש הר הבית The Ruler of the Mountain of the Houſe, who was the chief of all the heads of thoſe Wards. איש הר הבית וגו׳ c The Ruler of the Mountain of the Temple, takes his walks through every watch, with Torches lighted before him: and if he found any upon the Watch that might not be ſtanding on his feet, he ſaid, Peace be with thee; but if he found him ſleeping, he ſtruck him with a ſtick, and it was warrantable for him to burn the Garments of ſuch an one. And when it was ſaid by others, what is that noiſe in the Court? the anſwer was made, it is the noiſe of a Levite under correction, and whoſe Garments are burning for that he ſlept upon the Watch. R. Eliezer ben Jacob ſaid, they once found my Mother's Son aſleep, and they burnt his Cloaths. Compare this paſſage with Revel. XVI. 15. Behold I come as a Thief; Bleſſed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his Garments, leſt he walk naked, and they ſee his ſhame.

c Middoth ubi ſupr. hal. 2.

It is eaſie diſtinguiſhing this איש הר הבית This Captain of the mountain of the Temple, from ממונה the Ruler of the Temple or the Sagan. The former preſided only over the Guards; the latter over the whole Service of the Temple. And ſo we have them diſtinguiſhed, Acts IV. verſ. 1. there is the Captain of the Temple, and Annas who was the Sagan.

VERS. XIX.

Τοῦτό ἐστι τὸ σῶμά μου. This is my body.

THE words of the inſtitution of the Holy Euchariſt throughout the whole contain a reflection, partly by way of Antitheſis, partly by way of Alluſion.

I. This is my body.] Upon the account of their preſent celebration of the Paſſover theſe words might very well have ſome reference to the body of the Paſchal Lamb. The body (I ſay) of the Paſchal Lamb. For the Jews uſe this very phraſe concerning it. d They bring in a Table ſpread, on which are bitter Herbs, with other Herbs, unleaven'd Bread, Pottage וגופו של טבש הפסח and the Body of the Paſchal Lamb. And a little after: He eateth מגופו של פסח of the Body of the Paſſover. From whence our Saviour's meaning may be well enough diſcerned, viz. that by the ſame ſignification that the Paſchal Lamb was my body hitherto; from hence forward let this Bread be my body.

d Maimon. in Hhametz umatſah. cap. 8.

II. Which

II. Which is given for you.] But the Apoſtle adds, which is broken for you: Which indeed doth not ſo well agree with the Paſchal Lamb, as with the Lamb for the daily Sacrifice; for as to the Paſchal Lamb, there was not a bone of it broken, but that of the daily Sacrifice was broken and cut into ſeveral parts; and yet they are both of them the Body of Chriſt in a figure. And although, beſides the breaking of it, there are theſe further inſtances wherein the Paſchal Lamb, and that of the daily Sacrifice did differ, viz. 1. That the daily Sacrifice was for all Iſrael, but the Paſchal for this or that Family. 2. The daily Sacrifice was for the attonement of ſin, the Paſsover not ſo. 3. The daily Sacrifice was burnt, but the Paſsover eaten: yet in this they agreed, that under both, the body of our Saviour was figured and ſhadowed out, though in a different notion.

III. This do in remembrance of me.] As you kept the Paſſover in remembrance of your going out of Egyt. e Thou ſhalt remember the day of thy going out of Egypt all the days of thy life. Ben Zuma thus explains it; the days of thy life, that is, in the day time: all the days of thy life, that is, in the night time too. But the wiſe men ſay, the days of thy life, that is, in this age: all the days of thy life, that the days of the Meſſiah may be included too. But whereas in the days of the Meſſiah there was a greater and more illuſtrious redemption and deliverance, than that out of Egypt, brought about; with the Jews good leave, it is highly requiſite, that both the thing it ſelf, and he that accompliſhed it ſhould be remembred. We ſuſpect in our Notes upon 1 Cor. XI. as if ſome of the Corinthians in their very participation of the Holy Euchariſt did ſo far Judaize, that what had been inſtituted for the Commemoration of their redemption by the death of Chriſt, they perverted to the Commemoration of the going out of Egypt: and that they did not at all diſcern the Lord's body, in the Sacrament.

e Beratoth, cap. 1. hal. ult.

Under the Law there were ſeveral eatings of Holy things. The firſt was that which Siphra mentions f כהנים אוכלים ובעלים מתכפרים When the Prieſts eat of the Sacrifice, and attonement is made for him that brings it: There were other eatings, viz. of the Feſtival Sacrifices of the Tenths, Thankſgiving Offerings, &c. which were to be eaten by thoſe that brought them; but theſe all now have their period; and now, Do ye this, and do it in remembrance of me.

f Fol. 24. 4.

IV. This cup which is ſhed for you.] This ſeems to have reference to that cup of Wine that was every day powered out in the Drink-Offerings, with the daily Sacrifice, for that alſo was poured out for the remiſſion of Sins. So that the bread may have reference to the body of the daily Sacrifice, and the cup, to the Wine of the Drink-Offering.

V. My blood of the New Teſtament.] So St. Matthew, and St. Mark, with reference to the blood of Bulls and of Goats, with which the Old Teſtament was confirmed, Exod. XXIV. Heb. IX. 10.

VI. The New Teſtament in my blood.] So our Evangeliſt, and ſo the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. XI. with reference to the whole miniſtry of the Altar, where blood was poured out: Nay, with reſpect to the whole Jewiſh Religion; for here was the beginning or entry of the New Covenant. And indeed it ſeems that the deſign of that frequent Communion of the Lords Supper in the firſt Ages of the Church among other things, was, that thoſe who were converted from Judaiſm, might be ſealed and confirmed againſt Judaiſm; the Sacrament it ſelf being the mark of the ceſſation, the Old Teſtament, and the beginning of the New.

VERS. XXI.

Πλὴν ἰδοὺ ἡ χεὶρ τοῦ παραδιδόντος, &c. But behold, the hand of him that betrayeth me, &c.

WHAT can be deſired more as a demonſtration that Judas was preſent at the Euchariſt? And whereas the contrary is endeavoured to be proved out of Joh. XIII. nothing is made out of nothing; for there is not one ſyllable throughout that whole Chapter of the Paſchal Supper, but of a Supper before the Feaſt of the Paſsover.

VERS. XXVI.

Ὡς ὁ νεώτερος. As the younger.

THE Vulgar and Interlinear, ſicut junior. We, as the younger, very well. For, as Beza hath it upon the place, propriè dicitur de ætate: it is properly to be underſtood of age. I ask therefore,

I. Whether Peter was not the oldeſt of the whole company? What reaſon can any have to deny this? It was neceſſary that ſome one of them ſhould be the firſt both in number and order, and it was as fit and equal, that the oldeſt amongſt them ſhould be reckoned the firſt. And who will you ſay, was older than Peter? Hence was it that he had had the first place in the Catalogue of the Apostles because he was the oldest. For this reason he sate at Table in the uppermost place next our Lord: for this reason did our Saviour so often direct his discourse so immediately to him: and for this reason were his answers to Christ taken in the name of all the rest, viz. because the oldest. Which brings to mind אמוריה או מתרגמניה של ר' the Interpreter of the Doctor, in the School of the Rabbins, who was the Interlocutor between the Master and the Disciples, and for that reason the chief in the School, but without any primacy. Whereas therefore St. Peter after our Saviour's Ascension into heaven, was (to speak vulgarly) the Prolocutor in that Sacred College; what more probable reason can be offered why he was so, than his seniority? Were not others as capable of speaking as he? had they not equal Authority, Zeal, Faith, Knowledge with him, &c? but he indeed was the eldest man.

II. I cannot therefore but suspect from the proper signification of the word νεώτερος, younger, (to which ὁ μείζων, the greater, respecting age, does answer) that some one amongst them, had been challenging some priviledge and primacy to himself upon the account of seniority: and unless any can make it out that there was some body older than Peter, pardon me, if I think that he was the chief in this Contention, and that it was chiefly moved betwixt himself and the two Sons of Zebedee. For it seems unlikely, that the other nine would have contended for the primacy with Peter, James and John; whom Christ had so peculiarly distinguished in their presence, with marks of his favour. So that the struggle seems to be especially between these three, and Peter the beginner of the strife: which appears partly in that our Saviour rebukes him by name; and partly in that he could not forget, without some grudge, that request of the two Brothers, Lord, let us sit one on thy right hand, the other on thy left.

VERS. XXXI.

Σίμων, Σίμων. Simon, Simon.

LET us change the Name and person: Thomas, Thomas: or Philip, Philip, Satan hath desired, &c. but I have prayed, &c. And who would from hence have pickt out an Argument for the Primacy of Thomas, or Philip, over the rest of the Apostles, and the universal Church? And yet this do the Romanists in the behalf of Peter. Who would not have taken it rather as a severe chiding? As if he should have said, Thou Thomas or Philip, art thou so hot in contending for the Primacy, whiles Satan is so hot against all of you? and whilst you are at strife amongst your selves, he is at strife against you all? under such a notion as this, I doubt not, our Saviour did speak to Peter; and that in these words he found a severe reprimand rather than any promotion to the Primacy.

VERS. XXXII.

Ἵνα μὴ ἐκλείπῃ ἡ πίστις σου. That thy Faith fail not.

THERE seems an emphasis in the word Πίστις, Faith. As to the other Apostles indeed, that Christian courage and magnanimity which they ought to have exerted in that difficult time did fail them, but their Faith was nothing so near shipwreck as Peter's Faith was. They indeed deserted their Master and fled, Mark XIV. 50. which they seem to have not done without some connivence from himself, Joh. XVIII. 8. But when Peter renounced and abjured his Lord, how near was he becoming משומד an Apostate, and his Faith from suffering a total shipwreck? Certainly it was Peter's advantage that Christ pray'd for him, but it was not so much for his honour that he should stand in need of such a Prayer beyond all others.

VERS. XXXVI.

Πωλησάτω τὸ ἱμάτιον αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀγορασάτω μάχαιραν. Let him sell his Garment and buy a Sword.

DOTH our Saviour give them this counsel in good earnest?

I. He uses the common Dialect. For so also the Rabbins in other things. g He that hath not wherewithal to eat but upon mere Alms, let him beg, or sell his Garments to buy Oyl and Candles for the Feast of Dedication, &c.

g Maimon. chanuchah. cap. 4.

II. He warns them of a danger that is very near, and in a common way of speech, lets them know, that they had more need of providing Swords for their defence against the common enemy, than be any way quarrelling amongst themselves. Not so much exhorting horting them to repel force with force, as to give them ſuch an apprehenſion of the common rage of their enemies againſt them, that might ſuppreſs all private animoſities amongſt themſelves.

VERS. XXXVII.

Καὶ γὰρ τὰ περὶ ἐμὲ τέλος ἔχει. For the things concerning me have an end.

THAT is, my buſineſs is done: yours is but beginning. While I was preſent, the Children of the Bride-Chamber had no reaſon to weep. But when I am taken away and numbered amongſt the tranſgreſſors, think what will be done to you, and what ought to be done by you, and then think if this be a time for you to be contending with one another.

VERS. XLIII.

Ἄγγελος ἐνισχύων αὐτόν. An Angel ſtrengthening him.

I. IN his Temptations in the Wilderneſs there was no Angel by him, for St. Matthew ſaith, Chap. IV. 11. Then the Devil leaveth him, and behold Angels came and miniſtred unto him: that is, Not till the Devil had firſt left him. But in the midſt of this tryal, there was an Angel ſtrengthening him: and why ſo? by reaſon of his Agony you will ſay, and that very truly: But whence aroſe this Agony and of what kind was it? It was occaſioned (you will ſay) from a ſenſe of Divine indignation and wrath. This dare not I ſay, or imagine, that God was angry, or conceived any indignation againſt him at all. And if the anguiſh and agony of his mind was the reſult of the Divine wrath preſſing in upon him, I do not ſee what kind of comfort an Angel could miniſter againſt the wrath of God. It is rather an argument God was not angry with him, when he ſent an Angel to comfort him.

II. It is not to be doubted but that Chriſt was now wreſtling with a furious enraged Devil, yea a Devil looſed from his chain, and permitted without any check or reſtraint from Divine Providence to exert all his force and rage againſt him. Which was permitted by God, not from any diſpleaſure againſt his Son, but that even humane nature might by this her combatant, get a conqueſt over this inſulting enemy. For it had been a ſmall thing to have vanquiſhed the Devil by mere Divine power.

III. However therefore it is not here related in expreſs terms, yet could I eaſily perſwade my ſelf that the Devil might at this time appear to our Saviour in ſome viſible ſhape. When he tempted him in the Wilderneſs he put on the diſguiſe of ſome good Angel, or rather ſome kind of reſemblance of the Holy Ghoſt. But in this laſt temptation he puts on himſelf, and appears in his own colours, viz. in ſome direful formidable figure on purpoſe to terrifie our Lord. And from thence it was that ἤρξατο ἐκθαμβεῖσθαι καὶ ἀδημονεῖν, he began to be ſore amazed and to be very heavy, Mark XIV. 33. and here γενέσθαι ἐν ἀγωνίᾳ, to be in an agony. Nor do I raſhly, and without any ground ſuppoſe this, but upon theſe reaſons:

I. Whereas that old Dragon aſſaulted the firſt Adam in a Garden in a viſible ſhape, it is not abſurd to imagine he did ſo now to the ſecond Adam in a Garden, in a viſible ſhape.

II. This our Evangeliſt tells us concerning his Temptation in the Wilderneſs, b That when the Devil had ended all the Temptation he departed from him ἄχρι καιροῦ for a ſeaſon. Here he takes the ſeaſon to return i, and I ſee no reaſon why he ſhould not at this time, as well as in the Wilderneſs, aſſume ſome viſible ſhape. Then indeed he addreſſed himſelf in a charming and grateful ſhape to have enticed and deceived him; but now, in a frightful and horrid one, to have amazed and terrified him. He had already experienced how vain a thing it was to go about to cheat and allure him, what remained therefore, but to ſhake his mind (if poſſible) with fright and terror?

III. For when he had no greater invention in his whole Store-houſe, by which he could diſtreſs and ſhake the minds of mortals, than the horrid apparition of himſelf, none will conceive he would neglect this engine, that, if it could be, through his eye he might diſturb his ſoul. That therefore which the Jews fain or dream about Solomon, that he ſaw the Angel of Death (that is the Devil) gnaſhing his teeth, and that a Diſciple of Rabbi did ſo too, k I ſuppoſe acted in good earneſt here; namely that Chriſt ſaw the Devil, that old Dragon, gaping at him, with all horror he could put on. And in this ſenſe would I underſtand that of the Meſſenger of Satan buffeting the Apoſtle l: viz. That the Devil did appear viſibly to him in ſome frightful ſhape to afflict and terrifie him. And perhaps that vehement deſire he had to ſift the Diſciples (verſ. 31.) reſpects this ſame thing, namely that he might be permitted to aſſault them with ſuch kind of affrightments.

VERS.

VERS. XLIV.

Ὁ ἱδρὼς αὐτοῦ ὡσεὶ θρόμβοι αἵματος. His sweat, as it were great drops of blood.

DIodorus Siculus speaking of a Country where Alexander the Great had to do with Porus, hath this passage, m There are Serpents there οἱ διὰ τῆς δηγμάτων ὀξεῖς θανάτους ἀπεργάζονται. Τὸν δὲ πληγέντα πόνοι δεινοὶ συνέχουσι καὶ ῥοῦς ἱδρώτος αἱματοειδὴς κατέχει· Which by their bites would occasion most bitter deaths: they are horrible pains, that afflict any that are struck by them, and an issue of sweat like blood seizeth them. I would ascribe this bloudy sweat of our Saviour to the bite of that old Serpent, rather than to the apprehension of Divine wrath. m Lib. 17. pag. 560.

VERS. XLVII.

Φιλῆσαι αὐτόν. To kiss him.

OUR Saviour had to do with a frightful and terrifying Devil, but this Traytor seems possest with a tame and gentle one. He converses with the Apostles, and there is no token of a Devil dwelling in him. He is present at the Passover, at the Eucharist, and the very lips of Christ, and still no sign of Satan being his inmate. But when once the Devil hath done his work by thee, then Judas, take heed of thy Devil.

As to this treacherous contrivance of Judas, let us frame the most gentle opinion of it that the matter can bear. For instance, that he might perhaps think with himself, that it was not possible for Christ to be apprehended by the Jews, having already seen him working such stupendious miracles, and more than once strangely delivering himself from them. And be it further, that when he said to them, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that is he, lay hold of him. He said it scoffingly, as believing they could not be able to lay hold on him. Grant we, in a word, that when he saw him condemned he repented himself, having never suspected that matters would have gone so far, presuming that Christ would easily have made his escapes from them, and himself should have got thirty pieces of silver by the bargain: Let us grant (I say) that this was his contrivance, and colour it over with as plausible excuses as we can; yet certainly was there never any thing could be more impiously done by mortal man, than for him thus to play with the Holy of holies, and endeavour to make merchandize of the Son of God. However, I suspect much worse things hatcht in the breast of this Traytor: viz. that Christ did really not please him, and with the great cheifs of that Nation though he supposed him the true Messiah: Yet not such an one as answered their carnal expectation.

The Rabbins dinstinguish between lawful kisses, and נשיקות תפלות kisses of folly: Saying that all kisses are kisses of folly excepting three n: which they there reckon up. But what kind of kis was this? a kiss of folly? Alas it is too low and dwarfish a term for this gygantick monster. n Shemoth rabba, fol. 122. 4.

VERS. LIII.

Αὕτη ὑμῶν ἐστιν ἡ ὥρα καὶ ἡ ἐξουσία τοῦ σκότους. This is your hour and the power of darkness.

THE Serpent himself is now come in Judas, and the seed of the Serpent was that Rout that came with him, to whom it was so fatal to bruise the heel of the Messiah, and now was the hour for that wickedness. It was antiently foretold and predetermined both as to the thing it self and the instruments, and now all fences lye open, and you may do what you please. The chains of the Devil himself are now loosed, and it is permitted to him without the least check or restraint of Divine Providence to exert all his Furies at pleasure, for now is the power of darkness.

Σκότος, darkness is the Devil amongst the Allegorists. o It is said, on the first day of the Creation, the Angel of death (i. e. the Devil) was created, according as it is written, there was darkness upon the face of the deep: that is, the Angel of death, who darkneth the eyes of men. o Aruch in חשך in Jammedenu, on those words, Take the rod.

CHAP. XXIII.

VERS. II.

Τοῦτον εὑρομεν διαστρέφοντα τὸ ἔθνος. We found this fellow perverting the Nation.

[a] Sanhedr. fol. 103. 1.

A Diſciple corrupting his food publickly בגון ישו הנוצרי as did Jeſus of Nazareth. To corrupt their food publickly is a phraſe amongſt the Rabbins, to denote a mingling of true Doctrine with Hereſie, and the true worſhip of God with Idolatry. This was the accuſation they framed againſt our Saviour at this time, that he taught Heterodox and deſtructive principles, ſuch eſpecially as would tend to turn off, and alienate the people from their obedience to the Romans. Aruch recites this paſſage of the Talmud more cautiouſly, for inſtead of as Jeſus of Nazareth did, he hath it, as Jeroboam did.

VERS. VII.

Ἀνέπεμψεν αὐτὸν πρὸς Ἡρῴδην. He ſent him to Herod.

DID Pilate do this, as yielding to Herod a juriſdiction in capital matters, within the City of Jeruſalem upon thoſe that were Galileans? Probably he did it, either in flattery to the Tyrant; or elſe that he might throw off from himſelf both the trouble and the odium that might ariſe upon the occaſion of condemning Jeſus, whom he judged to be an innocent man, and in ſome meaſure pitied him, looking upon him as שוטה a ſort of a delirant perſon, one not very well in his wits: which opinion alſo Herod ſeems to have conceived of him, by putting upon him that fools coat wherewith he cloathed him. Ἐσθῆτα λαμπρὰν, which I ſhould willingly enough render white and ſhining, but that I obſerve our Evangeliſt when he hath occaſion to mention ſuch a Garment, calls it a white and ſhining robe expreſsly: Ὁ ἱματισμὸς αὐτοῦ λευκὸς, Chap. IX. 29. his Garment was white and glittering. Δύο ἄνδρες ἐν ἐσθῆτι λευκῇ, Acts I. 10. two men in white apparel.

VERS. XXX.

Τότε ἄρξονται λέγειν τοῖς ὄρεσι, &c. Then ſhall they begin to ſay to the Mountains, &c.

SO they do ſay Revel. VI. 6. from whence, among other Arguments, it may be reaſonably ſuppoſed, that that Chapter treats of the plagues and afflictions that ſhould fore-run the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and indeed the deſtruction and overthrow it ſelf. Weigh the place accurately, and perhaps thou wilt be of the ſame mind too. Nay I may further add, that perhaps this obſervation might not a little help (if my eyes fail me not) in diſcovering the method of the Author of the Book of the Revelations.

VERS. XXXI.

Εἰ ἐν ὑγρῷ ξύλῳ ταῦτα ποιοῦσιν, &c. If they do theſe things in a green tree, &c.

CONſult John Baptiſt's expreſſion, Matth. III. 10. now alſo the Ax is laid to the root of the Tree, viz. then when the Jewiſh Nation was ſubdued to the Government of the Romans, who were about to deſtroy it. And if they deal thus with me a green and flouriſhing Tree, what will they do with the whole Nation, a dry and ſapleſs trunck?

VERS. XXXIV.

Ἔβαλον κλῆρον. They caſt lots.

[b] Taanith, fol. 11. 2.

THEY caſt lots for his ſeamleſs Coat, John. XIX. 23, 24. Moſes is ſuppoſed to have miniſtred in ſuch a Garment. [b] In what kind of Garment did Moſes attend the ſeven days of Conſecration? בחלוק לבן in a white Veſtment. Rabh Cahnah ſaith בחלוק לבן שאין לא אמרא in a white Veſtment wherein there was no ſeam. The Gloſs is, The whole Garment was made of one thread, and not as our cloths are, which have their ſleeves ſewed ſewed to the body with a ſeam. But he gives a very ſenſeleſs reaſon why his Coat was without a ſeam: viz. to avoid the ſuſpition leſt Moſes ſhould at any time hide any Conſecrated Money within the ſeams of his Coat.

VERS. XXXVI.

Ὄξος προσφέρουσιν αὐτῷ. They brought him Vinegar.

Vinegar was the common drink of the Roman Souldiers; and hence thoſe to whom the cuſtody of Crucified perſons was committed, had it always ready by them e Idem juſſit vinum, &c. He commanded that no Souldier ſhould drink Wine in their expedition, but that every one ſhould content himſelf with Vinegar.

d Cujus viri, &c. The proviſion this man (viz. Miſitheus) made in the Common-wealth was ſuch, that there never was any greater frontire City which had not Vinegar, Bread-corn, and Bacon, and Barley, and Chaff, laid up for a whole year, &c. e Thou ſhalt give us as much Hay, Chaff, Vinegar, Herbs and Graſs as may ſuffice us.

e Ælian. Spartian. in Pescen. Nigr.

d Capitolin. in Gordiano tertio.

e Trebell. Pollio in Claudio.

Hence it may become leſs difficult to reconcile the Evangeliſts amongſt themſelves, ſpeaking of Wine given him mixt with Mirrhe, and of Vinegar too: viz. a twofold Cup, one before he was nailed to the Croſs, i. e. of Wine mingled with Myrrhe, the other, of Vinegar, while he hung there. The firſt given by the Jews according to their cuſtom: the ſecond, by the Souldiers in abuſe and mockery. But if you will grant a third Cup, then all difficulty vaniſheth indeed. Let the firſt be Wine mingled with Myrrhe; the ſecond, Vinegar mingled with Gall; the third, meer Vinegar. Which the Souldiers gave to Malefactors, if they had deſired drink, being that which they drank themſelves. Hence the σκεῦος ὄξους μεστὸν, the veſſel filled with Vinegar was always in readineſs, that the Souldiers might drink when they had a mind, and perſons alſo upon the Croſs if they ſtood in need of it.

VERS. XLII.

Μνήσθητί μου Κύριε. Lord remember me.

CHriſt is now upon the Croſs, as old Joſeph was in the Priſon between two Malefactors. There, one of them was delivered, the other hanged: Here, one obtains ſalvation the other periſheth. The Faith of this Thief is admirable; kept even pace with that of the Apoſtles, if in ſome circumſtances it did not go beyond it. The Apoſtles acknowledged Jeſus to be the Meſſiah: and ſo doth he; with this addition which I queſtion whether they did ſo clearly own and know or no: viz. that Chriſt ſhould reign and have his Kingdom after his death. He ſeems to have a ſounder judgment concerning Chriſt's Kingdom, than the Apoſtles themſelves, as may be gathered from their queſtion, Acts I. 6.

It pleaſed God in this laſt Article of time to glorifie the riches of his grace in a ſingular and extraordinary manner, both in the converſion of a ſinner, and the forgiveneſs of his ſins. I ſay in ſuch an Article of time which the world had never before ſeen, nor ever was like to ſee again, viz. in the very inſtant wherein the Meſſiah was finiſhing his redemption. It was not unknown to either of the Thieves that Jeſus was therefore condemn'd to dye, becauſe he had profeſſed himſelf the Chriſt: Hence that of the Impenitent Malefactor, If thou art Chriſt, ſave thy ſelf and us. And if the Penitent Thief did for a while joyn with the other in his petulant reproaches (which ſeems intimated to us Matth. XXVII. 44.) yet was his heart toucht at length, and perhaps, upon his obſervation of that miraculous darkneſs which at that time had covered the world.

VERS. XLIII.

Σήμερον μετ' ἐμοῦ ἔσῃ ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ. To day thou ſhalt be with me in Paradiſe.

I. LET us here firſt conſider the phraſe ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ, in Paradiſe. In common Jewiſh ſpeech בגן עדן in the Garden of Eden. In what ſenſe, we may collect from theſe following paſſages: תר"י ננסו בפרדס f The Rabbins have a Tradition. There are four that went into Paradiſe: namely, Ben Azzai, Ben Zumah, Acher, and R. Akibah. R. Akibah ſaith unto them, when you come to the ſtones of pure Marble, do not ye ſay מים מים Waters, Waters, (i. e. Alas theſe Waters will hinder us from going forward) for it is written, he that telleth lyes, ſhall not dwell in my preſence. (Now, it would be a lye to call white Marble, Water.) Ben Azzai הציץ looke with ſome curioſity about him, and he dyed: Of him the Scripture ſpeaks, Precious in the eyes of the Lord is the death of his Saints.

f Chagigah, fol. 14. 2.

Saints. Ben Zumah looked with ſome curioſity about him and he was diſturbed in his intellectuals: Of him the Scripture ſpeaketh, Haſt thou found Honey? eat ſo much as is ſufficient for thee, leſt thou be filled therewith and vomit it.

Aruch reciting theſe words ſaith, It is called פרדס Paradiſe, under the ſignification of the Garden of Eden which is reſerved for the juſt. This place is בערבות in the Heavens where the ſouls of the juſt are gathered together. And the Talmudick Gloſs hath it much to the ſame ſenſe. Theſe four by God's procurement עלו לרקיע went up into the firmament.

Whiles we are reading theſe paſſages, that ſtory may eaſily occur to mind, of St. Paul's being caught up into Paradiſe, 2 Cor. XII. and perhaps the Legend before us, is but the ape of that ſtory. In the ſtory it is obſervable that Paradiſe and the third Heaven are one and the ſame thing: in the Legend, Paradiſe and ערבות the higheſt Heavens. For ſo the Doctors Comment upon the word in Pſal. LXVIII. 5. g There are ſeven Claſſes or Degrees of juſt perſons, who ſee the face of God, ſit in the houſe of God. Aſcend up unto the hill of God, &c. and to every Claſs or Degree, there is allotted their proper dwelling place בגן ערן in Paradiſe. There are alſo ſeven abiding places in Hell. Thoſe that dwell in Paradiſe, they ſhine like the ſhining הרקיע of the Firmament, like the Sun, like the Moon, like the Firmament, like the Stars, like Lightning, like the Lilies, like burning Lamps h.

g Midras Tillin. fol. 11. 3.

h Ibid.

II. Our Saviour therefore telling the Penitent Thief, This day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe, he ſpeaks in the common dialect, and to the capacity of the Thief, viz. that he ſhould be in Heaven with Chriſt, and with all juſt perſons that have left this world: Nor indeed would I fetch the explication of that Article of our Creed Κατῆλθεν εἰς ᾅδου, He deſcended into Hell, from any paſſage in the Scripture ſooner than this here: adding this, that we muſt of neceſſity have recourſe to the Greek Tongue for the ſignification of the word Ἅδης, which they generally uſe, to denote the ſtate of the dead, as well the bleſſed as the miſerable. Thoſe who would expound that paſſage in 1 Pet. III. 19. of his going down from the Croſs into Hell to preach to the Spirits in Priſon there, do very little regard the ſcope of the Apoſtle, and are abſolute ſtrangers to his meaning in it. For,

1. In that he ſhuts up the generation before the flood in an infernal priſon, he falls in with the received opinion of that Nation, which was, that that generation had no part in the world to come: And that they were condemned to boiling waters in Hell.

2. He compares the preſent Generation of the Jews, with that Generation before the flood. That Chriſt did of old preach even to that Generation, and ſo he hath done to this: That that Generation periſhed through its diſobedience, and ſo will this. He runs much upon the ſame parallel in his ſecond Epiſtle, Chap. III. 6. &c. We muſt obſerve that the Apoſtle makes his tranſition from the Crucifixion and Reſurrection of our Saviour, directly to the Generation before the flood, paſſing over all thoſe Generations that came between, on purpoſe that he might make the compariſon betwixt that, and the Age he lived in.

VERS. LIII.

Ἐνετύλιξεν αὐτὸ σινδόνι. Wrapped it in Linnen.

MAR Zutrah ſaith that מטפחות ספרים שכלו out of the Linnen in which they wrapt up Books, when it grew old, they make ſhrowds למרת מצוה for the dead of the precept, for this is to their diſgrace. The Gloſs adds, That they do it of the linnen wherein they fold up the Book of the Law. He who had ſuffered death by the ſentence of the Sanhedrin or Magiſtrate, they were wont to call him מרת מצוה The dead of the precept, becauſe he was executed according to the precept: And ſuch an one to them was our Jeſus. Now as to one that was condemned to death by the Magiſtrate, they had an opinion, that by how much the more diſgracefully they dealt with him, by ſo much the greater attonement was made for him. Hence that expreſſion, לא היו מת אבלין they did not openly bewail him, that that very ſetting him, at nought (no man lamenting him) might redound to his attonement. And from thence perhaps, if the Women at Jeruſalem had bewailed any other perſon, as they bewailed our Saviour, that other perſon might have ſaid, ye Daughters of Jeruſalem weep not for me leſt ye cut ſhort my attonement. But Chriſt ſpeaks to them upon a far different account. And under this notion they wrapped one that had been ſo Executed in ſome ragged, torn, old, dirty winding-ſheets, that this diſgrace being thrown upon him, might augment his expiation. But this good Arimathean behaves himſelf otherwiſe with Jeſus, as having conceived quite another opinion concerning him.

VERS.

VERS. LIV.

Καὶ σάββατον ἐπέφωσκε. And the Sabbath drew on.

THE Vulgar reads, Et Sabbatum illuceſcebat: The Sabbath began to dawn. Not ill rendred. Beza reads, Et Sabbatum ſuccedebat: And the Sabbath ſucceeded. Not properly. One would have thought it had been more congruouſly ſaid Καὶ εἰς σάββατον ἐσκοτίσθη, it began to be dark toward the Sabbath: For the night before the Sabbath was coming on: But

I. The Sabbatical Candles that were lighted in honour of the Sabbath, were now ſet up. i There are three things which it is neceſſary a man ſhould warn thoſe of his own Houſe of, on the Evening of the Sabbath, when Night is coming on: Have you paid your Tenths? עירבתם Have you begun your Erubbick Society? הדליקו את הנר Light up your Candle. k Men and Women are bound to light up a Candle in their Houſes upon the Sabbath day. If a Man hath not Bread to eat, yet he muſt beg from door to door to get a little Oyl to ſet up his light. Theſe things being noted, the Evangeliſt may not be improperly underſtood thus, The Sabbath began to ſhine with the lights ſet up; reſpect being had to theſe Sabbath Candles. But I do not acquieſce here.

k Maimon. in Schab. cap. 5.

II. The Evening of the Sabbath was called amongſt the Jews אור and אורתא l Light. אור יד' בורקין את החמץ באור הנר By the light of the fourteenth day, they make a ſearch for Leven, by the light of a Candle. By the light of the fourteenth day: that is, on the Evening, or in the night that immediatdly preceeds that day. So Rambam upon the place בריקת חמץ בליל The ſearch for Leven is in the night of the fourteenth day: although the eating of leavened bread is not forbidden before the noon of the fourteenth day. But they inſtituted this, becauſe it is moſt convenient ſearching in the night time by Candle light: and at that time alſo, all perſons are at home.

m The Woman that miſcarries on the light (i. e. the Evening) of the eighty firſt day, the Shammean School abſolves her from any offering, but the School of Hillel doth not. The Gloſs hath it, אור לפא' ליל לפא' on the light of the eighty firſt day, i. e. in the night of the eighty firſt day The queſtion diſputed there is this: The Woman that had been brought to bed of a Girl, was bound to the purification of eighty days. When thoſe days were at an end, then ſhe was bound to offer, Levit. XII. 5, 6. Now therefore ſeeing the oblation was to be brought on the eighty firſt day; the queſtion is, what if the Woman ſhould happen to miſcarry within the very night that begins the eighty firſt day, muſt ſhe the next day offer one or two Sacrifices? one for the Girl, and one for that of which ſhe hath miſcarried: The Shammean School will have but one; but the School of Hillel ſaith two.

m Cherithuth, fol. 79. 2. & Adaioth. cap. 4. hal. 10.

Peſikta n ſpeaking concerning a vowed Sacrifice, from Levit. VII. 17. hath this paſſage: יאול יאכל לאור השלישי Perhaps it may be eaten on the light (i. e. the Evening) of the third day. חל עד יום השלישיThe Text ſaith upon the third day. It is eaten until the third day. אינו נאכל לאור השלישי It is not eaten on the light (i. e. the evening, or the night) of the third day. For then the third day was actually begun. But now in this phraſe, they reſtrain the word eſpecially to the beginning of the night; though ſometimes it is taken for the whole night, as in that Tradition newly quoted, concerning the Woman that miſcarried: And ſo the Gloſs upon Peſachin. Maimonides o diſcourſing about putting away the Leven which ought to be אור ליד' on the light of the fourteenth day: i. e. on the night that begins the fourteenth day, hath this paſſage; By preſcription of the Scribes, they ſearch for, and caſt out their Leven לילה מתחלת ליל יד' in the night; namely the beginning of that night that uſhers in the fourteenth day. Much to the ſame ſenſe the Gemariſts concerning אורתא the light. p מנא האי נשף אורתא חזא How comes twilight to be called אורתא light? from thence, becauſe it is written, In the twilight, in the evening of the day, Prov. VII. 9. Rambam thinks it ſo called by a rule of contraries; for ſo he in Peſachin q: the night is called אור light, by the ſame rule that they call many other things by their contraries.

But the Gemariſts upon the place affirm, That the evening is not improperly called light, and prove it from that expreſſion Pſal. CXLVIII. 3: הללוהו כל כוכבי אור Praiſe him all ye ſtars of light. However unſuitably therefore it might ſound in the ears of Greeks or Latines, when they hear the evening, or beginning of the night, expreſſed by ἐπέφωσκε, yet with the Jews it was a way of expreſſion very uſual: and they could readily underſtand the Evangeliſt ſpeaking in their own vulgar way, when he would tell us the night of the Sabbath drew on, but expreſſeth it by σάββατον ἐπέφωσκε, the light of the Sabbath began to ſhine.

VERS.

VERS. LVI.

Καὶ τὸ μὲν σάββατον ἡσύχασαν.. And rested the Sabbath day.

IF our Saviour was taken down from the Croſs about Sun ſet as it was provided, Deut. XXI. 23. Joſ. VIII. 29. then had the Women this interim of time to buy their Spices, and diſpatch other buſineſſes, before the entry of the Sabbath day.

I. בין השמשות Between the Suns. So they called that ſpace of time that was between the ſetting of the Sun, and the appearance of any Star.

II. Might they not have that ſpace of time alſo that was between the firſt and ſecond Star? We may judge ſomething from this paſſage. r In the evening of the Sabbath, if he ſee one Star and do any work, he is acquitted: but if he ſee two Stars, let him bring his Treſpaſs-offering.

r Hieroſ. Beracoth, fol. 2. 2.

III. Might they not have ſome further allowance in the caſe of Funerals? we may judge from this paſſage: ſ עשין צורכי המת They do all works neceſſary about the dead (on the Sabbath day) they anoint him, they waſh him, provided only that they do not ſtir a limb of him, &c. It was not ſafe for theſe Women to ſhew themſelves too buiſie in preparing for his interment: eſpecially ſeeing Jeſus dyed as a Malefactor, and was odious to the people; this might exaſperate the people againſt them, and ſo much the more too, if they ſhould in the leaſt meaſure violate the Sabbath day. But further, beſides the honour they gave to the Sabbath, it was not prudence in them, to break it, for a work which they thought they might as well do when the Sabbath was done and over.

CAP. XXIV.

VERS. V.

Τί ζητεῖτε τὸν ζῶντα μετὰ τῶν νεκρῶν. Why ſeek you the living among the dead?

A Parable. A certain Prieſt (who had a fooliſh ſervant) went ſome where without the City: the Servant ſeeking about for his Maſter; goes into the place of burial, and there calls out to people ſtanding there, did you ſee my Maſter here? They ſay unto him, is not thy Maſter a Prieſt? He ſaid yes: Then ſaid they unto him, thou fool, who ever ſaw a Prieſt among Tombs? So ſay Moſes and Aaron to Pharoh, thou fool, is it the cuſtom to ſeek the dead among the living? or perhaps the living among the dead? Our God, is the living God, but the Gods of whom thou ſpeakeſt, are dead, &c.

a Shemoth rabba, fol. 124. 1.

VERS. XIII.

Καὶ ἰδοὺ δύο ἐξ αὐτῶν ἦσαν πορευόμενοι, &c. And behold two of them were going, &c.

ONE of theſe was Cleophas, verſ. 18. whom we have ſhewn to be the very ſame with Alpheus, in another place; both from the agreement of the Name (for חלפי writ in Hebrew ſerves for both names) and alſo by comparing Joh. XIX. 25. with Mark XV. 47. and Matth. XXVII. 56. that Peter was the other I do not at all queſtion, grounding my confidence upon verſ. 34. of this Chapter; and 1 Cor. XV. 5. This Cleophas, or Alpheus we ſee, is the ſpeaker here, and not Peter, being older than Peter, as being the Father of four of the Apoſtles.

VERS. XV.

Ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐγγίσας συνεπορεύετο αὐτοῖς. Jeſus himſelf drew near and went along with them.

b After that he appeared in another form unto two of them, as they walked and went into the Country. But what form that was, it would be ſomething bold to determine. But it ſeems to be different from the form of a Gardiner, and indeed not the form of any Plebeian; but rather of ſome Scholar, becauſe he inſtructs them while they were upon the road, and giveth thanks for them when they ſate at meat. So Beracoth c, If two two eat together, the one of them סופר a learned man, the other of them בור an unlearned man; he that is the learned man gives thanks. Hence that paſſage d Janneus the King calls out Simeon ben Shetahh, Vice-Preſident of the Sanhedrin, and a Doctor to ſay grace after Supper; and thus he begins: Bleſſed be God for the meat which Janneus and his gueſts have eaten; to whom the King, How long wilt thou perſiſt in thy frowardneſs? Saith the other, Why, what ſhould I have ſaid? Muſt we bleſs God for the meat that we have eaten, when as I have eaten none at all? d Bereſhith rabba, fol. 101. 3.

VERS. XXI.

Ἡμεῖς δὲ ἠλπίζομεν. We truſted, &c.

WE truſted it had been he that ſhould have redeemed Iſrael: viz. in the ſenſe that that Nation had, of a Redemption which they hoped for from the Gentile yoke. But the poverty and meanneſs of Jeſus gave them no ground to hope any ſuch thing ſhould be brought about by Arms, as that people had generally dreamed: they hoped however it might have been miraculouſly accompliſhed, as their firſt redemption from Egypt had been.

Τοῦτο τρίτην ἡμέραν ἄγει σήμερον. To day is the third day, &c.

It is worthy our obſervation what notice the Rabbins take of the third day e. Abraham lifted up his eyes the third day, Gen. XXII. 4. It is written, After two days will he receive us, in the third day he will raiſe us up, and we ſhall live in his ſight, Hoſ. VI. 2. It is written, concerning the third day of the Tribes: Joſeph ſaid unto them, the third day, Gen. XLII. 18. Concerning the third day alſo of the ſpyes: Hide your ſelves there three days, Joſ. II. 16. And it is ſaid of the third day of the promulgation of the Law. And it came to paſs on the third day, Exod. XIX. 16. It is written alſo of the third day of Jonas, Jonas was in the belly of the Fiſh three days and three nights, Jon. I. 17. It is written alſo of the third day of thoſe that came up out of the Captivity. And there abode we in Tents three days, Ezra VIII. 15. It is written alſo of the third day of the reſurrection from the dead. After two days will he receive us, and the third day he will raiſe us up. It is written alſo of the third day of Eſther. And on the third day Eſther put on her Royal apparel, Eſther V. 1. The Targumiſt adds, ביומא תליתאה דפסחא on the third day of the Paſsover. And that indeed is the day we are at preſent concerned in, namely, the third day of the Paſsover. If theſe things were taken ſo much notice of concerning the third day, at that time in the Schools and Synagogues (as I ſee no reaſon why it ſhould be deny'd) then theſe words of Cleophas may ſeem to look a little that way, as ſpeaking according to the vulgar conceptions of the Jews. For whereas it had been plain enough to have ſaid τοῦτο τρίτην ἡμέραν ἄγει σήμερον, to day is the third day; but he further adds σὺν πᾶσι τούτοις, beſide all this, and the word ταύτῃ this too; there ſeems a peculiar force in that addition, and an emphaſis in that word. As if the meaning of it were this: That ſame Jeſus was mighty in word and deed, and ſhewed himſelf ſuch an one, that we conceived him the true Meſſiah, and he that was to redeem Iſrael: And beſides all theſe things which bear witneſs for him to be ſuch, this very day bears witneſs alſo. For whereas there is ſo great an obſervation amongſt us concerning the third day; this is the third day ſince he was Crucified, and there are ſome Women amongſt us, that ſay they have been told by Angels, that he is riſen again. e Bereſhith rabba, fol. 62. 2.

VERS. XXX.

Λαβὼν τὸν ἄρτον εὐλόγησε, &c. He took bread and bleſſed it, &c.

IT is ſtrange that any ſhould expound this breaking of bread, of the Holy Euchariſt, when Chriſt had determined with himſelf to diſappear in the very diſtribution of the bread, and ſo interrupt the Supper. And where indeed doth it appear that any of them taſted a bit? For the Supper was ended before it began.

שלשה שאכלו וכו׳ If three eat together they are bound to ſay grace f. That is, as it is afterwards explained: One of them ſaith let us bleſs— but if there be three, and himſelf, then he ſaith, bleſs ye g. Although I do not believe Chriſt tyed himſelf exactly to that cuſtom of ſayiny let us bleſs; nor yet to the common form of bleſſing before meat, yet is it very probable he did uſe ſome form of bleſſing, and not the words, this is my body. f Beracoth, fol. 45. 1. g Ib. fol. 49. 1.

VERS. XXXII.

Οὐχὶ ἡ καρδία ἡμῶν καιομένη ἦν ἐν ἡμῖν; Did not our heart burn within us.

BEZA ſaith, In uno exemplari, &c. In one Copy we read it written κεκαλυμμένη ἦν; was not our heart hid? Heinſius ſaith κεκαλυμμένη, in optimis codicibus, legitur. It is written hidden in the beſt Copies. Why then ſhould it not be ſo in the beſt Tranſlations too? But this reading favours his Interpretation which amounts to this: were we not fools that we ſhould not know him while he was diſcourſing us in the way? I had rather expound it by ſome ſuch parallel places as theſe: My heart waxed hot within me, while I was muſing the fire burned, Pſal. XXXIX. 3. His word was in mine heart as a burning fire, Jerem. XX. 9. The meaning is, that their hearts were ſo affected and grew ſo warm, that they could hold no longer, but muſt break ſilence and utter themſelves. So theſe, were we not ſo mightily affected while he talked with us in the way, and while he opened to us the Scriptures, that we were juſt breaking out into the acknowledgment of him, and ready to have ſaluted him as our Lord?

That is a far fetcht conceipt in Taanith h: R Alai bar Barachiah ſaith, If two diſciples of the wiſe men journey together, and do not maintain ſome diſcourſe betwixt themſelves concerning the Law, they deſerve to be burnt: according as it is ſaid, It came to paſs, as they ſtill went on and talked, behold a Chariot of fire, and Horſes of fire, &c. 2 Kings II.

h Fol. 20. 2.

VERS. XXXIV.

Λέγοντας ὅτι ἠγέρθη ὁ κύριος ὄντως καὶ ὤφθη Σίμωνι. Saying, the Lord is riſen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon.

I. THAT theſe are the words of the Eleven appears from the caſe in which the word λέγοντας is put. Εὗρον τοὺς ἕνδεκα καὶ τοὺς σὺν αὐτοῖς λέγοντας. They found the Eleven and them that were with them, ſaying. They having returned from Emmaus found the Eleven and the reſt ſaying to them when they came into their preſence; The Lord is riſen indeed and hath appeared unto Simon. But do they ſpeak theſe things amongſt themſelves as certain and believed? or do they tell them to the two Diſciples that were come from Emmaus as things true and unqueſtionable? It is plain from St. Mark that the Eleven did not believe the Reſurrection of our Saviour, till he himſelf had ſhewed himſelf in the midſt of them i. They could not therefore ſay theſe words, The Lord is riſen and hath appeared to Simon; as if they were confidently aſſured of the truth of them. But when they ſaw Simon ſo ſuddenly and unexpectedly returning, whom they knew to have taken a journey toward Galilee, to try if he could there meet with Jeſus, they conclude hence, Oh! ſurely the Lord is riſen, and hath appeared to Simon, otherwiſe he would not have returned back ſo ſoon.

i Mark XVI. 11. 13.

Which brings to mind that of the Meſſenger of the death of Maximin k: The meſſenger that was ſent from Aquileia to Rome, changing his Horſes often, came with ſo great ſpeed, that he got to Rome in four days. It chanced to be a day wherein ſome games were celebrating, when on a ſudden as Balbinus and Gordianus were ſitting in the Theatre, the Meſſenger came in: and before it could be told, all the people cry out, Maximin is ſlain, and ſo prevented him in the news he brought, &c.

k In Jul. Capitol.

We cannot well think that any worldly affairs could have called away theſe two from the Feaſt before the appointed time, nor indeed from the company of their fellow Diſciples, but ſomething greater, and more urgent than any worldly occaſions. And now imagine with what anguiſh and perplexity poor Peter's thoughts were harraſt for having denyed his Maſter: what emotions of mind he felt, when the Women had told him, that they were commanded by Angels to let Peter particularly know that the Lord was riſen, and went before them into Galilee, and they might ſee him there, Mark XVI. 7. That it ſeems to me beyond all queſtion that one of theſe Diſciples going toward Emmaus was Peter, who aſſoon as he had heard this from the Women, taking Alpheus as a companion of his journey, makes toward Galilee, not without communicating before hand to his fellow diſciples the deſign of that progreſs: They therefore finding him ſo ſuddenly and unexpectedly returned, make the conjecture amongſt themſelves, that certainly the Lord had appeared to him, elſe he would never have come back ſo ſoon. Compare but that of the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. XV. 5. ὤφθη Κηφᾷ, εἶτα τοῖς δώδεκα· He was ſeen of Cephas, then of the twelve: and nothing can ſeem expreſt more clearly in the confirmation of this matter.

Object

Object. But it may be objected, that those two returning from Emmaus found the Eleven Apostles gathered and sitting together. Now if Simon was not amongst them, they were not Eleven. Therefore he was not one of those two.

Answ. 1. If it should be granted that Peter was there and sate amongst them, yet were they not exactly Eleven then, for Thomas was absent, Joh. XX. 24. 2. When the Eleven are mentioned we must not suppose it exactly meant of the number of Apostles then present, but the present number of the Apostles.

VERS. XXXVII.

Ἔδοξαν πνεῦμα θεωρεῖν. They supposed they had seen a Spirit.

WHereas the Jews distinguished between Angels, and Spirits, and Dæmons; Spirits are defined by R. Hoshaiah l to be such to whom souls are created, but they have not a body made for those souls. But it is a question whether they included all spirits or souls under this notion, when it is more than probable that apparitions of Ghosts, or deceased persons who once had a body, were reckoned by them under the same title. Nor do I apprehend, the Disciples had any other imagination at this time, than that this was not Christ indeed in his own person, as newly raised from the dead; but a Spectrum only in his shape, himself being still dead. And when the Pharisees speak concerning Paul, Acts XXIII. 9. That if an Angel, or a Spirit hath spoken to him, I would easily believe, they might mean it of the Apparition of some Prophet, or some other departed just person, than of any soul, that had never yet any body created to it. I the rather incline thus to think, because it is so evident that it were needless to prove how deeply impressed that Nation was with an opinion of the Apparitions of departed Ghosts.

VERS. XLIV.

Ἐν τῷ νόμῳ Μωσέως, καὶ Προφήταις, καὶ Ψαλμοῖς. In the Law of Moses, and in the Prophets, and in the Psalms.

IT is a known division of the Old Testament into אורייתא נביאים כתובים The Law, the Prophets, and the Holy Writings; by abbrevation אנ"ך.

I. The Books of the Law, and their order need not be insisted upon, called commonly by us, the Pentateuch: but by some of the Rabbins the Heptateuch: and by some Christians the Octateuch: m R. Samuel bar Nachman saith, R. Jonathan saith, Wisdom hath hewn out her seven Pillars [Prov. IX. 1.] איכו שבעה ספרי תורה These are the seven Books of the Law. The Book of Numbers compleats the seven Books of the Law. But are there not but five Books only? Ben Kaphra saith the Book of Numbers is made תלתא ספרים three Books. From the beginning of the Book to ויהי בנסוע And it came to pass when the Ark set forward [Chap. X. 35.] is a Book by it self. That verse and the following is a Book by it self: And from thence to the end of the Book, is a Book by it self.

m Schabb. fol. 116. 1.

The reason why they accounted this period [Chap. X. 35. 36.] to be one Book by it self, was, partly because it does not seem put there in its proper place: partly because in the beginning of it, it hath the letter Nun inverted thus [נ] in the word בנסוע and so after the end of it in the word במתאננים which in both places is set for a boundary and limit, to distinguish that period from the rest of the Book. Whatever therefore goes before, from the beginning of the Book to that period, is reckoned by them for one Book; and whatever follows it, for another Book; and the period it self for a third.

Eulogius speaking concerning Dosthes or Dositheus a famous seducer of the Samaritans, hath this passage, n μυθοις ἢ καὶ ποικίλαις ἄλλαις νοθείαις τὴν Μωσαϊκὴν ἐκπάτδυχον κατανενοθεύσας, &c. He adulterated the Octateuch of Moses with spurious writings, and all kind of corrupt falsifyings. There is mention also of a Book with this title, Χριστιανῶν Βίβλος Ἑρμηνεία εἰς τὴν Ὀκτάτευχον· o The Christians Book, An Exposition upon the Octateuch. Whether this was the Octateuch of Moses, it is neither certain, nor much worth our enquiry, for Photius judgeth him a corrupt Author: besides that it may be shewn by and by that there was a twofold Octateuch besides that of Moses. Now if any man should ask how it come to pass that Eulogius (and that probably from the common notion of the thing) should divide the Books of Moses into an Octateuch; I had rather any one else rather than my self should resolve him in it. But if any consent that he owned the Heptateuch we have already mentioned, we should be ready to reckon the last Chapter of Deuteronomy for the eighth part.

n Apud Phot. Cod. CCXXX.

o Cod. XXXVI.

Aben Ezra will smile here, who in that his obscure and disguised denial of the Books of the Pentateuch, as if they were not writ by the pen of Moses, he instances in that Chapter in the first place, as far as I can guess, as a testimony against it. You have his words in his Commentary upon the Book of Deuteronomy, a little from the beginning ואם תבין סוד השנים עשר וכו׳ But if you underſtand the myſtery of the twelve, &c. i. e. of the twelve Verſes of the laſt Chapter of the Book (for ſo his own Country-men expound him) thou wilt know the truth, i. e. that Moſes did not write the whole Pentateuch; an argument neither worth anſwering, nor becoming ſo great a Philoſopher. For as it is a ridiculous thing to ſuppoſe that Chapter that treats of the death and burial of Moſes ſhould be written by himſelf, ſo would it not be much leſs ridiculous to affix that Chapter to any other volume than the Pentateuch. But theſe things are not the proper ſubject for our preſent handling.

II. There alſo was an Octatuech of the Prophets too. q All the Books of the Prophets are eight, Joſuah, Judges, Samuel, Kings, Jeremy, Ezekiel, Iſaiah, and the twelve. For the Hiſtorical Books alſo, were read in their Synagogues under the notion of the Prophets, as well as the Prophets themſelves whoſe names are ſet down. You will ſee the title prefixt to them in the Hebrew Bibles, נביאים ראשונים the former Prophets, as well as to the others נביאים אחרונים the latter Prophets. The Doctors give us the reaſon why they diſpoſe the Prophets in that order that Jeremiah is named firſt, Ezekiel next, and Iſaiah laſt, which I have quoted in Notes upon Matth. XXVII. 9. and let not the Reader think it irkſome to repeat it here.

q Bava bathra, fol. 14. 2.

r Whereas the Book of Kings ends in deſtruction, and the whole Book of Jeremy treats about deſtruction; whereas Ezekiel begins with deſtruction, and ends in conſolation: and whereas Iſaiah is all in conſolation, they joyned deſtruction with deſtruction, and conſolation with conſolation.

r Bava bathra, ubi ſupr.

III. The third diviſion of the Bible is intitled כתובים the Holy Writings. And here alſo is found an Octateuch by ſome body, (as it ſeems) though I know not where to find it.

Herbanus the Jew s ἦν ἄνδρα πεπαιδευμένον τὰ πάτρια νόμιμα, καὶ τὰς τῶν Προφητῶν θείας βίβλους, τέλος δὲ καὶ τὸ ὀκτάτευχον καὶ τὰ λοιπά, was a man excellently well inſtructed in the Law, and holy Books of the Prophets, and the Octateuch, and all the other Writings. What this Octateuch ſhould be, diſtinct from the Law and the Prophets, and indeed what the τὰ λοιπά, all the other writings beſides ſhould be, is not eaſily gueſſed. This Octateuch perhaps may ſeem to have ſome reference to the כתובים the Hagiographa, or Holy Writings (for it is probable enough, that ſpeaking of a Jew well skilled in the Holy Scriptures he might deſign the partition of the Bible, according to the manner of the Jews dividing it) but who then can pick out books that ſhould make it up? Let the Reader pick out the eight, and then I would ſay that the other four are the τὰ λοιπά, all the other Writings. But we will not much diſquiet our ſelves about this matter.

s Orgent. Dial. at the beginning.

It may be asked why theſe Books ſhould be called כתובים the Scriptures, when the whole Bible goes under the name of כתבי קדש the holy Scriptures. Nor can any thingbe more readily anſwered to this than, that by this title they would keep up their dignity, and juſt eſteem for them. They did not indeed read them in their Synagogues, but that they might acknowledge them of moſt Holy and Divine Authority שונין בהן ודורשין בהן out of them they confirm their Traditions, and they expound them myſtically: t Yea and give them the ſame title with the reſt of the Holy Scriptures.

t Schabb. fol. 116. 2.

u This is the order כתובים of the Hagiographa, Ruth, the Book of Pſalms, Job, the Proverbs, Eccleſiaſtes, the Canticles, the Lamentations, Daniel, the Book of Eſther, Ezra, and the Chronicles. It is here diſputed, that if Job was in the days of Moſes, why then is not his Book put in the firſt place? the anſwer is, they do not begin with vengeance, or affliction, and ſuch is that Book of Job. They reply, רות נמי פורענות Ruth alſo begins with affliction, viz. with the ſtory of a Famine, and the death of Elimelech's Sons. But that was (ſay they) פורענות ראירת ליה אהדרת an affliction that had a joyful ending. So they might have ſaid of the Book and affliction of Job too. We ſee it is diſputed there why the Book of Ruth ſhould be placed the firſt in that rank, and not the Book of Job. But we might enquire whether the Book of Pſalms ought not have been placed the firſt, rather than the Book of Ruth.

u Bathra. ubi ſupr.

IV. In this paſſage at preſent before us who would think otherwiſe, but that our Saviour alludes to the common and moſt known partition of the Bible? and although he name the Pſalms only, yet that under the title he includes that whole volume. For we muſt of neceſſity ſay, that either he excluded all the Books of that third diviſion, excepting the Book of Pſalms, which is not probable; or that he included them under the title of the Prophets, which was not cuſtomary; or elſe that under the title of the Pſalms he comprehended all the reſt. That he did not exclude them, reaſon will tell us; for in ſeveral Books of that diviſion is he himſelf ſpoken of as well as in the Pſalms; and that he did not include them in the title of the Prophets, reaſon alſo will dictate: becauſe we would not ſuppoſe him ſpeaking differently from the common and received opinion of that Nation. There is very little queſtion therefore, but the Apoſtles might underſtand him ſpeaking with the vulgar: and by the Pſalms to have meant all the Books of that Volume, thoſe eſpecially, wherein any thing was written concerning himſelf. For, let it be granted that Ruth as to the time of the Hiſtory, and the time of its writing might challenge to its ſelf the firſt place in order (and it is that kind of priority the Gemariſts are arguing) yet certainly amongſt all thoſe Books that mention any thing of Chriſt, the Book of Pſalms deſervedly obtains the firſt place; ſo far that in the naming of this, the reſt may be underſtood. So St. Matthew Chap. XXVII. 9. under the name of Jeremiah, comprehends that whole Volume of the Prophets, becauſe he was placed the firſt in that rank which obſervation we have made in Notes upon that place.

VERS. XLV.

Τότε διήνοιξεν αὐτῶν τὸν νοῦν. Then opened he their underſtanding.

WHere it is ſaid that by the impoſition of the hands of the Apoſtles the gift of Tongues and of Propheſie was conferred (they ſpake with tongues, and they propheſied, Acts XIX. 6.) by Propheſie, nothing may be better underſtood than this very thing, that the minds of ſuch were opened, that they might underſtand the Scriptures: and perhaps their ſpeaking with tongues, might look this way, in the firſt notion of it, viz. that they could underſtand the original wherein the Scriptures were writ.

VERS. L.

Ἕως εἰς Βηθανίαν. As far as Bethany.

HOW many difficulties ariſe here?

I. This very Evangeliſt (Acts I. 12.) tells us that when the Diſciples came back from the place where our Lord aſcended, they returned from Mount Olivet, diſtant from Jeruſalem a Sabbath days journey. But now the Town of Bethany was about fifteen furlongs from Jeruſalem, Joh. XI. 18. and that is double a Sabbath days journey.

II. Joſephus tells us that the Mount of Olives was but five furlongs from the City, and a Sabbath days journey, was ſeven furlongs and an half. q About that time there came to Jeruſalem a certain Egyptian, pretending himſelf a Prophet, and perſwading the people that they would go out with him to the Mount of Olives, Ὃ ἦν τῆς πόλεως ἄντικρυς κείμενον ἀπέχει σταδίους πέντε; which being ſituated on the front of the City, is diſtant five furlongs. Theſe things are all true: 1. That the Mount of Olives lay but five furlongs diſtance from Jeruſalem. 2. That the Town of Bethany was fifteen furlongs. 3. That the Diſciples were brought by Chriſt as far as Bethany. 4. That when they returned from the Mount of Olives, that they travelled more than five furlongs. And, 5. Returning from Bethany they travelled but a Sabbath days journey. All which may be eaſily reconciled, if we would obſerve; That the firſt ſpace from the City toward this Mount was called Bethphage, which I have cleared elſewhere from Talmudick Authors, the Evangeliſts themſelves alſo confirming it. That part of that Mount was known by that name to the length of about a Sabbath days journey, till it come to that part which was called Bethany. For there was Bethany, a tract of the Mount, and the Town of Bethany. The Town was diſtant from the City about fifteen furlongs, i. e. two miles, or a double Sabbath days journey: but the firſt border of this tract (which alſo bore the name of Bethany) was diſtant but one mile, or a ſingle Sabbath days journey only.

q Antiq. lib. 20. cap. 6.

Our Saviour led out his Diſciples, when he was about to aſcend, to the very firſt brink of that Region or tract of Mount Olivet which was called Bethany, and was diſtant from the City, a Sabbath days journey. And ſo far from the City it ſelf did that tract extend it ſelf which was called Bethphage: and when he was come to that place where the bounds of Bethphage and Bethany met and toucht one another, he there aſcended: in that very place where he got upon the Aſs, when he rode into Jeruſalem, Mark XI. 1. whereas therefore Joſephus ſaith, that Mount Olivet was but five furlongs from the City, he means the firſt brink and border of it. But our Evangeliſt muſt be underſtood of the place where Chriſt Aſcended, where the name of Olivet began, as it was diſtinguiſhed from Bethphage.

And ſince we have ſo frequent mention of a Sabbath days Journey, and it is not very forreign from our preſent purpoſe to obſerve ſomething concerning it, let me take notice of theſe few things:

I. The ſpace תחום שבת of a Sabbath days bounds was two thouſand cubits. r Naomi ſaid to Ruth, we are commanded to obſerve the Sabbaths, and the Feaſts: But we are not to go beyond אלפין אמין two thouſand cubits. s It is ordained by the Scribes that no Man go out of the City beyond two thouſand cubits. Inſtances of this kind are endleſs. But it

r Targ. in Ruth cap. 1. 16.

s Maimon. Sabb. cap. 27.

is disputed upon what foundation this constitution of theirs is built. t Whence comes it to be thus ordained concerning the אלפים אמה two thousand cubits? it is founded upon this, Let no man go out of his place on the seventh day, Exod. XVI. 29. u Where are these two thousand cubits mentioned? they have their Tradition from hence, שבו איש תחתיו abide ye every man in his place, Exod. XVI. 29. These are four cubits. Let no man go out of his place. These are two thousand cubits. It is true indeed we cannot gain so much as one cubit out of any of these Scriptures, much less two thousand; however, we may learn from hence the pleasant art they have of working, any thing out of any thing.

u Bab. Erubbin, fol. 51. 1.

Asai ben Akibah saith, they are fetcht from hence in that it is said מקום מקום place, place. Here place is said [Let no man go out of his place] and it is said elsewhere, I will appoint thee a place, Exod. XXI. 13. As the place that is said elsewhere, is two thousand cubits, so the place, that is spoken of here, is two thousand cubits. But how do they prove that the place mentioned elsewhere, is two thousand cubits? x I will appoint thee a place whither he shall flee that kills a man unawares: This teacheth us that the Israelites in the Wilderness (i. e. those that had slain any one) betook themselves to a place of refuge. And whether did they flee? To the Camp of the Levites.

x Maccoth. fol. 12. 2. & Tevachin. fol. 117. 1.

Now therefore, when the Israelites Camp in the Wilderness were distant from the Tabernacle and from the Levite's Camp that was pitcht about the Tabernacle, two thousand cubits, which thing they gather from Jos. III. 4. and whereas it was lawful for them at that distance to approach the Tabernacle on the Sabbath day, hence they argue for the two thousand cubits, as the Sabbath days journey which we are now enquiring into. But by the way let us take notice of the four cubits which they gathered from those words, abide ye every man in his place. Which must be thus understood: If any person through ignorance, or by any accident, had gone beyond the limits of the Sabbath, and afterward came to know his transgression, he was confined within four cubits, so that he must not stir beyond them, till the Sabbath was done and over.

They further instance in another foundation for the two thousand cubits: y ye shall measure from without the City on the East side two thousand cubits, Numb. XXXV. 5. But another Scripture saith, from the wall of the City and outward, ye shall measure a thousand cubits [vers. 4.] the thousand cubits are the suburbs of the City, and the two thousand cubits are the Sabbatical limits. Maimonides z very largely discourseth in what manner and by what lines they measured these two thousand cubits from each City: but it makes very little to our purpose. Only let me add this one thing, that if any one was over-taken in his journeying, in the fields, or wilderness, by the night when the Sabbath was coming in, and did not exactly know the space of two thousand cubits, then he might walk אלפיים פסיעות בינוניות two thousand ordinary paces: and these were accounted the תחום שבת the Sabbatical bounds a.

z Schabb. 28. and Erubbin. cap. 8.

a Erubb. fol. 42. 1.

So far from the City was that place of Mount Olivet where Christ Ascended, viz. that part of the Mount where Bethphage ended, and Bethany began. Perhaps the very same place mentioned 2 Sam. XV. 32. or certainly not far off where David in his flight taking leave of the Ark and Sanctuary, looked back, and worshipped God. Where if any one would be at the pains to enquire why the Greek Interpreters retain the word Ῥως, Ros, both here and in Chap. XVI. I. ἦν Δαβὶδ ἐρχόμενος ἕως τοῦ Ῥως· And David came unto Ros. And Δαβὶδ παρῆλθε βραχύ τι ἀπὸ τοῦ Ῥως· And David passed on a little way from Ros: He will find a knot not easie to be untied. The Talmudists would have it a place of Idolatry, but by a reason very far fetcht indeed b. The Jewish Commentators with a some more probability conceive, that it was a place from whence David when he went toward Jerusalem, looking toward the place where the Tabernacle was seated, was wont to worship God.

RIGHT HONOURABLE

Sir Orlando Bridgeman

KNIGHT and BARONET;

LORD KEEPER

OF THE

OF

AND

One of His MAJESTIES most Honourable
PRIVY COUNCIL.

MY LORD,

LET me beſpeak you in the words of Oroſius to St. Auguſtine. I have obeyed your commands (my moſt Honoured Lord) I wiſh I could ſay to as much purpoſe, as I have done it willingly. But I ſatisfie my ſelf with the bare teſtimony of my Obedience, wherein my Will and endeavour is at leaſt ſeen.

Such is your Lordſhips value for the Holy Scriptures, ſuch hath been your care to promote and encourage the explication of them for the benefit of others, that you have not diſdained my poor endeavours of this kind; animating me to a progreſs in what I have begun, not only with bare Entreaties, but with the additions of your Lordſhips Counſel, Aſſiſtance, Patronage, and Bounty.

I ſhould be the moſt ſtupid amongſt Men, if ſuch kind, and benigne encouragements ſhould not enflame me to attempt ſomething, wherein at leaſt I may give your Lordſhip ſome ſpecimen, not only of my Obedience, but Gratitude.

I confeſs my ſelf, by I know not what kind of Genius, warmly carried out toward theſe kind of ſtudies, than which, nothing can, to me, be more delightſome and ſatisfactory. But when it pleaſes your Lordſhip both to add ſuch Sails to my little Veſſel, and alſo fill thoſe Sails with ſuch gales of your Favour, I ſtill the more pleaſingly engage my ſelf, having not only the conſcience of my own duty, but an ambition of ſerving your Lordſhip, and approving my ſelf grateful to quicken me to it.

Under your Lordſhips wings do theſe worthleſs labours of mine adventure abroad, alas! how much below your Patronage, ſhort of your worth, and indeed of my own undertaking; the thin and ſlender product of a plentiful watering, aiming at great things, but trifling in the performance.

I took, I confeſs, an high flight, when I attempted the Explication of this Evangeliſt, but how weak and languid I have proved (beſides that the thing it ſelf ſpeaks ſufficiently) there ſhall be none readier to accuſe than I to condemn my ſelf. Let then the Reader ſpare his cenſure, for I will load my ſelf with a ſhameful acknowledgment that I have adventured in things too high for me: And when he ſees this, perhaps he will forgive me, undertaking ſo difficult a task, wherein my deſign hath been only to be uſeful: Nay, perhaps pity me, if I cannot indeed attain at what I would. But if he will neither forgive nor pity, but ſtill carp and cenſure me, let him make the experiment upon this Evangeliſt himſelf, and ſee if he alſo may not ſtep as ſhort as I have done.

My Lord, I have this comfort however, that I have not been idle; I had rather puzzle my ſelf with hard and knotty Enquiries, than wear out my time in either doing nothing, or trivially. Nor can I reproach my ſelf that I have made this reſearch into this Sacred Volume through unwarrantable curioſity, but out of humble ſincere zeal of mind, both to learn what I can my ſelf, and teach others; offering, I hope, nothing that is noxious, and ſometimes that that may profit.

But (my Lord) that which is my principal encouragement, is the Patronage and candor of ſo great a man, who, I cannot but hope, will accept this ſmall trifling gift, with a gentle and eaſie aſpect, from the frequent experiment I have already made. But I muſt recal that raſh word gift, when all that I can offer to your Lordſhip is abſolute debt: And alas! How poor a pay-maſter does your Lordſhip find of me! A few ſorry ſcriblings, for great and ſubſtantial kindneſſes not to be reckoned up. Yet ſuch they are that bring along with them all the returns of thanks that I am able to make. And ſince I have nothing elſe, may the great God of Heaven, of his infinite goodneſs and bounty reward you with all manner of felicity, temporal and Eternal: Which he from his heart wiſhes and makes it his daily prayer, who is,

MY LORD,

Your Lordſhips moſt humble,

moſt obliged, and faithful Servant,

JOHN LIGHTFOOT.

CHOROGRAPHICAL ENQUIRY

Into some places of the Land of ISRAEL,

PARTICULARLY

Those which we find mentioned in the Evangelist St. JOHN.

CHAP. I.

BETHABARA. Joh. I.

I. Different Readings, Βηθανία and Βηθαμαρά. II. The noted passages over Jordan. III. The Scythopolitan Country. IV. Μέγα πεδίον· The great Plain: The Scythopolitan passage there. V. Beth-barah, Judg. VII. 24.

SECT. I.

Different Readings, Βηθανία and Βηθαμαρά.

IT is observed by all that treat upon this Evangelist, that the reading doth vary in some Copies, and this instance is alledged for one.

a Ταῦτα ἐν Βηθαβαρᾷ ἐγένετο· ἐν ἄλλοις δὲ ἀνιγράφοις, ἐν Βηθανίᾳ. These things were done in Bethabarah, but in other Copies it is, in Bethany. a Epiphan. Haeres. LI.

But Drusius, Vulgati codices, &c. The vulgar hath it, in Bethabarah. which Epiphanius in the place above mentioned calls Bethamarah. Ταῦτα ἐν Βηθαμαρᾷ ἐγένετο, ἐν ἄλλοις δὲ ἀντιγράφοις, ἐν Βηθανίᾳ. Of this reading Petavius is silent.

It might easily happen that Bethabarah should change into Bethamarah, partly considering the affinity of the characters, which (saith he) tanta est in antiqua Scripturâ, ut vix discerni possit, μῦ à Βῆτα, & contra, is so great in antient writings, that μῦ and Βῆτα can hardly be distinguished; partly that the alternate use of Mem and Beth is so very common in those Countries.

Nor indeed is it much wonder that Bethamara ſhould change into Bethania, ſince Bethamara being writ בית עמרא ſignifies a place of Wool; and Bethania being writ בית עאניא ſignifies a place of Sheep.

But it ſeems very ſtrange how Bethabarah ſhould ever change into Bethany unleſs upon ſome ſuch occaſion as theſe:

Either that Bethabarah might be taken for the ſame with בית הברה i. e. the Houſe of Expoſition or the School (in which ſenſe we meet with ברייא and ברייתא) whence for Explication it is annexed by ſome hand or other in the Margine * בית חניא the Houſe of Tradition, or Doctrine: as if the Evangeliſt were to be underſtood in this manner, theſe things were done or diſputed in a certain School beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing. And ſo that word * בית חניא being ſo very known and obnoxious, might ſteal from the Margin into the Text and common uſe.

* בי חניא

Or perhaps, ſecondly; upon the ſuſpition of a Tautology if Bethabarah and Πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου ſhould be found together בית עברה עבר הירדן: becauſe ביה עברה may be looked upon as the ſame thing with a place beyond Jordan: therefore they might ſubſtitute the word Bethany as ſignifying Batanæa or Baſhan to ſome ſuch ſenſe as this. Theſe things were done in Batanea beyond Jordan, &c. But it is our province at preſent to enquire rather into the ſituation of Bethabarah, than into the original and derivation of Bethany.

SECT. II.

The noted paſſages over Jordan.

AMong the various ways of writing Βηθαβαρά in Hebrew, theſe two eſpecially deſerve our conſideration at preſent. Beth-barah, which we meet with in Judg. VII. and Bethabarah, or a place of paſſage, where they paſſed over Jordan. They muſt both come under our enquiry whiles we are ſeeking the place in hand: And firſt of the latter.

Doubtleſs there was no part of Jordan but might be paſſed by Boat from one ſide to the other, as mens different occaſions might call them; but we are now conſidering the publick and common paſſages that led over that River from one Country into another.

I. There is a Bridge over Jordan, betwixt the Lake of Samochon and Genneſaret in the way that leadeth to Damaſcus, which hath the name of Jacobs Bridge, of which our Country-man Biddulph (who hath himſelf travelled over it) ſpeaks to this purpoſe:

At the foot of this rocky Mountain runs a pleaſant River called Jordan, which divideth Syria from Galilee. Over this River is built a goodly Bridge, which bears the name of Jacob's Bridge upon this twofold account. 1. Becauſe in this place Jacob met with his Brother Eſau. 2. Becauſe here he wraſtled with the Angel.

As to matter of fact, that there is and was ſuch a Bridge I do not much queſtion; but for the reaſons why it is ſo called, as it is not much to our purpoſe to examine, ſo they ſeem to have little elſe but conjecture in them.

II. Jordan alſo had a Bridge over it at Chammoth near Tiberias at the very efflux of the River out of the Sea of Genneſaret; as we have elſewhere ſhewn from the Talmudick Authors, againſt the miſtake of the Tables which place Tiberias at a great diſtance thence. b Tam Dominus Rex quam Principes omnes, Tyberiadem uſque perveniunt, ubi circa pontem, unde ex mari, Jordanis fluenta ſe dividunt, caſtrametatur. i. e. As well the Lord the King, as all the Princes came even unto Tiberias, and pitched their tents near the Bridge where the ſtreams of Jordan from the Sea, do divide themſelves.

b Gulielm. Tyr. de bell. Sacr. lib. XVII. cap. 8.

c Juxta Tiberiadem ſecus pontem unde de lacu Genezar, Jordanis fluenta ſe dividunt, cum exercitu ſua caſtra locavit. i. e. With his Army he pitcht his Tents near Tiberias by the Bridge, from whence the ſtreams of Jordan from the lake of Genneſaret, do divide themſelves. Read this and view the ſituation of Tiberias in the Tables, and correct the miſtake.

c And lib. XVIII. cap. 21.

III. That was a moſt known and frequent paſſage from Jericho which we ſo often read of in the Holy Scriptures; which yet ſeems rather to have been by Boat than Bridge. ſee the 2 Sam. XIX. 18. and 2 Kings II. 8.

SECT. III.

The Scythopolitan Country

THere was a fourth, and that the greateſt paſſage betwixt Chammoth and Jericho, but at a great diſtance from either; for the finding out of which, we are to conſider what is intimated, 1 Kings IV. 12. And all Bethſhean, which is by Zartanah beneath Jeſreel. And again 1 Kings VII. 46. In the plain of Jordan did the King caſt them, in the Clay ground, between Succoth and Zarthan. We will begin with Bethſhean.

1. Beth-

I. Bethſhean, or Scythopolis was in the lot of Manaſſeh, Judg. I. 27. Greek, Καὶ οὐκ ἐξῆρε Μανασσῆ τὴν Βαιθσὰν, ἢ τὰς Σκυθῶν πόλις· Neither did Manaſſes drive out the inhabitants of Bethſhean, which is Scythopolis. So that it was within the limits of Samaria, though indeed one of the Decapolitan Cities, and within the juriſdiction of the Gentiles, as we have ſhewed elſewhere.

II. It was the utmoſt bound of Samaria toward Galilee. d The bounds of Galilee, on the South is Σαμαρείς τε καὶ Σκυθόπολις μέχρι τοῦ Ἰορδάνου ῥείθρου· Samaria and Scythopolis as far as the River Jordan. d Joſeph. de bell. lib. 3. cap. 4.

III. The City was half a Leagues diſtance from Jordan, ſaith Borchard, and yet extends its juriſdiction beyond Jordan. That of Æthicus in his Coſmograhpy is well known. Fluvius Jordanis, ſaith he, &c. The River Jordan hath its head in Mount Libanus, runs about to the Lake of Tiberias, from whence going out, hath its current through the midſt of Scythopolis, and iſſues in the dead Sea. Jordan divided Scythopolis in the midſt; not the City (for that was at ſome conſiderable diſtance from the River) but the Country it ſelf; ſo that part of the Country was on this, and part of the other ſide Jordan.

It was a noble City of the Syrogreecians, and had conſiderable juriſdiction, not only within the confines of Manaſſes, but extended it ſelf beyond, even to Perea.

SECT. IV.

Μέγα πεδίον· The great Plain: the Scythopolitan paſſage there.

OF this great Plain which took in the whole bredth of the Country of Manaſſeh from Jordan toward the Weſt, a very long way, Joſephus frequently ſpeaks: deſcribing the ſituation and portion of Ephraim and Manaſſeh, he thus expreſſeth himſelf.

e Ἡ δὲ Ἐφραίμου τὴν φυλὴν ἄχρι Γαδάρων ἀπὸ Ἰορδάνου ποταμοῦ μηκυνομένην ἔλαχεν, Εὐρείαν δὲ ἀπὸ Βαιθήλων εἰς τὸ μέγα πεδίον· The Tribe of Ephraim extended it ſelf, in length, from the River Jordan, to Gadarah (Gazarah or Gezer, Joſh. XVI. 3. and Chap. XXI. 21.) in bredth, from Bethel, and ends at the great Plain. e Antiqu. lib. V. cap. 1.

Τῆς Μανασσήτιδος δὲ αἱ ἡμίσειαι, &c. The half Tribe of Manaſſeh extends it ſelf in longitude from Jordan to the City Dor. Πλάτος δὲ ἀπὸ Βαθσάνων ἣ νῦν Σκυθόπολις καλεῖται· But in latitude (from Ephraim) it reacheth to Bethſhean, which is now called Scythopolis. So that that Μέγα πεδίον, or great plain, to thoſe that were journeying from Galilee, began from Bethſhean, and extended it ſelf in latitude to the confines of Ephraim. Hence that which we meet with in the ſame Joſephus, f Ἦκον εἰς τὸ μέγα πεδίον ὃ κεῖται κατὰ τὸ πρόσωπον πόλις Βαθσάνη. They that paſſed over Jordan came into the great Plain before which the City Bethſan lies, or as it is in 1 Maccab. V. 52. They went over Jordan into the great plain before Bethſhean. f Antiqh. lib. XII. cap. 12.

In the Book of Judith Chap. I. verſ. 8. it is called τὸ μέγα πεδίον Ἐσδρηλώμ· The great plain of Eſdrelom: That is in truth, the great Valley of Jezrael. So Jezrael in the place above quoted, 1 Kings IV. 12. by the Greek Interpreters is rendered Ἐσδραέλ. Inſomuch that when it is ſaid of Judah and his Army (for him it is whom this paſſage concerns) that in his return from the Land of Gilead, he paſſed over Jordan into this great plain, and that (as it ſhould ſeem) not very far from Bethſhean, it is evident that the great and common paſſage over Jordan was hereabout, by which not only the Scythopolitans went over from their Country on this ſide Jordan, to that beyond, but thoſe alſo of Samaria, and thoſe of the lower Galilee paſſed over here to Perea.

Here would I ſeek for Jacob's Bridge where he paſſed over Jordan with his Staff, when he went into Meſopotamia, and returned back with a Family; and not where it is commonly now ſhewn. At leaſt, the mention of Succoth, Gen. XXXIII. 17. which had its ſituation on the bank of Jordan, exactly oppoſite to Zartanah a Town near Bethſhean, puts it out of all queſtion that Jacob returned that way. And indeed whether Scythopolis might not derive ſomething of its appellation from the word Succoth, I cannot well tell: methinks the name of Scythians hath ſome ſmack of ſuch a kind of original, Σκύθαι qu. Σύκκοθαι· for they always dwelt, and removed from one place to another in Tents.

SECT. V.

Beth-barah, Judg. VII. 24.

NEither was this Beth-barah at any very great diſtance from this paſſage. For ſo we have it Judg. VII. 24. Gideon ſent meſſengers throughout all Mount Ephraim, ſaying, come down againſt the Midianites, and take before them the waters unto Beth barah and Jordan. And this they did.

It

It is hard to say whether Kimchi with more reason said, That these waters were not the waters of Jordan: or Jarchi, more absurdly, that they divided Syria from Canaan. There were, no doubt, some waters in the Valley of Jezreel. (For there the battel was, at least if that may be called a battel where there was not one Sword unsheathed by the Conquerour. See Judg. VI. 33.) When the Midianites fled, Gideon summons the Ephraimites by messengers, that they would take those waters before-hand, which the routed enemy in their flight must necessarily pass through, before they could arrive at the Bridge or Ferry over Jordan (spoken of even now) that lay in their way home. When both Armies had pitched the Field, the Midianites lay on the North toward Gilee, and the Gideonites on the South near Mount Ephraim, Chap. VII. 1. There was a River in the Vale, (at which waters probably Gideon distinguished betwixt his Followers that lapped like a Dog, and those that did not.) This River at length discharged it self into Jordan above the Bridge or passage that led into Perea. When therefore the Midianites lay on the Northern bank of this River, and so were not capable of attaining the passage over Jordan till they had made through these waters first; it was the Ephraimites care and business to maintain the opposite bank, and that indeed all the whole space from the place where the fight began to Beth-barah and Jordan that the Enemy might be blocked up from all possibility of escape or retiring.

Whether therefore this passage of which we have spoken, was called Beth-barah from that place so neas Jordan, or בית עברה Beth-abarah, from the Etymology before mentioned, it is no absurdity for the further bank of Jordan which lay contiguous to the Bridge or passage over it, to be called Bethrbarah beyond Jordan, either upon the one or the other account. For (however the Learned Beza comes to question it) the Lexicons will tell you that Πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου signifieth beyond Jordan: especially that common threefold division יהודה וגליל ועבר הירדן Judea, Galilee, and beyond Jordan. Ἀπ' Ἀνατολῶν πρὸ Ἰορδάνου· On the East of the River Jordan: as Ptolomy expresseth it. And Beza himself confesseth that trans Jordanem, beyond Jordan, is the proper signification of the Greek word πέραν, beyond, Matth. IV. 15.

Let us therefore place the Bethabarah we are seeking for, where John was baptizing, on the further side of Jordan, in the Scythopolitan Country, where the Jews dwelt amongst the Syro-Grecians, as in all the Decapolitan Regions, where Christ might something more safely converse, from the vexations of the Scribes and Pharisees, Joh. X. 40. being as it were out of their reach and jurisdiction there. And so we find John Baptizing first at the passage at Jericho, because through the greatness of the Road there was always a considerable concourse of people; and next, at the passage at Scythopolis for the same reason.

Further, had I either leisure or will to play any longer about the word Βηθαβαρά, we might suppose it written בירת עאניא Bethaania which in the Syriack Idiom (amongst whom it is no unusual thing to change ש into ע) agrees with בירת שאניא Bethshania.

NAZARETH, Joh. I. 45.

I. A Legend not much unlike that of the Chappel of Loretto. II. The situation of Nazareth. III. בן נצר Ben Nezer. IV. Certain horrid practises in כפר נחום Caphornachum. V. Some short remarks upon Cana, Joh. II. 2.

SECT. I.

A Legend not much unlike that of the Chappel of Loretto.

FOrasmuch as our Evangelist makes only a transient mention of Nazareth in this place, not relating any thing that our Saviour did there, we shall take as transient notice of it at this time, by the by only enquiring into its situation, as what we may have occasion to discourse more largely upon in another place.

But

But what indeed need we be very ſolicitous about the ſituation of this Town, when the place we would eſpecially look for there, that is, the Houſe of the Bleſſed Virgin, hath taken its leave of Nazareth, and by the conveyance of Angels hath ſeated its ſelf in Loretto in Italy. Of which thing amongſt many others Cardinal Baronius g gives us this grave relation. g Ad An. Dom. IX.

Porro domus illa, &c. "That Houſe wherein the moſt Holy Virgin received the "Heavenly meſſage about the Word being made Fleſh, doth not only by a wondrous "miracle, ſtand to this day intire, but by the miniſtery of Angels was retrieved from the "hands of Infidels, and tranſlated, firſt into Dalmatia, thence into Italy, to Loretto in "the Province of Picenum.

Let us repay one Legend with another.

h "They ſay of R. Chanina, that he ſeeing once his fellow Citizens carrying their Sa- h Midras Schir "crifices to Jeruſalem, cryeth out: Alas! they every one are carrying their Sacrifices, and fol. 2. 2. "for my part, I have nothing to carry, what ſhall I do? Streight way he betaketh him- "ſelf into the Wilderneſs of the City, and finding a Stone he cuts it, ſquares, and arti- "ficially formeth it; and ſaith, what would I give that this Stone might be convey- "ed into Jeruſalem? Away he goeth to hire ſome that ſhould do it, they ask him an "hundred pieces of Gold and they would carry it. Alas! ſaith he, where ſhould I have "an hundred pieces, indeed where ſhould I have three? Immediately the Holy Bleſſed "God procureth five Angels in the likeneſs of Men, who offer him for five ſhillings to "convey the Stone into Jeruſalem, if himſelf would but give his helping hand: He "gave them a lift, and of a ſudden they all ſtood in Jeruſalem, and when he would "have given them the reward they bargained for, his workmen were gone and vaniſh- "ed. This wonder he relates before the Sanhedrin, in the Conclave of Gazith. They "ſay to him, Rabbi, it ſhould ſeem that theſe were Angels that brought this Stone: So "he gave the Elders the Money for which the Angels had bargained with him.

In truth I ſhould eaſilier incline to believe this Story than that of Loretto, becauſe there is ſome reaſon to apprehend this R. Chaninah no other than Haninah ben Duſa a notorious Magcian i. Unleſs you will alſo ſay that the Chappel at Loretto took that jaunt by the help of Magick. i Juchaſin, fol. 57. 1.

k A huge Stone of its own accord takes a ſkip from the Land of Iſrael, and ſtops up the Mouth of the Den in Babylon where Daniel and the Lyons lay. But ſo much for Tales. k In Bemidbar Rabba, fol. 257.

SECT. II.

The ſituation of Nazareth.

THE ſituation of Nazareth according to Borchard, Breidenbach, and Saligniac, ought to be meaſured and determined from Mount Thabor. For ſo they unanimouſly: A Nazareth duabus leucis contra orientem eſt Mons Thabor: From Nazareth two leagues Eaſtward is Mount Tabor. Nor is there any cauſe why with reſpect to that Region of Galilee, in which they place this City, we ſhould diſſent from them, ſeeing there are others of the ſame opinion. Now the Mount Tabor was in the very confines that divided Iſſachar from Zabulon, Joſ. XIX. 22. And the coaſt [i. e. of Iſſachar] reacheth to Tabor and Shahazimath. But what coaſt ſhould this be, Northor South? The North coaſt, ſaith Joſephus l. l Antiqu. lib. 5. cap. 1.

Καὶ μετὰ τούτους [the Manaſſites] Ἰσάχαρις Καρμηλόν τε ὄρος καὶ τὸν ποταμὸν τοῦ μήκους ποιησάμενον τέρμονα, τότε Ἰταβύριον ὄρος τοῦ πλάτους· i. e. next to Manaſſeh is Iſſachar, having for its bounds of longitude, Mount Carmel and the River [Jordan,] and of latitude, Mount Tabor. That is, The latitude of Iſſachar is, from Manaſſeh to Mount Tabor, as Joſephus plainly makes out in that place. Mount Tabor therefore, lay as it were in the midſt betwixt the Coaſts of Samaria and upper Galilee: Having on this ſide Iſſachar toward Samaria, and on that ſide Zabulon toward the aforeſaid Galilee.

Joſephus m deſcribes Mount Tabor where theſe things ſeem ſomething obſcure, Ἰταβύριον ὄρος ἐστὶ τοῦ μεγάλου πεδίου καὶ Σκυθοπόλεως μέσον. We have already ſeen where Scythopolis lay, and where the μέγα πεδίον, the great plain, near Scythopolis. But what ſhould that μέγα πεδίον, great Plain be, that lyeth ſo behind Tabor toward the North, that Tabor ſhould be betwixt it and Scythopolis? Is not Zabulon ſo called in Joſephus? yea, and Iſſachar too, at leaſt a great part of it, if we conſult the ſame Joſephus n. So that the μέγα πεδίον of Scythopolis or Manaſſeh is diſtinctly called by him Μέγα πεδίον Σαμαρείτιδος, The great Plain of Samaria o. m Lib. de bell. 4. cap. 6. n Lib. 3. cap. 4. o Ibid. lib. 2. cap. 21.

And the lower Galilee is deſcribed by the Talmudiſts by this character, that it produceth Sycamines, which the upper Galilee doth not p. Now the Sycamine Trees were ἐν τῇ πεδινῇ, in the vale, 1 King. X. 27. And hence ſeems to ariſe the diſtinction be- p Sotah, cap. IX. hal. 2.

tween the upper, and the lower Galilee, the lower ſo called, becauſe more plain and Champaigne; the upper, becauſe more Hilly and Mountanous.

I am deceived if the upper Galilee, be not ſometimes by way of Emphaſis called Galilee; nor without cauſe, whenas the lower might be called μέγα πεδίον, or the great plain. So Cana hath the adjunct of Cana of Galilee, perhaps that it might diſtinguiſh that Cana which bounds, both the Galilees; of which more in its proper place. That paſſage which we meet with in our Evangeliſt, Chap. IV. 43, 44. He departed from thence [from Samaria] and went into Galilee, for Jeſus himſelf teſtified that a Prophet hath no honour in his Country. It looks this way: that is, he would not go into Nazareth, but into Galilee, viz. the upper, and ſo came to Cana.

Nazareth therefore was in the lower Galilee, in the very confines of Iſſachar and Zabulon, and is commonly received within Zabulon, its ſelf being diſtant ſixteen miles or more from Capernaum; for from Capernaum, Mount Tabor is diſtant ten miles or thereabouts.

SECT. III.

בן נצר Ben Nezer.

I Am not abundantly ſatisfied in the common writing of the word Nazareth by נצר; much leſs that Nazarenus ſhould be expreſſed by נוצרי i. e. Ναζωραῖος, when the ſacred Amanuenſes write it Ναζαρηνός. But I can hardly ſuppreſs a juſt indignation when I read what the Jews ſcribble about בן נצר Ben Nezer.

q Chetubb. fol. 51. 2. q The Rabbins have a Tradition: Thoſe that are taken out of the Kingdom, behold they are properly Captives, but thoſe that are taken by Thieves, they are not to be called Captives.

The Tradition is to be diſtinguiſhed. מלכות אמלכות לא קשיא as to Kingdom and Kingdom there is no difficulty. That is, as to Kingdoms which are equal. But between the Kingdom of Ahaſhuerus, and the Kingdom of Ben Nezer there is. Between Thieves and Thieves there is no difficulty, but between ben Nezer, and עלמא ליסטים the Thieves of the world, (viz. common Thieves) there is. There [in Paleſtine] Ben Nezer is called a King. Here [in Babylon] he is called a Robber קרי ליה ליסטים Gloſs. Ben Nezer was a Thief and took Cities and ruled over them and became the Captain of Robbers.

It is very ſuſpicious to what purpoſe they have invented that name for the moſt infamous Robber, to call him the Son of Nezer. By thoſe very Letters נצר they write the City Nazareth. Read on and the ſuſpition will encreaſe.

r Bereſh. rabb. ſect. 76. r I conſidered the horns, and behold there came up among them another little horn, [Dan. VII. 8.] והא בן נצר This is Ben Nezer. Aruch quoteth this paſſage under the word קרן in this manner: There came up among them another little horn. ו מלכות כותיים This is the Kingdom of the Cuthites. Now what they meant by the Kingdom of the Cuthites, may be conjectured from s Midras Schir. fol. 17. 2. s The Winter is paſt [Cant. II. 11.] ו מלכות כותיים This is the Kingdom of the Cuthites. And a little after: The time is coming when the Kingdom of Cuth ſhall be deſtroyed, and the Kingdom of Heaven ſhall be revealed.

It is eaſie imagining what they would point at by the Kingdom of the Cuthites; the Chriſtians no doubt: (unleſs they will pretend to ſome Samaritan Kingdom.) And if ſo, it is as obvious whom they deſign by Ben Nezer. Let them ſhew whence came the name

t Lib. 5. cap. 23. of the Tetrarchy of the Nazarens in Celoſyria: Of which Pliny t, Cæloſyria habet Apamiam Marſyâ amne diviſam. A Nazarinorum Tetrarchiâ Bambycen, quæ alio nomine Hierapolis vocatur, Syris verò Magog.

SECT. IV.

Certain horrid practiſes in כפר נחום Caphar Nachum.

HAving ſpoken of Nazareth, it will not be amiſs to make ſome mention of Capernaum, which however diſtant many miles, yet was it the place where our Saviour dwelt, as Nazareth was his native ſoil. We have conſidered its ſituation in another Treatiſe, being in the Country of Genneſareth, a little diſtance from Tiberias. There is u Lib. 10. cap. 26. another Capernahum mentioned by Gulielmus Tyrius u, that lay upon the Coaſt of the Mediterranean, as this did upon the coaſt of Genneſaret. In loco quæ dicitur Petra inciſa, juxta antiquum Tyrum, inter Capharnaum & Doram, oppida Maritima: In a place called Petra Inciſa, near old Tyre, betwixt Capernaum and Dor, two Sea-coaſt Towns.

It is uncertain whether the name be derived from נעם or from נחום. The former denotes pleaſantneſs: the latter, comfort. And though our Capernaum might juſtly enough take its name from the pleaſantneſs of its ſituation, according to the deſcription that Joſephus Joſephus giveth of it x. Yet the oriental Interpreters write it the latter way. The Rabbins alſo mention ſuch a Town written in the ſame Letters בפר נחום, of which perhaps it will not be tedious to the Reader to take this Story.

x Lib. de bell. 3. cap. 35.

y Chanina R. Joſhua's Brother's Son went into כפר נחומם Capernaum ועברון ליה מינאי מלה and the Hereticks (or Magicians, for the word ſignifies either) inchanted him. They brought him into the City ſitting upon an Aſs: on the Sabbath day, which was forbiden by their Law. He went to his Uncle R. Joſhua ואחסי משחא ויהב עליו who beſmeared him with a certain Ointment, and he was recovered. It ſhould ſeem that by ſome kind of Enchantments they had thrown him into a Delirium ſo far that he had forgot both himſelf and the Sabbath day. There is another Story immediately follows that.

y Midras Cobeleth, fol. 85. 2.

A certain Diſciple of R. Jonathan's flies over to theſe Hereticks: [That himſelf might be entred amongſt them, and become one too.] Jonathan finds him out employed in caſtrating Birds and Beaſts. They ſent to him [Jonathan] and ſaid it is written, caſt in thy Lot amongſt us and let us all have one purſe. He fled; and they followed him, ſaying, Rabbi, come and give us a caſt of thy office toward a young Birde. He returned and found them עסוקים בריבא אחרת committing Adultery with a Woman. He asketh them בן ארחהון יהודאי עבדין Is it the manner of the Jews to do ſuch things as theſe? They anſwer, Is it not written in the Law, caſt in thy lot amongſt us, and let us all have one purſe? He fled and they purſued him to his own houſe, and then he ſhut the doors againſt them. They call to him and ſay, O Rabbi, Jonathan, go, and rejoycing tell thy Mother, that thou didſt not ſo much as look back toward us, for if thou hadſt looked back, thou hadſt then followed us as vehemently as we have now followed thee.

Whiles I read theſe things, I cannot but call to mind the Nicolaitans and ſuch who indulged to themſelves a liberty of all obſcene filthineſſes; nor is what we have related unworthy our obſervation, with reſpect to Hereſies of this kind. Should this Capernaum be the ſame (as probably it is) with that Capernaum which we meet with ſo frequently in the Evangeliſts, it is ſomething obſervable what is ſaid of it. Thou Capernaum, which art exalted unto Heaven ſhalt be brought down to Hell.

SECT. V.

Some ſhort remarks upon Cana, Joh. II. 2.

IT is very diſputable which ſhould be the firſt letter of the word Cana, whether Caph, or Koph, for we find both.

I. קנרת Kanah with the initial letter Koph, is a City in the Tribe of Aſer, Joſh. XIX. 28. where the Greek for Canah have Καυδὰν and MS. Alex. Κανά.

II. קיני Kene, a word not very much differing in the ſound, occurs amongſt the Talmudiſts, רבי וביתּ דינו בינו על קיני וטהרוהו Rabbi. and his Sanhedrin having numbred votes, pronounced Keni, clean. Gloſs. Keni was a place of doubtful eſteem, reckoned amongſt the unclean, [that is a place of the Gentiles] but in the days of R. Judah Haccodeſh, it came under tryal and they pronounced it clean.

z In Obaloth, cap. 18. hal. ult.

III. We find Κανὰ κώμη in Joſephus, but the ſituation not mentioned. Ἀεχαολ. a Antiochus being ſlain, [viz. when he fought with the Arabian King] τὸ στρατόπεδμα φεύγει εἰς Κανὰ κώμην, his Army fled to the Town Kana. This is hardly our Cana, as may in ſome meaſure appear in Joſephus's Context.

a Lib. 13. cap. 23.

IV. But further he ſpeaks in his own life, of κώμη τῆ Γαλιλαίας ἡ προσαγορεύεται Κανά· Cana in Galilee. As for its ſituation, as far as can be collected from Joſephus, we diſcuſs that in another Treatiſe, and ſhew that it is not far from that where the River Jordan diſchargeth its ſelf into the Sea of Genneſaret; ſo that, between this Cana and Capernaum there ſeems to be almoſt the whole length of that Sea.

V. But it muſt not be forgot that כנה Canah beginning with the Letter Caph is met with in Juchaſin b the words theſe: השובר ארץ הפועלים In the end of the Chapter [it is theſe venth Chapter of Bavah Meziah] there is a Tradition. Abba Chalaphtha of Caphar Hananiah, in the name of R. Meir ſaith, [they are in Bavah Meziah, where he is brought in and what he ſaid c] ונ"ל כי כפר הנניה הוא כפר כנה It ſeems to me (they are the words of the Author of Juchaſin) that Caphar Hananiah is Caphar Cana: as may be proved out of the ninth Chapter of the Book Sheviith: for there was the entrance of the lower Galilee.

From that place quoted in Sheviith which is Halac. 2. it plainly appears that Caphar Hananiah was in the very outmoſt border that divided the upper and the lower Galilee. From whence it is evident that the entrance of the lower Galilee, according to our Author, was not as we go from Samaria to Galilee, but from the upper Galilee into the lower. And whether Cana of Galilee be ſo called to diſtinguiſh it from that Cana that ſo divides between the two Galilees, or from that Cana that was in the Tribe of Aſer (which may not unfitly be called Cana of the Sidonians) it is at the Reader's choice to determine.

mine. As also why the Syriack Interpreter should in this place write קטנא Katna instead of Cana. Whether he had in his eye or mind קטרת Kattath, Josh. XIX. 15. which in the vulgar dialect was called Κατανάθ, Katanath, as the Seventy render it, and the Jerusalem Talmudists affirm d: or whether by a diminutive kind of word קטנא Katanah, he would intimate the smallness of the Town. q. d. Cana the less.

SECT. I.

Certain names and places of near sound with Σαλείμ, Salim.

LET us begin with Σαλείμ, Salim, and thence look after its neighbour Ænon. We may be a little helpt in our enquiry by that passage in Gen. XXXIII. 18. ויבוא יעקב שלם עיר שכם And Jacob came to Shalem, a City of Sichem. There are some Versions, and the Authors of the Tables have upon these words built I know not what City Salem near Sichem. But neither the Jews nor Samaritans acknowledge any such thing. For the Jews render it, and that not without reason. And Jacob came safe into the City of Schechem. e The Samaritan Text hath שלום instead of שלם he came in peace: And certainly there is no part of mankind could be more likely to judge than the Samaritans, whether שלם in that place were the name of any City, yea or no.

e Onkelos, Jonathan, Bereshith rabba, sect. 79. Schab. fol. 33. 2, &c.

II. Σαλείμ, Salim in the Greek Interpreter according to the Roman Copy is the name of a place, Josh. XIX. 22. where the Hebrew runs thus, ופגע הגבול בתבור ושחצומה ובית שמש And the coast [of Issachar] reacheth to Tabor, and Shahazimah, and Beth Shemesh. But the Greek, Καὶ συνάπτει τὸ ὅριον ἐπὶ Γαιθδάρ, καὶ ἐπὶ Σαλείμ κατὰ θάλασσαν, καὶ Βαθσαμώς· And the confines touched upon Gethbor, and upon Salim near the Sea, and Bethsamosh.

The Mazoreth observe that Shahazimah which is written with a Vau, should be written by a Jod, which also these Interpreters acknowledge (which is worthy our taking notice of) but then they divide the word into two parts, and write it שחץ ימה i. e. Shahaz, κατὰ θάλασσαν, Shahaz at the Sea; but why they should turn Shahaz into Salim, it is something difficult to guess.

It seems probable that Σίλαμη, Selame, which Josephus in the account of his own life, makes mention of, as fortified by himself, amongst other Towns in Galilee, is the same with this Σαλείμ, Salim mentioned by the Seventy; and that the rather because it is there reckoned up with Mount Tabor.

III. Σααλείμ, Saalim in the Alexandrian Copy answers to the Hebrew שעלים Shaalim, 1 Sam. IX. 4. In the Complut. Σααλείμ, Saalim; in the Roman Σεγαλείμ, Segalim, where the Targumists instead of בארץ שלישה in the land of Shalishah, hath בארץ דרומא in the land of the South: and instead of בארץ שעלים in the land of Saalim; it hath בארץ מתברא in the land of Mathbara. But why both here, and also 2 Kings 4. 42. they should render בעל שלישה Baal-Shalisha, by ארץ דרומא the land of the South, we find some kind of reason in the Gemarists who upon this place have this note.

g In Menacoth, fol. 85. 1.

f There was no Country throughout the whole land of Israel, where the fruits of the Earth were so forward as in Baal-Shalisha. Now such a Country they call g שורת המודרמורת Southern Fields; or literally, made South; because the Sun both riseth and sets upon them. But why they should render ארץ שעלים the land of Saalim, by ארץ מתברא the land of Methbara Methbara is something more unintelligible, unless it should be with some respect to Mount Tabor which we find mentioned in the following Chapter, vers. 3. and so מחברא Methbara should be the Plain of Tabor.

If now the Reader can pitch upon any of these places we have already named, or any other he may have met with in his reading, as that which our Evangelist here meaneth, let him consider whether the Article τὸ may properly be prefixed to it, whenas the names of all Cities and Towns are of the Feminine gender generally, and yet St. John hath it τὸ Σαλεὶμ· which gives some ground of conjecture that the passage is to be understood not of any Town or City, but of some other matter: which by way of Exercitation, it may not be amiss a little to enlarge upon.

SECT. II.

שלמאה A Salmean, or a Salamean used amongst the Targumists instead of קיני a Kenite.

EVery one that hath but dipt into the Chaldee Paraphrasts, must know that the Kenites are called by them שלמאה Salmeans or Salameans. So Onkelos, Gen. XV. 19. Numb. XXIV. 21. 22. So Jonathan, Judg. I. 16. & IV. 2. & V. 25. 1 Sam. XV. 6. & XXVII. 10. It is likewise observable that מעכתי the Maachathites are by them called אפיקרים the Epikerites, Deut. III. 14. Jos. XIII. 13. And this probably from the place or Country where the Maachathites of old dwelt, which in the time of the Targumists was called Ἐπίκαρα, Ἀπ' Ἀνατολῶν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, Epicarus on the East of the River Jordan degr. 67. 31. 0. h. Whether indeed the situation doth fall out right, I shall not at present discourse. h Ptol. Tab. Asiæ 4.

But the Kenite is not termed a Salmean from any place or Country where he dwelt. For the Kenites in the Southern part of Judea are called Salameans, Judg. I. So also Heber the Kenite in Galilee, Judg. IV. And there were Kenites amongst the Amalekites, 1 Sam. XV. and there were of the Kenites beyond Jordan. Gen. XV. whence so called is not to our purpose. It sufficeth that they were vulgarly known by the name of שלמאה Salame, which, how near akin it is to Σαλεὶμ, Salim, let the unbyast Reader judge. Who knoweth therefore but the Evangelist should mean thus; John was Baptizing in Ænon near the Salamean, or Kenite; giving that name to that people which at that time they were commonly called by? But supposing this should be granted us, what Kenite should we understand here? either those that were in the Wilderness of Judah, or those on the other side the salt Sea?

SECT. III.

Αἰνὼν in the Greek Interpreters, Jos. XV. 62.

IF the Essene might be called שלמאה Salmean, as well as Kenite (and certainly he seems to have as much claim to it, if the word denote perfection, or austerity of life) then I could more confidently place our Σαλεὶμ, Salim, in the Wilderness of Judah; because there I find Ænon mentioned in the Greek Version, Jos. XV. 61, 62. Where the Hebrew hath it thus: In the Wilderness, Betharabah, Middin, and Secacah, and Nibshan, and the City of Salt, and Engedi, six Cities: But the Greek καὶ Βαδδαργεὶς, καὶ Θαραβαὰμ, καὶ Αἰνὼν, &c. And Baddargis, and Tharabaam, and Ænon, &c. Where it is plain that Αἰνὼν, Ænon is put for Middin, but why it should be so, is more difficult to tell. This only we may remark, that the word Middin occurrs, Judg. V. 10. יושבי על מדין which if I should render, ye that dwell by Middin, I should have Kimchi to warrant me, who in his Notes upon this place tells us, that Middin is the name of a City mentioned in Joshua, Middin and Secacah. But now when Αἰνὼν, Ænon, signifies a place of springs, or waters: See what follows, מקול מחצצים בין משאבים from the noise of Archers among the places of drawing waters. The Greek is ἀνὰ μέσον ὑδρευομένων· Among those that draw water. So that if you ask the Greek Interpreter why he should render Middin by Αἰνὼν, Ænon, a place of springs, he will tell you because Middin was a place ὑδρευομένων, of those that draw waters.

The Essenes succeeded the Kenites in their dwelling in the Wilderness of Judah i: and not only so, but in strictness and austerity of life, as Josephus, and others allure us. Now if we will but allow the Essenes to be called שלמאה Salmeans, as the Kenites were, then the words of the Evangelist might bear such sense as this: John was Baptizing in Ænon near the Essenes. And it may be supposed that as the Baptist had already conversed with two of the Jewish Sects, the Pharisees, and Sadducees and had baptized some of i Plin. lib. 5. cap. 17. Solin. cap. 38.

each, ſo he would now apply himſelf to a third Sect amongſt them, viz. the Eſſenes, and Baptize ſome of them too. But herein I will not be poſitive.

SECT. IV.

The Syriack remarkt. And Euſtathius upon Dionyſius.

WHILES we are treating upon the word Αἰνών, Ænon, I cannot but obſerve that the word is divided both in the Syriack and Arabick Verſion. Syr. בעין יון In the fountain Jon. Arab. פי עין נון In the fountain Nun. The words of the Evangeliſt ſeem to diſcover the ſignification of the name.

Ὅτι ὕδατα πολλὰ ἦν ἐκεῖ, Becauſe there was much water there. For we could not have render'd the word more ſignificantly than a place of ſprings, or a watry place. So Nonnus, Ὕδατι βαπτίζων βαθυκύμονι ἔγγυθι Σαλήμ.

Baptizing neer the waters of deep-waved Salem.

Why therefore did thoſe Interpreters take the word in two, when it was plain, and Etymological enough of it ſelf?

The Syriack Jon brings to mind a paſſage of Euſtathius upon this verſe of Dionyſius.

Ἥν τε νῦ Ἰονίην κικλήσκουσι ἰνδιάξαντο.

Some ſay (ſaith he) that that whole Sea from Gaza as far as Egypt, is call'd the Ionian Sea from Io. Καὶ τὴν ἐκεῖ δὴ Γάζαν Ἰονίην καλεῖσί τινες. Ἔνθα Βοῦς ἦν ἐν ἀγάλματι τῆς Ἰοῦς, ἤτοι τῆς Σελήνης. Indeed ſome call even Gaza its ſelf Ione, where there is an heifer in the image of Io, or the Moon.

That Gaza was ever call'd Ione, is not commonly known; but grant it was, and the Sea from that place even as far as Egypt, to have been call'd the Ionian Sea; yet ſhould not I have deriv'd its name from Io, but rather from the Iones, thoſe braſſy robuſt men, of whoſe coming into Egypt, and fixing their ſeats there by the Sea, Herodotus gives us a famous relation.

Euterpe. chap. 152. 154.

But muſt we ſeek for עין יון ein Jon (or Javen, as ſome would have it) hereabout? To ſeek John about Gaza, would be to ſeek him out of the land of Iſrael; at leaſt as the bounds of that land were at that time determin'd.

SECT. V.

Herodium, a Palace.

IF Ænon was the place where John baptiz'd laſt, immediately before his impriſonment, then we muſt look for it either in Galilee or Peræa, for in one of thoſe places it was where he began his acquaintance with Herod. For however St. Luke ſpeaking of Herod, mentions Galilee only, within his Tetrarchy, Luk. III. 1. yet Joſephus tells us that Ἐγένετο γὰρ τότῳ [Ἀντίπα] ἥτε Περαία καὶ Γαλιλαία, both Peræa and Galilee were under his juriſdiction. Where then ſhall we begin his firſt acquaintance with the Baptiſt? I had once inclination to have fixed it in Galilee; but whilſt I conſider better that Herodium was in Peræa, and very neer Machærus, John's priſon, that ſeems the more probable.

De Bell. lib. 2. c. 9.

Joſephus ſpeaking of Herod the Great, and his ſtately buildings, hath this amongſt other things. Φρούριον ὀχυρωσάμενος τῇ πρὸς Ἀραβίαν ὄρει προσαγορεύσαν Ἡρῴδιον ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ. He fortify'd a Caſtle upon an hill toward Arabia, and call'd it Herodium after himſelf. Where by Arabia you are to underſtand the land of Moab; and he ſeemed to have fortify'd that Caſtle as a Bulwark againſt the Moabitiſh Arabs.

De Bell. lib. 1. cap. 21.

The ſame Herod that built it is bury'd there, as the ſame Joſephus tells us, where deſcribing the funeral pomp he gives this account. Πεντακόσιοι δὲ τοὺς αὐτοῖς τῶν οἰκετῶν ἀπελεύθερον Ἀρωματοφόροι. After thoſe follow'd five hundred of his own domeſtick ſervants bearing ſpices. Διαδὶς δ' ἐκομίσθη τὸ σῶμα διακοσίους εἰς Ἡρῴδιον ὅπου κατὰ τὰς ἐντολὰς ἐτάφη. His body was brought two hundred furlongs [from Jericho where he dy'd] to Herodium, where according to his own appointment he was inter'd. But in Antiq. Lib. 17. Cap. 10. Ἦσαν δ' ὅπου Ἡρῴδιον σταδίους ἑκατόν. They came to Herodium eight furlongs, for there he had order'd his funeral ſolemnities. At firſt ſight here is an appearance of a ſlip in Hiſtory: but it is to be underſtood that from Jericho to Herodium it was 200 furlongs, that is, 25 miles; but Herod's burying-place was eight furlongs from Herodium, a common diſtance, for burying places to be from Cities.

SECT.

SECT. VI.

Macherus a Caſtle.

Joſephus tells us that John Baptiſt was impriſon'd by Herod in the Caſtle of Macherus. Καὶ ὁ μὲν δεσμῷ τῇ Ἡρῴδου δόμῳ εἰς τὴν Μαχαιροῦντα πεμφθεὶς, &c. He [the Baptiſt] upon Herod's ſuſpicion is ſent priſoner to Macherus, a little before that he had told us, μεθόριον ἦν τῆς Ἀρέτα, καὶ Ἡρῴδου ἀρχῆς. This place is the frontier betwixt the Kingdom of Aretas [the Arabian King] and Herod. Antiqu. lib. 18. cap. 7.

Of the ſituation of the place Pliny hath this hint, Proſpicit [Aſphaltitin] ab Oriente Arabia Nomadum [Moab it is] a meridie Macherus, ſecunda quondam Arx Judæa ab Hieroſolymis. The meaning of which is this, that Arabia of the Nomades [or Moab] ſituated on the Eaſt of Aſphaltites fronts it on the Weſt, and Macherus ſituated on the North, fronts it on the South. Nat. Hiſt. lib. 5. cap. 6.

The Mountanous Country of Peræa was the Hill Macvar and Gedor. The Jeruſalem Targum, and Jonathan upon Numb. XXXII. 35. inſtead of Atroth, Shophan, and Jaazer, have ית מכללתא דשופן וית מכוור Maclelta of Shophan and Macvar: to which Jonathan adds מכוור גרמתא Macvar of Garamatha. Hitroſol. Shtviith fol. 38. 4.

It is obvious enough how they came to render עטרות Atroth by מכללתא Maclelta, (as alſo Onkelos hath done) viz. becauſe they tranſlated the Hebrew word which denotes a Crown, by the Chaldee word which is of the ſame ſignification. But why Jaazer by מכוור Macvar? Onkelos upon the 3. v. of the ſame Chap. renders Jaazer and Nimrah by בומרין which I ſhould tranſlate the Atrati or denigrati of the houſe of Nimrin. And Ptolomy comments thus in Arabia Petræa, Διατείνει δὲ ἐν τῇ χώρᾳ τὰ καλούμενα μέλανα ὄρη, &c. There are all along that Country certain mountains called the black mountains, namely from the Bay which is neer Pharan to Judea; but whether מכוור Macvar hath any relation with blackneſs from כור a diſh or furnace, I leave it to others to enquire. דימין נמרין דבית נמרין

So that we ſee Herodium and Macherus are ſituated on the outermoſt Coaſt of Peræa toward the South or the land of Moab, neer the ſhore of Aſphaltites or the Dead-ſea.

The nature of the place we have deſcrib'd by Joſephus, Ῥέουσι δὲ ἐκ θερμῶν ὑδάτων πηγαὶ πλησίον τοῦ τόπου, &c. There ſpring out neer this place certain fountains of hot waters, of a very different taſt, ſome bitter, ſome ſweet; there are alſo many ſprings of cold waters, &c. Compare the bitter waters with the waters of Nimrin, Iſa. XV. 6. and the other with thoſe of Dimon, v. 9. where, quære whether Dimon be not the ſame with Dibon [Beth and Mem being alternately us'd] that by that pronunciation it might agree more with דם blood מי דימון מלאו דם The waters of Dimon are full of blood. De Excid. lib. 7. cap. 21.

Whiles we are in this watry Country are we not got amongſt the rivers of Arnon? The Learned Beza commenting upon thoſe words of St. Joh. III. 23. Ὅτι ὕδατα πολλὰ ἦν ἐκεῖ, For there was much water there, affirms it, commenting thus: Multi videlicet rivi, quorum etiam in eo tractu circa Aroer fit mentio in libris Moſis; namely many rivers of which alſo, in that Tract about Aroer, there is mention in the Books of Moſes. And the ſituation of the place confirms it. When as Macherus was the very utmoſt bounds of the land of Iſrael toward Moab, according to Joſephus, as alſo was Arnon according to Moſes.

But here we find no place that is call'd either Ænon or Salim. True indeed, but the place for the very waterineſs of it deſerves to be call'd Ænon, that is, a place of ſprings; and if Salim may be the ſame with Salamean, here we have alſo the Kenite or Salamæan, Gen. XV. and Numb. XXIV. However in a thing ſo very obſcure it is ſafeſt not to be poſitive; and the Reader's candor is beg'd in this modeſt way of conjecturing. The way we tread is unbeaten, and deſerves a guide, which as yet we have not obtain'd.

SECT. VII.

The Hill Miſſaar. הר מצער Pſal. XLII. 6.

LET us now (however ſomething beyond our bounds) paſs from the firſt entring of the Coaſts of Moab toward the North, to the utmoſt limits of it Southward.

I will remember thee (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) from the land of Jordan, and of the Hermonites, מהר מצער from the hill Mizaar. Where is this Hill Mizaar? not to take any notice of what we meet with in Borchard and others concerning Hermon neer Thabor, (by what authority I can't tell) as alſo that הר מצער the Hill Miſaar, is render'd almoſt by all, a little Hill; or in a word, that the Targumiſt and R. Solomon tell us, it is Mount Sinai; Apollinarius, that it is Mount Hermon: It ſeems plainly to be the hilly part of Zoar, whither Lot would have fled, if the ſtreightneſs of time might have permitted him, Gen. XIX. 20.

O let

O let me escape to this Cicy, הלא מצער הוא is it not Mizaar, or a little one? so that הר עיר מצער the hilly part הוא מצער the hill Misaar may be the same as if it had been said of the little City Zoar.

The reasons of the conjecture besides the agreeableness of the name may be especially these two.

I. As Hermonim or Hermon was neer the Springs of Jordan, so the hilly part of Zoar, lay hard by the extreme parts of Jordan in Asphaltites; and the Psalmist speaking of the land of Jordan, or of the land on the other side of Jordan, seems to measure out all Jordan from one end to the other, from the very spring-head to the furthermost part where the stream ends.

II. As David betook himself to the Country on the other side of Jordan towards Hermon in his flight from his Son Absalom; so was it with him, when flying from Saul, he betook himself to Zoar in the land of Moab, 1 Sam. XXII. 3. And so bewails his deplorable condition so much the more bitterly, that both those times he was banisht to the very utmost Countries North and South that the river Jordan washt.

SECT. VIII.

עגלת שלישיה Eglah Shelishijah, Isa. XV. 5.

WITH the mention of Zoar is this clause subjoyn'd in Esay, עגלת שלישיה Eglah shelishijah, or, an heifer of three years old. So with the mention of Zoar, and Horonaim, the same clause is also subjoyned in Jeremy.

Isa. XV. 5. בריחה עד צוער עגלת שלישיה His Fugitives unto Zoar, an Heifer of three years old.

Greek, Ἐν αὐτῇ ἕως Σεγώς, δάμαλις γὰρ ἔτι τρικλής. In it unto Segor. For it is an Heifer of three years.

Vulgar, Vectes ejus usq; ad Segor: Vitulam conternantem. Its bars were unto Segor: An Heifer in his third year.

Targum, Ut fugiant usq; ad Zoar, vitulam trimam magnam. That they should fly as far as Zoar, a great Heifer of three years old.

English. His fugitives shall flee unto Zoar: an Heifer of three years old.

Jerem. XLVIII. 34. מצוער עד הורנים עגלת שלישיה From Zoar to Horonaim, an Heifer of three years old.

Vulgar, A Segor usq; ad Horonaim, vitulâ conternante. From Segor unto Horonaim, the Heifer being in his third year. And so others.

I am not ignorant what Commentators say upon these places, but why may not עגלת שלישיה Eglath shelishijah be the name of some place, and so call'd a third Eglah in respect of two other places, much of the same sound; or Dutchess or noble Eglah, as שליש signifies a Duke or Tribune.

There is mention of עין עגלים ein Eglaim in that Country, Ezek. XLVII. 10. where Eglaim is plainly of the dual number, and seems to intimate that there were two Egels, with relation to which this our Eglah may be call'd Eglah the third. So Ramathaim, 1 Sam. I. 2. is of the dual number, and plainly shews there were two Ramah's.

The sound of the word Necla comes pretty near it. This we meet with in Ptolomy, in Arabia Petræa.

Ζωάρα, Zoar. 67. 20. 30. 30.
Θοάνα, Thoan. 67. 30. 30. 30.
Νέκλα, Necla. 67. 20. 30. 15.

So that here we see the Geographer mentions Zoar and Necla, as the Prophet before had Zoar and Eglah, and how easily might Eglah pass into Necla in Greek writing, especially if the letter γ hath any thing of the sound of the letter N in it? The Geographer makes the distance of Zoar from Necla to be fifteen miles, so we may suppose was the distance of Zoar from Eglah, Horonaim lying between them; from whence the words of the Prophets may not be unfitly render'd thus:

His fugitives shall flee unto Zoar, unto the third Eglah.
From Zoar unto Horonaim: even unto the third Eglah.

I am deceiv'd if Ἄγαλλα, Agalla, which we meet with in Josephus be not the Eglah we are now speaking of, numbering up the twelve Cities which Hyrcanus promis'd he would restore to Aretas the Arabian King, being what his father Alexander had taken from him, amongst the rest he nameth Ἄγαλλα, Ἀθὼν, Ζώαρα, Ὀρώναι, Agalla, Athone, Zoar, Horone.

Antiqu. lib. 14. chap. 2.

Horone. Of Zoar there can be no ſcruple; and as little of Ὀρώνας, Horone, but by that muſt be meant Horonaim. Ἀθὼν, Athone ſeems to bear a like ſound with Ptolomy's Θοάνα, Thoana, and Ἀγαλλα, Agalla with his Necla, and that with our Eglah.

SECT. I.

A few remarks upon the Samaritan affairs.

1. Of the name of the Cuthites.

THAT the Samaritans are call'd Cuthites by the Jews is unqueſtionable, Οἱ μὲν κατὰ τὴν Ἑβραίων γλῶτταν χαδαῖοι, κατὰ δὲ τὴν Ἑλλήνων Σαμαρεῖται, Thoſe that in the Hebrew tongue are called Cuthæans, in the language of the Greeks are Samaritans. Joſeph. Antiqu. lib. 9. cap. 14.

But why Cuthites rather than Babylonians, Hamathites, Avites, &c. is uncertain; for thence as well as from Cutha, were Colonies tranſplanted into Samaria, II King. XVII. 24. nay they were call'd Cuthites even at that time when a great part of the Samaritan Nation conſiſted of Jews.

I am apt to apprehend there was ſome virulent deſign even in the very name. The name of Cuſhites amongſt the Jews was moſt loathſome and infamous, as they were not only an hoſtile Country, but a people accurs'd, and for their black hew even horrid to the very ſight. Perhaps in the Title of the VII Pſalm, there is no little ſeverity of reproach hinted in the name Cuſh. Something of the like nature may be coucht in the word Cuthim. For whereas כותים may be the ſame with כושים, the letter ש being chang'd into ת in the Syriach dialect, it may be an eaſie conjecture, that the Jews calling the Samaritans (a Nation peculiarly abominated by them) Cuthites might tacitly reproach them with the odious name of Cuſhites.

Rabbi Iſmael ſaith, גירי אריות הם כותים that the Cuthites are proſelytes of Lions. Kidduſhim. fol. 75. 2.
R. Akiba ſaith, גירי אמת הן that they are true proſelytes. The ſtory of the Lions, II King. XVII. 26. is well enough known, which Joſephus very lamely reports in this manner, Ἔκαστοι κατ' ἔθνος ἴδιον Θεὸν εἰς τὴν Σαμάρειαν κομίσαντες, πάντες μὲν ἦσαν, οὐ τάξις καλὴ τοῖς σεβόμενοι, παροξύνουσι τὸν μέγιστον Θεὸν εἰς ὀργὴν καὶ χόλον. Λοιμὸς γὰρ αὐτοῖς ἐνέπεσεν ὑφ' οὗ φθειρόμενοι, &c. He tells us that as every one brought their ſeveral Gods into Samaria, and worſhip'd them accordingly, ſo the great and true God was infinitely diſpleas'd with them, and brought a deſtructive plague amongſt them. He makes no mention of Lions being ſent amongſt them, according to what the Sacred Hiſtory relates. Probably the ſtory of that horrible deſtruction upon Sennacherib's Army by a waſting plague, gave the firſt riſe to Joſephus his fancy of a plague amongſt the Samaritans; though it is very odd that he ſhould have no touch of the Lions being ſo remarkable a judgment as that was. Antiqu. lib. 9. cap. 14.

3. Samaria planted with Colonies two ſeveral times.

There are the Colonies which Aſnapper is ſaid to have brought into Samaria, Ezr. IV. 10. as well as thoſe by Eſar-haddon, v. 2.

The Jews do judg this Aſnapper to be the ſame with Sennacherib, and that he had eight names, the firſt ſyllables of the names indeed agree pretty well, Sena and Aſna; but whether they denote the ſame perſons I leave undetermin'd. In Sanhedr. fol. 94. 1.

How-

However, whether this Asnapper was the same with Sennacherib or Salmanasser, or some great Minister of the Kings Commander in chief in the transplanting of a Colony; it seems evident that Samaria was planted with Colonies two several times. The first immediately after the taking of the City, being then furnisht with Cuthites, Avites, Sepharvaites, &c. under Asnapper, be he King, or only chief Commander in the action. And when multitudes of them had been devoured by Lions, then was it afresh Planted by the Shushanchites, Tarpelites, &c. in the days of Esarhaddon, with whom a Priest went up to instruct them in the worship of the true God. How greatly Epiphanius confounds these things may be seen in his Heres. VIII. Cap. 9.

4. Of Dosthai the Pseud-Apostle of the Samaritans.

Tanchum, fol. 17. 4. "When the Lions had devour'd the Samaritans, the Assyrian King hearing the news, "calls to him the Elders of Israel, and asks them, did the wild beasts ever use to tear and "mangle any of your people in your own land when you dwelt there? Therefore how "comes it to pass that they do so now? They answer him, our own land bears no Nati- "tion that is not conversant in the Law, or will not be circumcis'd. Send therefore, saith "he, two that may go and instruct the people. So they sent ר" דוסתאי בר ינאי R. Dosthai the Son of Jannai, and ר" שבייר R. Sabia, who taught them the Book of the written Law.

But is this likely? that Dosthai the Samaritan's oracle should be in the times of the Assyrian Empire? whence then had he that Greek name of his? and the name of his Father Janneus was Greekish too. It is much more probable what Eulogius hath in Photius. Cod. CCXXX. "The Samaritan people having divided into various factions disagree'd a- "mongst themselves, and brought in forreign opinions. Some were of opinion that Jo- "shua was he of whom Moses spoke, when he tells them, A Prophet shall the Lord your "God raise up unto you from among your brethren like unto me. Οἱ δὲ τοῦτο μὲν παρεγράφοντο, Δοσθὴν δέ τινα τοῦνομα ἢ Δοσίθεον ἀνεκήρυττον, Σαμαρείτην μὲν ἐξ αὐτῶν τὸ γένος, συναγωνίσαντα δὲ καὶ τε τοὺς χρόνους Σίμωνι τῷ Μάγῳ. "Others rejecting this opinion, cry'd up "one Dosthai or Dositheus, a native Samaritan and Contemporary with Simon Magus.

Epiph. Haref. XI, &c. From Dosthai and Sabia, the Dosthenes and Sabueans, two Samaritan Sects originally sprung.

5. The language of Ashdod. Nehem. XIII. 24. whether the Samaritan language or no.

Nehem. XIII. 24 And the children spake half in the speech of Ashdod, and could not speak in the Jews language. What language was this at this time?

I. The Arabian Version tells us it was the Chaldee. But was not the Jewish and the Chaldee tongue at that time all one? It may be questionable whether it were so at that time or no; but I shall wave that Controversie.

II. As to the question in hand it may not be amiss to consider that passage, Act. II. 11. Κρῆτες καὶ Ἄραβες, Creets and Arabians. Who are these Creets? who would not think at first sight that by the Cretians were meant the inhabitants of the Island of Crete? I my self have sometime fallen into this error; but now I should be ready to say they were the Cherethims, a Philistine Nation and Country; כרתים by the Greek interpreters is render'd Κρῆτες, Creets, Ezek. XXV. 16. Zeph. II. 5, 6. and there is some reason to apprehend that St. Luke in the place above quoted understands the same people, because he joyns them with the Arabians.

Targum on the 2 Chron. XXVI. 7. And the word of the Lord helped them, על פלשתאי ועל ערבאי דיתבין בגרר against the Philistines, and against the Arabians dwelling in Gerar.

Observe Arabians dwelling in Gerar a City of the Philistines; and it is well enough known that Arabia joyns to the land of the Philistines. And one may suspect the language of Ashdod might be the Arabian, rather than the Samaritan tongue, especially when as the name of Idumæa obtain'd as far as these places; And was not the Arabick the language of the Idumeans?

SECT. II.

The Samaritan Pentateuch.

IN the Samaritan Version (that I may still contain my self within our Chorographical Enquiry) as to the names of places, there are three things are matter of our notice, and a fourth of our suspicion.

I. There are some places obscure enough by their own names, which as they are there render'd are still more perplext and unknown. Consult the names used there for the rivers vers of Eden, and the Countries which thoſe rivers run into, and you will ſee how difficult it is, any where elſe to meet with the leaſt footſtep or track of thoſe names, except Cophin only, which ſeems indeed to agree ſomething with Cophen mention'd by Pliny. Nat. Hiſt. lib 6. cap. 23. Strab. lib. 15.

II. Places of themſelves pretty well known, are there call'd by names abſolutely unknown, ſuch are חצפו Catephu, for Aſſyria, Gen. II. 14. לילק Lilak, for Babel, Gen. X. 9. שלמאה Salmaah for Euphrates, Gen. XV. 18. נפיק Naphik for Egypt, Gen. XXVI. 2.

III. Sometimes there are names of a later date uſed, and ſuch as were moſt familiarly known in thoſe days, ſuch as בניאס Banias for Dan, Gen. XIV. 14. that is Panias, the ſpring of Jordan. גינסר Genneſar for Chinnereth, Numb. XXXIV. 11. Deut. III. 17. not to mention Bithnan and Apamia for Baſhan and Shepham, which are ſo neer akin with the Syriack pronunciation; and Gebalah, or Gablah for Seir, according to the Arabick Idiom.

Such names as theſe make me ſuſpect the Samaritan Verſion not to be of that antiquity which ſome would claim for it, making it almoſt as ancient as the days of Ezra.

IV. I ſuſpect too when we meet with places pretty well known of themſelves, obſcur'd by names moſt unknown, that ſometimes the whole Country is not to be underſtood, but ſome particular place of that Country only.

The ſuſpicion is grounded from the word Naphik for Egypt, and Salmaah for Euphrates. By Naphik probably they underſtood not the whole land of Egypt, but Peluſium only, which is the very firſt entry into Egypt from Canaan. The reaſon of this conjecture is this, The word אנפק Anpak (as we have elſwhere obſerved) was writ over the Gates of that City, and how neer that word comes to Naphick is obvious enough to any one.

It is poſſible alſo that the mention of the Kinites immediately following might bring Salmaah to mind; and ſo they might not call Euphrates it ſelf Salmaah, but ſpeaking of Euphrates as waſhing ſome place call'd Salmaah. Ptolomy in his Chapter concerning the Situation of Arabia deſerta, mentions Salma in degr. 78. 20. 28. 30. and it is number'd amongſt ſix and twenty other Cities, which he ſaith are ἐν τῇ Μεσοποταμίᾳ, which the Latin interpreter tranſlates Juxta Meſopotamiam, neer Meſopotamia; if this be true, the Samaritan Verſion hath ſomething by which it may defend its ſelf. For if thoſe Cities mentioned by Ptolomy were indeed Juxta Meſopotamiam, neer Meſopotamia, (the river Euphrates only running between) then may the Samaritan Verſion be warranted, while it renders even to the river Euphrates, even to the river of Salmaah, that is, to the river Euphrates in that place where it waſheth the ſides of Salma.

SECT. III.

The ſituation of the Mounts Gerizim and Ebal. The Samaritan Text upon Deut. XXVII. 4. noted.

THAT Sychar is the ſame place with Sichem, ſeems beyond doubt, which indeed the Mount Gerizim pointed to by the Samaritan Woman ſufficiently confirms. A wily argument perhaps in Epiphanius his eſteem, who in his Samaritan Hereſie gives us this account.

Τῷ γὰρ βουλομένῳ ἀκριβῶς περὶ τοῦ ὄρους Γαριζεὶν ἐρευνᾶσθαι, ἰδεῖν ἔστι πρὸς τῇ Ἱεριχῷ κεῖνται τὰ δύο ὄρη, τό τε τοῦ Γαριζεὶν καὶ τὸ Γεβάλ πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, πρὸς τῇ Ἀνατολῇ τῆ Ἱεριχῶ, ὡς ἔχει τὸ Δευτερονόμιον, καὶ Ἰησοῦ τοῦ Ναυῆ ὁ Βίβλος. There are two mounts neer Jericho beyond Jordan, Gerizim and Ebal, which look toward Jericho on the Eaſt, &c. So that we ſee he tells us Gerizim and Ebal were near Jericho not neer Sichem. So alſo before him, Euſebius de locis Hebraicis, at leaſt if he be the Author of that Book as Petavius noteth.

That clauſe מול גלגל Over againſt Gilgal, Deut. XI. 30. hath deceived theſe Authors in that manner, that they have removed the mounts Gerizim and Ebal to Gilgal by Jericho: and it hath on the other hand deceiv'd ſome in that manner that they have brought Gilgal by Jericho to Sichem, miſunderſtanding the word Gilgal for that place mention'd in Joſh. V. when this which Moſes ſpeaks of, is really Galilee, as I have prov'd elſewhere.

On theſe two mounts (it is well known) were pronounc'd the Bleſſings and the Curſes, Deut. XI. 29. & XXVII. 12, 13. Joſh. VIII. 33. but mark the impudence of the Samaritans, who in their Text, Deut. XXVII. 4. inſtead of, Ye ſhall ſet up theſe Stones which I command you this day בהר עבל on mount Ebal, they have put, Ye ſhall ſet up theſe Stones, &c. בהר גריזים on mount Gerizim.

Compare with this falſification of theirs that in Sotah, R. Eliezer ben Joſe ſaith, I have ſaid to you O Samaritans, Ye have falſified your Law, for ye ſay אלוני מורה שכם the plain of Moreh which is Sichem, Deut. XI. 30. [they add Sichem of their own] we our ſelves indeed confeſs that the plain of Moreh is Sichem, &c. Fol. 33. 2.

Seeing he blames the Samaritans for falſifying their Text in ſo little a matter wherein the truth is not injur'd, namely in adding Shechem, why did he not object to them that greater fault of ſuborning Gerizim for mount Ebal. The truth is, this very thing giveth me reaſon enough to ſuſpect that this bold and wicked interpolation of the word Gerizim for Ebal hath ſtolen into the Samaritan Text ſince the time that this Rabbin wrote. The thing is not unworthy our conſidering.

SECT. IV.

Why it is written Sychar and not Sychem.

IF Sychem and Sychar be one and the ſame City, why ſhould not the name be the ſame?

I. This may happen from the common Dialect, wherein it is very uſual to change the letters. So Reuben in the Syriack Verſion is Rubil, and Ῥούβηλος, Rubelus in Joſephus; by what Etymology let him tell, and explain it if you can: Speaking of Leah bringing forth Reuben he thus expreſſeth himſelf, Καὶ γενομένου παιδὸς ἄρρενος, ᾗ διὰ τοῦτο ὠφελὴς αὐτὸν ἐπεφαμένη ἀνδρὸς Ῥούβηλον ὀνομάζει τὸν υἱόν, διότι κατ' ἔλεον αὐτῇ Θεοῦ γέγοιτο. Τοῦτο γὰρ σημαίνει τὸ ὄνομα. And having brought forth a male-child, and obtaining favour from her husband by it, ſhe call'd his name Rubel, becauſe it happened to her according to the mercy of God, for this his name ſignifies. Perhaps he might at that time think of רוב אל which imports the encreaſe of God.

Ἀρχαιολογ. lib. 1. cap. 19.

It would be endleſs to reckon up ſuch variations of letters in proper names, but as to the letter R, which is our buſineſs at preſent, take theſe few inſtances.

Nebuchad-nezzar is elſwhere Nebuchad-rezzar; Belial is Beliar; Shepham, by the Greek Interpreters Σεφαμάς, Sephamar, Numb. XXXIV. 11. ſo Sychem, Sychar; and this ſo much the rather, becauſe the letters R and M have obtain'd I know not what kind of relation and affinity one with another. So Dammeſek and Darmeſek in the Holy Scriptures; and the Sarmatians are the Samatians in Dionyſius Afer, &c.

Or ſecondly, it might happen that the Jews by way of ſcoff and opprobrium, might vulgarly call Sychem, Sychar; either that they might ſtigmatize the Samaritans as drunkards, Iſa. XXVIII. 1. Wo to the drunkards of Ephraim. Or, (as the word might be variouſly writ and pronounc'd) might give them ſome or other diſgraceful mark as שקר ſignifies prevaricating; שכיר a mercenary, or hireling; סוכר a ſepulchre. So Aruch in סכר, סוכרי פירוש קברים Sochere, i. e. ſepulchres. He quotes a place, where the words are not as they are by him cited, nor is he conſiſtent with himſelf in the Interpretation. But Munſter hath סוכר a ſepulchre. If it be thus, perhaps שכם Sychem might be call'd סוכר Sychar, becauſe there the twelve Patriarchs were bury'd; and under that notion the Samaritans might glory in that name.

SECT. V.

עין סוכר Ain ſocar, in the Talmud.

MAY we not venture to render עין סוכר the well of Sychar, we meet with both the place and name in Bava Kama, There was a time when the ſheaf [of the firſt-fruits] was brought מן גנוזת צריפין from Gaggoth Zeriphin, and the two loaves [thoſe which were to be offer'd by the High Prieſt] מבקעת עין סוכר from the valley of the well of Sychar. So give me leave to render it. Gloſs, The ſheaf was wont to be fetcht from places in the neighbourhood of Jeruſalem, but now the fruits having been deſtroy'd by war, they were fain to fetch it afar off.

Take if you will the whole ſtory: "It is a Tradition among the Rabbins, that when "the Haſmonean family mutually beſieged one another, Ariſtobulus without, and Hyr- "canus within; every day they that were beſieged within, let down their money by the "wall in a little Box, which thoſe that were without receiv'd, and ſent them back their "daily Sacrifice. It came to paſs that there was an old man amongſt them skill'd in the "wiſdom of the Grecks, that told them, ſo long as they within perform their Worſhip, "you will never be able to ſubdue them. Upon this the next day they let down their "money, and the beſiegers ſent them back an Hog; when the Hog had got half up the "wall, fixing his feet upon it, the land of Iſrael ſhook four hundred leagues round about, "from that time they ſaid, Curſed be he that breedeth Swine: Curſed be he that teach- "eth his Son the wiſdom of the Greeks; from that time the ſheaf of the firſt-fruits was "fetcht from Gaggoth Zeriphin, and the two loaves from the valley Ein Sychar.

This ſtory is told with another annext in Menachoth: "When the time came about "that the ſheaf ſhould be brought, no body knew from whence to fetch it; they made "enquiry therefore by a publick cryer, there came a certain dumb man ואותיב חדא ירא "אאיגרא and ſtretcht forth one hand toward a roof, וחדא ידיה אצריפה and the other "hand

Menach. fol. 64. 2.

"hand toward a cottage. Mordecai ſaith to them, Is there any place that is call'd Gaggoth "Zeriphin, or Zeriphin Gaggoth? They ſent and found there was. When they would "have offer'd the two loaves, but knew not where to get them, they made enquiry again "by a publick cryer; the ſame dumb man comes again אוחוב ידיה אעינוח and he puts "one hand to his eye, וחדא ידא אסיכרא and another hand to the hole of the door-poſt, "where they put in the bolt. Quoth Mordecai to them, Is there ſuch a place as Ein Sychar, "or Sychar Ein: they enquir'd and found there was.

But what had Mordecai to do with the times of the Haſmoneans? one of the Gloſſators upon this place makes this objection; and the anſwer is, that whoever were skill'd either in ſigns or languages had this name given them from Mordecai, who in the days of Ahaſhuerus was ſo skill'd.

And now let the Reader give us his judgment as to name and place, whether it doth not ſeem to have ſome relation with our Well of Sychar. It may be diſputed on either ſide. I ſhall only ſay theſe things.

Menachoth as before, It is commanded that the ſheaf be brought from ſome neighbouring place, לא ביכ חקדוב לידושלי מביאין אוחו מ' ם but if it ripen not in any place near Jeruſalem; let them fetch it elſewhere. Gloſs. Gaggoth Zeriphin, and Ein Sychar were at a great diſtance from Jeruſalem. So is our Sychar diſtant far enough indeed, צריפ Zariph, and צריפה Zeripha, denotes a little cottage, קלון שר שומרי שדורי where the keeper of fields lodg'd. Erubbin. fol. 64. 2. It is deſcrib'd by Aruch in the word צריפ that it was cover'd over with Oſier twigs, the tops of which were bound together, and it was drawn at pleaſure from one place to another, &c.

Gloſſ. in Erubbin. יושבי צרפין They that dwelt in thoſe cottages were keepers of ſheep, they abode in them for a month or two, ſo long as the paſture laſted, and then they remov'd to another place. Gaggoth Zeriphin therefore ſignifies the roofs of little cottages, and the place ſeems to be ſo called, either from the number of ſuch lodges in that place, or from ſome hills there that repreſented and ſeem'd to have the ſhape of ſuch kind of cottages.

Such cottages may come to mind when we read Luk. II. 8. of the ſhepherds watching their flocks by night. But this is out of our way.

CHAP. V.

BETHESDA. Joh. V.

I. The Situation of the Probatica. II. The Fountain of Siloam, and its ſtreams. III. The Pool שלח Shelach, and the Pool שלוח Shiloach. IV. The Targumiſt on Eccleſ. II. 5. noted. V. The Fountain of Etam. The Water-gate.

SECT. I.

The Situation of the Probatica.

IT is commonly ſaid that the Προβατικὴ πύλη, the Probatica, or the Sheep-gate, (for let us annex the word Gate to it out of Nehem. III. 1.) or at leaſt Betheſda was neer the Temple. Conſult the Commentators and they almoſt all agree in this opinion; with their good leave, let it not be amiſs to interpoſe theſe two or three things.

I. That no part of the outward wall of the City (which this ſheep-gate was) could be ſo neer the Temple, but that ſome part of the City muſt needs lye between. Betwixt the North-gates and the Temple, Zion was ſituated. On the Weſt was part of Zion and Millo. On the South Jeruſalem, as it is diſtinguiſht from Zion. On the Eaſt the Eaſt-ſtreet, whoſe Gate is not the ſheep-gate, but the water-gate.

II. The Προβατικὴ πύλη, the ſheep-gate, according to Nehemiah's deſcription, ſhould be ſituated on the South-wall of the City not far from the corner that pointed South-Eaſt. So that a conſiderable part of Jeruſalem lay betwixt the Temple and this Gate.

We have elſwhere made it plain that Zion was ſituated on the North-part of the City, contrary to the miſtake of the Tables, which place it on the South. Now therefore conſider to how great an extent the wall muſt run before it can come to any part of Zion; to wit, to the ſtairs that go down from the City of David, v. 15. which were on the Weſt; and thence proceed to the Sepulchres of David, v. 16. till it come at length to the water-gate and Ophel toward the East, v. 26. and thence to the corner neer which is the sheep-gate, v. 31, 32. and this will plainly evince that the description and progress in Nehemiah is first of the South-wall, from the sheep-gate to the West-corner; then of the West-wall, and so to the Northern and the Eastern, which makes it evident that the sheep-gate is on the South-wall, a little distant from the corner which looks South-East, which could not but be a considerable distance from the Temple, because no small part of Jerusalem as it was distinguisht from Zion, laid between.

SECT. II.

The Fountain of Siloam, and its streams.

OUR enquiry into Bethesda, (if I be not greatly mistaken) must take its rise from the fountain of Siloam.

I. The proper and ancient name for the fountain of Siloam was Gihon, 1 King. I. 33. Bring ye him [Solomon] down to Gihon. Targum, to Siloam. Kimchi, Gihon is Siloam, and is call'd by a twofold name. The Tables that describe Jerusalem speak of a mount Gihon, by what warrant I cannot tell; if they had said the fountain Gihon it might have pleas'd better.

Kimchi in loc.

II. How that name Gihon should pass into Siloam, is difficult to say. The waters of it are mention'd Isa. VIII. 6. to signifie the reign and soveraignty of the house of David. So the Targum, & Sanhedr. "Rabb. Joseph saith, If there had been no Targum of this Scripture, we had not known the sense of it, which is this: Forsomuch as this people is weary of the house of David, whose reign hath been gentle, as the flowing of the waters of Siloam, which are gentle, &c. Therefore it was not in vain that David sent his Son Solomon to be anointed at Gihon or Siloam; for he might look upon those waters as some type or shadow by which the reign of his house should be decipher'd.

Targ. & Sanhed. fol. 94. 2.

III. The situation of it was behind the West-wall, not far from the corner that pointed toward the South-west. Ἔπειτα πρὸς Νότον κάμπτει τὴν Σιλωὰμ πηγὴν ὑπερῴκησεν, ἔνθεν τε πάλιν ἐκκλίνων πρὸς Ἀνατολὴν. The wall bent Southward above the fountain of Siloam, and then again inclin'd toward the East.

Joseph. de Excid.

The waters of this spring by different streams derived themselves into two Fish-pools, as seems hinted in 2 Chron. XXXII. 30. Hezekiah stopt the upper water-course of Gihon, and brought it streight down to the West-side of the City of David; where a M. S. of the Targum, ואוביל יתהון מי מפקנות מרי גיחון פקק ית instead of מרי we should write מן of the waters. במריבין: I suspect that for במרובין should be writ במרובין in pipes. He stopped up the upper waters of Gihon, and brought them in pipes. But to let this pass, that which I would observe is this, that there was a water-course from Gihon or Siloam, which was call'd the upper water-course, which flow'd into a Pool, call'd also the upper Pool, Isa. XXXVI. 2. and as it should seem, the old Pool, Isa. XXII. 11. By Josephus the Pool or Fish-pool of Solomon; for so he in the place before cited.

Ἔνθεν τε πάλιν ἐκκλίνων πρὸς Ἀνατολὴν ὅπῃ τῆ Σολομῶντος κολυμβήθρας. The wall again inclin'd Eastward, even to Solomon's Fish-pond, and going on to the place call'd Ophel, it came over against the Eastern Porch of the Temple. From whence we may gather that Solomon's Fish-pool was within, hard by the East-wall of the City, and on this side the place they call'd Ophel; which does so well agree with the situation of Bethesda within the sheep-gate, that it seems to me beyond all doubt or question, that Solomon's Pool, and the Pool of Bethesda was one and the same.

SECT. III.

The Pool שִׁלַּח Shelach, and the Pool שִׁלֹּחַ Shiloach.

BY another stream the waters of Siloam are deriv'd into another Pool which is call'd the lower Pool, Isa. XXII. 9. and the Kings Pool, Nehem. II. 14. neer the West-wall of Zion.

We have the mention of it also in Nehem. III. 15. ברכת השלח לגן המלך the Pool of Siloam by the Kings garden. Where we may observe that it is here written שִׁלַּח Shelah, different from שִׁלֹּחַ Shiloah, Isa. VIII. 6. by a difference hardly visible in Bibles not pointed, indeed sometimes overlookt by my self, and so as is evident by others. For שִׁלַּח is render'd in the very same sound with Shiloahh, in the Complutensian, Vulgar, English and French Bibles. And in St. Joh. IX. 7. where there is mention of the Pool Siloam, some Commentators refer you to that Text in Nehemiah.

The Greek Interpreters did indeed observe the difference, and thus render the words of Nehemiah, κολυμβήθρας τῆς κωδίων τῇ κατὰ τὸ βασιλέως. The Pool of skins by the Kings wool.

Wool. Nor doth the Italian over-look it, for that renders it thus: La Piſcina de Selac preſſe al Orto del Re: The fiſh-pond of Selac hard by the Garden of the King.

It is obſervable in the Greek Verſion, that whereas they render the word by τὴν κεφαλὴν τῦ βασιλέως, the King's Wool, or Hair; they may ſeem to have read גז a Fleece of Wool, for גן a Garden: and whereas they tranſlate ברכת שלח by κολυμβήθρα τῶν κωδίων· the Pool of Skins, the follow they ſignification of the word as it is frequently uſed amongſt the Talmudiſts.

Now therefore here ariſeth a queſtion, whether that Pool be the Pool of Siloam or no; which as yet hath hardly been queſtioned by any, and for ſome time not by my ſelf. But I am now apt to think, that it was ſo diſtinguiſhed betwixt the two Pools, that the lower Pool retaining its name of the Pool of Shelah, the upper Pool obtained that of Siloah. For,

I. How otherwiſe ſhould that diſtinction in the Greek Verſion ariſe, but that the Interpreters followed the common pronunciation of the word Shelahh, when they render it τῶν κωδίων, of Skins.

II. Thoſe words of St. John IX. 7. Ἐις τὴν κολυμβήθραν τῦ Σιλωὰμ, ὁ ἑρμηνεύεται Ἀπεσταλμένος, In the Pool of Siloam, which is by interpretation, Sent, ſeem to intimate that there were two Pools of a very near ſound, whereof one ſignified Ἀπεσταλμένος, Sent, the other not.

III. The Jeruſalem Talmudiſts ſeem to ſay that the upper Pool was called the Pool of Siloam, in theſe words: * He that is unclean by a dead body, doth not enter into the mount of the Temple. It is ſaid, that they appear only in the Court. Whence do you meaſure? From the wall or from the Houſes? It is Samuel's Tradition, משילוח from Siloam; now Siloam was in the midſt of the City. * chagiah, fol. 76. 1.

The queſtion here propounded is, whether he that is unclean by a dead body may be permitted to enter the Temple, and the ſtating of it comes to this, that enquiry be made, within what meaſure he is to be admitted, whether within the wall of the Temple, or at that diſtance where the Houſes next to the Temple end: eſpecially where the Houſes of Siloam end.

Now whereas they ſay שלוח היתה באמצע העיר that Siloam is in the midſt of the City, it muſt by no means be underſtood of the Fountain its ſelf, for that was plainly without the City; nor yet of the lower Pool Shelahh for that alſo was without the City, or ſcarce within it. There is therefore no third, unleſs that this upper Pool be called the Pool of Siloam, and that it give denomination to the adjacent part of the City, to wit, to the five Porches and the buildings about it: which, though they were not in the very centre of the City, yet they might properly enough be ſaid to be in the middle of it, becauſe they were ſituated a good way within the walls, ὁ πύργος ἐν τῷ Σιλωὰμ, Luk. XIII. 4. the Tower of Siloam was amongſt theſe buildings.

SECT. IV.

The Targumiſt on Eccleſ. II. 5. noted.

IT is an even lay, whether the Targumiſt on this place deal more cunningly, or more obſcurely. The paſſage is about the King's Gardens: and He, I planted me all trees of Spice דאיתיאו לותי טלני ומזיקי מן הנרקא which the Goblins and the Demons brought me out of India: and then goes on, ותחומיה מן שור קרתא דבירושלים על כיף מיא דשילוח and the bound of it was from the wall that is in Jeruſalem, by the bank of the waters of Siloam. Render על כיף juxta ripam, by the bank, for illuſtration's ſake; for ad ripam, to the bank (as the Latine Interpreter renders it) although it might ſignifie the ſame, yet it may alſo ſignifie ſomething elſe, and ſo become a difficulty not to be reſolved. Beſides it is to be obſerved, that it is על upon, or above, not עך unto.

The meaning of the Targumiſt ſeemeth to be this, that the King's Gardens were bounded in this manner. They extended from the deſcent of Zion untill they come over againſt Shelahh, or the lower Pool, even to the beginning of the wall of the City which is in Jeruſalem; which wall runs near to the bank of the waters of Siloam.

That paſſage in Nehem. III. 15. illuſtrates this: The Gate of the Fountain repaired Shallum---- and the wall of the Pool of Shelahh by the King's Gardens. The Gate of the Fountain, whether that was called ſo from thee Pool of Siloam, or otherwiſe, was at ſome diſtance from the King's Pool, Nehem. II. 14. And by the wall of the City that run betwixt the Gate and the Pool, there was Rivulets drawn from the Fountain into that Pool.

The words of the Targumiſt therefore, are to be ſo rendred, as that the King's Gardens may not be ſaid to extend themſelves to the bank of the waters of Siloam, but that the wall of Jeruſalem ran along by the bank of thoſe waters, and the Garden to the firſt part of

of that wall. So that he does not call the lower Pool, by the name of שלוח Siloah, but by the waters of Siloah he underſtands the ſtream that came from the Fountain, and fell into that Pool.

SECT. V.

The Fountain of Etam. The Water-gate.

THE Collector of the Hebrew Cippi, Grave-ſtones, hath this paſſage concerning the Fountain of Etam. "ברך בין חברון לירושלים עין עיטם וגו In the way betwixt Hebron and Jeruſalem, is the Fountain Etam, from whence the waters are conveighed by Pipes, into the great Pool at Jeruſalem. It is ſo tranſlated by the Learned Hottinger, who alſo himſelf adds, I ſuppoſe here is meant the Probatica, or the Pool by the Sheep-gate.

The Rabbins often and again tell us of an Aqueduct from the Fountain of Etam to Jeruſalem. But it may very well be doubted, whether that Fountain be in the way to Hebron, or whether thoſe waters run into the Pool by the Sheep-gate. For,

I. If the Fountain of Etam be the ſame with the waters of Neptoah mentioned, Joſ. XV. 9. Which the Gloſs ſuppoſeth *, (where it is treating about the Fountain of Etam) then it lieth quite in another quarter from Hebron, for Hebron lies on the South, and Neptoah on the Weſt.

* Jome, fol. 31. 1.

II. The waters ſtreaming from the Fountain Etam, were not conveighed into the City, but into the Temple. Which might be abundantly made out from the Talmudiſts, if there were any need for it. And probably Ariſteas hath reſpect to this Aqueduct. "Υδατος ἢ ἀνεκλειπτός ἔστι σύσεως, &c. There is a confluence of water that never fails (ſpeaking of the Temple) as if there were a great ſpring within naturally flowing, and for the ſpace of five furlongs (as appeared every where about the Temple) there were certain receptacles made, under the Earth, by a wondrous and unſpeakable art. And a little after: They led me out of the City above four furlongs, where one bad me lean down my head at a certain place and liſten at the noiſe that the flow of waters there made, &c.

In a word, to any one that is converſant in the Talmudick Authors, nothing can be more plain, than that the Aqueduct from the Fountain of Etam was into the Temple and not into the City: and it is plain enough in Holy Writ, that the Aqueduct into the Sheep-Pool, was from the Fountain of Siloam: which alſo from that ſpring from whence it was derived, is called the Pool of Siloam; and from him that firſt made it, the Pool of Solomon, and from the miraculous medicinal vertue in it, the Pool of Bethſeda.

As to the Water-gate, we find it mentioned Nehem. III. 26. ſituated on the Eaſt-wall of the City; called the Water-gate, becauſe through that, the waters flowed out of the Temple, and perhaps thoſe alſo out of Bethesda. For, whereas the waters ran inceſſantly out of Etam into the Temple, and thoſe that were more than needed, flowed out of the Temple, they all fell down into the Valley that lay between the Temple and Jeruſalem, and emptied themſelves by that Gate, which bore the name of the Water-gate upon that account. And it is probable, that the Pool of Bethesda which alſo had its conſtant ſupply by the Aqueduct from the ſpring of Siloam, did alſo continually empty it ſelf along the deſcent of the Hill Acra, through the ſame Gate, and ſo into the Brook Kidron.

SECT. I.

Some obscure hints of Huldah's, and the Priest's Gate.

FROM Solomon's Pool, proceed we to Solomon's Porch; which we have also recorded Acts V. 12. possibly it is the Στοὰ Βασιλικὴ, the King's Gate; both the title, and the magnificence of it make it probable. For, as Josephus tells us, it was Ἔργον ἀξιοαφηγητοτάτων ὑφ' ἡλίῳ · a One of the most memorable works under the sun. a Antiqu. lib. 15. cap. 14.

That King's Porch was situated on the South side of the Temple, having under it on the wall שני שערי חולדה the two Gates of Huldah b. At which Gates I rather admire, than believe or understand what I meet with concerning them, c Behold it stands behind our wall, that is behind the West wall of the Temple; because the Holy Blessed one hath sworn that it shall never be destroyed. ושער הכהן ושער חולדה לא חרבו לעולם The Priests Gate also, and Huldah's Gate were never to be destroyed till God shall renew them. b Middoth, cap. 1. c In Schir. Rabba, fol. 16. 4.

What Gate that of the Priest's should be, I am absolutely ignorant, unless it should be that over which was לשכת בולוטיא the Conclave of the βελευτῶν, the Councellors, where was the Bench, and the Consistory of the Priests.

But be it this or be it that, how do these and the rest agree with what Josephus relateth?

d Cæsar commanded that the whole City and Temple should be destroyed, saving only those Towers which were above the rest, viz. Phasaelus the Hippic, and Mariamne, and the West wall. The wall, that it might be for the Garrison Souldiers, the Towers, as a testimony how large and how fortified a City the Roman valour had subdued. Τὸν δὲ ἄλλον ἅπαντα τῆς πόλεως περίβολον ὅτως ἐξωμάλισαν οἱ κατασκάπτοντες, ὡς μηδὲ πώποτ' οἰκηθῆναι πίστιν ἄν ἔτι παράσχειν τοῖς παροῦσι · But as to all the rest of the City and its whole compass, they so defaced and demolished it, that posterity, or strangers will hardly believe there was ever any inhabited City there. Which all agrees well enough with what we frequently meet with in the Jewish Writers, that Turnus Rufus drew a Plough over the the City and Temple. He is called in Josephus, Terentius Rufus, e Ἄρχων τῆς τραπέζης. d De Bell. lib. 7. cap. 1. e Ἀντιφ. lib. 7. cap. 1.

SECT. II.

Solomon's Porch. Which it was, and where.

THrough the Gate of Huldah you enter into the Court of the Gentiles, and that under the Στοὰ Βασιλικὴ, the King's Gallery, which from the name its self, and gallantness of the structure might seem worthy of such a founder as Solomon. But this is not the Porch, or Gallery which we seek for; nor had it the name of Royal from King Solomon, but from King Herod.

Josephus, in this enquiry of ours, will lead us elsewhere; who thus tells us f, Ἤδη δὲ τότε καὶ τὸ ἱερὸν τετέλεστο, At this time was the Temple finished; [i. e. under Gessius Florus the Procurator of Judea about the eleventh or twelvth year of Nero] the people therefore seeing the workmen were at a leisure [the work of the Temple being now wholly finished] being in number more than eighteen thousand, importune the King [Agrippa] τὴν Ἀνατολικὴν στοὰν ἀνεγεῖραι, that he would repair the Eastern Porch. Here are some things not unworthy our observation; partly that the Temple its self was not finished till this time; and then that the Eastern Porch was neither then finished, nor indeed was there any at all; for Agrippa considering both how great a summ of money, and how long a space of time would be requisite for so great a work, rejected their suit. Herod, as it should seem from f Ἀρχαιολ. lib. 20 cap. 8.

from Josephus, finished the Temple, and the Pronaon, the Porch before it, and the στοὰν Βασιλικὴν, the Royal Gallery. But what he finished further, about the Courts, and Cloister Walks, it does not appear. It is manifest indeed, that there was a great deal left unperfected by him, when the whole was not finished, till the very latter end of Nero's Reign, and scarcely before that fatal War in which the Temple was burnt and buried in its own ruines; which observation will be of use, when we come to Joh. II. 20. Forty and six years was this Temple a building.

Josephus proceeds, as to the Eastern Gallery: Ἦν ἡ μὲν στοὰ τοῦ μὲν ἐξωθεν ἱεροῦ· Now that was a Gallery of the outward Temple, overlooking a deep Valley, supported by walls of four hundred Cubits, made of great square stone very white: The length of each Stone was twenty Cubits, and the bredth six. Ἔργον Σολομῶνος τοῦ Βασιλέως πρώτου δειμαμένου τὸ σύμπαν· The work of King Solomon who first founded the whole Temple. There needs no Commentary upon these words; the Ἀνατολικὴ στοὰ, the East Gallery was first ἔργον Σολομῶνος, Solomons Work: Which plainly points which and where was Solomon's Porch; namely, upon the outward wall of the Temple toward the East, as the Royal Gallery was upon the South wall.

SECT. III.

The Gate of Susan. The Assembly of the twenty three there. The Tabernæ, or shops where things were sold for the Temple.

THere was but one Gate to this East Wall, and that was called שער שושן the Gate of Susan. [g] עליו שושן הבירה צורה Because upon that gate was engraven the figure of Susan the Metropolis of Persia.

[g] Middoth. cap. 1 hal. 3.

It is no wonder if they cherished the memory of Susan and the Persian Empire; because it was under that Empire that the Temple was built, nor had they indeed ever received much damage thence: but it is something strange that that Sculpture should remain after so long a time that that Kingdom had been abolished, and after them first the Greeks, then the Romans had obtained the Universal Monarchy.

[h] Upon this Gate the Priest looked, when he burnt the red Heifer. For, for slaying the Heifer upon the Mount of Olives directly before the Temple, when he sprinkled the blood, he looked toward the Holy of Holies. [i] The Gate of Susan therefore was not of height equal with the others, but built something lower, that it might not hinder his prospect. [k]

[i] Parah. cap. 3. hal. 9.

[k] Midd. cap. 2. hal. 4.

Upon this Gate was the Assembly of the twenty three held. [l] There were three Assemblies, one upon the Gate of the Mountain of the Temple. [That is upon the Gate Susan.] Another, upon the Gate of the Court: [That is upon the Gate of Nicanor.] A third, in the Room Gazith.

Going into the Court by the Gate Susan, both on the right hand and on the left, there was a Portico, upheld by a double row of Pillars, that made a double Piazza? And either within or about that Portico were the חנויות Tabernæ, or Shops, where Salt, and Oyl, and Frankincense, with other necessary materials for the Altar were sold; but by what right, upon such sacred ground, let the buyer, or the seller, or both look to that.

[m] The great Sanhedrim removed from the Room Gazith, לחנויות to the Shops, and from the Shops into Jerusalem. Not that the Sanhedrim could sit in the Shops where such things were sold, but the lower part of that Court was all called by the common name of the Tabernæ, or Shops.

SECT. IV.

Short hints of the condition of the second Temple.

THE Jews upon their return from Babylon, at first made use of an Altar, without a Temple, till the Temple was finished under Darius the second. And then they made use of the Temple without the Ark, a Priesthood without the Urim and Thummim, and Sacrifices without fire from Heaven. In some of these things they were necessitated by present circumstances, in other things they were directed by the Prophets that flourished at that time.

Under the Persian Empire they went on quietly with the Temple, little or nothing molested or incommoded by them, unless in that affair under Bagos mentioned by Josephus [n].

[n] Antiqu. lib. 11. cap. 7.

But under the Greeks happened the calamity of the Temple and Nation; and all those dreadful things which are spoken concerning Gog, by Ezekiel the Prophet, were fulfilled in the Tyranny of this Empire. For Gog in that Prophet, was no other than the Grecian cian Empire, warring againſt the People, and Sanctuary, and true worſhip of God. It was a long time that the Jewiſh Nation ſuffered very hard things from that Kingdom; the relation of which we have, both in Joſephus and the Books of the Maccabees. The chief Actor in thoſe Tragedies was Antiochus Epiphanes, the bloodieſt enemy that the People and Religion of the Jews ever had. Who, beſides other horrid things he acted againſt their Law and Religion, he prophained the Temple and the Altar, and made the daily Sacrifice to ceaſe for a thouſand and three hundred days, Dan. VIII. 14. or one thouſand two hundred and ninety days, Chap. XII. 11. a round number for a time, and times, and half a time, Chap. VII. 25. & XII. 7. that is, three years and a half.

Of the inſolencies of the Greeks againſt the Temple, we read in Middoth. o In the railed place [that divided the Chel from the Court of the Gentiles] יג' פראות היו שפרצו מלכי יון there were thirteen breaches, which the Kings of Greece made upon it, &c. And that of the impudent Woman, p Mary the Daughter of Bilgah apoſtatized, and married a certain Greek Souldier. She came, and ſtrook upon the top of the Altar, crying out לוקוס לוקוס O Wolf, Wolf! thou that devoureſt the wealth of Iſrael, and yet in the time of her extremity canſt not help her. The ſame things are told of Titus. q

q In Avoth. R. Nathan. cap. 1.

But the heavieſt thing of all was, when Antiochus prophaned the Temple and the Altar, nor would allow any Sacrifices to be offered there but Heatheniſh and Idolatrous. Of which Perſecution conſult the 1 Mac. I. and Joſeph. r Indeed, this waſte and prophanation of Sacred things laſting for three years and an half, ſo ſtuck in the ſtomachs of the Jews, that they retained that very number as famous and remarkable, inſomuch that they often make uſe of it, when they would expreſs any thing very ſad and afflictive.

r Antiq. lib. 12. cap. 7, &c.

ſ There came one from Athens to Jeruſalem and ſtayed there three years and an half, to have learnt the language of wiſdom but could not learn it. t Veſpaſian beſeiged Jeruſalem for three years and an half; and with him were the Princes of Arabia, Africa, Alexandria, and Paleſtine, &c. u Three years and an half did Hadrian Beſeige Bittar, x The judgment of the Generation of the Deluge was twelve months: The judgment of the Ægyptians twelve months: The judgment of Job, was twelve months: The judgment of Gog and Magog was twelve months: The judgment of the wicked in Hell, twelve months. But the judgment of Nebuchadnezzer was three years and an half: and the judgment of Veſpaſian three years and an half. y Nebuchadnezzar ſtayed in Daphne of Antioch, and ſent Nebuzaradan to deſtroy Jeruſalem. He continued there, for three years and an half.

u Ibid. f. 71. 1.
y Ibid. f. 79. 2.

There are many other paſſages of that kind, wherein they do not ſo much deſign to point out a determinate ſpace of time, as to allude to that miſerable ſtate of affairs they were in, under Antiochus. And perhaps it had been much more for the reputation of the Chriſtian Commentators upon the Book of the Revelations, if they had looked upon that number, and the forty and two months, and the thouſand two hundred and ſixty days as ſpoken alluſively, and not applied it to any preciſe or determinate time.

By the way, whiles we are ſpeaking of the Perſecution under the Greeks, we cannot but call to mind the ſtory in the ſecond Book of Maccab. VII. of the Mother and her ſeven Sons that underwent ſo cruel a Martyrdom: becauſe we meet with one very like it, if not the ſame, only the name changed.

z We are killed all the day long, we are accounted as ſheep for the ſlaughter, Pſal. XLIV. Rab. Judah ſaith, this may be underſtood of the Woman and her ſeven Sons. אתיהן לקמ לקמיה דקיסר They brought forth the firſt before Ceſar, and they ſaid unto him, worſhip Idols. He anſwered and ſaid to them, it is written in our Law, I am the Lord thy God. Then they carried him out and ſlew him. They brought the ſecond before Cæſar, &c. Which things are more largely related in Echah Rabbathi a, where the very name of the Woman is expreſſed. מרים בת נחתום שנשבית עם שבעה בניה Mary the Daughter of Nachton, who was taken Captive with her ſeven Sons. Ceſar took them and ſhut them up within ſeven grates. He brought forth the firſt and commanded, ſaying, worſhip Idols, &c.

a Fol. 67. 4. & 68. 1.

The Story ſeems wholly the ſame, only the names of Antiochus and Ceſar changed, of which the Reader having conſulted both, may give his own judgment. And becauſe we are now fallen into a comparing of the ſtory in the Maccabees, with the Talmudiſts, let us compare one more in Joſephus with one in the ſame Authors.

Joſephus tells us that he foretold it to Veſpaſian, that he ſhould be Emperour b. Veſpaſian commanded that Joſephus ſhould be kept with all the diligence imaginable, that he might be conveighed ſafely to Nero; which when Joſephus underſtood, he requeſted that he might be permited to impart ſomething of moment to Veſpaſian himſelf alone. Veſpaſian having commanded all out of the Room, except Titus and two other of his friends, Joſephus accoſts him thus, Νέρωνί με πέμπεις; Are you ſending me to Nero?---- Thou thy ſelf, O Veſpaſian, ſhalt be Ceſar and Emperor, thou and this thy Son, &c.

b De Bell. Jud. lib. 3. cap. 20.

The Talmudiſts attribute ſuch a Prediction to Rabban Jochanan ben Zaccai, in the Tracts before quoted, viz. c Rabban Johanan ben Zaccai was carried out in a Coffin, as one that is dead, out of Jeruſalem. He went to Veſpaſian's Army, and ſaid, where is your King?

c Gittin fol. 55. 1. & Echah Rabbathi, fol. 54. 2.

King? They went and told Vespasian, there is a certain Jew desireth admission to you. Let him come in, saith he. When he came in, he said, שלמא עלך מלכא שלמא עלך מלכא Live O King, Live O King. [So in Gittin, but in Midras ביבא מארי אפלטוך Live my Lord the Emperour.] Saith Vespasian, you salute me as if I were King, but I am not so; and the King will hear this, and judge such an one to death. To whom he, although you are not King yet, you shall be so, דליית הרין ביתא חריב אלא ער ידי מלך for this Temple must not be destroyed but by a King's hand, as it is written, Lebanon shall fall by a mighty one, Isai. X. 34.

To which of these two, or whether indeed to both, the glory of this Prediction ought to be attributed, I leave it to the Reader to judge; returning to the times of the Greeks.

The Army and Forces of the Enemy, being defeated under the conduct of Judah the Maccabite, the people begin to apply themselves to the care, and the restauration of the Temple, and the Holy things. The Story of which we meet with 1 Maccab. IV. 43, &c. and in Josephus d, whose words are worth our transcribing, Τὸν Ναὸν Ἰούδας ἔρημον εὑρὲ, καὶ κατατεπετασμένας τὰς πύλας, καὶ φυλὰ διὰ τὴ ἐρημίαν αὐτόματα εν τῷ ἱερῷ βεβλαστηκότα· He found the Temple desolated, the Gates burnt; and the grass through the mere solitude of the place springing up there of its own accord: Therefore he and his followers wept, being astonished at the sight.

d Antiqu. lib. 12. cap. 11.

They therefore apply themselves to the purging of the Temple, making up the breaches, and as Middoth in the place above speaks, Those thirteen breaches which the Grecians had made חצרו וגדרום וגורו כנגדן יג׳ התחוינות they repaired them; and, according to the number of those breaches, they instituted thirteen adorations.

The Altar, because it had been prophaned by Gentile Sacrifices they pull it wholly down, and lay up the Stones in a certain Chamber near the Court.

e Middoth, cap. 1. hal. 6.

e Toward the North-East, there was a certain Chamber where the Sons of the Asmoneans laid up the Stones of that Altar which the Grecian Kings had prophaned; and that (as the Book of the Maccabees hath it) Μεχρὶ τοῦ προφητεῦσαι, τοῦ ὑποδεῖξαι περὶ αὐτῶν· Till there might come a Prophet that should direct them what to do with them.

Nor did it seem without reason; for, whereas those Stones had once been consecrated, they would by no means put them to any common use; and since they had been prophaned, they durst not put them to any holy use.

The rest of the Temple, they restored, purged, repaired, as may be seen in the places above quoted, and on the five and twentieth of the month Cisleu they celebrated the Feast of the Dedication, and established it for an Anniversary Solemnity to be kept eight days together. Of the Rites of that Feast, I shall say more in its proper place: and for the sake of it I have been the larger in these things.

BETHEL and Jeshanah, and עפרין Ephraim, are mentioned together, 2 Chron. XIII. 19. and Bethel and Ephraim in Josephus: f Vespasian subdued two Toparchies or Lordships, the Gophnitick and Acrabatene, Μεθ' ἃς Βηθηλὰ τε καὶ Ἐφραὶμ πολίχνια· After which he took Bethel and Ephraim, two little Cities.

f De Excid. lib. 4. cap. 33.

In the Targumist it is written עפרון with a Vau, and is thus pointed עָפְרוֹן and rendered by the Greek Interpretes, Ἐφρὼν, Ephron. But the Massoreth tells us it must be read by Jod, עפרין Ephrain. Nor do I question but that it is the same with Josephus his Ephraim, and the עפרים Ephraim of the Talmudists g, of which we have discoursed in our Chorographical Century, Chap. 53.

g In Menacoth, cap. 9.

It is probable, it was a City in the Land of Benjamin, as also was Bethel, which is mentioned at the same time with it. Now Bethel was the utmost border of the Tribe of Benjamin, Benjamin, as it lay toward the Tribe of Ephraim. h But where this Ephraim ſhould lye, it is not ſo plain. Only this our Evangeliſt ſpeaks of it, that it was near the Wilderneſs, that is (as it ſhould ſeem) near the Wilderneſs of Judea, in the way from Jeruſalem to Jericho.

בית מרון Beth Maron, and מרוני A Maronite.

i THere goes a ſtory of a Brother and a Siſter; he was in Guſh Halab גוש חלב, ſhe, in בית מרון Beth Maron. There happened a fire in his Houſe that was in Guſh Halab; his Siſter comes from Beth Maron, and embraced and kiſſed him.

Now גוש חלב Guſh Halab was in the Tribe of Aſer, as appears in Menacoth k: where there is a ſtory of a moſt pretious Oyl bought in Guſh Halab in the Tribe of Aſer, ſuch as could not be bought in any other place.

k Fol. 85. 2.

And ſo perhaps that may be underſtood of בית מרון Beth Maron, being ſo near to Guſh Halab, which we meet with in Jeruſalem Kidduſhin, l מעשה במרוני אחד שהיה דר בירושלם There goes a Story of a certain Maronite [for ſo let us render it] *who lodged in Jeruſalem. l Fol. 6. 3. & Bava Bathra, fol. 17. 1.

מרוני may not unfitly be rendred a Maronite, though not in the ſame ſenſe, wherein it is now commonly underſtood; but as ſignifying one coming from the Town Maron, or Beth Maron. Render it Maronenſian, and then there is no difficulty.

And to this perhaps may referr that paſſage in Roſh haſhanah m. In the beginning of the year כל באי עולם עוברין לפנינו כבני מרון *All that come into the world paſs before God, as the Sons of Maron. If the diſtance of the other places might be determined by the diſtance of Suſitha from Tiberias and Lydda from Ono; it will be the ſpace of three miles or there abouts; for ſo far were they from one another, as I have ſhewn in another place. But as to the places themſelves, where ſhall we find them? Where are Chalamiſh and Naveh? Where are Caſtara and Chippar? &c. Let us not therefore give our ſelves a needleſs trouble of ſearching what there is no hope of finding out, taking notice only thus far, how miſerably the face of things was changed when there was cauſe for this complaint! For before, Jericho had flouriſhed with great numbers of Jews, there being twelve thouſand of the Courſes of the Prieſts that ſtood in continual readineſs every day: but now it was inhabited wholly by its Enemies: So was it with Lydda once, when it was the moſt famed School of the Rabbins, but now, an Enemy City. Χαφεναθὰ, Chaphenatha, 1 Maccab. XII. 37.

IN the days of Jonathan the Asmonean, Συνήχθησαν τῶ οἰκοδομεῖν τ̀ πόλιν, κ̀ ἦλθε τῶ τείχους τῦ χειμαρρ̂ς τῶ ἀπ̀ ἀπηλιώτ, κ̀ ἐπεσκεύασαν τὸ καλούμενον χαφεναθά· They came together to build the City, and he approached to the wall of the Brook, which is on the East, and they repaired that which was called Chaphenatha.

Where and what is this Χαφεναθὰ, Chaphenatha? I am apt to think, it might be some part of the out skirts of the City toward the East; called so, much upon the same reason, that Bethphage was, which was the outmost part of the City toward the East. For that was so called, viz. a place of green Figgs, from the Figg-trees that grew near it, in the Mount of Olives: So here Χαφεναθὰ, Chaphenatha, some part of that out-most Coast toward the East and Mount of Olives, so called from the Dates growing there.

For בפנית Chephanioth is frequently used amongst the Talmudists for the Dates of Palm-trees that never come to their full maturity. מין תמרים רעים A sort of ill Palm-trees, as the Glos in Beracoth ſ, the fruit of the Palm that never ripens. So Aruch in כפנת Caphnith. By a signification near akin to היני Hene and אהיני Ahene, which denotes the unripe Dates of Palms; from whence, I suppose, Bethany in the Mount of Olives is derived. So that some out-most part of the City and Wall toward Mount Olivet, was called Bethphage from the Figgs that grew there, and another part of it Chaphenatha, from the Dates.

MOSES hath it thus, מהך חהר תחאו לבא חמת From Mount Hor, Ye shall point out the border, unto the entrance of Hamath, and the goings forth of the border shall be to Zedad.

But the Targumist thus, משוורם אומנוס From the Mount Umanus you shall point out your border to the entrance טבריא of Tiberias, and the goings out of that border מן תרין צטרוי tending from the two sides לכרכור דבר ועמה to Codcor bar Zaamah ולכרכוי דבר סיניגורא and to Codcor bar Sinegoyra, ודיווקנוס ותרנגולא and Divachenus and Tarnegola, unto Cesarea, by which thou entereſt into Abela of the Cilicians.

Every word almost in this place must be considered, as indeed almost every word of it is obscure.

I. טוורום Tauros, This indeed is not so obscure, but that every one knows Mount Taurus, so noted by Geographers and Historians derived its name Ἐμφατικοτέρως, more emphatically thence, since טור Taur, both in the Chaldee and Syriack signifies a Mountain.

II. אומנוס Umanus, Neither is this so very obscure, but that all, who have turned over the Jewish Writings, do acknowledge it to be the Mountain אמנה Amana, and who have turned over other Books Amanus. But in the mean time, I doubt they as well as my self cannot tell why the same Targumist should call Mount Hor, where Aaron dyed, by the same name of טוורום אומנוס Taurus Umanus, Numb. XX.

III. מעלך טבריא To the entrance of Tiberias.] It is a strange thing the Targumist should be no better read in Chorography, than to mistake the reading of this word חמת in this place. For it is plain he read חמת Chammoth, or the warm Baths of Tiberias, when it is really Hamath, or Antioch. He is a blind Geographer that brings down the borders of the Land of Israel to Tiberias, unless he mean something beyond our capacity to apprehend.

IV. מן תרין צטרוי from the two sides.] It is plain here also that he took צדדה Zedad appellatively for צד a side.

V. לכרכור דבר ועמה To Codcor bar Zaamah.] If he doth not blunder, we do. We only take notice that ועמה Zaamah, and סניגורא Sinegora, do signifie indignation, and a demurr, perhaps in the same sense that סניגור and קטיגור are often used in the Rabbinical Writers, for accuser and advocate. But what it should signifie in him, he must shew him-an Oedipus, or some body else.

VI. דיווקנוס Divachenus.] I suspect this to be Greek, viz. διαχένω. By which is intimated some back of a Mountain either lifting it self up, or stretching it self out. And this I suspect the more by the Jerusalem Version upon vers. 15.

תחומא לדיוקינום טור תלגא דקיסרין which I would thus render, The border ſhall be to the διαυχένιον of the ſnowy Mountain of Ceſarea. Where, by Ceſarea is to be underſtood Ceſarea Philippi, where indeed the border of the North part of the Land did not end, but extended higher and beyond, לתרנגולא עילאה די למעלה מן קיסרין even to upper Tarnegola, which is above Ceſarea: i. e. πρὸς Αὐχένα To the neck of the Mount Antilibanus.

The whiteneſs of Libanus gave it its name, both of Libanus and the Mountain of Snow, becauſe its whiteneſs was occaſioned by the Snows upon it. [But by what derivation Cydnus ſhould in the Syrian Language denote whiteneſs, I confeſs it is beyond my skill in that Tongue to know; which yet Solinus [t] affirms it doth. Whatever is white, ſaith he, the Syrians in their language call Cydnus, whence the name given to the River Cydnus. And it is worthy noting that Lebanon in the Hebrew Text is often by the Greek Interpreters rendred Ἀντιλίβανος, Antilibanus. So Deut. XI. 24. Joſ. I. 4, &c. and ſometimes by the Talmudiſts, באלא Bala.

[u] Cholin. fol. 80. 1.

Let me conclude the whole with a conjecture ſomething extravagant, which the mention of Lebanon gives riſe to. I ſuſpect our Europe did firſt derive its name from cold; as that Mountain did, from the Snows. The Phenicians ſailing to Hercules his Pillars (of which ſee the Learned Bochart) had on their left hand the Land of חם Cham, heat or burning, i. e. Africa. On the right hand the Land of חורף Choreph, winter or cold [eſpecially compared with the other's heat] from which word Choreph probably our word Europe takes its original. That very Learned Man derives it otherwhere; and let him enjoy his ſenſe, whiles I beg leave to enjoy my conjecture.

CHAP. I.

VERS. I.

Ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ λόγος. In the beginning was the word.

ΕΝ ἀρχῇ, In the beginning, in the ſame ſenſe with בראשית Bereſhith, In the beginning, in the Hiſtory of the Creation, Gen. I. 1. For the Evangeliſt propoſeth this to himſelf, viz. to ſhew how that by the Word by which the Creation was perfected, the Redemption was perfected alſo. That the ſecond perſon in the Holy Trinity in the fulneſs of time became our Redeemer, as in the beginning of time he had been our Maker. Compare this with ver. 14.

Ver. 1.	Ver. 14.
Ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ λόγος.	Ὁ λόγος σὰρξ ἐγένετο.
In the beginning was the word,	The word was made fleſh.
Ἦν πρὸς τὸν Θεόν.	Ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν.
Was with God.	Dwelt among us.
Θεὸς ἦν ὁ λόγος.	Ἐγένετο σάρξ, καὶ ἐθεασάμεθα, &c.
The word was God.	Was made fleſh, and we beheld, &c.

Ἦν ὁ λόγος, was the word] There is no great neceſſity for us to make any very curious enquiry, whence our Evangeliſt ſhould borrow this title, when in the Hiſtory of the Creation we find it ſo often repeated, ויאמר אלהים And God ſaid. It is obſerv'd almoſt by all that have of late undertaken a Commentary upon this Evangeliſt, that "ימרא ד", the word of the Lord, doth very frequently occur amongſt the Targumiſts, which may ſomething enlighten the matter now before us: a And Moſes brought the people out of the Camp a Exod. xix. 17.

Camp לקרמות מימרא דיי׳ to meet the word of the Lord. ונסיב מימרא דיי׳ And the word of the Lord accepted the face of Job b. מימרא דיי׳ ידהך להון And the word of the Lord shall laugh them to scorn c. They believed בשום מימריה in the name of his word d. וחס מימרי And my word spared them e. To add no more, Gen. XXVI. 3. Instead of, I will be with thee, the Targum hath it ויהי מימרי בסעדך and my word shall be thine help. So Gen. XXXIX. 2. And the Lord was with Joseph. Targ. ותוה מימרא דיי׳ בסעדיה דיוסף and the word of the Lord was Joseph's helper. And so all along that kind of phrase is most familiar amongst them.

b Job XLII. 9.
c Psal. II. 4.
d Psal. CVI. 12.
e Ezek. XX. 17.

Though this must be also confest that the word מימרא doth sometimes signifie nothing else but I, Thou, He, and is frequently apply'd to men too. So Job VII. 8. Thine eyes are upon me. Targ. עינך במימרי Again, Job XXVII. 3. My breath is in me. נשמתי במימרי Targ. II Chron. XVI. 3. There is a league between me and thee. Targ. קיימא בין מימרי ובין מימרך Chap. XXIII. 16. He made a Covenant between him, and between all the people, and between the King. Targ. קיים בין מימריה ובין כל עמא ובין מימרא דמלכא I observe that in Zach. VII. 12. the Targumist renders ברוחו by his spirit, במימריה by his word, if at least that may in strictness be so render'd, for by what hath been newly alledg'd, it seems that יי׳ במימריה may be translated, the Lord by himself, or the Lord himself. I observe further, that the Greek Interpreters having mistaken the vowels of the word דבר in Habbak. III. 2. have render'd it πρὸ προσώπου αὐτοῦ πορεύσεται λόγος, before his face shall go a word; when it should have been, πρὸ προσώπου αὐτοῦ πορεύσεται λοιμός, for the meaning of the Prophet there is, before his face went the Pestilence.

VERS. IV.

Ἐν αὐτῷ ζωὴ ἦν. In him was life.

THE Evangelist proceeds from the Creation by the ὁ Λόγος, the Word, to the redemption of the world by the same word. He had declar'd how this word had given to all creatures their first being. v. 3. All things were made by him. And he now sheweth how he restor'd life to man when he lay dead in trespasses and sins. Adam call'd his wives name Hevah, Life, Gen. III. 20. The Greek reads, Καὶ ἐκάλεσεν Ἀδὰμ τὸ ὄνομα τῆς γυναικὸς, ζωή. Adam called his wifes name, life. He call'd her life, who had brought in death; because he had now tasted a better life in the promise of the womans seed. To which it is very probable our Evangelist had some reference in this place.

Καὶ ἡ ζωὴ ἦν τὸ φῶς τῶν ἀνθρώπων. And the life was the light of men.

Life through Christ was light arising in the darkness of mans fall and sin; a light by which all believers were to walk. St. John seems in this clause to oppose the life and light exhibited in the Gospel, to that life and light which the Jews boasted of in their Law. They expected life from the works of the Law, and they knew no greater light than that of the Law, which therefore they extoll with infinite boasts and praises which they give it. Take one instance for all: a God said, let there be light. R. Simeon saith, light is written there five times, according to the five parts of the Law, [i.e. the Pentateuch] and God said, let there be light, according to the Book of Genesis, wherein God busying himself made the world. And there was light: according to the Book of Exodus, wherein the Israelites came out of darkness into light. And God saw the light that it was good: according to the Book of Leviticus, which is filled with rites and ceremonies. And God divided betwixt the light and the darkness; according to the Book of Numbers, which divided betwixt those that went out of Egypt, and those that enter'd into the land. And God called the light, day; according to the Book of Deuteronomy, which is replenished with manifold traditions. A Gloss this is upon light, full of darkness indeed!

a Bereshith rabba, Sect. 3.

VERS. V.

Καὶ τὸ φῶς ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ φαίνει. And the light shineth in darkness.

THIS light of promise and life by Christ, shined in the darkness of all the cloudy types and shadows under the Law, and obscurity of the Prophets. And those dark things comprehended it not, i.e. did not so cloud and suppress it, but it would break out; nor yet so comprehended it, but that there was an absolute necessity there should a greater light appear. I do so much the rather incline to such a Paraphrase upon this place, because I observe the Evangelist here treateth of the ways and means by which Christ made himself known to the world, before his great manifestation in the flesh. First, in the promise of life, ver. 4. Next, by Types and Prophecies; and lastly by John Baptist.

VERS.

VERS. IX.

Ὁ φωτίζει πάντα ἄνθρωπον ἐρχόμενον εἰς τὸν κόσμον. Which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

כל באי עולם i. e. All the men that are in the world g. Doth not the Sun riſe על כל באי עולם upon all the world. כל באי עולם All that come into the world are not able to make one fly h. In the beginning of the year כל באי עולם All that come into the world preſent themſelves before the Lord i. There are numberleſs examples of this kind. The ſenſe of the place is, that Chriſt ſhining forth in the light of the Goſpel, is a light that lightens all the world; the light of the Law ſhone only upon the Jews; but this light ſpreads wider, even over the face of the whole earth.

VERS. XII.

Ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς ἐξουσίαν. He gave them power.

Ἐξουσίαν αὐτοῖς, He empower'd them. So Eccl. V. 19. & VI. 2. He gave them the privi-ledg, the liberty, the dignity of being call'd and becoming the Sons of God. Iſrael was once the Son and the firſt-born, Exod. IV. 22. but now the adoption of Sons to God was open and free to all Nations whatever.

VERS. XIII.

Οἱ οὐκ ἐξ αἱμάτων. Which were born not of blood.

IT may be a queſtion here, whether the Evangeliſt in this place oppoſeth regeneration to natural generation, or only to thoſe ways by which the Jews fancy'd men were made the Sons of God. Expoſitors treat largely of the former, let us a little conſider the latter.

I. Οὐκ ἐξ αἱμάτων, not of bloods. Obſerve the Plural number. Our Rabbins ſay, that all Iſrael had thrown off Circumciſion in Egypt------ but at length they were circumciſed, ונתערב דם הפסח בדם המילה and the blood of the Paſſover was mingled with the blood of the circumciſed, and God accepted every one of them, and kiſſed them. I ſaid בדמיך חיי while thou wert in thy bloods live: i.e. In the twofold blood, that of the Paſſover, and that of the Circumciſion. The Iſraelites were brought into Covenant by three things, by Circumciſion, by Waſhing, and by offering of Sacrifices.-------In the ſame manner an heathen if he would be admitted into Covenant, he muſt of neceſſity be circumciſed, baptiſed, and offer ſacrifice m. We ſee how ἐξ αἱμάτων, of bloods of the Paſſover and Circumciſion, they ſay the Iſraelites were recover'd from their degeneracy; and how ἐξ αἱμάτων of the bloods of Circumciſion and Sacrifices (with the addition only of waſhing) they ſuppos'd the Gentiles might become the Sons of God, being by their Proſelytiſm made Iſraelites, and the children of the Covenant; for they knew of no other adoption or Sonſhip.

k Shemoth rabba, Sect. 19.
m Maimon. Iſſurei biah, cap. 13.

II. Ἐκ θελήματος σαρκὸς, of the will of the fleſh. In the ſame ſenſe wherein the Patriarchs and other Jews were ambitious by many wives to multiply children to themſelves, as being of the ſeed of Iſrael, and children of the Covenant.

III. Ἐκ θελήματος ἀνδρὸς, of the will of man, in that ſenſe wherein they coveted ſo many proſelytes, to admit them into the Religion of the Jews, and ſo into Covenant and Sonſhip with God.

Theſe were the ways by which the Jews thought any became the Sons of God, that is, by being made Iſraelites. But it is far otherwiſe in the adoption and Sonſhip that accrues to us by the Goſpel.

VERS. XIV.

Δόξαν ὡς μονογενοῦς. The glory as of the only begotten.

THIS ὡς in this place imports the ſame thing as worthy. We ſaw his glory as what was worthy, or became the only begotten Son of God. He did not gliſter in any worldly pomp or grandeur, according to what the Jewiſh Nation fondly dream'd their Meſſiah would do; but he was deckt with the glory of holineſs, grace, truth, and the power of miracles.

VERS. XVI.

Καὶ χάριν ἀντὶ χάριτος. And grace for grace.

HE appear'd amongſt us, full of grace and truth, and all we who convers'd with him, and ſaw his glory, of his fulneſs did receive grace and truth: Nay further we receiv'd grace toward the propagation of grace, i.e. the grace of Apoſtleſhip, that we might diſpenſe and propagate the grace of the Goſpel toward others; that Ἀντὶ denotes the end or deſign of a thing very frequently, there are hardly any but muſt needs know.

VERS. XXI.

Ὁ προφήτης εἶ σύ. Art thou that Prophet.

THAT is, Ὁ προφήτης, εἷς τῶν ἀρχαίων ὃς ἀνέστη, Luk. IX. 8, 19. One of the old Prophets that was riſen again.

I. The Maſters of Traditions were wont to ſay, that the ſpirit of Propheſie departed from Iſrael after the death of Zachary and Malachy. So that we do not find they expected any Prophet till the days of the Meſſiah, nor indeed that any in that interim of time did pretend to that character.

II. They believ'd that at the coming of the Meſſiah the Prophets were to riſe again.

a Sanhedr. fol. 91. 2. b Ibid. fol. 92. 2. a Thy watchmen ſhall lift up the voice, with the voice together ſhall they ſing, Iſa. LII. 8..... R. Chaia bar Abba, and R. Johanan ſay, All the Prophets ſhall put forth a ſong with one voice. b All the juſt whom God ſhall raiſe from the dead, ſhall not return again into the duſt. Gloſſ. Thoſe whom he ſhall raiſe in the days of the Meſſiah.

c Succah. fol. 51. 2. To this Reſurrection of the Saints they apply that of Micah V. 5. c We ſhall raiſe againſt him ſeven ſhepherds: David in the middle, Adam, Seth, Methuſalem, on his right hand: Abraham, Jacob, and Moſes on his left. And eight principal men; but who are theſe? Jeſſ, Saul, Samuel, Amos, Zephany, Zedechiah [or rather Hezekiah, as Kimch. in loc.] Meſſiah and Elijah. But indeed [ſaith R. Solomon] I do not well know whence they had theſe things. Nor indeed do I.

The Greek Interpreters inſtead of eight principal men have Ὀκτὼ δήγματα Ἀνθρώπων, eight bitings of men, a very forreign ſenſe. They miſtook in reading the word נסיכי for which they read נשכי.

Hence by how much nearer ſtill the Kingdom of Heaven, or the expected time of Meſſiah's coming drew on, by ſo much the more did they dream of the Reſurrection of the Prophets. And when any perſon of more remarkable gravity, piety and holineſs appear'd amongſt them, they were ready to conceive of him as a Prophet raiſed from the dead, Mat. XVI. 14. That therefore is the meaning of this queſtion, Ὁ προφήτης εἶ σύ; Art thou one of the Prophets rais'd from the dead?

VERS. XXV.

Τί οὖν βαπτίζεις. Why then baptiſeſt thou?

d Sanhedr. fol. 92. 2. THE Jews likewiſe expected that the world ſhould be renew'd at the coming of the Meſſiah. d In thoſe years wherein God will renew his world. Aruch quoting theſe words, adds, In thoſe thouſand years. So alſo the Gloſs upon the place.

Amongſt other things they expected the purifying of the unclean. R. Solom. upon Ezek. XXXVI. 26. I will expiate you, and remove your uncleanneſs by the ſprinkling of the water of purification. Kimchi upon Zach. IX. 6. The Rabbins of Bleſſed memory, have a Tradition that Elias will purifie the baſtards, and reſtore them to the Congregation. You have the like in Kidduſh e, אליהו בא לטמא ולטהר Elias comes to diſtinguiſh the unclean, and purifie them, &c.

When therefore they ſaw the Baptiſt bring in ſuch an unuſual rite, by which he admitted the Iſraelites into a new rule of Religion, they ask him by what authority he doth theſe things, if he himſelf were not either the Meſſiah, or Elias, or one of the Prophets raiſed from the dead.

It is very well known that they expected the coming of Elias, and that from the words of Mal. IV. 5. not rightly underſtood; which miſtake the Greek Verſion ſeems to patronize, Ἀποστελῶ ὑμῖν Ἠλίαν τὸν Θεσβίτην, I will ſend you Elias the Teſhbite; which word τὸν Θεσβίτην they add of themſelves, in favour of their own Tradition; which indeed is too frequent an uſage in that Verſion to look ſo far aſquint toward the Jewiſh Traditions as to do injury to the Sacred Text.

VERS.

VERS. XXIX.

Ὁ ἀμνὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ. The Lamb of God.

SAINT John alludes plainly to the Lamb of the daily Sacrifice. Τὸν ἐν τύπῳ αἴροντα ἁμαρτίαν τοῦ Ἰσραήλ, which in ſhadow took away the ſins of Iſrael.

I. It was commanded in the Law, that he that offer'd the Sacrifice ſhould lay his hand upon the head of the Sacrifice, Levit. I. 4. & III. 2. & IV. 4, &c.

II. The reaſon of which uſage was that he might, as it were, transfer his ſins and guilt upon the head of the offering, which is more eſpecially evident in the ſcape-goat, Levit. XVI. 22.

Hence Chriſt is ſaid, Himſelf to have born our ſins in his own body on the tree, I Pet. II. 24. as the offering upon the Altar was wont to do. He was made by God a ſin for us, II Cor. V. 21. that is, חטאת a Sacrifice for ſin.

III. The ſame rite was us'd about the Lamb of the daily Sacrifice that was offer'd for all Iſrael. The ſtationary men [as they were called] or the Subſtitutes of the people, laying their hands upon the head of the Lamb. [a]

[a] Taanith. cap. 4. hal. 2.

To this therefore the words of the Baptiſt refer: The Lamb of God, that is, the daily Sacrifice, taketh away the ſins of the world, as the Sacrifice did for all Iſrael. Behold here the true Lamb of God that taketh away the ſins of the world.

VERS. XXXVIII.

Ποῦ μένεις. Where dwelleſt thou?

THE proper and moſt immediate ſenſe of this is, where dwelleſt, or, where lodgeſt thou? But I could willingly render it, as if it had been ſaid, Where doſt thou keep thy Sabbath? and from thence conjecture that day was the evening of the Sabbath. For whereas it is ſaid, and they abode with him that day; it would be a little hard to underſtand it of the day that was now almoſt gone, and therefore we may ſuppoſe it meant of the following day; for it is added, ὥρα ἦν δεκάτη, it was now the tenth hour: It was about the middle of our November, when theſe things fell out in Bethabarah, as will eaſily appear to any one that will be accurate in calculating the times, and that little that was left of that day was then the tenth hour. It was then about Sun-ſet, and as it were the entrance of a new day; ſo that it might more properly have been ſaid, They abode with him that night, rather than that day; only the Evangeliſt ſeems to point out that they remain'd with him the next day; which that it was the Sabbath, I will not ſo much contend, as (not without ſome reaſon) ſuppoſe.

b Ceſar duabus de cauſis, &c. Ceſar for two reaſons would not fight that day, partly becauſe he had no Souldiers in the Ships, and partly becauſe it was after the tenth hour of the day. [b]

VERS. XLI.

Εὑρίσκει τὸν ἀδελφὸν. He findeth his Brother.

SO אשכחיה דב נחמן בר יצחק לרב הונא [c] Rab Nachman bar Iſaac found him with Rab Honna: and many ſuch like expreſſions in the Talmudick Authors, as alſo אשכחנא and אשכחן εὑρήκαμεν, we have found. [c] Sanhedr. fol. 30. 2.

VERS. XLII.

Ὁ υἱὸς Ἰωνᾶ. The Son of Jona.

I Do not ſee any reaſon why the word Ἰωάννης, Joannes, or Ἰωαννᾶς, Joannas, ſhould be here put for Ἰωνᾶ, Jona, or why any ſhould contend (as many do) that it ſhould be the ſame with Ἰωαννᾶς, Joannas.

I. In the third Chap. of St. Luke the name Joanan is founded three ways in the Greek Pronunciation of it, Ἰαννὰ, Janna, v. 24. ſo יוחנא amongſt the Rabbins, Ἰωαννᾶ, Joanna, v. 27. and Ἰωνὰν, Jonan, v. 30. but never Ἰωνὰ, Jona.

II. Jona was a name amongſt the Jews very commonly uſed, and we meet with it frequently in the Talmudick Authors written יונה, Jonah; why therefore ſhould not Peter's father be allow'd the name of Jonah, as well as that of John.

III. Eſpecially when this Son of Jonah imitated the great Prophet of that name in this, that both Preached to the Gentiles, and both began their journey from Joppa.

Ὁ ἑρμηνεύεται Πέτρος, which is by interpretation, Peter.

Vulg. Quod eſt, ſi interpreteris, Petra, which is by interpretation, a ſtone. So Act. IX. 26. Tabitha, which being interpreted is Dorcas. Beza, Caprea a Goat. But what? do the holy Penmen of the Scriptures make Lexicons, or play the School-maſters, that they ſhould only teach that the Syriack word Cepha, in the Greek language ſignifies Πέτρος, a ſtone, and Tabitha, Dorcas, that is, a Goat? No, rather they teach what Greek proper names anſwer to thoſe Syriack proper names; for the Syriack proper name is here render'd into the Greek proper name, and not an appellative into an appellative, nor a proper name into an appellative.

But let the Vulgar have what it deſires, and be it ſo, Thou ſhalt be called a Rock; yet you will ſcarce grant that our Bleſſed Saviour ſhould call Simon a rock in the direct and moſt ordinary ſenſe, There is no rock ſave our God, II Sam. XXII. 32. where the Greek Interpreters inſtead of צור a rock, have κλίσης, the Creator. Which word St. Peter himſelf makes uſe of I Pet. IV. 19. ſhewing who is that rock indeed.

There is a rock or ſtone of ſtumbling indeed, as well as a foundation-ſtone; and this ſtone of ſtumbling hath St. Peter been made, to the fall of many thouſands, not by any fault of his, but theirs, who through ignorance or frowardneſs, or both, will eſteem him as a rock upon which the Church is built.

If therefore they will ſo pertinaciouſly adhere to that Verſion, Et tu vocaberis Petra, let it be render'd into Engliſh thus, Thou wilt be call'd the Rock; and let us apprehend our bleſſed Lord ſpeaking Prophetically, and foretelling that grand error that ſhould ſpring up in the Church, viz. that Peter is a Rock, than which the Chriſtian world hath not known any thing more ſad and deſtructive.

VERS. XLVI.

Ἔρχου καὶ ἴδε. Come and ſee.

NOthing more common in the Talmudick Authors than תא חמי & תא חוי Come and behold, come and ſee; ſometimes איתא חמי & בוא וראה.

VERS. XLVII.

Ἀληθῶς Ἰσραηλίτης. An Iſraelite indeed.

COmpare it with Iſai. LXIII. 8. I ſaw thee (ſaith Chriſt) when thou wert under the fig-tree? What doing there? doubtleſs not ſleeping, or idling away his time, much leſs doing any ill thing. This would not have deſerv'd ſo remarkable an Encomium as Chriſt gave him. We may therefore ſuppoſe him in that receſs under the fig-tree, as having ſequeſtred himſelf from the view of men, either for prayer, meditation, reading, or ſome ſuch Religious performance; and ſo indeed from the view of men, that he muſt needs acknowledg Jeſus for the Meſſiah, for that very reaſon that when no mortal eye could ſee, he ſaw and knew that he was there. Our Saviour therefore calls him an Iſraelite indeed in whom there was no guile, becauſe he ſought out that retirement to pray ſo different from the uſual craft and hypocriſie of that Nation, that were wont to pray publickly and in the ſtreets that they might be ſeen of men.

And here Chriſt gather'd to himſelf five Diſciples, viz. Andrew, Peter, Philip, Nathanael, (who ſeems to be the ſame with Bartholomew) and another whoſe name is not mention'd, ver. 35. 40. whom (by comparing Joh. XXI. 2.) we may conjecture to have been Thomas.

VERS. LI.

Ἀμὴν, Ἀμὴν. Verily, Verily.

IF Chriſt doubled his affirmation as we here find it, why is it not ſo doubled in the other Evangeliſts? if he did not double it, why is it ſo here?

I. Perhaps the aſſeveration he uſeth in this place, may not be to the ſame things, and upon the ſame occaſion, to which he uſeth the ſingle Amen in other Evangeliſts.

II. Perhaps alſo St. John being to write for the uſe of the Helleniſts, might write the word in the ſame Hebrew letters wherein Chriſt uſed it, and in the ſame letters alſo wherein the Greeks uſed it, retaining ſtill the ſame Hebrew Idiom.

III. But

III. But however it may be obſerv'd, that whereas by all others the word Amen was generally uſed in the latter end of a ſpeech or ſentence, our Lord only uſeth it in the beginning as being himſelf the Amen, Revel. III. 14. and אלהי אמן Iſai. LXI. 16. The God of Truth.

So that that ſingle Amen which he uſed in the other Evangeliſts, contained in it the Gemination Amen, Amen. I the Amen the true and faithful witneſs, Amen, i.e. Ἐπ' ἀλη-θείας, of a truth do ſay unto you, &c. Nor did it become any mortal man to ſpeak Amen in the beginning of a ſentence in the ſame manner as our Saviour did. Indeed the very Maſters of Traditions, who ſeem'd to be the Oracles of that Nation, were wont to ſay, באמת & הימנותא I ſpeak in truth; but not Amen, I ſay unto you.

IV. Amen contains in it, Ναὶ & Ἀμήν, Yea and Amen, II Cor. I. 20. Revel. I. 7. i. e. truth and ſtability, אמונה אמן Iſai. XXV. 1. Interlin. Veritas, firmitas, Faithfulneſs and truth. The other Evangliſts expreſs the word which our Saviour uſeth: St. John doubles it to intimate the full ſenſe of it.

I have been at ſome queſtion with my ſelf, whether I ſhould inſert in this place the blaſphemous things which the Talmudick Authors belch out againſt the Holy Jeſus, in alluſion (ſhall I ſay?) or deriſion of this word Amen, to which name he entitled himſelf, and by which aſſeveration he confirm'd his Doctrines. But that thou mighteſt (Reader) both know, and with equal indignation abhor the ſnarlings and virulency of theſe men, take it in their own words, although I cannot without infinite reluctancy alledg what they with all audaciouſneſs have utter'd.

a They have a Tradition that Imma Shalom the wife of R. Eliezer, and her brother Rabban Gamaliel went to הדוא פילוסופא a certain Philoſopher (the Gloſs hath it a certain Heretick) of very great note for his integrity in giving judgment in matters, and taking no bribes. The woman brings him a golden candleſtick, and prayeth him that the inheritance might be divided in part to her. Rabban Gamaliel objects, It is written amongſt us that the daughter ſhall not inherit inſtead of the ſon. But the Philoſopher anſwer'd, Since the time that you were removed from your land, the Law of Moſes was made void: ואיתיהיבת און and Aven was given, (he means the Goſpel, but marks it with a ſcurrilous title.) and in that it is written ברא וברתא כחדא ירתון the ſon and the daughter ſhall inherit together. The next day Rabban Gamaliel ההוא חברא לובא brought him a Lybian Aſs, then ſaith he unto them, I have found at the end of Aven (i.e. the Goſpel) that it is written there אנא און I Aven came not to diminiſh, but to add to the Law of Moſes; where he abuſeth both the name of our Bleſſed Saviour, and his words too. Mat. V. 17. a Schabb. fol. 116. 2.

And now after our juſt deteſtation of this execrable blaſphemy, let us think what kind Judg this muſt be to whoſe judgment Rabban Gamaliel the Preſident of the Sanhedrin, and his ſiſter, wife to the great Eleazar ſhould betake themſelves. A Chriſtian as it ſhould ſeem by the whole contexture of the ſtory; but alas! what kind of Chriſtian that ſhould make ſo light of Chriſt and his Goſpel! However, were he a Chriſtian of what kind ſoever, yet if there be any truth in this paſſage, it is not unworthy our taking notice of it, both as to the Hiſtory of thoſe times, as alſo as to that queſtion, whether there were any Chriſtian Judges at that time.

Ὄψεσθε τὸν οὐρανὸν ἀνεῳγότα καὶ τοὺς Ἀγγέλους, &c. Ye ſhall ſee heaven open, and the Angels of God.

There are thoſe that in this place obſerve an alluſion to Jacob's Ladder: The meaning of this paſſage ſeems to be no other than this: "Becauſe I ſaid I ſaw thee under the fig-"tree, believeſt thou? Did this ſeem to thee a matter of ſuch wonder? Thou ſhalt ſee "greater things than theſe. For you ſhall in me obſerve ſuch plenty both of revelation "and miracle, that it ſhall ſeem to you as if the heaven's were opened, and the Angels "were aſcending and deſcending, to bring with them all manner of revelation, authority and power from God, to be imparted to the Son of man. Where this alſo is included, viz. that Angels muſt in a more peculiar manner adminiſter unto him, as in the viſion of Jacob, the whole Hoſt of Angels had been ſhew'd and promis'd to him in the firſt ſetting out of his Pilgrimage.

Of this ladder the Rabbins dream very pleaſantly: b The ladder is the aſcent of the Altar, and the Altar it ſelf. c The Angels are Princes or Monarchs. The King of Babylon aſcended ſeventy ſteps. The King of the Medes fifty and two. The King of Greece one hundred and eighty, the King of Edom, it is uncertain how many, &c. d They reckon the bredth of the ladder to have been about eight thouſand paraſangæ, i.e. about two and thirty thouſand miles; and that the bulk of each Angel was about eight thouſand Engliſh miles in compaſs. Admirable Mathematicians theſe indeed! b Bereſh. rabbâ, Sect. 68. c Vajicra rab. fol. 199. 1. & R. Eliezer, cap. 35. d Cholin, fol. 91. 2.

CHAP. II.

VERS. I.

Καὶ τῇ τρίτῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ γάμος ἐγένετο, &c. And the third day there was a marriage, &c.

A Virgin b marries תליום הרביעי on the fourth day of the week, and a widow on the fifth. c This cuſtom came not in but from the decree of Ezra, and ſo onward, for the Sanhedrin doth not ſit, but on the ſecond and the fifth day; and by the decree of Ezra when the Sanhedrin aſſembled every day, then was it lawful to take a wife on any day. There is a twofold reaſon given for this reſtraint.

b Chetubbo h. cap. 1. hal. 1.
c Ibid. fol. 3 1.

I. מפני טענת בתולים The Virgin was to be marry'd on the fourth day of the week, becauſe the Aſſembly of the Twenty three met on the fifth; ſo that if the husband ſhould find his wife to be no virgin, but already violated, he might have recourſe to the Conſiſtory in the heat of his diſpleaſure, and procure juſt puniſhment for her according to Law. But why then might they not as well marry on the firſt day of the week, ſeeing the Beth din met on the ſecond as well as the fifth.

II. שלא יטרח בצרכי סעודה Leſt the Sabbath ſhould be polluted by preparations for the Nuptials, for the firſt, ſecond, and third day of the week are allow'd for thoſe kind of preparations. And the reaſon why the widow was to be marry'd on the fifth day was, that her husband might rejoyce with her for three days together, viz. fifth, ſixth, and the Sabbath-day. d d V. d. loc. & Gloſſ. Rambam.

If therefore our bride in this place was a virgin, then the Nuptials were celebrated on the fourth day of the week, which is our Wedneſday. If ſhe was a widow then ſhe was marry'd on the fifth day of the week, which is our Thurſday. Let us therefore number the days according to our Evangeliſt, and let it be but granted that that was the Sabbath in which it is ſaid, They abode with him all that day, Cap. I. v. 39. Then on the firſt day of the week Chriſt went into Galilee and met with Nathanael. So that the third day from thence is the fourth day of the week; but as to that let every one reckon as he himſelf ſhall think fit.

Γάμος: A Marriage.

Amongſt the Talmudiſts it is ſometimes הילולא ſometimes כישואים ſometimes חופה ſometimes הכנסת כלה all which denotes matter of pomp and gladneſs.

I. The Virgin to be marry'd cometh forth from her Fathers houſe, to that of her husbands. בהינומא וראשה פרוע in ſome veil, but with her hair diſhevel'd, or her head uncover'd.

II. If any perſon meets her upon that day, he gives her the way, which once was done by King Agrippa himſelf.

III. They carry before her a cup of wine which they were wont to call כוס חרומה the cup of Trumah, which denoted that ſhe for her unſpotted virginity might have married a Prieſt, and eaten of the Trumah.

IV. Skipping and dancing they were wont to ſing the praiſes of the Bride. In Paleſtine they uſed theſe words, לא כחל ולא שרק ולא פירכום ויעלת חן ſhe needs no paint nor Stibium, no plaiting of the hair, or any ſuch thing, for ſhe is of her ſelf moſt beautiful.

V. They ſcatter'd ſome kind of grain or corn amongſt the children, that they if occaſion ſhould ſerve might bear witneſs hereafter that they ſaw that woman a marry'd virgin.

VI. They ſprinkled alſo or ſowed barley before them, by that ceremony denoting their fruitfulneſs e. Whether theſe ſports were uſed at the wedding where our Saviour was preſent, let others enquire.

e Vid. Chetubb. cap. 1. 11.

VII. In Sotah f there is mention of Crowns which the bride and bridegroom wore, as alſo what faſhion they were of, and of what materials they were made.

f Fol. 49. 1.

VIII. Becauſe of the mirth that was expected at Nuptial ſolemnities, they forbad all weddings celebrating within the feaſts of the Paſſover, Pentecoſt, and Tabernacles, Becauſe there were great rejoycings at Nuptials, and they muſt not intermingle one joy with another; that is, the joy of Nuptials with the joy of a feſtival g.

g Moed Katon, fol. 2. 8.

IX. The Nuptial feſtivity was continu'd for the whole ſeven days which we alſo ſee of old, Judg. XIX. 12.

Καὶ

Καὶ ἦν ἡ μήτηρ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἐκεῖ. And the mother of Jeſus was there.

The mother of Jeſus was there, not invited (as it ſhould ſeem) with Chriſt and his Diſciples, but had been there before the invitation made to them.

You may conceive who were the uſual nuptial gueſts by thoſe words of Maimon a. חתן וכל השושבינין ובני חופה The bridegroom and his companions, the children of the bride-chamber are not bound to make a Tabernacle. a Sotah cap. 6.

I. שושבינא in a more general ſenſe denotes a friend or companion, Judg. XIV. 2. II Sam. XIII. 3. but it is more particularly applied to thoſe friends that are the nuptial gueſts.

II. But in a moſt ſtrict ſenſe to thoſe two mention'd b, Of old they appointed two Shoſhbenin, one for the bridegroom, the other for the bride, that they ſhould miniſter to them, eſpecially at their entry into the bridal chamber. They were eſpecially inſtituted for this end, that they ſhould take care and provide that there ſhould be no fraud nor deceit as to the tokens of the bride's virginity. So Gloſſ. upon the place c. The Rabbins very ridiculouſly (as they almoſt always do) tell a trifling ſtory, that Michael and Gabriel were the two Shoſhbenin at Adam and Eves wedding d. b Chetubb. fol. 12. 1. c Fol. 6. 2. d Bereſh. rab. fol. 10. 4.

But as to the ſignification of this nuptial term in a more large ſenſe, we may ſee further. e אחין שעשו מקצתם שושבינות וגו' If any amongſt the brethren make a Shoſhbenuth, while the father is yet alive, when the Shoſhbenuth returns, that alſo is return'd too; for the Shoſhbenuth is requir'd even before the Beth Din; but if any one ſend to his friend any meaſures of wine, thoſe are not requir'd before the Beth Din, שהן גמילות חסדים for this was a deed of gift, or work of charity. e Bava bathra, fol. 144. 2.

The words are very obſcure, but they ſeem to bear this ſenſe, viz. This was the manner of the Shoſhbenuth. Some Batchelor or ſingle perſon, for joy of his friends marriage, takes ſomething along with him to eat and be merry with the Bridegroom; when it comes to the turn of this ſingle perſon to marry, this Bridegroom to whom he had brought this portion, is bound to return the ſame kindneſs again. Nay, if the father ſhould make a wedding for his Son, and his friends ſhould bring gifts along with them in honour of the nuptials, and give them to his Son [the Bridegroom] the father was bound to return the ſame kindneſs when ever any of thoſe friends ſhould think fit to marry themſelves. But if any one ſhould ſend the Bridegroom to congratulate his nuptials, either wine or oyl, or any ſuch gift, and not come himſelf to eat and make merry with them, this was not of the nature of the Shoſhbenuth, nor could be requir'd back again before the Tribunal, becauſe that was a free gift.

IV. Chriſt therefore and five of his Diſciples were not of theſe voluntary Shoſhbenim at this wedding, for they were invited gueſts, and ſo of the number of thoſe that were called the בני חופה children of the bride-chamber diſtinguiſht from the Shoſhbenim. But whether our Saviours mother was to be accounted either the one or the other, is a vain and needleſs queſtion. Perhaps ſhe had the care of preparing and managing the neceſſaries for the wedding, as having ſome relation either with the Bridegroom or the Bride.

VERS. VI.

Ὑδρίαι λίθιναι ἓξ. Six water-pots.

משיקין את המים בכלי אבן כלי אבן f Gloſſ. If any one have water fit to drink, and that water by chance contract any uncleanneſs, let him fill the ſtone veſſel with it. f Beza, fol. 17. 2.

כלי גללים וכלי אבנים g where the Commentators do indeed grant that by כלי גללים may be underſtood marble veſſels, although they admit of another rendring, but as to כלי אבנים there is no controverſie. g Kelim. cap. 1. hal. 1.

The number of the ſix water-pots, I ſuppoſe needs not be aſcrib'd to any cuſtom of the Nation, but rather to the multitude then preſent. It is true indeed, that at nuptials and other feaſts there were water-pots always ſet, for the gueſts to waſh their hands at; but the number of the veſſels, and the quantity of the water, was always proportion'd according to the number of the gueſts; for both the hands and veſſels, and perhaps the feet of ſome of them, were wont to be waſhed.

משכילא משי כולא h Maſhicala maſhi culla, the greater veſſel out of which all waſh, משכילתא משיא בלתא Maſchilta maſhia callatha, the leſſer veſſel in which the bride waſhes, and (ſaith the Gloſs) the better ſort of the gueſts. h Schab. fol. 77. 2.

Μετρητάς. Firkins.

The Greek Verſion expreſſeth the meaſure of a Bath by μετρητὴ, בתים שלשה אלפים יכיל χωροῦσι μετρητὰς τριχιλίους, 2 Chron. IV. 5. ſo Hag. II. 16. where the ſame meaſure ſure of a Bath is to be underſtood. Now if every one of theſe water-pots in our ſtory contain'd two or three Baths apiece, how great a quantity of wine muſt that be, which all that water was chang'd into.

a Kelim. cap 2. hal 2. a חביות לודיות ולחמיות The water-pots of Lydda and Bethlehem; where the Gloſs, They were wont to make pots in Lydda from the meaſure of the Seah to that of the Log, and in Bethlehem, from the meaſure of two Seas to that of one. How big were theſe pots that contain'd ſix or nine Seahs, for every Bath contain'd three Seahs.

b Cap. 1. hal. 1. As to the waſhing of the hands we have this in Jadaim, b מי רביעית ניתנין לידים They allot a fourth part of a Log for the waſhing of one perſons hands, it may be of two, half a Log for three or four; an whole Log to five or ten, nay to an hundred; with this proviſion, ſaith R. Joſe, that the laſt that waſheth hath no leſs than a fourth part of a Log for himſelf.

VERS. VII.

Λέγει αὐτοῖς Ιησοῦς γεμίσατε, &c. Jeſus ſaid, fill, &c.

I. IT is probable that the diſcourſe betwixt Jeſus and his Mother was not publick and before the whole company, but privately and betwixt themſelves; which if we ſuppoſe, the words of the Son toward the Mother, Woman what have I to do with thee, will not ſeem ſo harſh as we might apprehend them if ſpoken in the hearing of all the gueſts. And although the Son did ſeem by his firſt anſwer to give a plain denial to what was propounded to him, yet perhaps by ſomething which he afterwards ſaid to her (though not expreſt by the Evangeliſt) or ſome other token, the Mother underſtood his mind, ſo far, that when they came into company again ſhe could intimate to them, Whatſoever he ſaith unto you, do it.

II. He anſwer'd his Mother, My hour is not yet come; for it might be juſtly expected that the firſt miracle he would exert ſhould be done in Jeruſalem, the Metropolis of that Nation.

VERS. VIII.

Ἀρχιτρικλίνῳ. The Governour of the Feaſt.

THIS Governour of the Feaſt I would underſtand to have been in the place of Chaplain to give thanks, and pronounce bleſſings in ſuch kind of Feaſts as theſe were. There was ברכת חתנים the Bridegrooms bleſſing recited every day for the whole ſpace of the ſeven days, beſides other benedictions during the whole Feſtival time, requiſite upon a cup of wine [for over a cup of wine there us'd to be a bleſſing pronounc'd] eſpecially that which was call'd כוס הבשורה the cup of good news, when the virginity of the Bride is declar'd and certify'd. He therefore who gave the bleſſing for the whole company, I preſume, might be call'd the ὁ Ἀρχιτρίκλινος, the Governour of the Feaſt. Hence to him it is that our Saviour directs the wine that was made of water, as he who after ſome bleſſing pronounced over the cup, ſhould firſt drink of it to the whole company, and after him the gueſts pledging and partaking of it.

As to what is contain'd in the 14, 15, 16 verſes of this Chapter, I have already diſcuſt that in Mat. XXI. 12.

VERS. XVIII.

Τί σημεῖον δεικνύεις ἡμῖν; What ſign ſheweſt thou unto us?

c Sheweth rab. Sect. 9. NOah c, Ezekiah, &c. require a ſign, much more the wicked and ungodly.

Since there had been ſo many, no leſs than four hundred years paſt, from the time that the Holy Spirit had departed from that Nation, and Prophecies had ceaſed, in which ſpace there had not appear'd any one perſon that pretended to the gift either of Propheſying or working miracles, it is no wonder if they were ſuſpicious of one that now claim'd the character, and requir'd a ſign of him.

VERS. XIX.

Λύσατε τὸν ναὸν τοῦτον. Deſtroy this Temple.

I. CHriſt ſheweth them no ſign, that was meer ſign, Mat. XII. 39. The turning of Moſes his Rod into a Serpent, and returning the Serpent into a Rod again; the hand becoming leprous, and reſtor'd to its proper temperament again, theſe were meer ſigns; but but those wonders which Moses afterward wrought in Egypt were not meer signs, but miraculous judgments; and those stupendous things which our Saviour wrought were not meer signs, but beneficent miracles, and whoever would not believe upon those infinite miracles which he wrought, would much less have believ'd upon meer signs. And indeed it was unbecoming our Blessed Lord so far to indulge to their obstinate incredulity, to be shewing new signs still at every beck of theirs, who would not believe upon those infinite numbers he put forth upon every proper occasion.

II. Mat. XII. 39, 40. when they had requir'd a sign, Christ remits them to the sign of the Prophet Jonah; and he points at the very same sense in these words, Destroy this Temple, &c. That is, my Resurrection from the dead will be a sign beyond all denial, proving and affirming that what I do I act upon Divine authority, and that I am he who is to come. (Rom. I. 4.) further than this, you must expect no other sign from me. If you believe me not while I do such works, at least believe me when I arise from the dead.

He acted here whiles he is purging the Temple under that notion, as he was the authoriz'd Messiah, Mal. III. 1, 3. and expretly calls it his fathers house, v. 16. Shew us therefore some sign (say the Jews) by which it may appear that thou art the Messiah the Son of God, at least that thou art a Prophet. I will shew you a sufficient sign, saith Christ: Destroy this Temple, viz. of my body, and I will raise it from the dead again, a thing which was never yet done, nor could be done by any of the Prophets.

VERS. XX.

Τεσσαράκοντα ἓξ ἔτεσιν. Forty and six years.

I. THAT this was spoken of the Temple as beautify'd and repair'd by Herod, not as built by Zorobabel, these reasons seem to sway with me.

I. That these things were done and discours'd betwixt Christ and the Jews in Herod's Temple.

II. That the account if meant of the Temple of Zorobabel, will not fall in either with the years of the Kings of Persia; or those seven weeks mention'd Dan. IX. 26. in which Jerusalem was to be built, even in troublous times. For whoever reckons by the Kings of Persia, he must necessarily attribute at least thirty years to Cyrus, which they willingly do that are fond of this account; which thirty years too, if they do not reckon to him, after the time that he had taken Babylon, and subverted that Monarchy, they prove nothing as to this computation at all.

a Cyrus destroy'd the Empire of the Medes, and reign'd over Persia, having overthrown Astyages the King of the Medes. And from thence he reckons to Cyrus thirty years. But by what authority he ascribes the Jews being set at liberty from their captivity, to that very same year, I cannot tell. For Cyrus could not release the Jews from their captivity in Babylon, before he had conquer'd Babylon for himself; and this was a great while after he had subdu'd the Medes, as appears from all that have treated upon the subversion of that Empire, which how they agree with Xenophon, I shall not enquire at this time; content at present with this, that it doth not appear amongst any Historians that have committed the acts of Cyrus to memory, that they have given thirty or twenty, no not ten years to him, after he had taken Babylon. Leunclavius in his Chronolog. Xenoph. gives him but eight years, and Xenophon himself seems to have given him but seven. So that this account of forty and six years falls plainly to the ground, as not being able to stand, but with the whole thirty years of Cyrus included into the number. [a] Euseb. in Chronic.

Their opinion is more probable who make these forty and six years parallel with the seven weeks in Dan. IX. 26. But the building of the Temple ceast for more years than wherein it was built; and in truth if we compute the times wherein any work was done upon the Temple, it was really built within the space of ten years.

II. This number of forty six years fits well enough with Herod's Temple; for Josephus tells us that b Herod began the work in the eighteenth year of his reign; nor does he contradict himself when c he tells us, Πεντεκαιδεκάτῳ γὰρ ἔτει τῆς βασιλείας αὐτὸν τε τὸν νεὼν ὑπεστήσατο, In the fifteenth year of his reign he repair'd the Temple; becaufe the fifteenth year of his reign alone after he had conquer'd Antigonus, was the eighteenth year from the time wherein he had been declar'd King by the Romans. Now Herod (as the same Josephus relates) d liv'd thirty seven years from the time that the Romans had declar'd him King; and in his thirty fifth year Christ was born; and he was now thirty years old when he had this discourse with the Jews. So that between the eighteenth of Herod, and the thirtieth of Christ exclusively, there were just forty six years compleat. [b] Antiq. lib. 15. cap. 14. [c] De Bell. lib. 1. cap. 16. [d] Antiq. lib. 17. cap. 10.

III. The words of our Evangelist therefore may be thus render'd in English, Forty and six years hath this Temple been in building; and this Version seems warranted by Josephus e, who beginning the History of G. Florus the Procurator of Judea about the 11th. of Nero, [e] Antiq. lib 20. cap. 8.

hath this paſſage, Ἐξ ἐκείνου μάλιστα τῆς καιρῆς σωέβη τὴν πόλιν ἡμῶν νοσεῖν, φθορὰν πάντων ὅτι τὸ χεῖρον. From that time particularly our City began to languiſh, all things growing worſe and worſe. He tells us further that Albinus when he went off from his Government, ſet open all the Goals and diſmiſt the Priſoners, and ſo filled the whole Province with Thieves and Robberies: withal, that King Agrippa, permitted the Levite ſinging men, to go about as they pleaſed in their Linnen Garments: and at length concludes Ἤδη δὲ τότε καὶ τὸ Ἱερὸν πεπέλεστο· And now was the Temple finiſhed [as may be obſerved] wherefore the people ſeeing the workmen, to the number of eighteen thouſand, were at a ſtand, having nothing to do---- beſought the King that he would repair the Porch upon the Eaſt, &c. If therefore the Temple was not finiſhed till that time, then, much leſs was it ſo, when Chriſt was in it. Whence we may properly enough render thoſe words of the Jews into ſuch a kind of ſenſe as this: "It is forty and ſix years ſince the repairing "of the Temple was firſt undertook, and indeed to this day is not quite perfected, and "will thou pretend to build a new one in three days?

VERS. XXI.

Ἔλεγε δὲ περὶ τοῦ ναοῦ τοῦ σώματος αὐτοῦ. But he ſpake of the Temple of his body.

IF we conſider how much the ſecond Temple, came behind that of the firſt, it will the eaſilier appear, why our bleſſed Saviour ſhould call his body the Temple.

a Hieroſol. Taanith, fol. 6. 1. & Bab. Joma, fol. 21. 2.

a In the ſecond Temple, there wanted the fire from Heaven, the Ark with the Propitiatory, Cherubims, Urim and Thummim, שכינה the Divine Glory, the Holy Ghoſt, and the Anointing Oyl.

Theſe things were all in Solomon's Temple, which therefore was accounted a full and plenary type of the Meſſiah. But ſo long as the ſecond Temple had them not, it wanted what more particularly ſhadowed and repreſented him.

b Joma, fol. 52. 2.

I. There was indeed in the ſecond Temple, a certain Ark in the Holy of Holies, but this was neither Moſes's Ark, nor the Ark of the Covenant b: which may not unfitly come to mind when we read that paſſage Revel. XI. 19. The Temple of God was opened in Heaven, and there was ſeen in his Temple the Ark of his teſtament. It was not ſeen, nor indeed was it at all in the ſecond Temple.

c Joma, ubi ſupra. & Cherithuth, fol. 77. 2.

The Jews have a Tradition that Joſias hid the Ark, before the Babyloniſh Captivity, leſt it ſhould fall into the hands of the Enemy, as once it did amongſt the Philiſtines c. But there is no mention that it was ever found and reſtored again.

II. In Moſes his Tabernacle, and Solomon's Temple, the Divine preſence ſate viſibly over the Ark, in the propitiatory, in a Cloud of Glory: But when the deſtruction of that Temple drew near, it went up from the Propitiatory, Ezek. X. 4. and never returned into the ſecond Temple, where neither the Ark nor the Propitiatory was ever reſtored.

d Joma, fol. 71. 2. e Hieroſ. Peah, fol. 15. 3. & Bab. Kiddush. fol. 60. 2.

III. The High-Prieſt indeed miniſtred in the ſecond Temple, as in the firſt, in eight ſeveral Garments d. Amongſt theſe was the Pectoral, or Breaſt-plate, wherein the precious ſtones were put, (out of which the Jaſper chanced to fall and was loſt e:) but the Oracle by Urim and Thummim, was never reſtored. See Ezra II. 63. and Nehem. VII. 63. if not reſtored in the days of Ezra, or Nehemiah, much leſs certainly in the ages following, when the Spirit of Prophecy had forſaken and taken leave of that people.

f Joma, fol. 73. 2.

For that is a great truth amongſt the Talmudiſts f. Things are not askt or enquired after now [by Urim and Thummim] by the High-Prieſt, becauſe he doth not ſpeak by the Holy Ghoſt, nor does there any divine Afflatus breath on him.

This, to omit other things, was the ſtate of Zorobabel's Temple, with reſpect to thoſe things which were the peculiar glory of it. And theſe things being wanting, how much inferior muſt this needs be to that of Solomon's?

But there was one thing more that degraded Herod's Temple ſtill lower; and that was the perſon of Herod himſelf to whom it is aſcribed. It was not without ſcruple, even amongſt the Jews themſelves, that it was built and repaired by ſuch an one (and who knew not what Herod was?) They diſpute whether by right ſuch a perſon ought to have meddled with it, and are fain to pump for arguments for their own ſatisfaction, as to the lawfulneſs of the thing.

g Bava bathra, fol. 3. 2.

They object firſt, g לא לסתור בי כנשתא עד דבני בי כנשתא אחריתי 'Tis not permitted to any one to demoliſh one Synagogue till he hath built another. Much leſs to demoliſh the Temple. But Herod demoliſhed the Temple before he had built another. Ergo,

They anſwer, Baba ben Buta gave Herod that counſel that he ſhould pull it down. Now this Baba was reckoned amongſt the great wiſe men, and he did not raſhly move Herod to ſuch a work. דחזיתא חוא ביה He ſaw ſuch clefts and breaches in the Temple that threatned its ruine.

They

They object ſecondly, concerning the perſon of Herod, that he was a Servant to the Aſmonean Family, that he roſe up againſt his Maſters, and killed them, and had killed the Sanhedrin.

They anſwer, We were under his power, and could not reſiſt it. And if thoſe hands, ſtained with blood would be building, it was not in their power to hinder it.

Theſe and other things they apologize for their Temple; adding this invention for the greater honour of the thing; that all that ſpace of time wherein it was a building, it never once rained by day, that the work might not be interrupted h. h Taanith, fol. 23. 1. Joſeph. Antiqu. lib. 15. cap. 14.

The Rabbins take a great deal of pains, but to no purpoſe, upon thoſe words, Hagg. II. 9. The glory of this latter Houſe ſhall be greater than the former. i R. Jochanan, and R. Eliezer ſay; one, that it was greater for the Fabrick; the other, that it was greater for the duration. As if the glory of the Temple conſiſted in any Mathematical reaſons of ſpace, dimenſion, or duration; as if it lay in walls, gilding, or ornament. The glory of the firſt Temple was the Ark, the divine cloud over the Ark, the Urim and the Thummim, &c. Now where or in what can conſiſt the greater glory of the ſecond Temple, when theſe are gone? i Bava bathra, fol. 3. 1.

Herein it is indeed, that the Lord of the Temple, was himſelf preſent in his Temple; he himſelf was preſent ἐν ᾧ κατοικεῖ πᾶν τὸ πλήρωμα τῆς θεότητος σωματικῶς· In whom dwelleth all the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily, Coloſſ. II. 9. as the divine glory of old was over the Ark τυπικῶς, typically or by way of ſhadow only.

This is the glory, when he himſelf is preſent, who is the great High-Prieſt and the Prophet, who, anſwerably to the Urim and Thummim of old, reveals the counſels and will of God; He who is the true and living Temple, whom that Temple ſhadowed out. "This Temple of yours, O ye Jews, does not anſwer its firſt pattern and exemplar: "There are wanting in that, what were the chief glory of the former; which very de- "fect intimates, that there is another Temple to be expected that in all things may fall "in with its firſt type, as it is neceſſary the Antitype ſhould do. And this is the Tem- "ple of my body. No further did he think fit to reply to them at that time.

CHAP. II.

VERS. I.

Νικόδημος. Nicodemus.

THE Talmudiſts frequently mention נקדימון which by the Learned is not without reaſon, rendred Nicodemus; now the Jews derive this name, not from the Greek original, but from this Story.

a Upon a certain time, all Iſrael aſcended up to Jeruſalem to the Feaſt, and there wanted water for them. Nicodemus ben Gorion, comes to a great man, and prays him, ſaying, lend me twelve Wells of Water, for the uſe of thoſe that are to come up to the Feaſt, and I will give you back twelve wells again, or elſe engage to pay you twelve talents of ſilver: and they appointed a day. When the day of payment came, and it had not yet rained, Nicodemus went to a little Oratory, and covered himſelf and prayed, and of a ſudden the Clouds gathered, and a plentiful rain deſcended, ſo that twelve Wells were filled, and a great deal over. The great man cavilled, that the day was paſt, for the Sun was ſet: Nicodemus goes into his Oratory again, covers himſelf and prays, and the Clouds diſperſing themſelves, the Sun breaks out again. Hence that name given him נקדימון Nicodemus, לו חמדה שנקדרה or as it is elſewhere written שנקדמה: becauſe the Sun ſhone out for him. a Taanith, fol. 20. 1. & Avoth. R. Nathan c. 7.

If there be any thing of truth in this part of the Story, it ſhould ſeem Nicodemus was a Prieſt, and that kind of Officer, whoſe title was חופר שיחין a digger of Wells, under whoſe peculiar care and charge was the proviſion of Water for thoſe that ſhould come up to the Feaſt b. His proper name לא נקדימון אלא בוני was not Nicodemus, but Bonai, as Taanith in the place above quoted. Now in Sanhedrin c בוני Bonai is reckoned amongſt the Diſciples of Jeſus, and accounted one of the three richeſt men amongſt the Jews at that time when, Titus beſieged Jeruſalem. d There were three the moſt wealthy men in Jeruſalem, Nicodemus ben Gorion, Calba Sabua, and Zizith Hakkeſoth. But in Echah Rabbathi e There were then in Jeruſalem four Βουλευταὶ, or Counſellors, Ben Zizith, Ben Gorion, Ben Nicodemon, and Ben Calba Sabua; men of very great wealth, &c. b Vide Shekalim, cap. 5. hal. 1. c Fol. 43. 1. d Gittin, fol. 56. 1. e Fol. 64. 1.

There is mention alſo of a Daughter of Nicodemus ben Gorion, the furniture of whoſe Bed was twelve thouſand deniers f. But ſo miſerably was ſhe and the whole Family empoveriſhed, that g Rabban Jochanan ben Zacchai ſaw her gathering Barley corns out of the dung of the Arabs Cattel: Saith he to her, who art thou, my Daughter? I am, ſaith ſhe, the Daughter of Nicodemus ben Gorion. What then (ſaith he) is become of all thy Father's wealth? &c.

g Chetubb. fol. 66. 2.

I leave it with the Reader to determine with himſelf whether the Nicodemus mentioned amongſt them, be the ſame with this of ours or no. It is not much for the reputation of that Nicodemus, (whatever may be ſuppoſed in the affirmative) that theſe Authors ſhould all along make ſo honourable a mention of him. However ſome paſſages look as if it might be the ſame man, viz. the name Bonai, by which he went for a Diſciple of Jeſus; the impoveriſhment of his Family, which may be conceived to fall upon them in the perſecution of Chriſtianity, &c. but it is not tanti, that we ſhould labour at all, in a thing ſo very perplext, and perhaps no leſs unprofitable.

VERS. II.

Οἴδαμεν. We know.

IT may be a queſtion, whether Nicodemus uſing the plural number, [we know] does by that ſeem to own that the whole Sanhedrin (of which himſelf was a member) acknowledge the ſame thing. I am apt to think, the Fathers of the Sanhedrin could not well tell how indeed to deny it: which will be more largely diſcuſſed upon Chap. XI. 48. But Οἴδαμεν, may either be the plural for the ſingular, which in the firſt perſon, is moſt commonly uſed in all languages, and ידענא and נהירנא [which I queſtion not Nicodemus promiſcuouſly uſed] may be indifferently taken, for either number, ſingular or plural. Or elſe, we know, may ſignifie as much as, it is commonly owned and acknowledged.

Ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐλήλυθας διδάσκαλος. Thou art a Teacher come from God.

Nicodemus ſeems to have reference to the long ceſſation of Prophecy, which had not been known in that Nation, for above four hundred years now paſt; in which ſpace of time there had been no Maſters or Teachers of the people inſtituted but by men, and the impoſition of hands; nor had there in that appeared any one perſon, that would pretend to teach them by a ſpirit of Prophecy. But we ſee that thou art a Teacher ſent from God.

VERS. III.

Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, &c. Jeſus anſwered, &c.

SHould we ask how this anſwer ſuits with the queſtion that Nicodemus put: it may appear very appoſite, upon this account. You ſeem, O Nicodemus, to ſee ſome ſign of the approaching Kingdom of Heaven, in theſe miracles that are done by me. Verily I ſay unto thee, no one can ſee the Kingdom of God as he ought, if he be not born ἄνωθεν from above.

Ἐὰν μή τις γεννηθῇ ἄνωθεν. Except a man be born again.

By what word our Saviour expreſſed Ἄνωθεν in the Jewiſh language, it is not eaſie determining: whether by מלעילא which I indeed ſuppoſe he might, or by מן דריש as the Syriack, or by תוב or שנית which bears the ſignification of πάλιν, again, as almoſt all Expoſitors have conceived. The ſubject of the queſtion well conſidered, may afford us ſome light in the ſolution of it.

I. We muſt not ſuppoſe it a ſet diſcourſe, meerly and on purpoſe directed upon the ſubject of Regeneration, though the doctrine of the new birth may be well enough aſſerted and explained from hence: but the queſtion is about the aptitude and capacity of the man, qualified to be a partaker of the Kingdom of God, or of Heaven, or of the times or benefits of the Meſſiah: For that the Kingdom of God or of Heaven, are terms convertible in the Evangeliſt, is obvious to every one that will take the pains to compare them: and that by the Kingdom of God or of Heaven is meant the Kingdom and times of the Meſſiah is ſo plain that it needs no argument to prove it.

When therefore there was ſo vehement and univerſal an expectation of the coming and reign of the Meſſiah amongſt the Jews: and when ſome token and indication of theſe times, times, might appear to Nicodemus, in the miracles that Christ had wrought; our Saviour instructs him, by what way and means he may be made apt and capable for seeing and entring into this Kingdom, and enjoying the benefits and advantages of Messiah's days. For,

II. The Jews had conceited that it was enough for them to have been of the seed of Abraham, or the stock of Israel, to make them fit subjects for the Kingdom of Heaven, and the happiness that should accrue to them from the days of the Messiah. Hence that passage, h לכל ישראל יש להם חלק לעולם הבא There is a part allotted to all Israel in the world to come. That is, in the participation of the Messiah. But whence comes it that universal Israel claim such a part? meerly because they are Israelites; i. e. Meerly because they come of the stock and lineage of Israel. Our Saviour sets himself against this error of theirs, and teacheth, that it is not enough for them to be the Children of Abraham, or the Stock of Israel, to give them any title to or interest in the Messiah; but they must further be born ἄνωθεν, from above; they must claim it by an Heavenly, not an Earthly birth. These words of his, seem to fall in and bear the same kind of sense with those of John Baptist, Think not to say we have Abraham for our Father.

h Sanhedr. fol. 90. 1.

III. The Jews acknowledged, in order to Proselytisme, some kind of regeneration or new-birth absolutely necessary; but then, this was very slightly, and easily attainable. i גר שנתגייר כקטן שנולד דמי If any one become a Proselyte he is like a Child new born. But in what sense is he so?

i Jevamoth, fol. 62. 1. & 92. 1.

k The Gentile that is made a Proselyte, and the servant that is made free, behold he is like a Child new born. וכל שאר בשר And all those relations he had whiles either Gentile or Servant, they now cease from being so. ------ By the Law it is lawful for a Gentile to marry his Mother, or the Sister of his Mother, if they are Proselyted to the Jewish Religion. But the wise men have forbidden this, lest it should be said, we go downward, from a greater degree of sanctity to a less; and that which was forbidden yesterday, is allowable to day. Compare this with 1 Cor. V. 1.

k Maimon. Issurei biah, cap. 14.

Christ teaches another kind of new birth, requisite for those that partake of the Kingdom of the Messiah, beyond what they have either as Israelites, or Proselytes, viz. that they should be born from above, or by a celestial generation, which only makes them capable of the Kingdom of Heaven.

VERS. IV.

Μὴ δυναταί τις εἰς τ κοιλίαν τ μητρὸς αὐτ δεύτερον εἰσελθεῖν; &c. Can he enter the second time into his Mother's Womb?

THE common opinion of the Jews about the qualification of an Israelite, qua Israelite, still sticks in the mind of this Pharisee; and although our Saviour useth that term which in the Jewish Language plainly enough intimates the necessity of being born from Heaven; yet cannot he easily get off from his first prejudice about the Israelitish Generation. "Whereas the Israelites, as they are Israelites have a right to be admitted into "the Kingdom of the Messiah, do you therefore mean by this expression of yours, that "it is necessary for any to enter a second time into his Mother's Womb, that he may "be an Israelite anew?

He knew and acknowledged, as we have already said, that there must be a sort of a new-birth in those that come over to the Jewish Religion, but he never dreamt of any new proselytism requisite in one that had been born an Israelite. He could not therefore conceive the manner of a new birth, that he should be made an Israelite anew, unless it were by entring into the Mother's Womb a second time, which to him seemed an impossible thing.

VERS. V.

Ἐὰν μή τις γεννηθῇ ἐξ ὕδατος καὶ πνεύματος. Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit.

HE tells him that the Jew himself cannot be admitted into the Kingdom of the Messiah, unless he first strip himself of his Judaism by Baptism, and then put off his carnal, and put on a spiritual state. That by water here, is meant Baptism, I make no doubt: nor do I much less question, but our Saviour goes on from thence to the second Article of the Evangelical Doctrine. And as he had taught, that toward the participation of the benefits to be had by the Messiah, it is of little or of no value, for a man to be born of the seed of Abraham, or to be originally an Israelite, unless he was also born ἄνωθεν, or from above; so he now further teacheth him, that this admission is not to be obtained,

but

but by an abſolute renunciation of Judaiſm, and being Baptized into the profeſſion of the Goſpel. For the tenor of Chriſtian Baptiſm, runs point blank againſt Judaiſm. The Jewiſh Religion taught juſtification by works; but Evangelical Baptiſm obliged to Repentance, and alarum'd the ſinner to look elſewhere for remiſſion of ſins; ſo that, to a Jew, Baptiſm was indiſpenſibly neceſſary, in order to his admiſſion into the Kingdom of the Meſſiah, that by that Baptiſm of his, he might wholly diveſt himſelf of his Jewiſh ſtate.

VERS. X.

l אתה הוא חכם של ישראל Art thou a wiſe man in Iſrael? It was the anſwer of a Boy to R. Joſhua, when he asked him, איזו דרך קרובה לעיר Which is the ſhorteſt way to the City? The Boy anſwered, this is the ſhorteſt way, though it is the longeſt: and that is the longeſt way though it is the ſhorteſt. R. Joſhua took that way which was the ſhorteſt though the longeſt: When he came very near the City he found Gardens and places of pleaſure hedged in, ſo that he could go no further. He returned therefore to the Boy, and ſaid to him, my Son, is this the ſhorteſt way to the City? The Boy anſwered, art thou a wiſe man in Iſrael? did I not thus ſay to thee? That is the ſhorteſt way though the longeſt, &c.

VERS. XIV.

Καὶ καθὼς Μωσῆς ὕψωσε τὸν ὄφιν, &c. And as Moſes lifted up the Serpent, &c.

m Sect. 19.

THE Jews dote horribly about this noble myſtery. There are thoſe in Bemidbar rabba m, that think that the Brazen Serpent, was not affixed to a pole, but thrown up into the Air by Moſes, and there to have ſettled without any other ſupport.

n Baal Turim in Numb. XXI.

n Moſes put up the Serpent for a ſign, as he that chaſtiſeth his Son, ſticks up the rod in ſome eminent place, where the Child may ſee it, and remember.

o Nachmanid.

חסיר נוק במויק ותרפא חולי בסחליא Thou ſhalt remove the miſchief, by that which did the miſchief, and thou ſhalt heal the Diſeaſe, by that which made thee ſick. o The ſame hath R. Bechai, and both confeſs that it was נס בתוך נס a miracle within a miracle. But it is not for a Jew to underſtand the myſtery; this is the Chriſtian's attainment only.

VERS. XVII.

Οὐχ ἵνα κρίνῃ τὸν κόσμον, &c. Not to condemn the world.

IN what ſenſe (beſide that which is moſt common and proper) the Jewiſh Schools uſe the word κόσμου [עולם and עלמא] we may ſee from theſe and ſuch like inſtances.

p Bava Mezia, fol. 33. 2.

I. p שבקו כולי עלמא מחניתין ואולו בתר גמרא The whole world hath forſaken the Miſhna, and followed the Gemara. Where ſomething may be noted in the Story as well as in the Grammar of it.

So Joh. XII. 19. Ἴδε ὁ κόσμος ὀπίσω αὐτοῦ ἀπῆλθεν· Behold the world is gone after him. In Jeruſalem Language הא כולי עלמא אול בתריה We very often meet with כולי עלמא מודי All the world confeſſeth, &c. כולי עלמא לא פליגי The whole world doth not diſſent, &c. By which kind of phraſe, both amongſt them, and all other languages is meant a very great number, or multitude.

II. When they diſtinguiſh, as frequently they do betwixt עניי אותו העיר the poor of their own City, and עניי העולם the poor of the world: it is eaſie to diſcern, that by the poor of the world are meant thoſe poor that come from any other parts.

q Roſh Haſhanah, fol. 22.

III. q R. Ulla requires, not only that every great man ſhould be worthy of belief אלא אפילו אניש עלמא נמי מהימן but that the man of the world ſhould be ſo too. It is eaſie to conceive that by the man of the world is meant any perſon, of any kind or degree.

IV. But it is principally worthy our obſervation that they diſtinguiſh the whole world into ישראל Iſrael, and אומות העולם the Nations of the world. The Iſraelites, and the Gentiles. This diſtinction, by which they call the Gentiles the Nations of the world, occurs almoſt in every leaf, ſo that I need not bring inſtances of this nature. Compare Luke XII. 30. with Matth. VI. 32. and that may ſuffice.

V. They further teach us, that the Nations of the World, are not only not to be redeemed, but to be waſted, deſtroyed, and trodden under foot. r This ſeems to me to be the ſenſe. The rod of the exactor, ſhall not depart from Judah, until his Son ſhall come: to whom belongs longs the ſubduing and breaking of the people, for he ſhall vanquiſh them all with the edge of his Sword. So ſaith Rambam upon that paſſage in Gen. XLIX.

s The Morning cometh, and alſo the Night, Iſai. XXI. 12. It will be the Morning to Iſrael [when the Meſſiah ſhall come] but it will be Night to the Nations of the World. s Hieroſ. Taanith, fol. 64. 1.

t R. Abin ſaith, that the Holy bleſſed God, will make the Elders of Iſrael, ſit down in a ſemicircle, himſelf ſitting Preſident, as the Father of the Sanhedrin; and ſhall judge the Nations of the world. t Shemoth rabba, ſect. 5.

u Then comes the threſhing; the Straw they throw into the fire, the Chaff into the wind, but the Weat they keep upon the floor; ſo the Nations of the World ſhall be as the burning of a Furnace, but Iſrael alone ſhall be preſerved. u Midras Tillin in Pſal. II.

I could be endleſs in paſſages of this nature out of theſe Authors: but that which is very obſervable in all of them is this; that all thoſe curſes and dreadful judgments, which God in his Holy Writ threatens againſt wicked men, they poſt it off wholly from themſelves and their own Nation, as if not at all belonging to them, devolving all upon the Gentiles and the Nations of the World. So that it was not without great reaſon that the Apoſtle aſſerteth, Rom. III. 19. whatſoever things the Law ſaith, it ſaith to them which are under the Law. Which yet, they will by no means endure.

Chriſt therefore by this kind of phraſe or ſcheme of ſpeech well enough known to Nicodemus, teacheth him (contrary to a vulgar opinion, which he alſo could not be ignorant of) that the Meſſiah ſhould as well become a redeemer and propitiation to the Gentiles, as to the Jews. They had taught amongſt themſelves that God had no regard to the Nations of the World; they were odious to him, and the Meſſiah when he come, would deſtroy and condemn them: but the truth ſaith, God ſo loved the world, that he hath ſent his Son not to condemn, but to ſave the world. This very Evangeliſt himſelf is the beſt Commentator upon this expreſſion, 1 Epiſt. John II. 2. He is a propitiation for our ſins, and not for ours only, but for the ſins of the whole world; i. e. not for us Jews only, but for the Nations of the World.

VERS. XXV.

Ζήτησις περὶ τοῦ καθαρισμοῦ. A queſtion about purifying.

I. Ζήτησις. Syriack, בעותא which calls to mind that which is ſo perpetually in uſe amongſt the Talmudick Authors, בעא ר' מר' R. N. enquired of R. N. whence that alſo, as familiarly uſed, איבעית אימא If you ask, I will tell you. If the word in this place, be taken according to this Scholaſtick uſe of it, as it may very well be, then we may expound this paſſage thus:

The Diſciples of John having heard, that Jeſus did Baptize alſo, they with the Jews enquire, what ſort of purifying reſulted from the Baptiſm of Chriſt; whether that purifyed more than the Baptiſm of John. The word μετὰ, probably doth not oppoſe one party againſt the other, but joyns them together in one enquiry. They inquire joyntly, doeth Jeſus ſuperinduce a Baptiſm, upon the Baptiſm of John? and John his, upon the Baptiſms or waſhings of the Jews? Whether will this purifying at laſt tend, and what virtue hath this of Jeſus's beyond that of John's?

II. Or if you will, ſuppoſe we that this Ζήτησις might be a diſpute betwixt the Diſciples of St. John and the Jews, about their legal Purifications and the Baptiſm now introduced, there is no doubt but both parties contended to the uttermoſt of their power.

VERS. XXVII.

Οὐ δύναται ἄνθρωπος λαμβάνειν οὐδέν. A man can receive nothing.

THE rendring of this word λαμβάνειν, receive, may be a little queſtioned. The Syriack hath it למיסב to receive. Perhaps it might be fitlier tranſlated לקבלא to perceive, or apprehend. For the Baptiſt ſeems, in theſe words, to rebuke the incredulity and ſtupidity of theſe men. q. d. "Ye ſee by this very inſtance of your ſelves, "that no man can learn, perceive, or believe, unleſs it be given him from Heaven. For "ye your ſelves are my witneſſes, that I did prefer Jeſus before my ſelf, that I teſtifyed "of him, that he was the Son of God; the Lamb of God, &c. and ye now would cavil "againſt him and prefer me before him, ᾧ δύναται ἄνθρωπος, &c. It is apparent, that "no one can perceive or diſcern what he ought to do, unleſs it be given from Heaven: Compare with this verſ. 32. No man receiveth his teſtimony.

VERS.

VERS. XXIX.

Ὁ δὲ φίλος τοῦ νυμφίου. But the friend of the Bridegroom.

שושבין of which we have already ſpoken in our Notes upon Chap. II.

[a] Sanhedr. fol. 27. 2. אוהב ורע שושבינו his friend, that is, his Shoſhebin. Where the Gloſs hath this paſſage, which at firſt ſight the Reader may a little wonder at.

שושבינו פסול לו כל ימי חופתו The friend of the Bridegroom is not allowed him all the days of the nuptials. The ſenſe is; he is not admitted to be a Judge or witneſs for him, all that time wherein for certain days of the Nuptials, he is his Shoſhebin, or the friend of the Bridegroom.

VERS. XXXI.

Ὁ ὢν ἐκ τῆς γῆς, ἐκ τῆς γῆς ἐστι. He that is of the earth is earthly.

MArk but the Antitheſis, and you will not ſuſpect any Tautology.

1. Ὁ ὢν ἐκ τῆς γῆς, He that is of the Earth, and ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, He that cometh from Heaven. Where the Antitheſis is not ſo much between Chriſt and John, as betwixt Chriſt and all mankind.

2. Ἐκ τῆς γῆς ἐστι, He is of the Earth, and ἐπάνω πάντων ἐστι, He is above all. He that is of the Earth, is only of earthly degree, or rank: and he that is from Heaven is above all degree.

3. Ἐκ τῆς γῆς λαλεῖ, He ſpeaks of the Earth, and ὃ ἑώρακε καὶ ἤκουσε, τοῦτο μαρτυρεῖ, what he hath ſeen and heard that he teſtifyeth. He that is of the Earth ſpeaketh earthly things, and what he hath learnt upon the Earth; but he that is from Heaven, ſpeaketh thoſe things which he learnt in Heaven, viz. thoſe things which he hath ſeen and heard from God. The Baptiſt ſeems to allude to the manner of bearing witneſs, and teaching in matter of fact there was need of an eye-witneſs: in matter of doctrine, they delivered what they had heard from their Maſter.

CHAP. IV.

VERS. IV.

Ἔδει δὲ αὐτὸν διέρχεσθαι διὰ τῆς Σαμαρείας. He muſt needs go through Samaria.

[a] Antiqu. lib. 20. cap. 5. Joſephus tells us a, Ἐθος ἦν τοῖς Γαλιλαίοις, ἐν ταῖς ἑορταῖς, εἰς τὴν Ἱερὰν πόλιν πορευομένοις, ὁδεύειν διὰ τῆς Σαμαρειτῶν χώρας· It was the cuſtom for the Galileans, in their journeying to Jeruſalem, to their Feaſts, to go through Samaria.

Our Country-man Biddulph deſcribes the way which he himſelf travelled from Galilee, to Jeruſalem, Anno Dom. 1601. out of whom, for the Reader's ſake, I will borrow a few paſſages. He tells us, That on March XXIV. they rode near the Sea of Galilee, and gives the computation of that Sea, to be in length about eight leagues, and in breadth, five. Now a league is three miles. After they had gone about ſeven miles having the Sea of Galilee on their left hands, they went up an Hill not very ſteep but very pleaſant; which he ſaith is ſaid to be the Hill mentioned Joh. VI. 3. [Although here indeed either I am miſtaken, or his guides deceived him, becauſe that Mountain was on the other ſide the Sea.]

However he tells us, That from the top of this Hill, they diſcerned Saphetta, the Jews Univerſity. All the way they went was infinitely pleaſant, the Hills and Dales all very fruitful. And that about two a Clock in the Afternoon, they came to a certain Village called by the Arabians Inel Tyger, i. e. The Merchants Eye. When they had taken ſome food and ſleep, their mind leaped within them to go up Mount Tabor, which was not far off. [I fear his guides deceived him here alſo concerning this Mount.]

On the twenty fifth of March they ſpent the whole day in traverſing the pleaſant fields of Baſan near the Hill of Baſan. In the way they ſaw ſome rubbiſh of the Tower of Gehazi, 2 Kings V. 24. and came to a Town commonly called, Jenine, of old Engannim, Joſh.

Joſh. XV. 34. [more truly, Good man, Joſh. XIX. 21.] diſtant from Tabor two and twenty miles, a place of Gardens, and waters and places of pleaſure. There they ſtayed all the next day, upon the occaſion of a Turkiſh Feaſt called Byram. Mar. XXVII. Riding by Engannim they were twice in danger: once by Thieves dwelling hard by; another time by the Arabs in a Wood about twelve miles thence. That night they came to Sychar a City of Samaria mentioned Joh. IV. diſtant from Engannim ſeven and twenty miles. They ſtayed there the next day. It is now called Napolis; Jacob's Well is near it, the waters of it ſweet as milk.

March XXIX. they went from Sychar toward Jeruſalem, the nearer to which place they came the more barren and unpleaſant they found the ſoil. At length coming to a large Grove or Wilderneſs full of Trees and Hills [perhaps this was Mount Ephraim] From the top of the Hill, they ſaw the Sea on the right hand, and little Veſſels upon it, paſſing to Joppa. About three or four in the Afternoon they came to a ruinous Town called Beere, of old (as was reported to them) Beerſheba, a great City: but more probably Beeroth, mentioned Joſ. XVIII. 25. It is ſaid that was the place where Chriſts Parents firſt miſt him in their journey, Luke II. 44. They would have lodged there that night, being weary and hungry, and having ſpent their Proviſion, but they could have nothing fit for themſelves or their Horſes, and being from Jeruſalem but ten miles they went on, and after having travelled five or ſix miles had a view of the City. Thus our Countryman, a Clergy-man tells us in his Book.

This interpoſition of Samaria between Galilee and Judea muſt be remembred when we read the borders and portions of the Tribes ſet out, Ezek. XLVIII. where Manaſſeh and Ephraim (the Country of Samaria) are bounded and ſet out as formerly, but muſt not be reckoned under the notion of Samaria as they had been.

Neceſſity it ſelf found or made a way betwixt Judea and Galilee through Samaria, becauſe indeed there was no other way they could go, unleſs a long way about, through the Country beyond Jordan. Nor was there any reaſon why they ſhould make any difficulty of going through Samaria, unleſs the hoſtility of the Country. For,

b For the Country of the Cuthites is clean. (So that without ſcruple they might gather of the fruits and products of it.) The gatherings of their waters are clean. (So that a Jew might drink, or waſh himſelf in them.) Their dwellings are clean. (So that he might enter thereinto, eat, or lodge there.) Their roads are clean. (So that the duſt of them did not defile a Jew's feet.)

b Hieroſ. Avodah Zar. fol. 44. 4.

The method of the Story in this place, by compairing it with other Evangeliſt may be thus put together. Herod had impriſoned John Baptiſt, under pretence of his growing too popular, and that the multitude of his followers encreaſing, tended to innovate c. Our Saviour underſtanding this, and withal that the Sanhedrin, had heard ſomething of the increaſe of his Diſciples too, withdrew from Judea into Galile, that he might be more remote from that kind of thunder-bolt that St. John had been ſtrook with.

c Joſ. Antiqu. lib. 18. cap. 7.

VERS. V.

Πλησίον τοῦ χωρίου ὃ ἔδωκεν Ἰακὼβ τῷ Ἰωσήφ. Near to the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his Son Joſeph.

GEN. XLVIII. 22. Jacob had bought a piece of Land of the Children of Hamor for an hundred Lambs, Gen. XXXIII. 19. But, after the ſlaughter of the Sechemites, he with his Family being forced to retire to places more remote, viz. to Bethel, Bethlehem, and Hebron; the Amorites thruſt themſelves into poſſeſſion, and he fain to regain it with his Sword and Bow.

VERS. VI.

Ἦν δὲ ἐκεῖ πηγὴ τοῦ Ἰακώβ. Now Jacob's well was there.

OF this Well doth Jacob ſeem to ſpeak, in thoſe laſt words of his about Joſeph, Gen. XLIX. 22. Joſeph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a Well. For Joſeph's Off-ſpring inceaſed to a Kingdom in Jeroboam, and that in Sichem hard by Jacob's Well. He adds בנות צעדה עלי שור where if you will render שור the Enemy (as it is Pſal. XCII. 11. and perhaps Pſal. XVIII. 29.) for it is from the Chaldee only, that it ſignifies a wall; as Buxtorf tell us,] then, the words might be interpreted as a Prophecy concerning thoſe Daughters of Joſeph at Shiloh, who paſſing over to the Enemy reſtored the hoſtile Tribe of Benjamin, that otherwiſe were likely to have periſhed for want of iſſue, Judg. XXI. 19, &c. I would render the words, the Daughters go over to the Enemy: and ſo in the verſe are foretold two very ſignal events that ſhould make the off-ſpring of Joſeph more peculiarly illuſtrious; partly that hard by that Well it ſhould encreaſe into a Kingdom, and that the daughters of that Tribe ſhould reſtore and rebuild a Tribe that had almoſt periſht in its hoſtility againſt them.

The Greek Interpreters and Samaritan both Text and Verſion inſtead of בנות צעדה read בני צעירי Υἱός μου νεώτερός, my youngeſt Son; whether on purpoſe, or through careleſneſs, I know not; ſo the Greeks inſtead of עלי שור read as it ſhould ſeem עלי שוב Στράφηθι μὲ ἀνάστρεψον Turn thou unto me.

VERS. VI.

Ἐκαθέζετο οὕτως. He ſat thus.

HE ſat thus, as one weary'd. The Evangeliſt would let us know that Chriſt did not ſeemingly, or for faſhion ſake, beg water of the Samaritan woman, but in good earneſt, being urg'd to it by thirſt and wearineſs. So 1 King. II. 7. Shew kindneſs to the Sons of Barzillai, בי כן קרבו אלי for ſo, that is, in a great deal of kindneſs, they came to me. Act. VII. 8. He gave him the Covenant of Circumciſion, καὶ οὕτως, and ſo being circumciſed, he begat Iſaac.

VERS. VIII.

Ἵνα τροφὰς ἀγοράσωσι. To buy meat.

IF the Diſciples were gone into the City to buy food, how agrees this with v. 9. Οὐ συγχρῶνται Ἰουδαῖοι Σαμαρείταις, The Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans? and with that rule of the Jews, לא יאכל אדם מישראל פת כותי Let no Iſraelite eat one mouthful of any thing that is a Samaritans, for if he eat but a little mouthful, he is as if he eat ſwines fleſh. A mouthful, that is, of nothing over which a bleſſing muſt be pronounc'd.

d Tanchum, fol. 17. 4. d "Ezra, Zorobabel, and Joſhua gather'd together the whole Congregation into the "Temple of the Lord, and with three hundred Prieſts, three hundred Books of the Law, "and three hundred Children, anathematiz'd, ſhammatiz'd, excommunicated the Sama"ritans, in the name of Jehovah, by a writing indented upon Tables, and an Anathema "both of the upper and the lower houſe. Let no Iſraelite eat one morſel of any thing "that is a Samaritans. Let no Samaritan become a proſelyte to Iſrael, nor let them have a "part in the reſurrection of the dead. And they ſent this curſe to all Iſrael that were in "Babylon, who alſo themſelves added their Anathema to this, &c.

e Fol. 44. 4. But Hieroſol. Avodah Zara tells us, e "R. Jacob bar Acha, in the name of R. Lazar, "ſaith, That the victuals of the Cuthites are allow'd, if nothing of their wine or vinegar f Fol. 76. 1. "be mingled amongſt them. Nay further we meet with this paſſage in Bab. Kiddußin f, "מצת כותים מותרת The unleavened bread of the Cuthites is allow'd, and by that a man "may rightly enough keep the Paſſover. If the unleaven'd bread for the Paſſover may be had of the Samaritans, much more common bread. And grant that the Samaritans were to the Jews as Heathens, yet was it lawful for the Jew to partake of the Edibles of the Gentiles, if there was no ſuſpicion that they had been any way polluted, nor been offer'd to Idols; as may be largely made out from Maimon. in his Treatiſe about forbidden meats. Which ſuſpicion was altogether needleſs as to the Samaritans, becauſe they and the Jews in a manner agreed upon the ſame things as clean or unclean, and they were very near as free from Idolatry.

VERS. IX.

Οὐ γὰρ συγχρῶνται Ἰουδαῖοι Σαμαρείταις. For the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans.

I. THAT tranſlation, The Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans, which the French and Engliſh follow, ſeems to ſtretch the ſenſe of the word beyond what it will well bear: For, 1. granting the Samaritans were meer Heathens, (which ſome of the Rabbins have affirm'd) yet did not this forbid the Jews having any kind of dealings with them, for they did not refuſe Merchandiſing with any of the Gentile Nations whatever. See Nehem. XIII. 16, &c. 2. But if the Samaritans were גירי אמת true proſelytes, as R. Akibah aſſerts, or as the Iſraelites in all things, as Rabban Simeon ben Gamaliel ſaith of them g, then much more might the Jews have dealing with them.

g Hieroſ. Shekalim, fol. 64. 2.

II. That Verſion, non utuntur Judæi Samaritis, as Beza; or non coutuntur, as the Vulgar, hardly reacheth the ſenſe of the word, or comes fully up to the truth of the thing h.

h Gloſſ. in Kiddußh. fol. 76. 1.

It

It is lawful to eat the unleaven'd bread of the Samaritans, nor is there any ſuſpicion as to their leaven'd bread neither. This is to be underſtood, if the Samaritan ſhould knead it in the houſe of an Iſraelite. Now if the Samaritan may knead dough in an Iſraelites houſe, it is evident the Iſraelite might uſe the Samaritan.

d An Iſraelite may circumciſe a Cuthite, but a Cuthite may not circumciſe an Iſraelite, becauſe he is circumcis'd into the name of mount Gerizzim. d Hieroſ. Jeramoth. fol. 9. 1.

R. Joſah ſaith, let him circumciſe him, and let him paſs into the name of mount Gerizzim till he departs this life. If therefore it was lawful for the Iſraelite to circumciſe the Cuthite, or Samaritan, and the Samaritan the Iſraelite, then the Jews had dealings with, or did uſe the Samaritans.

What then muſt be the proper meaning of συγχρῶνται; the Hebrew word מסתפקין ſeems to anſwer it; e The Cuthites of Cæſarea asked R. Abhu, ſaying, Your fathers, מסתפקין συγχρῶντο, Our fathers, why then do not you the ſame to us? Let us gather the ſenſe from ſomething like it; it was a trite and common ſaying among the Jews קרבן שאני נהנה לך It is a gift by whatſoever thou mighteſt be profited by me, as Mat. XV. 5. According to which form of ſpeech I may ſay, שומרונים לא נהנין ליהודים Let not the Samaritans be profitable to the Jews; and in this ſenſe I would underſtand the words now in hand. The Jews have no ſuch dealings with the Samaritans, as to be obliged to them for any courteſie or benefit receiv'd from them. They ask or receive nothing from them gratis, they borrow nothing of them, which is not forbidden them as to any other Nations. e Hieroſ. Avodah Zara, fol. 44. 1.

f For three days before the feaſts of the Idolaters it is forbidden [the Jews] either to give to or receive from them, to aſk, or lend, or borrow of them. But for any other parts of the year, it was not forbidden them. But as to the Samaritans it was not permitted the Jews to borrow or receive any thing from them at any time gratis. Nor indeed can the word συγχρῶνται in this place intend any thing elſe. For whereas it was lawful for the Jews to converſe with the Samaritans, buy of them, uſe their labour, anſwer to their benedictions, Amen; as we find in Beracoth g, lodg in their Towns, Luk. IX. 52. I would fain know in what ſenſe after all this can it be ſaid, Ἰουδαῖοι οὐ συγχρῶνται Σαμαρείταις; but in this only, that they would not be oblig'd to them for any kindneſs. Which may a little ſerve to illuſtrate that of Luk. X. 33, &c. and it does very well agree with the matter in hand. f Avodah Zara, cap. 1. hal. 1. g Cap. 8. hal. 8.

For the words before ſeem to be what the woman ſpeaks, and not what the Evangeliſt; and they ſpoken ſcoptically, or with ſarcaſm, Doeſt thou who art a Jew aſk water of me who am a Samaritan? Ἰουδαῖοι γὰρ οὐ συγχρῶνται Σαμαρείταις, for you Jews deſpiſe all courteſie of the Samaritans to receive the leaſt kindneſs of them; and do you ask me for water?

The Greek Lexicons back this Expoſition, who render συγχρῶμαι not only by commercium habeo, to have dealings, but alſo by mutuo accipio, utendum rogo, to borrow for uſe, &c.

VERS. XI.

Πόθεν οὖν ἔχεις τὸ ὕδωρ τὸ ζῶν; Whence then haſt thou that living water?

Ὕδωρ ζῶν, living water: The woman miſtakes our Saviour's meaning, as if he intended only what was uſually expreſt by מים חיים bubbling, or ſpringing waters. So that when our Saviour talks to her of a water that he had to give, which whoſoever ſhould drink of, ſhould thirſt no more; the woman laughs in her ſleeve indeed, and with all the ſcorn that could be, ſaith, Sir, pray give me of this water, that I may never have any thirſt, or give my ſelf the trouble of coming hither to draw; for ſo we ought to conceive of her anſwer to be rather by way of ſcoff not ſupplication.

VERS. XVIII.

Πέντε γὰρ ἄνδρας ἔχες, &c. Thou haſt had five husbands, &c.

CHRIST ſtops her fleering mouth with the dung of her own unchaſt converſation, charging her with that infamous ſort of life ſhe had hitherto liv'd. q. d. Thou for thy impudent adulteries haſt ſuffer'd divorce from five husbands already, and that which thou now haſt is not thy husband but an adulterer.

h כותים אין בקיאין בתורת קידושין וגרושין The Cuthites do not underſtand the Law about betrothings and divorcings. They had their cuſtoms of affiancing and divorcing; and perhaps by how much the leſs accurate they were about their divorces (I mean with reſpect to the Jewiſh rules) the neerer they might come to the firſt inſtitution of Moſes, who allow'd no divorces but in the cauſe of adultery. That this woman was diſmiſt from her husbands, for theſe infamous faults of hers ſeems evident partly from the extraordinary number of Husbands, partly that our Saviour mentions her Husbands as well as him that h Kiddushin ubi ſupr.

then liv'd adulterously with her; as if he would intimate that she liv'd dishonestly under her Husbands, as well as with this man.

VERS. XX.

Ἐν τούτῳ τῷ ὄρει προσεκύνησαν. Worshipped in this mountain.

THE story of that Temple on Gerizzim out of Josephus and others, is very well known. It was built in emulation and envy to that at Jerusalem, as of old were Dan and Bethel. Hence that irreconcileable hatred between the two Nations, and the apostacy of divers Jews. The Samaritans attributed a certain holiness to the mountain, even after the Temple had been destroy'd; but for what reason they themselves could not well tell. However for the defence of it, the Samaritan Text hath notoriously falsified the words of Moses in Deut. XXVII. 4. For whereas the Hebrew hath it, Ye shall set up these stones which I command you this day בהר עיבל in mount Ebal. The Samaritan Text and Version hath it בהר גריזים in mount Gerizzim, as I have elsewhere observ'd.

i Bereſh. rabba. Sect. 32. i R. Jochanan going to Jerusalem to pray עבר בהרין פלטאנוס he past by that mountain [Gerizzim] a certain Samaritan seeing him, askt him, Whether goest thou? I am, saith he, going to Jerusalem to pray. To whom the Samaritan, Were it not better for thee to pray in this holy mountain, than in that curſed house? Whence comes this mountain to be so holy? saith he, דלא טף במוי דמבולא because (saith the other) it was not over-flown by the waters of the deluge. A doughty reason indeed!

k Ibid. Sect. 81. k R. Ismael the Son of R. Joseph going to Jerusalem to pray, past by that mountain, a certain Samaritan meeting him, asks where art thou going? I am going, saith he, to Jerusalem to pray. Saith the other, were it not better for thee to pray in this blessed mountain than in that curſed place. Saith the R. I will tell you what you are like, you are like a dog greedy after carrion; so you when you know that Idols are hid under this mountain (as it is said, [Gen. XXXV. 4.] and Jacob hid them) you are acted with a greedy desire after them. They said amongst themselves, seeing he knows there are Idols hidden in this mountain, he will come in the night and steal them away. And they consulted together to have kill'd him, but he getting up in the night stole away.

Somewhat akin to this Temple on Gerizzim was that built by Onias in Egypt, the story l Antiqu. l. b. 13. 6. of which you have in l Josephus, and the description of it m. Of this Temple also the Ge- m De Bell. lib. 7. cap. 37. marists discourse n, from whom we will borrow a few things. n Menacoth. fol. 109. 2.

Simeon the Just dying, said, Onias my Son shall minister in my stead. For this his brother Shimei being older than he by two years and an half, grew very envious. He saith to his brother, Come hither and I will teach thee the rule and way of ministring: So he puts him on אונקלו and girds him בצילצול [you shall have the meaning of the words by and by] and then setting him by the Altar, crys out to his brethren the Priests, see here what this man hath vow'd, and does accordingly perform to his wife, viz. that whenever he minister'd in the High Priesthood, he would put on her Stomacher, and be girt about with her girdle. The Gloss upon the place saith that the אונקלי was a leathern garment; but Aruch from Avodah Zarah מאי אונקלי what is the אונקלי; R. Abba saith it is אסטומכא דלבא the Stomacher of the heart. What the word in this place should mean, is plain enough from the story it self. Shimei that he might render his brother both ridiculous and odious to the rest of the Priests, perswades him to perform his services with his wife's Stomacher instead of the Brest-plate of the High Priest, and her girdle instead of that curious one they were wont to be girt with, &c.

The story goes on: His brethren the Priests upon this contrive his death, but he escaping their hands, fled into Alexandria of Egypt, and there building an Altar, offer'd Idolatrous sacrifices upon it. These are the words of R. Meir, but R. Judah tells him the thing was not so; for Onias did not own his brother Shimei to be two years and an half older than himself; but envying him, told him, come and I will teach thee the rule and method of thy Ministry. And so as R. Judah relates the matter, the Tables are turn'd, the whole scene alter'd, so that Onias perswades his brother Shimei to put on his wife's Stomacher, and gird himself with her girdle, and for that reason the Priests do plot the death of Shimei. But when he had declar'd the whole matter as it was indeed, then they design to kill Onias: He therefore flying into Alexandria in Egypt, builds there an Altar, and offer'd sacrifices upon it to the name of o Isa. XIX. 19. the Lord, according as it is said, o In that day shall be an Altar to the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt.

And now it is at the Readers choice to determine which of these two Temples, that in Egypt, or this upon Gerizzim are built upon the best foundation, the one by a fugitive Priest under pretence of a Divine Prophesie; the other by a fugitive Priest too, under pretence that that Mount was the Mount upon which the blessings had been pronounced. Let the Jews speak for themselves whether they believed that Onias with pure regard to that that Propheſie did build his Temple in Egypt; and let every wiſe man laugh at thoſe that do thus perſwade themſelves. However this is certain, they had univerſally much more favourable thoughts of that in Egypt, than this upon Mount Gerizzim; hence that paſſage in the place before quoted: If any one ſay, I devote an whole burnt-offering, let him offer it in the Temple at Jeruſalem; for if he offer it in the Temple of Onias, he doth not perform his vow; but if any one ſay, I devote an whole burnt-offering for the Temple of Onias, though he ought to offer it in the Temple at Jeruſalem, yet if he offer it in the Temple of Onias, he acquits himſelf. R. Simeon ſaith, it is no burnt-offering. Moreover, if any one ſhall ſay I vow my ſelf to be a Nazarite, let him ſhave himſelf in the Temple at Jeruſalem, for if he be ſhaven in the Temple of Onias, he doth not perform his vow; but if he ſhould ſay, I vow my ſelf a Nazarite, ſo that I may be ſhaven in the Temple of Onias, and he do ſhave himſelf there, he is a Nazarite.

Καὶ ὑμεῖς λέγετε ὅτι ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις, &c. And ye ſay that in Jeruſalem, &c.

What? did not the Samaritans themſelves confeſs that Jeruſalem was the place appointed by God himſelf for his Worſhip? No doubt, they could not be ignorant of the Temple which Solomon had built, nor did they believe but from the times of David and Solomon God had fixed his name and reſidence at Jeruſalem. And as to their preferring their Temple on Gerizzim before that in Jeruſalem notwithſtanding all this; it is probable their boldneſs and emulation might take its riſe from hence, viz. they ſaw the ſecond Temple falling ſo ſhort of its ancient and primitive glory; they obſerv'd that the Divine preſence over the Ark, the Ark it ſelf, the Cherubims, the Urim and Thummim, the ſpirit of Propheſie, &c. were no more in that place.

VERS. XXXV.

Οἶδα ὅτι Μεσσίας ἔρχεται. I know that Meſſias cometh.

IF the Samaritans rejected all the Books of the Old Teſtament, excepting the five Books of Moſes, it may be a queſtion whence this woman ſhould know the name of Meſſias, for that it is not to be found throughout the whole Pentateuch. From whence alſo may further ariſe a twofold enquiry more; one, whether the Samaritans were of the ſame opinion with the Sadducees; the other, whether thoſe Sadducees that liv'd amongſt the Jews, rejected all the Books of the Old Teſtament, excepting thoſe of Moſes only. Perhaps they might ſo reject them as to forbid their being read in their Synagogues, in the ſame manner as the Jews rejected the Hagiographa; but the queſtion is, whether they did not uſe them, read them, and believe them as the Jews did thoſe holy writings. p Schabb. fol. 115. 1.

p They ſnatch all the ſacred Books out of the fire (though on the Sabbath day) whether they read, or whether they read them not. The Gloſs is, Whether they read them, that is, the Prophets; which they are wont to read in their Synagogues on the Sabbath-day, or whether they read them not, that is, the Hagiographa. It is likely that the Sadducees and Samaritans (I mean thoſe Samaritans that liv'd about our Saviours time and before) might diſown the Prophets and the Holy writings much after the ſame manner and no more. For is it at all probable that they were either ignorant of the Hiſtories of Joſhua, Judges, Samuel, the Kings, and the writings of the Prophets, or that they accounted them tales and of no value? There were ſome amongſt the Samaritans, as Eulogius in Photius q tells us, who had an opinion that Joſhuah the Son of Nun was that Prophet (of whom Moſes ſpake) that God would raiſe up to them out of their brethren like to him. Do we think then that the Hiſtory and Book of Joſhua were unknown or diſown'd by them? However I cannot omit without ſome remarks, ſome few paſſages we meet with in Sanhedr. r q Cod. CCXXX

The Sadducees asked Rabban Gamaliel, whence he could prove it that God would raiſe the dead, from the Law (ſaith he) and from the Prophets, and from the Holy Writings. And accordingly he alledgeth his proofs out of each Book, which I hope may not be very tedious to the Reader to take notice of in this place. I prove it out of the Law, where it is written, And the Lord ſaid to Moſes, Deut. XXXI. 16. הנך שוכב עם אבותיך וקם Behold, thou ſhalt ſleep with thy fathers and riſe again. They ſay probably it is meant, וקם העם הזה וזנה This people will riſe up and go a whoring. I prove it out of the Prophets according as it is written, thy dead men ſhall live, together with my dead body ſhall they ariſe, awake and ſing ye that dwell in the duſt, Iſa. XXVI. 19. But perhaps (ſay they) this may be meant of thoſe dead which Ezekiel raiſed. I prove it out of the Hagiographa, according as it is written, The roof of thy mouth is like the beſt wine for my beloved, that goeth down ſweetly, cauſing the lips of thoſe that are aſleep to ſpeak, Cant. VII. 9. But perhaps (ſay they) it is meant they move their lips in the world. I add [ſay they] though it is not, I confeſs, in the Gemariſts Text, becauſe reaſon and ſenſe makes it evident, that this ought to be added, and the Gloſs confirms it. r Fol. 90. 2.

Now

Now it would have been a moſt abſurd thing for Gamaliel to have offer'd any proofs of the Reſurrection, either out of the Prophets, or the Hagiographa againſt the Sadducees, if thoſe Books had been either not known, or of no authority amongſt them. And we ſee that the Books themſelves out of which theſe proofs were brought were not excepted againſt, but the places quoted had another ſenſe put upon them, and pleaded for by them.

s Hilrof. Jevamoth. fol. 3.1. s "It is a Tradition of R. Simeon ben Eliezer, I ſaid unto the Scribes of the Samaritans, "ye therefore err becauſe you do not interpret according to *R. If it were ſo, ſaith R. Jonathan, then ſhould the Lord "have commanded Noah to have gone up into this mountain and not have built himſelf u Cholin. fol. 87. 1. "an Ark. We alſo meet with a Sadducee quoting the Prophet Amos u: "A certain Sad- "ducee ſaid to a certain Rabbi, He that created the Hills did not make רוח a ſpirit, or the "wind. And he that created the wind did not make the hills; for it is written כי הנה "יוצר הרום ובורא רוח Behold he that formeth the mountains and createth the wind Amos, "V. 13. The Rabbi anſwer'd שוטה thou fool, go on but to the end of the verſe, and thou "wilt find the Lord of Hoſts is his name.

x Schabb. fol. 116. 1. That paſſage alſo is remarkable x, They do not ſnatch הגליונין וספרי מינים the Books and Volums of the Hereticks from the flames, they may be burnt where they are. The Gloſs is, The Books of Hereticks, i.e. משרתים לעו"ג Idolaters (or thoſe that uſe any ſtrange worſhip) who wrote out the Law, the Prophets, and the Holy writings for their own uſe, in the Aſſyrian character and holy language. But קיציר פסקי הראש upon the place renders it גליונין וספרי צרוקים אין מצילין They ſnatch not away the Volums and Books of the Sadducees. If by Hereticks the Sadducees are to be underſtood as the latter Gloſs would have it, then comparing it with the former, they had the Law, Prophets, and the Holy writings writ in the Aſſyrian Character in the Holy language.

If by Hereticks the Chriſtians are underſtood, as in the former Gloſs, (for as to the Gentiles there is no room to underſtand it of them in this place) then we ſee what Copies of the Old Teſtament the Hebrew-Chriſtians anciently had in uſe.

It may be objected, that if the Sadducees admitted the Books of the Prophets, and the Holy writings, with this exception only, that they had them not read in their Synagogues, how came they to deny the Reſurrection from the dead, when it is ſo plainly aſſerted in thoſe Books?

To this may be anſwer'd that this argument might have ſomething in it if it had not been one fundamental of the Sadducees Faith, that no article in Religion ought to be admitted, that cannot be made out plainly from the five Books of Moſes. Compare this y Gloſs in Sanhedr. fol. 90. 1. with that of the Phariſees y, However any perſon may acknowledg the Reſurrection from the dead, yet if he does not own that there is ſome indication of it in the Law, he denies a fundamental. So that whereas Moſes ſeemed not clearly and in terminis to expreſs himſelf as to the Reſurrection, the Sadducees would not admit it as an article of their Faith, though ſomething like it may have occur'd in the Prophets, ſo long as thoſe expreſſions in the Prophets may be turn'd to ſome other ſenſe, either Hiſtorical or Allegorical. But if they had apprehended any thing plain and expreſs in the Books of Moſes, the Prophets alſo aſſerting and illuſtrating the ſame thing, I cannot ſee why we ſhould not believe they were receiv'd by them.

It is ſomething of this kind the paſſage now in hand, where we find the Samaritan woman uſing the word Meſſias, which though it is not to be met with in the Books of Moſes, yet Moſes having clearly ſpoken of his coming, whom the Prophets afterward ſignaliz'd by the name of the Meſſias; this foundation being laid, the Sadducees and the Samaritans, do not ſtick to ſpeak of him in the ſame manner, and under the ſame title wherein the Prophets had mention'd him. But then what kind of conceptions they had of the perſon, Kingdom, and days of the Meſſiah, whether they expected the fore-runner Elias, or the Reſurrection of the dead at his coming, as the Scribes and Phariſees did, is ſcarcely credible.

VERS.

VERS. XXVII.

Ἐθαύμαζον ὅτι μετὰ γυναικὸς ἐλάλει. They marvel'd that he talked with the woman.

THEY marvel he ſhould talk with a woman, much more with a Samaritan woman. z R. Joſe the Galilæan being upon a journey לברוריה אשכחיה (I am much miſtaken if it ſhould not be writ אשכחה) found Berurea in the way; to whom he ſaid באיזו דרך נלך ללוד what way muſt we go to Lydda? She anſwered, O thou fooliſh Galilean have not the wiſe men taught אל תרבה שיחה עם אישה do not multiply diſcourſe with a woman? Thou oughteſt only to have ſaid באיזו ללוד which way to Lydda.

z Erubbim, fol. 53. 2.

Upon what occaſion this woman ſhould be call'd ברוריה Berurea is not our buſineſs at preſent to enquire; but that the Reader may know ſomething of her, ſhe was the wife of R. Meir, a learned woman, and a teacher her ſelf a: "His wife Berurea was a wiſe woman "of whom many things are related in Avodah Zarah. VERS. XXVIII.

Ἀφῆκεν ἓν τὴν ὑδρίαν. Left her water-pot.

'TWAS kindly done to leave her water-pot behind her, that Jeſus and his Diſciples whom ſhe now ſaw come up to him, might have wherewithal to drink.

VERS. XXIX.

Ὃς εἶπέ μοι πάντα ὅσα ἐποίησα, &c. Who hath told me all things that ever I did, &c.

THIS paſſage doth ſomething agree with the Jewiſh notion about their Meſſiah's ſmelling.

f "It is written והריחו ביראת ה and he ſhall make him of quick ſcent or ſmell in the "fear of the Lord, Iſa. XI. 3. Rabba ſaith, he ſhall be of quick ſcent, and ſhall judg, as "it is written, he ſhall not judg by the ſight of his eyes, &c. Ben Cozibah reign'd two "years and an half, and ſaid to the Rabbins, I am the Meſſiah. They ſay unto him, it is "ſaid of the Meſſiah, that he ſhall be of quick ſcent and ſhall judg; let us ſee if you can "ſmell and judg; which when he could not do, they killed him.

f Sanhedr. fol. 93. 2.

The Samaritan woman perceiv'd that Jeſus had ſmelt out all her clandeſtine wickedneſſes which ſhe had perpetrated out of the view of men, for which very reaſon ſhe argu'd it with her ſelf that this muſt be the Meſſiah. And by her report her fellow Citizens are encourag'd to come and ſee him. They ſee him, hear him, invite him, receive and entertain him, and believe in him. Is it not probable therefore that they as well as the Jews might have expected the coming of the Meſſiah about this time? if ſo, whence ſhould they learn it, from the Jews? or from the Book of Daniel?

VERS. XXXV.

Ἔτι τετράμηνός ἐστι καὶ ὁ θερισμὸς ἔρχεται. There are yet four months, and then cometh the harveſt.

THE beginning of the harveſt [that is the barley-harveſt] was about the middle of the month Niſan. Conſult Levit. XXIII. 10, &c. Deut. XVI. 9.

h Half Tiſri, all Marheſhvan, and half Ciſleu, is זרע the ſeeds time. Half Ciſleu, whole Tebeth, and half Shebat, is חורף the winter. Half Shebat, whole Adar, and half Niſan, is קור the winter ſolſtice. Half Niſan, all Ijar, and half Sevan, is קציר the harveſt. Half Sivan, all Tammuz, and half Ab, is קיץ the Summer. Half Ab, all Elul, and half Tiſri, is חום the great heat.

h Bava Mizia, fol. 106. 2.

They

They ſow'd the wheat and ſpelt in the month Tiſri, and Marheſhvan, and ſo onward. Targ. upon Eccleſ. XI. 2. Give a good portion of thy ſeed to thy field in the month Tiſri, and withhold thou not from ſowing alſo in Ciſleu.

They ſow'd barley in the months Shebat and Adar.

i Gloſſ. in Roſh haſhanah, fol. 16. 1.

i זרע אפלא The lateward ſeed, or that which is hid and lieth long in the earth, the wheat and the ſpelt, which do not ſoon ripen, are ſown in Marheſhvan, זרע חרפא the early ſeed, the barley, which ſoon ripens, is ſown in Shebat and Adar.

k Menacoth, fol. 85. 1.

k They ſow ſeventy days before the Paſſover.

The Barley therefore, the hope of an harveſt to come after four months, was not yet committed to the ground, and yet our Saviour ſaith, Behold the fields are already white unto the harveſt. Which thing being a little obſerv'd, will help to illuſtrate the words and deſign of our Lord. Lift up your eyes (ſaith he) and look upon the fields, &c. pointing without doubt toward that numerous crowd of people that at that time flockt toward him out of the City, q.d. Behold what an harveſt of ſouls is here, where there had been no ſowing beforehand.

Now let us but reckon τετράμηνον, the four months backward from the beginning of the barley-harveſt, or the middle of the month Niſan, and we ſhall go back to the middle of the month Ciſleu, which will fall in with the beginning of our December, or thereabout; whence it will be eaſie to conjecture what Feaſt that was, of which mention is made, Chap. V. 1.

VERS. XLVI.

Τὶς Βασιλικὸς. A certain Nobleman.

THIS Nobleman probably might be ſome Herodian, ſuch as we find mention'd Mat. XXII. 16. not meerly a ſervant or attendant upon Herod the Tetrarch, who reign'd at this time, but one devoted to Herod's family, out of principles of conſcience and ſubmiſſion. For we have elſewhere ſhewn the controverſie in that Nation about the introducing of Herod the Great into the Government; and whether there was not a ſpice of that quarrel in the differences of the Shammeans and the Hillelites, might be a matter worth our enquiry, but not in this place. But ſuppoſe this Nobleman at preſent to have been an attendant upon Herod the Tetrarch (ſetting aſide that controverſie) and then the words of our Bleſſed Saviour, v. 48. Except ye ſee ſigns and wonders ye will not believe, may have this tendency and deſign in them. The Jews they requir'd ſigns, 1 Cor. I. 22. but Herod's Court was eſpecially to be charg'd with this curioſity, becauſe they had heard John the Baptiſt, yea even the Tetrarch himſelf with ſome kind of obſervance and veneration, and yet becauſe John ſhewed no ſign, did no miracle, Joh. X. 41. he was the eaſilier thrown into priſon, and not believ'd; for the ſtory of his impriſonment immediately follows. Compare that paſſage with Luk. XXIII. 8.

CHAP. V.

VERS. I.

Μετὰ ταῦτα ἦν ἑορτὴ τῶν Ἰουδαίων. After this there was a feaſt of the Jews.

THE other Evangeliſts ſpeak but ſparingly of Chriſts Acts in Judea, this of ours ſomething more copiouſly. They mention nothing of the Paſſovers from his Baptiſm to his death, excepting the very laſt; but St. John points at them all. The firſt he ſpeaks of Chap. II. 13. the third, Chap. VI. 4. the fourth, Chap. XIII. 1. and the ſecond in this place. It is true, he does not call it by the name of the Paſſover here, but only a feaſt in general. However the words of our Saviour mention'd above, Chap. IV. 35. do give ſome kind of light into this matter.

VERS.

VERS. II.

Ἑβραϊστὶ. In the Hebrew tongue.

THAT is in the language beyond Euphrates, or the Chaldean. Aruch upon the word עברות לשון דעבר הנהר עבר Ἑβραϊστὶ; that is, the language of thoſe beyond the flood.

l דיו כתובין גפתית מדית עברית if the holy Books be written in the Egyptian, or Medes, or Hebrew language: Gloſſ. עברית כתב של עבר הנהר In the Hebrew, that is, the language of thoſe beyond Euphrates. l Schabb. fol. 115. 1.

m כתב עברי של בנו עבר הנהר The Hebrew writing is that of thoſe beyond the river. m Gloſſ. in Sanhedr. fol. 21. 2.

So that by עברית Ἑβραϊστὶ, they mean the Chaldee language, which from their return out of Babylon, had been their mother tongue; and they call it the language of thoſe beyond Euphrates, (although uſed alſo in common with the Syrians on this ſide Euphrates) that with reſpect to the Jews, they might diſtinguiſh it from the ancient holy tongue, q.d. not the tongue they uſed before they went into captivity, but that which they brought along with them from beyond Euphrates.

The Jews to whom this was the mother tongue were called Hebrews; and from thence are diſtinguiſht from the Helleniſts, which every ones knows. Whence St. Paul ſhould call himſelf an Hebrew, 2 Cor. XI. 22. when he was born in Tarſus of Cilicia, might deſerve our conſideration.

Πέντε Στοὰς ἔχουσα. Having five Porches.

It mightily obtains amongſt ſome that in Betheſda the ſacrifices were waſht before they offer'd them; but here I am a little at a ſtand. For,

I. It is very difficult proving that the Sacrifices were waſht at all, either here or in any place elſe, before they were offer'd. The Holy Scriptures are wholly ſilent as to any ſuch thing; nor as far as I have yet found, do the Traditional writings ſpeak of it. It is confeſt the entrails were waſht after the beaſt had been ſlain, and for this ſervice there was ſet apart in the very Temple לשכת המדיחין the waſhing room. But for their bodies, their skins, or backs, whether they were waſht before they were ſlain, is juſtly queſtionable.

II. Amongſt all the blemiſhes and defects whereby the beaſt was render'd unfit for ſacrifice, we do not read that this was ever reckon'd, that they had not been waſhed. Do we believe that Abraham waſht the Ram caught in thickets, Gen. XXII. before he ſacrific'd it? It is ſaid indeed, n "נטלו והספיגו That he took it and wiped it. But this was after "he had taken off the skin. "He took it והפשיטו and taking off the skin, he ſaid, Be- "hold this, O Lord, as if the skin of thy ſervant Iſaac was taken off before thee. He wi- "ped it [Gloſſ. מקנחו בספוג he wiped it with a ſponge] and ſaid, Behold this as if Iſaac "was wip'd. He burnt it and ſaid, &c. n Bemidbar rabbâ, fol. 268. 3.

I. I would therefore judg rather that men and not beaſts were waſhed in the Pool of Betheſda. I mean the unclean, that by waſhing they might be purify'd. For whoever conſiders the numbers of the unclean that did every day ſtand in need of being waſhed; and whoever would a little turn over the Talmudick Treatiſes about Purifications, and the gatherings of waters for thoſe purpoſes, might eaſily perſwade himſelf that both Betheſda, and all the other Pools in Jeruſalem did ſerve rather for the waſhing of men, and not of beaſts.

I would further judg that the Syriack Interpreter when he renders that paſſage, There was at Jeruſalem דכתא חדא דמעמודיתא a certain place of Baptiſtery, that he intended rather the waſhing unclean perſons than beaſts.

II. o There was not any like to Benaiah the Son of Jehojadah under the ſecond Temple, יומא חדא דחקת רגליה בחרדונא דמיתת חבר גויא דברדא וטבל ונחת לשילוח he one day ſtruck his foot againſt a dead Tortoiſe, and went down to Siloam, where breaking all the little particles of hail, he waſhed himſelf.——This was on the ſhorteſt day in winter, the tenth of the Month Tebeth. o Targ. in 1 Chron XI. 22.

I do not concern my ſelf for the truth of this ſtory; but muſt take notice what he hints that telleth it; viz. that in ſuch a caſe men were wont to waſh themſelves in Siloam, not the Fountain, but the Pool.

p Simeon Sicuenſis dug Wells, Ciſterns and Caves in Jeruſalem——ſaith Rabban Jochanan ben Zacchai, if a woman ſhould come to thee and ask thee about her Menſtrua, Thou ſaiſt to her טבלי בבור הזה dip thy ſelf in this Well, for the waters thereof will purifie. p Midras Coheleth, fol. 95. 3.

III. Thoſe five Porches therefore ſeem to be the ſeveral entrances by which the unclean went down into the waters to be waſhed; and in which before waſhing they might lay up their their Cloths, and after it, put them on again being there always protected from the rain. And perhaps they had their different entrances and deſcents according to the different ſorts of uncleanneſs, that all thoſe that were one and the ſame way defiled, ſhould have one and the ſame entrance and deſcent into the Pool. That this was the firſt deſign and uſe of theſe Porches, I do not at all doubt, though afterward there was another uſe for them brought in. And as to the waſhing of the unclean in this Pool, let me alſo ſuperadd this one remark. That when they allowed (and that of neceſſity becauſe of the multitudes of unclean perſons) the leſſer gatherings of waters, viz. forty Seah's of water in a place fitted on purpoſe both for bredth and depth, if there was no greater plenty of water, then we muſt not ſuppoſe that they would by any means neglect the Ponds and Pools.

VERS. IV.

Ἄγγελος γὰρ κατὰ καιρὸν κατέβαινεν. An Angel went down at a certain ſeaſon.

IT is hardly imaginable that theſe impotent people lay day and night throughout the whole year at this Pool. It ſeems rather that the troubling of the waters and healing the ſick was uſual only at the ſolemn Feaſts, probably only the Feaſts of the Paſsover. And ſo, it may not be amiſs to interpret the κατὰ καιρὸν with this reſtriction, it was a Feaſt of the Jews and an Angel went down at that certain ſeaſon into the Pool, &c.

Καὶ ἐτάραξε τὸ ὕδωρ. And troubled the water.

We have this Story, or rather this Tale concerning a certain Fountain troubled by an evil Angel. f It is a Story in our City concerning Abba Joſes [ſaith R. Berechiah in the name of R. Simeon] that when he ſate at the Fountain, and required ſomething, there appear'd to him the Spirit that reſided there, and ſaid, you know well enough, how many years I have dwelt in this place, and how your ſelves and your Wives have come and returned without any damage done to you. But now you muſt know that an evil Spirit, endeavours to ſupply my room; who would prove very miſchievous amongſt you. He ſaith to him, what muſt we do then? He anſwered him and ſaid, Go and tell the Towns people, that whoever hath an Hammer, and an Iron Pinn or Bolt, let him come hither to morrow morning, and have his eyes intent upon the waters וכך אינון חמיין ערבוביא דמויא and when you ſee the waters troubled then let them knock with the Iron, and ſay, דיקן נצח the victory is ours: and ſo let them not go back till they ſee חדרא דדמא על אפי מויא thick drops of blood upon the face of the waters. [The Gloſs is: By this ſign, it will appear that the Spirit was conquered and killed.] And ſo, they reſt of the Legend tells us, that they did as was commanded, and did not depart till they ſaw the thick drops of blood upon the waters. Let them enjoy themſelves in their doughty victory.

f Vajicra rabba, ſect. 24.

When the time was not afar off, wherein there ſhould be a Fountain opened for ſin, and for uncleanneſs, Zech. XIII. 1. viz. The Fountain of the blood of Chriſt; divine Providence would have it, that a thing of that inconceiveable excellency and benefit ſhould not want ſome notable prognoſtick, and forerunner. And therefore amongſt all the Fountains and Pools that were in Jeruſalem for waſhing the unclean, he choſe the moſt noble and celebrated Pool of Bethesda or Siloam, that in that might appear ſome prefiguration of his blood that ſhould heal the world. Thoſe waters therefore that had been only cleanſing before, were made healing now; that, by their purifying and healing quality, they might prefigure, and proclaim, that that true and living Fountain was not far off, who ſhould both purge and heal mankind in the higheſt degree.

How many years before our Saviour's ſuffering, this miraculous vertue of the Pool diſcovered its ſelf, the Holy Story doth not tell us; and as for the traditional Books, I do not find that they once mention the thing, although I have turned over not a few of their Writings (if poſſible) to have met with it. From what Epocha therefore to date the beginning of it, would ſeem raſhneſs in us to undertake the determining. Whether from the firſt ſtructure of the Sheep-gate by Eliaſhib, as ſome perſons of great note judge: or whether from the extinction of the Aſmonean Family, or the rebuilding of the Temple by Herod, or from the Nativity of our Saviour, or from any other time let the Reader make his own choice: What if we ſhould date it from that great Earth-quake, of which Joſephus g hath this paſſage: About that time, about the Battel of Actium betwixt Ceſar and Antony, the ſeventh year of the Reign of King Herod, there was a mighty Earthquake in Judea, that made an infinite ſlaughter of Beaſts in that Country; and near ten thouſand people ſlain by the fall of Houſes. Perhaps in that ruine the Tower of Siloam fell, of which, Luke XIII. 4. and what if then the Angel made his deſcent firſt into the Pool? as Matth. XXVIII. 2. There was a great Earthquake, for the Angel of the Lord deſcended, &c. But in this matter, I had rather learn than dogmatize.

g Antiqu. lib. 15. cap. 7.

It

It might be further enquired, at what time it was firſt known that the healing quality followed the troubling of the waters; but this is as dark and obſcure as the former: eſpecially when the Spirit of Prophecy, appearance of Angels, and working of Miracles had been things ſo long unwonted in that Nation.

The Maſters attribute ſuch a kind of an healing virtue לבארה שהיה מרים to the fountain of Miriam, as they call it in the Sea of Tiberias.

h The Story is במיכה שחין of a certain Ulcerous Man, who, went down to the Sea of Tiberias, that he might dip himſelf ואותאסי אסחי באדרה של מריב וארעת טפת and it happened to be the time when the Well of Miriam flowed, ſo that he ſwam there and was healed. h Midraſ Cohelleth, 97. 2.

They have a fiction about a certain Well that opened it ſelf to the Iſraelites in the Wilderneſs for the merits of Miriam, which at her departure diſappeared. They ſuppoſe alſo, as it ſhould ſeem, that a certain Well or gulph, in ſome part of the Sea of Genneſaret had obtained this Medicinal vertue for her ſake. It is a wonder they had not got the ſtory of this Pool by the end too, and attributed its vertue to the merits of Solomon, becauſe this once was Solomon's Pool.

There was a time when God ſhewed wonders upon the Fountains and Rivers about Jeruſalem, in a very different manner, that is, in great ſeverity and judgment, as now in mercy and compaſſion.

i Τιτῳ μὲν γὰρ πηγαὶ πλουσιώτεραι ῥέουσιν αἱ ξηρανθεῖσαι πρότερον ἡμῖν· Theſe are the words of Joſephus exhorting the people to ſurrender themſelves. Thoſe ſprings flow abundantly to Titus, which as to us, had dryed away long before. For you know, how before his coming, Siloam, and all the ſprings about the City failed ſo much, that water was bought by the bottle: but now, they bubble up afreſh for your Enemies, and that in ſuch abundance, that they have ſufficiently, not only for themſelves, but for their Cattel and Gardens. Which very miracle this Nation hath formerly experienced, when this City was taken by the King of Babylon. i Joſeph. de bell. lib. 5. cap. 26.

If there was ſuch a miracle upon the waters upon the approach of the Enemy and deſtroyer; it is leſs wonder, that there ſhould be ſome miraculous appearances there, though in a different manner, at the approach of him who was to be our Saviour.

How long the vertue of this Pool laſted for healing the Impotent, whether to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem; or whether it ceaſed before, or from this very time, it would be to as little purpoſe to enquire, as after the original and firſt appearance of it, being both ſo very uncertain and unintelligible.

VERS. VI.

Θέλεις ὑγιὴς γενέσθαι; Wilt thou be made whole?

IT is no queſtion but he deſired to be healed, becauſe for that vey end he had layen there ſo long. But this queſtion of our Saviour, hath reſpect to the Sabbath, q. d. wouldſt thou be healed on the Sabbath day? For, that they were infinitely ſuperſtitious in this matter, there are ſeveral inſtances in the Evangeliſts, not to mention their own Traditions, Mark III. 2. Luke XIII. 14. and XIV. 3.

VERS. VIII.

Ἆρον τὸν κράβαττόν σου καὶ περιπάτει. Take up thy bed and walk.

I Would render it in the Jewiſh language thus, שוֹר ערשך וטלטל He ſaid elſewhere, Take up thy bed and go thy way into thine Houſe, Mark II. 11. Whether this be the ſame with that, it is not ſo very clear.

I. The common diſtinction muſt be obſerved between רשות היחיד and רשות רבים which reſpects the Sabbath: that is ſo, that there may be a difference betwixt a private place, or what is any ones peculiar right, and a publick place, or what is of more publick and common right. Let nothing be carried out on the Sabbath, out of a private place into a publick, and ſo on the contrary.

k Whoever on the Sabbath, carries out any thing either from a private place to a publick, or from a publick place to a private, or brings in בשוגג חייב חטאת if he do this unadviſedly, he is bound to offer Sacrifice for his ſin, במויד ענוש כרת ונסקל but if preſumptuouſly, he is puniſhed by cutting off, and being ſtoned. k Schabb. fol. 6. 1.

II. But it was lawful within places of private propriety, ſuch as were the Porches, Entryes, and Courts, where various Families dwelling together by עירוב might be joyned; it was lawful for them to remove and bear from one place to another, but not all things, nor indeed any thing, unleſs upon very urgent neceſſity.

l They remove four or five Chests of straw, or fruits, for the sakes of Passengers, or want of Beth Midrash. But they remove not their treasure, &c. The Gloss is, They remove these things, if they have need of the place they take up; either for Passengers to eat, or Scholars to learn in: neither are solicitous for their labour on the Sabbath, &c.

But what do we speak of these things, whenas by the Canons and Rules of the Scribes, it is forbidden them to carry any thing of the least weight or burden on the Sabbath day. So that it would be plainly contrary to those rules to take his Bed hither or thither in the Porch it self, much more out of the Porch into the streets. It is worthy our observing therefore, that our Saviour did not think it enough, meerly to heal the Impotent Man on the Sabbath day, which was against their rules; but further commanded him to take up his Bed, which was much more against that rule. From whence it is very evident that Christ had determined within himself either to try the Faith and Obedience of this man, or else at this time openly to shake the Jewish Sabbath, which e're long he knew must be thrown off the hinges it now turned upon; or both.

VERS. IX.

Ἦν δὲ σάββατον. Was the Sabbath.

Σ Ἄββατον δευτεροπρώτου mentioned in St. Luke VI. 1. was this very Sabbath, or the very next.

VERS. XVII.

Ὁ Πατήρ μου ἕως ἄρτι ἐργάζεται. My Father worketh hitherto.

OUR Saviour being called before the Sanhedrin: I. Asserts the Messiah to be God, and II. That he himself is the Messiah. The Son of God and the Messiah, are convertible terms, which the Jews deny not, and yet have very wrong conceptions about filiation, or being made a Son.

St. Peter confesseth Matth. XVI. 16. Thou art Christ the Son of God. So also Caiphas in his interrogatory Matth. XXVI. 63. Art thou Christ, the Son of God? but they hardly agree in the same sense and notion of Son-ship. Aben Ezra upon Psal. II. 12. נשקו בר Kiss the Son: confesseth that this is properly spoken of the Messiah; but in Midr. Tillin, there is a vehement dispute against true filiation. The same Aben Ezra likewise confesseth that in Dan. III. 25. כבר אלהין One like the Son of God: is to be taken in the same sense with that of Prov. XXXI. 2. מה ברי ומה בר בטני with my Son, and what the Son of my Womb? But Saadias and R. Solomon, understand it of an Angel.

m There is one who hath neither Son nor Brother; the Holy Blessed; who hath neither Brother nor Son? He hath no Brother, how should he have a Son? only that God loved Israel, and so called them his Children.

It is not unknown with what obstinacy the Jews deny the God-head of the Messiah. Whence the Apostle writing to the Hebrews, lays this down as his first foundation of Discourse, That the Messiah is truly God, Heb. I. Which they, being ignorant of the great mystery of the Trinity, deny; fearing lest if they should acknowledge Messiah to be God, they should acknowledge more Gods than one. Hence they every day repeated in the recitals of their Phylacteries, Hear O Israel, The Lord thy God is one Lord. And so, being blind as to the mystery of the Trinity, are the more hardened to deny that.

Our Saviour strenuously asserts here the God-head of the Son, or Messiah, namely, that he hath the same power with the Father, the same honour due to him as to the Father, that he hath all things in common with the Father; and hence he makes this reply upon them about healing on the Sabbath; my Father worketh on the Sabbath day, so do I also.

VERS. XIX.

Οὐ δύναται ὁ υἱὸς ποιεῖν ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ οὐδέν. The Son can do nothing of himself.

THAT is, The Messiah can do nothing of himself. For he is a Servant and sent by his Father, so that he must work, not of his own will and pleasure, but his Father's, Isai. XLII. 1. Behold my servant. Targ. הא עבדו משיחא Behold my Servant the Messiah. So Kemch. in loc. and St. Paul, Philip. II. 7.

The Jew himself, however he may endeavour to elude the sense of that phrase The Son of God, yet cannot deny the truth of this Maxim, That the Messiah can do nothing, but according to the will and prescription of his Father that sent him. Which he also will expound pound not of the weakneſs and impotency, but the perfection and obedience of the Son, that he ſo doth.

VERS. XXV.

Ἔρχεται ὥρα καὶ νῦν ἐστιν ὅτε οἱ νεκροὶ ἀκούσουσι, &c. The hour cometh, and now is, when the dead ſhall hear, &c.

THE Jews, as we have ſaid before, looked for the Reſurrection of the dead at the coming of Meſſiah; and that truly, and with great reaſon, though it was not to be in their ſenſe.

The Viſion of Ezekiel about the dry bones living, Chap. XXXVII. and thoſe words of Iſaiah, thy dead men ſhall live, &c. Chap. XXVI. 20. ſuggeſting to them ſome ſuch thing, although they grope exceedingly in the dark, as to the true interpretation of this matter.

That of R. Eliezer is well enough, n עמי ארצות אינן חיים The people of the Earth [the Gentiles] do not live; which ſomewhat agrees with that of the Apoſtle, Epheſ. II 2. Ye were dead in treſpaſſes and ſins. Nor does that of Jeremiah Bar Abba ſound much differently o. The dry bones [Ezek. XXXVII.] are the Sons of men שאין בהן לחלוחית המצות in whom is not the moiſture of the Law.

o Sanhedr. fol. 92. 2.

It is true, many bodies of the Saints aroſe, when Chriſt himſelf aroſe, Matth. XXVII. 52. But, as to thoſe places in Scripture which hint the Reſurrection of the dead at his coming, I would not underſtand them ſo much of theſe as the raiſing the Gentiles from their ſpiritual death of ſin, when they lay in ignorance and Idolatry, to the light and life of the Goſpel. Nor need we wholly expound Ezekiel's dry bones recovered to life, of the return of the Tribes of Iſrael from their Captivity (though that may be included in it) but rather, or together with that, the reſuſcitation of the Iſrael of God, (that is, thoſe Gentiles that were to believe in the Meſſiah) from their ſpiritual death.

The words in the Revel. XX. 5. This is the firſt Reſurrection, do ſeem to confirm this. Now what, and at what time is this Reſurrection? When the great Angel of the Covenant, Chriſt, had bound the old Dragon with the Chains of the Goſpel, and ſhut him up that he ſhould no more ſeduce the Nations p by lying Wonders, Oracles, and Divinations, and his Falſe-gods as formerly he had done; that is, when the Goſpel being publiſhed amongſt the Heathen Nations, had laid open all the devices, and deluſions of Satan and had reſtored them from the death of ſin, and ignorance, to a true ſtate of life indeed. This was the firſt Reſurrection.

That our Saviour in this place ſpeaks of this Reſurrection, I ſo much the leſs doubt, becauſe, that Reſurrection he here intends, he plainly diſtinguiſhes it from the laſt and general Reſurrection of the dead, verſ. 28, 29. this firſt Reſurrection, from that laſt; which he points therefore to, as it were with his finger, the hour is coming and now is, &c.

VERS. XXVII.

Καὶ ἐξουσίαν ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ κρίσιν ποιεῖν, ὅτι υἱὸς ἀνθρώπου ἐστί. To execute judgment alſo, becauſe he is the Son of man.

DAN. VII. 13. Behold one like the Son of Man, came with the Clouds, and came to the Antient of days ------ and there was given him dominion and glory, &c. To this our bleſſed Saviour ſeems to have reſpect in theſe words, as the thing it ſelf plainly ſhews. R. Solomon upon the place. One like the Son of man וזה מלך המשיח This is the King, the Meſſiah. R. Saadias, וזה משיח צדקינו This is the Meſſiah our righteouſneſs. When our Saviour declared before the Sanhedrin, Ye ſhall ſee the Son of Man ſitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the Clouds: they all ſaid, art thou Chriſt, the Son of the bleſſed God? by which they imply that the Son of God and Chriſt are convertible terms; as alſo are Chriſt, and the Son of Man. And it plainly ſhews that their eyes were intent up this place. Art thou that Son of Man ſpoken of in Daniel, who is the Son of God, the Meſſiah? So did Chriſt in theſe words look that way.

VERS. XXX.

Καθὼς ἀκούω κρίνω. As I hear I judge.

HE ſeems to allude to a cuſtom amongſt them q. The Judge of an inferior Court, if he doubts in any matter, goes up to Jeruſalem, and takes the determination of the Sanhedrin, and according to that he judgeth.

q Sanhedr. cap. ult. hal. 2.

VERS.

VERS. XXXV.

Λύχνος ὁ καιόμενος καὶ φαίνων. A burning and shining light.

HE speaks according to the vulgar dialect of that Nation; who were wont to call any person famous for life or knowledge בוצינא a Candle. r Shuah [the Father-in-law of Judah, Gen. XXXVIII.] was בוצינא דאתרא the Candle or light of the place where he lived. The Gloss is, One of the most famous men in the City, inlightning their eyes: hence the title given to the Rabbins בוצינא דתוריתא The Candle of the Law. בוצינא דנהורא The Lamp of light.

r Beresh. rabba, fol. 95. 4.

VERS. XXXIX.

Ἐρευνᾶτε τὰς γραφάς. Search the Scriptures.

THIS seems not to be of the imperative but indicative mood אתין דרשין Ye search the Scriptnres, and in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they that testifie of me; yet ye will not come to me that ye might have life. What דרשה means is not unknown to any that have but dipt into Jewish Authors. It denotes a something more narrow search into the Scriptures, something between פשוט and קבלה an enquiry into the literal and Cabbalistical sense of the words, as R. Bechai in every leaf shews by several instances. Those Treatises which are called Rabboth, are made up of that kind of expositions, viz. Mystical and Allegorical.

CHAP. VI.

VERS. IV.

Ἦν δὲ ἐγγὺς τὸ Πάσχα. And the Passover was nigh.

a Pesachin, fol. 6.
b Hieros. Shekalim, cap. 3. hal. 1.

a IT is a Tradition: They enquire and discourse about the rites of the Passover, thirty days before the Feast. b תנינא פרם פלגא The sense of פרם is half. That is half of those thirty days, before the Feast, wherein they discourse of the rites of it.

From the entrance of these thirty days and so onward, this Feast was in the eyes and mouth of this people, but especially in the פרם or fifteen days immediately before the Passover. Hence perhaps, we may take the meaning of these words, Ἦν δὲ ἐγγὺς τὸ πάσχα, The Passover was nigh.

From the entrance or beginning of these thirty days, viz. From the fifteenth day of the month Adar, they repaired the ways, the Streets, the Bridges, the Pools, ועשין כל צורכי הרבים and dispatched all other publick businesses, they painted the Sepulchres, and proceeded about matters of an Heterogeneous nature c יוצאק אף על הכלאים.

c Shekal. cap. 1. hal. 1.
d Gemar. Hieros.

d אלו הן כל צורכי הרבים These are all the businesses of the publick; they judged all pecuniary faults, those also that were Capital, and those for which the offenders were scourged. They redeemed devoted things. They made the suspected Wife drink. They burnt the red Heifer: They boared the Ear of the Hebrew Servant. They cleansed the Lepers, and removed the covers from the Well, [that every one might be at liberty to drink.]

The Gloss is, And some that were deputed in that affair, went abroad to see if the the fields were sowen with Corn, and the Vineyards planted with Heterogeneous Trees.

VERS. IX.

Πέντε ἄρτους κριθίνους. Five Barley Loaves.

e Fol. 105. 2. 1. 6. 9.

COmpare 2 Kings IV. 42. and see Chetub e: where the Masters enhaunce the number of men fed by Elisha to two thousand two hundred. כל חד וחד קמי מאה איש Every hundred men had their single loaf set before them. The Gloss is, Twenty Loaves, and the Loaf of the first fruits, behold one and twenty. כרמל The green ear, behold two and twenty; these were all singly set, each of them before an hundred men, and so behold there there were two thousand and two hundred fed. By the same proportion in our Saviour's miraculous feeding the people, one single loaf must serve for a thousand.

VERS. XII.

Τὰ περισσεύσαντα κλάσματα. The fragments that remain.

IT was a custom and rule, that when they eat together, they should leave something to those that served: which remnant was called פאה Peah. And it is remarked upon R. Joshua, that upon a journey, having something provided for him by an hospitable Widow, he eat all up, and left nothing to her that ministred f. Where the Gloss: Every one leaves פאה a little portion in the dish, and gives it to those that serve, which is called the Servitors part. f Echah rabbathi, fol. 62. 2.

Although I would not confound the περισσεύσαντα κλάσματα with the פאה, nor would affirm that what was left was in observation of this rule and custom: yet we may observe that the twelve Baskets full of Fragments left at this time, answered to the number of the twelve Apostles that ministred. It is otherwise elsewhere.

VERS. XXIV.

Ἐνέβησαν καὶ αὐτοὶ εἰς τὰ πλοῖα. They also took Ship.

THEY had gone afoot from Capernaum, to the Desert of Bethsaida, Mark VI. 33. by the Bridge of Chammath, near Tiberias: but they Sail back in ships, partly that they might follow Jesus with the greater speed, and perhaps that they might reach time enough at the Synagogue; for that was the day in which they assembled in their Synagogues.

VERS. XXVII.

Τοῦτον γὰρ ὁ πατὴρ ἐσφράγισεν ὁ Θεός. For him hath God the Father sealed.

THE Jews speak much of חותמו של הבה״ The seal of God: which may not be impertinently remembred at this time. g מהחותמו של הבה״ what is the seal of the Holy blessed God? R. Bibai in the name of R. Reuben saith אמת truth. מהו אמת But what is truth? R. Bon saith, אלהים חיים ומלך עולם the living God, and King Eternal. Rosh Lachish saith, א is the first Letter of the Alphabet, מ the middle, and ת the last. q. d. I the Lord am the first, I received nothing of any one, and beside me there is no God: For there is not any that intermingles with me, and I am with the last. g Hieros. Sanhedr. fol. 18.

h There is a Story of the great Synagogue weeping, praying, and fasting, נפל להו פיתקא מן קיעא דהוה כתוב ביה אמת At length there was a little scroll fell from the Firmament to them, in which was written אמת truth. R. Chaninah saith, hence learn, that truth is the Seal of God. h Bab. Sanhedr. fol. 64. 1. & Joma, f. 69. 2.

We may easily apply all this to Christ, who is the way, the TRUTH, and the life, Joh. XIV. 8. he is the express image of his Father, the truth of the Father, whom the Father by his Seal and Diploma, hath confirmed and ratified, as the great Ruler, both of his Kingdom and Family.

VERS. XXVIII.

Τί ποιῶμεν ἵνα ἐργαζώμεθα τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Θεοῦ; What shall we do that we might work the works of God?

OBserve first the rule about Workmen or Labourers. אלו אוכלין מן התורה It is granted by the allowance of the Law, that the Labourer shall eat of those things, wherein he laboureth. If he works in the Vintage, let him eat of the Grapes; if in gathering the Fig-trees, let him eat of the Figs; if in the Harvest, let him eat of the ears of the Corn, &c. i Bava Metzia, fol. 83. 1.

Nay further פועל אוכל קישות אפילו בדינר It is lawful for the workman to eat of those things wherein he worketh, a Melon, to the value of a Peny; and Dates to the value of a peny, &c.

Compare these passages with what our Saviour speaks, Labour, saith he, for that meat which endureth to everlasting life. Now what is that work of God which we should do, that might entitle us to eat of that Food? Believe in Christ, and ye shall feed on him.

VERS.

VERS. XXXI.

Οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν τὸ μάννα ἔφαγον. Our Fathers did eat Manna.

I. THEY ſeek a ſign of him worthy the Meſſiah: in general they ſeem to look toward thoſe dainties which that Nation fondly dreamed their Meſſiah would bring along with him when he ſhould come: but more particularly they expect Manna. Ye ſeek me, ſaith our Saviour, not becauſe you did ſee the miracles, but becauſe ye did eat of the loaves and were filled. Were all theſe ſo very poor, that they had need to live at another man's charge? or ſhould follow Chriſt meerly for Bread? It is poſſible they might expect other kind of dainties according to the vain muſings of that Nation. Perhaps he was ſuch a kind of ſlave to his belly, that ſaid, Bleſſed is he that ſhall eat bread in the Kingdom of God, Luke XIV. 15.

k Rambam in Sanhedr. cap. 10. k Many affirm that the hope of Iſrael is, that Meſſiah ſhall come, and raiſe the dead; and they ſhall be gathered together in the Garden of Eden, and ſhall eat and drink, and ſatiate themſelves all the days of the world------ And that there are Houſes built all of precious ſtones, Beds of Silk, and Rivers flowing with Wine, and ſpicy Oyl.

l Shemoth rabba, ſect. 25. l He made Manna to deſcend for them, in which were all manner of taſtes, and every Iſraelite found in it, what his palate was chiefly pleaſed with. If he deſired fat in it, he had it. In it the young men taſted Bread, the old men Honey, and the Children Oyl------ So it ſhall be in the world to come [the days of the Meſſiah] he ſhall give Iſrael peace, and they ſhall ſit down and eat in the Garden of Eden, and all Nations ſhall behold their condition, as it is ſaid, behold my Servants ſhall eat, but ye ſhall be hungry, Iſai. LXV. 13.

Alas poor wretches how do you deceive your ſelves! for it is to you that this paſſage (of being hungry whiles others eat) does directly point.

m Bava bathra, fol. 74. 2. Targ. Jonath. in Gen. 1. 21. Pirke R. Eliezer, cap. 11. Infinite are the dreams of this kind, particularly about Leviathan, and Behemoth that are to be ſerved up in theſe Feaſts m. n Midr. Schir. fol. 16. 4. II. Compare with this eſpecially, what the Jews propound to themſelves about their being fed with Manna. n The later redeemer [that is Meſſiah; for he had ſpoken of the former Redeemer Moſes, immediately before] ſhall be revealed amongſt them, &c. And whether will he lead them? Some ſay, into the Wilderneſs of Judah; others, into the Wilderneſs of Sihon and Og [Note, that our Saviour, the day before, when he fed ſuch a multitude ſo miraculouſly, was in the Deſert of Og, viz. in Batanea, or Baſhan.] ומורד להם המן And ſhall make Manna deſcend for them. N.B. So Midras Coheleth o, The former Redeemer cauſed Manna to deſcend for them; in like manner ſhall our latter Redeemer cauſe Manna to come down, as it is written, there ſhall be an handful of Corn in the Earth, Pſal. LXXII. 16.

o Fol. 86. 4.

VERS. XXXII.

Οὐ Μωϋσῆς δέδωκεν ὑμῖν τὸν ἄρτον. Moſes gave you not that bread from Heaven.

p Taanith, fol. 9. 1. THE Gemariſts affirm that Manna was given for the merits of Moſes. p There were three good Shepherds of Iſrael, Moſes, Aaron and Miriam, and there were three good things given us by their hands, a Well, a Cloud, and Manna. The Well, for the merits of Miriam: the pillar of the Cloud, for the merits of Aaron, Manna בזכות משה for the merits of Moſes.

Contrary therefore to this opinion of theirs, it may well be ſaid Οὐ Μωϋσῆς δέδωκεν ὑμῖν τὸν ἄρτον· Moſes did not give you this Bread: i. e. it was by no means, for any merits of his. But what further he might intend by theſe words, you may learn from the ſeveral Expoſitors.

VERS. XXXIX.

Ἀναστήσω αὐτὸ ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ. Should raiſe it up again at the laſt day.

q Hieroſ. Kilaim, fol. 32. 2. I. They looked (as hath been already ſaid) for the Reſurrection of the dead at the coming of the Meſſiah. Take one inſtance. q R. Jeremiah ſaid, when I dye, bury me in my ſhirt, and with my ſhooes on, &c. that when Meſſiah comes, I may be ready dreſt to meet him.

Apply here the words of our Saviour. Ye look for the Reſurrection when Meſſiah comes: and ſince you ſeek a ſign of me, perhaps you have it in your minds that I ſhould raiſe ſome from the dead. Let this ſuffice that whoever comes to me and believes in me ſhall be raiſed up ἐν ἐσχάτῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, at the laſt day.

II. It

II. It was the opinion of that Nation, concerning the Generation in the Wilderneſs. The Generation in the Wilderneſs, have no part in the world to come, neither ſhall they ſtand in judgment. r r Sanhedr. cap. helek halac. 3.

Now as to this Generation in the Wilderneſs, there had been ſome diſcourſe before, verſ. 31. viz. of thoſe that had eaten Manna in the Wilderneſs; "But that Manna did "not ſo feed them unto Eternal Life (as you your ſelves confeſs) as that they ſhall live again "and have any part in the world to come: I am therefore that Bread from Heaven that "do feed thoſe that eat of me to eternal life, and ſuch as do eat of me, i. e. that believe "in me ἀναστήσω ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ· I will raiſe them up, ſo that they ſhall have part in "the world to come.

VERS. XLV.

Καὶ ἔσονται πάντες διδακτοὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ. And they ſhall be all taught of God.

ISAI. LIV. 13. And all thy Children ſhall be taught of God. The Children of Iſrael, of Jeruſalem, and of Zion, are very frequently mentioned by the Prophets for thoſe Gentiles that were to be converted to the Faith; taught before of the Devil, by his Idols and Oracles, but they ſhould become the Children of the Church, and be taught of God.

The Rabbins do fondly apply theſe words of the Prophet, when by thy Children they underſtand תלמידי חכמים the Diſciples of the wiſe men. ſ The Diſciples of the wiſe men multiply peace in the world, as it is written, all thy Children ſhall be taught of God, and great ſhall be the peace of thy Children. אל תקרי בניך אלא בוניך Do not read Baneca, thy Children, but Boneca, thy Builders.

But who were there among mortals that were more taught of men, and leſs of God! being learned in nothing but the Traditions of their Fathers. He muſt be taught of the FATHER that would come to the Son: not of thoſe ſorry Fathers: he muſt be taught of God, not thoſe maſters of Traditions.

VERS. LI.

Ὁ ἄρτος ὃν ἐγὼ δώσω ἡ σάρξ μού ἐστιν. The Bread which I give, is my Fleſh.

HE Tacitly confutes that fooliſh conceipt of theirs, about I know not what dainties, the Meſſiah ſhould treat them with: and ſlights thoſe trifles, by teaching that all the dainties Chriſt had provided, were himſelf. Let them not look for wonderful Meſſes, rich Feaſts, &c. he will give them himſelf to eat, Bread beyond all other Proviſions whatever, food from Heaven, and ſuch as bringeth Salvation.

As to this whole paſſage of eating the Fleſh, and drinking the Blood of Chriſt, it will be neceſſary to premiſe that of Mark IV. 11, 12. I ſpeak by Parables, and all theſe things are done in Parables, that ſeeing they might ſee and not perceive, &c. Verſ. 34. Without a Parable ſpake he not unto them: and when they were alone he expounded theſe things unto them.

And what can we ſuppoſe in this place but Parable wholly?

I. There was nothing more common in the Schools of the Jews, than the phraſes of eating and drinking, in a metaphorical ſenſe. And ſurely it would ſound very harſh if not to be underſtood here metaphorically, but litterally. What? to drink Blood? a thing ſo ſeverely interdicted the Jews once and again. What? to eat mans fleſh? a thing abhorrent to humane nature: but above all abhorrent to the Jews, to whom it was not lawful אבך מן החי to eat a member of a living Beaſt, nor touch אבך מן המת the member of a dead man.

t כל אכילה ושתיה וכוי Every eating and drinking, of which we find mention in the Book of Eccleſiaſtes, is to be underſtood of the Law and good works, i. e. by way of Parable and Metaphor. By the Capernaite's leave therefore, and the Romaniſt's too, we will underſtand the eating and drinking in this place, figuratively and parabolically.

t Midras Coheleth, fol. 88. 4.

II. Bread is very frequently uſed in the Jewiſh Writers for Doctrine. So that when Chriſt talks of eating his fleſh, he might perhaps hint to them, that he would feed his followers, not only with his Doctrines, but with himſelf too.

u כל משען לחם The whole ſtay of Bread, Iſai. III. 1. אילו בעלי תלמוד Theſe are the maſters of Doctrine, as it is written, come eat of my Bread, Prov. IX. 5. x האכילהו לחם Feed him with Bread, that is, make him take pains in the warfare of the Law, as it is written, come eat of my Bread.

u Chagigah, ד fol. 14. 1. x Gloſſ. in Sucah, fol. 52.

Moſes fed you with Doctrine and Manna, but I feed you with Doctrine and my Fleſh.

III. There is mention even amongſt the Talmudiſts themſelves of eating the Meſſiah. Rabh ſaith, אתידין ישראל לאכלי שני משיח Iſrael ſhall eat the years of Meſſiah. [The Gloſs is, The plenty and ſatiety that ſhall be in the days of the Meſſiah, ſhall belong to the Iſraelites.] Rabb. Joſeph ſaith, True indeed: but who ſhall eat thereof חלק ובילק אכלי לה ſhall Chilek and Bilek [two Judges in Sodom] eat of it? We muſt except againſt that of R. Hillel, who ſaith, אין משיח לחכם לישראל שכבר אכלוהו בימי חזקיה Meſſiah is not likely to come to Iſrael, for they have already devoured him in the days of Hezekiah. Thoſe words of Hillel are repeated, fol. 99. 1.

Behold here is mention of eating the Meſſiah, and none quarrel the phraſeology. They excepted againſt Hillel indeed, that he ſhould ſay, that the Meſſiah was ſo eaten in the days of Hezekiah, that he was not like to appear again in Iſrael; but they made no ſcruple of the ſcheme and manner of ſpeech at all. For they plainly enough underſtood what was meant by eating the Meſſiah, that is, that in the days of Hezekiah, they ſo much partook of the Meſſiah, they received him ſo greedily, embraced him ſo gladly, and in a manner devoured him, that they muſt look for him no more in the ages to come. Gloſs upon the place. Meſſiah will come no more to Iſrael, for Hezekiah was the Meſſiah.

IV. But the expreſſion ſeems very harſh, when he ſpeaks of eating his fleſh and drinking his blood. He tells us therefore, that theſe things muſt be taken in a ſpiritual ſenſe. Do theſe things offend you? What and if you ſhall ſee the Son of man aſcending up where he was before? That is, when you ſhall have ſeen me aſcending into Heaven, you will then find how impoſſible a thing it is to eat my fleſh and drink my blood bodily; for how can you eat the fleſh of one that is in Heaven? You may know therefore that I mean eating me ſpiritually. For the words that I ſpeak to you, they are ſpirit, and they are life.

V. But what ſenſe did they take it in, that did underſtand it? Not in a Sacramental ſenſe ſurely, unleſs they were then inſtructed in the Death and Paſſion of our Saviour; for the Sacrament hath a relation to his death: but this ſufficiently appears elſewhere, that they knew or expected nothing of that. Much leſs did they take it in a Jewiſh ſenſe. For the Jewiſh conceipts were about the mighty advantages that ſhould accrue to them from the Meſſiah, and thoſe meerly earthly and ſenſual. But to partake of the Meſſiah truly, is to partake of himſelf, his pure nature, his righteouſneſs, his ſpirit; and to live and grow, and receive nouriſhment from that participation of him, Things which the Jewiſh Schools heard little of, did not believe, did not think; but things which our Bleſſed Saviour expreſſeth lively and comprehenſively enough, by that of eating his fleſh, and drinking his blood.

VERS. II.

Ἑορτὴ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἡ Σκηνοπηγία. The Jews Feaſt of Tabernacles.

Tiſri. LET us draw down this Month from its beginning to this Feaſt of Tabernacles.

I. The firſt day of the Month Tiſri, was the beginning of the year, for ſtating the years, the intermiſſions of the ſeventh year, and the Jubilees. a Upon this day was the blowing of Trumphets, Levit. XXIII. 24. and perſons were ſent out to give notice of the beginning of the year. On this day began the year of the world 3960. in the middle of which year, Chriſt was Crucified.

a Roh haſhanah, fol. 2. 1.

II. יום טוב שני The ſecond day, obſerved alſo as holy by the Jews that were in Babylon, that they might be ſure not to miſs the beginning of the year.

III. A Faſt for the murder of Gedaliah: for ſo they expound thoſe words, Zechar. VIII. 19. The Faſt of the ſeventh month. b b Vid. Raſi & Kimch. in loc. Maimon. in Taanith, cap. 7.

IV. This day was the High-Prieſt in the apartment called פרהיודרון παστὸς ἔξω, or παστὸς ἔσω: to which he then betook himſelf from his own Houſe; that he might inure himſelf by exerciſe to the rites of the day of attonement approaching, and be ready and fitted for the ſervice of that day. c Seven days before the day of expiation, they ſequeſtered the Chief Prieſt from his own Houſe, and ſhut him up into the apartment called παστὸς ἔσω, ſubſtituting to him another Prieſt, leſt accidentally there ſhould ſome ſort of uncleanneſs befall him.

c Joma, cap. 1. hal. 1.

All

V, VI, VII, VIII. All thoſe ſeven days, after he betook himſelf from his own Houſe to this Chamber, until the day of attonement, he ſprinkles the blood of the daily Sacrifice; offers the Incenſe; ſnuffes the Lamps; and brings the head and leggs of the Sacrifice to the Altar that he may be the more handy in his Office upon the Expiation-day. d In thoſe ſeven days they ſend him ſome of the Elders of the Beth Din, that they may read before him the Office of that day. And at length thoſe Elders deliver him to the Elders of the Prieſthood, who inſtruct him in handling the Incenſe; and lead him into the apartment Abtines; where they ſwear him, that he ſhall perform the Service of that day according to rule, and not according to the Sadducees.

d Ibid. fol. 14. 1.

IX. Whereas for the whole ſeven days they permitted him to eat according to his uſual cuſtom; the evening of this day approaching, they dyet him more ſparingly, leſt a full ſtomach ſhould occaſion ſleep. They ſpend the whole night waking; and when they find him nodding, or inclining to ſleepineſs, then either by words or ſome noiſe they rowſe and waken him.

X. The day of Expiation. The ſolemn Faſt. On this day began the year of Jubilee when it came about, Levit. XXV. 9. And indeed this year, which is now under our conſideration, was the twenty eighth Jubilee, reckoning from the ſeventh year of Joſhua, wherein the Land was ſubdued, and reſted from War, Joſh. XI. 23.

XI, XII, XIII. The multitude now gather together toward the Feaſt of Tabernacles, that they might purifie themſelves before the Feaſt, and prepare neceſſaries for it, viz. little Tents, Citrons, bundles of Palms and Willows, &c. But if any were defiled by the touch of a dead body, ſuch were obliged to betake themſelves to Jeruſalem, before the Feaſt of Expiation, that they might undergo ſeven days purification before the Feaſt of Tabernacles.

XIV. They were generally cut or trimm'd on the Veſpers of the Feaſt, for the honour of it. e

VERS. IV.

Ἐν κρυπτῷ בצנעא in ſecret. Ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ בפרהסיא openly.

THESE Brethren of Chriſt whoever they were, did not as yet believe, becauſe they ſaw him live ſo obſcure, and did not behave himſelf with that pomp and outward appearance which they expected in the Meſſiah; and therefore they perſwade him to go into Judea, where he had baptized moſt Diſciples, Joh. III. 22. that upon the luſter of his miracles he might ſhine with greater ſplendor and majeſty.

VERS. VIII.

Ἐγὼ οὔπω ἀναβαίνω εἰς ἑορτὴν ταύτην. I go not up yet unto this Feaſt.

THAT paſſage in St. Luke, Chap. IX. 51. When the time was come that he ſhould be received up, he ſtedfaſtly ſet his face to go to Jeruſalem, muſt have relation to this ſtory, as will be very evident to any one that will ſtudy the harmony of the Goſpel; eſpecially if they obſerve that this Evangeliſt tells us of two journies after this, which Chriſt took to Jeruſalem, viz. Chap. XIII. 22. at the Feaſt of the Dedication; and Chapt. XVII. 11. at the feaſt of the Paſſover. He had abſented himſelf a long time from Judea, upon the account of thoſe ſnares that had been laid for him. But now when he had not above ſix months to live and converſe in this world, he determines reſolutely to give all due manifeſtations of himſelf both in Judea, and whereever elſe he ſhould happen to come; and for this cauſe he ſent thoſe Seventy Diſciples before his face into every City and place where he himſelf would come, Luk. X. 1.

When therefore he tells his unbelieving Brethren, I go not yet up, &c. he does not deny that he would go at all, but only that he would not go yet. Partly becauſe he had no need of thoſe previous cleanſings which they had, if they had toucht any dead body; partly that he might choſe the moſt fit ſeaſon for the manifeſtation of himſelf.

But if we take notice how Chriſt was receiv'd into Jeruſalem five days before the Paſſover, with thoſe very rites and ſolemnities that were uſed at the Feaſt of Tabernacles, viz. with branches of Palms, &c. Chap. XII. 13. theſe words may ſeem to relate to that time, and ſo the word ταύτην might not denote the individual Feaſt that was now inſtant, but the kind of Feaſt or feſtival time. As if he had ſaid, you would have me go up to this Feaſt that I may be receiv'd by my Diſciples with applauſe; but I do not go up to that kind of feſtivity, the time appointed for that affair is not yet come.

VERS. XIV.

Τῆς ἑορτῆς μεσούσης. About the midſt of the Feaſt.

בחולו של מועד on ſome work-day of the Feaſt. But was he not there on the firſt or ſecond day of the Feaſt, to perform thoſe things that ought to have been perform'd, making ready the Chagiga's, and appearing in the Court? If he was there the ſecond day, he might be well enough ſaid to be there μεσούσης τῆς ἑορτῆς, about the midſt of the Feaſt; בחולו של מועד for that day was not a Feſtival, unleſs perchance at that time it might have been the Sabbath, and for their abſence the firſt day there were certain תשלומין compenſations might be made.

b Gloſſ. in Chagig. fol. 21. b תשלומין דראשין The compenſations that might be made for the firſt day were theſe: If any one was obliged to offer on the firſt day, and did not do it, he compenſated by offering upon any other day.

But that which is here ſaid, That he went up into the Temple and taught, ἑορτῆς μεσούσης, about the midſt of the Feaſt, need not ſuppoſe he was abſent from the beginning of it; nor ought we rathly to think that he would neglect any thing that had been preſcrib'd and appointed in the Law; though it may be reaſonably enough queſtion'd whether he nicely

ly obſerv'd all thoſe rites and uſages of the Feaſt that had been invented by the Scribes. That is, whether he had סוכה a little Tent or Tabernacle of his own, or made uſe of ſome friends, which was allow'd and lawful to be done c. Whether he made fourteen meals in that little booth as is preſcrib'd d. Whether he carry'd לולב bundles of Palms and Willows about the Altar, as alſo אתרוג a Citron, whether he made his Tent for all thoſe ſeven days his fixed habitation, and his own houſe only occaſional; and many other things largely and nicely preſcrib'd in the Canons and rules about this Feaſt.

VERS. XIX.

Τί με ζητεῖτε ἀποκτεῖναι. Why go ye about to kill me?

THE Emphaſis or force of this clauſe lyes chiefly in the word me, Why go you about to kill me? none of you all perform the Law as you ought; and yet your great deſign is to kill me as a tranſgreſſor of it. Why me, and not others?

VERS. XXI.

Ἐν σαββάτῳ περιτέμνετε ἄνθρωπον. Ye on the Sabbath-day circumciſe a man.

e כל צורכי מילה עושין בשבת They do all things that are neceſſary toward Circumciſion on the Sabbath-day. f R. Akibah ſaith, any work that may be done on the Veſpers of the Sabbath, muſt not be done on the Sabbath; but Circumciſion when it cannot be done on the Veſpers of the Sabbath, may be done on the Sabbath-day.

g Danger of life nulleth the Sabbath ומילה ורפואתה Circumciſion alſo, and its cure, nulleth the Sabbath.

g Tanchum. fol. 9. 2.

But as to this matter they diſtinguiſh in Bereſh, Rabbah h Jacob of Nabor taught thus in Tſur. מותר למול בנה כל נכרית בשבת It is lawful to circumciſe the Son of a ſtranger on the Sabbath-day. R. Haggai heard this, and ſent to him ſaying, תא לקי Come and be diſciplin'd, &c. And a little after, R. Haggai ſaith to him רביע ואנא מודע לך Lye down [to take diſcipline] and I will teach you. If an heathen come to you, and ſay, I would be made a Jew, ſo that he would be circumcis'd on the Sabbath-day, or on the day of expiation, will we for his ſake profane thoſe days? Do we ever profane thoſe days either of the Sabbath, or expiation for any other than one born of an Iſraeliteſs only? We meet with the ſame alſo in Bemidbar rabba i, and Midr. Cohel k.

h Fol. 9. 1.
k Fol. 104. 2.

Let us look a little into the way of Chriſts arguing in this place: to me it ſeems thus: Moſes therefore gave you Circumciſion, that you might rightly underſtand the nature of the Sabbath: For, I. Circumciſion was to be obſerv'd by the Fathers before Moſes, punctually on the eighth day. II. Now therefore when Moſes eſtabliſht the Laws about the Sebbath, he did by no means forbid the work of Circumciſion on the Sabbath, if it happen'd to be the eighth day. III. Διὰ τοῦτο, For this did Moſes give and continue Circumciſion among you, that you might learn from hence to judg of the nature of the Sabbath-day. And let us therefore argue it: If by Moſes his inſtitution and allowance it was lawful for the advantage of the Infant to circumciſe him on the Sabbath-day, is it not warrantable by Moſes his Law for the advantage of a grown man to heal him on the Sabbath-day? If it be lawful to wound an Infant by Circumciſion, ſurely it is equally, if not much more lawful to heal a man by a words ſpeaking.

VERS. XXVII.

Χριστὸς ὅταν ἔρχεται οὐδεὶς γινώσκει πόθεν ἐστίν. When Chriſt cometh, no man knoweth whence he is.

HOW doth this agree with v. 42. and with Mat. II. 5, 6. They doubted not indeed, but he ſhould give the firſt manifeſtation of himſelf from Bethlehem, but then they ſuppos'd he would be hid again, and after ſome ſpace of time make a new appearance from what place no one could tell.

l Jewiſh Authors tell you that Chriſt before their times had indeed been born in Bethlehem, but immediately ſnatcht away they knew not whether, and ſo hid that he could not be found. We related the whole ſtory before in our notes at Mat. II. 1.

l Hieroſol. Bircoth, fol. 5. 1. & Midras Echah, fol. 68. 3.

Their conceptions in this thing we have explain'd to us in Midras Schir m, My beloved is like a Roe or a young hart, Cant. II. 9. A Roe appears and is hid, appears and is hid again. So our firſt Redeemer [Moſes] appear'd and was hid, and at length appear'd again.------So our latter Redeemer [Meſſiah] ſhall be reveal'd to them, and ſhall be hid again from them; and how long ſhall he be hid from them? &c. A little after, In the end of forty five days he ſhall be reveal'd again, and cauſe Manna to deſcend amongſt them.

m Fol. 16. 4.

They

They conceive a twofold manifestation of the Messiah, the first in Bethlehem, but will straightway disappear and lye hid. At length he will shew himself, but from what place, and at what time that will be, no one knew. In his first appearance in Bethlehem he should do nothing that was memorable; in his second was the hope and expectation of the Nation. These Jews therefore, who tell our Saviour here, that when Christ cometh no man knoweth whence he is, whether they knew him to have been born at Bethlehem or no, yet by his wonderful works they conceive this to have been the second manifestation of himself; and therefore only doubt whether he should be the Messiah or no, because they knew the place [Nazareth] from whence he came; having been taught by Tradition that Messiah should come the second time from a place perfectly unknown to all men.

VERS. XXVIII.

Ἀλλ' ἔστιν ὁ πέμψας με ἀληθὴς ὃν ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἴδατε. He that sent me is true, whom ye know not.

Ἀληθὴς here must be taken in the same sense wherein נאמן is so often used amongst the Lawyers, to signifie him whose word and testimony in any thing may be taken.

n Chagigah, fol. 24.2. n The men of Judea נאמנין may be credited as to the purity of the wine and the oyl. Gloss. Even the people of the land, the very vulgar sort may be credited for the purity of the wine and the oyl, which is dedicated by them to the Altar in the time of the vintage or pressing.

Men not known by name or face to the Priests, yet if they offer'd wine or oyl were credited as to the purity and fitness of either, from their place of habitation. There are numberless instances of men though perfectly unknown, yet that may be credited, either as to Tythes, or separating the Trumah, or giving their testimony, &c. To the same sense our Saviour, Chap. V. 31. If I bear witness of my self my witness is not true. i.e. In your Judicatories it is not of any value with you, where no one is allow'd to be a witness for himself; and in this place, He that hath sent me, although you know him not, yet is he true, or worthy belief, however I my self may not be so amongst you.

VERS. XXXV.

Μὴ εἰς διασπορὰν τῶν Ἑλλήνων, &c. To the dispersed among the Gentiles, &c.

I Confess Ἕλληνες in the Apostles writings does very frequently denote the Gentiles; to which that of the Rabbins agrees well enough, חכמה יונית the wisdom of the Greeks, i.e. the wisdom of the Gentiles. But here I would take Ἑλλήνων in its proper signification for the Greeks. It is doubtful indeed whether the διασπορὰ Ἑλλήνων ought to be understood the dispersed Greeks, or the Jews dispersed amongst the Greeks. There was no Nation under Heaven so dispers'd and diffus'd throughout the world as these, both Greeks and Jews were.

o Strab. in Consolat. ad Helvetian, cap. 6. o In mediis Barbarorum regionibus Græcæ urbes: Inter Indos Persasq; Macedonicus sermo, &c. In the very heart of all the barbarous Nations, the Greeks had their Cities, and their language spoken amongst the Indians and Persians, &c.

And into what Countries the Jews were scatter'd, the writings both Sacred and Profane do frequently instance. So that if the words are to be taken strictly of the Greeks, they bear this sense with them, Is he going here and there amongst the Greeks, so widely and remotely dispersed in the world?

If of the Jews (which is most generally accounted by Expositors) then would I suppose the Διασπορὰν Ἑλλήνων set in distinction to the Διασπορὰ Βαβυλωνίων καὶ Περσῶν. That distinction between the Hebrews and the Hellenists explains the thing. The Jews of the first dispersion, viz. into Babylon, Assyria, and the Countries adjacent are called Hebrews, because they used the Hebrew, or Transeuphratensian language. How they came to be dispers'd into those Countries we all know well enough, viz. that they were led away captive by the Babylonians and Persians. But those that were scatter'd amongst the Greeks used the Greek Tongue, and were called Hellenists. It is not easie to tell upon what account, or by what accident they came to be dispers'd amongst the Greeks, or other Nations about. Those that liv'd in Palestine, they were Hebrews indeed as to their language, but they were not of the διασπορᾷ, the dispersion, either to one place or another, because they dwelt in their own proper Country. The Babylonish dispersion was esteem'd by the Jews the more noble, the more famous, and the more holy of any other. The land of Babylon is in the same degree of purity with the land of Israel p. The Jewish off-spring in Babylon is more valuable than that among the Greeks, even purer than that in Judea it self q. Whence for a Palestine-Jew to go to the Babylonish dispersion was to go to a people and Country equal if not ſuperior to his own. But to go to the diſperſion among the Greeks, was to go into unclean regions, where the very duſt of the land defiled them; it was to go to an inferior race of Jews ſtain'd in their blood; it was to go into Nations moſt heatheniz'd.

VERS. XXXVII.

Ἐν δὲ τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, τῇ μεγάλῃ τῆς ἑορτῆς. On the laſt day, that great day of the Feaſt.

THE Evangeliſt ſpeaks according to a receiv'd opinion of that people; for from Divine inſtitution it does not appear that the laſt day of the Feaſt had any greater mark ſet upon it than the firſt; nay it might ſeem of lower conſideration than all the reſt; for on the firſt day were offer'd thirteen young Bullocks upon the Altar; on the ſecond, twelve; and ſo fewer and fewer, till on the ſeventh day it come to ſeven, and on this eighth and laſt day of the Feaſt there was but one only; as alſo for the whole ſeven days there were offer'd each day fourteen lambs, but on this eighth day ſeven only, Numb. XXIX. So that if the numbers of the Sacrifices add any thing to the dignity of the day, this laſt day will ſeem the moſt inconſiderable, and not the μεγάλη, the great day of the Feaſt.

I. But what the Jews opinion was about this matter, and this day, we may learn from themſelves.

r ע' פרים בנגד ע' אומות There were ſeventy Bullocks according to the ſeventy Nations of the World. פר יחידי למה כנגד אומה יחידה But for what is the ſingle Bullock? It is for the ſingular Nation, [the Jewiſh.] A Parable. It is like a great King that ſaid to his ſervants, make ready a great Feaſt, but the laſt day ſaid to his friend, make ready ſome little matter that I may refreſh my ſelf with thee. The Gloſs is, I have no advantage or refreſhment in that great Feaſt with them, but in this little one with thee. r Succah, fol. 55. 2.

s "On the eighth day it ſhall be an Holy-day; for ſo ſaith the Scripture, For my love "they are my adverſaries, but my prayer is for them, Pſal. CIX. Thou ſeeſt, O God, that "Iſrael in the Feaſt of Tabernacles offers before thee ſeventy Bullocks for the ſeventy Na- "tions. Iſrael therefore ſay unto thee, O Eternal Lord, behold we offer for theſe ſeventy "Bullocks, it is but reaſonable therefore that they ſhould love us; but on the contrary, "as it is written, For our love they are our adverſaries. The Holy Bleſſed God therefore "ſaith to Iſrael, offer for your ſelves on the eighth day.

A Parable. "This is like a King who made a Feaſt for ſeven days, and invited all the men "in that Province, for thoſe ſeven days of the Feaſt, but when thoſe ſeven days were "paſt, he ſaith to his friend, We have done what is needful to be done toward theſe men; "let thou and I return and enjoy together whatever comes to hand, be it but one pound "of fleſh or fiſh, or herbs. So the Holy Bleſſed God ſaith to Iſrael, the eighth day ſhall "be a Feaſt or Holy-day, &c. s Bemidbar rabba, ſect. 21.

t "They offer ſeventy Bullocks for the ſeventy Nations, to make attonement for them, "that the rain may fall upon the fields of all the world; for in the Feaſt of Tabernacles "נידונין על המים judgment is made as to the waters: i.e. God determines what rains ſhall be for the year following. t Gloſſ. in loc. citat.

Hence therefore this laſt day of the Feaſt grew into ſuch eſteem in that Nation above the other days; becauſe on the other ſeven days they thought ſupplications and ſacrifices were offer'd, not ſo much for themſelves as for the Nations of the world; but the ſolemnities of the eighth day were wholly in their own behalves. And hence the determination and finiſhing of the Feaſt when the ſeven days were over, and the beginning, as it were, of a new one on the eighth day. For,

II. They did not reckon the eighth day as included within the Feaſt, but a Feſtival day ſeparately and by its ſelf.

2. זמון A peculiar benediction by its ſelf.

3. רגל בפני עצמו A Feaſt by its ſelf. Gloſſ. For on this day they did not ſit in their Tents. אין יושבין בסוכה Whence that is not unworthy our obſervation out of Maimonides x, If any one either through ignorance or preſumption have not made a Booth for himſelf on the firſt day of the Feaſt [which is holy] let him do it on the next day; nay at the very end of the ſeventh day: Note that, At the very end of the ſeventh day. And yet there was no uſe of Booths on the eighth day. x Succah, cap. 6.

4. קרבן בפני עצמו A peculiar ſacrifice. Not of ſix Bullocks, which ought to have been, if

5. שור בפני עצמו A ſong by its ſelf. Otherwiſe ſung than on other days.

To all which may be added what follows in the ſame place about this day. היוב אדם בהלל A man is bound to ſing the Hallel. [viz. Pſal. XIII. XIV. XV. XVI. XVII. & XVIII.] ובשמחה he is bound to rejoice; that is, to offer thank-offerings, for the joy of that Feaſt.

On this day they did not uſe their סוכת their Booths, nor לולב their branches of Palms, nor אתרוג their Pome-citrons; but they had ניסוך המים their offering of water upon this day as well as the reſt.

VERS. XXXVIII.

Ποταμοὶ ἐκ τῆς κοιλίας αὐτοῦ ῥεύσουσιν ὕδατος ζῶντος. Out of his belly ſhall flow rivers of living water.

TO this offering of water perhaps our Saviours words may have ſome reſpect, for it was only at this Feaſt that it was uſed and none other. You have the manner of this ſervice deſcrib'd in the place above quoted to this purpoſe.

y Succah. ubi ſupr.

צלוחית של זהב וגו' ניסוך המים כיצד y After what manner is this offering of water? They fill'd a Golden Phial containing three Logs, out of Siloam. When they came to the water-gate [a Gate of the Temple ſo call'd, as ſome would have it, becauſe that water which was fetcht from Siloam was brought through it] they ſounded their Trumpets and ſung. Then a Prieſt went up by the aſcent of the Altar, and turning to the left, there were two ſilver veſſels, ------one with water, the other with wine; he pour'd ſome of the water into the wine, and ſome of the wine into the water, and ſo perform'd the ſervice.

R. The Sadducees do not approve the offering of water.] and the whole Congregation pelted him with their Citrons. That day an horn of the Altar was broke.

z Succah, fol. 51. 1.

z Whoever hath not ſeen the rejoycing that was upon the drawing of this water, hath never ſeen any rejoycing at all.

a Rambam in loc.

This offering of water they ſay was a Tradition given at Mount Sinai a, and that the Prophet Jonah was inſpired by the Holy Ghoſt upon this offering of water b.

b Gloſs in loc.

If you ask what foundation this uſage hath, Rambam will tell us יש רמוזים נסתרים בתורה there are ſome kind of remote hints of it in the Law, however thoſe that will not believe the Traditional Law, will not believe this article about the ſacrifice of water.

I. They bring for it the authority of the Prophet Iſaiah, בית השואבה the houſe of drawing; for it is written, Ye ſhall draw waters with joy, &c. Iſa. XII. 3. b b Succah. fol. 50. 2.

This rejoycing (which we have deſcrib'd before) they call'd שמחת תורה the rejoycing of the Law, or, for the Law; for by waters they often underſtand the Law, Iſa. LV. 1. and ſeveral other places; and from thence the rejoycing for theſe waters.

II. But they add moreover that this drawing and offering of water, ſignifies the pouring out of the Holy Spirit.

c Bereſh. rabba, fol. 70. 1.

c Why do they call it בית השואבה the houſe of drawing? becauſe thence they draw the Holy Spirit. Gloſs in Succah ubi ſupr. In the Jeruſalem Talmud it is expounded that they draw there the Holy Spirit; for a divine breathing is upon the man through joy.

Another Gloſs, חליל מכה The Flute alſo ſounded for encreaſe of the joy. Drawing of water therefore took its riſe from the words of Iſaiah, they rejoyc'd over the waters as a ſymbol, and figure of the Law; and they lookt for the Holy Spirit upon this joy of theirs.

III. But ſtill they add further: dWhy doth the Law command, ſaying, offer ye water on the feaſt of Tabernacles? The Holy Bleſſed God ſaith, offer ye waters before me on the Feaſt of Tabernacles, כדי שיתברכו לכם גשמי שנה that the rains of the year may be bleſt to you. For they had an opinion that God decreed and determin'd on the rains that ſhould fall the following year at that Feaſt. Hence that in the place before mention'd, e כתג נידונין על המים In the Feaſt of Tabernacles it is determin'd concerning the waters.

e Taanith, fol. 2. 1.

And now let us reflect upon this paſſage of our Saviour, Whoſoever believeth in me out of his belly ſhall flow rivers of living water. They agree with what he had ſaid before to the Samaritan woman, Chap. IV. 14. and both expreſſions upon the occaſion of drawing of water.

The Jews acknowledg that the latter Redeemer is to procure water for them, as their former former Redeemer Moſes had done f. But as to the true meaning of this, they are very blind and ignorant, and might be better taught by the Meſſiah here, if they had any mind to learn.

f Midras Coheleth, fol. 85.

I. Our Saviour calls them to a belief in him from their own boaſt and glorying in the Law; and therefore I rather think thoſe words, Καθὼς εἶπεν ἡ γραφὴ, as the Scripture hath ſaid, ſhould relate to the foregoing clauſe, Whoſoever believeth in me, as the Scripture hath ſpoken about believing in, Iſa. XXVIII. 16. I lay in Sion for a foundation a try'd ſtone.----He that believeth, &c. Habak. II. 4. The juſt ſhall live by faith. And the Jews themſelves confeſs, g that ſix hundred and thirteen precepts of the Law may all be reduc'd to this, The juſt ſhall live by faith. And to that of Amos v. 6. Seek the Lord and ye ſhall live.

g Maccoth. fol 24. 1.

II. Let theſe words then of our Saviour be ſet in oppoſition to this rite and uſage in the Feaſt of Tabernacles, of which we have been ſpeaking. "Have you ſuch wonderful "rejoycing at drawing a little water from Siloam? He that believes in me whole rivers "of living waters ſhall flow out of his own belly. Do you think the waters mention'd in "the Prophets do ſignifie the Law? they do indeed denote the Holy Spirit which the "Meſſiah will diſpenſe to thoſe that believe in him; and do you expect the Holy Spirit "from the Law, or from your rejoycing in the Law? the Holy Spirit is of faith, and not "of the Law, Gal. III. 2.

VERS. XXXIX.

Οὔπω γὰρ ἦν πνεῦμα ἅγιον. For this Holy Ghoſt was not yet.

THESE words have relation to that moſt receiv'd opinion of the Jews about the departure of the Holy Spirit after the death of Zachary and Malachi; to this alſo muſt that paſſage be interpreted, when thoſe of Epheſus ſay, Act. XIX. 2. We have not yet heard whether there were a Holy Ghoſt or no. That is, we have indeed heard of the Holy Ghoſts departure after the death of our laſt Prophets, but of his return and redonation of him, we have not yet heard. יהוה פעלך קרב שניכם חייהו בקרב שניכם חוריע O Lord, revive thy work in the midſt of the years, in midſt of the years make known, Hab. III. 2. He calls the ſeventy years of Captivity the midſt of the years. For on the one hand it had been ſeven times ſeventy years from the birth of Samuel the firſt of the Prophets to the Captivity, [Act. III. 24.] and on the other hand it was ſeven times ſeventy years from the end of the Captivity to the death of Chriſt. The prayer is, that the gift of Propheſie might not be loſt, but preſerv'd, whiles the people ſhould live exil'd in an heathen Country. And according to the twofold virtue of Propheſie, the one of working miracles, the other of foretelling things to come, he uſes a twofold phraſe, revive thy work, and make known. Nor indeed was that gift loſt in the Captivity, but was very illuſtrious in Daniel, Ezekiel, &c. it return'd with thoſe that came back from the Captivity, and was continu'd for one generation, but then (the whole Canon of the Old Teſtament being perfected and made up) it departed, not returning till the dawn of the Goſpel, at what time it appear'd in inſpiring the Bleſſed Virgin, John Baptiſt and his Parents, &c. and yet the Holy Ghoſt was not yet come, that is, not anſwerably to that large and ſignal promiſe of it in Joel II. 28.

VERS. XLIX.

Ὁ ὄχλος οὗτος. This people, &c.

עם ארץ the people of the earth in common phraſe; oppos'd to לתלמידי חכמים the diſciples of the wiſe men, whom they call עם קודש the holy people b, but the former they call the accurſed.

b Sotah. fol. 39. 1.

VERS. LII.

Μὴ καὶ σὺ ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας εἶ; Art thou alſo of Galilee?

IT ſeems to be ſpoken ſcoffingly: Art thou of thoſe Galileans that believe in this Galilean?

CHAP. VIII.

EXPOSITORS almoſt with one conſent do note that this ſtory of the woman taken in adultery was not in ſome ancient Copies; and whiles I am conſidering upon what accident this ſhould be, there are two little ſtories in Euſebius that come to mind. The one we have in theſe words, a Ἐκτεθειται ὑπ᾽ αὐτῆς ἄλλην Ἰουδαίων περὶ γυναικὸς ἐπὶ πολλαῖς ἁμαρτίαις διαβληθείσης ἐπὶ τοῦ Κυρίου, ἣν τὸ κατ᾽ Ἑβραίους εὐαγγέλιον περιέχει. He [Papias] tells us alſo another Hiſtory concerning a woman accus'd of many crimes before our Lord, which Hiſtory indeed the Goſpel according to the Hebrews makes mention of. All that do cite that ſtory do ſuppoſe he means this adultereſs. The other he tells us in his life of Conſtantine b, he brings in Conſtantine writing thus to him: Πρέπον κατεφάνη τὸ δηλῶσαι τῇ σῇ συνέσει, ὅπως ἂν πεντήκοντα σωμάτια ἐν διφθέραις ἐγκατασκεύοις εὐανάγνωστα, καὶ πρὸς χρῆσιν εὐμετακόμιστα, &c. I think good to ſignifie to your prudence, that you would take care that fifty Volumes of thoſe Scriptures whoſe preparation and uſe you know ſo neceſſary for the Church, and which beſide may be eaſily read and carryed about, may by very skilful pen-men be written out in fair parchment.

a Hiſt. Eccleſ. lib. 3. cap. ult.

b Lib. 4 cap. 36.

So indeed the Latin Interpreter, but may we not by the word σωμάτια underſtand the Goſpels compacted into one body, by way of Harmony? the reaſon of this conjecture is twofold; partly thoſe Euſebian Canons form'd into ſuch a kind of Harmony; partly becauſe cap. 37. he tells us that having finiſht his work, he ſent to the Emperour, Τεσσὰ καὶ τεσσαρὰ, threes and fours; which words if they are not to be underſtood of the Evangeliſts, ſometimes three, ſometimes four (the greater number including the leſs) imbody'd together by ſuch an harmony; I confeſs I cannot tell what to make of them.

But be it ſo, that it muſt not be underſtood of ſuch an Harmony; and grant we further, that the Latin Interpreter hits him right, when he ſuppoſes Euſebius to have pickt out here and there according to his pleaſure and judgment ſome parts of the Holy Scriptures to be tranſcribed, ſurely he would never have omitted the Evangeliſts, the nobleſt and the moſt profitable part of the New Teſtament.

If therefore he aſcrib'd this ſtory of the Adultereſs to the Trifler Papias, or at leaſt to the Goſpel according to the Hebrews only, without doubt he would never inſert it in Copies tranſcribed by him. Hence poſſibly might ariſe the omiſſion of it in ſome Copies, after Euſebius his times. It is in Copies before his age, viz. in Ammonius, Tatianus, &c.

VERS. I.

Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἐπορεύθη εἰς τὸ ὄρος τῶν ἐλαιῶν. He went to the mount of Olives.

BUT whether to the Town of Bethany, or to ſome Booth fixed in that mount, is uncertain. For becauſe of the infinite multitude that had ſwarm'd together at thoſe Feaſts, it is probable many of them had made themſelves Tents about the City, that they might not be too much ſtreightned within the walls, though they kept within the bounds ſtill of a Sabbaths-days journey.

c And thou ſhalt turn in the morning and go into thy Tents, Deut. XVI. 7. The firſt night of the Feaſt they were bound to lodg within the City; after that it was lawful for them to abide without the walls, but it muſt be within the bounds of a Sabbath-days journey; whereas therefore it is ſaid, Thou ſhalt go into thy Tents; this is the meaning of it, Thou ſhalt go into thy Tents that are without the walls of Jeruſalem, but by no means into thine own houſe d.

d Vid. & Aben Ezra in Deut. XVI.

It is ſaid Chap. VII. That every one went to his own houſe, ver. 53. upon which words let that be a Comment, that we meet with e סנהדרין הולכין היו ערבים בין אחד תמיד לביתם After the daily evening ſacrifice the fathers of the Sanhedrin went home.

e Piſche Toſiphoth in Sanhedr. Artic. 34.

The eighth day therefore being ended, the Hiſtory of which we have in Chap. VII. the following night was out of the compaſs of the Feaſt, ſo that they had done the dancings of which we have ſpoken before. The Evangeliſt therefore does not without cauſe ſay, that every one went to his own houſe, for otherwiſe they muſt have gone to thoſe dancings, if the next day had not been the Sabbath.

VERS. III.

Γυναῖκα ἐπ μοιχείᾳ κατειλημμένην. A woman taken in Adultery.

OUR Saviour calls that generation γενεὰν μοιχαλίδα, An Adulterous Generation, Mat. XII. 39. See alſo Jam. IV. 4. which indeed might be well enough underſtood in its literal and proper ſenſe.

f From the time that murderers have multiplied amongſt us, the beheading of the Heifer hath ceaſed: and ſince the encreaſe of Adultery, the bitter waters have been out of uſe. f Sotah. fol. 47. 1.

g כשרבו המנאפים בגלוי Since the time that Adultery ſo openly prevailed under the ſecond Temple, the Sanhedrin abrogated that way of tryal by the bitter water; grounding it upon what is written, I will not viſit your Daughters when they ſhall go a whoring, nor your Wives when they ſhall commit Adultery. g Maimon. in Sotah. cap. 3.

The Gemariſts ſay, that Rabban Jochanan ben Zacchai was the Author of this Counſel; he lived at this very time, and was of the Sanhedrin, perhaps preſent amongſt thoſe that ſet this Adulterous Woman before Chriſt. For there is ſome reaſon to ſuppoſe, that the Γραμματεῖς and Φαρισαῖοι, Scribes and Phariſees, here mentioned, were no other than the Fathers of the Sanhedein.

VERS. V.

Τὰς τοιαύτας λιθοβολεῖσθαι. That ſuch ſhould be ſtoned.

Τοιαύτας· Such. Who? what all Adultereſſes? or all taken in Adultery, ἐπ' αὐτοφώρῳ, in the very act? There is a third qualification ſtill. For the condition of the Adultereſs is to be conſidered, whether ſhe was a married Woman, or betrothed only.

God puniſheth Adultery by death, Levit. XX. 10. but the Maſters of Traditions ſay, That wherever death is ſimply mentioned in the Law, [that is, where the kind of death is not expreſsly preſcribed] there it is to be ſuppoſed no other than ſtrangling. Only they except בת ישראל בחנק ארוסה בסקילה A Daughter of an Iſraelite, if ſhe commit Adultery after ſhe is married, muſt be ſtrangled: if only betrothed, ſhe muſt be ſtoned. A Prieſt's Daughter, if ſhe commit Adultery when married, muſt be ſtoned; if only betrothed, ſhe muſt be burnt *. * Sanhedr. fol. 51. 2.

Hence we may conjecture what the condition of this Adultereſs was: either ſhe was an Iſraeliteſs not yet married, but betrothed only, or elſe ſhe was a Prieſts Daughter, married: rather the former, becauſe they ſay, Moſes in the Law hath commanded us, that ſuch ſhould be ſtoned. See Deut. XXII. 21. But as to the latter, there is no ſuch command given by Moſes.

VERS. VIII.

Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς κάτω κύψας, τῷ δακτύλῳ ἔγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν. Jeſus ſtooped down and wrote on the ground.

Μὴ προσποιούμενος· Feigning as though he heard them not, had of old crept into ſome Books. And it is plain enough that it did creep in. For when Chriſt had given proof enough that he took cogniſance of the matter propounded to him, by thoſe words, he that is without ſin amongſt you, &c. yet did he ſtoop down again, and write upon the earth.

Many have offered their conjectures why he uſed this unuſual geſture at this time, and with the Reader's leave, let me alſo offer mine.

I. The matter in hand was, judging a Woman taken in Adultery, and therefore our Saviour in this matter applies himſelf conformably to the rule made and provided for the tryal of an Adultereſs by the bitter water, Numb. V.

II. Among the Jews this obtained in the tryal of a Wife ſuſpected. g If any man ſhall unlawfully lye with another Woman, the bitter water ſhall not try his Wife------ For it is ſaid. ונקה האיש מעון if the Husband be guiltleſs from iniquity, then ſhall the Woman bear her iniquity. g Maimon. in Sotah, cap. 2.

h When the Woman hath drunk the bitter water, if ſhe be guilty, her looks turn pale, her eyes ſwell up, &c. So they turn her out of the Court of the Women; and firſt her belly ſwells, then her thigh rots, and ſhe dyes. The ſame hour that ſhe dyes, the Adulterer alſo, upon whoſe account ſhe drunk the water, dyes too, wherever he is, being equally ſeized with a ſwelling in his belly, rottenneſs in his thigh; or his Pudenda. וכל זה אם לא בא בעל ביאה אסורה מעולם But this is done only upon condition that the Husband hath been guiltleſs himſelf: אבל אם בעל בעילה שלא איסור אין המים בודקין את אשתו For if he have layen with any, unlawfully himſelf, then this water will not try his Wife. h Ibid. cap. 3.

i If you follow whoring your ſelves, the bitter waters will not try your Wives. i Bemidbar rabba, fol. 235.

You may ſee by theſe paſſages how directly our Saviour levels at the equity of this ſentence, willing to bring theſe accuſers of the Woman to a juſt tryal firſt. You may imagine you hear him thus ſpeaking to them: "Ye have brought this Adulterous Woman to be adjudged by me: I will therefore govern my ſelf according to the rule of "trying " trying ſuch by the bitter waters. You ſay, and you believe according to the com" mon opinion of your Nation, that the Woman upon whom a jealouſie is brought,

" though ſhe be indeed guilty, yet if the Husband that accuſeth her be faulty that way
" himſelf, ſhe cannot be affected by thoſe waters, nor contract any hurt or danger by " them. If the Divine judgment proceeded in that method, ſo will I at this time. Are " you that accuſe this Woman wholly guiltleſs in the like kind of ſin? whoſoever is ſo,
" let him caſt the firſt ſtone, &c. But if you your ſelves ſtand chargeable with the ſame " crimes, then your own applauded Tradition, the opinion of your Nation, the proce" dure of Divine judgment in the tryal of ſuch, may determine in this caſe, and acquit
" me from all blame if I condemn not this Woman, when her accuſers themſelves are to " be condemned.

III. It was the office of the Prieſt, when he tryed a ſuſpected Wife to ſtoop down, and gather the duſt off the floor of the Sanctuary, which when he had infuſed into the water, he was to give the Woman to drink; he was to write alſo in a Book the curſes or adjurations, that were to be pronounced upon her, Numb. V. 17, 23. In like manner, our Saviour ſtoops down, and making the floor its ſelf his Book, he writes ſomething in the duſt, doubtleſs againſt theſe accuſers, whom he was reſolved to try, in analogy to thoſe curſes and adjurations written in a Book by the Prieſt againſt the Woman that was to be tried.

IV. The Prieſt after he had writ theſe curſes in a Book, blots them out with the bitter Water, Numb. V. 23. For the matter tranſacted was doubtful. אין משקין אלא על הספק k They do not make the ſuſpected Woman drink, unleſs in a doubtful caſe.

k Bemidbar rabba. fol. 233. 2.

The queſtion is, whether the Woman was guilty or not. If guilty, behold the curſes writ againſt her: if not guilty, then behold they are blotted out. But Chriſt was aſſured that thoſe whom he was trying were not innocent, ſo de does not write and blot out, but writes and writes again.

V. He imitates the geſture of the Prieſt, if it be true what the Jews report concerning it, and it is not unlikely, viz. that he firſt pronounced the curſes, then made the Woman drink, and after ſhe had drunk pronounced the ſame curſes again. So Chriſt, firſt he ſtoops down and writes, then makes them as it were drink, in that ſearching reflection of his, whoſoever of you is without ſin, and then ſtoops down again, and writes upon the Earth.

VERS. IX.

Ὑπὸ δὲ συνειδήσεως ἐλεγχόμενοι Being convicted by their own Conſcience.

OUR Saviour had determined to ſhame theſe wicked men before the common people: and therefore adds that peculiar force and Energy to what he ſaid, that they could not ſtand it out, but with ſhame and confuſion drawing off and retiring, they confeſs their guilt, before the whole crowd. A thing little leſs than miracle.

VERS. XII.

Ἐγώ εἰμι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου. I am the light of the world.

l Echah rabbathi, fol. 68. 4.

m Fol. 3. 4.

R. Biba Sangorius ſaith נהוראי שמו Light is the name of the Meſſiah. As it is written נהורא עמיה שרא Light dwells with him, Dan. II. 22. we have the ſame paſſage in Bereſh rabba m ſaying that the Author of theſe words there, is R. Abba Serongianus.

They were wont to adorn their Rabbins, and Doctors, with ſwelling and magnificent titles of Lights.

n Erubbin, fol. 13. 2.

n A Tradition. His name is not R. Meir, but Nehorai: Why therefore is he called R. Meir? Becauſe he enlightens the eyes, by the traditions of wiſe men. שמאיר עיני חכמים בהלכה And yet his name is not Nehorai neither, but R. Nehemiah. Why then is he called R. Nehorai? Becauſe he enlightens the eyes, by the traditions of wiſe men. שמנהיר עיני חכמים בהלכה O bleſſed Luminaries without light! Be gone ye ſhades of night, for the Sun of righteouſneſs hath now diſplayed himſelf!

VERS.

VERS. XIII.

Σὺ περὶ σεαυτοῦ μαρτυρεῖς. Thou beareſt record of thy ſelf.

THIS and the following paſſages uttered in diſpute, whether Chriſt was the light or no, bring to mind what was wont to be tranſacted amongſt them, in their witneſſing about the Φάσις, the appearance of the New Moon. We have it in Roſh haſhanah o. [o] cap. 1. 2. 3.

I. It was to be atteſted before the Sanhedrin by two perſons, that they ſaw the New Moon. So Chriſt mentions two witneſſes atteſting him to be the light, viz. the Father and himſelf, verſ. 18.

II. They did not allow the teſtimony about the New Moon, unleſs from perſons known to the Sanhedrin: Or if they were unknown, there were thoſe ſent along with them from the Magiſtracy of that City where they lived, that ſhould atteſt their veracity. Compare verſ. 18, 19. I bear witneſs of my ſelf, and ye know me not. My Father alſo bears witneſs of me, but ye have not known my Father.

III. אין היחיד נאמן ערי עצמו One witneſs is not to be believed in his own cauſe. So the Phariſees, verſ. 13. Thou beareſt record of thy ſelf, thy record is not true.

IV. The Father and the Son, or any ſort of relatives, are fit and credible witneſſes, verſ. 18. I am one that bear witneſs of my ſelf, and the Father that ſent me, beareth witneſs of me.

VERS. XX.

Ἐν τῷ Γαζοφυλακίῳ. In the Treaſury.

IN the Treaſury, that is, in the Court of the Women. Where he had tranſacted the matter about the Woman taken in Adultery. Called the Treaſury, upon the account of thirteen Corban Cheſts placed there. Of which we have ſpoken in another Tract.

VERS. XXV.

Τὴν ἀρχὴν ὅτι καὶ λαλῶ ὑμῖν. The ſame that I ſaid unto you from the beginning.

I. AMongſt the ſeveral rendrings of this place, this ſeems the moſt proper; The ſame that I ſaid unto you from the beginning. So Gen. XLIII. 18. Διὰ τὸ ἀργύριον τὸ ἀποσταφὲν ἐν τοῖς μαρσίπποις ἡμῶν τὸ ἀρχῆν· the money returned at the firſt time: and verſ. 20. καταβημεν τὸ Ἀρχῆν πρίασθαι βρώματα. we came indeed down at the firſt time to buy food.

The words thus rendred may refer to that full and open profeſſion our Saviour made of himſelf before the Sanhedrin, that he was the Son of God, the Meſſiah, Chap. V. do you ask me who I am? I am the ſame that I told you from the beginning, when I was ſummoned to anſwer before the Sanhedrin.

II. However, I cannot but a little call to mind, the common forms of ſpeech uſed ſo much in the Jewiſh Schools. רישא and סיפא the beginning and the end. Where by רישא they meant any thing that was chiefly and primarily to be offered and taken notice of: by סיפא what was ſecondary, or of leſs weight.

[p] The queſtion is, whether it were lawful for the Prieſts to ſleep in their Holy Veſtments. סיפא the end: or the ſecondary queſtion was whether it was lawful for them to ſleep in them. But רישא the beginning; or the thing chiefly and primarily to be diſcuſt, was whether it was lawful for them to have them on at all, but in Divine Service. Hence the Gemariſts, דקתני לאהוין ושנים משום רבעי למיתנא סיפא The Tradition is, that they muſt not ſleep in them, if you will explain the end [or ſecondary queſtion] but, let them put them off and fold them up, and lay them under their heads [when they ſleep] קתני רישא This, the beginning [or chief matter in hand] determines. That is, that it is not lawful for the Prieſt ſo much as to wear his Holy Garments but when he is in Holy Service. [p] Tamid. fol. 61. 1.

[q] It is a Tradition of the Rabbins, if one in walking near any City ſee lights in it; If the greateſt number in that City be Cuthites, let him not bleſs them; if they be moſt Iſraelites, let him bleſs it. תנן רישא רוב כותיים They teach the beginning, when they ſay, moſt Cuthites. תנא סיפא רוב ישראל They teach the end when they ſay, moſt Iſraelites. The chief and principal ſcruple was, whether they ſhould pronounce a bleſſing upon thoſe lights, when there might be moſt Cuthites in the City that lighted them up: The leſſer ſcruple was, whether he ſhould bleſs them, if there was moſt Iſraelites in that City. [q] Beracoth, fol. 53. 1.

[r] There is a diſpute upon that precept, Levit. XVII. 13. If any one kill a Beaſt or Bird upon an Holy day, the Shammean School ſaith, let him dig with an inſtrument, and cover the blood; [r] Betzah. fol. 6. 2.

blood; The School of Hillel ſaith, let him not kill at all, if he have not duſt ready by him to cover the blood.

סיפא The end, or the ſecondary queſtion, is about covering the blood if a Beaſt ſhould be killed. רישא The beginning, or the principal queſtion, is, about killing a Beaſt or a Fowl at all upon an Holy day; meerly for the labour of ſcraping up duſt, if there be none at hand.

There are numberleſs inſtances of this kind, and if our Saviour had any reſpect to this form or mode of ſpeaking, we may ſuppoſe what he ſaid, was to this purpoſe. "You ask "who I am? רישא The beginning. That is the chief thing to be enquired into which I now "ſay, viz. That I am the Light of the world, the Meſſiah, the Son of God, &c. But "what works I do, what Doctrines I teach, and by what authority: סיפא this is an "enquiry of the ſecond place in compariſon to that firſt and chief queſtion who I am.

VERS. XXVI.

Ἀλλ' ὁ πέμψάς με ἀληθής ἐστι. But he that ſent me is true.

I Have many things to ſay and judge of you, but he that ſent me hath of old ſaid and judged of you, and he is true, and they are true things which he hath ſaid of you. Of this kind are thoſe paſſages, Iſai. XI. 10. Make the heart of this people fat, &c. and XXIX. 10. The Lord hath poured a ſpirit of deep ſleep upon you, &c. and from ſuch kind of Predictions it is that Chriſt concludes this concerning them, verſ. 21. ye ſhall dye in your ſins..

VERS. XXXIII.

Σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ ἐσμεν, &c. We be Abraham's ſeed, &c.

THEY were wont to glory of being Abraham's ſeed beyond all meaſure. Take one inſtance of a thouſand.

ſ Bava Metzia, fol. 83. 1. ſ It is ſtoryed of R. Jochanan ben Matthias, that he ſaid to his Son, Go out and hire us ſome Labourers: He went out and hired them for their Victuals. When he came home to his Father, his Father ſaid to him, my Son, ſhouldſt thou make Feaſts for them, as gaudy as the Feaſts of Solomon, thou wouldſt not do enough for them, becauſe they are the Children of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob. And yet they confeſs, t חמרה זכות אבות The merits of our Fathers Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob ceaſed from the days of Hoſhea the Prophet, as ſaith Rabh, or as Samuel, from the days of Hazael.

t Schabb. fol. 53. 1.

But how came they to joyn this? We be Abraham's ſeed neither were we ever in bondage to any. Is it impoſible that one of Abraham's ſeed, ſhould be in bondage? The ſenſe of theſe two clauſes muſt be diſtinguiſhed. We are of the ſeed of Abraham, who are very fond and tenacious of our liberty, and as far as concerns our ſelves, we never were in bondage to any man. The whole Nation was infinitely averſe to all ſervitude, neither was it by any means lawful for an Iſraelite to ſell himſelf into bondage unleſs upon the extremeſt neceſſity.

u Maimon. in Avadim. cap. 1. u It is not lawful for an Iſraelite to ſell himſelf, for that end meerly, that he might treaſure up the money, or might trade with it or buy Veſſels, or pay a creditor, but barely if he want food and ſuſtenance. Nor may he ſell himſelf, unleſs when nothing in the world is left, not ſo much as his Cloaths, then let him ſell himſelf------ And he whom the Sanhedrin ſells, or ſells himſelf, muſt not be ſold בפרהסיא ולא בסמטא openly, nor in the publick way, as other ſlaves are ſold, but privately.

VERS. XXXVII.

Ἀλλὰ ζητεῖτέ με ἀποκτεῖναι. But ye ſeek to kill me.

FRom this whole period, it is manifeſt, that the whole tendency of our Saviour's diſcourſe, is to ſhew the Jews that they are the ſeed of that Serpent, that was to bruiſe the heel of the Meſſiah: elſe what could that mean, verſ. 44. ye are of your Father the Devil, but this, viz. ye are the ſeed of the Serpent.

VERS.

VERS. XLIII.

Ὅτι οὐ δύνασθε ἀκούειν τὸν λόγον τὸν ἐμὸν. Because you cannot hear my word.

YOU may here distinguish λαλία and λόγος. So that λαλία may signifie the manner of speaking, or phrases used in speech; λόγος the matter or thing spoken, Isai. XI. 4. he shall smite the Earth with the rod of his mouth. But they could not bear the smart of his rod, they would not understand the phrasiology or way of speech he used.

VERS. LXIV.

Ἀνθρωποκτόνος ἀπ' ἀρχῆς. A murderer from the beginning.

רוצח מן בראשית For so the Hebrew Idiom would render ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, he was a murderer from the days of the Creation. And so Christ in saying this, speaks according to the vulgar opinion, as if Adam fell the very first day of his Creation.

Ἐν ἀληθείᾳ οὐκ ἔστηκεν. He abode not in the truth.

I. He abode not in the truth. i. e. he did not continue true, but found out the way of lying.

II. He did not persist in the will of God, which he had revealed concerning man. For the revealed will of God is called truth: especially his will revealed in the Gospel. Now when God had pleased to make known his good will toward the first man, partly fixing him in so honourable and happy a station, partly commanding the Angels that they should minister to him for his good, Heb. I. 14. the Devil did not abide in this truth, nor persisted in this will and command of God. For he, envying the honour and happiness of man, took this command of God concerning the Angels ministring to him, in so much scorn and contempt, that swelling with most envenomed malice against Adam, and infinite pride against God, chose rather to dethrone himself from his own glory and felicity, than he would bear Adam's continuance in so noble a station, or minister any way to the happiness of it. An Angel was uncapable of sinning either more or less than by pride and malice.

VERS. XLVIII.

BUT what I pray you, hath a Samaritan to do with the Court of your Temple? For this they say to Christ, whiles he was yet standing in the Treasury, or in the Court of the Women, vers. 20. If you would admit a Samaritan into the Court of the Gentiles, where the Gentiles themselves were allowed to come, it were much, and is indeed very questionable; but who is it would bear such an one standing in the Treasury? Which very thing shews how much this was spoken in rancor and meer malice, they themselves not believing, nay perfectly knowing that he was no Samaritan, at that time when they called him so. And it is observable that our Saviour made no return upon that senseless reproach of theirs, because he did not think it worth the answering; he only replies upon them that he hath not a Devil, that is, that he was not mad.

VERS. LVII.

Πεντήκοντα ἔτη οὔπω ἔχεις. Thou art not yet fifty years old.

APply these words to the time of superannuating the Levites, Numb. IV. and we shall find no need of those knots and difficulties wherewith some have puzzled themselves. Thou art not yet fifty years old, that is, thou art not yet come to the common years of superannuation, and dost thou talk that thou hast seen Abraham?

VERS.

VERS. LVIII.

Πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι Ἐγὼ εἰμί. Before Abraham was, I am.

THEY pervert the queſtion. Chriſt had ſaid, Abraham ſaw my day: on the contrary they ask him, Haſt thou ſeen Abraham?

This phraſe Ἐγὼ εἰμὶ ſometimes is rendred from the ſingle word אנכי [I] So the Greek Interpreters in the Books of Judges and Ruth: for you will ſeldom or never meet with it elſewhere.

Judg. VI. 18. אנכי אשב I will tarry, or ſit here. Greek, Ἐγὼ εἰμὶ καθήσομαι. The Latine Interpreters, Ego quidem manebo.

Ibid. Chap. XI. 27. ואנכי לא חטאתי לך Wherefore I have not ſinned againſt thee. Greek, Ἐγὼ εἰμὶ οὐχ ἥμαρτόν σοι. Latine, Ego quidem non peccavi tibi.

Ibid. verſ. 35. ואנכי פציתי פי For I have opened my mouth. Greek, Καὶ ἐγὼ εἰμὶ ἤνοιξα τὸ στόμα. Latine, Et ipſe aperui os.

Ibid. verſ. 37. אנכי ורעותי I and my fellows. Greek, Ἐγὼ εἰμὶ κὴ αἱ συνεταιρίδες μου. Latine, Ego ipſa, & ſodales meæ.

Ruth. IV. 4. אנכי אגאל I will redeem it. Greek, Ἐγὼ εἰμὶ ἀγχιστεύσω. Latine, Ego ſum, redimam.

As to this form of ſpeech, let thoſe that are better skilled in the Greek tongue, be the judges. Our Saviour's expreſſion ſeemeth ſomething more difficult, becauſe he doth not ſay πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι ἐγὼ ἦν, but ἐγὼ εἰμί. To this purpoſe, as it ſhould ſeem, Before Abraham was, I am.

VERS. LIX.

Ἦραν οὖν λίθους, &c. And they took up ſtones, &c.

WOULD you alſo murder another Prophet in the very Court of the Temple, O ye murderous Generation? Remember but Zacharias, and ſurely that might ſuffice. But whence could they get ſtones in the Court of the Temple? Let the anſwer be made from ſomething parallel.

x Schabb. fol. 115. 1. x It is ſtoried of Abba Calpatha, who going to Rabban Gamaliel at Tiberias, found him ſitting at the Table of Jochanan the Money-changer, with the Book of Job in his hand Targumiſed; [that is, renderd into the Chaldee Tongue] and reading in it. Saith he to him, I remember your Grandfather Rabban Gamaliel how he ſtood upon Gab in the mountain of the Temple, and they brought unto him the Book of Job Targumized. He calls to the Architect לבנאי ſaying, ramm him in under the foundation. ------ R. Joſe ſaith, they whelmed him under an heap of Clay. ובי טיט בהר הבירה Is there any Clay in the Mountain of the Temple? Gloſs. There was Mortar which they uſed in building.

It may be noted by the by, that they were building in the Temple in the days of the firſt Gamaliel, who ſate Preſident in the Sanhedrin, about the latter days of our Saviour; which confirms what I already have noted in Chap. II. 20. And further let us ſee, how they might have ſtones in readineſs, for they were now building, and they might have pieces of ſtones enough there.

CHAP. IX.

VERS. II.

Τίς ἥμαρτεν, οὗτος ἢ οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ; Who did ſin, this man or his Parents?

I. IT was a received Doctrine in the Jewiſh Schools, that Children according to ſome wickedneſs of their Parents were born lame, or crooked, or maimed and defective in ſome of their parts, &c. by which they kept Parents in awe leſt they ſhould grow remiſs and negligent in the performance of ſome rites which had reſpect to their being clean, ſuch as waſhings and purifyings, &c. we have given inſtances elſewhere.

II. But

II. But that the Infant ſhould be born lame or blind, or defective in any part, for any ſin or fault of his own, ſeems a riddle indeed.

1. Nor do they ſolve the matter who fly to that principle of the Μετεμψύχωσις or tranſmigration of ſouls which would have the Jews tinctured with; at leaſt if we will admit Joſephus as a juſt Interpreter, and judge of that principle. For thus he y.

y Lib. de Excid. II. cap. 12.

It is the opinion of the Phariſees Ψυχὴν πᾶσαν μὴ ἄφθαρτον μεταβαίνειν εἰς ἕτερον σῶμα; τὴν δὲ τῶν ἀγαθῶν μόνον, τὴν δὲ τῶν φαύλων ἀϊδίῳ τιμωρίᾳ κολάζεσθαι· That the ſouls of all are immortal, and do paſs into another body; that is thoſe of the good only: [obſerve this] but thoſe of the wicked are puniſhed with eternal torments. So that, unleſs you will ſay that the ſoul of ſome good man paſſing into the body of this man was the cauſe of his being born blind (a ſuppoſition that every one would cry ſhame of) you ſay nothing to the caſe in hand. If the opinion of the tranſmigration of ſouls, amongſt the Jews, prevailed only ſo far that they ſuppos'd the ſouls of good men only paſs'd into other bodies; the very ſubject of the preſent queſtion is taken away, and all ſuſpicion of any puniſhment or defect happening to the infant upon the account of Tranſmigration wholly vaniſheth, unleſs you will ſay it could happen upon a good ſoul's paſſing out of the body of a good man.

2. There is a ſolution attempted by ſome from the ſouls pre-exiſtency, which they would pretend the Jews had ſome ſmatch of, from what they ſay about נשמות שב גוף thoſe ſouls which are in Goph, or Guph.

z R. Joſe ſaith, the Son of David will not come שיכלו כל הנשמות שב גוף till the ſouls that are in Goph are conſummated. The ſame paſſage is recited alſo in Niddah a, and Jevamoth b, where it is aſcrib'd to R. אסי Aſi.

z Avodah Zarah. fol. 5. 1.
b Fol. 62. 1.

There is a repoſitory, ſaith R. Solomon, the name of which is Goph, and from the Creation all the ſouls that ever were to be born, were form'd together and there plac'd.

But there's another Rabbin brought in by another Commentator, that ſuppoſeth a two-fold Goph, and that the ſouls of the Iſraelites and of the Gentiles are not in one and the ſame Goph. Nay further he conceives that in the days of the Meſſiah there will be a third Goph, and a new race of ſouls made.

R. Joſe deduceth his opinion from Iſaiah LVII. 16. miſerably wreſting the words of the Prophet to this ſenſe, My will ſhall hinder for the ſouls which I have made. For ſo Aruch and the Commentators explain his mind.

Grant now that what I have quoted might be ſufficient confirmations that the Jews did entertain the opinion of the Souls pre-exiſtence, yet what concern the pre-exiſtence of ſouls hath with this place, I confeſs I have not ſo quick an apprehenſion as any way to imagine, unleſs we will ſuppoſe a μετεμψύχωσις too, or that ſome ſouls come immediately from the hand of God, ſtain'd and defiled.

III. I would therefore ſeek to untye this knot ſome other way.

1. I would have that paſſage obſerv'd which we have in Vajicra rabb. c And the days draw nigh in the which thou ſhalt ſay, I have no pleaſure in them, Eccl. XII. 1. הולו ימי המשיח שאין בהן לא זכות ולא חובה thoſe are the days of the Meſſiah, wherein there ſhall be neither merit nor demerit. That is, if I miſtake not, wherein neither the good deſerts of the Parents ſhall be imputed to the children for their advantage, nor their deſerts, for their fault and puniſhment. They are the words of R. Akibah in loc. and they are his application of that paſſage in Eccleſ. and indeed his own invention; but the opinion it ſelf, That there ſhall be neither merit nor demerit in the days of the Meſſiah, is what is commonly receiv'd amongſt the Jews. If ſo, then let me a little enlarge this queſtion of our Saviours Diſciples by way of Paraphraſe to this purpoſe. "Maſter we know that thou art the Meſſiah, and "that theſe are the days of the Meſſiah; we have alſo learnt from our Schools that there is "no imputation of merit or demerit from the Parents in the days of the Meſſiah; whence "then is it that this man is born blind? that in theſe days of the Meſſiah he ſhould bring "into the world with him ſome mark and imputation of fault or blame ſomewhere? "What, was it his Parents fault? This ſeems againſt the receiv'd opinion. It ſeems there-"fore that he bears ſome tokens of his own fault: is it ſo or no?

c Fol. 184. 3.

2. It was a conceit amongſt the Jews that the infant when form'd and quicken'd in the womb, might behave it ſelf irregularly, and do ſomething that might not be altogether without fault.

In the Treatiſe laſt mention'd, a woman is brought in complaining in earneſt of her child before the Judg, כרהוא במעי הוה מבעט that it kickt her unreaſonably in the womb. In Midr. Cohel. and Midr. Ruth, Cap. III. 13. there is a ſtory told of Eliſha ben Abujah, who departed from the faith and became an horrible Apoſtate, and amongſt other reaſons of his apoſtacy this is render'd for one.

There are which ſay, that his Mother when ſhe was big with child of him, paſſing through a Temple of the Gentiles, ſmelt ſomething very ſtrong, they gave to her of what ſhe ſmelt, and ſhe did eat, והוה מפעפע בכריסה כבכריסה של חכינה and the child in the womb grew hot, and ſwell'd into bliſters, as in the womb of a Serpent.

In which ſtory his Apoſtacy is ſuppoſed as originally rooted and grounded in him in the womb, upon the fault of his mother eating of what had been offer'd to Idols. It is alſo equally preſum'd that an Infant may unreaſonably and irregularly kick and punch in the womb of its mother beyond the rate of ordinary infants. The infants in the womb of Rebecca may be for an inſtance, where the Jews indeed abſolve Jacob from fault, מסורחנא though he took Eſau by the heel b; but will hardly abſolve Eſau for riſing up againſt his brother Jacob.

c Antoninus askt R. Judah at what time evil affections begin to prevail in the man, משעת יצירה או משעת יציאה whether in the firſt forming of the fœtus in the womb, or at the time of its coming forth? The Rabbi ſaith unto him, from the time of its firſt forming. Then ſaith Antoninus, it will kick in the mothers womb, and ruſh out. This I learnt of Antoninus, and the Scripture ſeems to back it, when it ſaith, Sin lyeth at the door.

It appears from this diſpute, whether true or feigned, that the ancient opinion of the Jews was that the infant from its firſt quickening had ſome ſtain of ſin upon it. And that great Doctor R. Judah the holy, was originally of that opinion himſelf, but had lightly chang'd his mind upon ſo paltry an argument. Nay, they went a little further, not only that the infant might have ſome ſtain of ſin in the womb, but that it might in ſome meaſure actually ſin, and do that which might render it criminal. To which purpoſe this paſſage of the Diſciples ſeems to have ſome relation, Did this man ſin that he was born blind? That is, did he when his Mother carry'd him in her womb, do any foul or enormous thing that might deſerve this ſevere ſtroke upon him that he ſhould bring this blindneſs with him into the world?

VERS. VI.

Ἔπτυσε χαμαὶ, &c. He ſpat on the ground, &c.

I. HOW far ſpittle was accounted wholeſome for weak eyes we may learn from this ridiculous tale.

d Hieroſ. Sotah, fol. 16. 4. & Vajicra rabb. fol. 175. 2.

d R. Meir ſat and was teaching in the evening of the Sabbath-day; there was a woman ſtood by, hearing him preach; after he had done ſhe went home and found her candle gone out. Her Husband ſaith to her, where haſt thou been? I have been, ſaith ſhe, ſtanding and hearing the voice of a Preacher. Her Husband ſaith to her, thou ſhalt not enter in till thou haſt gone and ſpat in the face of him that taught. After three weeks her neighbouring women perſwading and heartning her to it ſhe goes to the Chappel. Now the whole matter was already made known to R. Meir. He ſaith therefore to them, אית מינכון איתתא חכימא למילחש בעיינא Is there ever a woman among you skill'd in muttering charms over eyes? [for he feign'd a grievous ailment in his eyes] the woman ſaid, R. I am not skill'd: However, ſaith he, do thou ſpit ſeven times upon my eyes, and I ſhall be healed, which ſhe did. Gloſs. Whenever they mutter'd any charms over the eyes, it was neceſſary that they ſhould ſpit upon them.

II. It was prohibited amongſt them to beſmear the eyes with ſpittle upon the Sabbath-day upon any Medicinal account, although it was eſteemed ſo very wholeſome for them.

e They do not ſquirt wine into the eyes on the Sabbath-day, but they may waſh the eye-brows with it; ורוק חפל אפילו ער גב חעין אסור but as to faſting ſpittle, [which was eſteem'd exceedingly wholeſome] it is not lawful to put it ſo much as upon the eye-lids f. One ſaith that wine is prohibited ſo far, that it may not be injected into the middle of the eye, upon the eye-brows it may. Another ſaith that ſpittle is forbidden ſo much as upon the eye-lids.

So that in this action of our Saviour's we may obſerve:

I. That he does not heal this ſick man with a word as he did others, but chuſeth to do a thing which was againſt their Canonical obſervation of the Sabbath, deſigning hereby to make a trial of the man, whether he was ſo ſuperſtitious that he would not admit ſuch things to be done upon him on the Sabbath-day. He made an experiment not much unlike this upon the man at Betheſda as we have before obſerv'd.

II. Whiles he mingles ſpettle with duſt, and of that makes a clay to anoint the eyes of the blind man, he thereby avoideth the ſuſpicion of uſing any kind of charm; and gives rather a demonſtration of his own Divine power, when he heals by a method contrary to nature; for clay laid upon the eyes we might believe ſhould rather put out the eyes of one that ſees, than reſtore ſight to one that had been blind. Yea and further he gave demonſtration of the Divine authority he himſelf had over the Sabbath, when he heals upon that day by the uſe of means which had been peculiarly prohibited to be us'd in it.

The connexion of this Chapter with the former is ſuch that the ſtories in both ſeem to have been acted on one and the ſame day, [Διελθὼν διὰ μέσου αὐτῶν ἦ παρῆγεν ὅτως, Going through the midſt of them, ſo paſſed by. Καὶ παράγων εἶδεν ἄνθρωπον τυφλὸν, And as he paſſed by he ſaw a man which was blind.] If it be ſo (which I will not much contend about) then do do they bring the Adulterous woman before Chriſt, yea and attempt to ſtone him too on the Sabbath-day, Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἐκρύβη, Jeſus hid himſelf; or perhaps the ſenſe is, he was hidden; that is by the multitude that had a favour for him, and compaſt him about, leſt his enemies ſhould have wreakt their malice and diſpleaſure againſt him.

VERS. VII.

Ὁ ἑρμηνεύεται Ἀπεσταλμένος. Which is by interpretation, ſent.

WE have already ſhewn that the ſpring of Siloam diſcharg'd its ſelf by a double ſtream into a twofold Pool, the upper Pool which was called שילוח the Pool of Siloah; and the lower which was called ברכת השלח the Pool of Shelah. Nehem. III. 15. Now שילוח plainly and properly ſignifies Ἀπεσταλμένος, but שלח not ſo, as we have already noted. Probably the Evangeliſt added this Parentheſis on purpoſe to diſtinguiſh which of the Pools the blind man was ſent to waſh in; viz. not in the Pool Shelah, which ſignifies κωδίων Fleeces, but in the Pool of Shiloah, which ſignifies Ἀπεσταλμένος, ſent.

VERS. VIII.

Ὁ καθήμενος καὶ προσαίτης. That ſat and begged.

THIS may be oppos'd to another ſort of beggars, viz. חוזרי פתחים thoſe that beg from door to door.

The words uſed by the beggars were generally theſe:

זכי בי vouchſafe ſomething to me. Or rather according to the letter, deſerve ſomething by me, i.e. acquire ſomething of merit to your ſelf by the alms you give me.

רכי בי זכי גר מך O you whoever have a tender heart do your ſelf good by me.

סכי בי מה הוינא אסתכל בי מה אנא Look back and ſee what I have been, look upon me now, and ſee what I am g.

g Vajicra rabb. fol. 204. 3.

VERS. XIII.

Ἄγουσιν αὐτὸν πρὸς Φαρισαίους. They brought him to the Phariſees.

THE Phariſees in this Evangeliſt are generally to be underſtood the Sanhedrin; nor indeed do we find in St. John any mention of the Sadducees at all. Conſult Joh. I. 24. IV. 1. VIII. 3. & XI. 46, &c.

h Τοιαύτην δὲ ἔχουσι [Φαρισαῖοι] τὴν ἰσχὺν πρὸς τὸ πλῆθει, &c. The Phariſees have ſuch a ſway amongſt the people, that if they ſhould ſay any thing againſt the King or High Prieſt, they would be believ'd. And a little after,

h Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 13. cap. 18.

The Phariſees have given out many rules to the people from the Traditions of the fathers, which are not written in the Laws of Moſes; and for that very reaſon the Sadducees rejected them, ſaying they ought to account nothing as law or obligatory, but what is deliver'd by Moſes, and what hath no other authority but tradition only, ought not to be obſerv'd. And hence have ariſen queſtions and mighty controverſies, τῶν μὲν Σαδδουκαίων ὀλίγους μόνον πειθόντων, the Sadducees drawing after them the richer ſort only, whiles the multitude follow'd and adhered to the Phariſees.

Hence we may apprehend the reaſon why the whole Sanhedrin is ſometime comprehended under the name of the Phariſees, becauſe the common people, and the main body of that Nation, were wholly at the management of the Phariſees, govern'd by their decrees and laws. But there was once a Sanhedrin that conſiſted chiefly of the Sect of the Sadducees, and what was done then? i R. Eliezer ben Zadok ſaith, there was a time when they burnt a Prieſts daughter for whoredom, compaſſing her about with bundles of young twiggs; but the anſwer is בקי שעה אותה של לא היה בר" there was not a Sanhedrin at that time that was well ſkill'd.------Rabb Joſeph ſaith הוה צדוקי של בר" that Sanhedrin was made up of Sadducees. It is worth our taking notice of this paſſage.

i Sanhedr. fol. 52. 1.

VERS. XXII.

Ἀποσυνάγωγος γένηται. He ſhould be put out of the Synagogue.

SO Chap. XVI. 2. Ἀποσυνάγωγους ποιήσουσιν ὑμᾶς, granting that this is ſpoken of Excommunication, the queſtion may be whether it is to be underſtood of the ordinary Excommunication, that is, from this or that Synagogue, or the extraordinary, that is מנחת ישראל a cutting off from the whole Congregation of Iſrael.

k Piske hartsh in Motd-Katon, cap. 3. art. 23.

k Whoever is excommunicated by נשיא the preſident of the Sanhedrin, is cut off from the whole Congregation of Iſrael; and if ſo, then much more if it be by the vote of the whole Sanhedrin. And it ſeems by that ſpeech ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἔξω, They caſt him out, v. 34. that word ἔξω, out, was added for ſuch a ſignification.

But ſuppoſe we, it might be underſtood of the ordinary Excommunication; among all the four and twenty reaſons of Excommunication which ſhould it be for which this was decreed, viz. that if any man did confeſs that Jeſus was the Chriſt he ſhould be put out of the Synagogue? The Elders of the Sanhedrin perhaps would anſwer, what upon other occaons is frequently ſaid and done by them, It is decreed לצורך ומן for the neceſſity of the time.

VERS. XXVIII.

Ἡμεῖς Μωσέως ἐσμὲν μαθηταί. We are Moſes Diſciples.

THE man as it ſhould ſeem had in gentle and perſwaſive terms askt them, Will ye alſo be his Diſciples? as if he heartily wiſht they would. But they as ruggedly, Be you ſo: We are Moſes his Diſciples.

l Joma, fol. 4. 1.

l They deliver'd two Diſciples of the wiſe men into the hands of the chief Prieſt [that they might inſtruct him about the rites and uſages of the day of expiation] מתלמידיו של משה they were of the Diſciples of Moſes. And who are theſe Diſciples of Moſes? it follows, לאפוקי צדוקין the very phraſe excludes the Sadducees.

The Reader may obſerve by the way theſe Diſciples of Moſes his Diſciples, with what reverence they treat him.

m Moſes was angry about three things, and the tradition was accordingly hid from him: I. About the Sabbath, Exod. XVI. 20. while he was angry he forgot to recite to them the traditions about the Sabbath. II. About the veſſels of metal, Numb. XXXI. 14. whiles he was angry, he forgot to recite to them the traditions about the veſſels of metal. III. About the mourner, whiles he was wroth the tradition was hid from him, which forbad the mourner to eat of the Holy things.

Did Moſes think it unlawful for the mourner to have eaten of the Holy things when he ſpake to Eleazar and Ithamar while they were in the very act of bewailing the death of their two Brethren, Wherefore have ye not eaten the ſin-offering in the Holy place? Yes, but in his paſſion he forgot both the tradition and himſelf too? Excellent Diſciples indeed that can thus chaſtiſe your great Maſter at pleaſure, as a man very haſty, apt to be angry, and of a ſlender memory! let him hence forward learn from you to temperate his paſſions, and quicken his memory. You have a memory indeed that have recover'd the tradition which he himſelf had forgot!

VERS. XXXIV.

Καὶ ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἔξω. And they caſt him out.

I Shall note ſomething of this kind of phraſe at Chap. XVI. 2. Thus doth this man commence the firſt Confeſſor in the Chriſtan Church, as John the Baptiſt had been the firſt Martyr in it. He ſuffer'd Excommunication, and that from the whole Congregation of Iſrael, for the name of Chriſt. It ſeems ſomething ſtrange that they did not Excommunicate Jeſus himſelf, but they were contriving more bloody things againſt him.

CHAP.

CHAP. X.

AMONGST all the places in the Old Teſtament which mention this great ſhepherd, there is no one, doth ſo exactly deſcribe him and his Paſtoral work, as the XI*th Chap.* of the Prophet Zachary. We will fetch a few things from thence that may ſerve to explain the paſſage now in hand.

I. He deſcribes this great Shepherd manifeſting himſelf, and applying himſelf to his great Paſtoral office, when the Nation was now upon the brink of deſtruction; the Prophet had foretold their ruin, and brings in this Shepherd, undertaking the care of his ſheep leſt they ſhould periſh too.

As to the firſt ver. Open thy doors O Lebanon; take the Jews own comment upon it, who yet do by all the skill they can endeavour to take off the whole Propheſie from thoſe proper hinges upon which it turns.

n Forty years before the deſtruction [of Jeruſalem] the Gates of the Temple open'd themſelves of their own accord. Rabban Jochanan ben Zacchai declaim'd upon it, ſaying, O Temple, Temple, why doſt thou terrifie thy ſelf? I know thy end will be deſtruction; for ſo Zachary the Son of Iddo hath propheſy'd concerning thee, Open thy doors, O Lebanon, &c. n Joma, fol. 39. 2.

The reſt that follows doth plainly enough ſpeak out deſolation and ruin, ver. 2. 3. but particularly that is remarkable, ver. 6. I will deliver them every one into their neighbours hands; how manifeſtly doth it agree with thoſe inteſtine broils and diſcords, thoſe horrid ſeditions ſtir'd up amongſt them? And into the hands of their King; i.e. of Ceſar, concerning whom they may remember they once ſaid, We have no King but Ceſar.

II. He deſcribes the evil ſhepherds of the people under a Triumvirate, ver. 8. Three Shepherds alſo I cut off in one month, &c. i.e. the Phariſees, the Sadducees, and the Eſſenes, which interpretation though it cannot but ſound very unpleaſingly in Jewiſh ears, yet is it what ſeems abundantly confirm'd, both from the context and the hiſtory of things. They therefore would turn the edg of the Propheſie another way, the Gemariſts underſtanding the three Shepherds of Moſes, Aaron and Miriam o; Jarchi would have it the houſe of Ahab, the houſe of Ahaziah and his Brethren. Kimchi, the Sons of Jehoahaz, Jehojakim, and Zedekiah. Aben Ezra ſaith, Perhaps they are the High Prieſt Joſhua, the perſon anointed to the wars, and the Sagan, or perhaps Haggai, Zachary, and Malachi, &c. o Taanith, fol. 9. 1.

But what can be more clear than that the Prophet ſpeaks of thoſe Shepherds that had waſted and corrupted the flock, and who when the true Shepherd of the ſheep ſhould reveal himſelf would do the like again? and who ſhould theſe be but the Principals and chief heads of Sects, and the leaders of the people, the Phariſees, the Sadducees, and the Eſſenes?

Object. But how can theſe properly be ſaid to be cut off by the great Shepherd when he ſhould come, whereas it is well enough known that theſe Sects lived even after the death of Chriſt, nay after the ruins of Jeruſalem; not to ſay that Phariſaim hath its being amongſt the Jews to this very day?

Anſw. So indeed it is ſaid that under the Goſpel, The Nations ſhould not learn war any more, Iſa. II. 4. and that there ſhould not be an infant in age, or one under age, in the new Jeruſalem, Iſa. LXV. 20. whereas we find enough of war in every generation, and that infancy or ignorance in Divine things abounds ſtill. But nevertheleſs God had done his part toward the accompliſhment of ſuch Propheſies, namely, he had brought in the Goſpel of Peace, and the Goſpel of Light, that nothing ſhould be wanting on his ſide, that peace might reign on the Earth, and infancy in Divine things ſhould be no more; ſo did this great Shepherd bring in the Evangelical Doctrine, the Oracle of Truth and Religion, which did ſo beat down and confound all the vain Doctrines and Inſtitutions of thoſe Sects, that as to what related to the Doctrine of Chriſt, there was nothing wanting to have cut off thoſe hereſies and vanities.

III. This great Shepherd broke that Covenant that had been made and confirm'd with that people, ver. 10. I took my ſtaff which was called Beauty, and I cut it off, that I might break my Covenant which I made with all the people. With all the people, i.e. with all Iſrael, the Ten and the Two Tribes too. And in the 14 ver. the affinity and kin which was betwixt Judah and Iſrael is diſſolv'd, which it would not be amiſs for thoſe to take ſerious notice of, who as yet expect an univerſal converſion of the whole Nation of the Jews. Let them ſay by virtue of what Covenant? if the Covenant of Grace, that makes no difference betwixt the Jew and the Greek, nor knows any one after the fleſh. If by virtue of the Covenant peculiarly made with that people, that was broken and diſſolv'd when God had gather'd his flock out of that people. For,

IV. The

IV. The great Shepherd when he came, found that there must be a flock gather'd in that Nation, Λεῖμμα κατ' ἐκλογὴν χάριτος, Rom. XI. 5. A remnant according to the election of grace; and these he took care to call and gather before Jerusalem should be destroy'd. Zachary himself calls it צון הרגה a flock of slaughter; and עני הצאן the poor of the flock, ver. 7. Where, by the way, whoever compares the Greek Version in this place must needs observe that כן עני so the poor, is by those Interpreters jumbled and confounded into one word. For instead of וידעו כן עני הצאן and so the poor of the flock knew, they read it γνώσονται οἱ χαναναῖοι τὰ πρόβατα, &c. The Canaanites shall know the sheep, &c. So instead of לכן עני הצאן for this, or for you, O poor of the flock, ver. 7. they read εἰς τὴν χαναανίτιν, unto the land of Canaan. Whence after that we have taken notice that they read Nun finale in כן as not final, I have some suspicion that these Interpreters might have had an eye upon the reduction of the dispersed captivity into the land of Canaan, according to the common expectation of that Nation. But this only by the by.

That of the Apostle ought to be strictly heeded. Οὕτως ἐν τῷ νῦν καιρῷ λεῖμμα κατ' ἐκλογὴν χάριτος γέγονεν. Even so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace. Which is indeed as the Gnomon to that Chapter, and above all other things does interpret best the Apostles mind, for he propounds to discourse not concerning the universal call of the Jews, but of their not being universally rejected, which may very easily be collected from the very first verse of this Chapter, Hath God cast away his people? that is, so cast them away that they are universally rejected. God forbid, for I my self am an Israelite, and am not cast away. This argument he pursues and illustrates from the example of those most corrupted times, the age wherein Elijah liv'd, when they threw down the Altars of God, slew his Prophets, and not a few worship'd τὸν Βαὰλ, Baal of the Zidonians, whom Ahab had introduc'd, and almost the whole Nation worship'd τῷ Βαὰλ, that Golden Calf or Cow which Jeroboam had set up. And yet even in that worst state of affairs, saith God, I have reserv'd to my self seven thousand men, who have not bow'd the knee, τῇ Βαὰλ, that Golden Calf, the common and universal error of that Nation, much less τῷ Βαὰλ, to Baal of the Sidonians. Even so (saith the Apostle) at this very time there is a remnant, plainly intimating that he does not assert or argue for the calling of the whole Nation, but of that remnant only, and that he discourses concerning the present calling of that remnant, and not about any future call of the whole Nation.

V. That is a vast mystery the Apostle is upon, ver. 25. of that Chapter, Ὅτι πώρωσις ἀπὸ μέρους τῷ Ἰσραὴλ γέγονεν, ἄχρις οὗ τὸ πλήρωμα τῶν ἐθνῶν εἰσέλθῃ. Blindness hath severally happen'd to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles shall be come in. I render ἀπὸ μέρους severally, or by parts, not without warrant from Grammar, and according to the meaning and intention of St. Paul, for the mystery mention'd by him is, that blindness severally, and at several times happen'd to the Israelites: First the Ten Tribes were blinded through Idolatry, and after many ages the two Tribes through Traditions; and yet both those and these reserv'd together to that time, wherein the Gentiles who had been blinded for a longer space are called, and then both Israelites and Jews, and Gentiles, being all call'd together, do close into one body. It is observable that the Apostle throughout this whole Chapter, doth not so much as once make mention of the Jews, but of Israel, that he might include the Ten Tribes with the two, within his discourse.

And indeed this great Shepherd had his flock or his sheep within the Ten Tribes, as well as within the two; and to me it is without all controversie, that the Gospel in the times of the Apostles was brought and preacht as well to the one as the other. Doubtless St. Peter whiles he was in Babylon preached to the Israelites dispersed in those Countries as well as to the Jews.

VI. Some of the Gemarists do vehemently deny any conversion of the Ten Tribes under the Messiah, let them beware lest there be not a conversion of their own.

p Sanhedr. fol. 110. 2. p The Ten Tribes shall never return, as it is written, And he cast them out into a strange land, as it is this day, Deut. XXIX. 28. As this day passeth and shall never return, so they are gone and shall not return again. They are the words of R. Akibah.

It is a Tradition of the Rabbins, that the Ten Tribes shall not have a part in the world to come, as it is written, the Lord rooted them out of their land in anger and in wrath, and in great indignation, and cast them out into another land. He rooted them out of their own land in this world, and cast them out into another land in the world to come. They are the words of Rabbi.

But in truth when the true Messiah did appear, the Ten Tribes were more happily call'd, (if I may so speak) that is, with more happy success than the Jews; because amongst those Jews that had embrac'd the Gospel, there happen'd a sad and foul Apostacy, the like to which we read not of concerning the Ten Tribes that were converted.

VERS. I.

Διὰ τ θύρας εἰς τὴν αὐλὴν, &c. By the door into the ſheepfold, &c.

THE ſheepfold amongſt the Talmudiſts is דיר ſome Incloſures or Pen: wherein
I. The ſheep were all gathered together in the night, leſt they ſhould ſtray; and where they might be ſafe from thieves or wild beaſts.
II. In the day-time they were milked: As,

Τρῶες δ' ὥστε σῖες πολυπάμμονος ἄνδρος ἐν αὐλῇ, Μυζήσαι ἰσήκασιν ἀμελγομένῃσι γάλα λευκόν. Iliad. ε.

The Trojans as the rich mans numerous flocks,
Stand milked in the fold.

III. There the Lambs were tythed.
r How is it that they tythe the lambs? כונסין לדיר They gather the flock into the ſheepfold, and making a little door, which two cannot go out of at together, they number 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and the tenth that goes out they mark with red, ſaying, this is the tythe.------The ews are without, and the lambs within, and at the bleating of the ews the lambs get out. r Becoroth, fol. 38. 2.

So that there was in the ſheepfold one larger door, which gave ingreſs and egreſs to the flock and ſhepherds, and a leſſer by which the Lambs paſt out for tything.

Κλέπτης ἐστὶ, καὶ λῃστής. Is a thief and a robber.

In Talmudick language גנב וגולן: s who is a thief? He that takes away another mans goods, when the owner is not privy to it, as when a man puts his hand into another mans pocket, and takes away his money, the man not ſeeing him; but if he takes it away openly, publickly and by force אין זה גנב אלא גולן this is not a thief but a robber. Not κλέπτης, but λῃστής. s Maimon. Geneibah, cap. 1.

VERS. III.

Ὁ θυρωρός. The Porter.

I Am miſtaken if the ſervants that attend about the flock under the ſhepherd, the owners of them are not called בעלי אספות Eccleſ. XII. 11. i.e. thoſe that fold the ſheep; at leaſt if the ſheepfold its ſelf be not ſo called. And I would render the words by way of Paraphraſe thus: The words of the wiſe are as goads, and as nails faſtned by thoſe that gather the flock into the fold: Goads, to drive away the thief or the wild beaſt; and nails to preſerve the ſheepfold whole and in good repair. Which goad and nails are furniſht by the chief Shepherd, the Maſter of the flock, for theſe uſes. Now one of theſe ſervants that attended about the flock was call'd ὁ θυρωρός, the Porter. Not that he always ſat at the door, but the key was committed to his charge, that he might look to it that no ſheep ſhould ſtray out of the fold, nor any thing hurtful ſhould get, or be let in.

VERS. VII.

Ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ θύρα. I am the door.

PURE Iſraelitiſm among the Jews was the fold and the door, and all things. For if any one was of the ſeed of Iſrael, and the ſtock of Abraham, it was enough (themſelves being the Judges) for ſuch an one to be made a ſheep, admitted into the flock, and be fed and nouriſht to eternal life. But in Chriſts flock, the ſheep had another original, introduction and mark.

VERS. VIII.

Πάντες ὅσοι πρὸ ἐμοῦ ἦλθον κλέπται εἰσί. All that ever came before me are thieves.

OUR Saviour ſpeaks agreeably with the Scripture, where when there is any mention of the coming of this great Shepherd to undertake the charge of the flock, the evil Shepherds that do not feed but deſtroy the flock are accuſed, Jer. XXIII. 1, &c. Ezek. XXXIV. 2, &c. Zach. XI. 16. And our Saviour ſtrikes at thoſe three Shepherds before men-mention'd, that hated him, and were hated by him, the Sadduces, and Eſſenes, under whoſe conduct the Nation had been ſo erroneouſly led for ſome ages.

I ſhould have believed, that thoſe words, All that ever came before me are Thieves and Robbers; might be underſtood of thoſe, who having arrogated to themſelves the name of the Meſſiah, obtruded themſelves upon the people; but that we ſhall hardly or not at all, find an inſtance of any that ever did ſo before the true Meſſiah came. After his coming (it is true) there were very many that aſſumed the name and title, but before it, hardly one. Judas the Galilean did not arrive to that impudence, as you have his ſtory in Joſephus. Nor yet Theudas, by any thing may be gathered from the words of Gamaliel, Acts V.

An Argument of no mean force which we may uſe againſt the Jews, that the time when our Jeſus did appear, was the very time wherein the Nation looked for the coming of Meſſiah: For why did no one arrogate that name to himſelf, before the coming of our Jeſus? Becauſe they knew the fore appointed and the expected time of the Meſſiah was not yet come. And why after Jeſus had come, did ſo many give themſelves out for Meſſiah, according to what our Saviour foretold, Matth. XXIV? becauſe the agreeableneſs of the time, and the expectation of the people might ſerve and aſſiſt their pretences.

VERS. IX.

t Beracoth, fol. 55. 2. כמה הוא רגל בהמה רועה t How far is the Beaſts paſture? מיל "יו ſixteen miles. The Gloſs is, The meaſure of the ſpace that the Beaſts go when they go forth to Paſture. A ſpacious paſture indeed!

VERS. XIII.

Ὁ δὲ μισθωτὸς φεύγει. The hireling fleeth.

THE Rabbins ſuppoſe that ſome ſuch thing may be done by the hireling, when they allot ſuch a mulct, if a Sheep ſhould happen to periſh through the neglect of its keeper.

u Bava Metzia, fol. 93. 2. u How far is the keeper for hire (שומר שכר) bound to watch his flock? Till he can ſay truly; In the day the drought conſumed me, and the froſt by night.

But if, whilſt he is going to the City or any ways abſent, the Wolf of the Lyon ſhould come and tear the flock, what then? ------- לקדם רועים ובמקלות He ought to have met them with Shepherds and Clubs, and not to have fled.

VERS. XV.

Τὰς ψυχάς μου τίθημι. &c. I lay down my life, &c.

x Bemidb. rabb. fol. 260. 1. y Vajicra rabba, fol. 162. 1. מוסר נפשי אל הצאן or נותן נפשי I deliver, or I give my life for the flock. x מסר והודה Judah gave up his life for Benjamin. y חור נתן נפשו על הברה' Hur gave his life for the Holy bleſſed God. For they have a Tradition that Hur underwent Martyrdom, becauſe he oppoſed the Golden Calf.

VERS. XXII.

Ἐγένετο δὲ τὰ Ἐγκαίνια, &c. It was the Feaſt of the Dedication.

I. THE riſe and original of this Feaſt muſt be fetcht from the ſtory, 1 Macab. IV. 52, &c. of which we have noted ſomething already. The Jewiſh Maſters have theſe paſſages about it.

z Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 12. cap. 11. z They were ſeized with ſuch infinite pleaſure in the reſtauration of their ſacred rites, being after ſo long a time, ſo unexpectedly poſſeſt of their Religion again, ὡς νόμον θεῖναι, τοῖς μετ' αὐτὸς ἑορτάζειν τὴν ἀνάκτησιν τῆς πρὸς τὸν θεὸν τῶν ἡμέρας ὀκτώ· That they bound it by a Law to poſterity, that they ſhould celebrate the reſtitution of their Sacred Rites, by a Feaſt of eight days continuance. Καὶ ἀπ ἐκείνε μέχρι δεῦρο τὴν ἑορτὴν ἄγομεν, καλοῦντες αὐτὴν φῶτα. And from that time to this do we ſtill celebrate this Feaſt, calling it by the name of LIGHTS. Giving that name to this Feaſt, as I ſuppoſe, becauſe we obtained ſuch a liberty ſo much beyond all hope.

One would believe that the name of LIGHTS, or Candles, only was given to this Feaſt, I ſay a name only: for we have no mention here of the lighting of Candles. One would would believe alſo that the eight days decreed for the celebration of this Feaſt, was done after the pattern of the eight days Feaſt of Tabernacles; but you will find in the Talmudic Authors that it is far otherwiſe, and they have a cunning way of talking concerning it.

" The Rabbins have a Tradition: From the five and twentieth day of the Month Cliſ- " leu, there are eight days of the Encenia, [or Feaſt of Dedication] in which time, it " is not lawful either to Weep or Faſt. For when the Greeks entred into the Temple " they defiled all the Oyl that was there. But when the Kingdom of the Aſmoneans " had conquered them, they ſought and could not find but one ſingle Vial of Oyl, that " had been laid up under the Seal of the Chief Prieſt; Nor was their enough in it but " to light for one day. There was a great miracle; for they lighted up the Lamps from " that Oyl for eight days together: So that the year after, they inſtituted the ſpace of " eight days for the ſolemnizing that Feaſt. a Schabb. fol. 21. 2.

Maimonides relates the ſame things, and adds more: b " Upon this occaſion the wiſe " men of that Generation appointed that eight days from the 25*th.* of the Month Chiſleu, " ſhould be ſet apart for days of rejoycing and the Hallel; and that they ſhould light up " Candles at the doors of every Houſe, each evening of thoſe days, to keep up the me- " mory of that miracle. Thoſe days are called חנוכה Dedication: It is forbidden upon " all thoſe days either to Weep or Faſt. As in the days of Purim, &c. b In Chanuch h. cap. 3.

Again, c " How many Candles do they light? It is commanded that every Houſe " ſhould ſet up at leaſt one; let the Inhabitants there, be more or one only. But he " that does honour to the command, ſets up his Candles according to the number of the " perſons that are in he Houſe. And he again that does more honour to it ſtill, he ſets up " one Candle for every perſon in the Houſe the firſt night, and doubles it the ſecond " night. For example, If there be ten perſons in the Houſe; the firſt night, there are " ten Candles lighted; the ſecond night twenty: the third night thirty; ſo that on the " eighth night it comes to fourſcore. c Cap. 4.

It would be too tedious to tranſcribe what he relates about ſinging the Hallel upon that Feaſt; the place where the Candle is fixt, which ordinarily is without doors, but in time of danger or perſecution it is within, &c. Let what I have already quoted ſuffice, with the addition of this one inſtance more.

d The Wife of Tarchinus (whoſe bones may they be cruſhed) brought forth a Son, the evening of the ninth day of the month Ab, and then all Iſrael mourned. נשתתק הולד בחנוכה The Child dyed upon the Feaſt of Dedication; Then ſaid the Iſraelites, ſhall we light up Candles or not? They ſaid we will light them, come what will come. So they lighted them; upon which there were ſome that went and accuſed them before the Wife of Tarchin: Saying, the Jews mourned, when thou broughteſt forth a Son, and when that Son dyed, they ſet up Candles. Who this תרכינוס Tarquinus, or Tarquinius was, whether they meant the Emperor Trajan, or ſome other, we will not make any enquiry, nor is it tanti; However the ſtory goes on, and tells us, That the Woman calling her Husband, accuſed the Jews, ſtirring him up to revenge, which he executed accordingly by a ſlaughter amongſt them. d Echah rabbathi, fol. 80 2.

Τὰ Ἐγκαίνια. The Feaſt of Dedication,

So חנוכה in the title of the XXX Pſalm, the Greek Interpreters tranſlate Ἐγκαίνισμός Dedication: By which the Jewiſh Maſters ſeem to underſtand the dedication of the Temple e: Whereas really it was no other than the luſtration and cleanſing of David's Houſe after Abſolom had polluted it, by his wickedneſs and filthineſs: which indeed we may not unfitly compare with the purging again of the Temple, after that the Gentiles had polluted it. e Bemidb. rabba. fol. 249. 1.

Ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις. In Jeruſalem.

It was at Jeruſalem the Feaſt of the Dedication. Not as the Paſsover, Pentecoſt, and Feaſt of Tabernacles, was wont to be at Jeruſalem, becauſe thoſe Feaſts might not be celebrated in any other place. But the Encenia were kept every where throughout the whole Land.

f גזרו תעניה בחנוכה בלוד They once proclaimed a Faſt, within the Feaſt of Dedication, at Lydda. f Roſh haſhanah, fol 18. 2.

The Feaſt of Dedication at Lydda? this was not uncuſtomary, for that Feaſt was celebrated in any place: but the Faſt in the time of that Feaſt, this was uncuſtomary.

g One upon his journey upon whoſe account they ſet up a Candle at his own Houſe, hath no need to light it for himſelf in the place where he ſojourneth. For in what Country ſoever he ſojourns, there the Feaſt of Dedication, and lighting up of Candles is obſerved; and g Maimon in the place above.

if thoſe of his own houſhold would be doing that office for him, he is bound to make proviſion accordingly, and take care that they may do it.

Maimonides goes on, The precept about the Lights in the Feaſt of Dedication is very commendable, and it is neceſſary that every one ſhould rub up his memory in this matter, that he may make known the great miracle, and contribute toward the praiſes of God, and the acknowledgment of thoſe wonders he doth amongſt us. If any one hath not wherewithal to eat, unleſs of meer Alms, let them beg or ſell his Garments to buy Oyl, and Lights for this Feaſt. If he have only פרוטה אחת one ſingle farthing, and ſhould be in ſuſpenſe whether he ſhould ſpend it in קידוש היום conſecrating the day, or ſetting up lights, let him rather ſpend it in Oyl for the Candles, than in Wine for Conſecration of the day. For when as they are both the preſcription of the Scribes, it were better to give the Lights of the Encenia the preference, becauſe you therein keep up the remembrance of the miracle.

Now what was this miracle? it was the multiplication of the Oyl. The Feaſt was inſtituted in commemoration of their Temple and Religion, being reſtored to them: the continuance of the Feaſt for eight days, was inſtituted in commemoration of that miracle: both by the direction of the Scribes, when there was not ſo much as one Prophet throughout the whole Land.

h There were eighty five Elders above thirty of which were Prophets too, that made their exceptions againſt the Feaſt of Purim, ordained by Eſther, and Mordecai, as ſome kind of innovation againſt the Law. And yet that Feaſt was but to be of two days continuance: It is a wonder then, how this Feaſt of Dedication, the ſolemnity of which was to be kept up for eight days together, that had no other foundation of authority but that of the Scribes, ſhould be ſo eaſily ſwallowed by them.

h Hieroſol. Megillah, fol. 70. 4.

Joſephus, as alſo the Book of Maccabees, tells us that this was done about the hundred and forty eighth year of the Seleucidæ; and at that time, nay a great while before the Doctrine of Traditions, and authority of the Traditional Scribes had got a mighty ſway in that Nation. So that every decree of the Sanhedrin was received as Oracular, nor was there any the leaſt grudge or complaint againſt it. So that, though the Traditional Maſters could not vindicate the inſtitution of ſuch a Feaſt, from any Tradition exhibited to Moſes upon Mount Sinai, yet might they invent ſomething as Traditional to prove the lawfulneſs of ſuch an inſtitution.

Who had the Preſidency in the Sanhedrin at this time, cannot be certainly determined: that which is told of Joſhua ben Perachiah how he fled from Janneus the i King carries ſome probability along with it that Joſes ben Joezer of Zeredat, and Joſes ben Jochanan of Jeruſalem, to whom Joſhuah ben Perachiah, and Nittai the Arbelite ſucceeded in their Chairs; ſate Preſident and Vice-preſident at that time in the Sanhedrin. But this is not of much weight that we ſhould tire our ſelves in ſuch an enquiry.

i Sanhedr. fol. 107. 2.

The „ Maſters tell us (but upon what Authority, it is obſcure) k מלאכת המשכן נגמרה בכה בבסלו that the work of the Tabernacle was finiſhed on the twenty fifth day of the month Chiſleu (that is this very day of the month of which we are now ſpeaking) but it was folded up till the firſt day of the month Niſan, and then ſet up.

k Bemidb. rab. fol. 151. 2.

Καὶ χειμὼν ἦν. And it was Winter.

The eight days begun from the xxv*th*. of the month Chiſleu, fell in with the Winter ſolſtice. Whence, meeting with that in the Targumiſt upon 1 Chron. XI. 22. יומא חדא מן יומין בירחא דטבת ווטה רסיתוה בעשרא יומין בירחא דטבת I queſtion whether I ſhould render it, the ſhorteſt day, or a ſhort day, (i. e. one of the ſhort Winter days) is the tenth of the month Tebeth: if he did not calculate rather according to our, than the Jewiſh Calendar.

The Rabbins (as we have already obſerved upon Chap. V. 35.) diſtinguiſh their Winter months into חרף and קור Winter and mid-winter: intimating, as it ſhould ſeem, the more remiſs and more intenſe cold. Half Chiſleu, all Tebeth, and half Shebat, was חרף the Winter. Ten days therefore of the Winter had paſſed, when on the XXV of the month Chiſleu, the Feaſt of the Dedication came in.

It was Winter, and Jeſus walked in the Porch. He walked there, becauſe it was Winter, that he might get and keep himſelf warm: perhaps he choſe Solomon's Porch to walk in, either that he might have ſomething to do with the Fathers of the Sanhedrin who ſate there; or elſe, that he might correct and chaſtiſe the buyers and ſellers who had their ſhops in that place.

VERS.

VERS. XXIV.

Ἕως πότε τὴν ψυχὴν ἡμῶν αἴρεις; How long doſt thou make us to doubt?

IT is not ill rendred, How long doſt thou ſuſpend our mind? although not an exact Tranſlation, according to the letter. But what kind of doubt and ſuſpenſion of mind was this? Was it, that they hoped this Jeſus was the Meſſiah, or that they rather feared he was ſo? It ſeems, they rather feared than hoped it. For whereas they looked for a Meſſias, that ſhould prove a mighty Conquerour, ſhould deliver the people from the Heathen yoke, and ſhould crown himſelf with all earthly glory; and ſaw Jeſus, infinite degrees below ſuch pomp; yet by his miracles giving ſuch fair ſpecimens of the Meſſias, they could not but hang in great ſuſpence, whether ſuch a Meſſiah, were to be wiſhed for or no.

VERS. XXXI.

Ἐβάσασαν οὖν πάλιν λίθους. Then the Jews took up ſtones again.

THE Blaſphemer מגדף by judicial proceſs of the Sanhedrin, was to be ſtoned, which proceſs they would imitate here without judgment.

l These are the criminals that muſt be ſtoned; He that lieth with his own Mother, or with the Wife of his Father------ He that Blaſphemes, or commits Idolatry. Now however the Rabbins differed in the definition of Blaſphemy or a Blaſphemer, yet this all of them agreed in, as unqueſtionable Blaſphemy, that which כופר בעיקר denies the foundation. This they firmly believed Jeſus did, and none could perſwade them to the contrary, when he affirmed, I and my Father are one. A miſerable beſotted Nation, who above all perſons or things wiſhed and looked for the Meſſiah, and yet was perfectly ignorant what kind of a Meſſiah he ſhould be!

l Sanhedr. cap. 7. hal. 1.

VERS. XXXV.

Εἰ ἐκείνους εἶπε θεούς, &c. If he called them Gods, &c.

THE Jews interpret thoſe words of the Pſalmiſt, I have ſaid ye are Gods, to a moſt ridiculous ſenſe.

m unleſs our Fathers had ſinned we had never come into the world: as it is written, I have ſaid ye are Gods, and the Children of the moſt high; But ye have corrupted your doings therefore ye ſhall dye like men. And a little after, Iſrael had not received the Law, only that the Angel of death might not rule over them; as it is ſaid, I have ſaid ye are Gods, but ye have corrupted your doings, therefore ye ſhall dye like men.

m Avodah Zarah, fol. 5. 1.

The ſenſe is, if thoſe who ſtood before Mount Sinai had not ſinned in the matter of the Golden Calf, they had not begot Children, nor had been ſubject to death, but had been like the Angels. So the Gloſs. If our Fathers had not ſinned by the Golden Calf, we had never come into the world, for they would have been like the Angels, and had never begot Children.

The Pſalmiſt indeed ſpeaks of the Magiſtracy, to whom the word of God hath arrived, by an expreſs diſpenſation and diploma ordaining and deputing them to the Government, as the whole web and contexture of the Pſalm doth abundantly ſhew. But if we apply the words, as if they were ſpoken by our Saviour, according to the common Interpretation received amongſt them, they fitly argue thus: "If he ſaid they were Angels or "Gods to whom the Law and word of God came, on Mount Sinai, as you conceive: "is it any Blaſphemy in me then, whom God in a peculiar manner hath ſanctified and "ſent into the world, that I might declare his word and will, if I ſay that I am the "Son of God?

VERS. XL.

Ὅπου ἦν Ἰωάννης τὸ πρῶτον βαπτίζων. Where John at firſt Baptized.

THAT is Bethabarah: For the Evangeliſt ſpeaks according to his own Hiſtory: Which to the judicious Reader needs no proof.

CHAP. XI.

VERS. I.

ΛΑ'ΖΑΡΟΣ. Lazarus.

SO in the Jeruſalem Talmud, ר" לעזר R. Lazar, for R. Eleazar. For in the Hieruſalem dialect, it is not unuſual in ſome words that begin with א Aleph, to cut off that letter: As.

מאי מר מר What ſaith the Maſter? for מאי אמר

בר בא Bar Ba, for בר אבא Bar abba.

So very frequently לעזר Lazar, for אלעזר Eleazar.

k Succah. fol. 52. 2. k מרתא בת בייסות Martha the Daughter of Baiſuth, (whether Baiſuth and Baithus were convertible; or whether it was a miſtake of the Tranſcriber, let him that thinks fit make the enquiry) whoſe Son was a mighty ſtrong man among the Prieſts.

VERS. II.

Ἦν δὲ Μαρία ἡ ἀλείψασα. It was Mary which anointed, &c.

THAT is, Which had anointed the Lord formerly. For,

I. It is fit the Aoriſt ſhould have its full force. Whoever will not grant this, let him give a reaſon why Bethany which was Lazarus his Town, ſhould not be called by his name; but ſaid the Town of Mary and her Siſter Martha. Was it not becauſe thoſe names had been already well known in the foregoing ſtory, whereas till now, there had not been one word mentioned of their Brother Lazarus. So that ἀλείψασα reſpects a noted ſtory that was paſt, viz. that which is related Luke VII. 37.

II. There can be no reaſon given, why the Evangeliſt ſhould ſay this Proleptically, as if he had reſpect to that paſſage in Chap. XII. 3. when he was to relate that ſtory ſo ſoon after this: But there may be a ſufficient one given why it ſhould have relation to an anointing that had been formerly done; and that is, that it might appear how that familiarity aroſe betwixt Chriſt, and the Family of Lazarus, ſo far that they could ſo confidently ſend for Jeſus, when Lazarus was ſick: For Mary, Lazarus his Siſter had ſome time before anointed his feet.

VERS. XI.

Κεκοίμηται. Sleepeth.

THE Apoſtles having heard the report that Lazarus was ſick, and that Chriſt told them now that he was fallen aſleep; they apprehend that the edge of the diſeaſe which had hitherto taken away all reſt from him, was now taken off, ſo that they ſay, If he ſleep he ſhall do well; having not rightly underſtood the word our Saviour uſed, which, whether it was שכב, or ישן, or דמך, I ſay not. The fallacy of the words is not unpleaſantly expreſt in Bereſh. Rabba l, Rachel ſaid to Leah ישכב עמך הלילה He ſhall ſleep with thee to night, Gen. XXX. 19. עמך הוא דמיך עמי לא דמיך He ſhall ſleep with thee, he ſhall not ſleep with me, i. e. Thou and he ſhall lye together in one Sepulchre, ſo ſhall not He and I. l Sect. 72.

VERS. XVIII.

Ὡς ἀπὸ σταδίων δεκαπέντε. About fifteen furlongs.

כחמסדי ריסי That is, two miles. For the Jewiſh miles did not hold out full eight furlongs, as other miles do, but ſeven and an half.

m אחד משבע ומחצה במיל זה הוא ריס One of thoſe ſeven and a half, which make up a mile, is ריס a furlong. m Bava Mtziah, fol. 33. 1.

n They do not lay the net for Pidgeons, any leſs diſtance from the houſes than ל' ריס thirty furlongs, i.e. four miles. n Bava Kamah. cap. 7. hal. ult.

In Aruch it is written רוס with Vau, and is thus reckoned:

What is רוס? It is a flight-ſhot. And why is רוס called a flight-ſhot? It is according to the numeral value of the letters which is two hundred ſixty ſix; for two hundred ſixty ſix [cubits] makes a flight ſhot: Now count and you will thus find it. Seven times ר two hundred makes one thouſand four hundred. Seven times ס ſixty make four hundred and twenty. Number them together and they mount to one thouſand eight hundred and twenty. Seven times ו ſix make forty two, half a רוס one hundred thirty three: number them together and the whole amounts to one thouſand nine hundred ninety five. Behold two thouſand cubits excepting five.

VERS. XIX.

Ἵνα παραμυθήσωνται αὐτὰς. To comfort them.

o פסקי הראש in Mord, Keton. Art. 133.

WHEN o they return from the burial עושין שורה they ſtand about weeping, and ſay over קדיש [a little Prayer called by that name] comforting the mourner, and accompanying him to his own Houſe.

p When they return from the Grave, they ſtand in a circle about the mourner comforting him. Gloſs. The circle about him conſiſts of ten at leaſt. But uſually it is very crowded and numerous. Hence that paſſage: p Chetub, fol. 8. 2.

q עמדין בשורה דפנימיים פטורים As to thoſe that ſtood about in that circle, thoſe that were on the inſide of it were not obliged to repeat the Phylacteries, but thoſe that were on the outſide were bound. q Beracoth, fol. 17. 2.

r The Rabbins have delivered, that the ſeven ſtandings, and ſittings for the dead, muſt not be diminiſhed. Where the Gloſs is, When they returned from the Grave, they went forward a little, and then ſate down; partly to comfort the mourners, partly to weep themſelves, and partly to meditate upon the ſubject of mortality. Then they ſtood up again, and went on a little, and ſate down again, and ſo for ſeven times. But I have ſeen it written, that they did this upon the account of the evil ſpirits who accompanied them from the Grave; they ordained theſe ſtandings and ſittings, that within that time the evil ſpirits might depart. r Bava bathra, fol. 100. 2.

So that we ſee they were wont to comfort the mourners in the way as they were returning from the Grave, and they would bring them back to their own Houſe the day that the party deceaſed was interr'd. They comforted them alſo all the remaining days of mourning, which we find done in this place.

Thirty days were allotted for the time of mourning; But, אין להקשו על מת יותר מדאי we muſt not weep for the dead beyond the meaſure. ג' לבכי אלא the three firſt days are for weeping. ל' להספד ולתספורת לגיהוץ Seven days for lamentation ל' להספד Thirty days for the intermiſſion from waſhing their cloths, or ſhaving themſelves.

I. When the המנחמין Thoſe that were to comfort the mourners came, they found המטות all the beds in the Houſe taken down, and laid upon the ground. מאימתי כופין את המיטות f Hieroſ. Beracoth, fol. 5. col. 4.

המיטות From what time do they take their beds lower? R. Eleazar ſaith, From the time that the deceaſed party is carried out of the Court-gate. R. Joſhua ſaith, From the time that the cover of the Coffin is ſhut down. When Rabban Gamaliel dyed, and the Corps was carried out of the Court-gate, ſaith R. Eleazar to his diſciples, take down the beds: But when the Coffin was cloſed, R. Joſhua ſaid, take down the beds. On the evening of the Sabbath they ſet up their beds, at the going out of the Sabbath, they take them down.

What is to be underſtood by taking down their beds, we may conjecture by what follows. t Whence came the cuſtom of taking down the beds? R. Criſpa in the name of R. Johanan ſaith, from what is written וישבו אתו לארץ and they ſate with him near the ground, [Job II. 13.] It is not ſaid upon the ground, but לארץ near the ground, that is, not far off from the Earth. Hence is it, that they ſate upon beds taken lower.

t Ibid. fol. 6. 1.

u In Moed Katon, cap. 4.

But u Rabbenu Aſher ſaith thus, Rabh. ſaith אין מנחמין רשאין לישב אלא בקר קע Thoſe that comfort ought to ſit no where but upon the floor.

II. The mourner himſelf ſits chief. A cuſtom taken from theſe words, Job XXIX. 25. I choſe out their way and ſate chief ------ Like him who comforts the mourners. Ibid.

III. It was not lawful for the comforters to ſpeak a word, till the mourner himſelf break ſilence firſt. The pattern taken from Job's friends, Job II.

IV. אבל כיון שניענע ראשו שוב את מנחמין רשאין לישב אצלו R. Johanan ſaith, if the mourner nod his head, the comforters are to ſit by him no longer. The Gloſs is, If by nodding his head, he ſignifie to them, that he hath comforted himſelf. Hence that frequently ſaid of ſome, לא קיבלו תנחומין they would not receive comfort, that is, they gave ſigns by nodding their head, that they had ſufficiently comforted themſelves.

Theſe and many other things about this matter do occur in Moed Katon, and Rabbenu Aſher, and בסקי הראש upon this Treatiſe; as alſo in Maſſecheth Semachoth; where by the way take notice that that Treatiſe which hath for its ſubject the Mourners for the dead, is called מסכת שמחות A Treatiſe of gladneſs. So the Sepulchres of the dead are often called בתי חיים The Houſes of the living.

x Moed Katon, fol. 28. 2, &c.

Let us take a little taſte of the way of conſolation they uſed. x The Rabbins deliver, that when the Sons of R. Iſhmael dyed, four of the Elders went in to him to comfort him, viz. R. Tarphon: R. Joſe the Galilean: R. Eliezer ben Azariah; and R. Akibah. R. Tarphon ſaith unto them, Ye muſt know that this is a very wiſe man, well ſkilled in Expoſition. Let not any of you interrupt the words of his fellow. Saith R. Akibah, I am the laſt. R. Iſhmael began and ſaid, [the mourner here breaks ſilence] His iniquities are multipled, his griefs have bound him, and he hath wearied his Maſters: Thus he ſaid once and again. Then anſwered R. Tarphon and ſaid, It is ſaid, and your brethren of the Houſe of Iſrael, ſhall bewail the burning, Levit. X. 6. May we not argue from the leſs to the greater? If Nadab and Abihu, who never performed but one command, as it is written, and the Sons of Aaron brought blood to him; then much more may the Sons of R. Iſmael be bewailed. R. Joſe the Galilean, anſwered ſaying, All Iſrael ſhall mourn for him and bury him, 1 Kings XIV. 13. And muſt we not argue from the greater to the leſs? If they wept ſo for Abijah the Son of Jeroboam, who did but one good thing, as it is ſaid, becauſe in him there is found ſome good thing: how much more for the Sons of R. Iſmael? Of the ſame nature are the words of R. Eliezar, and R. Akibah; but this is enough, either to raiſe laughter, or make a man angry. In the ſame page we have ſeveral forms of ſpeech, uſed by the Women that either were the mourners or the comforters. As שיול אצטלא דמלתא לבר חיין דשלימו ווזדיה The grave is as the robe of Circumciſion, to an ingenuous man, whoſe proviſions are ſpent.

מותא כי מותא ומרעין חיבולייא The death of this man is as the death of all, and Diſeaſes are like putting money to uſury.

רהיט ונפיל אמעברא ויוסתא יזיף He ran, and he fell in his paſſage, and hath borrowed a loan. With other paſſages very difficult to be underſtood.

The firſt three days of weeping were ſeverer than the other: becauſe, on the firſt day it was not lawful for the mourner to wear his Phylacteries, to eat of holy things, nor indeed to eat any thing of his own. All the three days, he might do no ſervile work, no not privately: and if any one ſaluted him, he was not to ſalute him again.

The firſt ſeven days, let all the beds in the houſe be laid low. Let not the man uſe his Wife. Let him not put on his Sandals. Let him do no ſervile work publickly. Let him not ſalute any man. Let him not waſh himſelf in warm water, nor his whole body in cold: Let him not anoint himſelf. Let him not read in the Law, the Miſhneh or the Talmud. Let him cover his head.

y Rambam in Moed Katon. cap. ult.

All the thirty days, let him not be ſhaved: Let him not wear any clothing that is white or whitened, or new. Neither let him ſew up thoſe rents which he made in his garments for the deceaſed party, &c. y.

VERS.

VERS. XXV.

Ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ ἀνάστασις. I am the Reſurrection.

BE It ſo O Jew (if you will, or it can be) that the little bone Luz, in the back-bone is the ſeed and principle of your reſurrection: As to us our bleſſed Jeſus, who hath raiſed himſelf from the dead, is the ſpring and principle of ours.

z Hadrian (whoſe bones, may they be ground, and his name blotted out) asked R. Joſhuah ben Hananiah, How doth a man revive again in the world to come? He anſwered and ſaid, From Luz in the back-bone. Saith he to him, demonſtrate this to me: Then he took Luz, a little bone out of the back bone, and put it in water, and it was not ſteeped; He put it into the fire, and it was not burnt: he brought it to the mill, and that could not grind it: He laid it on the Anvil, and knocked it with an Hammer, but the Anvil was cleft, and the Hammer broken, &c. Why do ye not maul the Sadducees with this Argument?

z Midr. Coheleth, fol 114. 3

VERS. XXXI.

Ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῇ. Followed her.

a IT is a tradition. Let not a man follow a Woman upon the way, no not his own Wife. If this grain of Salt may be allowed in the explication of this paſſage, then, either all that followed Mary, were Women: or if men, they followed her at a very great diſtance: or elſe they had a peculiar diſpenſation at ſuch ſolemn times as theſe, which they had not in common converſation. But the obſervation indeed is hardly worth a grain of ſalt.

a Erubhin, fol 18. 2.

VERS. XXXIX.

Τεταρταῖος γάρ ἐστι. For he hath been dead four days.

THE three days of weeping were now paſt: and the four days of Lamentation begun: ſo that all hope and expectation of his coming to himſelf was wholly gone.

b פיקדין על מתים ג' ימים ואין הושטין מום מדרכי האמורי They go to the Sepulchres, and viſit the dead for three days. Neither are they ſolicitous leſt they ſhould incur the reproach of the Amorites. The ſtory is, they viſited a certain perſon, and he revived again, and lived five and twenty years and then dyed. They tell of another that lived again, and begot Children, and then died.

b Maſſechoth Semachoth, cap. 8.

c It is a Tradition of Ben Kaphrae's: The very height of mourning is not till the third day, For three days the ſpirit wanders about the Sepulchre, expecting if it may return into the body. But when it ſees that the form or aſpect of the face is changed, then it hovers no more, but leaves the body to its ſelf.

c Bereſh. rabba, fol. 114. 3.

d They do not certifie of the dead, [that this is the very man and not another] but within the three days after his deceaſe. For after three days his countenance is changed.

c Jevamoth, fol. 120. 1. & Maimon. in Gerushin, cap. 13.

VERS. XLIV.

Κειρίαις, &c. With Grave-cloths, &c.

THE Evangeliſt ſeems ſo particular in mentioning the Grave-cloths wherewith Lazarus was bound hand and foot, as alſo the Napkin that had covered his face, on purpoſe to hint us a ſecond miracle in this great miracle. The dead man came forth though bound hand and foot with his Grave-cloths, and blinded with the Napkin.

VERS. XLVIII.

Καὶ ἐλεύσονται Ῥωμαῖοι And the Romans ſhall come.

I Could eaſily believe that the Fathers of the Sanhedrin, had either a knowledge or at leaſt ſome ſuſpition, that Jeſus was the true Meſſiah.

I. This ſeems plainly intimated by the words of the Vine-dreſſers in the Parable Mark XII. 7. This is the heir come let us kill him. They knew well enough he was the Heir: and it was come to this in the ſtruggle betwixt them; either he will inherit with his doctrine, or we will with ours: come therefore let us kill him and the inheritance ſhall be ours.

II. They

II. They could not but know that Daniel's weeks were now fully accompliſhed, and that the time of the Meſſiah's appearing was now come. This, that * conflux of Jews from all Nations into Jeruſalem, doth teſtifie, being led by Daniel's Prophecy, and the agreeableneſs of the time, to fix their reſidence there in expectation of the Meſſiah now ready to be revealed. Compare alſo Luke XIX. 2.

* Act. II.

III. When therefore they ſaw Jeſus working miracles ſo very ſtupendous, and ſo worthy the character of the Meſſiah, and that in the very time wherein the manifeſtation of the Meſſiah had been foretold, they could not but have a ſtrong ſuſpition that this was HE. But then, it is a wonderful thing, that they ſhould endeavour his death and deſtruction. What? deſtroy the Meſſiah, the expectation and deſire of that Nation?

Tantum religio potuit ſuadere malorum.
Such miſchiefs could religious zeal perſwade.

But it was a moſt irreligious Religion made up of Traditions and humane inventions! a ſtrange kind of bewitchery rather than Religion! that they ſhould choſe rather that the Meſſiah ſhould be cut off, than that Religion be changed. They had been taught or rather ſeduced by their Traditions to believe: 1. That the Kingdom of the Meſſiah ſhould be adminiſtred in all imaginable pomp, and worldly glory. 2. That their Judaiſm, or the Religion properly ſo called, ſhould be wonderfully promoted by him, confirmed and made very glorious. 3. The whole Nation ſhould be redeemed from the Heathen Yoke. But when he, who by the force of his miracles aſſerted himſelf ſo far to be the Meſſiah that they could not but inwardly acknowledge it, appeared notwithſtanding, ſo poor and contemptible, that nothing could be leſs expected or hoped for of ſuch an one, than a deliverance from their preſent mean and ſlaviſh ſtate; and ſo diſtant he ſeemed from it, that he adviſed to pay tribute to Ceſar, taught things contrary to what the Scribes and Phariſees had principled them in, ſhaked and ſeemed to abrogate the Religion it ſelf, and they had no proſpect at all of better things from him; Let Jeſus periſh, though he were the true Meſſiah, for any thing that they cared, rather than Judaiſm and their Religion ſhould be aboliſhed.

Obj. But it is ſaid that what they did, was through ignorance, Luke XXIII. 34. Acts III. 17. and XIII. 27. 1 Cor. II. 8.

Anſ. True indeed, through ignorance of the perſon; they did not know and believe the Meſſiah to be God as well as Man; they apprehended him mere Man. Though they ſuſpected that Jeſus might be the Meſſiah, yet did they not ſuſpect that this Jeſus was the true God.

Let it then be taken for granted, that the Fathers of the Sanhedrin under ſome ſtrong conviction that this was the true Meſſiah, might expreſs themſelves in this manner, all men will believe on him, and the Romans will come, &c. and ſo what Caiphas ſaid, It is expedient that one man ſhould dye, &c. But where does the conſequence lye in all this? All men will believe on him, Ergo, the Romans will come, &c.

I. It is not altogether wide of the mark what is commonly returned upon this queſtion: The Romans will come againſt our Nation, taking us for Rebels to the Emperor, in that without his conſent our people have entertained this Jeſus for the King Meſſiah?

II. Nor is it impertinent to this purpoſe what was the antient obſervation of the Jews from that of the Prophet Iſaiah, Chap. X. 34. and XI. 1. Lebanon ſhall fall by a mighty one, and there ſhall come forth a rod out of the ſtemm of Jeſſe, viz. That the coming of the Meſſiah, and the deſtruction of the Temple, ſhould be upon the heels one of another. e e Hieroſ. Beracoth, fol. 5. 1.

The ſtory is, of an Arabian telling a certain Jew while he was at Plow, that the Temple was deſtroyed and the Meſſiah was born; which I have already told at large upon Matth. II. 1. But the concluſion of it is, R. Bon ſaith; what need we learn from an Arabian? is it not plainly enough written, Lebanon ſhall fall by a mighty one? And what follows immediately? there ſhall come forth a rod out of the ſtemm of Jeſſe.

If therefore the Sanhedrin ſuſpected Jeſus to be the Meſſiah, they might by the ſame reaſon, from thence alſo gather, that the deſtruction of the City and Nation was not far off, eſpecially when they ſee the people falling off from Judaiſm to the Religion of Jeſus.

III. The Fathers of the Sanhedrin judge that the Nation would contract hereby an unſpeakable deal of guilt, ſuch as would ſubject them to all thoſe curſes mentioned Deuter. XXVIII. particularly that their turning off from Judaiſm would iſſue in the final overthrow of the whole Nation; and if their Religion ſhould be deſerted, neither the City nor the Commonwealth could poſſibly ſurvive it long. So rooted was the love and value they had for their wretched Traditions.

Let us therefore frame their words into this Paraphraſe: "It does ſeem that this man "can be no other than the true Meſſiah; the ſtrange wonders he doth, ſpeak no leſs.

What

" What muſt we do in this caſe? On the one hand it were a baſe and unworthy part of " us to kill the Meſſiah; but then on the other hand, it is infinitely hazardous for us to " admit him: For all men will believe on him, and then our Religion is at an end, and " when that is once gone, what can we look for leſs, than that our whole Nation ſhould " periſh under the Arms and fury of the Romans.

I beg your pardon for that, ſaith Caiphas, you know nothing, neither conſider, for be he the Meſſiah, or be he not; it is expedient, nay it is neceſſary he ſhould dye, rather than the whole Nation ſhould periſh, &c.

VERS. LI.

Προεφήτευσε. He Propheſied.

IS Caiphas among the Prophets? There had not been a Prophet among the Chief Prieſts, the Prieſts, the People, for theſe four hundred years and more, and does Caiphas now begin to Propheſie? It is a very foreign fetch that ſome would make, when they would aſcribe this gift to the office he then bore, as if by being made High-Prieſt, he became a Prophet. The opinion is not worth confuting. The Evangeliſt himſelf renders the reaſon, when he tells us Ἀρχιερεὺς ὢν ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου· Being the High-Prieſt that ſame year. Which words direct the Reader's eye rather to the year, than to the High-Prieſt.

I. That was the year of pouring out the Spirit of Propheſie and Revelations, beyond whatever the world had yet ſeen or would ſee again. And why may not ſome drops of this great effuſion light upon a wicked man, as ſometimes the Childrens crums fall from the table to the Dog under it; that a witneſs might be given to the great work of Redemption, from the mouth of our Redeemer's greateſt enemy. There lies the emphaſis of the words ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου, that ſame year; for Caiphas had been High-Prieſt ſome years before, and did continue ſo, for ſome years after.

II. To ſay the truth, by all juſt calculation, the office of the High-Prieſt ceaſed this very year; and the High-Prieſt Propheſies while his office expires.

What difference was there as to the execution of the Prieſtly Office, between the High-Prieſt, and the reſt of the Prieſthood? none certainly, only in theſe two things: 1. Asking counſel by Urim and Thummim. 2. In performing the ſervice upon the day of Expiation. As to the former, that had been uſeleſs many ages before, becauſe the Spirit of Propheſie had ſo perfectly departed from them. So that there remained now no other diſtinction, only, that on the day of expiation the High-Prieſt was to perform the Service which an ordinary Prieſt was not warranted to do. The principal ceremony of that day was, that he ſhould enter into the Holy of Holies with blood. When therefore our great High-Prieſt, ſhould enter with his own blood into the Holieſt of all, what could there be left for this High Prieſt to do? When at the death of our great High-Prieſt, the Veil that hung between the Holy, and the Holy of Holies, was rent in twain from the top to the bottom, Math. XXVII. 51. there was clear demonſtration that all thoſe Rites and Services were aboliſhed, and that the Office of the High-Prieſt which was diſtinguiſhed from the other Prieſts only by thoſe uſages, was now determined and brought to its full period. The Pontificate therefore drawing its laſt breath propheſies concerning the Redemption of mankind by the great High-Prieſt and Biſhop of Souls, that he ſhould dye for the people, &c.

That of the Apoſtle Acts XXIII. 5. I wiſt not that it was the High-Prieſt: may perhaps have ſome ſuch meaning as this in it, I knew not that there was any High Prieſt at all; becauſe the Office had become needleſs for ſome time. For, grant indeed that St. Paul did not know the face of Ananias, nor that Ananias was the High-Prieſt, yet he muſt needs know him to have been a Magiſtrate, becauſe he had his ſeat amongſt the Fathers of the Sanhedrin; now thoſe words which he quoted out of the Law, Thou ſhalt not ſpeak evil of the Ruler of thy People, forbad all indecent ſpeeches toward any Magiſtrate as well as the High-Prieſt. The Apoſtle therefore knowing Ananias well enough, both who he was, and that he ſate there under a falſely aſſumed title of the High-Prieſt, does on purpoſe call him whited wall, becauſe he only bore the colour of the High-Prieſthood, whenas the thing and office it ſelf was now aboliſhed.

Caiaphas, in this paſſage before us, ſpeaketh partly as Caiaphas, and partly as a Prophet. As Caiaphas he does by an impious and precipitate boldneſs contrive and promote the death of Chriſt: and what he uttered as a Prophet, the Evangeliſt tells us he did it not of himſelf, he ſpoke what himſelf underſtood not the depth of.

The greateſt work of the Meſſiah, according to the expectation of the Jews was השבת אסיפת הגליות or הגליות the reduction, or gathering together the Captivities. The High-Prieſt deſpairs that ever Jeſus, ſhould he live, could do this. For all that he either did or taught, ſeem'd to have a contrary tendency, viz. to ſeduce the people from their Religion, rather than recover them from their ſervile ſtate of bondage. So that he apprehended this one only remedy left, that care might be taken ſo as by the death of this man the hazard of that Nations ruin might blow over. If he be the Meſſiah (which I almoſt think even Caiaphas himſelf did not much queſtion) ſince he can have no hope of redeeming the Nation, let him die for it himſelf, that it periſh not upon his account.

Thus miſerably are the great Maſters of Wiſdom deceiv'd in almoſt all their ſurmizes; they expect the gathering together of the Children of God in one, by the life of the Meſſiah, which was to be accompliſht by his death. They believe their Traditional Religion was the eſtabliſhment of that Nation, whereas it became its overthrow. They think to ſecure themſelves by the death of Chriſt, when by that very death of his their expected ſecurity was chiefly ſhaken. O blind and ſtupid madneſs!

VERS. LV.

Ἵνα ἁγνίσωσιν ἑαυτούς. To purifie themſelves.

f Roſh haſhanah fol. 16. 2.

R. f Iſaac ſaith, חייב אדם לטהר את עצמו ברגל Every man is bound to purifie himſelf for the Feaſt. Now there were ſeveral meaſures of time for purifying. He that was unclean by the touch of a dead body, he requir'd a whole weeks time that he might be ſprinkled with the water of Purification mixt with the aſhes of the red heifer burnt, the third and the ſeventh day; which ceremony we may ſee and laugh at in Parah, cap. 3.

Other purifyings were ſpeedilier perform'd: amongſt others, ſhaving themſelves and waſhing their garments were accounted neceſſary, and within the Laws of purifying.

g Moed-katon, fol. 13. 1.

g Theſe ſhave themſelves within the Feaſt; he who cometh from an heathen Country, or from captivity, or from priſon. Alſo he who hath been excommunicated, but now abſolv'd by the wiſe men.------Theſe ſame alſo waſh their garments within the Feaſt.

It is ſuppos'd that theſe were detain'd by ſome neceſſity of affairs that they could not waſh and be ſhav'd before the Feaſt; for theſe things were of right to be perform'd before, leſt any ſhould by any means approach polluted unto the celebration of this Feaſt; but if by ſome neceſſity they were hinder'd from doing it before, then it was done בחולו של מועד on a common day of the Feaſt: viz. after the firſt day of the Feaſt.

VERS. II.

Ἐποίησαν οὖν αὐτῷ δεῖπνον. They made him a Supper.

IF we count the days back from the Paſſover, and take notice that Chriſt ſuffer'd the next day after the eating of the Paſſover, which is our Friday; it will appear that this Supper was on the evening of the Sabbath, that is, the Sabbath now going out.

Let us meaſure the time in this Scheme.

The day of the Month NISAN.	Of the Week.	The Evangeliſts Account.
IX.	The Sabbath.	VI Days before the Paſſover, Jeſus ſups with Lazarus at the going out of the Sabbath, when according to the cuſtom of that Country their Suppers were more liberal k.
X.	Sunday.	V Days before the Paſſover, Jeſus goes to Jernſalem ſitting on an Aſs, and on the evening returns to Bethany, Mark XI. 11. On this day the lamb was taken, and kept till the Paſſover, Exod. XII. on which day this lamb of God preſented himſelf, who was the antitype of that rite.

k See Maimon. Sceabb. cap. 29.

XI.

XI.	Monday.	IV Days before the Paſſover, he goes to Jeruſalem again: curſeth the unfruitful fig-tree, Mat. XXI. 18. Mark XI. 12. in the evening he returns again to Bethany, Mark XI. 19.
XII.	Tueſday.	III Days before the Paſſover, he goes again to Jeruſalem; his Diſciples obſerve how the fig-tree was wither'd, Mark XI. 20. In the evening going back to Bethany, and ſitting on the mount of Olives, he foretelleth the deſtruction of the Temple and City, Mat. XXIV. and diſcourſes thoſe things which are contain'd in Mat. XXV. This night he ſups with Simon the Leper, Mat. XXVI. 1, &c. Joh. XIII.
XIII.	Wedneſday.	This day he paſſeth away in Bethany. At the coming in of this night the whole Nation apply themſelves to put away all leaven i.
XIV.	Thurſday.	He ſends two of his Diſciples to get ready the Paſſover. He himſelf enters Jeruſalem in the afternoon. In the evening eats the Paſſover, inſtitutes the Euchariſt; is taken, and almoſt all the night had before the Courts of Judicature.

VERS. III.

Ἡ οὖν Μαρία. Then Mary, &c.

IN that conteſt whether Mary the ſiſter of Lazarus, was the ſame with Mary Magdalen, this paſſage will help a little toward the affirmative, that there was a Town call'd Magdala very near Jeruſalem.

k ספרא דמגדלא A Clerk [or Scribe] at Magdala ſet his candles in order every evening of the Sabbath, went up to Jeruſalem, pray'd there, return'd and lighted up his candles, when the Sabbath was now coming in. k Echah rabbathi, fol. 75. 2.

It ſeems plain by this that Magdala and Jeruſalem were not very far diſtant from one another, when all this was done ſo quickly, and in ſo ſhort a ſpace of time. Only we may learn this from the Gloſs, that that Magdala מגדל צבעים היא was Magdala Zebaim: concerning which that ſad and direful paſſage is related, that it was deſtroy'd for its adulteries.

l There were three Cities whoſe cuſtoms were carry'd to Jeruſalem. Gloſs. In Waggons, becauſe of their great weight. The names of theſe three Cities were Cabul, Sichin, and Magdala. Why was כבול Cabul deſtroy'd? becauſe of their diſcords. Why was שיחנין Sichin deſtroy'd? becauſe of the Magick arts they us'd. And why was Magdala deſtroy'd? מפני זנות becauſe of their whoredoms. The Hieroſol. ſay it was מגדל צבעייא Magdala Zabaaia. To this place it was that R. Jonathan once betook himſelf for ſome cure to his baldneſs m. l Echah rabbathi, fol. 71. 4. & Taanith Hieroſ. fol. 69. 1. m Midr. Cohtleth, fol. 84 2.

Now therefore what ſhould hinder but that Mary the ſiſter of Lazarus of Bethany, might be call'd Magdalene, both for the neerneſs of the Town, where perhaps ſhe was married, and alſo for the laſcivious manners of the Towns-folks, with which ſpot it is commonly believed Mary Magdalene had been tainted.

Ἤλειψε τοὺς πόδας τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. Anointed the feet of Jeſus.

In this paſſage there were two things very unuſual.

I. It was indeed a very common thing to anoint the feet with oyl, but to do it with Aromatical oyntment, this was more rarely done. And it is charg'd by the Gemariſts as a great crime, that the Jeruſalem women of old anointed their ſhoos with perfum'd oyntment, to entice the young men to wantonneſs.

n תעכסנה ברגליהן Make a tinkling with their feet, Iſa. III. 16. R. Iſaac ſaith, that by this is intimated that they put myrrh and balſom in their ſhoos, and when they met the young men of Iſrael they kickt with their feet, and ſo ſtir'd up in them evil and looſe affections. n Schabb. fol. 62. 2.

II. It was accounted an immodeſt thing for women to diſhevel and unlooſe their hair pub-publickly. o כהן סותר את שערה The Prieſt unlooſeth the hairs of the woman ſuſpected of adultery, when ſhe was to be try'd by the bitter water, which was done for greater diſgrace.

o Sotah, fol. 5. 1.

p Kamitha had ſeven Sons, who all performed the office of High Prieſts: they ask of her, how ſhe came to this honour? ſhe anſwer'd, the rafters of my houſe never ſaw the hairs of my head.

p Vajicra rabba, fol. 188. 2.

Καὶ ἐξέμαξε ταῖς θριξίν. And wiped them with her hair.

Did ſhe not waſh his feet before ſhe anointed them? I do not ask whether ſhe did not waſh them with her tears, as before, Luk. VII. for as to that the Evangeliſt is ſilent; but did ſhe not waſh his feet at all? I ask this, becauſe the cuſtom of the Country ſeems to perſwade ſhe ſhould do ſo.

q קוקומא של חמין a little veſſel of warm water, with which he waſht his hands and his feet, then ſhe brought a golden veſſel of oyl, in which he dipped his hands and his feet. There was firſt waſhing, then anointing.

q Menacoth, fol. 85. 2.

Either therefore this word ἐξέμαξε ſhe wiped muſt relate to ſome previous waſhing of his feet; or if it ought to refer to the oyntment, it ſcarcely would ſuppoſe wiping off the oyntment now laid on, but rather that with the hairs of her head ſhe rubbed and chaffed it. Which brings to mind that paſſage, r If a woman in labour ſhould have need of oyl [on the Sabbath-day] let her neighbour bring her it in the hollow of her hand; but if that ſhould not be ſufficient מביאה בשערה let her bring it in the hairs of her head. The Gloſs is, Let her dip her own hair in oyl, and when ſhe comes to the woman in travel, let her rub it upon her, and by that action ſhe doth not break the Sabbath.

Ἡ δὲ οἰκία ἐπληρώθη ἐκ τῆς ὀσμῆς τοῦ μύρου. And the houſe was filled with the odour of the oyntment.

s שמון טוב מהלך מקיטון לטרקלין Good oyntment [by its ſmell] paſſeth out of the bed into the dining room, but a good name from one end of the world unto the other.

s Midr. Coheleth, fol. 99 4.

VERS. VI.

Γλωσσόκομον. The Bag.

WE meet with this word in the Greek Interpreters, 2 Chron. XXIV. and it is ſet there for a Cheſt or Corban-box, ver. 8. Γενηθήτω γλωσσόκομον, let a purſe or bag be made. The Hebrew is, יעשו ארון they ſhall make a cheſt. So ver. 10, 11, &c. Amongſt the Talmudiſts we meet with גלוסקמא Gloskema, [that is the word the Syriack uſeth in this place] and דלוסקמא Dloskema. For ſo the Aruch, גלוסקמא Gloskema, is the ſame with דלוסקמא Dloskema, and is a Greek word. It is uſed commonly for a Coffin t.

t Mocd-katon, fol. 24. 1. & Maſſechtth Simacoth, cap. 3, &c.

* Γλωσσόκομον, θήκη, σωρὸς ξυλίνη, τὴν λειψάνων.

* Heſych.

Others, Γλωσσόκομον, or rather as Phrynicus writes it, Γλωττοκομεῖον, a caſe of wood to keep reliques in; a coffin, a cheſt, a box, a purſe, or rather a coffer (note that) in which they uſe to lay up their money. It is uſed, Joh. XII. to ſignifie a purſe. And why may it not be read there alſo for a cheſt or coffer? for Judas is not ſaid βαστάζειν γλωσσοκομον, to carry the bag; but that εἶχε γλωσσόκομον, καὶ ἐβάσταττε τὰ βαλλόμενα, He had the bag, and bare what was put therein. So that nothing hinders but that γλωσσόκομον, even in this place may ſignifie a cheſt or coffer of money, fixt at home, the keys of which were in Judas his keeping, and he carry'd the τὰ βαλλόμενα, the gifts that were to be put into it.

VERS. VII.

Εἰς τὴν ἡμέραν τοῦ ἐνταφιασμοῦ μου τετήρηκεν αὐτό. Againſt the day of my burying hath ſhe kept this.

BARONIUS proves from this place that this Mary was Mary Magdalene, becauſe ſhe is nam'd amongſt thoſe that anointed Chriſt for his Interment, and Chriſt ſaith in this place that ſhe reſerved ſome of this oyntment for this uſe: which I have had occaſion to mention elſewhere. If this Expoſition do not take, then add this clauſe, Let her alone; for this may be an argument and ſign that ſhe hath not done this vainly, luxuriouſly, or upon any delicacy ſpent ſo coſtly an oyntment upon me; becauſe ſhe hath reſerv'd it for this this time, wherein I am so near my grave and funeral, and poured it not on me before.

VERS. XII.

Ὄχλος πολὺς ὁ ἐλθὼν εἰς τὴν ἑορτήν. Much people that were come to the Feast.

IT is not greatly to our present purpose to enlarge in counting the multitude that flocked to the Passover. However, let the Reader take this story in his way and judg of it as he thinks fit.

u King Agrippa desirous to know how great a multitude was at Jerusalem at the Passover, commanded the Priests, saying, Lay me aside one kidney of every lamb. They laid him aside six hundred thousand pair of kidnies: double the number to those that went out of Egypt: now there was not any Paschal lamb but was divided among more than ten persons. R. Chajia saith forty, nay fifty persons.------One time they went in to the mountain of the Temple, and it could not contain them. But there was a certain old man amongst them whom they trod under their feet. Wherefore they call'd that Passover the crowded Passover. u Echah rabbathi, fol. 59. 1, 2.

Although this be an account (according to the loose Rabbinical way of talking) that exceeds all belief or modesty, yet might the Reader without a Monitor, take notice of something in it, not unworthy observation. It is true indeed that the multitude of those that celebrated the Passover at every Feast, could hardly be number'd it was so great; yet had Jerusalem hardly ever seen such a conflux of people as was at this very Feast which we are now upon, they being gather'd thither from all Nations of the world, Act. II. for that they were at the Passover as well as at Pentecost, there are hardly any I believe but will suppose.

VERS. XIII.

Ἔλαβον τὰ βαΐα τῶν φοινίκων. Took branches of Palm-trees.

WE have made our notes upon this part of the story in Mat. XXI. but because here is mention of branches of Palm-trees, let us add only in this place what is discours'd by the Rabbins concerning the Ivy of the Palm-trees, much us'd in the Passover. x I have heard from him בערקבלין יוצאין בפסח that they perform their service by Arkablin. But what is Arkablin? Resh Lachish saith חרוייתא אצוותא a twigg twin'd about. Glos. A thick sprig that grows up about the Palm-tree, folds about it, and runs up on it. I could not tell better how to render this than by the Ivy of the Palm-tree: They us'd, as it should seem, the leaves of that frequently amongst or instead of the bitter herbs they were to eat with the Paschal Lamb. So far they had to do with the Palm-tree in all other Passovers, viz. to crop the Ivy off of them; but here they use the Palm-branches themselves, as in the Feast of Tabernacles. A matter not to be passed over without wonder, and cannot but bring to mind Zach. XIV. 16. and Joh. VII. 8. x Erubbin. fol. 26. 2.

VERS. XIX.

Ὁ κόσμος ὀπίσω αὐτοῦ ἀπῆλθεν. The world is gone after him.

THE Talmudists would say, בולא עלמא אויל בתריה All the world is gone after him.

VERS. XX.

Ἦσαν δέ τινες Ἕλληνες. There were certain Greeks.

THAT these Greeks were Gentiles, as the Vulgar renders it, I do not question; and perhaps they were Syro-Grecians, and those either of Decapolis, or Gadara, or Hippo; the reason of this conjecture is, partly that they apply themselves to Philip of Bethsaida, as known to them, because of his neighbourhood; partly, which is more probable, that those Greeks that border'd upon Galilee, and the places where Christ wrought his miracles, might seem more prone both to embrace the Jewish Religion, and also to see Jesus, than those that liv'd farther off.

However, be they other Gentiles, and not Greeks; or be they Greeks come from more remote Countries, what had the one or the other to do with the Feast, or the Religion of the Jews? As to this, let the Jewish Writers inform us.

I. a If an heathen send a burnt-offering out of his own Country, and withal send drink-offerings; the drink-offerings are offered, but if he send no drink-offerings, drink-offerings are offered a Menacoth, fol. 51. & 73. 2.

fered at the charge of the Congregation. Obſerve that. We have the ſame elſewhere b. And it is every where added, that this is one of the ſeven things that were ordain'd by the great Council; and that the ſacrifice of a Gentile, is only a whole burnt-offering, שלמי גוי עולות the thank-offerings of a Gentile are whole burnt-offerings; and the reaſon is given, לבו לשמים The mind of that Gentile is toward heaven. Gloſs. He had rather that his ſacrifice ſhould be wholly conſum'd by fire to God, than [as his thank-offerings] be eaten by men d.

f Ibid. cap. 31.

f The Elders that they might take off Eleazar and his followers from this reſolution of theirs, making a ſpeech to them, among other things, ſay this, That their fore-fathers had greatly beautify'd and adorn'd the Temple, Ἐκ τῶν ἀναθημάτων ἀλλοφύλων, from things devoted by the Gentiles: ἀεὶ προσδεχομένους τὰς ἀπὸ τῶν ἔξωθεν ἐθνῶν δωρεάς. Always receiving the gifts from forreign Nations, not having ever made any difference in the ſacrifices of any whomſoever; for that would be irreligious, &c. When they had ſpoken this and many more things to this purpoſe, they produc'd ſeveral Prieſts ſkill'd in the ancient cuſtoms of their fore-fathers, who ſhew'd ὅτι πάντες οἱ πρόγονοι τὰς ἀπὸ τῶν ἀλλογενῶν θυσίας ἀπεδέχοντο, that all their anceſtors received offerings from the Gentiles.

II. Nor did the Gentiles only ſend their gifts and ſacrifices, but came themſelves perſonally ſometimes to the Temple, and there worſhip'd. Hence the outward Court of the Temple was call'd the Court of the Gentiles, and חול the common Court, to which that in the Book of the Revelations alludes, Chap. XI. 2. But the Court which is without the Temple, leave out, and meaſure it not, for it is given to the Gentiles. And of thoſe there ſhall innumerable numbers come and worſhip. And they ſhall tread the Holy City forty and two months. It is not καταπατήσουσιν, they ſhall tread it under foot as enemies and ſpoilers, but πατήσουσι, they ſhall tread it as worſhippers. So Iſa. I. 12.

g ארמאים וטמאמת נבנסין להר הבירת The Syrians and thoſe that are unclean by the touch of a dead body, enter'd into the mountain of the Temple.

Hence that ſuſpicion about Trophimus being brought by Paul into the Temple, is not to be ſuppos'd to have been with reference to this Court, but to the Court of the women, in which Paul was purifying himſelf.

k Peſachim, fol. 3. 2.

k There is a ſtory of a certain Gentile that eat the Paſſover at Jeruſalem, but when they found him out to be an heathen, they ſlew him; for the Paſſover ought not to be eaten by any one that is uncircumciſed. But there was no ſuch danger that an uncircumciſed perſon could run by coming into the Court of the Gentiles, and worſhipping there.

VERS. XXIV.

Ἐὰν μὴ ὁ κόκκος τοῦ σίτου, &c. Except a corn of wheat.

HOW doth this anſwer of our Saviours, agree with the matter propounded? Thus: Is it ſo indeed? do the Gentiles deſire to ſee me? The time draws on wherein I muſt be glorify'd in the converſion of the Gentiles; but as a corn of wheat doth not bring forth fruit except it be firſt thrown into the ground and there die, but if it die it will bring forth much fruit; ſo I muſt die firſt and be thrown into the earth, and then a mighty harveſt of the Gentile world will grow up, and be the product of that death of mine.

Iſa. XXVI. 19. Thy dead men ſhall live נבלתי יקומון together with my dead body ſhall they ariſe, ſo our tranſlation; with which alſo the French agrees, Reſcuſciteront avec mon corps; They ſhall riſe with my Body. But it is properly Corpus meum reſurgent; They ſhall ariſe my Body; ſo the interlineary Verſion. The Gentiles being dead in their ſins, ſhall with my dead body when it riſes again, riſe again alſo from their death. Nay they ſhall riſe again my Body, that is, as part of my ſelf, and my Body Myſtical.

VERS.

VERS. XXVIII.

Καὶ ἐδόξασα καὶ πάλιν δοξάσω. I have both glorify'd it, and will glorifie it again.

THIS Petition of our Saviours, Father glorifie thy name, was of no light conſequence, when it had ſuch an anſwer from heaven by an audible voice: And what it did indeed mean, we muſt gueſs by the Context. Chriſt upon the Greeks deſire to ſee him, takes that occaſion to diſcourſe about his death, and to exhort his followers that from his example they would not love their life, but by loſing it preſerve it to life eternal. Now by how much the deeper he proceeds in the diſcourſe and thoughts of his approaching death, by ſo much the more is his mind diſturbed, as himſelf acknowledgeth, ver. 27.

But whence comes this diſturbance? It was from the apprehended rage and aſſault of the Devil, whether our Lord Chriſt in his agony and paſſion had to grapple with an angry God, I queſtion; but I am certain he had to do with an angry Devil. When he ſtood and ſtood firmly in the higheſt and moſt eminent point and degree of obedience, as he did in his ſufferings, it doth not ſeem agreeable that he ſhould then be groaning under the preſſures of Divine wrath; but it is moſt agreeable he ſhould under the rage and fury of the Devil. For,

I. The fight was now to begin between the Serpent and the ſeed of the woman menti-on'd, Gen. III. 15. about the glory of God, and the ſalvation of man. In which ſtrife and conteſt we need not doubt but the Devil would exert all his malice and force to the very uttermoſt.

II. God looſed all the reins, and ſuffered the Devil without any kind of reſtraint upon him to exerciſe his power and ſtrength to the utmoſt of what he either could or would, becauſe he knew his Champion Chriſt was ſtrong enough, not only to bear his aſſaults, but to overcome them.

III. He was to overcome, not by his Divine power, for how eaſie a matter were it for an omnipotent God to conquer the moſt potent created Being, but his victory muſt be obtain'd by his obedience, his righteouſneſs and his holineſs.

IV. Here then was the riſe of that trouble and agony of Chriſts ſoul, that he was preſently to grapple with the utmoſt rage of the Devil, the Divine power in the mean time ſuſpending its activity, and leaving him to manage the conflict with thoſe weapons of obedience and righteouſneſs only.

It was about this therefore that that petition of our Saviour, and the anſwer from Heaven was concern'd; which may be gather'd from what follows, ver. 31. Now ſhall the Prince of this world be caſt out.

Now is my ſoul troubled, ſaith he, and what ſhall I ſay? "It is not convenient for me to "deſire to be ſaved from this hour, for for this very purpoſe did I come; that therefore "which I would beg of thee, O Father, is, that thou wouldſt glorifie thy name, thy pro-"miſe, thy decree againſt the Devil, leſt he ſhould boaſt and inſult.

The anſwer from Heaven to this prayer is, "I have already glorify'd my name in that "victory thou formerly obtainedſt over his temptations in the wilderneſs, and I will glo-"rifie my name again in the victory thou ſhalt have in this combat alſo.

Luk. IV. 13. When the Devil had ended all his temptations, he departed from him for a ſeaſon. He went away baffled then, but now he returns more inſolent, and much more to be conquer'd.

And thus now the third time by a witneſs and voice from Heaven was the Meſſiah honoured according to his Kingly office. As he had been according to his Prieſtly office when he enter'd upon his Miniſtry at his Baptiſm, Mat. III. 17. and according to his Prophetick office, when he was declar'd to be him, that was to be heard, Mat. XVII. 5. compared with Deut. XVIII. 15.

VERS. XXXI.

Ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου. The Prince of this world.

שר העולם The Prince of this world; a ſort of phraſe much us'd by the Jewiſh Writers; and what they mean by it, we may gather from ſuch paſſages as theſe: l When God was about to make Hezekiah the Meſſiah, אמר שר העולם ſaith the Prince of the world to him, O eternal Lord perform the deſire of this juſt one. Where the Gloſs is, The Prince of this world is the Angel, into whoſe hands the whole world is delivered. l Sanhedr. fol. 94. 1.

Who this ſhould be the Maſters tell out m, When the Law was deliver'd, God brought the Angel of death and ſaid unto him, כולו ברשותך העולם The whole world is in thy power, excepting this Nation only [the Iſraelites] which I have choſen for my ſelf. R. Eliezer the Son m Bemidb. rabb. fol. 277. 4.

of R. Jose the Galilean, ſaith. The Angel of death ſaid before the Holy bleſſed God. I am made in the world in vain; The Holy bleſſed God anſwered and ſaid, I have created thee that thou ſhouldſt overlook [משכל] the Nations of the world, excepting this Nation, over which thou haſt no power.

l Bereſh. rabb. fol. 86. 4.

l If the Nations of the world ſhould conſpire againſt Iſrael, the Holy bleſſed God ſaith to them, שרכם לא היה יכול לעמוד בו your Prince could not ſtand before Jacob, &c.

m Targ. Jonath. in Gen. III. 6.

Now the name of the Angel of Death amongſt them is Samael. m And the Woman ſaw ית סמאל מלאך מותא Samael the Angel of death, and ſhe was afraid, &c. The places are infinite where this name occurs amongſt the Rabbins: and they account him the Prince of the Devils.

n Elleh haddebharim rabba, fol. 302. 2.

סמאל הרשע ראש כל השטנים הוא n The wicked Angel Samael, is the Prince of all Satans. The Angel of death, ὁ κρατῶν ἔχων τὸ θανάτου, τοῦτ' ἔστιν ὁ Διάβολος· He who hath the power of death, that is the Devil, Heb. II. 14. They call indeed Beelzebul the Prince of the Devils, Matth. XII. but that is under a very peculiar notion, as I have ſhown in that place.

o Cap. 13.

They conceive it to be Samael, that deceived Eve. So the Targumiſt before. And ſo Pirke R. Eliezer o. The Serpent, what things ſoever he did, and what words ſoever he uttered, he did and uttered all from the ſuggeſtion of Samael.

Some of them conceive that it is he that wraſtled with Jacob. Hence that which we have quoted already. The Holy bleſſed God ſaith to the Nations of the World, your Prince could not ſtand before him. Your Prince, that is the Prince of the Nations, whom the Rabbins talk of as appearing to Jacob ארכילטרים נדמה in the ſhape of Archilatro, or a chief Robber. And R. Chaninah bar Chama ſaith שרו של עשו היה that he was the Prince of Eſau, i. e. the Prince of Edom. Now the Prince of Edom was Samael. p p Gloſs in Maccoth, fol. 12. 1.

They have a fiction, that the ſeventy Nations of the world were committed to the, government of ſo many Angels [they will hardly allow the Gentiles any good ones] which opinion the Greek Verſion favours, in Deut. XXXII. 8. When the moſt high divided the Nations [into ſeventy ſay they] when he ſeparated the Sons of Adam, ὅτε διεμέριζεν ὁ ὕψιστος ἔθνη, κατὰ ἀριθμὸν ἀγγέλων Θεοῦ· He ſet the bounds of the Nations according to the number of the Angels of God. Over theſe Princes they conceive one Monarch, above them all, and that is Samael the Angel of Death, the Arch-Devil.

Our Saviour therefore ſpeaks after their common way, when he calls the Devil, the Prince of this World; and the meaning of the phraſe is made the more plain, if we ſet it in oppoſition to that Prince, whoſe Kingdom is not of this world, that is, the Prince of the world to come. Conſult Heb. II. 5.

How far that Prince of the Nations of the world had exerciſed his tyranny amongſt the Gentiles, leading them captive into Sin and Perdition, needs no explaining. Our Saviour therefore obſerving at this time ſome of the Greek., that is, the Gentiles preſſing hard to ſee him, he joyfully declares, that the time is coming on apace, wherein this Prince muſt be unſeated from his throne and tyranny. And I, when I ſhall be lifted up upon the croſs, and by my death ſhall deſtroy him who hath the power of Death, then will I draw all Nations out of his dominion and power, after me.

VERS. XXXIV.

Ἡμεῖς ἠκούσαμεν ἐκ τοῦ νόμου. We have heard out of the Law.

OUT of the Law, that is, as the phraſe is oppoſed לדברי סופרים to the words of the Scribes. So we often meet with מראוריתא הוא This is out of the Law, or Scripture, to which is oppoſed מדרבנין הוא This is out of the Rabbins, That Chriſt abideth for ever. How then came the Rabbins to determine his time and years? ſome to the ſpace of Forty years, ſome to Seventy, and others to three Generations? q After the days of Meſſiah, they expected that Eternity ſhould follow.

q Sanhedr. fol. 99. 1.

VERS. XXXIX.

Διὰ τοῦτο οὐκ ἠδύναντο πιστεύειν, &c. Therefore they could not believe, &c.

THEY were not conſtrained in their infidelity becauſe Iſaiah had ſaid, Their heart is waxen groſs, &c. But becauſe thoſe things were true which that Prophet had foretold concerning them. Which Propheſie, if I underſtand them aright, they throw off from themſelves, and pervert the ſenſe of it altogether.

v Roſh. haſhanah, fol. 17. 2.

r R. Johanan ſaith, repentance is a great thing, for it reſcinds the decree of judgment determined againſt man; as it is written, The heart of this people is made fat, their ears heavy, and their eyes are cloſed, leſt they ſhould ſee with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and underſtand ſtand with their heart ושב ורפא לו but they ſhall be converted and healed. For to that ſenſe do they render theſe laſt words, diametrically contrary to the mind of the Prophet.

They have a conceipt, that Iſaiah was cut in two either by the Saw, or the Ax, by Manaſſes the King, principally for this very Viſion and Propheſie.

ſ It is a Tradition. Simeon Ben Azzai ſaith, I found a Book at Jeruſalem ----- in which was written, how Manaſſes ſlew Iſaiah. Rabba ſaith, He condemned and put him to death upon this occaſion: He ſaith to him: Thy Maſter Moſes ſaith, no man can ſee God and live; But thou ſayeſt, I have ſeen the Lord ſitting upon a Throne, high and lifted up. Thy Maſter Moſes ſaith, Who is like our God in all things that we call upon him for? Deut. IV. 7. But thou ſaieſt, ſeek ye the Lord while he may be found, Iſai. LV. 6. Moſes thy Maſter ſaith, the number of thy days I will fulfil, Exod. XIII. 26. But thou ſaieſt, I will add unto thy days fifteen years, Iſai. XXXVIII. 5. Iſaiah anſwered and ſaid, I know he will not hearken to me in any thing I can ſay to him: If I ſhould ſay any thing to the reconciling of the Scriptures, I know he will deal contemptuouſly in it. He ſaid therefore, איבלע בארוא I will ſhut my ſelf up in this Cedar; They brought the Cedar, and ſawed it aſunder. כי מטא להדי פומא נח נפשיח And when the Saw touched his mouth he gave up the Ghoſt. This happened to him becauſe he ſaid, I dwell in the midſt of a people of unclean lips. ſ Jevamoth, fol. 49. 2.

Manaſſes ſlew Iſaiah, and, as it ſhould ſeem, the Gemariſts do not diſlike the fact, becauſe he had accuſed Iſrael, of the uncleanneſs of their lips. No touching upon Iſrael by any means!

VERS. XLI.

Ὅτι εἶδε τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ. When he ſaw his Glory.

ISAI. VI. 1. I ſaw the Lord ſitting upon a Throne. Where the Targum, חזיתי יח יקרא דיי I ſaw the Lords Glory, &c. So Exod. XXIV. 10. They ſaw the God of Iſrael. Targum, וחזו יקר They ſaw the glory of the God of Iſrael. and verſ. 11. and they ſaw God. Targum, וחזו יקרא And they ſaw the glory of God. So the Targumiſts elſewhere very often commended therefore by their followers for ſo rendring it, becauſe no man cold ſee God.

It might be therefore thought that our Evangeliſt ſpeaks with the Targumiſt, and the Nation, when he ſaith, that Iſaiah ſaw his glory, whereas the Prophet himſelf ſaith, he ſaw the Lord.

But there is a deeper meaning in it: nor do I doubt but this glory of our Saviour which Iſaiah ſaw, was that kind of Glory by which he is deſcribed, when he was to come to avenge himſelf and puniſh the Jewiſh Nation. As when he is ſaid, to come in his Kingdom, and in his Glory, and in the Clouds, &c. viz. in his Vindictive Glory. For obſerve,

1. The Prophet ſaw the poſts of the door ſhaken and removed, as haſtening to ruine. 2. The Temple it ſelf filled with ſmoke: not with the cloud, as formerly, the token of the Divine Preſence, but with ſmoke. The forerunner and prognoſtick of that fire that ſhould burn and conſume it. 3. He ſaw the Seraphims Angels of fire, becauſe of the predetermined Burning. 4. He heard the decree about blinding and hardening the people, till the Cities be waſted, and the Land deſolate.

CHAP. XIII.

VERS. I.

Πρὸ δὲ τῆς ἑορτῆς τοῦ Πάσχα. Now before the Feaſt of the Paſsover.

THE Vulgar, Beza, and the Interlinear read, Now before the Feaſt-day of the Paſsover. But by what authority they add, day it concerns them to make out. For

I. In the common language of the Jews, חג הפסח, and חג העצרת, and חג הסוכות do never ſignifie leſs than the whole Feſtivity, and time of Paſsover, Pentecoſt, and of Tabernacles, no part of that time being excepted; nor does the word Ἑορτὴ, Feaſt, occur any where throughout the whole Bible, in another ſignification.

II. It is ſomething harſh to exclude the Paſchal Supper out of the title τῆς ἑορτῆς τοῦ πάσχα, of the Feaſt of the Paſsover, becauſe the name of the whole Feaſt, takes its original from it. This they do, who imagine this Supper mentioned in this place to have been the the Paſchal Supper, and yet it was πρὸ ἡμέρας τῆς Πάσχα· before the Feaſt of the Paſſover.

We have therefore ſhewn by many Arguments in our Notes upon Matth. XXVI. 2, 6. That the Supper here mentioned was with that at Bethany, in the Houſe of Simon the Leper, two days before the Paſsover.

VERS. II.

Καὶ δείπνου γενομένου. And Supper being ended.

I Acknowledge the Aoriſt, and yet do not believe the Supper was now ended. We have the very ſame word in the ſtory of the ſame Supper, Matth. XXVI. 6. τοῦ δὲ Ἰησοῦ γενομένου ἐν Βηθανίᾳ· And Jeſus being in Bethany: Which in St. Mark is ὄντος αὐτοῦ ἐν Βηθανίᾳ· And being in Bethany, Chap. XIV. 3. So that Δείπνου γενομένου is no more than Δείπνου ὄντος· Being Supper.

Let us joyn the full ſtory together; whiles Jeſus was at Supper in the Houſe of Simon the Leper, two days before the Paſsover, a Woman comes and pours very precious Ointment upon his head: when ſome murmured at the profuſeneſs of the expenſe, he defends the Woman and the action by an Apology; and having finiſhed his Apology, he riſes immediately from the Table, as it were in the very midſt of Supper, and girds himſelf to waſh his Diſciples feet; ſo that while they are grumbling at the anointing of his head, he does not diſdain to waſh their feet.

The reaſon of this extraordinary action of his we may in ſome meaſure ſpell out, from thoſe little prefaces the Evangeliſt uſes, before he tells the ſtory.

I. Jeſus knowing that his hour was come, Ἵνα μεταβῇ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, wherein he ſhould depart out of this world, &c. [there is an expreſſion not unlike this in Bemidbar rabba a, Abraham ſaid, I am fleſh and blood למחר נפטר מן העולם Μεταβαίνων ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου· To morrow I ſhall go out of this world.]

a Fol. 243. 3:

It had a little rubbed up the memory of his departure out of this world, that the Woman had, as it were, anointed him for his Funeral; and therefore he riſeth immediately from the Table, that he might give them ſome farewel-token of his Humility, and Charity, and leave them an example for the practiſe of theſe vertues one amongſt another.

II. When the Devil had now put into the heart of Judas to betray him, it was but ſeaſonable for him to ſhew his Diſciples that he would ſtrengthen and vindicate them againſt the Wolf, who had now ſtollen (I will not ſay a Sheep, but) a Goat, and that out of his own flock. It muſt not paſs unobſerved, that his Diſciples murmured at the laviſh of the ointment, Matth. XXVI. 8. As if the murmuring humor was crept in amongſt others alſo as well as Judas; which perhaps moved Chriſt the more earneſtly, to meet the beginnings of that Diſtemper, by this action.

III. Knowing that the Father had given all things into his hand, verſ. 3. He gave the Traytor over to Satan, and confirms the reſt to himſelf. Signifying by the external waſhing, that his, ſhould be ſecured from the Devil, by the waſhing of Chriſt. Whoſoever ſhall attempt the determination, whether he waſhed the feet of Judas or not, let him ſee how he will free himſelf of this Dilemma.

If he waſhed Judas his feet, why had not he his part in Chriſt, as well as the reſt of his Diſciples? For ſuppoſing that true, If I waſh thee not, thou haſt no part in me, why ſhould not this be ſo too, If I do waſh thee thou haſt a part in me?

If he did not waſh Judas with the reſt, but left him out; how could the reſt be ignorant who was the unclean perſon? verſ. 10. which they were altogether ignorant of.

VERS. V.

Εἰς τὸν νιπτῆρα. Into a Baſin.

b Jadaim, cap. 4. hal. 1.

ON b that day [when they made R. Eleazar ben Azariah Preſident of the Council] the votes were numbred, and they determined על עירבי רגלים concerning the Baſin wherein they were to waſh their feet, that it ſhould contain from two Logs to ten.

Ἤρξατο νίπτειν τοὺς πόδας, &c. He began to waſh the feet, &c.

As to this action of our Saviour's waſhing his Diſciples feet, it may be obſerved:

I. It was an unuſual thing for ſuperiours to waſh the feet of inferiors. Amongſt the duties required from a Wife toward an Husband, this was one, that ſhe ſhould waſh his face, his hands and his feet. c The ſame was expected by a Father from his Son. d The ſame from a Servant towards his Maſter, but not vice verſâ. Nor, as I remember

c Maimon in אישות c. 21:

d Toſaphta in Kiddushin, c. 1.

remember, was it expected from the Diſciple toward his Maſter unleſs included in that rule, that the diſciple is to honour his maſter, more than his Father.

II. The feet were never waſhed meerly under the notion of legal purification; The hands were wont to be waſhed by the Phariſees meerly under that notion, but not the feet. And the hands and the feet by the Prieſts, but the feet not meerly upon that account. That what was ſaid before עריבת רגלים concerning the Baſin wherein the Feet were to be waſhed, muſt not be underſtood as if the feet were to be waſhed upon any ſcore of a legal cleanſing; but only care was taken by that Tradition, leſt through defect of a juſt quantity of water, the feet and the perſon, ſhould contract ſome ſort of uncleanneſs, whiles they were waſhing.

So that by how much diſtant this action of Chriſt's was from the common uſage and cuſtom, by ſo much the more inſtructive was it to his followers, propounded to them not only for Example but Doctrine too.

III. As to the manner of the action. It is likely he waſhed their feet in the ſame manner ar his own were, Luke VII. 38. viz. while they were leaning at the Table (as the Jewiſh cuſtom of eating was) he waſhed their feet as they were ſtretched out behind them. And if he did obſerve any order, he began with Peter who ſate in the next place immediately to himſelf. This Nonnus ſeems to believe when he renders it Ἀρχόμενος Σίμωνος, &c. to which opinion alſo there are others that ſeem inclined; and then the words Ἤρξατο νίπτειν, he began to waſh, muſt be taken in ſome ſuch ſenſe, as if he made ready, and put himſelf into a poſture to waſh. But perhaps this way of expreſſion may intimate, as if he began to waſh ſome of his Diſciples, but did not waſh them all; which, for my own part, I could eaſily enough cloſe with. For whereas Chriſt did this for example and inſtruction meerly, and not with any deſign of cleanſing them, his end was anſwered in waſhing too or three of them, as well as all. And ſo indeed I would avoid being entangled in the Dilemma, I lately mentioned, by ſaying, he did not only leave Judas unwaſhed, but ſeveral others alſo. What if he waſhed Peter, and James, and John only? And as he had before made ſome diſtinction betwixt theſe three and the reſt of his Diſciples, by admitting them into his more inward privacies, ſo perhaps he diſtinguiſheth them no leſs in this action. Theſe he foretold how they were to ſuffer Martyrdom; might he not therefore by this waſhing prefigure to them, that they muſt be Baptized with the ſame Baptiſm, that himſelf was to be Baptized with? and as the Woman had anointed him for his Burial, ſo he by this action might have waſhed them for that purpoſe.

VERS. XIII.

Ὁ διδάσκαλος καὶ ὁ Κύριος. Maſter, and Lord.

רבי and מר Rabbi and Mar, are titles amongſt the Doctors very frequently uſed, both thoſe of Jeruſalem, and thoſe of Babylon.

VERS. XXIII.

Ἀνακείμενος ἐν τῷ κόλπῳ Ἰησοῦ. Leaning on Jeſus boſom.

THEY e were wont to eat leaning on the left ſide, with their feet to the ground, every one ſingly upon their diſtinct beds. e Gloſs in Beracoth, fol 45. 2.

בזמן שהן שתי מטות f But when there were two beds, he that was chief ſate higheſt, ושני לו למעלה הימנו And he that was ſecond to him ſate above him. Gloſs. The bed of him that ſate ſecond לצד מראשותיו של גדול was by the bolſter of him that ſate firſt. f Gemara.

בזמן שהם שלש When there were three, the worthieſt perſon lay in the middle, and the ſecond, lay above him, and the third below him. Gloſs. The third lay at the feet of him that was firſt.

וכי בעי לאשתעויי בהדי מתרין תרוצי ומשתעי And if he would talk with him he raiſed himſelf, and ſitting upright talks with him. Gloſs. If he that ſits chief would talk with him that is ſecond to him, he raiſeth himſelf and ſits upright; for ſo long as he leans, or lyes down, he cannot talk with him, becauſe he that lyes ſecond lyes behind the head of him that lyes firſt, and the face of him that lyes firſt is turned from him; ſo that it were better for the ſecond to ſit below him, becauſe then he may hear his words while he ſits leaning. So Lipſius writes of the Roman cuſtom: Modus accubitus hic erat, &c. This was the manner of their ſitting at Table: They laid with the upper part of their body leaning on the left Elbow; the lower part ſtretched at length, the head a little raiſed, and the back had Cuſhions under. The firſt lay at the head of the Bed, and his feet ſtretched out at the back of him that ſate next, &c. To all which he adds, Eundem accumbendi morem, &c. That the Jews had the very very ſame way of lying down at meals in Chriſt's time, appears evidently from John, Luke, &c.

So that while Chriſt and his Diſciples were eating together, Peter lay at the back of Chriſt, and John in his boſom. John in the boſom of Chriſt, and Chriſt in the boſom of Peter. Chriſt therefore could not readily talk with Peter in his ear (for all this Diſcourſe was by way of whiſpering) Peter therefore looking over Chriſt's head toward John, nodds to him, and by that ſigns to him, to ask Chriſt about this matter.

So the Gemara concerning the Perſians (I ſuppoſe he means the Jews in Perſia) when they could not becauſe of their way of leaning at meals, diſcourſe amongſt themſelves, מחוי לורז מחוג they talked by ſigns either with their hands, or upon their fingers.

We muſt not omit what the Gloſs ſaid, that they were wont to ſit at Table leaning on their left ſide, with their feet upon the ground, this is to be underſtood when one ſate alone, or two at the Table only. And the Gemara tells us that the order was otherwiſe, when but two ſate down, for then, he that was the ſecond, ſate below him that was the chief, and not at his pillow.

There was alſo a diverſity of Tables; for the ordinary table of the Phariſee or one of the Diſciples of the wiſe men was but little, where three at moſt could ſit down; and there were Tables which would hold more.

The ordinary Table is deſcribed in Bava bathra g. What kind of Table is that of the Diſciples of the wiſe men? שני שלשי גידל ושליש גלאי ועליו קערות וירק two thirds of the Table were ſpread with a Table-cloth; and on the other third was ſet the Diſhes and the Herbs. וטבעתו מבחוץ The ring of the Table was on the out-ſide. Gloſs. They were wont to put a ring upon the edge of the Table, to hang it by. That hanging up the Table when they had done uſing it, ſeems to have been only to ſet it out of danger of contracting any defilement; and argues it was but ſmall and light. Now the ring of the Table was ab extra, when that part of the Table where the ring was, was naked, not covered with a Table-cloth; ſo that it was not amongſt the gueſts, but without, viz. in that void place, where no body ſate down. We have more in the ſame place, about the ring being placed within, or without. Gloſs. If a Child ſit at Table with his Father, the ring was without, not among the gueſts, leſt the Child playing with the ring, ſhould ſhake the Table. Gemara. הא דליכא שמעא הא דליכא שמעא If a Servant be waiting at the Table, then the Table is ſo placed (eſpecially if it be night) that the ring is within, leſt the Servant in moving to and fro, ſhould happen to touch upon it.

Ὃν ἠγάπα ὁ Ἰησοῦς. Whom Jeſus loved.

We have touched upon this phraſe before in our Notes upon Mark X. 21. where upon thoſe words, Jeſus looking upon him, loved him. Let us add ſomething omitted there. 2 Chron. XVIII. 2. ויסיתהו לעלות אל דמות גלעד And perſwaded him to go up to Ramoth Gilead. Greek, Καὶ ἠγάπα αὐτὸν συναναβῆναι μετ' αὐτοῦ εἰς Ραμὼθ ἡ Γαλααδίτιδος. Where ἠγάπα, he loved him, is put for ἔπεισε, he perſwaded him, to go with him to Ramoth in Gilead: and ſo the Complutenſian Bible hath it. Where Nobilius, He loved him, that is, did him all good offices, and ſhewed him tokens of great kindneſs. So Jeſus, carneſtly beholding this young man, Ἠγάπησεν αὐτὸν. i. e. הסיתהו he perſwaded him, encouraged him, uſed all mild and gentle words and actions toward him, that he might urge and ſtir him up to the ways of godlineſs.

VERS. XXVI.

Καὶ ἐμβάψας τὸ ψωμίον, &c. And when he had dipped the ſop.

THIS was a very unuſual thing to dip a ſop and reach it to any one: and what could the reſt of the Diſciples think of it? It is probable they took it, as if Chriſt had ſaid to Judas, what thou doſt do quickly. "Do not ſtay till the Supper be done and the "Tables withdrawn, but take this ſop to make up your Supper, and be gone about "the buſineſs you are to diſpatch. So they might apprehend the matter; only John indeed underſtood what it meant: unleſs perhaps Peter, being not ignorant of the queſtion John asked our Saviour, might not be ignorant of what Chriſt anſwered him by that action.

VERS.

VERS. XXVII.

Καὶ μετὰ τὸ ψωμίον, &c. And after the ſop, &c.

SATAN knew well enough what Chriſt meant by it; for when he ſaw that by giving the ſop, Chriſt had declared which of them ſhould betray him, the Devil makes his entry. For, as he had entred into the Serpent that deceived the firſt Adam, ſo he knew the ſecond Adam could not be betrayed, but by one into whom he ſhould firſt enter.

Ὃ ποιεῖς ποίησον τάχιον. What thou doeſt, do quickly.

I Would take this expreſſion, for a tacite ſevere threatning, pronounced, not without ſome ſcorn and indignation againſt him. q. d. I know well enough, what thou art contriving againſt me, What thou doſt therefore, do it quickly: elſe thy own death may prevent thee, for thou haſt but a very ſhort time to live, thy own end draws on apace. So Pſal. CIX. 8. Let his days be few. And indeed, within two days and three nights after this, Judas died.

VERS. XXX.

Εὐθέως ἐξῆλθεν· ἦν δὲ νύξ. Went immediately out: and it was night.

SO the Traytor goes forth to his work of darkneſs, under the conduct of the Devil, the ſhelter of the Night. He was to go two miles, viz. from Bethany to Jeruſalem, then was he to ſeek out and get the Chief Prieſts together to make his bargain with them for betraying Chriſt. Whether he did all this, this very night, or the day following, as the Holy Scripture ſayeth nothing of it, ſo is it of no great moment for us to make a buſineſs of enquiring about it. It is not ſo difficult to ſhew how many difficulties they involve themſelves in, that would have all this done the very ſame night wherein the Paſchal Supper was celebrated, as it is a wonder that the favourers of this opinion, ſhould take no notice thereof themſelves.

VERS. XXXIII.

BEhold, h I and the Children whom God hath given me, Iſai. VIII. 18. Were they indeed his Sons, or were they not rather his Diſciples? Hence you may learn לתלמידו שכל אדם שנקרא בנו That any one's diſciple is called his Son. Nor is it unlikely but that Chriſt, in calling his Diſciples here, my little Children, might have an eye to that place in Iſaiah; For when the Traitor, the Son of Perdition, had removed himſelf from them, he could then properly enough ſay, Behold I, and the Children which thou haſt given me.

h Vajicra rabbi. fol. 177. 3.

VERS. XXXVIII.

Οὐ μὴ ἀλέκτωρ φωνήσει. The Cock ſhall not crow.

WE muſt not underſtand this, as if the Cock ſhould not crow at all before Peter had denied Chriſt thrice; this had not been true, becauſe the Cock had crowed twice, before Peter had denied him. But we muſt underſtand it, the Cock ſhall not have finiſhed his crowing, &c. Nor indeed was that time above half over before Peter had denied his Maſter.

i The Jewiſh Doctors diſtinguiſh the Cock crowing, into the firſt, ſecond, and third. The firſt they call קריאת הגבר The Cock crowing. The ſecond בשישנה when he repeats it. The third כשישלש when he does it a third time. The diſtinction alſo amongſt other Nations is not unknown. When the time indeed was near, and the very night wherein this was to happen: then Chriſt ſaith, This very night לא ישנה הגבר The Cock ſhall not crow his ſecond time, &c. But here, two days before that night he only ſaith, Οὐ μὴ ἀλέκτωρ φωνήσει· The Cock ſhall not crow: That is, ſhall not have done all his crowing, before thou deny me. And thus our Saviour meets with the arrogance of Peter, foretelling him, that he ſhould not have the courage he ſo confidently aſſumed to himſelf, but ſhould within the time and ſpace of Cock-crowing deny him thrice.

CHAP. XIV.

VERS. I.

Μὴ ταρασσέσθω ὑμῶν ἡ καρδία. Let not your heart be troubled.

THEY could not but be exceedingly concerned at the departure of their Maſter drawing on ſo very near. But there were other things beſides his departure that grieved and perplext their minds.

I. They had run along with their whole Nation in that common expectation, that the Kingdom ſhould be reſtored unto Iſrael through the Meſſiah, Acts I. 8. They had hoped to have been reſcued by him from the Gentile Yoke, Luke XXIV. verſ. 21. They had expected he would have entertained his followers with all imaginable pomp and magnificence, ſplendor and triumph, Matth. XX. 20. But they found, Alas! all things fall out directly contrary, they had got little hitherto by following him but poverty, contempt, reproach, and perſecution, and now that their Maſter was to leave them ſo ſuddenly, they could have no proſpect or hope of better things. Is this the Kingdom of the Meſſiah?

Againſt this depreſſion and deſpondency of mind he endeavous to comfort them, by letting them know, that in his Father's Houſe in Heaven, not in theſe Earthly Regions below, there Manſions were prepared for them, and there it was, that he would receive and entertain them indeed.

II. Chriſt had introduced a new rule and face of Religion; which his Diſciples embracing, did in a great meaſure renounce their old Judaiſm, and therefore they could not but awaken the hatred of the Jews, and a great deal of danger to themſelves, which now they thought would fall ſeverely upon them, when left to themſelves, and their Maſter was ſnatcht from them.

That was dreadful, if true, which we find denounced: a The Epicurean (that is one that deſpiſes the Diſciples and Doctrine of the Wiſe Men) have no part in the world to come----- and thoſe that ſeparate themſelves from the cuſtoms of the Synagogue, go down into Hell, and are there condemned for all Eternity.

a Sanhedr. cap. Helek. hal. 1.

Theſe are direful things and might ſtrangely affright the minds of the Diſciples who had in ſo great a meaſure bid adieu to the cuſtoms of the Synagogues, and the whole Jewiſh Religion; and for him that had led them into all this, now to leave them? What could they think in this matter?

To ſupport the Diſciples againſt diſcouragements of this nature:

I. He lays before them his Authority, that they ought equally to believe in him as in God himſelf: where he lays down two of the chief Articles of the Chriſtian Faith. 1. Of the Divinity of the Meſſiah, which the Jews denied. 2. As to true and ſaving Faith, wherein they were blind and ignorant.

II. He tells them that in his Fathers Houſe were many Manſions; and that there was place and admiſſion into Heaven for all Saints that had lived under different Oeconomies and adminiſtrations of things. Let not your heart be troubled for this great change brought upon the Judaick diſpenſation, nor let it diſquiet you, that you are putting your ſelves under a new Oeconomy of Religion ſo contrary to what you have been hitherto bred up in, for in my Fathers Houſe are many Manſions, and you may expect admiſſion under this new adminiſtration of things, as well as any others, either before or under the Law.

VERS. III.

Πορεύομαι ἑτοιμάσαι τόπον ὑμῖν. I go to prepare a place for you.

COmpare this with Numb. X. 33. And the Ark of the Lord went before them, to ſearch out a reſting place for them.

VERS.

VERS. VI.

Ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ὁδὸς, ἡ ἀλήθεια, καὶ ἡ ζωή. I am the way, the truth, and the life.

WHY is this ſuperadded of truth and the life, when the queſtion was not only about the Way.

I. It may be anſwered, that this was perhaps by an Hebrew Idiotiſm, by which, the way, the truth, and the life may be the ſame with the true and living way.

Jerem. XXIX. 11. לתת לכם אחרית ותקוה To give you an end and hope, or expectation. That is, an hoped, or expected end. So Kinch. in loc. A good end, even as you expect.

II. Our Saviour ſeems to refute that opinion of the Jews concerning their Law, as if it were the way, the truth, and the life, and indeed every thing: and aſſert his own Authority and power, to introduce a new rule of Religion, becauſe himſelf is the way, the truth, and the life, in a ſenſe much more proper, and more ſublime than the Law could be ſaid to be.

It had been happier for the Jew, if he could have diſcerned more judiciouſly concerning the Law: if he could have diſtinguiſhed between coming to God in the Law, and coming to God by the Law; as alſo between living in the Law, and living by the Law. It is beyond all doubt, there is no way of coming to God, but in his Law: for what Out-law, or one that ſtill wanders out of the paths of God's Commandments can come unto him? So alſo it is impoſſible that any one ſhould have life but in the Law of God. For who is it can have life that doth not walk according to the rule of his Laws? But to obtain admiſſion to the favour of God by the Law, and to have life by the Law; that is, to be juſtified by the works of the Law, this ſounds quite another thing. For it is by Chriſt only that we live and are juſtified; by him alone that we have acceſs to God.

Theſe are the fictions of the Rabins. There was one ſhewed a certain Rabbin the place where Corah and his Company were ſwallowed up, and liſten, ſaith he, what they ſay. So they heard them, ſaying, משה ותורתו אמרת Moſes and his Law are the truth. Upon the Calends of every Month, Hell rolls them about, as fleſh rolls in the Cauldron, Hell ſtill ſaying משה ותורתו אמרת Moſes and his Law are truth. a a Bava bathra, fol. 74. 1. & Bemidb. rabb. fol. 271. 1.

It is indeed a great truth what is uttered in this moſt falſe and ridiculous legend, that the Law of Moſes is truth. But the Jews might (if they would) attain to a much more ſound way of judging concerning the truth of it, and conſider that the Law is not the ſumm and ultimate of all truth, but that Chriſt is the very truth of the truth of Moſes, Joh. I. 17. The Law was given by Moſes, but Grace and Truth came by Jeſus Chriſt.

VERS. VII.

Εἰ ἐγνώκειτέ με, &c. If ye had known me, &c.

IT was a very difficult thing to ſpell out the knowledge of the Meſſiah from the Law and the Prophets under the firſt Temple, but it was doubly more difficult under the ſecond. For under the firſt Temple, Moſes had only his own veil over him, and the Prophets only their own proper and original obſcurity: but under the ſecond Temple, the obſcurity is doubled, by the darkneſs and ſmoke of Traditions; which had not only beclouded the true Doctrines of Faith and Religon, but had alſo brought in other Doctrines, diametrically contrary to the chief and principal Articles of Faith; thoſe for inſtance concerning Juſtification, the Perſon, Reign, and Office of the Meſſiah, &c.

What meaſures of darkneſs theſe miſts of Tradition had covered the minds of the Apoſtles with, it is both difficult, and might be preſumptuous to determine. They did indeed own Jeſus for the true Meſſiah, Joh. I. 41. Matth. XVI. 16. But if in ſome things they judged amiſs concerning his Office, undertaking, and government, we muſt put it upon the ſcore of that epidemical diſtemper of the whole Nation, which they ſtill did in ſome meaſure labour under. And to this may this clauſe have ſome reference, If ye had known me, and had judged aright concerning the Office, undertaking, and Authority of the Meſſiah, ye would in all theſe things which I teach and do, have known the Will, Command, and Authority of the Father.

Καὶ ἀπ' ἄρτι γινώσκετε αὐτὸν. And from henceforth ye know him.

We may render it, Henceforward therefore know him: "Henceforward acknowledge "the Father in all that I have done, brought in, and am to introduce ſtill, and ſet your "hearts at reſt in it: believing that you ſee the Father in me, and in the things that I do.

VERS.

VERS. VIII.

Δεῖξον ἡμῖν τὸν πατέρα, καὶ ἀρκεῖ ἡμῖν. Shew us the Father and it ſuffiseth us.

"WHEN the Law was given to Moſes, the Iſraelites ſaw God in his glory: do "thou therefore, now that thou art bringing in a new Law, and Oeconomy "amongſt us, do thou ſhew us the Father, and his glory, and it will ſuffice us, ſo that we "will have no more doubt about it.

VERS. XVI.

Ἄλλον παράκλητον δώσει ὑμῖν. He ſhall give you another comforter.

ALthough the word פרקלט is in frequent uſe amongſt the Jews to ſignifie an Advocate, and that very ſenſe may be allowed to the word Παράκλητος in this place, yet may it ſeem more fit and proper to render it by comforter at preſent. For,

I. Amongſt all the names and titles given to the Meſſiah in the Jewiſh Writers, that of Menahem, or the Comforter, hath chiefly obtained, and the days of the Meſſiah, amongſt them, are ſtiled the days of Conſolation. c The names of Meſſiah are reckoned up, viz. Shiloh, Jinnon, Chaninah, Menahem. And in Jeruſalem Beracoth d, we are told how the Meſſiah had been born in Bethlehem, under the name of Menahem.

c Bab. Sanhedr. fol. 98. 2.
d Fol. 5. 1.

Luke II. 25. Waiting for the conſolation of Iſrael. Targumiſt upon Jerem. XXXI. 6. Thoſe that deſire or long for the years of conſolation to come. This they were wont to ſwear by, viz. the deſire they had of ſeeing this Conſolation. אראה מנחמה So let me ſee the Conſolation.

Now therefore bring theſe words of our Saviour to what hath been ſaid: q. d. "You "expect, with the reſt of this Nation, the Conſolation in the Meſſiah and in his preſence. "Well I muſt depart, and withdraw my preſence from you, but I will ſend you in my "ſtead, another Comforter.

II. The minds of the Diſciples at preſent were greatly diſtreſſed and troubled, ſo that the promiſe of a Comforter ſeems more ſuitable, than that of an Advocate, to their preſent ſtate and circumſtances.

VERS. XVII.

Τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας. The Spirit of truth.

LET us but obſerve how the whole world at this time, lay in falſehood and error: the Gentiles under a Spirit of deluſion, the Jews under the cheat and impoſture of Traditions; and then the reaſon of this title of the Spirit of truth will appear, as alſo how ſeaſonable and neceſſary a thing it was, that ſuch a ſpirit ſhould be ſent into the world.

VERS. XXVI.

Ὑμᾶς διδάξει πάντα. He ſhall teach you all things.

SO Chap. XVI. 13. He ſhall lead you into all truth. Here it might be very fitly enquired whether any ever beſide the Apoſtles themſelves, were taught all things, or led into all truth. It is no queſtion but that every believer is led into all truth neceſſary for himſelf and his own happineſs, but it was the Apoſtles lot only to be led into all truth neceſſary both for themſelves and the whole Church.

VERS. XXX.

Ἔρχεται ὁ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου ἄρχων. The Prince of this world cometh.

SEEING this kind of phraſe, The Prince of this world, was in the commmon acception of the Jewiſh Nation, expreſſive of the Devil ruling among the Gentiles, it may very well be underſtood ſo in theſe words, becauſe the very moment of time was almoſt come about, wherein Chriſt and the Devil were to enter the liſts for the dominion and Government, which of thoſe two ſhould have the rule over the Gentiles.

VERS.

VERS. XXXI.

Ἐγείρεσθε ἄγωμεν ἐντεῦθεν. Arise, let us go hence.

THESE words plainly set out the time and place wherein our Saviour had the discourse which is contain'd in this XIV Chap. The place was Bethany, the time, the very day of the Passover when they were now about to walk to Jerusalem.

Those things which Christ had discours'd in the XIII Chap. were said two nights before the Passover, and that at Bethany where Christ supped at the house of Simon the Leper. He abode there the day following, and the night after, and now when the Feast-day was come, and it was time for them to be making toward Jerusalem to the Passover, he saith, Arise let us go hence. What he did or said the day before the Passover, whiles he staid at Bethany the Evangelist makes no mention. He only relates what was said in his last farewell, before the Paschal-Supper, and upon his departure from Bethany. All that we have recorded in the XV. XVI and XVII. Chap. were discours'd to them after the Paschal-Supper, and after that he had instituted the Holy Eucharist.

CHAP. XV.

VERS. I.

Ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ ἄμπελος ἡ ἀληθινή. I am the true Vine.

WE may take these words in opposition to what is spoken concerning Israel. Israel is called a Vine, Psal. LXXX. 8. Isa. V. 7. Jer. II. 21, &c. In Vajicra rabba a, the parallel is drawn between Israel and a Vine, and the similitude is carry'd on to sixteen particulars, for the most part improper and unsuitable enough. a Fol. 207. 2, 3

But that which is principally to be regarded in this place is this, that hitherto indeed Israel had been the Vine, into which every one that would betake himself to the worship of the true God, was to be set and grafted in. But from hence forward they were to be planted no more into the Jewish Religion, but into the profession of Christ. To which that in Act. XI. 26. hath some reference where the Disciples were first call'd Christians, that is, no longer Jews or Israelites.

Our Saviour as we have said before, discours'd these things immediately after that he had instituted the Holy Eucharist; whiles he was ordaining that Holy Sacrament, he had said, This is the New Testament in my blood, and from thence immediately adds, I am the true Vine; so that for the future, the Church is to be under the administration of a New Testament no longer as the Jewish Church under that of the old; and from hence forward I am the true Vine, into which all the branches of the Church must be ingrafted, and not into the Israelitish Vine any more.

VERS. III.

Ἤδη ὑμεῖς καθαροί ἐστε. Now ye are clean.

CHRIST having discours'd of the Vine and of the branches, these words seem to have an allusion to that Law concerning ערלה or the uncircumcision of the Tree when first planted, Levit. XIX. 23. For the first three years the fruit was to be accounted as uncircumcis'd, unclean, and not to be eaten; but you my branches, now are clean through my word; that word which I have been preaching to you for these three years.

VERS. IV.

Μείνατε ἐν ἐμοί. Abide in me.

INdeed a true fixing and abiding in Christ is by a true faith. But may we not suppose our Saviour here more peculiarly warning them against Apostacy or falling back from the Gospel into Judaism, a plague likely to rage exceedingly in the Church?

VERS. VI.

Ὡς τὸ κλῆμα. As a branch.

SEE Ezek. XV. 1. where D. Kimchi paraphraſes in this manner: O Son of man I do not ask thee concerning the Vine that beareth fruit, (for ſo it ought to be accounted) but concerning the branch [הזמורה] which is amongſt the trees of the wood, unfruitful, even as the trees themſelves are. Where by זמורה which we render branch (for ſo it is commonly render'd) we are to underſtand the wild vine. So R. Solomon in loc. I do not ſpeak, ſaith God, of the Vine in the Vineyard that bears fruit, but of the branch of the wild vine that grows in the woods. So that the ſenſe of the Prophet is, O Son of man, what is the Vine-tree more than any tree? viz. a branch of the wild vine which grows amongſt the trees of the forreſt, which is unfruitful even as they are.

And this is our Saviours meaning, Every branch in me that bringeth not forth fruit is caſt forth, like the branch in the Vine that grows wild in the forreſt, which is good for nothing but to be burn'd.

And to this ſenſe would I take the word זמורה in the ſame Prophet, Chap. VIII. 17. והנם שלחים את הזמורה אל אפם where the Maſoreths note upon the word אפם that this is one of thoſe eighteen words that are corrected by the Scribes; and they will have it read אפי It would be too long to recite the various opinions of Expoſitors upon this place. The Seventy of the Roman Edition, Καὶ ἰδοὺ αὐτοὶ ὡς μυκτηρίζοντες. The Alexandrian Edition, Καὶ ἰδοὺ αὐτοὶ τὸ κλῆμα ὡς μυκτηρίζοντες. Targ. מיתן בהתא לאפיהון They bring confuſion to their own faces. Several other ways the Rabbins and others; but for my part I would render אפם or as the Maſoreth reads it אפי not by noſe, or noſtrils, but by anger; and ſo this ſhould be the ſenſe, They commit theſe abominations, filling the land with violence, and have turn'd to provoke me; and behold they ſend the branch of the wild vine, to my wrath, or to their own wrath: i.e. to what they have deſerved.

q. d. In the ſame manner that any one puts wood to the fire, the branch of the wild vine, that it may the quicklier be burnt, ſo do theſe put the branch to my wrath, that it may burn the more fiercely; hence it follows, Therefore will I alſo deal in fury, mine eye ſhall not ſpare, &c.

VERS. XII.

Ἵνα ἀγαπᾶτε ἀλλήλους. That ye love one another.

b Hieroſ. Beracoth, fol. 3. 3. Every b Sabbath they added that bleſſing toward that courſe of Prieſts, who having perform'd their ſervice the laſt week, were gone off; let him who dwells in this houſe, plant among you אחוה אהבה שלום רעות brotherhood, love, peace and friendſhip.

Our Saviour once and again repeats that Command, Love one another; he calls it a new Commandment, Chap. XIII. 34. for their Traditions had in a great meaſure put that Command of loving one another out of date, and that particularly by very impious vows they would be making. We have a little hint of it, Mat. XV. 5. and more in the Treatiſe Nedarim. See alſo Mat. V. 43. Thou ſhalt hate thine enemy. This rule obtain'd in the Jewiſh Schools. And upon that precept, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf; let us ſee

c Fol. 8. 2. the mighty charitable Gloſs in Chetubb c, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf, ברור לו מיתה יפה that is, decree him to an eaſie death: namely when he is adjudg'd by the Sanhedrin to die.

When you conſider the frequent repetition of this precept, Love one another, conſider alſo that paſſage, Mat. X. 34. I came not to ſend peace but a ſword; and then having reflected on thoſe horrid ſeditions and mutual ſlaughters wherewith the Jewiſh Nation raging within its ſelf in moſt bloody diſcords and inteſtine broils, was even by its ſelf waſted and overwhelmed, you will more clearly ſee the neceſſity and reaſonableneſs of this command of loving one another, as alſo the great truth of that expreſſion, By this they ſhall know that ye are my Diſciples if ye love one another.

VERS. XV.

Ὑμᾶς δὲ εἴρηκα φίλους ὅτι πάντα, &c. But I have call'd you friends, becauſe all things, &c.

Thus is it ſaid of Abraham, the friend of God, Gen. XVIII. 19.

VERS.

VERS. XVI.

Οὐκ ὑμεῖς με ἐξελέξασθε. Ye have not choſen me.

FOR it was a cuſtom amongſt the Jews that the Diſciple ſhould chuſe to himſelf his own Maſter d, Joſhuah ben Perachiah ſaid עשה לך רב chuſe to thy ſelf a maſter, and get a Colleague. d Avoth, cap. 1. hal. 6.

VERS. XXII.

Ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἶχον. They had not had ſin.

SO alſo ver. 24. in both places the paſſage is to be underſtood of that peculiar ſin of rejecting the Meſſiah: If I had not ſpoken to them, and done thoſe things that made it demonſtrably evident that I was the Meſſiah, they had not had ſin, that is, they had not been guilty of this ſin of rejecting me. But when I have done ſuch things amongſt them, it is but too plain that they do what they do in meer hatred to me and to my Father. Our Saviour explains what ſin he here meaneth in Chap. XVI. 9.

CHAP. XVI.

VERS. II.

Ἀποσυναγώγους ποιήσουσιν ὑμᾶς. They ſhall put you out of the Synagogues.

THIS I preſume muſt be underſtood of a caſting out from the whole Congregation of Iſrael, becauſe I know the Jews always proceeded in that manner againſt the Samaritans; and certainly the Diſciples of Jeſus were full as hateful to them as the Samaritans could be. Nay they often call the Chriſtians by the name of כותים Cuthites as well as thoſe.

Thoſe that were caſt out of the Church they deſpoil'd of all their goods, according to Ezra X. 8. which they alſo did to thoſe that were Shammatiz'd e, whence it may be a queſtion whether Shammatizing did not caſt out of the whole Congregation; and again, whether one caſt out of the whole Congregation might be ever readmitted. e Mocd-katon, fol. 81. 2.

We may take notice of what is ſaid in Avodah Zarah f, בולן שחזרו בהן אין מקבלין אותן עולמית No one that relapſeth may be receiv'd again for ever. The Gloſs tells us that the paſſage concerns the Plebeians or Laicks, who having taken upon themſelves any religious rule of life, go back again from that profeſſion, they do not admit them לחברות into that order and ſociety again. Whether therefore thoſe that fell off from the Goſpel returning to their Judaiſm again, were ever admitted into the Jewiſh Church, after they had voluntarily forſaken it, might be an enquiry; but theſe things only by the by. f Fol. 7. 1.

There was in truth a twofold Epocha of the perſecution of the Apoſtolical Church, namely, both before that Apoſtacy of which we have ſuch frequent mention, and alſo after it. Our Saviour had foretold the Apoſtacy in that tremendous Parable about the unclean ſpirit caſt out, and returning again with ſeven worſe. So ſhall it be alſo, ſaith he, with this wicked generation, Mat. XII. 45. The footſteps of this we may diſcern almoſt in every Epiſtle of the Apoſtles.

It is worthy obſervation that of 2 Theſ. II. 3. This day of the Lord ſhall not come except there come a falling away firſt, and that man of ſin be revealed. The day of the Lord here ſpoken of was that wherein Chriſt ſhould come and reveal himſelf in that remarkable vengeance againſt Jeruſalem, and the Jewiſh Nation, of which kind of expreſſion we ſhall ſay more on Chap. XXI. 22. The Apoſtacy or falling away, and revelation of the man of ſin, was to precede that day; which might be eaſily made out by a Hiſtory of thoſe times, if I were to do the buſineſs either of an Hiſtorian or a Chronologer.

When therefore the ſevere and cruel perſecution was firſt rais'd by the unbelieving Jews, before this falling away of Chriſtians, it muſt needs be greatly encreas'd afterward by them and the Apoſtates together: Which diſtinction we may eaſily obſerve out of this verſe.

Δόξη λατρείαν προσφέρειν τῷ Θεῷ. Will think that he doth God ſervice.

So the קנאין the Zealots, of whom we have mention in Sanhedr. g, קנאין פוגעין בו The Zealots kill him. Glos. Theſe are thoſe good men who are endued with zeal in the cauſe of God. Such who with their own hands immediately ſlew the tranſgreſſor, not ſtaying for the judgment of the Sanhedrin. So in the place before quoted, The Prieſt that miniſters at the Altar, in his uncleanneſs, they do not bring before the Sanhedrin, but they bring him out into the Court, and there brain him with the pieces of wood provided to maintain the fire upon the Altar.

g Fol. 81. 2.

What infinite miſchiefs and effuſion of blood ſuch pretexts of zeal toward God might occaſion, it is eaſie to imagin, and very direful inſtances have already witneſſed to the world: Hence was it that they ſo often went about to have ſton'd our Saviour. Hence thoſe forty and more that had conſpir'd againſt St. Paul. And thoſe Zealots whoſe butcherly cruelties are ſo infamous in the Jewiſh ſtory, took the occaſion of their horrid madneſs firſt from this liberty.

From ſuch kind of Villains as theſe the Diſciples of Chriſt could have little ſafeguard; indeed they were greatly endanger'd upon a threefold account: I. From the ſtroke of Excommunication, by which they were ſpoiled of their goods and eſtates, Heb. X. 34. II. From the ſentence of the Sanhedrin dooming them either to be ſcourg'd or ſlain. III. From theſe Aſſaſins, for by this name (a name too well known in Europe) we will call them. We pronounce Aſſaſine, and Aſſaſination; Gul. Tyrius calls them Aſſyſins, whom it may be worth the while to conſult about the original of that name h.

h De Bell. Sacr. lib. 10. cap. 31.

VERS. VIII.

Ἐλέγξει τὸν κόσμον περὶ ἁμαρτίας, &c. He will reprove the world of ſin, &c.

THE Holy Spirit had abſented himſelf from that Nation now for the ſpace of four hundred years or thereabout; and therefore when he ſhould be given and pour'd out in a way and in meaſures ſo very wonderful, he could not but evince it to the world that Jeſus was the true Meſſiah, the Son of God, who had ſo miraculouſly pour'd out the Holy Spirit amongſt them; and conſequently could not but reprove and redargue the world of ſin, becauſe they believed not in him.

VERS. X.

Περὶ δικαιοσύνης δέ, &c. Of righteouſneſs, &c.

THAT this righteouſneſs here mention'd is to be underſtood of the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, hardly any but will readily enough grant; but the queſtion is, what ſort of righteouſneſs of his is here meant, whether his perſonal and inherent, or his communicated and juſtifying righteouſneſs? we may ſay that both may be meant here.

I. Becauſe he went to the Father, it abundantly argu'd him a juſt and righteous perſon, held under no guilt at all, however condemn'd by men as a malefactor.

II. Becauſe he pour'd out the Spirit, it argu'd the merit of his righteouſneſs, for otherwiſe he could not in that manner have given the Holy Spirit. And indeed, that what is chiefly meant here is that righteouſneſs of his by which we are juſtify'd, this may perſwade us that ſo many and ſo great things are ſpoken concerning it in the Holy Scriptures. Iſai. LVI. 1. My Salvation is near to come, and my righteouſneſs to be revealed, Dan. IX. 29. To bring in everlaſting righteouſneſs. Jer. XXIII. 6. This is his name by which he ſhall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. And in the Epiſtles of the Apoſtles, eſpecially thoſe of St. Paul, this righteouſneſs is frequently and highly celebrated, ſeeming indeed the main and principal ſubject of the Doctrines of the Goſpel.

In the ſtead of many others let this ſerve for all, Rom. I. 17. For therein [viz. in the Goſpel] is the righteouſneſs of God reveal'd, ἐκ πίστεως εἰς πίστιν, from faith to faith, which words may be a good Comment upon the foregoing Clauſe.

I. The Law teacheth faith; that is, that we believe in God. But the Goſpel directs us to proceed from faith to faith, viz. from faith in God, to faith in Chriſt; for true and ſaving faith is not a meer naked recumbency immediately upon God, which faith the Jews were wont to profeſs, but faith in God, by the mediation of faith in Chriſt.

II. In the Law the righteouſneſs of God was reveal'd condemning, but in the Goſpel it was reveal'd juſtifying the ſinner. And this is the great myſtery of the Goſpel, that ſinners are juſtify'd not only through the grace and meer compaſſion and mercy of God, but through Divine juſtice and righteouſneſs too, that is, through the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, who is Jehovah, the Lord our righteouſneſs.

And

And the Spirit of Truth when he came, he did reprove and instruct the world concerning these two great articles of faith, wherein the Jews had so mischievously deceiv'd themselves; that is, concerning true saving faith, faith in Christ; and also concerning the manner or formal cause of Justification, viz. the righteousness of Christ.

But then how can we form the Argument? I go unto the Father, therefore the world shall be convinc'd of my justifying righteousness.

I. Let us consider that the expression, I go unto the Father, hath something more in it than I go to Heaven. So that by this kind of phrase our Saviour seems to hint, That work being now finisht, for the doing of which my Father sent me into the world, I am now returning to him again. Now the work which Christ had to do for the Father was various. The manifestation of the Father, Preaching the Gospel, vanquishing the enemies of God, sin, death and the Devil; but the main and chief of all, and upon which all the rest did depend was, that he might perform a perfect obedience, or obediential righteousness to God.

God had created man that he might obey his Maker, which when he did not do, but being led away by the Devil, grew disobedient, where was the Creator's glory? The Devil triumphs that the whole humane race in Adam, had kickt against God, prov'd a rebel, and warr'd under the banners of Satan. It was necessary therefore that Christ clothing himself in the humane nature, should come into the world, and vindicate the glory of God, by performing an intire obedience due from mankind, and worthy of his Maker. He did what weigh'd down for all the disobedience of all mankind, I may say of the Devils too, for his obedience was infinite. He fulfilled a righteousness by which sinners might be justify'd, which answer'd that justice that would have condemned them, for the righteousness was infinite. This was the great business he had to do in this world to pay such an obedience, and to fulfill such a righteousness; and this righteousness is the principal and noble theme and subject of the Evangelical Doctrine, Rom. I. 17. of this the world must primarily, and of necessity be convinc'd and instructed to the glory of him that justifieth, and the declaration of the true Doctrine of Justification. And this righteousness of his was abundantly evidenced by his going to the Father, because he could not have been receiv'd there, if he had not fully accomplisht that work for which he had been sent.

II. It is added, not without reason, and ye see me no more; i.e. Although you are my neares and deares friends, yet you shall no more enjoy my presence on earth; by which may be evinced that you shall partake of my merits; especially when the world shall see you enricht so gloriously with the gifts of my Spirit.

VERS. II.

Περὶ δὲ κρίσεως ὅτι ὁ ἄρχων, &c. Of judgment because the Prince, &c.

IT is well known that the Prince of this world was judged, when our Saviour overcame him by the obedience of his death, Heb. II. 14. and the first instance of that judgment and victory was when he arose from the dead; the next was when he loos'd the Gentiles out of the chains and bondage of Satan by the Gospel, and bound him himself, Revel. XX. 1, 2. which place will be a very good Comment upon this passage.

And both do plainly enough evince, that Christ will be capable of judging the whole world, viz. all those that believe not on him, when he hath already judg'd the Prince of this world. This may call to mind the Jewish opinion concerning the judgment that should be exercis'd under the Messiah, that he should not judg Israel at all, but the Gentiles only; nay that the Jews were themselves rather to judg the Gentiles than that they were to be judg'd. But he that hath judg'd the Prince of this world, the author of all unbelief, will also judg every unbeliever too.

VERS. XII.

Οὐ δύνασθε βαστάζειν ἄρτι. Ye cannot bear them now.

THOSE things which he had to say and they could not bear yet, were the institution of the Christian Sabbath, and the abolishing of the Jewish (the reason and foundation of which, viz. his Resurrection they yet understood not) the rejection of the Jewish Nation, when they expected that the Kingdom should be restor'd to Israel, Act. I. 6. The intire change of the whole Mosaick dispensation, and the bringing in of all Nations in common, within the pale of the Church: These and such like things as these belonging to the Kingdom of God, Act. I. 3. they could not yet bear. For though he had plainly enough discours'd to them the destruction of Jerusalem, Mat. XXIV. yet is it a question whether they apprehended either that their whole Nation must be utterly cast off, or that the rites of Moſes ſhould be antiquated, although he had hinted ſomething of this nature to them more than once.

VERS. XIII.

Ὅσα ἂν ἀκούσῃ λαλήσει. Whatſoever he ſhall hear, that he ſhall ſpeak.

AND ver. 14. ἐκ τοῦ ἐμοῦ λήψεται, He ſhall receive of mine. He ſpeaks according to the Dialect and cuſtom of the Nation, and ſo to the capacity of his auditors: אם שמעו אומרים If they have heard they teach i. It is ſpoken of a Judg in the lower Sanhedrin, conſulting a higher Court, firſt that of the Triumvir, and if they hear they teach; if not, then he goes to the ſupreme Court of all.

i Sanhedr. cap. 11. hal. 2.

The latter clauſe, he ſhall receive of mine, ſeems taken from Iſa. XI. 2. eſpecially if the word λήψεται be the ſame with יקח; but if our Saviour expreſt the ſenſe of that word by יקבל, he did in that alſo follow the familiar manner of ſpeaking, known amongſt the vulgar, and it ſhould ſeem he inclin'd rather to this ſenſe, becauſe he does not ſay, λήψεται καὶ δώσει, He ſhall receive of mine and give; but λήψεται καὶ ἀναγγελεῖ, He ſhall receive and ſhew it unto you; by which the Jew would underſtand יקבל מן תלמודי He ſhall receive of my Doctrine, or from my inſtructions. For the Holy Spirit is ſent as an inſtructor from the Son, as the Son is ſent as a Redeemer from the Father.

VERS. XVI.

Καὶ ὄψεσθέ με, ὅτι ἐγὼ ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν πατέρα. And ye ſhall ſee me becauſe I go unto the Father.

A Little while and ye ſhall not ſee me, becauſe I go to the Father, and ye ſhall ſee me, becauſe I go to the Father, i. e. Ye ſhall not ſee me perſonally, but virtually. It is true they did not ſee him when he lay in the grave, and they did ſee him when he roſe again; but I queſtion whether theſe words ought to be taken in this ſenſe, becauſe it would ſound ſomewhat harſhly here what is added, Ye ſhall ſee me becauſe I go unto the Father. I would therefore rather underſtand it of his aſcending into Heaven, after which they ſaw him indeed no more perſonally, but they did ſee him in the influences and gift of his Holy Spirit; and ſo what follows agrees well enough with this ſenſe of the words, ver. 23. In that day ye ſhall ask me nothing, [as ye were now about to enquire of me, ver. 19.] Ask the Father in my name, and he ſhall reveal to you whatever you ſhall ask of him.

VERS. XXIV.

Ἕως ἄρτι οὐκ ἠτήσατε οὐδὲν ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου. Hitherto ye have asked nothing in my name.

UNderſtand this clauſe of the extraordinary gifts of the Spirit, and then all things will be eaſie. All the faithful did pray in the name of the Meſſiah; and theſe Diſciples acknowledging Jeſus to be the Meſſiah, did pray in the name of Jeſus the Meſſiah. But hitherto they had asked nothing extraordinary in his name, not the power of working miracles, not the revelation of Myſteries, and of future things, not the ſpirit of Propheſie, &c. for it was not neceſſary for them as yet to ask theſe things in his name, whiles he was preſent with them, who could diſpenſe it to them according to their inſtant neceſſities: But for the future when himſelf ſhould be gone from them, whatſoever they ſhould ask the Father in his name he would give it them. That prayer of the Apoſtles, Act. IV. 29, 30. is a good Comment upon theſe words. Ask ſuch things as theſe in my name, and whatſoever you ask you ſhall receive, that your joy may be full, when you ſhall find by experience that I am ſtill preſent with when gone from you.

Thoſe things which both here and elſewhere in the diſcourſes of our Saviour might give occaſion for Scholaſtical diſcuſſion, I leave wholly to the Schools, omitting many paſſages, about which a great deal might be ſaid, becauſe they have been already the labours of other Pens. It was my deſign and undertaking, only to note ſome things which were not obvious, and which others had not yet taken notice of; and not forgetting the title of this little work (being Horæ Hebraicæ & Talmudicæ *) I have the more ſparingly run out into Scholaſtick or Theological diſputes.

VERS. I.

Πέραν τοῦ χειμάῤῥου τοῦ Κέδρων. Over the brook Kidron.

THERE is a queſtion among Expoſitors about the article in the Plural number τῶν, and the accent in Κέδρων; and that upon this occaſion, that it might not be thought as if any relation were to be had here to Cedars, wherein one hath been deceiv'd when he thus comments upon it: It is called the brook Cedron, that is, of Cedars that grow there. So alſo the Arab. Interp. in this place, עבר ואדי אל ארז over the brook of Cedar. But in 2 Sam. XV. 23. and 1 King. II. 37., he retains the word קדרון Cedron.

Amongſt the Talmudiſts קדר Kedar, ſignifies dung a, נפישי קטילי קדר מנפיחי כפן where the Gloſs renders קדר Kedar by נקבים the eaſing of nature. Aruch render it by רעי dung; and the ſenſe of that clauſe is, more die of inconvenient eaſing nature, than of hunger. I would not affirm that the word קדר was us'd in this ſenſe in the Primitive denomination of the brook Kidron, but rather that the brook was call'd ſo from blackneſs; the waters being blacken'd by the mud and dirt that ran into it, it being indeed rather the ſink or common ſewer of the City than a brook. a Schabb. fol. 33. 1.

But when the word קדר was us'd for dung, which it might be at that time when the Greek Verſion was made, perhaps thoſe Interpreters might tranſlate the Hebrew word into Greek, which is not unuſual with them, ſo that χειμάῤῥου τοῦ Κέδρων, might be the ſame with them as נחל קדרין the brook of filth.

Ὅπου ἦν κῆπος. Where there was a Garden.

The Grandees of the Nation had their Gardens and places of pleaſure about the City, yea even in the mount of Olives, for there were none within the City its ſelf b. The blood that was over and above, after the ſprinkling of the inward Altar, was pour'd out toward the foundation on the weſt of the outward Altar. And the blood that was over and above at the outward Altar was pour'd out at the foot of it on the South-ſide, and both the one and the other meeting together ran down through a conveyance under ground into the brook Kidron. ונמכרין לגננין לובר ומועלין בהן And was ſold to the Gardeners to dung their Gardens with, which having bought they us'd for that purpoſe c. b Bava kamah, cap. 7. ad fin. c Joma, fol. 58. 2.

For the blood having been once dedicated to ſacred uſe, might not be put to any common uſe without treſpaſs, ſo that the Gardeners paid ſo much money for it as would purchaſe a treſpaſs-offering.

VERS. III.

Μετὰ φανῶν καὶ λαμπάδων. With Lanthorns and Torches.

THE Talm. באבוקות ולפידים now what אבוקות φανὸς ſhould ſignifie, we may make a gueſs out of Succah d, They danced [that is, in the Feaſt of Tabernacles] holding in their hand אבוקות של אור burning Torches. The Gloſs is, They threw up their Torches into the air, and caught them again in their hands; and ſome there were ſo great artiſts in this exerciſe, they could do it, ſome with four, others with eight Torches at once, throwing up one, and catching another. d Fol. 51. 2.

VERS. X.

Μάλχος. Malcus.

A Name very much in uſe amongſt the Jews, Malluch, Nehem. X. 4, 27. Μάλχος Ἄραψ e, Malchus the Arabian. This was alſo the name of that implacable enemy to Chriſtianity, Porphyrius, and of his father before him. So Luke Holſteine in the life of Porphyrius, where he reckons up more of that name. e Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 13. 9.

Chriſt had ſtroke thoſe to the ground that came to apprehend him by the power of his Word that he might thereby provide for the flight of his Diſciples, and ſhew his own Divine power; they getting up again accoſt him, Judas kiſſeth him, they lay hands upon him, and then Peter draws his ſword, &c.

VERS.

VERS. XIII.

Πρὸς Ἄνναν πρῶτον. To Annas first.

FOR Annas was Father-in-law to Caiaphas, as alſo סגן דכהנים the Sagan of the Prieſts, Luk. III. 2. סגן כהניה Targ. in 2 King. XXIII. 4. Now Sagan was the ſame with הממונה the Prefect or Ruler, which we have ſo frequent mention of amongſt the Rabbins.

f Joma, cap. 3. hal. 1. אמר להם הממונה The Ruler ſaith unto them. Gloſs. ממונה הוא סגן The Ruler is the Sagan g. סגן היינו ממונה Sagan is the ſame with Ruler.

g Sanhedr. fol. 19. 1. There is frequent mention amongſt the Talmudiſts of R. Ananias סגן הכהנים the Sagan of the Prieſts h: He was deſtroy'd with Rabban Simeon, and Iſmael, at the ſiege of Jeruſalem i. But I am apt to think he was that ſharp and unjuſt Judg that St. Paul had to do with Act. XXIII. rather than our Annas in this place.

h Joma, fol. 8. 1. i Shekalim, cap. 6. hal. 1, &c. i Tſemach David, & Juchaſin, fol. 57. Why they ſhould carry our Saviour when they had taken him before Annas the Sagan, ſooner than to Caiaphas the High Prieſt, the Evangeliſt gives us one reaſon, viz. becauſe he was Father-in-law to Caiaphas; under which another reaſon may be deduced, viz. that he was the older man, of greater experience and skill in the Law; for there were ſometimes ſome High Prieſts that were very unlearned fellows, as may be gather'd from that ſuppoſition in Joma k, If the High Prieſt be a wiſe man, he expounds, if not they expound to him. If he be accuſtom'd to reading, he reads himſelf, if not, they read before him.

But for the Sagan of the Prieſts it was very neceſſary he ſhould be a man of learning, becauſe his charge was about the things and ſervice of the Temple, and was bound to be always aſſiſtant and preſent there, when the High Prieſt was ſeldom there, or convers'd in thoſe affairs.

Juchaſin and Aruch, לא היה ממונה לכהונה גדולה עד שנעשה סגן No one could by right be promoted to the High Prieſthood, unleſs he had firſt been Sagan. A good cautelous proviſion indeed, that ſo in the time of their Saganſhip they might gain experience in the Laws and Rituals, and might be the better fitted for the High Prieſts Chair. But when it came to that paſs that perſons were made High Prieſts for their money, and not for their deſerts, it might eaſily happen that very unlearned wretches might ſometimes poſſeſs that ſeat. And perhaps Caiphas himſelf was of this ſtamp.

It ſeems therefore that they led Jeſus to Annas firſt, that Caiaphas might be directed by his counſel; himſelf being but little verſed in things of this nature might proceed in this affair by the ſteerage of his Father-in-law. And let this High Prieſt pardon me if I aſcribe that ſentence of his, It is expedient that one man ſhould die for the people, and not that the whole Nation periſh, not to his prudence and gravity, but to his raſhneſs and cruelty; although the Holy Spirit directed it to its proper end which the High Prieſt himſelf did not dream of.

There might be another reaſon why they led Chriſt before Annas firſt, but that I ſhall ſpeak of anon.

Ὃς ἦν Ἀρχιερεὺς τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου. Who was the High Prieſt that ſame year.

If the Gloſs I had upon theſe very ſame words, Chap. XI. 51. will not ſo well fit here, as they did there, we may add this alſo, which will ſuit well enough in both places; that is, that there was ſo great a viciſſitude and change in the High Prieſthood, there being a new High Prieſt almoſt every year, that it was not unneceſſary to ſet down this particular circumſtance, Caiaphas was High Prieſt for that year.

l Joma, fol. 9. 1. l In the ſecond Temple which ſtood but 420 years, there were more than three hundred High Prieſts within that time. Of theſe 420 years deduct thoſe forty wherein Simeon the Juſt miniſtred, and thoſe eighty wherein Johanan ſat, and thoſe ten wherein Iſmael ben Phabi, and as it is ſaid, thoſe eleven wherein Eleazar ben Harſom govern'd, and then reckon and you will find that hardly any other High Prieſt ſat out his whole year.

m Fol. 189. 1. But this number of High Prieſts is very much leſſen'd in Vajicra rabba m, Under the firſt Temple, becauſe they that ſerv'd therein ſerved in the truth; there were but eighteen High Prieſts, the Father, and Son, and Grandſon ſucceſſively. But under the ſecond Temple when that honour came to be obtain'd by money [there are alſo that ſay how they murder'd one another by charms and witchcrafts] there were fourſcore High Prieſts ſerv'd in that time; fourſcore and one, ſay ſome; fourſcore and two ſay others, and there are that ſay fourſcore and four. Amongſt theſe, Simeon the Juſt ſat forty years; but when the place was bought and ſold, the years of enjoying it were cut ſhort. The ſtory goes of one that ſent his Son with two buſhels of ſilver, [to purchaſe the High Prieſts office] and the buſhels themſelves were ſilver. Another ſent his Son with two buſhels of gold, and the buſhels themſelves were of gold too.

As

As to this difference of numbers we will not much trouble our heads about it; perhaps the Gemariſts might reckon the Sagans together with the High Prieſts, for they were indeed deputed to miniſter in their ſtead, if any uncleanneſs had happen'd to them. Let there be fourſcore High Prieſts or thereabouts, it is certain, that ſo frequent were the changes and ſucceſſions amongſt them that the High Prieſt of this year was hardly ſo the year that went before or that follow'd after. Although indeed in this Caiaphas it was ſomething otherwiſe, yet did the Evangeliſt juſtly and properly enough add this clauſe, That he was the High Prieſt for that year, thereby tacitely noting the common ſtate of affairs as to the office of High Prieſt at that time.

VERS. XV.

Ἠκολούθει δὲ τῷ Ἰησοῦ Σίμων Πέτρος, &c. And Simon Peter follow'd Jeſus, &c.

THERE are ſome that apprehend in this place ſome interruption in the order of the ſtory, they would therefore have the 24 ver. weav'd in here. Annas ſent Jeſus bound to Caiaphas, becauſe what is here related, and ſo on, ſeems all to have been done in Caiaphas his Hall, and not in Annas's.

This order the Syr. Arab. Interpreters and others do ſtill obſerve; Nonnus, Carthuſ. Bez. and as he quotes him, St. Cyril invert it. It is true, there is here a tacit tranſition, and a trajection of the words in ver. 24. which is not very uſual; but neither the one nor the other ſeems to be without ſome reaſon for it.

I. It is told us, Mat. XXVI. 56. and Mark XIV. 50. That all his Diſciples forſook him and fled. So that probably Peter and that other Diſciple was amongſt the number, when it is ſaid, they all fled; the tranſition of our Evangeliſt therefore ſeems to teach us, that neither Peter, nor the other Diſciple follow'd Chriſt to Annas his houſe, but being ſurpriz'd and confounded with a very great fear, hid themſelves for a while, and (not till after ſome time) recollecting themſelves, they put forward amongſt the crowd to Caiaphas his Hall, or elſe came thither after them.

II. Annas alone could determine nothing judicially concerning Chriſt; for when an enquiry muſt be made concerning his Diſciples, and the nature of his Doctrines, when witneſſes muſt be produc'd pro and con; this neceſſarily requir'd a Seſſion of the Sanhedrin. He ſent him therefore to Caiaphas where the Sanhedrin alſo was, and the Evangeliſt lets the mention of that alone till he came to relate their way of proceeding.

But why or by what right ſhould Annas be abſent from the Sanhedrin? Could there be any right or legal proceeding in the Great Council, if the whole number of Seventy one Elders were not compleat? Let Maimonides give the anſwer n, It is not neceſſary that the whole Bench of Seventy one ſhould all ſit together in their places in the Temple, when it is neceſſary for them all to meet let them be call'd together, באשר העתות but at other times if any one of them have any buſineſs of his own, he may go out and do his affairs and return again. This proviſion is made that there might never be fewer than Twenty three ſitting together during the whole Seſſion. If any have occaſion to go forth let him look about him, and ſee if there be Twenty three of his Colleagues in the Court, then he may go out, if not, he muſt ſtay till ſome other enter. We give another reaſon of Annas his abſence by and by.

n In Sanhedr. cap. 3.

Ὁ δὲ μαθητὴς ἐκεῖνος ἦν γνωστὸς τῷ Ἀρχιερεῖ. That Diſciple was known unto the High Prieſt.

Nonnus ſuppoſes that other Diſciple known to the High Prieſt, Ἰχθυοβόλος ἐὼν τέχνης, from his fiſhing trade; others gueſs other reaſons; but to determine any thing in this matter would look raſhly. However this knowledg of the High Prieſt came about, it is certain this Diſciple had the greater opportunity ללמד עליו וזכות to have ſtood in the defence of his Maſter as a witneſs in his behalf. For,

o דיני נפשות פותחין לזכות ואין פותחין לחובה Capital judgments begin always on the defendants ſide, and not on the accuſers. It is lawful for all to plead on the defendants ſide, not ſo of the accuſers.

o Sanhedr. fol. 32. 1.

p They begin on the defendants ſide. One of the witneſſes ſaith, יש לי ללמד עליו זכות I have ſomething to ſay in his defence. If any of his Diſciples ſay, I have wherewith to accuſe him, משתקין אותו they enjoyn him ſilence. If the Diſciple ſay, I can offer ſomething in his defence, they call him up, and place him among themſelves, and ſuffer him not to go down thence the whole day after.

p Ibid. fol. 40. 1.

Did they thus proceed with our Saviour? did they endeavour firſt for the clearing his innocency, and were there any witneſſes produc'd for this purpoſe? If ſo, then here were Peter and that other Diſciple, who could have witneſs'd in his behalf, but Peter denies that he ever knew him.

VERS. XVIII.

Ὅτι ψῦχος ἦν. For it was cold.

IT was the very dead of night, almoſt at Cock-crowing. Our Country-man Bidulph, who was at Jeruſalem, at the very time when they were wont to celebrate the Paſsover, gives us the reaſon of this cold by his own experience. He acknowledgeth indeed that he found it ſo hot at that time, as we uſually feel it in our own Country about Mid-ſummer, that he could not but wonder how Peter at that time of the year ſhould be ſo cold, but within a few days his doubt was reſolved, for there were mighty dews fell, which not being wholly dryed up by the Sun, made it very cold, eſpecially in the night, &c.

Nay the Traditional Fathers ſuppoſe there may be Froſt and Snow in the time of Paſs-q Maimon. Kiddush hodeſh c. 4. over, by that Canon of theirs, q They do not intercalate the year לא מפני שלג ולא מפני הצנה either for Snow or for Froſt.

The intercalation of the year reſpected chiefly the Paſchal ſolemnity; namely that by the interpoſing of the intercalated month, all things might be ripe, and fit for that Feaſt. If when it came to the month Niſan, the Barley was not yet ripe enough to offer the ſheaf of the firſt-fruits, then they put a month between, which they called the ſecond Adar. So, if the ways were ſo bad, that people could not travel up to Jeruſalem; if the Bridges were ſo broken, that they could not paſs the Rivers; they intercalated or put a month between, that at the coming in of the month Niſan, every thing might be ready that was requiſite for the Paſchal ſolemnity. But if Froſt or Snow ſhould happen when Niſan was entring in its ordinary courſe, they did not put a month between upon that account. From whence it is plain that Froſt and Snow did ſometimes happen at that time.

VERS. XXI.

Ἐπερώτησον τοὺς ἀκηκοότας. Ask them that heard me.

JESUS ſeems to appeal to the common right and rule amongſt themſelves. He deſires that the witneſſes in behalf of the defendant might be heard firſt. [But who, Alas! was there that durſt witneſs for him?] It is ſaid indeed, That the Chief Prieſts, and Elders, and whole Council ſought falſe witneſs againſt him, Matth. XXVI. 59. But did they ſeek for any true witneſs on his ſide? or do they indeed deal with the witneſſes againſt him, as their cuſtoms obliged them to have done? did they ſearch their teſtimony by a ſtrict and ſevere Examination, did they terrifie them מאימין or by grave Exhortations r Sanhedr. c. 4. admoniſh them to ſay nothing but the truth? This by right ought to have been done. r But we have reaſon to ſuppoſe it was not done.

VERS. XXVIII.

Ἀλλ' ἵνα φάγωσι τὸ Πάσχα. But that they might eat the Paſsover.

I. WE have already ſhewn in our Notes upon Mark XIV. 12. that the eating of the Paſchal Lamb, was never upon any occaſion whatever transferred from the Evening of the fourteenth day drawing to the cloſe of it; no not by reaſon of the Sabbath, or any uncleanneſs that had happened to the Congregation; ſo that there needs little argument to aſſure us, that the Jews eat the Lamb at the ſame time wherein Chriſt did. Only let me add this: Suppoſe they had entred Pilate's Houſe, and had defiled themſelves by entring the houſe of an Heathen, yet might not that defilement come under the predicament of טבול יום? If ſo, then they might waſh themſelves in the evening and be clean enough to eat the Paſchal Lamb, if it had been to have been eaten on that evening, but they had eaten it the evening before.

II. Τὸ Πάσχα, The Paſsover, therefore here doth not ſignifie the Paſchal Lamb, but the Paſchal Chagigah, of which we will remark theſe two or three things:

1. Deut. XVI. 2. וזבחת פסח Thou ſhalt Sacrifice the Paſsover unto the Lord thy God, of the Flock and the Herd. Where R. Solomon, The Flocks are meant of the Lambs and the Kids; the Herd, of the Chagigah. And R. Bechai in loc. The Flocks לחובת פסח are for the due of the Paſsover; the Herd לשלמי חגיגה for the Sacrifices of the Chagigah. So alſo R. Nachman. The Herd לחוג חגיגה for the celebration of the Chagigah. Peſachin *. צאן זה פסח The Flock for the Paſsover, בקר זו חגיגה the Oxen for the Chagigah.

* Fol. 70. 2.

Where

Where the Gloſs, Pag. 1. Doth not th Paſsover conſiſt wholly of Lambs and Kids? Exod. XII. 5. If ſo, why is it ſaid בקר Oxen? To equal every thing that is uſed in the Paſsover. מה פסח דבר שהוא חובה As the Paſsover [i. e. the Paſchal Lamb] is of due, and is not taken but מן החולין out of the common Flocks [neither from the firſt born, nor from the tenths] ſo this alſo [i. e. of the Oxen] is of due, and not taken, but out of the common Herd. See 2 Chron. XXX. 24, &c. and XXXV. 8, 9.

2. The Chagigah was for joy and mirth, according to that in Deut. XVI. 14. And thou ſhalt rejoyce in the Feaſt, &c. Hence the Sacrifices that were prepared for that uſe, are called שלמי שמחה Sacrifices of Peace, or Euchariſtick Offerings, Sacrifices of joy and mirth.

3. The proper time of bringing the Chagigah, was the fifteenth day of the Month. Aruch in חג they eat, and drank, and rejoyced, and were bound to bring their Sacrifice of Chagigah, on the fifteenth day. i e. The firſt day of the Feaſt, &c.

There might be a time indeed when they brought their Chagigah on the fourteenth day, but this was not ſo uſual, and then it was under certain conditions. ſ When is it that they bring the Chagigah at the ſame time with the Lamb? בזמן שהוא בא בחול בטהורה ובמועט When it comes on another day in the week, and not on the Sabbath, when it is clean, and when it is ſmall. Let the Gloſs explain the laſt clauſe, and for the two former we ſhall do that our ſelves. ſ Peſachia, fol. 89. 2.

במועט If the Lamb be leſs than what will ſatisfie the whole company, then they make ready their Chagigah, eating that firſt, and then the Lamb, &c. And the reaſon is given by another Gloſſer, viz. That the appetites of thoſe that eat might be pretty well ſatisfied, before they begin the Lamb; for if they ſhould fall upon the Lamb firſt, it being ſo very ſmall, and the company numerous and hungry, they would be in danger of breaking the bones, whiles they gnaw it ſo greedily.

For this and other reaſons the Rabbins account the Chagigah of the fourteenth day to be many degrees leſs perfect, than that of the fifteenth, but it would be very tedious to quote their Ventilations about it. Take only theſe few inſtances.

t R. Iſſai ſaith, the Chagigah on the fourteenth day, is not our duty. And a little after, R. Eliezer ſaith, by the Peace-Offerings, which they ſlay on the evening of the Feaſt, a man doth not his duty, either as to rejoycing, or as to Chagigah. t Peſachim ubi ſupr.

And now let us return to the words of our Evangeliſt.

III. It was the fifteenth day of the Month, when the Fathers of the Council refuſed to enter into the Pretorium, leſt they ſhould be defiled; for they would eat the Paſsover; that is the Chagigah.

1. The Evangeliſt expreſſeth it, after the common way of ſpeaking, when he calls it the Paſsover. u It is written, Obſerve the Month Abib: ועשית פסח And keep the Paſsover. שיהו כל עשיותיו לשם פסח That all that you do, may go under the denomination of the Paſsover. עגל ופר ששחטן לשום פסח The Calf and the young Bullock which they kill in the name of the Paſsover. Or, for the Paſsover. Whence we may obſerve, The Calf is the Paſsover, as well as the Lamb. u Zevachim, fol. 7. 2. x Menacoth, fol. 3. 1.

2. The Elders of the Sanhedrin prepare, and oblige themſelves to eat the Chagigah [the Paſsover] on that day, becauſe the next day was the Sabbath; and the Chagigah muſt not make void the Sabbath.

חגיגה אין דוחה את השבת The Chagigah doth not ſet aſide the Sabbath. Hence that we quoted before, that the Chagigah was not to be brought upon the Sabbath day, as alſo not in caſe of uncleanneſs: becauſe however the Chagigah, and defilement might ſet aſide the Paſsover, yet it might not the Sabbath. y Peſachim ubi ſupr.

VERS. XXXI.

Ἡμῖν οὐκ ἔξεστιν ἀποκτεῖναι οὐδένα. It is not lawful for us to put any man to death.

DOTH Pilate jeſt or deride them, when he bids them take him and judge him according to their own Law? It cannot be denied but that all capital judgment, or ſentence upon life, had been taken from the Jews, for above forty years before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, as they oftentimes themſelves confeſs. But how came this to paſs? It is commonly received, that the Romans, at this time the Jews Lords and Maſters, had taken from all their Courts a power and capacity of judging the capital matters. We have ſpoken largely upon this ſubject in our Notes upon Matth. XXVI. 3. Let us ſuperadd a few things here.

z Rabh Cahna ſaith, when R. Iſmael bar Joſe lay ſick, they ſent to him ſaying, pray, Sir, tell us two or three things, which thou didſt once tell us in the name of thy Father. He ſaith to them, an hundred and fourſcore years, before the deſtruction of the Temple, the wicked Kingdom [the Roman Empire] reigned over Iſrael, fourſcore years before the deſtruction of z Avodah Zarah, fol. 8. 2.

the Temple, גזרו טומאה על ארץ העמים they [the Fathers of the Sanhedrin] determined about the uncleanneſs of the Heathen Land, and about Glaſs Veſſels. Forty years before the deſtruction of the Temple, the Sanhedrin removed, and ſate in the Taberne. What is the meaning of this Tradition? Rabh Iſaac bar Abdimi ſaith, they did not judge דיני קנסות judgments of Mulcts. The Gloſs is, Thoſe are the judgments about fining any that offered violence, that entice a maid, and the price of a Servant ----- When therefore they did not ſit in the room Gazith, they did not judge about theſe things, and ſo thoſe judgments about mulcts or fines ceaſed.

Here we have one part of their judiciary power loſt; not taken away from them by the Romans, but falling of it ſelf, as it were, out of the hands of the Sanhedrin. Nor did the Romans indeed take away their power of judging in capital matters, but they by their own oſcitancy, ſupine, and unreaſonable lenity loſt it themſelves. For ſo the Gemara goes on.

Rabh Nachman bar Iſaac ſaith, Let him not ſay that they did not judge judgments of Mulcts, for they did not judge capital judgments neither. And whence comes this? כיון דחזו דנפישי להו רוצחין ולא יכלי למידן When they ſaw that ſo many Murders and Homicides multiplied upon them, that they could not well judge and call them to account, they ſaid it is better for us that we remove from place to place. כי היכי דלא לחייב For how can we otherwiſe [ſitting here, and not puniſhing them] not contract a guilt upon our ſelves?

They thought themſelves obliged to puniſh Murderers whiles they ſate in the room Gazith שהמקום גורם, for the place it ſelf engaged them to it. They are the words of the Gemaritts. Upon which the Gloſs. The room Gazith was half of it within and half of it without the Holy place. The reaſon of which was, that it was requiſite, that the Council ſhould ſit near the Divine Majeſty. Hence it is that they ſay, whoever conſtitutes an unfit Judge, is as if he planted a Grove by the Altar of the Lord, as it is written, Judges and Officers ſhalt thou make thee: and it follows preſently after, thou ſhalt not plant thee a Grove near the Altar of the Lord thy God, Deut. XVI. 18, 21. They removed therefore from Gazith, and ſate in the Taberne: Now though the Taberne were upon the mountain of the Temple, yet they did not ſit ſo near the Divine Majeſty there, as they did when they ſate in the room Gazith.

Let us now in order put the whole matter together.

I. The Sanhedrin were moſt ſtupidly and unreaſonably remiſs in their puniſhment of capital offendors, going upon this reaſon eſpecially, that they accounted it ſo horrible a thing to ſentence an Iſraelite to death. Forſooth, he is of the ſeed of Abraham, of the blood and ſtock of Iſrael, and you muſt have a care how you touch ſuch an one!

[a] a R. Eliezer b. R. Simeon, had laid hold on ſome Thieves. R. Joſhua b. Korchah ſent to him, ſaying, חמץ בן יין O thou Vinegar, the Son of good Wine, [i. e. O thou wicked Son of a good Father] How long wilt thou deliver the people of God to the ſlaughter! He anſwered and ſaid, מכלה קוצים מן הכרם I root the Thornes out of the Vineyard: to whom the other; Let the Lord of the Vineyard come and root them out himſelf. It is worth noting, that the very thieves of Iſrael, are the people of God, and O they muſt not be touched by any means, but referred to the judgment of God himſelf.

[b] b When R. Iſmael b. R. Joſe was conſtituted a Magiſtrate by the King, there happened ſome ſuch thing to him, for Elias himſelf rebuked him ſaying, how long wilt thou deliver over the people of God to ſlaughter! Hence that which we alledged elſewhere. [c] c The Sanhedrin that happens to ſentence any one to death within the ſpace of ſeven years, is called a deſtroyer. R. Eleazar ben Azariah ſaith, it is ſo, if they ſhould but condemn one within ſeventy years.

[c] Maccoth, fol. 7. 1.

II. It is obvious to any one how this fooliſh remiſſneſs, and letting looſe the reins of judgment, would ſoon encreaſe the numbers of Robbers, Murderers, and all kind of wickedneſs: and indeed they did ſo abundantly multiply, that the Sanhedrin neither could nor durſt, as it ought, call the Criminals to account. The Laws ſlept whiles wickedneſs was in the height of its Revels, and punitive juſtice was ſo out of countenance, that as to uncertain murders they made no ſearch, and certain ones, they framed no judgment againſt.

[d] d Since the time that Homicides multiplied, the beheading the Heifer ceaſed. And in the place before quoted in Avodah e When they ſaw the numbers of Murderers ſo greatly encreaſe, that they could not ſit in judgment upon them, they ſaid, let us remove, &c.

[e] Fol. 8. 2.

So in the caſe of Adultery, which we alſo obſerved in our Notes upon Chap. VIII. [f] f Since the time that Adultery ſo openly advanced, under the ſecond Temple, they left off trying the Adultereſs, by the bitter water, &c.

[f] Maimon. in Sotah, cap. 3.

So that we ſee the liberty of judging in capital matters was no more taken from the Jews by the Romans, than the beheading of the Heifer, or the tryal of the ſuſpected Wife by the bitter waters was taken away by them; which no one will affirm. But rather.

III. When

III. When the Sanhedrin ſaw that it was in vain to ſtruggle againſt the mighty torrent and inundation of all manner of wickedneſs, that played Rex and encroached ſo faſt upon them, and that the interpoſure of their authority could do nothing in ſuppreſſing them, they being uncapable of paſſing judgment as they ought, they determine not to ſit in judgment at all: And whereas they thought themſelves bound by the Majeſty and awfulneſs of the place, while they ſate in the Room Gazith [In the very Court of Iſrael before the Altar] to judge according to the ſacredneſs of the place, but could not indeed do it, by reaſon of the daring pride and reſolution of the Criminals, they threw themſelves out of that apartment, and went further off into the place where the Exchangers ſhops were kept in the Court of the Gentiles, and ſo to other places which we find mentioned in Roſh haſhanah. * * Fol. 31. 1.

IV. It is diſputed whether they ever returned to their firſt place Gazith, or no. It is affirmed by the Gloſs in Avodah Zarah g. When for a time they found it abſolutely neceſſary, they betook themſelves again to that room. We have the ſame alſo elſewhere upon this Tradition. g Fol. 8. 2.

h It is a Tradition of R. Chaia. From the day wherein the Temple was deſtroyed, though the Sanhedrin ceaſed, yet the four kinds of death [which were wont to be inflicted by the Sanhedrin] did not ceaſe. For he that had deſerved to be ſtoned to death, he either fell off from ſome houſe, or ſome wild Beaſt tore and devoured him. He that had deſerved burning, he either fell into ſome fire, or ſome Serpent bit him. He that had deſerved to be ſlain, [i. e. with the Sword] was either delivered into the hands of an heathen King, or was murdered by Robbers. He that had deſerved ſtrangling, was either drowned in ſome River, or choaked by a ſquinancy. h Chemubb. fol. 30. 1.

But it may be objected, why is it ſaid, From the time that the Temple was deſtroyed, and not, forty years before the deſtruction of the Temple? To this the Gloſs anſwereth: Sometimes according to the urgency and neceſſity of the time, the Sanhedrin returned to the room Gazith, &c. It is further excepted ומשנמ דיני נפשות ברציחה לא היו חוזרין לעולם But they never returned to ſit in capital cauſes, or to try Murders. For the reaſon of their removal at firſt was, becauſe the numbers of Homicides ſo encreaſt upon them, &c.

V. When the great Council did not ſit in Gazith, all Courts for capital matters ceaſed every where elſe. One Gloſs ſaith thus: They took no cogniſance of capital matters in any of the leſſer Seſſions, ſo long as the great Sanhedrin did not ſit in the room Gazith. Another ſaith: What time the great Sanhedrin ſate in its proper place, where it ought, near the Altar; then thou ſhalt make thee Judges in all thy Gates, to judge in capital cauſes: but when that removed, then all cogniſance about thoſe matters ceaſed.

VI. The Sanhedrin removed, as we have already ſeen, from Gazith, forty years before Jeruſalem was deſtroyed: and this is the very thing that was ſaid, forty years before the deſtruction of the City, judgment in capital cauſes was taken away from them. And now let the Reader judge, what ſhould be the reaſon of their being deprived of this priviledge; whether the Romans were in fault, or whether rather the Jews, nay the Sanhedrin it ſelf had not brought it upon themſelves. When the Sanhedrin flitted from Gazith, all judgment of this kind vaniſhed; and upon what reaſons they did thus flit, we have learnt from their own Pens.

We will not contend about the time when theſe forty years ſhould firſt begin; though I am apt to think they might begin about half a year before Chriſt's death. The words which we have under conſideration, ſpoken by the Sanhedrin to Pilate, ſeem to referr wholly to the reaſon we have already mentioned. It is not lawful for us to put any man to death. Why is it not lawful? Becauſe being forced by the neceſſity of the times, we retired from the Room Gazith, where if we ſit not, neither we our ſelves nor any Court under us can take any cogniſance of cauſes of life and death.

But what neceſſity of times could urge you to remove? So greatly did the Criminals multiply, and grew to ſuch an head, that we neither could, nor durſt animadvert upon them, according to what the Majeſty of the place might expect and require from us, if we ſhould ſit in Gazith.

That muſt be obſerved from the Evangeliſts, that when they had had Chriſt in examination in the Palace of the High-Prieſt all night, in the morning the whole Sanhedrin met, that they might paſs Sentence of Death upon him. Where then was this that they met? Queſtionleſs in the Room Gazith, at leaſt if they adhered to their own rules and conſtitutions; Thither they betook themſelves ſometimes upon urgent neceſſity. The Gloſs before quoted excepts only the caſe of murder, which amongſt all their falſe accuſations they never charged Chriſt with.

But however, ſuppoſe it were granted, that the great Council met either in the Taberne, or ſome other place, (which yet by no means agreed with their own Tradition) did they deal truly, and as the matter really and indeed was, with Pilate when they tell him, it is not lawful for us to put any man to death? He had ſaid to them, Take ye him, and and judge him according to your Laws We have indeed Judged and Condemned him, but we cannot put any one to death. Was this that they ſaid, in fact true? how came they then to ſtone the Protomartyr Stephen? How came they to ſtone Ben Sarda at Lydda i? How came they to burn the Prieſt's Daughter alive, that was taken in Adultery k?

i Hieroſ. Sanhedr. fol. 25. 4. k Bab. Sanhedr. fol. 52. 1. & Jachaſin, fol. 51. 1.

It is probable they had not put any one to death as yet, ſince the time that they had removed out of Gazith, and ſo might the eaſilier perſwade Pilate in that caſe: But their great deſign was to throw off the odium of Chriſt's death from themſelves, at leaſt amongſt the vulgar crowd, fearing them, if the Council themſelves ſhould have decreed his Execution, They ſeek this evaſion therefore which did not altogether want ſome colour and pretext of truth: and it ſucceeded according to what they did deſire, Divine Providence ſo ordering it, as the Evangeliſt intimates, verſ. 32. That the ſaying of Jeſus might be fulfilled, which he ſpake ſignifying what death he ſhould dye. That is, be Crucified according to the cuſtom of the Romans.

Whiles I am upon this thought, I cannot but reflect upon that paſſage, than which nothing is more worthy obſervation, in the whole deſcription of the Roman Beaſt in the Revelations, Chap. XIII. 4. The Dragon which gave power to the Beaſt. We cannot ſay this of the Aſſyrian, Babyloniſh, or any other Monarchy, for the Holy Scriptures do not ſay it. But reaſon dictates, and the event it ſelf tells us that there was ſomething acted by the Roman Empire in behalf of the Dragon, which was not compatible with any other, that is, the putting of the Son of God to death. Which thing we muſt remember, as often as we recite that Article of our Creed, He ſuffered under Pontius Pilate, that is, was put to death by the Roman Empire.

VERS. XXXVII.

Τί ἔστιν ἀλήθεια; What is truth?

CHRIST had ſaid, For this end came I into the world, that I might bear witneſs to the truth. q. d. I will not deny but that I am a King, as thou haſt ſaid, for, for this end I came that I might bear witneſs to the truth, whatever hazards I ſhould run upon that account. Upon this Pilate asks him, what is Truth? that is, what is the true ſtate of this affair? That thou who art ſo poor a wretch ſhouldſt call thy ſelf a King, and at the ſame time that thou calleſt thy ſelf a King, yet ſaieſt thy Kingdom is not of this world. Where lyes the true ſenſe and meaning of this riddle?

But ſuppoſing when Chriſt ſaid he came that he might bear witneſs to the truth, he meant in general, the Goſpel: then Pilate asks him, what is that truth? However, the Evangeliſt mentions nothing, either whether our Saviour gave him any anſwer to that queſtion, or whether indeed Pilate ſtayed in expectation of any anſwer from him.

CHAP. XIX.

VERS. II.

Πλέξαντες στέφανον ἐξ ἀκανθῶν, &c. Platted a Crown of Thorns, &c.

ALmoſt unqueſtionable token this, that Chriſt's Kingdom was not of this world, when he was crowned only with Thorns and Briars, which were the curſe of this Earth, Gen. III. 18. Herod had put upon him a purple Robe, Luke XXIII. 11. and the Souldiers added this Crown. It is likewiſe ſaid that they alſo clothed him with this Robe, that is, after he had been ſtripped, in order to be ſcourged.

VERS. XIII.

Εἰς τόπον λεγόμενον λιθόστρωτον. In a place that is called the Pavement.

WHAT is it could be objected againſt it, ſhould we ſay that the Evangeliſt by this title of the Pavement, ſhould mean the room Gazith where the Sanhedrin ſate? And that when the Jews would not go into Pilate's Judgment-Hall, he would himſelf go into theirs?

Ariſteas

Ariſteas tells us concerning the Temple, that it looked toward the Eaſt, the back parts of it towards the Weſt, τὸ δὲ πᾶν ἔδαφος λιθόστρωτον καλῶς, but the floor was all paved with ſtone. To this the Talmudiſts all witneſs, and to the pavement, eſpecially, Joſephus by a memorable ſtory: l One Julian a Centurion in Titus his Army, purſuing and killing the Jews, with infinite hardneſs and ſtrength, in the very Court of the Temple, having many and very ſharp nails faſtned to the bottom of his ſhooes, ὥσπερ τῶν ἄλλων στρατιωτῶν ἕκαστος, as every other ſouldier had; καὶ κατὰ λιθόστρωτος τρέχων, and running along upon the pavement his heels tripped up and he fell backward, &c.

l De Excid. lib. 6. cap. 6.

But had not the room Gazith a Pavement laid in a more than ordinary manner? whence elſe had it its name? It is called לשכת גזית the room Gazith, ſaith Aruch, becauſe it was paved with ſmooth ſquare ſtone. Were not all the other places ſo too?

m They diſtinguiſh between גויל and גזית and כפיסת and לבינת that is, Bricks, and half Bricks, ſquared hewn ſtones, and rough or unhewn. Now therefore when there were ſo many apartments about the Courts, were thoſe all paved with rough Stone or Bricks, and this only of ſquare and hewn Stone? without doubt, the whole building was much more uniform; And then we ſhall hardly find out any more probable reaſon why this place was particularly and above all other Rooms, called Gazith, but, that it was laid with a more noble and rich pavement than all the reſt. And therefore what ſhould forbid, that λιθόστρωτον the pavement in this place ſhould not be meant of the room Gazith?

m Bava Mezia fol. 117. 2. & Bathra, fol. 2. 1.

Object. But Gazith was in the Holy place, and it was not lawful for Pilate being a Gentile, to enter there.

Sol. I. If he would do it per fas & nefas, who could hinder him?

II. It is a queſtion whether he could not ſit in that Room, and yet be within the bounds of the Court of the Gentiles, into which it was lawful for a Gentile to enter. Half of that Room indeed was within the Court of Iſrael, but there, the Fathers of the Council themſelves did not ſit, becauſe it was lawful for none to ſit in that Court but the King only: The other half part in which they ſate, was in Chel, and extended it ſelf, as it ſhould ſeem, into the Court of the Gentiles. For if חל was but ten cubits breadth within the Walls n it would be much too narrow a room, for ſeventy men to ſit in, if the Gazith did not extend it ſelf a little within the Court of the Gentiles.

n Middoth, cap. 2. hal. 3.

Ἑβραϊστὶ δὲ Γαββαθᾶ. But in the Hebrew, Gabbatha.

The Syriack renders it by גפיפתא a mound, or fence: which may fall in with what we have ſaid. For חל Chel, in which was part of this Room, was the fence to all the Courts, excepting the Court of the Gentiles.

But let us ſee whether Γαββαθᾶ is Hebrew for λιθόστρωτον or no. That גב Gab, amongſt other things ſignifies a ſurface, doth not ſtand in need of much proof: and ſo the pavement and ſurface of the floor are convertible. And as that Room might be peculiarly called Gazith in the antient Jewiſh language, upon the account of its pavement; ſo might it in their more modern language be called גבא or גבתא for the ſame reaſon. What if that in Jeruſalem Sanhedrin o וקניהם שהיו יושבין על גב מעלה בהר הבית ſhould be rendred, the Elders that ſit in the upper Gab in the mount of the Temple? But we will not contend.

Γύναι ἴδε ὁ υἱός σου. Woman behold thy Son.

y Maimon. in אישות c. 18.

I. y אלמנה ניזונית בנכסי יורשין The Widow is maintained by the goods of the heirs [of him that is deceaſed] ſo long as ſhe remain a Widow, till ſhe receive her dower.

II. Joſeph being deceaſed, and Jeſus now dying, there were no heirs, and probably no Goods or Eſtate, for the ſupport and maintenance of his Mother Mary: This Chriſt at his laſt breath takes particular care of; and probably had made proviſion before; for it is hardly conceivable, that this was the firſt overture he had with St. John in this affair, but but that had obtained a promiſe from him in his Mother's behalf ſome time before this. And hence perhaps that peculiar love he bore to him beyond all the reſt. So that thoſe words, Woman behold thy Son, and on the other ſide to him, behold thy Mother, ſeem no other than as if he had ſaid, This man, from the time that thou art now deprived of thy Son, ſhall be in the ſtead of a Son to thee, and ſhall cheriſh and provide for thee; and ſo vice versâ to his Diſciple John.

VERS. XXIX.

Σκεῦος ἦν ἔκειτο ὄξους μεστὸν. There was ſet a Veſſel full of Vinegar.

BUT was not this an unuſual and uncuſtomary thing, that there ſhould be a Veſſel filled with Vinegar? ſhould it not have been rather οἴνῳ ἐσμυρνισμένῳ with Myrrhate Wine, or Wine mingled with Myrrhe? as it is Mark XV. 23.

It ſeems evident from the other Evangeliſts, that our Saviour had the proffer of ſomething to drink, at two ſeveral times.

I. Before he was nailed to the Croſs, Matth. XXVII. 33, 34. When they were come to a place called Golgotha, ----- they gave him Vinegar to drink, mingled with gall, ----- Verſ. 35. And they Crucified him. It was the cuſtom toward thoſe that were condemned by the Sanhedrin; they were wont to allow them a Cup, but it was of Wine mingled with Myrrhe or Frankinſence, that by drinking that, their brains might intoxicate, and themſelves become the more inſenſible of their torments, and leſs apprehenſive of their death. ז Sanhedr. fol. 43. 1. ז When any one was leading out to Execution, משקין אותו קורט של לבונה בכוס של יין they give them to drink a little Frankinſence in a cup of Wine. Οἶνον ἐσμυρνισμένον, Mark XV. 23. And they gave it for this reaſon, as it immediately follows כדי שתשתרף דעתו viz. that their underſtanding might be diſordered. It was a Narcotick draugt on purpoſe to diſguiſe and ſtupifie the ſenſes.

Wine mingled with Myrrhe, ſaith Mark. Vinegar mingled with Gall, ſaith Matthew. Perhaps both theſe were adminiſtred, for it follows in the place above quoted. נשים יקרות שבירושלם היו מתנדבות ומביאות אותן The Women of quality in Jeruſalem, were wont to bring them this cup of their own accord. And no doubt there were Women in Jeruſalem enough, that would not be wanting in this good office toward Jeſus. But he, ſaith St. Mark, would not receive it. After this, it is probable, the Souldiers or ſome of the Jews might in ſcorn and deriſion offer him a draught of Vinegar and Gall, of which he alſo refuſed to drink. But be it ſo, that there was but one cup given him and that of Vinegar mingled with Gall, yet we have obſerved in our Notes upon Matth. XXVII. 34. how eaſily theſe two Evangeliſts may be reconciled.

II. As to thoſe that were condemned by the Sanhedrin, there was no need that they ſhould have any other drink, than the entoxicating Wine, for they were quickly dead, and felt no thirſt. But the Croſs kept the wretch a long time in exquiſite torment, and thoſe torments provoked a mighty thirſt. So that perhaps there might be a Veſſel full either of water, or ſomething elſe that was drinkable, placed near the Croſs, by which he that was Crucified might allay his thirſt as need ſhould require. Whether this Vinegar might be according to the cuſtom of the Romans, or whether only offered at this time in ſport and mockery, I will make no enquiry at preſent. Chriſt knew before hand that Vinegar would be given him when he ſhould ſay, I thirſt, and therefore did he on purpoſe ſay I thirſt, that Vinegar might be given him and the propheſie fulfilled.

ספוג שבולע משקין טמאים The ſponge which ſucks up the drink. ספוג שבולע a The ſponge that drinks up any moiſture that is unclean, though it be dry on the out-ſide, yet if it fall into a Furnace it defileth it. a Kelim. cap. 9. hal. 4.

Καὶ ὑσσῶπῳ περιθέντες. And put it upon Hyſſop.

Matth. XXVII. 48. Περιθεὶς καλάμῳ, put it on a reed. So alſo St. Mark.

I. If אזוב ſignifie Hyſſop, as the nearneſs of ſound might perſwade us it doth, then there are ſeveral kinds of it. כל אזוב שיש לו שם לחוד פסול b Whatever Hyſſop hath an adjunct, or an Epithet, is not fit; that is, to ſprinkle the unclean. For there was, as it follows afterward אזוב יון Grecian Hyſſop. אזוב בוהלות Fucous Hyſſop, perhaps of the colour of black Lead. אזוב רומי Roman Hyſſop. And אזוב מרדני Wild Hyſſop. b Parah, cap. 11. hal. 7.

II. Now that there was a ſort of Hyſſop that grew into ſtalks like Canes or Reeds is evident from that which immediately follows in the next halach, where it is thus diſtinguiſhed guiſhed לקטו לאוכלין and לקטו לעצום He gathers Hyſſop, for food, and he gathered it for c Fol. 13. 1. wood. Partly alſo from Succah c, where amongſt the mention that is made of Canes and Reeds, and Twigs wherewith they were wont to cover the Booths they made at the Feaſt of Tabernacles, this אזוב Hyſſop is reckon'd up for one.

VERS. XXXI.

Ἦν γὰρ μεγάλη ἡ ἡμέρα ἐκείνου τοῦ Σαββάτου.

THAT Sabbath-day was an high day: Becauſe, 1. It was the Sabbath: 2. It was the day where all the people preſented themſelves in the Temple according to that command in Exod. XXIII. 17. 3. That was the day when the ſheaf of the firſt-fruits was offer'd according to that command, Levit. XXIII. 10, 11.

I. On the fifteenth day of the Month was an holy-day, the firſt day of the Feaſt, wherein they made ready their Chagigah, with which they feaſted together for joy of the Feaſt.
d Joma, fol. 20. That is worth our noting, d Every day they ſwept the aſhes off the Altar at the time of cock-crowing, only on the day of expiation they did it at midnight, וברגלים משמורת הראשונה and on the three feaſts they did it after the firſt watch. A little after, In the three Feaſts when infinite numbers of Iſraelites aſſembled, and numberleſs ſacrifices were offered, they ſwept the aſhes off the Altar, juſt after the firſt watch; לא היתה קריאת גבר מגעת עד שהיתה עורה מלאה מישראל for by cock-crowing the Court was crowded with Iſraelites. I do not ſcruple here to render קריאת גבר by cock-crowing, although in the very place alledg'd it is under controverſie whether it ſignifie the cock-crowing, or the Proclamation of the Sagan, or e Ibid. fol. 28. 1. ruler of the Temple, viz. that Proclamation mention'd e, The Sagan ſaith unto them go and ſee whether the time for ſlaying the ſacrifices be at hand; if it were time, then he that was ſent out to ſee, return'd with this anſwer, the day begins to break, &c.

If the phraſe קריאת גבר be to be taken in this ſenſe, then however we ſee that the people were aſſembled together before morning-light; and yet I do not doubt but it ought to be render'd the cock-crowing, which might be made clear by many good proofs, if there were place or leiſure for it. Now the peoples aſſembling in the Court thus ſoon in the morning on theſe Feaſt-days, was upon this account, becauſe on the firſt day of the Feaſt innumerable Peace-offerings [שלמים] were to be made, which were the Chagigah, and on the ſecond day as many burnt-offerings for the appearance of the people before the Lord.

It is true indeed the victims were not ſlain before the morning-light, but we may very well ſuppoſe that before they could be ſlain, they muſt be ſearch'd and examin'd by the Mumcheh, or any that were deputed to that office, to ſee whether the beaſts allotted for ſacrifice, were without blemiſh, and fit for the Altar yea or no. And upon this account they aſſembled, and the ſacrifices were brought into the Court ſo early in the morning. And now let us call a little to mind Annas the Sagan, or ruler of the Temple; might not he alſo be in the Temple, very early in the morning? Did not his charge require it, to ſee that all things might be provided, and put into a readineſs for the ſervice of that day? Let us conſider what hath been newly quoted, The Sagan or Ruler ſaith, Go and ſee if the time for killing the ſacrifices be come; i. e. whether day-light appear or no: And from hence it may be we may gather the reaſon why Annas was not amongſt the reſt in Caiphas his Palace, and why they brought our Saviour before him firſt, viz. becauſe his affairs in the Temple would not permit him to ſit at that time with the Sanhedrin, and yet they had a mind Chriſt ſhould be carry'd before him, before he himſelf ſhould be call'd away into the Temple for the neceſſary diſcharge of his office there.

At the due time the Sacrifices appointed for the Chagigah were ſlain; thoſe parts of them that pertain'd to the Altar or to the Prieſt, were given to them; the reſt of the beaſt was ſhar'd amongſt the owners that had offer'd it, and from thence proceeded their Feaſtings together, and their great mirth and rejoycings according to the manner of that Feſtival.

This was the Παρασκευὴ τοῦ Πάσχα, ver. 14. The preparation of the Paſſover; and that was the Πάσχα the Paſſover, to which the Elders of the Council reſerving themſelves, would by no means enter into the Judgment-hall, Chap. XVIII. 28.

II. That day drawing toward night, thoſe that were deputed by the Sanhedrin to reap f Menacoth, fol. 68. 1. the ſheaf of the firſt-fruits went out f: Thoſe that were deputed by the Sanhedrin to reap went forth מערב יום טוב in the evening of the Feaſt-day [the firſt day of the Feaſt] and bound their corn in ſheafs pretty near the ground, that the reaping might be the eaſier. All the neighbouring Towns about gather'd together, that it might be done with the greater pomp. When it grew duskiſh, he that was about to reap, ſaid, The Sun is ſet; and they anſwer'd, Well. The Sun is ſet; and they anſwer'd, Well. With this Sickle; Well. With this Sickle; Well. In this Basket; Well. In this Basket; Well. And if it happen'd to be on the Sabbath-day, he ſaid, ſaid, On this Sabbath; and they anſwer'd, Well. On this Sabbath; Well. I will reap, and they ſaid, reap. I will reap; reap. And ſo as he ſaid theſe things thrice over, they anſwer'd thrice to every one of them, Well, well, well. And all this upon the account of the Baithuſians, who ſaid, the ſheaf of the firſt-fruits ought not to be reaped on the cloſe of the Feaſt-day.

About that hour of the day wherein our Saviour was buried, they went forth to this reaping, and when the Sabbath was now come they began the work, for the Sabbath it ſelf did not hinder this work.

g R. Ananias the Sagan of the Prieſts ſaith, on the Sabbath-day they reap'd the ſheaf only to the meaſure of one Seah, with one Sickle, in one Basket; but upon a common day they reapt three Seahs, with three Sickles, in three Baskets. But the wiſe men ſay, The Sabbath-days, and other days as to this matter are alike. e Ibid. fol. 63. 2.

III. This night they were to lodg in Jeruſalem, or in Booths about, ſo near the City that they might not exceed the bounds of a Sabbath-days journey.

In the morning again they met very early in the Court as the day before, the Sacrifices are brought for the peoples appearing before the Lord; the ſheaf of firſt-fruits is offer'd in its turn, the rites and uſages of which offering are deſcribed in the place above quoted. So that upon this high day there happen'd to be three great Solemnities in one, viz. the Sabbath, the ſheaf-offering, and the ראיה the appearing of the people in the Court before the Lord, according to the command, Exod. XXIII. 17.

VERS. XXXIV.

Λόγχῃ αὐτοῦ τὴν πλευρὰν ἔνυξε. With a Spear pierced his ſide.

THE Arab. Verſ. of the Erpenian Edition, adds the word אלאימן, he pierced his right ſide, afraid (as it ſhould ſeem) leſt the miracle ſhould not be great enough if the blood and water ſhould have been ſuppos'd to have iſſued from his left-ſide, becauſe of the water that is ſaid to be contain'd in the Pericardium; which being pierced, it is conceived blood and water could not but upon natural reaſons flow out of it. But this iſſue of blood and water had ſomething of myſtery in it beyond nature; if nothing preternatural had been in it, I hardly imagin the Evangeliſt would have uſed that threefold aſſeveration concerning the truth of the thing, as we ſee he doth. And he that ſaw it bare record, &c.

Ἐξῆλθεν αἷμα καὶ ὕδωρ· There came out blood and water.

It is commonly ſaid that the two Sacraments of the New Teſtament, Water and Blood flow'd out of this wound; but I would rather ſay that the Antitype of the Old Teſtament might be here ſeen.

I. The Apoſtle teacheth us that the ratification of the old Covenant was by Blood and Water, Heb. IX. 19. Moſes took the blood of calves and of goats with water, &c. I confeſs indeed that Moſes makes no mention of water, Exod. XXIV. but the Apoſtle writing to the Hebrews does not write without ſuch authority as they could not tell how to gainſay. And if my memory do not fail me, I think I have read ſome where among ſome of the Jewiſh Authors (but the place its ſelf is unhappily ſlipt from me) that when there was ſome pauſe to be made betwixt the ſlaying of the Sacrifice, and the ſprinkling of the blood upon the Altar (ſuch a kind of pauſe as Moſes made when he read to the people the articles of their Covenant) they mingled water with the blood, leſt it ſhould congeal and coagulate. However the authority is ſufficient that the Apoſtle tells us that the firſt Teſtament was dedicated by Blood and Water. The Antitype of which is clearly exhibited in this ratification of the New Teſtament; and hence is it that the Evangeliſt by ſo vehement aſſeverations confirms the truth of this paſſage, becauſe it ſo plainly anſwers the Type, and gives ſuch aſſurance of the fulfilling of it.

II. I muſt not by any means let paſs that in Shemoth rabba h, He ſmote the rock, ויזובו מים and the waters guſhed out, Pſal. LXXVIII. 20. ואין יזובו אלא לשון דם But the word יזובו ſignifies nothing elſe but blood, as it is ſaid אישה כי יזוב זוב דמה the woman that hath an iſſue of blood upon her, Levit. XV. 20. Moſes therefore ſmote the rock twice, and firſt it guſht out blood, then water. b Fol. 122. 1.

The rock was Chriſt, 1 Cor. X. 4. Compare theſe two together, Moſes ſmote the rock, and blood and water, ſaith the Jew, flow'd out thence. The Souldier pierced our Saviour's ſide with a Spear, and water and blood, ſaith the Evangeliſt, flow'd thence.

St. John concludes this aſſeveration of his, Ἵνα ὑμεῖς πιστεύσητε, that ye might believe. It is not without moment what is commonly ſaid, viz. that by this flowing out of water and blood, it is evident his Pericardium was pierced, and ſo there was an undoubted aſſurance given of his death; but I hardly believe the Evangeliſt in this clauſe had any direct eye toward it; would he be ſo vehement in aſſerting he that ſaw bare record, and he knoweth that he ſaith true, that ye may believe that Jeſus was indeed dead? ſurely there was no need of ſuch mighty aſſeverations for that; queſtionleſs therefore he would intimate ſomething elſe, viz. that you may believe that this is the true blood of the New Covenant, which ſo directly anſwers the Type in the confirmation of the old. Nor do I think that the water it ſelf which iſſu'd from his ſide, was that only which was contain'd in the Pericardium, but that ſomething ſupernatural was in this matter.

VERS. XXXVI.

Ὀστοῦν οὐ συντριβήσεται αὐτοῦ. A bone of him ſhall not be broken.

THESE words may have ſome reference to that of Pſal. XXXIV. 20. but they are more commonly referr'd by Expoſitors to that Law about the Paſchal Lamb, Exod. XII. 46. For Chriſt is our Paſſover, 1 Cor. V. 7.

i Peſachin, fol. 84. 1. k Ibid. fol. 83. 2.

i If any one break a bone of the Paſſover, let him receive forty ſtripes. k The bones, the ſinews, and what remains of the fleſh, muſt be all burnt on the ſixteenth day. If the ſixteenth day ſhould happen on the Sabbath [and ſo indeed it did happen in this year wherein Chriſt was crucify'd] then let them be burned on the ſeventeenth; for they drive away neither the Sabbath, nor any holy day.

VERS. XXXVII.

Ὄψονται εἰς ὃν ἐξεκέντησαν. They ſhall look on him whom they have pierced.

IT is obſerv'd by all Expoſitors how the Greek Verſion in that place of Zachary, from whence this paſſage is taken doth vary; for they have it, ἐπιβλέψονται πρὸς μὲ ἀνθ' ὧν κατηρχήσαντο. They ſhall look toward me, becauſe they have inſulted. So the Roman Edition, and ſo ſome others.

It is queſtioned whether thoſe Interpreters did ſo render the words, or whether this were not an interpolation. To paſs by the teſtimonies of the ancients that aſcribe it to the Seventy. Let us obſerve theſe two things.

I. It is no unuſual thing for the Greek Interpreters in their rendrings, ſometimes to favour the Jewiſh Traditions, and ſometimes the common Interpretation of the Nation; there want not inſtances of both kinds, it is the latter we have to do with at this time; wherein take one or two examples, inſtead of many that might be reckon'd up.

What reaſon can be given that they ſhould render Caphtorim, Καππαδόκες, Cappadocians, and Caphtor, Καππαδοκία, Cappadocia, Deut. II. 23. but only becauſe the Peluſiotes, and Peluſium were commonly ſo termed by the Jews? Who could have imagin'd any reaſon why they ſhould ſay of Eli, that ἔκρινε τὸν Ἰσραὴλ εἴκοσι ἔτη He judged Iſrael twenty years, when in the original it is forty, 1 Sam. IV. 18. but that they favour'd the common figment of that Nation, that the Philiſtines had ſuch a dread of Samſon, that for twenty years after his death they ſtood in as much awe of him as if he was then alive and judg'd Iſrael. Of this nature is their rendring בר Son by παιδεία, inſtruction, Pſal. II. 12. and upon ſome ſuch account no doubt is this κατηρχήσαντο in the place we are now treating of. For,

II. The Chaldee Paraphraſt thus renders the words יעלרי אטלטלו Rogabunt a facie mea, quoniam tranſlati ſunt. They ſhall ask after me, becauſe they are carry'd away. Which R. Sol. thus interprets, They ſhall look back to mourn, becauſe the Gentiles have pierced ſome of them, and killed them in their captivity. Which agrees ſo well with the ſenſe of the Greek Verſion, They ſhall look on me [mourning] becauſe the Gentiles have inſulted over my people in their captivity; that I cannot ſuſpect any interpolation in the Greek Copies; but rather think that κατηρχήσαντο was the very word which the Interpreters themſelves did uſe, which rendring our Evangeliſt deſervedly rejects.

Think you that figment about Meſſiah ben Joſeph (to which the Talmudiſts l apply theſe words of Zachary, as alſo doth Aben Ezra upon the place) was invented when the Greek Verſion was firſt framed? if not, which is my opinion, then it is probable that the Chaldee Paraphraſt gave the ſenſe that moſt obtain'd in the Nation at that time, with which that of the Greek accords well enough. The Interpreters rendring it according to the common opinion of the Nation, read as it ſeems, רקרו for דקרו, for it is a thing not unuſual with them to be purblind either in earneſt, or through trifling; on purpoſe, or through meer dim ſightedneſs. Nor is it any wonder that our Evangeliſt ſhould depart from their reading, when they depart from the Text it ſelf, which the Jews retain againſt their own Comments upon it. They keep the word, but pervert the ſenſe, eſpecially Kimchi upon the

the place. The Targumiſt ſomething more modeſtly than either he or the Talmudick Authors; but far enough from the mind of the Prophet, although not from the mind and opinion of the Nation in common upon that Propheſie; which opinion you will eaſily ſuppoſe the Greek Interpreter had an eye to, at leaſt if you will admit R. Solomon as an Expoſitor upon them.

CHAP. XX.

VERS. I.

Τῇ δὲ μιᾷ τῶν Σαββάτων, &c. The firſt day of the week, &c.

AND David ſmote them, מהנשף ועד הערב למחרתם 1 Sam. XXX. 17. Seventy, ἀπὸ ἑσπέρας ἕως δείλης ἐν τῇ ἐπαύριον, from the morning to the evening, and on the morrow. Vulg. A veſpera uſque ad veſperam alterius diei, from the evening to the evening of the next day. But the Rabbins a, What is the meaning of? שתי לילות ויום אחד למחרתם Two nights and one day. Kimchi. From the evening of this day to the evening of the next, and all that evening to the twilight of the following day. a Vajicra rab. fol. 188. 3.

Reckon the time from the laying of Chriſt in the grave to his Reſurrection, and the meaſures of both the times will agree: Compare alſo the things themſelves. In that ſpace of time David conquer'd the Amalekites, in the ſame ſpace of time our Saviour overcame Death, Hell and Satan.

VERS. V.

Καὶ παρακύψας, &c. He ſtooping down, &c.

STanding within the Cave he bow'd himſelf to look down into כוכא the place where the body was laid, which was four cubits lower than the flower of the Cave it ſelf. See Bava bathra about places of burial b, which place I have quoted and explain'd. Centur. Chorograph. cap. ult. b Cap. 6. hal. ult.

VERS. XII.

Ἕνα πρὸς τῇ κεφαλῇ καὶ ἕνα πρὸς τοῖς ποσὶν· The one at the head, the other at the feet.

SO were the Cherubins placed at each end of the Mercy-ſeat, Exod. XXV. 18, 19. As to thoſe Cherubins that were in Solomon's Temple, 2 Chron. III. 10. I cannot but by the way obſerve what I meet with in Bava bathra c. Onkelos the Proſelyte ſaith, כרובים מעשה צעצועים The Cherubins are like children going from their maſter. That is, with their faces turn'd partly toward their Maſter, and partly toward the way wherein they were to go. For as the Gemariſts, When Iſrael obey'd the will of God, the Cherubins look't toward one another, but when they did not, then they turn'd their faces toward the walls. c Fol. 99. 1.

Thus Onkelos comments upon this place of the Chronicles, I hardly think he Targumizeth on the Book; for the Targum, at leaſt that is in our hands, renders it כרובין תריין עובד שושנן both the Cherubins are made of lilly-work.

VERS. XVII.

Μή μου ἅπτου, οὔπω γὰρ ἀναβέβηκα, &c. Touch me not, for I am not yet aſcended, &c.

THESE words relate to what he had ſpoken formerly about ſending the Comforter, and that he would not leave them comfortleſs, &c. And this probably Mary Magdalen's mind was intent upon when ſhe fell at his feet, and would have embraced them. But he, "I muſt firſt aſcend to my Father before I can beſtow thoſe things upon you "which I have promiſed; do not therefore touch me, and detain me upon any expectati- "on of that kind, but wait for my Aſcenſion rather, and go and tell the ſame things to "my Brethren for their encouragement.

VERS.

VERS. XXIII.

Ἀν τίνων ἀφῆτε τὰς ἁμαρτίας ἀφέωνται Whoſe ſoever ſins ye remit, they are remitted.

HE had formerly given them a power of binding and looſing, and therefore probably beſtows ſomething more upon them now than what he had conferr'd before. For,

I. It would ſeem a little incongruous for our Saviour to uſe an action ſo new and unwonted, ſuch as was his breathing upon them, to veſt them only with that power which he had before given them.

II. The power of binding and looſing was concern'd only in the articles and deciſions of the Law; this power which he now gives them reacht to the ſins of mankind. That power concern'd the Doctrines, this the perſons of men.

Now that we may underſtand the words that are before us, let us a little conſider what is ſaid, Luk. XXIV. 46. Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Chriſt to ſuffer, and to riſe from the dead the third day. And that repentance and remiſſion of ſins ſhould be preached in his name among all Nations, beginning at Jeruſalem. Which words we may ſuppoſe he ſpoke before he utter'd what is in this verſe. And ſo might there not upon the occaſion of thoſe words ariſe ſome ſuch ſcruple as this in the Apoſtles breaſts? Is it ſo indeed muſt remiſſion of ſins be Preached to thoſe in Jeruſalem, who have ſtain'd themſelves with the blood of the Meſſiah himſelf? Yes, ſaith he, For whoſe ſoever ſins ye remit, they are remitted unto them. To this thoſe words of his upon the Croſs have ſome reference, Luk. XXIII. 34. Father forgive them, &c. And indeed upon what foundation, with what confidence could the Apoſtles have preacht remiſſion of ſins to ſuch wretched men who had ſo wickedly, ſo cruelly murder'd their own Lord, the Lord of life, unleſs authoriz'd to it by a peculiar commiſſion granted to them from their Lord himſelf!

Ἀν τίνων κρατῆτε κεκράτυνται· Whoſe ſoever ye retain they are retained.

Beſides the negative included in theſe words, that is, If you do not remit them, they ſhall not be remitted, there is ſomething ſuperadded that is poſitive. That is,

I. There is granted to them a power of ſmiting the rebellious with preſent death, or ſome bodily ſtroke.

II. A power of delivering them over to Satan. Whence had St. Peter that power of ſtriking Ananias and Sapphira with ſo fatal a bolt? whence St. Paul that of ſtriking Elymas blind? whence of delivering over Hymeneus and Alexander to Satan, if not from this very commiſſion given them by Chriſt? Chriſt himſelf never exercis'd this power himſelf; it was not one perſon, whom he ſtroke either with death, or any afflictive diſeaſe; ſome indeed he raiſed when they had been dead, and infinite numbers of the ſick and diſeaſed, whom he cured: He ſnatcht ſeveral from the power of the Devils, he deliver'd none to them. That the Apoſtles therefore might be capable of performing things of ſo high a nature, it was neceſſary they ſhould be backt and encourag'd by a peculiar authority; which if we find not in this clauſe, Whoſe ſoever ſins ye retain they are retained, where ſhould we look for it? And therefore when he endows his Apoſtles with a power which he never thought fit to exerciſe in his own perſon, no wonder if he does it by a ſingular and unuſual action, and that was breathing upon them, ver. 22.

But we muſt know that whereas amongſt other mighty powers conferr'd, we reckon that as one, viz. delivering over unto Satan, we are far from meaning nothing elſe by it but Excommunication. What the Jews themſelves meant by that kind of phraſe, let us ſee by one inſtance.

d הנהו חרתי כושאי דקיימו קמיה שלמה Thoſe two men of Cuſh that ſtood before Solomon, Elihoreph, and Ahijah the Scribes, Sons of Shauſha. On a certain day Solomon ſaw the Angel of Death weeping; he ſaid, why weepeſt thou? He anſwer'd, דקא דבעו מנאי הני חרתי כושאי מסריגהו לשעיר דיתבי תכא Becauſe theſe two Cuſhites entreat me that they may continue here. Solomon deliver'd them over to the Devil, who brought them to the borders of Luz, and when they were come to the borders of Luz, they dy'd.

Gloſs. He calls them Cuſhites [Ironically] becauſe they were very beautiful. They entreat me that they might continue here. For the time of their death was now come: But the Angel of death could not take their ſouls away, becauſe it had been decreed that they ſhould not die but at the Gates of Luz. Solomon therefore deliver'd them over לשרים to the Devils; for he reign'd over the Devils, as it is written, And Solomon ſat upon the Throne of the Lord, for he reigned על העליונים ועל התחתונים over thoſe things that are above, and thoſe things that are below.

e Antiq. lib. 8. cap. 2.

Joſephus alſo makes mention of the power that Solomon had over Devils. e Παρέχε δὲ ὁ θεὸς, ἵνα τὴν κατ' αὐτὸν σοφίαν δαιμόνων τέχνην. God taught him an art againſt Demons. The belief lief of either of theſe ſtories is at the liberty of the Reader. Only from the former we may make this obſervation, that a power of delivering over to Satan, was even in the Jews opinion divine and miraculous. We acknowledg this to have been in the Apoſtles, and in the Apoſtles only; and I know no where if not in the words we are now treating of from whence otherwiſe the original of this power and authority can be deriv'd.

III. It ſeems further, that at this very time was granted to the Apoſtles a commiſſion to confer the Holy Spirit on thoſe whom they found qualify'd, and that in theſe words, Receive ye the Holy Ghoſt. i. e. Receive ye it, to diſtribute it to others. For although it cannot be deny'd but that they receiv'd the Holy Ghoſt for other reaſons alſo, and to other ends, of which we have already diſcours'd; yet is not this great end to be excluded, which ſeem'd the higheſt and nobleſt endowment of all, viz. that Chriſt breathing upon them, inſpir'd them with the Holy Ghoſt, with this mighty authority and priviledg, that they ſhould be capable of diſpenſing it to others alſo.

VERS. XXIV.

Θωμᾶς ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος οὐκ ἦν μετ' αὐτῶν· But Thomas called Dydimus was not with them.

I. THE Evangeliſt does not here, as the writers of Lexicons render the ſignification of an Hebrew name into Greek, when he tells us that Thomas is alſo called Didymus, but only lets us know that as he was called Thomas among the Hebrews, ſo was he called Didymus among the Greeks. There is not another amongſt the Twelve Apoſtles of whom this is ſaid. Simon indeed is called Peter, but theſe are really two diſtinct names; ſo was Nathanael called Bartholomew; but Thomas and Didymus both one name, of one ſignification in different languages. Perhaps Thomas was born in ſome place where the Jews and the Greeks promiſcuouſly inhabited, ſuch a place was the region of Decapolis, and ſo by the Hebrews he might be call'd by his Hebrew name, and the Greek by the Greeks.

II. The Diſciples had all fled and were diſpers'd when Chriſt was apprehended, Mark XIV. 50. except Peter and John; whence it is ſaid in ver. 2. of this Chapter that Mary Magdalene came to Peter, and that other Diſciple whom Jeſus loved; for ſhe knew where ſhe might find them, and ſo ſhe could not for the reſt. And thus ſcatter'd, as it ſhould ſeem, they paſt over the Sabbath-day, but when they heard that their Lord was riſen, then they begin to aſſociate again. But as yet Thomas had not got amongſt them, and indeed Peter himſelf had been abſent too, but that having ſeen the Lord he return'd from Emmaus.

III. Thomas therefore not being preſent when our Saviour breathed on the reſt, and gave them the Holy Ghoſt, are we to ſuppoſe that he by his abſence was depriv'd of this gift and priviledg? No ſurely, for it was a priviledg common to the whole Apoſtolate, and peculiar to them as ſo; ſo that however by his abſence he might have miſt of it, yet by reaſon of his Apoſtolacy he could not. St. Paul diſtant with a witneſs, while theſe things happen'd, both from the Apoſtleſhip and Religion too, yet when made an Apoſtle, was withal adorn'd with this priviledg.

VERS. XXV.

Ἐὰν μὴ ἴδω, &c. Except I ſhall ſee, &c.

THEY judge Moſes once to have been thus weak and wavering in his faith f, When the Holy Bleſſed God ſaid to Moſes, Go down for the people have corrupted themſelves, he took the Tables and would not believe that Iſrael had ſinned, ſaying, אם איני רואה איני מאמין If I do not ſee, I will not believe.

g Thou Racha, wouldſt thou not have believ'd if thou hadſt not ſeen?

f Shemoth rabba, fol. 160. 1.

g Midr. Tillin. fol. 38. 4.

VERS. XXVI.

Θυρῶν κεκλεισμένων. The doors being ſhut.

I Would not eaſily believe that the intention of the Evangeliſt in this place was to let us know that Chriſt penetrated the doors with his body, but rather that the doors were ſhut for fear of the Jews, as v. 19. which he alſo reiterates in this verſe, that he might let us know the Diſciples were ſtill at Jeruſalem, where their greateſt danger lay. On the morrow probably they were to make toward Galilee.

VERS.

VERS. XXIX.

Μακάριοι οἱ μὴ ἰδόντες καὶ πιστεύσαντες· Bleſſed are they that have not ſeen, and yet have believed.

h Tanchum, fol. 6. 1.

R. Simeon ben Lachiſh ſaith h, the proſelyte is more beloved by the Holy Bleſſed God than that whole crowd that ſtood before Mount Sinai; for unleſs they had heard the thundrings, and ſeen the flames and lightnings, the hills trembling, and the trumpets ſounding, they had not receiv'd the Law. But the proſelyte hath ſeen nothing of all this, and yet hath come in, devoting himſelf to the Holy Bleſſed God, and hath taken upon him the Kingdom of Heaven.

CHAP. XXI.

VERS. II.

Σίμων Πέτρος καὶ Θωμᾶς, &c. Simon Peter, and Thomas, &c.

HERE are ſeven of the Diſciples mention'd, and but five of them named; thoſe two whoſe names are not recited, probably were Philip and Andrew, as the four that were abſent at that time might be the Sons of Alpheus, Matthew, Judas, Simeon and James. Compare thoſe that are mention'd, Chap. I. and you may reaſonably ſuppoſe the perſon not named there, ver. 37, 40. might be Thomas.

VERS. III.

Ὑπάγω ἁλιεύειν. I go a fiſhing.

CHRIST had order'd his Apoſtles to meet him at a mountain in Galilee, Mat. XXVIII. 16. It is plain, ver. 14. that he had not yet appear'd to them there; ſo that it is ſomething ſtrange how they durſt keep away from that mountain, and how the four newly mention'd durſt be abſent from the reſt of their number. They knew the mountain without doubt, and if they knew not the time wherein Chriſt would make his appearance amongſt them, why ſhould they not abide continually there in attendance for him?

It ſhould ſeem that they did not look for him till the Lords-day, which had not yet been ſince they were come into Galilee; and perhaps the Sons of Alpheus had in their return from Jeruſalem betaken themſelves amongſt their relations, determining to be at that mountain on the Lords day. Theſe ſeven dwelt not far off the mountain which was near Capernaum, and hard by the Sea of Galilee; only Nathanael who dwelt more remote in Cana, toward the extreme North parts of that Sea. He was not yet gone home, but waiting the appointed time ſtaid here. Peter and Andrew dwelt in Capernaum, and ſo probably did James and John; Philip in Bethſaida, and Thomas (as we may conjecture from his Greek name Didymus) probably liv'd amongſt the Syro-grecians in Gedara, or Hippo, or ſome place in that Country of Decapolis, not very far from Genneſareth.

Παιδία· Children.

BY what word ſoever Chriſt expreſt this Children to them, whether תינוקות or טליא as the Syr. or דרוקא or בניא: it ſeems to be a very familiar and gentle compellation, that his Diſciples from that very ſalutation of his might diſcern him. They did not know him by ſight as appears ver. 4. he would have them know him therefore by the title he gave them.

Προσφάγιον· Any meat.

מזון לסעודה which is very uſual amongſt the Rabbins, may not unfitly be render'd προσφάγιον, i.e. Meat for one ſingle repaſt. As if Chriſt ſhould have ſaid, Children, have ye any any meat with you ſufficient for a break-faſt, or a dinner? But if προσφάγιον ſhould ſignifie any ſort of meat that muſt be eaten with bread, as Camerarius thinks, then Chriſt's words ſeem to have this meaning: Here, I have bread with me, have you taken any thing that we may eat this bread? and ſo מזון meat may be diſtinguiſhed from לחם bread.

VERS. XV.

Ἀγαπᾷς με πλεῖον τούτων; Loveſt thou me more than theſe?

WHY more than theſe? might it not have been enough to have ſaid, as well as theſe? For, what reaſon had he to expect that Peter ſhould love him more than the reſt did? eſpecially more than St. John, whom Chriſt himſelf had ſo loved, and who had ſtuck ſo cloſe to him?

Chriſt ſeems therefore to reflect upon Peter's late confidence, not without ſome kind of ſeverity and reproof. q. d. "Thou ſaidſt, O Simon, a little while ago, that thou "wouldſt never forſake me, no not though all the other Diſciples ſhould; thou didſt "profeſs beyond all the reſt, that thou wouldſt rather dye than deny me; thou wouldſt "follow me to priſon, to death, nay, lay down thy own life for me. What ſaiſt thou "now Simon? Doeſt thou yet love me more than theſe? If thou thinkeſt thou art pro- "vided, and canſt hazard thy life for me, feed my ſheep, and for my ſake do thou expoſe "thy life, yea and lay it down for them.

Βόσκε τὰ ἀρνία μου. Feed my Lambs.

If there be any thing in that threefold repetition feed, feed, feed, we may moſt fitly apply it to the threefold object of St. Peters Miniſtry, viz. the Gentiles, the Jews, and the Iſraelites of the ten Tribes.

I. To him were committed by his Lord the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, Matth. XVI. that he might open the door of Faith and the Goſpel to the Gentiles, which he did in his preaching it to Cornelius.

II. In ſharing out the work of Preaching the Goſpel, amongſt the three Miniſters of of the Circumciſion, his lot fell amongſt the Jews in Babylon. James his lot was amongſt the Jews in Paleſtine and Syria: And John's amongſt the Helleniſts in Aſia.

III. Now amongſt the Jews in Babylon, were mixed the Iſraelites of the ten Tribes, and to them did the Goſpel come, by the miniſtry of St. Peter, as I have ſhewn more at large in another Treatiſe.

To this therefore have the words of our Saviour a plain reference; namely, putting Peter in mind, that whereas he had with ſo much confidence and aſſurance of himſelf, made ſuch profeſſions of love and conſtancy beyond the other Diſciples, pretending to a wonderful reſolution of laying down his very life in that behalf, that he would now ſhew his zeal and courage in feeding the ſheep of Chriſt. Thou canſt not, Simon, lay down thy life for me, as thou didſt once promiſe, for I have my ſelf laid down my own life, and taken it up again: Feed thou my ſheep therefore, and be ready to lay down thy life for them, when it ſhall come to be required of thee.

So that what is here ſaid does not ſo much point out Peter's Primacy as his danger; nor ſo much the priviledge, as the bond of his Office, and his Martyrdom. At laſt, for, that our Saviour had this meaning with him is plain, becauſe immediately after this he tells him by what death he ſhould glorifie God, verſ. 18.

VERS. XXII.

Ἐὰν αὐτὸν θέλω μένειν ἕως ἔρχομαι. If I will that he tarry till he come.

TILL I come, that is, till I come to deſtroy the City and Nation of the Jews. As to this kind of phraſe, take a few inſtances.

Our Saviour ſaith, Matth. XVI. 28. There be ſome ſtanding here, which ſhall not taſte of death, till they ſee the Son of Man coming in his Kindom. Which muſt not be underſtood of his coming to the Laſt Judgment; for there was not one ſtanding there that could live till that time: nor ought it to be underſtood of the Reſurrection, as ſome would have it, for probably not only ſome, but in a manner all that ſtood there, lived till that time. His coming therefore, in this place, muſt be underſtood of his coming to take vengeance againſt thoſe enemies of his, which would not have him to rule over them, Luke XIX. 12, 27.

Perhaps it will nor repent him that reads the Holy Scriptures, to obſerve theſe few things:

I. That the destruction of Jerusalem and the whole Jewish state, is described, as if the whole frame of this world were to be dissolved. Nor is it strange, when God destroyed his Habitation and City, places once so dear to him, with so direful and sad an overthrow; his own people whom he accounted of as much or more than the whole world beside, by so dreadful and amazing Plagues, Matth. XXIV. 29, 30. The Sun shall be darkned, &c. Then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man, &c. which yet are said to fall out, within that Generation, vers. 34. 2 Pet. III. 10. The Heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the Elements shall melt with fervent heat, &c. Compare with this, Deut. XXXII. 22. Heb. XII. 26. and observe, that by Elements, are understood the Mosaick Elements, Gal. IV. 9. Coloss. II. 20. and you will not doubt, that St. Peter speaks only of the Conflagration of Jerusalem, the destruction of the Nation, and the abolishing the dispensation of Moses.

Revel. VI. 12, 13. The Sun became black as sackcloth of hair, &c. and the Heavens departed as a scroll when it is rolled together, &c. Where, if we take notice of the foregoing Plagues, by which, according to the most frequent threatnings, he destroyed that people, viz. the Sword, vers. 4. Famine, vers. 5, 6. and the Plague, vers. 8. Withal comparing those words, They say to the Mountains fall on us and cover us, with Luke XXIII. 30. it will sufficiently appear, that by those phrases is understood the dreadful judgment and overthrow of that Nation, and City. With these also agrees that of Jerem. IV. from vers. 22. to 28. and clearly enough explains this phrase. To this appertain those and other such expressions as we meet with, 1 Cor. X. 11. On us the ends of the world are come: and 1 Pet. IV. 7. The end of all things is at hand.

II. With reference to this, and under this notion, the times immediately preceding this ruine, are called the last days, and the last times אחרית הימים That is, the last times of the Jewish, City, Nation, Oeconomy. This manner of speaking frequently occurs, which, let our St. John himself interpret. 1 Joh. II. 13. There are many Antichrists, whereby we know it is the last time: and that this Nation is upon the very verge of destruction, whenas it hath already arrived at the utmost pitch of Infidelity, Apostacy, and wickedness.

III. With the same reference it is, that the times and state of things immediately following the destruction of Jerusalem, are called, a New Creation, New Heavens, and a New Earth. Isai. LXV. 17. Behold I create a New Heaven and a New Earth. When should that be? Read the whole Chapter, and you will find the Jews rejected and cut off, and from that time is that New Creation of the Evangelical world among the Gentiles.

Compare 2 Cor. V. 17. and Revel. XXI. 1, 2. where, the old Jerusalem being cut off, and destroyed, a new one succeeds; and New Heavens and a New Earth are created.

2 Pet. III. 13. We, according to his promise, look for New Heavens and a New Earth. The Heavens and the Earth of the Jewish Church, and Commonwealth must be all on fire, and the Mosaick Elements burnt up; but we, according to the promise made to us by Isaiah the Prophet, when all these are consumed, look for the New Creation of the Evangelical state.

IV. The day, the time, and the manner of the execution of this vengeance upon this people, are called, the day of the Lord, the day of Christ, his coming in the Clouds, in his Glory, in his Kingdom. Nor is this without reason, for from hence doth this form and mode of speaking take its rise.

Christ had not as yet appeared but in a state of Humility, contemned, blasphemed, and at length murdered by the Jews: His Gospel rejected, laught at, and trampled under foot: His followers pursued with extream hatred, persecution and death it self: At length therefore, he displays himself in his Glory, his Kindom, and Power, and calls for those cruel enemies of his, that they may be slain before him.

Acts II. 20. Before that great and notable day of the Lord come. Let us take notice how St. Peter applies that prophesie of Joel to those very times, and it will be clear enough, without any commentary, what that Day of the Lord is.

2 Thess. II. 2. As if the day of Christ was at hand, &c. To this also do those passages belong, Heb. X. 37. Yet a little while, and he, that shall come, will come. James V. 9. Behold the judge is at the door. Revel. I. 7. He cometh in the Clouds: and XXII. 12. Behold I come quickly. With many other passages of that nature, all which must be understood of Christ's coming in judgment and vengeance against that wicked Nation: and in this very sense must the words now before us be taken and no otherwise: I will that he tarry till I come. For thy part, Peter, thou shalt suffer death by thy Country-men the Jews: but as for him, I will that he shall tarry till I come and avenge my self upon this generation; and if I will so, what is that to thee? The story that is told of both these Apostles confirms this Exposition; for it is taken for granted by all, that St. Peter had his Crown of Martyrdom, before Jerusalem fell, and St. John survived the ruins of it.

VER

VERS. XXIV.

Καὶ οἴδαμεν ὅτι ἀληθὴς ἐστιν ἡ μαρτυρία αὐτοῦ. And we know that his testimony is true.

THE Evangelist had said before, Chap. XIX. 35. He knoweth that he saith true; and here in this place he changeth the person, saying, We know that his testimony is true.

I. One would believe, that this was an Idiotism in the Chaldee and Syriack Tongue, to make οἴδαμεν, We know, and οἶδα, I know, the same thing; which is not unusual in other Languages also, Joshua II. 9. ידעתי I know. The Targumist hath ידענא which you would believe to be, We knew. 1 Sam. XVII. 28. אני ידעתי I knew. Targumist, אנא ידענא We knew. So amongst the Talmudists נהירנא: אמינא which seems to be, We know, we say. And indeed, sometimes, nay most frequently they so signifie. But sometimes the word אנא I is included. So that ידענא should be ידע אנא and so of the rest: which appears very clearly in that Expression: * אימא לי מאי חזינא בחלמאי Tell me what I am to see in my dream. For that so it must be rendred, I am to see, the Glos and Context directs us, where אזינא is חזי אנא We will not therefore in this place take οἴδαμεν, We know, for οἶδα, I know, although the sense might not be very disagreeable if we did so. But,

* Beracoth, fol. 56. 1.

II. We suppose the Evangelist both here and Chap. XIX. 35. referreth to an eye witness, or αὐτόπτης. For in all judicial causes the ocular testimony prevailed. If any person should testifie that he himself saw the thing done, μαρτυρία αὐτοῦ ἦν ἀληθὴς, his witness must be received: For, נאמן Ἀληθὴς, True, when it is said of any testimony, does not signifie barely that which is true, but that which was to believed and entertained for a sure and irrefragrable evidence. So that the meaning of these words is this; This is the Disciple who testifies of these things, and wrote them: And we all know that such a testimony obtains in all judgments whatever, for he was an eye witness, and saw that which he testifies.

Soli Deo Gloria.

CHAP. I.

VERS. I.

Τὸν μὲν πρῶτον λόγον ἐποιησάμην, &c. The former treatise have I made, &c.

WE may reduce to this place (for even thus far it may be extended) what our Historian had said in the very entrance of his Gospel, Ἔδοξε κἀμοὶ καθεξῆς σοι γράψαι. It seemed good to me also to write to thee in order; where καθεξῆς In order, seems to promise not only an orderly series of the History of the actions of our Saviour, but successively even of the Apostles too. For what passages we have related to us in this Book may very well be reckoned amongst the Πράγματα πεπληροφορημένα the things which were most surely believed amongst them. Indeed, by the very stile in this place he shews that he had a design of writing these stories joyntly, that is to say, first to give us a narration of the Actions and Doctrine of Christ, and then in their due place and order to commit to writing the Acts and sayings of the Apostles.

As to most of the things contained in this Book, St. Luke was both αὐτόπτης, an Eye-witness, yea and a part also; but how far he was spectator of those acts of our Saviour which he relates in his other book, none can say. What he speaks in the Preface of that work is ambiguous, ἔδοξε κἀμοὶ πᾶσιν ἄνωθεν παρηκολουθηκότι, and leaves the Reader to enquire, whether he means, he had a perfect understanding of things from the first, by the same way only which those had, that undertook to compile the Evangelical Histories from the Mouth, αὐτοπτῶν καὶ ὑπηρετῶν τοῦ λόγου, of those that were Eye-witnesses, and Ministers of the Word. Or whether he came to this understanding of things from the first, he himself having been from the beginning, an Eye-witness, and a Minister. Or lastly, Whether he does not by the word ἄνωθεν declare that he understood all these things from Heaven, and from above. We have taken it in this last sense in our notes upon that place, as being beyond all controversie, that he was divinely inspir'd, and the Spirit from above govern'd his pen while he was writing those things. But whether it might not mean, according to the second sense, (for the first we wholly disallow) viz. that St. Luke was amongst those who adhered to our Saviour Christ from his very first preaching of the Gospel; I leave it to the enquiry of the Reader to determine.

Ὧν ἤρξατο Ἰησοῦς ποιεῖν, &c. Of all that Jesus began to do, &c.

I am sensible that in the common dialect, to begin to do, and to do, is one and the same thing: But I suppose the phrase in this place is to be taken relatively, q. d. "In the "former treatise, I discours'd of all those things which Jesus himself began to do and to "teach; In this, I am to give a relation of those things which were continu'd by his Apostles after him.

VERS. II.

Διὰ Πνεύματος ἁγίου. Through the Holy Ghost.

EXpositors place these words differently. The Syriack, one of the Arabick Copies, Beza, and the Italian place them next after οὓς ἐξελέξατο, whom he had chosen: that the sense according to them is, after that he had given Commandment to the Apostles, whom he had chosen through the Holy Ghost. But the other Arabick, as also the Vulgar, the French and English translations retain the same order of the words as we find them in the Greek Text: most rightly rendring it, after that he through the Holy Ghost had given commandment. Which also of old had been done by God to the Prophets, dictating to them by the inspiration of his Holy Spirit what they should Teach and Preach.

The Apostles had indeed cast out Devils, and heal'd diseases through the Spirit, but it is a question whether they had as yet taught any thing, but what they had heard verbatim from the mouth of their great Master. He had given them a promise that they should bind and loose the Law of Moses; he had told them, that there were several things yet behind, that must be revealed to them which as yet they could not bear, concerning which, they should be further instructed by the inspiration of the Spirit. When therefore he had risen, and breath'd in their face, saying, receive ye the Holy Ghost; from that time, they were endu'd with the Spirit, as the Prophets of old, who dictated to them what they should preach, what they should require, and what they should ordain. And now nothing was wanting but the gift of Tongues, that what was dictated to them they might declare and make known to all men in their own Languages.

VERS. III.

Δι' ἡμερῶν τεσσεράκοντα ὀπτανόμενος αὐτοῖς. Being seen of them forty days.

[a] Sanhedr. fol. 43. 1. a IT is a tradition. On the evening of the Passover they hang'd Jesus. And a cryer went before him for forty days, saying, Behold the man condemn'd to be stoned, because by the help of Magick, he hath deceiv'd and drawn away Israel into an Apostasie. Who ever hath any thing to alledge in testimony of his innocency, let him come forth and bear witness. But they found none that would be a witness in his behalf. But he himself (O thou Tongue fit to be cut out) gives a sufficient testimony of his own innocence, having for the space of forty days conversed amongst men, after his Resurrection from death, under the power of which he could not be kept by reason of his innocence.

[b] Ibid. fol. 99. 1 b It is a tradition. R. Eliezer saith, The days of the Messiah are forty years, according as it is said, Forty years אקוט ברור shall I be grieved with this generation. The Gloss is, Because it is אקוט (in the future tense) it is a sign the Propheſie is concerning the time to come. It is ingenuously done however, of these Jews, that they parallel that faithless generation that were in the days of the Messiah, with that perverse and rebellious generation that had been in the wilderness. For they will both of them prove a lothing and offence to God for the space of forty years. And as those forty years in the wilderness, were numbered according to the forty days in which the Land had been searching, Numb. XIV. 34. So also may those forty years of the Messiah be numbered according to the forty days wherein he was conversant amongst mankind, after his Resurrection from the dead. But you must compute warily, lest you stumble at the threshold about the year of Tiberius, wherein Christ rose again; or at the close about the year of Vespasian, wherein Jerusalem was taken. Ἑάλω μὲν (saith Josephus c) Ἱεροσόλυμα ἐπὶ δευτέρῳ τῆς Οὐεσπασιανοῦ ἡγεμονίας. Jerusalem was taken in the second year of Vespasian's reign; When indeed, according to the Fasti Consulares, it was taken in his first year; but his second year from the time wherein he had been declared Emperor by the Army. He is saluted Emperor by the Army in Egypt, at the very Calends of July, and the fifth of the Ides of July in Judæa. So that his first year from the time of his being declared Emperor was compleat on the Calends of July the year following, but indeed it was but half his first year according to the computation of the Fasti. Now Jerusalem was sackt on the eighth of September following.

VERS

Καὶ συναλιζόμενος μετ' αὐτῶν παρήγγειλεν αὐτοῖς. And being assembled together with them, commanded them, &c.

WE will make some enquiry both as to the place and time wherein these things were spoken and done.

I. We derive the word συναλιζόμενος not from ἅλς Salt, but from ἁλία an Assembly, or Congregation. So the Lexicons Ἁλία a Congregation, Ἐκκλησία, Ἄθροισμα, an Assembly. d Περσῶν ἁλίζειν Πέρσας σφέτον, When thou shalt give notice to the Persians to gather their forces together. Τὰ τε αἰπόλια καὶ τὰ βοσκόλια ὁ Κῦρος πάντα τὰ τῶν πάλαι συναλίσας εἰς τοῦτο ἔθυε· Cyrus having gathered together his fathers flocks and herds of Goats, and Sheep and Oxen, sacrificed them, &c. e d Herodot. Polymn. cap. 12.

e Id. Clio, cap. 126.

II. Our Saviour after his Resurrection never appeared amongst his Disciples but by surprize and unexpectedly, excepting that one time in the Mountain of Galilee, where he had appointed to meet with them, Matth. XXVIII. 16. So that I would refer these words therefore to that passage in Saint Matthew, so that συναλιζόμενος μετ' αὐτῶν may signify his meeting with them in the Mountain of Galilee, according to the appointment he had made. Nor do those words hinder, that it is said, he commanded them, that they should not depart from Jerusalem, &c. as if it should necessarily be supposed that they were now at Jerusalem; that passage ver. 6. οἱ μὲν οὖν συνελθόντες, when they were come together, may signify their assembling in that place, and the words παρήγγειλεν αὐτοῖς, he commanded them, &c. may very well be construed, that he commanded them to repair straightway to Jerusalem, and not to depart thence.

III. I conceive therefore that these things were spoken and done in the mountain of Galilee (where probably the five hundred at once were together to see him, 1 Cor. XV. 6.) and that when the time of his ascension drew near. For reason would perswade us, that they would not delay their return into the City when he had commanded them thither; nor that he commanded them thither, but when the time drew near wherein he was to meet them there.

And whereas he adds in the very same place and discourse, ver. 5. Οὐ μετὰ πολλὰς ταύτας ἡμέρας, not many days hence; it is necessary that the word ταύτας should have its due force, having not been added here in vain; but seems to respect the daies that were yet to come between that and Pentecost.

We have frequent mention amongst the Rabbins concerning פרם הפסח the Paras of the Passover, and פרם עצרת the Paras of Pentecost; and פרם חחג the Paras of the Feast of Tabernacles. Now the פרם Paras, (themselves being the interpreters) was that space of fifteen days immediately before any of these Feasts. So that five and thirty days after the second of the Passover, began the פרם העצרת the Paras of the Feast of Tabernacles, and the second day of those fifteen was (this year) the Lords-day, on which I almost think they had that assembly on the mountain of Galilee, and that the Disciples being remanded from thence to Jerusalem, got thither within three days. But lest we should streighten the matter within too narrow a compass of time, and seem too nice and curious about the very day, I should judge we can hardly more properly apply these words συναλιζόμενος μετ' αὐτῶν, being assembled together with them, than to that meeting on the mountain of Galilee, which Christ himself had made the appointment of. From thence it was that Christ commanded them to Jerusalem, a place which having tainted it self with the blood of their Lord, they might probably have very little mind to return to again, had it not been by some special command: and do we think they would have gone thither to have celebrated the Feast of Pentecost, or indeed have been present all at it, in that place, had not their Master directed them so to do?

VERS. VI.

Εἰ ἐν τῷ χρόνῳ τούτῳ ἀποκαθιστάνεις τὴν βασιλείαν τῷ Ἰσραήλ; Wilt thou at this time restore the Kingdom to Israel?

IT is very apparent that the Apostles had the same phansiful conceptions about the earthly reign of Christ with the rest of that Nation. But yet they seem here a little to doubt and hesitate, either as to the thing it self, or at least as to the time; and that, not without cause, considering some things which had so lately fallen out. Lord, wilt thou restore the Kingdom to those that have dealt so basely and perfidiously with thee? what, to this generation, that lies under the actual guilt of thy bloodshed? Or indeed, to this Nation at all, which by the perpetration of the late wickedneſs had made it ſelf unworthy of ſo great a kindneſs? Now, what our Saviour returns for anſwer, viz. that it is not for them to know the times or the ſeaſons, does not in the leaſt hint any ſuch Kingdom ever to be, but he openly rebukes their curioſity in enquiring into the times, and in ſome meaſure the opinion it ſelf, when he tells them, that they ſhould receive power from Heaven, and ſhould be his witneſſes, &c.

What that Nation apprehended concerning the temporal reign of the Meſſias, as to many things they ſpeak plainly and openly enough, but in other things, a man may enquire, but can hardly ſatisfie himſelf what they mean or intend. To omit others, they are in three things ſomewhat obſcure.

I. Whether the ten Tribes be to be admitted to the felicities of this reign. For as to this matter it is diſputed by the Rabbins. The ten Tribes are not to return.[f] But in the Jeruſalem Talmudiſts it is expreſſed thus, The ten Tribes have not a part in the world to come. יאינן רואין לעתיד לבוא neither ſhall they ſee the future age. Which is diſcourſed in the Babylonian writers, viz. whether this be not to be underſtood of thoſe individual perſons only, that were carried away by the King of Aſſyria; that they indeed ſhall not partake of the bleſſings of the Meſſias, though their poſterity ſhould. So that there may lie hid ſomething of ambiguity in the word Iſrael, in this paſſage we are now examining; that is, whether in the conception of thoſe that ſpeak it, the ten Tribes are included yea or no. For commonly the name Iſrael amongſt the Jews, was wont to be taken for the Jews only, ſo that they called themſelves Iſrael, and the ten Tribes, by way of diſtinction, the Ten Tribes. In which ſenſe, and according to which diſtinction, that of the Apoſtle ſeems to be ſaid. Are they Hebrews? So am I. Are they Iſraelites? So am I. 2 Cor. XI. 22.

[f] Sanhedr. cap. Chelek. halak. 7.

II. What opinion was to be had of the two Meſſiah's, Meſſiah ben David, and Meſſiah ben Joſeph, or ben Ephraim, as he is called by the Paraphraſt, Cant. IV. 5. Whether they were to reign at the ſame time, the one over the ten Tribes, the other over the two: or whether in ſucceſſion to one another, both of them over the whole Nation? Meſſiah ben Joſeph was to be cut off.[g] And then, what muſt become of his Subjects, whether they were of the ten Tribes or of the two, or of all?

[g] Succah, fol. 52. 1.

III. It is further obſcure in their writings, whether they had an apprehenſion that the Meſſiah ſhould reign alone, or whether he ſhould ſubſtitute any King or Kings under him, or after him. It ſeems probable to them that the Meſſiah ſhould reign his thouſand years alone; but then, as to that age which they called, עתיד לבא (if Eternity be not meant by it) what did they conceive muſt be done in it? whether Kings ſhould be ſubſtituted in it of the race of David? They can dream of nothing but mere Earthly things: and if from ſuch kind of dreams we might conjecture what kind of future ſtate that עתיד לבא ſhould be, we may gueſs what ſhould then be done. But to what purpoſe is it to trace error, where, as we cannot ſo much as fix a foot, ſo the further we proceed the more we ſlip?

What kind of Kingdom the Apoſtles had framed in their imaginations is not eaſy to conceive: There was ſomething that might ſeem to cheriſh that opinion about a temporal reign, wherewith they had been leavened from their very childhood; and that was, That not only Chriſt, but ſeveral of the Saints had roſe from the dead; and that the Kingdom of the Meſſiah ſhould commence from ſome reſurrection, they had already learnt from ſome of their own traditions. But in what manner ſhould Chriſt now reign? His body was made a ſpiritual body. Now he appears, anon he vaniſheth and diſappears again, and how will this agree with Mortals? The traditions indeed ſuppoſe the Meſſiah would be perhaps מן המתיא one of the dead: but when he ſhould revive he was to have the ſame kind of body with other men. This was apprehended by ſome in Sanhedr. h that thoſe dead mentioned Ezek. XXXVII. did revive, returned into the Land of Iſrael, married wives and begat Children: I my ſelf, ſaith R. Judah ben Betirah, am one of their offſpring, and theſe very Phylacteries which my Grandfather bequeathed to me, belonged to them. Now, who is it can ſo much as imagine, what opinion the Apoſtles conceived concerning the bodily preſence of Chriſt in this Kingdom of his which they had been dreaming?

VERS. XII.

Σαββάτου ἔχον ὁδόν; A Sabbath-days journey.

I Have already ſaid ſomething in Luke, XXIV. concerning a Sabbath-days journey. I will add a few things in this place. i Whoſoever goeth beyond the bounds of the City on the Sabbath day, let him be ſcourged, becauſe it is ſaid, let no one go out from his place on the ſeventh day, this place, is the bounds of the City. The Law doth not determine the compaſs compass of these bounds. But the wise men define these bounds from without, to be about twelve miles, according to the Israelites camp: for Moses our Master said unto them, ye shall not go out of your camp. However, it is ordained by the words of the Scribes, let no one go out of the City beyond two thousand cubits. For two thousand cubits are the suburbs of the City. From whence we may learn, that it is lawful to walk clear through the City on the Sabbath day, be it as spacious as Nineveh, and whether it be walled or no. He may also expatiate beyond the City to the length of two thousand cubits from every side of it --- But if a man go beyond these two thousand cubits, they scourge him מכות מרדות with the scourge of Rebellion, that is, if he go so far as twelve miles, but if he go out of the City beyond twelve miles, though it be but the space of one cubit, he is scourged according to the Law. Let us comment a little.

I. It was commonly believed that the Israelites encamping in the wilderness, was about twelve miles square. k The length of the Israelites camp was twelve miles, and the bredth twelve miles.

k Targ. Jonath. in Numb. 2.

The bredth of the waters (that is, those that were divided in Jordan) was twelve miles answerable to the camp of Israel, according as our Rabbins expound it. l The waters which came down from above, stood and rose up upon an heap, Jos. III. 16. And what was the height of these waters? it was twelve miles height upon twelve miles bredth, according to the camp of Israel. Where the Gloss is, The camp of the Israelites was twelve miles upon twelve miles, (that is, twelve miles square) and they past over Jordan according to their encampings, viz. the whole bredth of their camp past over together for the space of twelve miles. m Hence that in Hieros. Sotah, n Adam and Zarethan (i. e. the place, from whence, and the place to which the waters were divided) were distant from one another twelve miles.

l Kimch. in Josh. 3. 16.

n Fol. 21. 4.

Whether they took the number of twelve miles precisely, from allusion to the twelve Tribes, or from any other reason retained that exact number and space, is not easy to determine; yet this is certain, that the Israelites camp was very spacious, and had a very large compass, especially granting a miles distance between the first Tents and the Tabernacle. And indeed, as to this commonly received opinion of the camps being twelves miles square on every side, we shall hardly believe it exceeds the just proportion, if we consider the vast numbers of that people: nay it might rather seem a wonder, that the encamping of so many Myriads, or rather so many hundred thousands, should not exceed that proportion. Place the Tabernacle in the midst; allow the space of one mile from each side of it (in which space were the tents of the Levites) before you come to the first tents of the Israelites, and then guess what length and bredth and thickness all the other tents would take up.

II. It is supposed lawful for any one to have walked upon the Sabbath day, not only from the outmost border of the camp to the Tabernacle, but also through the whole camp from one end of it to the other; Because the whole encamping was of one and the same, and not a diverse jurisdiction. According to that known Canon concerning עירובי חצרות Commixion or Communion of Courts. And hence it is that Maimonides makes such mention of twelve miles, and the lawfulness of walking on the Sabbath day through any City, be it as spacious as Nineveh it self.

III. But when the people were disposed of and placed in their several Cities and Towns in the Land of Canaan, and the face of things quite changed from what it had been in the wilderness, it seemed good to the wise men to circumscribe the space of a Sabbath-days journy within the bounds of two thousand Cubits. And that partly, because the inmost borders of the Israelites tents, was so much distant from the Tabernacle, as may be gathered from Jos. III. 4. and partly because it is said, Numb. XXXV. 4, 5. From the wall of the City ye shall measure a thousand Cubits, and from without the City ye shall measure two thousand Cubits. Now, o a thousand Cubits are the suburbs of the City, and two thousand Cubits are the bounds of the Sabbath.

o Sotah, fol. 27. 2.

IV. As to these words therefore of the Evangelist now before us, we must suppose they do not define the exact distance of the mount of Olives from Jerusalem, which indeed was but five furlongs, p nor do they take in the town of Bethany within the bounds of the Sabbath, which was distant fifteen furlongs, Joh. XI. 18. but they point out that place of the Mount, where our Saviour ascended into Heaven, viz. that place where that tract of the Mount of Olives ceased to be called Bethphage, and began to be called Bethany. Concerning which we have discoursed more largely in another place.

VERS.

VERS. XIII.

Ἀνέβησαν εἰς ὑπερῷον · They went up into an upper room.

לעלייתא To an upper room, in Talmudic Language.

I. It was very familiar with that Nation, that when they were to concern themselves with the Law, or any parts of Religion out of the Synagogue, they went up לעלייה into an upper Room, some uppermost part of the house. q Abniah a very rich man, invited Rabban Johanan ben Zacchai, and his Disciples, and Nicodemus, &c. to a Feast which he made at the Circumcision of his Son: when the feast was done, Rabban Johanan and his Disciples went up לעלייה into an upper Room, and read, and expounded till the fire shone round about them, as when the Law was given at Mount Sinai. Abniah was amazed at the honour that was given to the Law, and so devoted his Son to the Law. Take notice that עליה an upper-room is distinct from a dining-room, where they dined and supped, and there it was they handled the Law and divine things: to which if that ἀνώγαιον large upper room mentioned Mark XIV. 15. and Luke XXII. 12. where our Saviour celebrated the Passover, had any affinity, it seems to have been something different from a common dining-room.

q Juchasin, fol. 23. 2.

II. Such a kind of ὑπερῷον or upper-room, I presume was the Beth Midras of this or that Rabbin. r R. Simeon, saith, I saw בני עליה the Sons of the upper room that they were few in number, that is, (if I take the word עליה aright) the Sons or Disciples of Beth Midras; but I will not contend in this matter.

r Juchas. fol. 45. 2.

s Those are the traditions which they delivered בעליירת in the upper room of Hananiah, ben Hezekiah ben Garon: and many instances of that kind. Of this kind seems that upper chamber at Troas, mentioned, Acts XX. 8. And so, where we meet with the Church in such or such an ones house, it seems to look this way: viz. some upper part of the house, sequestred on purpose for the assembling of the Church, in the same manner that the Beth Midras was set apart for the meeting of the Disciples of this or that Rabbin. And as the Beth Midras was always in the house of some Rabbin, so probably for the most part were these Churches in the house of some Minister or Doctor of the Church. Was not Aquila such an one, in whose house we find a Church mentioned? Rom. XVI. 5. compared with Acts XVIII. 26. Was not Philemon such an one? Philem. ver. 2.

VERS. XV.

Ὡς ἑκατὸν εἴκοσι · About an hundred and twenty.

THE same number was Ezra's great Synagogue. t Ezra was the head of all, he was the twenty second receiver of Traditions, וכל בית דינו היו קד וקנים and his whole Sanhedrin consisted of an hundred and twenty Elders. There was no stated Council in any City under this number. u How many men are requisite in a City, that it might be capable of having a Council setled in it? An hundred and twenty. What is their office? Three and twenty are to make up the number of the lesser Sanhedrin. And there are three classes of twenty three; behold there are ninety two. There are ten בטלין to be at leisure for the Synagogue; behold there are an hundred and two. Two בעלי דינין (the Plantiff and the Defendant) who have business before the Sanhedrin, שני זוממין Two crafty witnesses (those who by their counter-evidence might implead the witnesses if possible of a lie.) שני זוממי זוממין two counter witnesses, against those counter witnesses. Two Scribes. Two Chazanim, two collectors of the Alms, and a third to distribute. רופא A Physitian. (The Glos hath it, one to circumcise Infants) אומן An Artificer, Chirurgion, (the Glos is, one to let blood) לבלר A Libellary, i. e. one that was to write bills of Espousals, Divorces, Contracts, &c. and a Schoolmaster, behold an hundred and twenty. If you will pick any thing out of this parity of number, you may. However certainly the number of those we have now before us, ought always to occur to mind, when we read such passages as these, They were all with one accord in one place, Act. II. 1. They were all scattered abroad excepting the Apostles, Chap. VIII. 1. So Chap. XI. 19. &c.

u Sanhedr. fol. 17. 2. & Maimon. Sanhedr. cap. 1.

Beside the Twelve Apostles, and Seventy two Disciples, who can tell us who those other thirty six were that were to fill up the number? what kind of men, of what degree and quality, who though they were neither of the number of the Twelve Apostles, nor the Seventy Disciples, yet were admitted members of that great and holy Consistory. Reason it self seems against it, that any women should be accounted of that number. As also it is plain, that though there were more in the City that believed, yet these were for some special cause and reason ascribed into this peculiar fellowship and number. As to the Twelve, and the Seventy, we need not enquire; as to the rest, let let us see whether it may not be intimated to us, ver. 21. that they had been the followers of Christ in company with the others from the very first of his publishing the Gospel.

That Peter should be always in the head of them, and have the chief parts in the whole History, as their Prolocutor and chief actor, must be attributed.

1. To his Seniority, he being older than any of the other twelve. And whereas under this notion of his age he had been their chief speaker all the while that our Saviour conversed amongst them, it was but just and reasonable he should hold the same place and quality, now that their Lord was gone.

2. To his repentance. As what was but necessary that he who had so scandalously fallen might by his future zeal and religion, as much as possible give some considerable testimonies both of his repentance and recovery.

3. He was design'd to the Apostleship of Circumcision, as the chief Minister; it was fit therefore that he should be chief amongst those of the Circumcision. But when we stile him the chief Minister of the Circumcision, we do not dream of any Primacy he had over the other Ministers of the Circumcision; only that the greatest work, and the widest space of that Ministry fell to his lot, viz. Mesopotamia, or the Babylonish and Assyrian Captivity, namely, the Jews in Babylon, and the Ten Tribes mixt with them. And when we speak of him as acting the chief and principal parts, we do not believe the rest of the Apostles idle, we know they were endowed with equal authority, an equal gift of Miracles, equal number of Tongues, equal wisdom, and an equal power of Preaching the Gospel; but that he for the reasons above mention'd had shewn his zeal, industry, and activity in some ways and measures very extraordinary.

VERS. XVIII.

Καὶ πρηνὴς γενόμενος ἐλάκησε μέσος· Falling headlong he burst asunder in the midst.

THE Vulgar and Erasmus have it, Suspensus crepuit medius: Being hang'd he crackt asunder in the midst. So the Italian Translation, Appicato crepo pelmezzo; rendring St. Matthew rather than St. Luke; and I question indeed whether they do rightly take the mind of St. Matthew while they so strictly confine the word ἀπήγξατο to being hang'd. I have produced my conjecture concerning this business at Mat. XXVII. viz. that the Devil immediately after Judas had cast back his money into the Temple, caught him up into the air, strangled him, threw him headlong, and dasht him in pieces upon the ground. For,

I. It is questionable enough whether the word ἀπήγξατο do necessarily and singly denote he hanged himself, and not as well, he was hanged or choaked. And indeed whether the word always suppose the Halter: how the learned Hiensius hath defended the negative, we may consult him upon this place, and upon Mat. XXVII.

II. If Judas hanged himself as is commonly believ'd, and commonly so painted, how could it be said of him that ἐγένετο πρηνὴς, he fell headlong. Grant that upon the breaking of the Halter he might fall upon the ground, yet what matter is it whether he fell on his face, or that he fell backward. But if πρηνὴς be derived ἀπὸ τοῦ προνεύειν, as the Grammarians would have it, it may be headlong as well as upon the face, that is as upon the face, is opposed τῷ ὑπτίῳ to supine or backward.

III. Histories tell us of persons strangled by the Devil. That is a known passage in Tob. III. 8. Asmodeus חונק (so it is in the Heb. of P. Fagius) strangled Sarahs seven husbands, &c. and it may be the less wonder if the Devil being corporally seated in this wretch, should at last strangle him.

IV. There are also Histories of the Devil snatching up some into the air, and carrying them away with him. Now of all mortals no wretch did ever more deserve so direful a fate than this Traytor; nor did any other death become the most impious of all mankind than the dreadfullest the Devil (to whom he was intirely given up) could inflict, as what might be of most horrour to himself, and terrour to others.

V. The words immediately following, That this was known to all the dwellers at Jerusalem, ver. 19. argue it was a thing of no common and ordinary event, and must be something more than hanging himself, which was an accident not so very unusual in that Nation.

Καὶ ἐξεχύθη πάντα τὰ σπλάγχνα αὐτοῦ· And all his bowels gushed out.

w A certain Syrian saw a man who fell from the roof of his house upon the ground, נפקעה his belly burst and his bowels gusht out. The Syrian brought the Son of him that had thus fallen, and slew him before him, באחוצה עניים but at length it seem'd so. The Glos

The Devil had dwelt in this wretch for three days or thereabout, from the time that he had enter'd him upon his receiving the Sop, Joh. XIII. and now by an horrid eruption tearing out his bowels he goes out again.

VERS. XIX.

Ἀκελδαμά· Aceldama.

חקל דמא A field of blood, ſo call'd both as it had been purchas'd with the price of blood, and as it had been water'd with the blood of this Traytor; for hither I preſume the Devil had thrown him headlong; and upon this event it was that the Prieſts were mov'd to purchaſe this very field; and ſo in a twofold ſenſe it might be ſaid of this Traytor, that ἐκτήσατο χωρίον, he purchaſed a field, both as it was bought with his money, and ſeal'd with his blood. If Aceldama was in that quarter of the City that it is now ſhewn in, to ſtrangers, that is, between the Eaſt and the South, as Borchard tells us; then it was in the valley of Hinnom or thereabout.

II. I would therefore ſuſpect that this Joſeph who is call'd Barſabas, might be Joſes the Son of Alpheus, the brother of James the leſs, who as James alſo was called the Juſt; nor could we ſuppoſe any a more likely Candidate for the Apoſtleſhip, than he who was brother to ſo many of the Apoſtles, and had been ſo oftentimes nam'd with James. What the word Barſabas might ſignifie, it is not ſo eaſie to determine, becauſe Sabas may agree with ſo many Hebrew words; the Nomenclators render it, The Son of Converſion, Son of quiet, Son of an Oath. (But by the way who can tell what Etymology the Arabick Interpreter in Bib. Polygl. referr'd to when he render'd it ברצאפאן Barzaphan?) I would write it בר סבא Bar Saba, which alſo the Erpenian Arab. does) i. e. a wiſe Son, unleſs you had rather Son of an old man. There is alſo another Barſabas, Chap. XV. 22. Judas ſirnamed Barſabas, by whom if Judas the Apoſtle be to be underſtood, let Joſes and he (both Barſabas) be brothers, both of them בר סבא the Sons of old Alpheus.

CHAP. II.

VERS. I.

Καὶ ἐν τῷ συμπληροῦσθαι τὴν ἡμέραν τῆς Πεντηκοστῆς· And when the day of Pentecost was fully come.

I. THIS word Pentecoſt, ſeems to be taken into uſe by the Helleniſt Jews, to ſignifie this Feaſt, which alſo almoſt all the Verſions retain, the Weſtern eſpecially, and amongſt the Eaſtern, the Syriack and Æthiopick. The Hebraizing Jews commonly call this Feaſt by the name of עצרת from which one of the Arabicks differs very little when it renders it in this place יום אל ענצרת אלחמשנן where the letter נ is only interſerted; the other omits the word wholly, and only hath איום אלחמשין the day of the fifty.

II. It is well enough known that עצרת in the Holy Scriptures was an Holy-day, Levit. XXIII. 36. Deut. XVI. 8. and the reaſon why the Jews ſo peculiarly appropriate it to the Feaſt of Pentecoſt, ſeems to be this, becauſe this Feaſt conſiſted in one ſolemn day, whereas the Feaſt of Paſſover, and of Tabernacles had more days. f As the days of the Feaſt are ſeven. R. Chaija ſaith, becauſe the Pentecoſt is but for one day, is the mourning ſo too? They ſay unto him, thou argueſt from a far fetcht tradition. Where the Gloſs hath it, That this Feaſt is but for one day, we learn from the very word עצרת. g The men of the Town Mihæſia are ſtrong of heart, for they ſee the glory of the Law twice in the year. The Gloſs is, Thither all Iſrael is gather'd together in the Month Adar, that they may hear the Traditions concerning that Paſſover in the School of Rabh Aſai: and in the Month Elul, that they may hear the Traditions concerning the Feaſt of Tabernacles. But they were not ſo gather'd together עצרת שאינו אלא יום אחר at the Feaſt of Pentecoſt, becauſe that is not above one day.

f Bereſh. rabba. fol. 114. 3.

g Beracoth, fol. 17. 2.

Hence that Baithuſean may be the better believ'd in his diſpute with Rabban Johanan h, Moſes our Maſter (ſaith he) will love Iſrael, ויודע שעצרת יום אחד הוא and he knows that the Feaſt of Pentecoſt is but for one day.

h Menacoth, fol. 65. 1.

III. And yet there is mention of a ſecond Holy-day in Pentecoſt, הנהו קבוראי דקבור נצשה ביום טוב ראשון של עצרת Rabh Papa hath ſhammatiz'd thoſe bearers that bury the dead on the firſt Feaſt-day of Pentecoſt, &c. where the mention of the firſt Feaſt-day hints to us that there is a ſecond, which we find elſewhere aſſerted in expreſs terms. i R. Simeon ben Jozedek ſaith, in eighteen days any ſingle perſon repeats the Hallel over, that is to ſay in the ſeven days of the Feaſt of Tabernacles, in the eight days of the Feaſt of Dedication, the firſt day of the Paſſover, and the firſt day of Pentecoſt. But in the captivity they did it in one and twenty days. In the nine days of the Feaſt of Tabernacles, in the eight days of the Feaſt of Dedication, in the two Feaſt-days of the Paſſover, ושני ימים טובים של עצרת and the two Feaſt-days of Pentecoſt.

i Erachin. fol. 10. 1.

Whereas it is ſaid בגולה in the captivity, the difficulty is anſwer'd; for although in the land of Iſrael there was but one ſolemn day in the Feaſt of Pentecoſt, yet amongſt the Jews in foreign Countries there were two; which alſo happen'd in other Solemnities. For inſtance, within Paleſtine they kept but one day holy in the beginning of the year, viz. the firſt day of the Month Tiſri; but in Babylon and other foreign Countries they obſerv'd both the firſt and the ſecond day. And the reaſon was, becauſe at ſo great a diſtance from the Sanhedrin at Jeruſalem, they could not be exactly certain of the preciſe day as it had been ſtated by the Sanhedrin, they obſerv'd therefore two days, that by the one or the other they might be ſure to hit upon the right.

IV. God himſelf did indeed inſtitute but one Holy-day in the Feaſt of Pentecoſt, Levit. XXIII. and therefore is it more peculiarly call'd עצרת a ſolemn day, becauſe it had but one Feaſt-day. And yet that Feaſt hath the name of חג and רגל, the ſame titles that the Feaſt of Tabernacles, and the Paſſover had, Exod. XXIII. 14, &c. and all the males appear'd in this Feaſt as well as in the others; nor was this Feaſt without its Chagigah any more than the reſt. So that however the firſt day of Pentecoſt only was the Holy and ſolemn day, yet the Feaſt it ſelf was continu'd for ſeven days. So the Doctors in Roſh haſhanah, k R. Oſhaiah ſaith, whence comes it that עצרת the Pentecoſt hath תשלומין compenſations for all the ſeven days? becauſe the Scripture ſaith, בחג חמצות In the Feaſt of unleaven'd bread, ובחג השבועות and in the Feaſt of Weeks, ובחג הסוכות and in the Feaſt of Tabernacles. He compares the Feaſt of Weeks (i.e. Pentecoſt) with the Feaſt of unleaven'd bread. That hath compenſations for all the ſeven days, אף חג השבועות יש לו תשלומין כל ז׳ ſo the Feaſt of Weeks (i.e. Pentecoſt) hath compenſations for all the ſeven days. They call'd that תשלומין compenſations, when any one had not made his juſt offerings in the beginning of the Feaſt, he repair'd and compenſated this negligence or defect of his by offering in any other of the ſeven days. And thus much may ſuffice as to this whole Feaſt in general. Now as to the very day of Pentecoſt it ſelf it may not be amiſs to add ſomething.

I. It is well known that the account of weeks and days from the Paſover to Pentecoſt took its beginning from, and depended upon the day of offering the ſheaf of the firſt-fruits, Levit. XXIII. 15. But through the ambiguity of the phraſe ממחרת השבת the morrow of the Sabbath, there hath aroſe a controverſie betwixt the Scribes and Baithuſians, whether by the Sabbath, ought to be underſtood the weekly Sabbath (or as the Scribes commonly call'd it שבת בראשית the Sabbath of the Creation) or whether it ſhould be underſtood of the Sabbatical day, i.e. the firſt day of the ſeven days of Paſover, which was a ſolemn day, Exod. XII. 16. the Baithuſians contend vehemently for the former, and will not have the ſheaf offer'd but after the weekly Sabbath. As ſuppoſe the firſt day of the Paſover ſhould fall out upon the firſt day of the week, they would ſtay till the whole week with the Sabbath-day was run out, and then on the morrow of that Sabbath, i.e. the firſt day of the following week they offer'd the ſheaf. But the Scribes very differently keep ſtrictly to the ſixteenth day of the Month Niſan, for offering the firſt-fruits without any diſpenſation, after the Sabbatical-day, or the firſt day of the Feaſt is over. And amongſt other arguments by which they ſtrengthen their opinion, thoſe two different places of Scripture, Exod. XII. 15. Seven days ye ſhall eat unleavened bread, and Deut. XVI. 8. Six days thou ſhalt eat unleavened bread; they according to the ſenſe they have do thus reconcile, Seven days indeed you ſhall eat unleavened bread; that is, unleavened bread of the old wheat on the firſt day of the Feaſt, the ſheaf being not yet offer'd, and unleaven'd bread of the new wheat the remaining ſix days after you have offered the firſt-fruits l.

l Siphra. fol. 51. 1. Peſikta, fol. 21. 1. Menach. fol. 66. 1

II. If the day of the firſt-fruits be to be taken into the number of the fifty days, which the Authors now quoted do clearly enough affirm out of thoſe words, Deut. XVI. 9. Number the ſeven weeks to thy ſelf מהחל חרמש בקמה when thou beginneſt to put the ſickle into the corn; then it will appear plain enough to any one that upon whatſoever day of the week the ſheaf-offering ſhould fall, on that day of the week the day of Pentecoſt would fall too. And hence the Baithuſians contended ſo earneſtly that the ממחרת השבת the morrow after the Sabbath (on which it is commanded that the ſheaf of the firſt-fruits ſhould be offer'd) ſhould be underſtood of the firſt day of the week, that ſo the day of Pentecoſt might fall out to be the firſt day of the week too; not ſo much in honour of that day (which is indeed our Lords-day) but that the Pentecoſt might have the more Feaſt-days, כדי שיהו ישראל מתענגין שני ימים that the Iſraelites might delight themſelves for two days together, as one of them ſpeaks out their meaning *.

* Menac. fol. 65. 1.

III. As to the year therefore we are now upon wherein Chriſt aſcended, and the Holy Ghoſt came down, the ſheaf-offering was on the Sabbath-day. For the Paſchal lamb was eaten on Thurſday, ſo that Friday (on which day our Saviour was Crucified) was the firſt day of the Feaſt, the Sabbatical or Holy-day. And the following-day which was their Sabbath, was the δευτέρᾳ, the ſecond, on which the ſheaf was offered, whiles Chriſt lay in the grave; and for this very reaſon was it ſaid to be ἡμέρᾳ μεγάλῃ τῇ σαββάτῳ, an high day of the Sabbath, Joh. XIX. 31.

IV. Let us enquire therefore whether the day of Pentecoſt fell out on their Sabbath-day; I know indeed that the fifty days are reckoned by ſome from the Reſurrection of our Lord, and then Pentecoſt, or the fiftieth day, muſt fall on the firſt day of the week, that is, our Lords-day; but if we number the days from the common Epocha, that is, from the time of offering the ſheaf of firſt-fruits (which account doubtleſs St. Luke doth follow) then the day of Pentecoſt fell out upon the Jewiſh Sabbath. And here, by the good leave of ſome learned men it may be queſtion'd, Whether the Holy Ghoſt was poured out upon the Diſciples on the very day of Pentecoſt or no. The reaſons of this queſtion may be theſe.

I. The ambiguity of the words themſelves, Ἐν τῷ συμπληροῦσθαι τὴν ἡμέραν, which may be either render'd as we have done in Engliſh, When the day of Pentecoſt was fully come; or as they in the Italian, Et nel finire del giorno de la Pentecoſte, q. d. when it was fully gone. So that the phraſe leaves it undetermin'd whether the day of Pentecoſt was fully come, or fully gone; and what is there could be alledg'd againſt it, ſhould we render it in the latter ſenſe?

II. It is worthy our obſervation that Chriſt the Antitype in anſwering ſome Types that repreſented him, did not tye himſelf up to the very day of the Type its ſelf for the fulfilling of it, but put it off to the day following. So it was not upon the very day of the Paſover, but the day following that, ἐθύθη ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν Πάσχα, Chriſt our Paſſover was ſacrific'd for us, 1 Cor. V. 7. It was not on the very day that the ſheaf of the firſt-fruits was offer'd, but the day following that Chriſt became ἀπαρχὴ τῶν κεκοιμημένων, the firſt-fruits of them that ſlept, 1 Cor. XV. 20. So alſo did he inſtitute the Chriſtian Sabbath not the ſame day with the Jewiſh Sabbath, wherein God had finiſht the work of his Creation, but but the day following wherein Christ had finisht the work of his Redemption. And so it was agreeable to reason, and to the order wherein he dispos'd of things already mentioned, that he should indulg that mysterious gift of the Holy Ghost, not upon the day of the Jewish Sabbath, but the day following, the day of his own Resurrection from the grave; that the Spirit should not be pour'd out upon the same day wherein the giving of the Law was commemorated, but upon a day that might keep up the commemoration of himself for ever.

III. We can hardly invent a more fit and proper reason why upon this day they should be ἅπαντες ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, All with one accord in one place; than that they were so gather'd together for the celebration of the Lords-day. So that although we have adventur'd to call it into question whether the Holy Ghost was pour'd out upon the very day of the Jewish Pentecost, yet have we not done it with any love to contradiction, but as having considerable reason so to do, and with design of asserting to the Lords-day its just honour and esteem; for on that day beyond all controversie, the Holy Ghost did come down amongst them.

Ἦσαν ἅπαντες ὁμοθυμαδὸν, &c. They were all with one accord, &c.

Who were these ἅπαντες, these ALL here mention'd? probably the CXX spoken of Chap. I. 15. and the connexion falls in well enough with the foregoing story. Those All were together when the Election of the twelfth Apostle was propounded, and when the choice was made too. And therefore why the ALL in this place ought not to have reference to this very number also, who can alledg any reason? Perhaps you will say, this reason may be given why it should not; namely, that all those that were here assembled, were endu'd with the gift of Tongues, and who will say that all the hundred and twenty were so gifted? I do my self believe it, and that for these reasons.

I. All the rest were likely to publish the Gospel in foreign Countries, as well as the Apostles, and therefore was it necessary that they also should be endow'd with foreign Tongues.

II. The Apostles themselves imparted the same gift by the imposition of hands to those whom they Ordained the Ministers of particular Churches. It would seem unreasonable therefore that those extraordinary persons that had been all along in company with Christ and his Apostles, and were to be the great Preachers of the Gospel in several parts of the world, should not be enricht with the same gift.

III. It is said of the seven Deacons that they were πλήρεις Πνεύματος ἁγίου, full of the Holy Ghost, even before they were chosen to that office; which doth so very well agree with what is said in this part of the story, ver. 4. Ἐπλήσθησαν ἅπαντες Πνεύματος ἁγίου, they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, that we can hardly find out a more likely time or place wherein these Deacons had been thus repleniſht, than when the Apostles themselves were so, that is, upon the coming down of the Holy Ghost.

IV. The dignity and prerogative of the Apostles above the rest of the Disciples, did not so much consist in this gift of Tongues being appropriated to themselves; but in this amongst other things, that they were capable of conferring this gift upon others, which the rest could not do. Philip the Deacon doubtless did himself speak with Tongues, but he could not confer this gift to the Samaritans, that they also should speak with Tongues as he did; this was reserv'd to Peter and to John the Apostles.

V. The Holy Ghost as to the gift of Tongues fell upon all that heard Peter's discourse in the house of Cornelius, Chap. X. 44. it may seem the less strange therefore if it should fall on these also at this time and in this place.

VERS. II.

Ἠχὼ ὥσπερ φερομένης πνοῆς βιαίας· A sound as of a rushing mighty wind.

THE sound of a mighty wind, but without wind; so also Tongues like as of fire, but without fire. Φερομένης is fitly and emphatically enough added here; but I question whether ἐπεφέρετο was so properly put by the Greek Interpreters in Gen. I. 2. Πνεῦμα Θεοῦ ἐπεφέρετο ἐπάνω τοῦ ὕδατος, the Spirit of God was carry'd upon the face of the waters; and yet the Paraphrast and Samaritan Copy is much wider still from the meaning and intention of Moses, when they render it by מנשבה he breath'd upon the waters. I conceive they might in those words, the Spirit of God mov'd upon the face of the waters, have an eye to those waters that cover'd the earth; whereas Moses plainly distinguisheth between the Abyss, that is, the waters that cover'd the earth, upon the face of which deep the darkness was; and those waters which the Spirit of God mov'd upon, that is, the waters which were above the firmament, ver. 6, 7. And by the moving or incubation of the Spirit upon these waters, I would rather understand the motion of the Heavens, the Spirit of God turning them about, and by that motion cherishing the things below, as the bird doth by sitting upon its young, than of any blowing or breathing of the Spirit or the wind upon them; or that the Spirit was carry'd upon the waters as a wind is upon the Sea, or upon the Land.

VERS. III.

Διαμεριζόμεναι γλῶσσαι ὡσεὶ πυρός. Cloven Tongues like as of fire.

THE confusion of Languages was the casting off of the Gentiles, and the confusion of Religion; for after once all other Nations, excepting that of the Jewish, came to be deprived of the use and knowledg of the Hebrew Tongue; in which Language alone the things of true Religion, and all Divine truth were known, taught, and deliver'd, it was unavoidable but that they must needs be depriv'd of the knowledg of God and Religion. Hence that very darkness that fell upon the Gentile world by that confusion of Tongues, continued upon them to this very time. But now behold the remedy, and that wound that had been inflicted by the confusion, is now heal'd by the gift of Tongues; that Veil that was spread over all Nations at Babel was taken away at mount Zion, Isai. XXVII. 7. We meet with a form of prayer in the Jewish writings, which was used on the solemn fast of the ninth month Ab, of which this is one clause m, Have mercy, O God, upon the City that mourneth, that is troden down and desolate עתיד ובאש אתה באש החרבתה because thou didst lay it waste by fire, and by fire wilt build it up again. If the Jews expect and desire their Jerusalem should be rebuilt by fire, let them direct their eyes toward these fiery Tongues, and acknowledg both that the building commenc'd from that time, and the manner also how only it is to be restor'd.

m Hitros. Taanith, fol. 65. 3.

VERS. XIII.

Γλύκους μεμεστωμένοι. These men are full of new wine.

R Abba saith, מיהויב אינוש בסומי בפוריא A man is bound to make himself so mellow on the Feast of Purim, that he shall not be able to distinguish between cursed be Haman, and blessed be Mordecai. Rabbah and R. Zeira feasted together on the Feast of Purim אינסים, and they were sweeten'd, or made very mellow. The Gloss is, ואיבסום נשתכרו and they were sweeten'd, i.e. they were got drunk. So that the γλύκους μεμεστωμένοι εἰσὶ, is nothing but what they were wont to express in their common Dialect איבסמי they are sweeten'd, that is, are drunk.

But may we not rather judg those drunk, who by saying the Apostles were full of new wine, imputed that sudden skill of theirs in so many Languages to wine and intemperance? The Rabbins indeed mention a Demon קרדיקום Cordicus, who possesseth those that are drunk with new wine n. But is he so great a Master of Art and wit, that he can furnish them with Tongues too? These scoffers seem to be of the very dregs and scum of the people, who knowing no other Language but their own Mother-tongue, and not understanding what the Apostles said, while they were speaking in foreign languages, thought they said nothing but meer babble and gibberish.

VERS. XV.

Ἐστὶ γὰρ ὥρα τρίτη τῆς ἡμέρας. It is but the third hour of the day.

THAT is with us, nine a Clock in the morning; before which time especially on the Sabbath and other Feast-days the Jews were not wont so much as to taste any thing of meat or drink, nor indeed hardly of other days. o This was the custom of the Religious of old, first to say over his morning prayers on the Sabbath-day, with those additional ones in the Synagogue, and then go home and take his second repast. For he had taken his first repast on the evening before at the entrance of the Sabbath. Nothing might be tasted before the prayers in the Synagogue were finisht, which sometimes lasted even till noonday; for so the Gloss upon the place, When they continue in the Synagogue beyond the sixth hour and an half, which is the time of the great Minchah (for on a Feast-day they delay'd their coming out of the Synagogue) then let a man pray his prayer of the Minchah before he eat, and so let him eat. And in those days it was, that that commonly obtain'd, which Targ. in Coheleth noteth: בתר דמקרבין תמידא אנליו לחמא בזמן ר' שעין After they had offer'd the daily Sacrifice they eat bread in the time of the four hours; i.e. in the fourth hour. In Bava Mezuah q, a certian officer of the Kings teacheth R. Eleazar the Son of R. Simeon how he should

VERS. XVII.

Ἐν ταῖς ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις. In the laſt days.

THE Prohet Joel hath it אחרי כן After theſe things. Greek, μετὰ τοῦτο· After theſe things. Where Kimchi upon the place hath this note, והיה אחרי כן כמו והיה באחרית הימים And it ſhall come to paſs after theſe things, is the ſame with, ἐν ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις, it ſhall come to paſs in the laſt days. We have elſewhere obſerved that by the laſt days is to be underſtood the laſt days of Jeruſalem, and the Jewiſh Oeconomy, viz. when the τέλος τοῦ αἰῶνος ἰουδαϊκοῦ, the end of the Jewiſh world r drew near. And there would be the leſs doubt as to this matter, if we would frame a right notion of that great and terrible day of the Lord: that is, The day of his vengeance upon that place and Nation. Which terror the Jews, according to their cuſtom and faſhion, put far off from themſelves, and devolve it upon Gog and Magog, who were to be cut off and deſtroyed.

r Vide Matth. XXIV. 3. & 1 Cor. X. 11.

Ἐκχεῶ ἀπὸ τοῦ Πνεύματός μου ἐπὶ πᾶσαν σάρκα. I will pour out of my ſpirit upon all fleſh.

The Jews cautiouſly enough here, though not ſo honeſtly, apply this Propheſie and promiſe to Iſrael ſolely, as having this for a Maxim amongſt them, That the Holy Ghoſt is never imparted to any Gentile. Hence thoſe of the Circumciſion that believed were ſo aſtoniſhed, when they ſaw, That on the Gentiles alſo was poured out the Gift of the Holy Ghoſt, Chap. X. 45. But with the Jews good leave, whether they will or no, the Gentiles are beyond all queſtion included within ſuch like promiſes as theſe. All fleſh ſhall ſee the Salvation of God, Iſai. XL. 5. And All fleſh come and worſhip before the Lord, Iſai. LXVI. 23, &c.

VERS. XIX.

Καὶ ἀτμίδα καπνοῦ. And vapor of ſmoke.

THE Prophet hath it in the Hebrew ותמרות עשן and pillars of ſmoke. St. Luke follows the Greek, who as it ſhould ſeem, are not very ſolicitous about that nice diſtinction between עשן מתמר ועולה כמקל Pillaring ſmoke, or ſmoke aſcending like a ſtaff, and עשן קמציע לכאן ולכאן Smoke diſperſing it ſelf here and there. A diſtinction we meet with in Joma ſ, where we have a ridiculous ſtory concerning the curioſity of the Wiſemen about the aſcending up of the ſmoke of Incenſe. ſ Fol. 38. 1.

As to theſe prodigies in blood, fire, and ſmoke, I would underſtand it of the ſlaughter and conflagrations that ſhould be committed in that Nation to a wonder by ſeditious and inteſtine broils there. They were monſters rather than inſtances, than which there could never have been a more prodigious preſage of the ruine of that Nation, than that they grew ſo cruel within themſelves, breathing nothing but mutual ſlaughters, and deſolations.

VERS. XXIII.

Τοῦτον τῇ ὡρισμένῃ βουλῇ καὶ προγνώσει τοῦ Θεοῦ ἔκδοτον λαβόντες, &c. Him being delivered by the determinate Council and fore-knowledge of God, ye have taken, &c.

WE may beſt fetch the reaſon why St. Peter adds this clauſe, from the conceptions of the Jews. Can he be the Meſſiah, think they, that hath ſuffered ſuch things? What! The Meſſiah Crucified and ſlain? Alas! how different are theſe things from the character of the Meſſiah? לו יתרון ומעלה וכבוד על כל המלכים t To him belongs honour, and glory, and preeminence above all Kings that have ever been in the world, according as all the Prophets from Moſes our Maſter (to whom be peace!) to Malachy (to whom be peace!) have Propheſied concering him. Is he then the Meſſiah that was ſpit upon, ſcouged, thruſt through with a Spear, and Crucified? Yes ſaith St. Peter, theſe things he ſuffered t Rambam in Artic. fid. Jud. Sanhedr. fol. 121. 1.

τῇ ὡρισμένῃ βουλῇ καὶ προγνώσει Θεοῦ by the determinate counsel, and fore-knowledge of God. And these things had been foretold concerning him from Moses to Malachy, so that he was never the less their Messiah though he suffered these things; nor did he indeed suffer these things by chance, but by the determinate counsel of God. What the learned have argued from this place, concerning God's decrees, I leave to the Schools.

VERS. XXIV.

Λύσας τὰς ὠδῖνας τοῦ θανάτου. Having loosed the pains of death.

LET these ὠδῖναι θανάτου, be either the pains of death, or the bands of death, yet is it doubtful whether St. Peter might speak only of the death of Christ, or of death in general; so that the sense may be, that God raised him up, and by his Resurrection hath loosed the bands of death, with respect to others also. But supposing the expression ought to be appropriated to Christ only (whom indeed they do chiefly respect) then by ὠδῖνας θανάτου, we are not to understand so much the torments and pangs in the last moments of death, as those bands which followed, viz. the continued separation of Soul and Body, the putrefaction and corruption of the body in the Grave, which two things are those which St. Peter acquits our Saviour from in the following words. For, however it be a great truth that death is the wages of sin, yet is it not to be understood so much of those very pangs whereby the Soul and Body are disjoyned, as the continuation of the divorce betwixt Soul and Body in the Grave.

VERS. XXVII.

Οὐκ ἐγκαταλείψεις τὴν ψυχήν μου εἰς ᾅδου. Thou wilt not leave my Soul in Hell.

IT is well know what the word Ἅδης signifies in Greek Authors: viz. the state of the dead, be they just or unjust. And their Eternal state is distinguished not so much by the word it self as by the qualities of the persons. All the just, the Heroes, the followers of Religion and Vertue, according to those Authors are in Ἅδης, Hades, but it is in Elysium, in joy and felicity. All the evil, the wicked, the unjust, they are in Hades too, but then that is in Hell, in torture and punishment. So that the word Hades is not used in opposition to Heaven, or the state of the blessed, but to this world only, or this present state of life; which might be made out by numberless instances in those Authors. The Soul of our Saviour therefore κατῆλθεν εἰς Ἅδου, descended into Hell, i. e. he passed into the state of the dead, viz. into that place in Hades, where the Souls of good Men went. But even there did not God suffer his Soul to abide, separate from his body, nor his body to putrifie in the Grave, because it was impossible for Christ to be holden of those bands of death, seeing his death was not some punishment of sin, but the utmost pitch of obedience, he himself being not only without sin, but uncapable of committing any.

VERS. XXIX.

Ἐξὸν εἰπεῖν μετὰ παῤῥησίας, &c. Let me speak freely, &c.

IT is doubted whether ἐξὸν should be rendred I may, or let me: If that which R. Isaac saith, obtained at that time, viz. Those words, my flesh shall rest in hope, teach us שלא שלט בו רמה ותולעה That neither worm nor Insect had any power over David [u], then was it agreeable enough that St. Peter should, by way of Preface, crave the leave of his Auditory in speaking of David's being putrified in the Grace; and so the word ἐξὸν is well rendred, let me. But I may, pleaseth me best, and by this Paraphrase the words may be illustrated. "That this passage, Thou shalt not leave my soul in Hell, &c. "is not to be applied to David himself appears, in that I may confidently averr concern- "ing him, that he was dead and buried, and never rose again, but his Soul was left εἰς "ᾅδου, in the state of the dead, and he saw corruption; for his Sepulchre is with us "unto this day, under that very notion that it is the Sepulchre of David who dyed and "was there buried; nor is their one syllable any where mentioned of the Resurrection "of his body, or the return of his soul ἐξ ᾅδου, from the state of the dead.

VERS. XXXIV.

Εἶπεν ὁ Κύριος τῷ Κυρίῳ μου, &c. The Lord said unto my Lord. &c.

SEEING St. Peter doth with so much assurance and without scruple apply these words to the Messiah, it is some sign that that Comment wherewith the later Jews have gloz'd over this place, was not thought of or invented at that time; Glossing on the words thus, The Lord said unto Abraham, sit thou on my right hand. x Sem the great, said unto Eleazar when the Kings of the East and of the West came against you, how did you do? He said unto him אויהי הב"ה לאברהם ראיתניה מימיתה God took up Abraham and made him sit at his right hand. He threw dust upon them, and that dust was turned into Swords; Stubble, and that Stubble was turned into Darts; so it is said in David's Psalm, the Lord said unto my Lord sit thou at my right hand. Where the Glos very cautiously notes, that these words, The Lord said unto my Lord, are the words of Eleazar, whose Lord of right Abraham might be called. x Sanhedr. fol. 108. 2.

y R. Zechary in the name of R. Ismael saith. God had a purpose to have drawn the Priesthood from Sem, according as it is said, he was the Priest of the Most high God. But when he pronounced his blessing of Abraham, before his blessing of God, God derived the Priesthood from Abraham. For it is said, and he blessed him saying, Blessed be Abraham of the Most High God, possessor of Heaven and Earth: and blessed be the Most High God. Abraham saith unto him, doth any one put the blessing of the Servant before the blessing of his Lord? Immediately the Priesthood was given to Abraham. As it is said, The Lord said unto my Lord, sit thou on my right hand: It is written afterward, thou art a Priest for ever, עיר״ for the words of Melchizedek [who had not placed his blessings in due order.] And forasmuch as it is written, And he was a Priest of the Most High God, it intimates to us, that he was a Priest but his seed was not. Can we think that this Glos was framed at that time, when St. Peter so confidently, as though none would oppose him in it, applied this passage to the Messiah? which also our Saviour himself did before him to the great Doctors of that Nation, and there was not one that opened his mouth against it, Matth. XXII. 44. y Nederim, fol. 32. 2.

VERS. XXXVIII.

Βαπτισθήτω ἕκαστος ὑμῶν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. Be Baptised every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ.

BEZA tells us, That this doth not declare the Form of Baptism, but the scope and end of it. Yet this clause is wanting in the Syriack Interpreter. Wherever he might have got a Copy wherein this was wanting, yet is it not so in other Copies. But to let that pass: What he sayeth that this doth not declare the Form of Baptism, is, I fear, a mistake: for at that time they Baptised amongst the Jews, in the name of Jesus (although among the Gentiles they Baptised in the Name of the Father, and the Son and holy Ghost) that Jesus might be acknowledged for the Messiah by them that were Baptised, than which nothing was more tenaciously and obstinately denyed and contradicted by the Jews. Let the Jew therefore in his Baptism own Jesus for the true Messiah, and let the Gentile in his, confess the true God, three in one.

VERS. XLI.

Προσετέθησαν ψυχαὶ ὡς τρισχίλιαι. There were added about three thousand souls.

AND Chap. IV. 4. ὡσεὶ χιλιάδες πέντε· About five thousand. To which I would referr that passage in Psal. CX. 3. עמך נדבות ביום חילך Thy people shall be a willing people in the day of thy power. The day of Christ's power was the day of his Resurrection, when he had subdued Death and Hell; and the day of his Ascension when he was set at the right hand of God above all principality and power; concerning which the first Verse of that Psalm speaks. The story in this place therefore is the fulfilling of the Prophesie, Vers. 3. and is shewn how willing his people were in that day of his power.

VERS. XLII.

Καὶ τῇ κλάσει τοῦ ἄρτου. And in breaking of bread.

Breaking of bread was a phraſe much in uſe amongſt the Jews, ariſing from a cuſtom as much in uſe among them. For their Dinner began with bleſſing and breaking of Bread. ז R. Zeira was ſick.. R. Abhu came to him, and bound himſelf, ſaying, if R. Zeira recover, I will make a Feſtival day for the Rabbins; He did recover, and he made a Feaſt for all the Rabbins כי מטא למשרי When they were going to dinner, R. Abhu ſaid to R. Zeira, למשרי לן מר Maſter begin for us. To whom he anſwered, לא סבר לה מר להא דר' יוחנן בעל הבירה Doth not the Maſter remember, or call to mind that of R. Johanan, who ſaith, בופע The Maſter of the Houſe breaketh Bread? Where the Gloſs upon theſe words כי מטא למשרי is this: It ſignifies a Feaſt, as if he ſhould have ſaid, break Bread to us with the bleſſing, המוציא He that bringeth forth food out of the Earth, &c. The Gemaro goes on: When they came to give the bleſſing, R. Abhu ſaid to R. Zeira, let the Maſter give the bleſſing for us, to whom he anſwered, Doth not the Maſter call to mind that of R. Hounah of Babylon, who ſaith, בוצע מברך He that breaketh Bread, giveth the bleſſing. And a little after: He that breaketh Bread, doth not break it before the Amen of all that ſit down at meat be pronounced, and that they all anſwer Amen, to him when he giveth the bleſſing. Again in the ſame place: No one of the gueſts muſt taſte any thing, till he who breaketh Bread, hath firſt taſted.

a Schabb. fol. 117. 2.

But now the queſtion is, whether κλάσις ἄρτου breaking of Bread in this place, be to be taken in this ſenſe: that is, for common Bread, or not rather for Bread of the Holy Euchariſt; which queſtion alſo returns, verſ. 46. breaking Bread from Houſe to Houſe. Now I ask whether בציעה breaking of Bread amongſt the Jews was ever uſed to denote the whole Dinner or the whole Supper? It ſignifies indeed that particular action by which they began the meal, but I do not remember that I have any where in the Talmudiſts obſerved the phraſe applied to the whole meal of Dinner or Supper. מעודה was the word by which they commonly expreſſed the whole repaſt: But בציעה breaking Bread, never, if I am not much deceived. And I doubt that of Beza is but gratis dictum, rather then proved, when he tells us, Factum eſt ut mutuus convictus, &c. It came to paſs that eating together, and ſo all the Feaſts they were wont to make amongſt one another, went under the name of breaking of Bread. Which if true, I ingenuouſly confeſs my ignorance: but if falſe, then κλάσις ἄρτου, or breaking Bread in theſe places we are now upon, muſt not be underſtood of their ordinary eating together, but of the Euchariſt; which the Syriack Interpreter does render ſo in expreſs terms: a parallel to which we have in 1 Cor. X. 16. Acts XX. 7.

VERS. XLIV.

Εἶχον ἅπαντα κοινά. They had all things common.

TO repeat here what is diſputed concerning the Eſſenes and Theraputæ, is to ſay the ſame thing over and over again: but what is ſaid of the Jeruſalem Writers, and is not ſo obvious, I cannot omit: viz. that they did not hire either Houſes or Beds in Jeruſalem; thoſe things were not mercenary, but lent gratis by the owners to all who came up to the Feaſts. b The ſame may be well ſuppoſed of their Ovens, Cauldrons, Tables, Spits, and other Utenſils: Alſo proviſions of water were made for them at the publick care and charge c.

VERS. I.

Ἐπὶ τὴν ὥραν τὴν ἐνάτην. At the hour of Prayer, being the ninth hour.

WHether it was the ninth hour of the same day, wherein about the third, the Holy Ghost had been poured out, must be left to conjecture. This is certain that the ninth hour of the day (which with us is Three a Clock in the Afternoon) was the ordinary hour as for Sacrifice, so also for Prayer too. As to the hours of Sacrifice Josephus gives us this account: d Δὶς τὴν ἡμέρας προσφέρειν τε καὶ ἐνάτην ὥραν ἱερουργόντων ἐπὶ τοῦ βωμοῦ· Twice a day, viz. in the morning, and at the ninth hour, they offer Sacrifices on the Altar. And concerning the hours of Prayer, the Talmudists thus: e R. Jose ben R. Chaninah saith, The Patriarchs appointed the Prayers. R. Joshuah ben Levi saith, they appointed them according to the daily Sacrifices. Morning Prayer is till the fourth hour. The Prayer of the Minchah, or Evening is till the Evening. Which is the great Minchah? That from the sixth hour and an half. Which is the less Minchah? from the ninth hour and an half, &c.

d Antiqu. lib. 14. cap. 8.

e Beracoth, fol. 26. 1, 2.

They distinguish betwixt the Afternoon Prayers, and the Evening Prayers, although part of them, if not all, were one and the same. For whereas the precise time for recital of the Phylacteries and the Prayers annext for the Evening, was not but at the entring in of night, yet they recited them in their Prayers at the Minchah. Hence that dispensation in the Glos in Beracoth, f The recital of the Shemaa in Bed, is the foundation. That is, after that the Stars have begun to appear: And so it is in the Jerusalem Talmud. If any one recite them before that time he doth not do his duty. If it be thus, then why do we say our Phylactery-prayers in the Synagogue? It is that we way continue in prayer because of the words of the Law.

VERS. II.

Πρὸς τὴν θύραν τοῦ ἱεροῦ τὴν λεγομένην ὡραίαν. At the Gate of the Temple, which is called beautiful.

HERE I am at a stand as to the determination of this Gate, according to the uncertain signification of the word ὡραίαν. If in the Etymology of it, it hath any relation with ὥρα, time (which any one would imagine) then we might suppose it the Gate called חולדה Huldah, perhaps so called from חלך Heledh, time, or age. There were two Gates of this name on the South-side of the Court of the Gentiles, under that noble Porch called the Βασιλικὴ, or Royal Porch. g Through which the way led from Jerusalem it self, or Acra, into the Temple. But if by ὡραίαν be meant strictly beautiful, as it is commonly rendred, then we might suppose it the East Gate of the Women's Court: which although it was but a Brazen Gate, yet for splendor and glittering it exceeded the other Gates of Silver or Gold. h There were nine of the Gates indeed that were overlaid with Silver and Gold----- There were nine Gates overlaid with Gold and Silver----- And one without the Temple, made of Corinthian Brass, which far exceeded those of Gold or Silver.

g Middoth, cap. 1. hal. 3.

h Joseph. de Excid. lib. 5. c. 14.

Let the Reader judge whether that which is added v. 11. encrease or explain the difficulty. As the lame man which was healed, held Peter and John, all the people ran together unto them in the porch which is called Solomon's. From whence this difficulty ariseth: Whether Peter, and John, and the lame man had hitherto gone no further than the Court of the Gentiles, or whether they had come back thither, from the Women's Court. If the former, then the lame Man lay at some Gate of the Court of the Gentiles that was called Ὡραία, which we may suppose was the Gate called Huldah: If the later, then he lay at that Corinthian Gate.

V. Ὁ δὲ ἐπεῖχεν αὐτοῖς. He gave heed unto them.

IN the Jeruſalem Language perhaps it might be ſaid חמי לן וחמי לון Look on us, and he looked on them. i *On a certain day, Elias came to R. Ἀργύριον καὶ χρυσίον οὐκ ἔχω. Silver and Gold have I none

IT is a Tradition k. Let no one enter into the Mountain of the Temple במעות הצרורים לו with money bound up in his Linnen. ובפונדתו מושפלת אחריו Nor with his Purſe hanging behind him. Where by the way we may obſerve the Gloſs of Rambam upon the word פונדתו It is a Garment, ſaith he, which a Man puts on next his ſkin, in which he ſweats, that he may not ſpoil better cloths: nor is it the cuſtom for any one to go abroad with that Garment alone, having no other Cloths on. We leave the Reader to ſpell out his meaning; but with this remarque, That he is not followed in the explication of this word by his Countrey-men.

k Beracoth, fol. 62. 2.

But though it was not lawful for any to carry a Purſe into the Temple with them, yet was it very ſeldom that any did go into the Temple without money, either in his hand, or carried about them ſome other way, and that, with an intent either to beſtow in Alms, or to make a voluntary Offering in the Treaſury: this is evident from thoſe two mites of the poor Widow. Might not Peter have ſomething of this nature to beſtow to a beggar though he had neither Silver nor Gold? Doubtleſs he had no ſuch equivocation, but meant it ſincerely, that he had no money at all.

VERS. XI.

Ἐπὶ τῇ στοᾷ τῇ καλουμένῃ Σολομῶντος. In the Porch that is called Solomon's.

IF we will diſtinguiſh betwixt Porch and Porch, then Solomon's Porch, was on the Eaſt, and the Royal Porch on the South, &c. But if we would have the whole Court of the Gentiles to be comprehended under the name of Solomon's Porch (though it may ſeem ſomething obſcure why it ſhould be called a Porch, and why Solomon's Porch, yet) it may not be unfitly admitted here. But whether it took its name from Solomon's Porch, ſtrictly ſo called, as being the moſt noble Porch, and antiently that of Solomon's: or becauſe Solomon conſecrated that Court in his Temple by Sacrifices l: Or whether becauſe Solomon μεγάλας ἐμφορήσας φάραγγας, (as Joſephus tells us) filled the deep trenches with earth, that by levelling the place he might have room enough to make this Court. Whatever it was I deny not but the whole Court might go under that name, although as I have elſewhere ſhewn, the very Solomon's Porch, ſtrictly taken as a Porch, was only the Eaſtern part and Porch of that Court, And let me only repeat what I have quoted in that place. m שער הכהן ושער חולדה לא חרבו לעולם The Prieſt's Gate, and the Gate Huldah, were not to be deſtroyed at all, till God ſhould renew them. Which encreaſeth our ſuſpition, that the name חולדה Hhuldah is derived from חלד Hheled, which ſignifies time, and Age, from the laſtingneſs they had phanſied of this Gate; and that the word Ὡραία, in this place might have ſome ſuch ſignification, as one would ſay, the gate of time. And perhaps the little Prieſt's Gate was the other Gate of Hhuldah, from the ſame duration they conceited in that Gate alſo. For there were two Gates of that name, on the South ſide of the Court, as we have noted before.

VERS. XIX.

Ὅπως ἂν ἔλθωσι καιροὶ ἀναψύξεως. When the times of refreſhing ſhall come.

I May perhaps betray my ignorance in the Greek Tongue, if I ſhould confeſs that I cannot ſee by what Authority of that languge the moſt Learned Interpreters have rendred, Ὅπως ἂν ἔλθωσιν, &c. That when the times of refreſhing ſhall come: as the Vulgar, Eraſmus, and the Interlinear; or When they ſhall come: alſo the Engliſh, French, and Italian:

lian: or, After they ſhall come, as Beza. I am not aſhamed to confeſs, I do not underſtand by what reaſon they thus render it; when it ſo well agrees with the Idiom of that Language to tranſlate it, That the times of refreſhing may come. Pſal. IX. 14. ὅπως ἂν ἐξαγγείλω· Hebrew, לְמַעַן אספרה That I may ſhew forth, &c. Pſal. XCII. 7. ὅπως ἂν ἐξολοθρευθῶσι· Hebrew, לְהִשָּׁמְדָם That they may be deſtroyed for ever. Pſal. CXIX. 101. ὅπως ἂν φυλάξω· Hebrew, לְמַעַן אשמר That I might keep. Acts XV. 17. ὅπως ἂν ἐκζητήσωσι· That they might ſeek, &c. And ſo in this place, repent therefore; and be converted, that your ſins may be blotted out, ὅπως ἂν ἔλθωσι, that the times of refreſhing may come, and God may ſend Jeſus Chriſt to you. Theſe laſt words, may ſend Jeſus Chriſt, I ſuppoſe have begot the difficulty in this place, and occaſioned the variety of Verſions we meet with: And how the Chiliaſts apply theſe things is well known. But if our Interpretation be admitted, what could be more fully and plainly ſaid to anſwer the conceptions of the Auditors, who might be ready to object againſt what St. Peter had ſaid. Is it ſo indeed? Was that Jeſus whom we have Crucified, the true Chriſt? then is all our hope of refreſhment by the Meſſiah vaniſhed, becauſe he himſelf is vaniſhed and gone. Then our expectation as to the conſolation of Iſrael is at an end, becauſe he who ſhould be our conſolation is periſhed.

"Not ſo, ſaith St. Peter, but the Meſſiah and the refreſhing by him ſhall be reſtored "to you if you will repent; yet ſo, that he himſelf ſhall continue ſtill in Heaven. He "ſhall be ſent to you in his refreſhing and conſolatory word, and in his benefits, if you "repent, &c. We have ſomething parallel to this in Acts XIII. 47. We turn unto the Gentiles, for ſo hath the Lord commanded us, ſaying, I have ſet thee to be a light of the Gentiles. Set thee? Whom? What Paul and Barnabas? No, but thee Chriſt ſent, and ſhinning forth by the miniſtry of thoſe two Apoſtles.

And hence it is that I the leſs doubt of the reading of the word προκεκηρυγμένον, preached before unto you, (whereas ſome would rather have it προκεχειρισμένον, made ready) for St. Peter's deſign and diſcourſe is about preaching. He ſhall ſend Chriſt to to you by way of Preaching, as he was before preached of. We may obſerve, That the Apoſtle in this diſcourſe of his inſtances in a threefold time: 1. The time before his coming, wherein he was προκεκηρυγμένος, preached before by Moſes and all the Prophets from Samuel and ſo on. 2. This time when he came and God exhibited him to the world, (ἀναστήσας αὐτὸν, having raiſed him up, verſ. 26.) raiſing him up for a Saviour, he ſent him to the firſt, that by his Doctrine he might turn every one of you from his iniquities. And, 3. Now that he is gone up into Heaven, and is there to abide, yet God will ſend him to you that repent, in the preaching of his word, as he was before preached.

VERS. XXIV.

Καὶ πάντες δὲ οἱ προφῆται ἀπὸ Σαμουὴλ, &c. And all the Prophets from Samuel, &c.

WE have Moſes and Samuel mentioned together in this place, as alſo Pſal. XCIX. 6. becauſe there were few or no Prophets between theſe two, 1 Sam. III. 1. and the Apparitions of Angels having been more frequent. And after the deceaſe of Phineas it is a queſtion whether there was any Oracle by Urim and Thummim, through the defect of Propheſie in the High Prieſts, till the times of Samuel: but then it revived in Abimelech, Abiathar, &c. n שמואל רבן של נביאים Samuel was the Maſter of the Prophets.

CHAP. IV.

VERS. I.

Καὶ ὁ στρατηγὸς τοῦ Ἱεροῦ. And the Captain of the Temple.

WE have ſpoken already of this Captain of the Temple in Notes upon Luke XXII. 4. and told you that he was the Captain of all thoſe Prieſtly and Levitical Guards and Watches that were kept in the Temple. He is termed in the Talmudiſts איש הר הבית The Man of the mountain of the Houſe; or the Ruler of the mountain of the Temple.

VERS. V.

Συναχθῆναι Ἄρχοντας, καὶ Πρεσβυτέρους, καὶ Γραμματεῖς εἰς Ἱερουσαλήμ. Their Rulers, and Elders, and Scribes were gathered together in Jerusalem.

IN Jerusalem, admits of a double construction. Either as the City may be set in opposition to the Country: or the Town it self to the Temple.

I. If we admit the former and that these had gathered themselves from the adjacent Towns to meet in Jerusalem; then we may suppose them assembled rather upon the account of some Solemnity of the day, than meerly to take cognizance of the cause of Peter and John. It is a question whether they all knew of their Imprisonment which was done the Evening before, and probably while they were absent, their commitment was made and that act done by some chief of the Priests, the Captain of the Watches, and by the Sadducees, not by a just Sanhedrin.

If we will grant therefore that the lame Man was healed that day in the Afternoon, on which the Holy Ghost had been poured out upon the Disciples in the Fore-noon, then on this very day it behoved every male to appear before the Lord in the Temple with some oblation or other. For, whereas the day of Pentecost fell then on the Jewish Sabbath, and this day (that being supposed) was the second day after that, it was the day הראיה of appearing in the Temple, which probably might occasion these Rulers and Elders meeting together in the City at this time.

II. But if we take Jerusalem in this place, in opposition to the Temple, it remembers us of the Tradition concerning the Sanhedrin's removal from the Temple to the City, which Jewish Authors tell us of. o The Sanhedrin removed from the Room Gazith to the Taberne, and from the Taberne into Jerusalem, &c. Where we may observe the same contradistinction between the City and the Temple: For in the Temple was both Gazith, and the Taberne, or Shops. This removal happened forty years before the destruction of Jerusalem. p Forty years before the destruction of the City, the Sanhedrin removed---- For when they observed the strange encrease of Murderers among st them, that they grew too many to be called in question, they said מוטב בגלי ממקום למקום it is best for us to remove from place to place. Upon which very words it is best for us to remove, I cannot but remember that passage in Josephus, q On the Feast which is called Pentecost, the Priests, according to custom, entring into the inner Temple by night, to perform the Service, perceived first, as they said, a certain motion and crack, and then a sudden voice, μεταβαίνωμεν ἐνθένδεν, let us remove from hence. Which words whether they agree amongst themselves, and fall in with the time now before us, let the Reader himself consider and judge. That passage in Chap. V. 25. gives some hint that the Sanhedrin at this time sate in the City and not in the Temple; which the Reader may also consider.

o Rosh hashanah, fol. 31. 1.

q De Excid. lib. 6. cap. 31.

III. I hardly believe any one will doubt but that by Ἄρχοντας, Πρεσβυτέρους, and Γραμματεῖς· Rulers, Elders, and Scribes, must be understood the Great Council: but to distinguish these particularly, I can hardly say whether it be more nice, or more difficult. We might say that by Ἄρχοντας, Rulers, might be meant Gamaliel the President, and Simeon his Son, the Vice-President: By the Elders, the rest of the body of the Sanhedrin; by the Scribes, either the two Registers, or those wise men הדנים לפני בכמים who judged before the Sanhedrin, or both. But I wave being too curious.

VERS. VI.

Ἰωάννης. John.

IF we may render ἐκ γένους Ἀρχιερατικοῦ with the Vulgar, ex genere sacerdotali, and especially with the Syriack and Arabick, of the stock of the Priests; I would without any stickling conceive this John here mentioned to be no other than Rabban Jochanan ben Zaccai, because at that time there was not any one more famous throughout the whole Nation, and he was of the stock of the Priests.

r Rabban Jochanan ben Zaccai the Priest, lived an hundred and twenty years, &c. He found favour in the eyes of Cesar: From whom he obtained Jasneh, and his wise men, and Physicians that cured R. Zadok.---- From the time that he dyed, the glory of wisdom ceased. About that very time which we now have under consideration, we have this passage related concerning him. Forty years before the destruction of the City, when the Gates of the Temple flew open of their own accord, Rabban Jochanan ben Zaccai said. O Temple, Temple, why dost thou disturb thy self? I know thy end, that thou shalt be destroyed, for so the Prophet Zechary hath spoken concerning thee, open thy doors, O Lebanon, that the fire may devour thy Cedars.

He

He saw the flames of the City and of the Temple: and having obtained from the Emperour Titus, that the Sanhedrin might be settled at Jabneh, he presided there two or five years; for the certain number is not agreed upon.

All that can be objected against this Johanan ben Zaccai being the John mentioned in this place, seems to be this, that if this was an Assembly of Priests levened with the leven of the Sadducees (as may be conjectured out of Chap. V. 17.) then this Johanan ben Zaccai ought not to be reckoned amongst them, for he both lived and dyed a Pharisee, at least not a Sadducee. But if the whole Sanhedrin is to be understood here, wherein the Priests as much as they were capable would strengthen their own party, then would I look for no other John than this Son of Zaccai.

VERS. XI.

Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ λίθος ὁ ἐξουθενηθείς, &c. This is the stone which was set at naught, &c.

THE words are taken out of Psal. CXVIII. 22. אבן מאסו הבונים The stone which they rejected, &c. And are these things said of the Messiah? Surely the Jew will hardly believe his pompous Messiah should be rejected, and set at naught by his own Country-men. And therefore doth St. Peter the more vehemently inculcate it. This is the Stone. Our Saviour had said before, Matth. XXI. Did you never read in the Scriptures, the Stone which the builders rejected, &c. yes, they had read and read it again, and oftentimes recited in their great Hallel, but you shall never perswade them that these things were spoken of their Messiah, but rather of Jacob, as some t; or of David, as others u; or of the Congregation of Israel as Aben Ezra, &c. but by no means of their Messiah. For they dreamt of such a Messiah that should come so according to their heart's desire, that it was incredible any Jew should ever reject or despise him.

VERS. XIII.

Ἀγράμματοί εἰσι καὶ ἰδιῶται. Unlearned and ignorant men.

Illiterate and Vulgar persons also. For it is supposed in Joma w, that even the High-Priest himself, may be Ἀγράμματος, unlearned, when yet he was by no means a vulgar person, no Ἰδιώτης, Plebeian. They say unto him, Lord High Priest do thou read thy self, out of thine own mouth; perhaps thou hast forgotten, or perhaps thou didst never learn. And so vice versa. x There are some called הדיוטיות Ἰδιῶται, who were not so unlearned. There are three Kings that have no part in the world to come, viz. Jeroboam, Ahab, and Manasseh, וארבעה הדיוטות and four common persons, Balaam, Doeg, Ahitophel, and Gehazi.

w Cap. 1. hal. 3.

x Sanhedr. fol. 90. 1.

But these Apostles were unlearned, and Ἰδιῶται, men of no degree or quality, but vulgar persons, and of the common people. So 1 Sam. XVIII. 23. איש רש ונקלה a poor and vile man. VERS. XVII.

Ἀπειλῇ ἀπειλησώμεθα αὐτοῖς, &c. Let us streightly threaten them, &c.

I. THIS incessant and implacable enmity, and stubbornness, the Sanhedrin had against the Doctrine and Miracles of the Apostles in the name of Jesus, (of which this was the first specimen) did betray a most particular spight and ill-will they had toward Jesus above all other men. Let us only compare the case of Jesus with that of John Baptist. All men esteemed John a Prophet, Matth. XXI. 26. Nor did they so much oppugne his preaching. And why should they so unanimously set themselves against the preaching of Jesus which was signalized with so many, and so great miracles beyond that of John the Baptist?

II. We conceive in our Notes upon John XI. 48. that the Fathers of the Sanhedrin had either a down right knowledge, or at least a suspition that Jesus was indeed the Messiah, and hence arose their hatred against his person and doctrine. It is much disputed and questioned concerning the testimony which Josephus gives concerning Jesus, whether it was Josephus his own, or whether it had not been foisted and thrust in by some Christian. And yet in it (excepting the last clause) you will hardly find any thing, but what the very Rulers of the Jews either owned or at least suspected if they would speak out. y Γίνεται κατὰ τοῦτον τὸν χρόνον, Ἰησοῦς σοφὸς ἀνὴρ (εἴγε ἄνδρα αὐτὸν λέγειν χρή) ἦν γὰρ παραδόξων ἔργων ποιητής· About this time there was one Jesus a wise man (if it be lawful to call him him a man) for he wrought ſtrange works. I ſuſpect, that Joſephus in thoſe words [if it be lawful to call him a man] did not ſet the word Ἀνδρα, Man, in oppoſition to God, but in oppoſition to Prophet, in ſome ſuch ſenſe as this; if it be lawful to call him meerly σοφὸν ἄνδρα, a wiſe man [Heb. חכם] and not to call him him a Prophet; for he did great miracles. He goes on: Ὁ Χριστὸς οὗτος ἦν· This was the Chriſt, Matth. XXI. 38. The Husbandmen ſeeing the Son, ſaid among themſelves, this is the heir come let us kill him. Now if the reſt of that Parable agree with the actions of the Rulers of that Nation, in perſecuting the Prophets and even Chriſt himſelf, which any one may diſcern; then why may not this clauſe be accounted to agree ſo far with them too, as that when it ſhews that they ſaid amongſt themſelves this is the heir, &c. it may intimate, that the chief of the Jews who Condemned and Crucified the Lord Jeſus knew him to have been the Meſſiah.

To proceed in the Hiſtorian, Ἐφάνη αὐτοῖς τρίτην ἔχων ἡμέραν πάλιν ζῶν· He appeared to them (his Diſciples) having revived the third day. Let us but conſult Matth. XXVIII. 13, 14, 15. and ſee if there can be any doubt whether the Prieſts and Fathers of the Sanhedrin were not convinced and perſwaded, that Jeſus had indeed aroſe from the Dead, when they did ſo knowingly and induſtriouſly deviſe a tale to elude his Reſurrection. Thus far therefore Joſephus (if it was he indeed that was the Author of that paſſage) hath uttered nothing but what the Rulers themſelves were conſcious of, if they would have ſpoken out: but what is added in him, τῶν θείων Προφητῶν ταῦτα καὶ ἄλλα μύρια θαυμάσια περὶ αὐτοῦ εἰρηκότων· The divine Prophets having ſaid theſe and a thouſand other wonderful things of him. This I confeſs is ſo noble and ingenuous an acknowledgment of Jeſus, that I would hardly expect it from Joſephus, and much leſs from any of his Countrymen. But however, be this paſſage Joſephus his own or no, yet,

III. That which we aſſert ſeems confirmed by that of Joh. XI. 47, 48. The Chief Prieſts and Phariſees ſaid, what do we? this man doth many miracles, if we let him thus alone, the Romans will come and take away both our place and nation. Who does not here ſee, that they that ſpeak this, had their eye upon that of Daniel, IX. 26, 27. where the Prophet diſcourſeth about the Meſſiah, that he ſhall be cut off; that he ſhall cauſe the Sacrifice and the oblation to ceaſe, that the people of the Prince that ſhall come [i. e. the Romans] ſhall deſtroy the City any Sanctuary? Whence it may very probable be argued, that they both from the agreement of times, and from the miracles and Doctrine of Jeſus, did more than ſuſpect, that this was the Meſſiah of whom the Prophet had there diſcourſed, and that they were in great doubt what to do with him. "This man doth many mira-
" cles, and demonſtrates himſelf to be the Meſſiah; and what ſhall we do? To cut off the " Meſſiah would be an horrid thing: And yet, on the other hand if we ſhould ſuffer " him, he would make the Sacrifice and Oblation to ceaſe, he would put an end to the " ſervice in the Temple, our Religion would fall, and then what remains, but that the " people of the Prince that ſhall come, the Romans, will come and take away both our " place and Nation?

Object. But do we not meet with ſuch paſſages as theſe? And now Brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as alſo did your Rulers, Acts III. 17. For they that dwell at Jeruſalem, and their Rulers, becauſe they know him not, nor yet the voices of the Prophets, &c. Chap. XIII. 27.

Anſw. They knew not indeed, the perſon and office of the Meſſiah; they were ignorant of his Godhead, and as to his office dreamt of nothing but Earthly and Temporal things; but then, this doth not hinder but that they might know Jeſus to be the true Meſſiah: whom when they found falling ſhort of the expectations and conceipts they had framed of the Meſſiah, and that his Doctrine tended to the ſubverſion of Judaiſm, they had rather have no Meſſiah than ſuch an one: And let himſelf and his Goſpel periſh with him, rather than their Judaiſm.

VERS. XXVII.

Συνήχθησαν ἐπ' ἀληθείας. Of a truth they were gathered together.

AND then follows in ſome Bibles, ἐν τῇ πόλει ταύτῃ· In this City. So Beza, the Vulgar, the Syriac, and the Alexandriam MS. Ἐν τῇ πόλει σῶ ταύτῃ· In this City of thine. Which might be therefore the rather allowed of, becauſe the Jews do remove the inſurrection that ſhould be made againſt the Lord and his Chriſt, ſo far from their own City. It is a thing they will not believe, that in Jeruſalem or amongſt the Jews, any rebellion againſt the Meſſiah ſhould ever be moved or fomented: theſe things, they ſay, were ſpoken concerning Gog and Magog that roſe up againſt Iſrael: a Or concerning ſome other (heathen) Country rebelling againſt the Meſſiah. b

VERS. XXXVI.

Ἰωσὴφ ὁ ἐπικληθεὶς Βαρνάβας, &c. Joseph surnamed Barnabas, &c.

WHereas there were two very noted Joseph's; for distinctions sake (as it should seem) the one was Joseph Barnabas, the other Joseph Barsabas. The Apostles gave the name of Barnabas; it may be questioned whether they did the name of Barsabas or no: Because there is a Judas Barsabas also in Acts XV. 22.

It is uncertain whence the name Barnabas derives its self, and so much the more, because it is uncertain what the word υἱὸς παρακλήσεως should signifie in this place. It is generally interpreted, The Son of Consolation. In the Syriac, בר רבואא whence by a long deduction they would make נבא Naba. I contend not, but when υἱὸς παρακλήσεως equally signifies Exhortation, as well as Consolation and the Apostle expresly distinguisheth it from παράκλησις, Consolation, 1 Cor. XIV. 3. it seems more probably to take its original from נבא to Propheſie, under which word every one knows Exhortation is comprehended in the first place, and according to this signification of the word υἱὸς παρακλήσεως, we find him behaving himself, Cap. XI. 23. παρεκάλει πάντας, &c. He exhorted them all that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord.

Κύπριον τῷ γένει. Of the Country of Cyprus.

So the two Apostles of the Gentiles have Gentile Countries for their native soil. Paul in Cilicia, Barnabas in Cyprus. Where he also sold his Land, for it is a question whether he could have sold it in the Land of Israel; as also whether he being a Levite, was capable of possessing any Land that had not belonged to the Cities of Levi, which could not be sold in the same manner that other Lands were. Nay, It was not lawful for an Israelite to part with the Land of his inheritance, unless constrained to it by his poverty, according as it is said, if thy Brother should become poor and sell his possession, &c.[c] Here Lands are sold, not so much upon the account of their own poverty, as the poverty of others.

VERS. II.

Ἐνοσφίσατο ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς, &c. Kept back part of the price, &c.

DIDST thou not remember O Ananias what things had been propheſied concerning the Spirit of the Messiah? רוחו של מלך משיח The Spirit of the King Messiah, viz. a spirit of Wisdom and understanding, &c. Isai. XI. 2. He shall make him quick of scent in the fear of the Lord. d Rabba saith, רמורח וראין He smelleth and judgeth. Not after the sight of his eyes doth he judge. ----- Bar-Cozbi reigned two years and an half; and said to the Rabbins, I am the Messiah; they reply upon him, it is written of the Messiah, that he smelleth and judgeth: let us see if thou canst do so also, &c. The Gloss is, He smells out a man whether he be guilty or innocent.

By what apprehension of things Ananias was so deceived, as to think to have deceived the Holy Ghost, is not easie to conceive or guess. He might understand by the instance of Gehazi, how quick and sagacious the Spirit of a Prophet is, in detecting all cheats and tricks; and did he not suppose the Apostles endowed with a spirit as capable as the Prophet's was? whatever it was that had blinded him to that madness, or hardened him to that daringness in sin, he abides as a dreadful monument throughout all ages of the indignation of God upon all those that shall contemn and vilifie his Holy Spirit: whom if he did not blaspheme within his heart, how near was he to that sin! such mischiefs can Hypocrisie and Covetousness bring about!

It is not to be searched out of what degree or quality this Ananias was. There is some probability he was not of the meer vulgar sort, but of some higher rank, because the mention of him falls in with that of Barnabas; and there are more things that do in some measure perswade us. For what hinders why he should not be supposed to have been one of that number upon whom the Holy Ghost had been shed? What Judas was amongst amongst the twelve, that might he be amongst the hundred and twenty: endowed with the gifts of the Holy Ghost, and yet a Devil. For ψεύσασθαί σε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, may have something more in it, than lying to the Holy Ghost. Perhaps it may be the same with לזיף falsifying the Holy Ghost, and making him a lyar.

VERS. III.

Ἔπε δὲ Πέτρος, &c. And Peter said, &c.

WHether St. Peter derived the Authority of sentencing this man to an immediate death from those words of our Lord, whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained, Joh. XXI. or whether from some immediate revelation, or both; he gives a notable instance of his own repentance, and recovery after his fall, whiles he who by a lie, yea even perjury it self, had denyed his Master, doth such severe execution upon another for a lie he was guilty of.

VERS. VI.

Συνέιλαν αὐτὸν, &c. Wound him up, &c.

THEY having no חכריכין burying Cloths at hand, do bind up the dead man in what fashion they can, and carrying him out of that place commit him to the earth.

VERS. VII.

Ὡς τριῶν ὡρῶν διάστημα. About the space of three hours.

SO long a space of time being spent for interring the deceased, doth seem to hint something as to the distance of the burying place; which in the Cities of the Levites we have thus described: The Suburbical Lands for the Levitical Cities are defined in the Law, to be three thousand cubits from the wall of each side outward. According as it is said, From the wall of the City and outward, a thousand cubits. And it is elsewhere said, ye shall measure from without the City, on the East side two thousand cubits. The thousand cubits are the Suburbs of the City, and those two thousand which they measure beyond those, are for Fields and Vineyards. Now they assign the burying place for each City, beyond all these bounds, because they do not bury their dead within the limits of the City. e The burying place from a Levitical City was above a mile and an half distant. Was it so in other Cities that belonged not to the Levites? doubtless burying places were at some distance from all Cities, but whether so far, may be enquired, but must not be the matter of our present search.

e Maimon. Shemittah Vejobel, cap. 13.

Μὴ εἰδυῖα τὸ γεγονὸς Not knowing what was done.

Hence probably we may gather the reason why the word συνέιλαν, They wound him up, is added. Had the deceased been carried to his own House or Lodgings, by them who brought him out of the Chamber where he fell down dead, to fetch burying cloths, his Wife could not have been ignorant of what had fallen out: but συνέιλαν αὐτὸν, They wound him up, as well as they could in his own Cloths, and so carried him out and buried him.

VERS. XIII.

Τῶν δὲ λοιπῶν οὐδεὶς ἐτόλμα κολλᾶσθαι αὐτοῖς. And of the rest durst no man joyn themselves unto them.

WHO should these λοιποὶ, rest be? those certainly that were of the number of the hundred and twenty, excepting the XII Apostles. Of this number I presume Ananias might be one; and the rest being terrified by the fate of one of their own order, conceived so great a dread and reverence for the Apostles, that they durst not joyn with them as their equals.

Ἵνα ἐρχομένου Πέτρου κἂν ἡ σκιὰ ἐπισκιάσῃ τινὶ αὐτῶν· That at leaſt the ſhadow of Peter paſſing by, might overſhadow ſome of them.

AND why the ſhadow of Peter more than the reſt of the Apoſtles, who ſhared an equal authority and power of miracles with himſelf, ver. 12? 1. It muſt be ſuppoſed that the ſick were not brought out in their beds into the ſtreets, unleſs they had firſt ſeen Peter, or were aſſured that he muſt paſs by. 2. It is a queſtion whether they that brought out their ſick, knew any other of the Apoſtles beſides Peter. They had heard him ſpeaking, they had ſeen him doing, while the reſt were ſilent and ſat ſtill. And that which theſe believers here do, doth not ſo much argue his preeminence beyond the reſt of the Apoſtles, as that he was more known and noted than the others were.

VERS. XX.

Τὰ ῥήματα τῆς ζωῆς ταύτης, The words of this life.

THERE is no neceſſity that theſe words ſhould beget any difficulty: if we will obſerve that ver. 17. there is mention of the Sect of the Sadducees. So that the words of this life are words that aſſert and prove this life (that is, the reſurrection) which the Sadducees deny. For the controverſie was about Jeſus his reſurrection.

VERS. XXXIV.

Γαμαλιὴλ Νομοδιδάσκαλος· Gamaliel a Doctor of the Law.

THIS was Rabban Gamaliel the firſt, commonly and by way of diſtinction called רבן גמליאל הזקן Rabban Gamaliel the old. He was Preſident of the Council after his own Father Rabban Simeon, who was the Son of Hillel. He was Saint Pauls Maſter, and five and thirtieth Receiver of the Traditions; and upon this account might not improperly be termed νομοδιδάσκαλος a Doctor of the Laws, becauſe he was one that kept and handed down the Cabbala received from mount Sinai; only that the Rabbins of an inferior degree, enjoyed alſo the ſame title. He died eighteen years before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, his Son Simeon ſucceeding him in the chair, who periſht in the ruines of the City. Whereas he doth in ſome meaſure apologize for the Apoſtles, one might believe, he did favour Chriſtianity. But he died a Phariſee, and if he was not the author, yet did he approve and recommend that prayer entitled ברכת מינים a prayer againſt the Hereticks, Samuel the little being the Author: and who they meant by Hereticks is eaſie enough to apprehend. The Counſel therefore that he giveth here ſeems to be of that nature that had all along been practiſed between the Sadducees and the Phariſees, one Sect always wiſhing and looking for the deſtruction of the other.

VERS. XXXVI.

Πρὸ γὰρ τούτων τῶν ἡμερῶν ἀνέστη Θευδᾶς· Before theſe days roſe up Thudas.

Joſephus makes mention of one Theudas an impoſtor, f whoſe Character indeed agrees well enough with this of ours, but they ſeem to diſagree in time. For Joſephus brings in his Theudas Φάδου τοῦ Ἰουδαίας ἐπιτροπεύοντος, when Fadus was Governour of Judea, about the fifth or ſixth year of Claudius: and Gamaliel brings in his, before the times of Judas the Galilean.

f Antiquit. 20. cap. 2.

Thoſe that are advocates for Joſephus, do imagine there might be another Theudas beſides him that he mentions; and they do but imagine it, for they name none. I could inſtance indeed in two more of that name, neither of which agree with this of Gamaliel, or will afford any light to the Chronology of Joſephus.

I. We meet with one Theudas a Phyſician, in Bab. Sanhedr. g where there is a diſpute upon no mean queſtion, viz. where Daniel was at that time that Nebuchadnezar's image was ſet up and worſhipped, that he ſhould all that while come under no examination nor have any the leaſt harm fall to him; And it being anſwered amongſt other things that he was then ſent into Egypt to fetch ſome ſwine thence: it is objected אתי התניא Is it ſo indeed? but this is the tradition: תודוס חרופא אמר Theudas the Phyſitian ſaith that neither Cow nor Sow come from Alexandria of Egypt.

g Fol. 93. 1.

II. There is mention of one Theudas a Jew living at Rome. h The Tradition of R. Joſe תודוס איש רומי הנהג את אנשי רומי Theudas a man at Rome, taught men (i.e. Jews) ſaith שהו אוכלין גדיים מקולסין בלילי פסחים that on the Paſſover nights they ſhould eat at Rome whole kids roaſted; the Gloſs is, the trotters, legs, &c. The Wiſe men ſent to him, threatning excommunication, becauſe he taught Iſrael קדושים בחוץ לאכול to eat holy things without, i.e. the Paſſover at Rome, which it was not lawful to eat but at Jeruſalem; for, as the Gloſs hath it, whoſoever ſhould ſee kids ſo roaſted, would conceive they were conſecrated for Paſchal Lambs. I am very apt to believe that the procœnium or meal before the Lord's Supper, Cor. XI. 21. might be ſome ſuch thing as this.

h Hieroſ. Jom. Tobb. fol. 61. 3. & Mord Katon, fol. 81. 4. & Bab. Beracoth. fol. 19. 1.

Can we ſuppoſe now, that Gamaliel could have either of theſe Theudas in his eye? Indeed neither the one nor the other have any agreeableneſs with that Character that is given of this Theudas about whom we are enquiring. That in Joſephus is much more adapted; and grant only that the Hiſtorian might ſlip in his Chronology, and there is no other difficulty in it. Nor do I indeed ſee why we ſhould give ſo much deference to Joſephus in this matter, as to take ſuch pains in vindicating his care or skill in it. We muſt (forſooth) find out ſome other Theudas, or change the ſtops in the verſes, or invent ſome other plaiſter for the ſore, rather than Joſephus ſhould be charged with the leaſt miſtake; to whom yet both in Hiſtory and Chronology it is no unuſual thing to trip or go out of the road of truth. I would therefore think that the Theudas in Joſephus is this ſame in Gameliel, only that the Hiſtorian miſtook in his accounts of time, and ſo defaced a true ſtory by falſe Chronology.

VERS. XXXVII.

Ἰούδας Γαλιλαίου. Judas of Galilee.

IN Joſephus it is Ἰούδας Γαυλονίτης Judas the Gaulonite, i and yet in the title and inſcription of that Chapter it is περὶ Ἰούδα τοῦ Γαλιλαίου concerning Judas of Galilee, which hath elſewhere occaſioned a queſtion, whether ſome part of the Country beyond Jordan went not alſo under the name of Galilee: but I ſhall not repeat it here.

CHAP. VI.

VERS. I.

Γογγυσμὸς τῶν Ἑλληνιστῶν πρὸς τοὺς Ἑβραίους. A murmuring of the Grecians againſt the Hebrews.

FIRST let us conſider who theſe Hebrews were.

I. The word עברי an Hebrew admitted another kind of ſignification under the ſecond Temple than it had before and under the firſt: becauſe in the Old Teſtament it had reference to the original and Language of that Nation; in the New Teſtament, to their Travels, and their Language. Abraham is firſt called עברי Gen. XIV. 13. an Hebrew. So Symmachus, the Vulgar, and others: But the Greek Interpreters render it περάτης, a Paſſover. k But this Verſion need not concern us much when it is plain the Interpreters have rendered the word עברי according to the common uſe under the ſecond Temple, and not according to the primitive and original uſe of it. For the ſame reaſon the Rabbins incline the ſame way.

k Vid. Nobil. in loc.

l R. Nehemiah ſaith, Abraham is called עברי an Hebrew, becauſe he was of the poſterity of Heber; but the Rabbins ſay, he is ſo called, becauſe he came from beyond the river. And they add withall (which deſerves ſome enquiry) ושהוא משית בלשון עברי And for that he uſed the Language beyond the River. I would rather have ſaid, he might fitly be called עברי An Hebrew, becauſe even in Meſopotamia and Chaldea, he retained the Hebrew Language in the proper ſenſe. For if he brought over the tranſfluvian or Chaldean Language into Canaan, as his own and families mother-tongue, it is hardly imaginable by what means the Hebrew Tongue ſtrictly ſo called, ſhould become the native and proper Language of his poſterity. I have elſewhere offered another reaſon, why he ſhould be termed an Hebrew in that place in Geneſis, which I ſtill adhere to.

l Bereſh. Rabba, fol. 47. 1.

II. After

II. After the Babyloniſh Captivity there was ſuch an alteration of things, that לשון עברי the Hebrew Tongue became the Language beyond the River, or the Chaldee Tongue. This is plain from thoſe ſeveral words, Betheſda, Golgotha, Akeldama, &c. which are ſaid Ἑβραϊὶ λέγεσθαι to be ſo called in the Hebrew Tongue, and yet every one knows the words to be meer Chaldee. The old and pure Hebrew Language at that time was called לשון אשורי the Aſſyrian Tongue: and the Syriac and Chaldee לשון עברי the Hebrew Tongue or (as themſelves interpret it) the Language beyond the River. m עבריית לשון רעבר הנהר In the Hebrew Language, i. e. in the Language beyond the River. n אשורית לשון הקודש in the Aſſyrian Tongue, i. e. in the holy Language.

m Arach. in. עבר
n Gloſs in Megil. fol. 8. 2.

We cannot but obſerve by the way that the Doctors diſtinguiſh betwixt עברי the Hebrew Tongue and סורסי the Syriac, in the mean time diſtinguiſhing both from אשורי the Aſſyrian, or Holy Language. o סורסי לאלייא the Syrian Tongue is fit for lamentation. עברי לדיבור the Hebrew tongue for ſpeech. ויש אומרים אף אשורי לכתב and there are that ſay, the Aſſyrian Tongue is good for writing. This diſtinction between the Hebrew Tongue, or that beyond the River, and the Syrian which really are the ſame Language; is much ſuch another diſtinction as between סורסי the Syriac, and ארמי the Aramean. p Rabbi ſaith סורסי באי' למה why the Syrian Tongue in the Land of Iſrael? אלא או לשון קדש when either the Holy Language, or the Greek ſhould rather be uſed. R. Joſe ſaith בבבל לשון ארמי למה why the Aramean Tongue in Babylon? אלא או לשון קדש או לשון פרסי when rather, either the Holy Language, or the Perſian ſhould be uſed. The Gloſs is, becauſe the Greek is more elegant than the Syriac, and the Perſian than the Aramean.

o Hieroſ. Sotah, fol. 21. 3.

p Bava Kams, fol. 83. 1. & Sotah, fol. 49 2.

We ſee firſt, how they diſtinguiſh here betwixt the Syriac Tongue and the Aramean, and the Gloſs upon the place tells us upon what account they do it, in theſe words. Behold, whereas he takes notice that the Syriac is uſed in the Land of Iſrael, and the Aramean in Babylon, therefore he doth it as ſaith R. Tam, becauſe there is ſome variation and difference between them: as it happens in any common Language, which they ſpake much finer in one Country than in another. For as to thoſe words, Gen. XXX. 52. עד הגל הזה This heap be witneſs. Onkelos renders them סהיך דגורא הדין when Laban ſaith אר שהדותא But now we muſt ſay that Laban ſpoke לשון סורסי in the Syriac Tongue, which is ſo called from Syria. Now Syria was Aram Naharim, and Aram Zobah which David ſubdued. And becauſe that is nearer to the Land of Iſrael, the Aramean Language of it, is not ſo pure. Gloſs in Sotah, q The Syriac Tongue is near a kin to the Aramean. And I ſay that that is the Language of the Jeruſalem Talmud.

q Fol. 49. 2.

We ſee ſecondly, that the Syriac was the Mother-Tongue of the Land of Iſrael, and the Aramean (which is almoſt the ſame) was that of Babylon, rather than the Greek or Perſic which were more elegant, nay rather than the Holy Language which was the nobleſt of all. And that (as to the Holy Language) for a reaſon very obvious, viz. that it was every where loſt as to common uſe, and was generally unknown. As to the two other Languages, why they were not in uſe, the Gloſs gives the reaſon, which we have alſo given us elſewhere. r אל יהי לשון סורמי קל בעינך leſt the Syriac Tongue ſhould be vile in thine eyes [Bereſhith Rabba by a miſtake of the Printer hath פרסי the Perſic, inſtead of סורסי the Syriac.] For behold, God doth give it honour in the Law, in the Prophets, and in the Hagiographa. In the Law, for it is ſaid, יגר שהדותא The heap of witneſs, Gen. XXXI. 47. In the Prophets, for it is ſaid כדנה תימרון להון Thus ſhall ye ſay unto them, Jerem. X. 11. and in the Hagiogropha, for it is ſaid וידברו הכשדים למלך ארמית And the Chaldeans ſpake to the King in Syriac. Dan. II. 4.

r Hieroſ. Sotah, fol. 21. 3. & Bereſh. Rabba, fol. 83. 4.

The Syriac therefore or the Aramean Tongue under the ſecond Temple was that which went under the name of the Hebrew Tongue, that is, the Language beyond the River. Whence they were at that time called Hebrews upon the account of the common uſe of that Tongue. But whether all to whom that was their Mother-Tongue were called Hebrews, may be a little queſtioned; and for what reaſons it may be ſo, I ſhall ſhew, after I have ſaid ſomething concerning the Helleniſts.

I. It is not denied by any but that the Hebrews were Jews in their original: whether the Helleniſts were Jews too, is called in queſtion by ſome. Beza upon the place denies it. Ἑλληνιστὰς, Lucas hoc loco vocat genere quidem profanos, &c. The Helleniſt, St. Luke means in this place, are thoſe who were of a prophane ſtock, but adopted into the Nation of the Jews by Circumciſion, called therefore Proſelytes. For they are miſtaken who think thoſe Jews that were diſperſed amongſt other Nations were called Ἑλληνισταὶ, Helleniſts. He thinks this opinion of his is countenanced by that of Act. XI. 19, 20. Preaching the word to none, but to the Jews only. And ſome of them were men of Cyprus, and Cyrene, who when they were come to Antioch, ſpake unto the Helleniſts. From whence Beza infers, Cum hoc loco opponi videantur Ἑλληνισταὶ Judæis, &c. Whereas the Ἑλληνισταὶ, or Helleniſts ſeem to be oppoſed to the Jews in this place ---- it is plain, that by the name of Helleniſts not only the provincial or proſelite Jews are to be underſtood, that is, ſuch as were here and there diſperſed, but even thoſe alſo of the Gentiles who are elſewhere by St. Luke termed Σεβόμενοι, or devout men, &c.

Let it be granted, that the σεβόμενοι or devout men ſhould be promiſcuouſly underſtood with the Proſelites, though there is ſome difference betwixt them, and that very conſpicuous: yet I ſee not by what Law or Authority he ſhould confound the Helleniſts with the Proſelites. And if thoſe are miſtaken who ſuppoſe the Jews that were diſperſed amongſt other Nations, to be called Ἑλληνισταὶ Helleniſts, I confeſs my ſelf willingly to be in that error too. Nor yet would I put all theſe Jews that were diſperſed among the Gentiles, under the name of Helleniſts; not thoſe that were ſcattered amongſt the Medes, Parthians, Perſians, Arabians, and thoſe Eaſtern Countries. Nor do I ſuppoſe that he would call the Proſelites of thoſe Nations Helleniſts, becauſe the very Etymology of the word implies Greciſme.

1. Chap. II. 10. we meet with Jews and Proſelites; and in this Chapter we meet with Hebrews and Helleniſts. We may moſt truly ſay that the Proſelites there are diſtinguiſht from the Jews; we cannot at the ſame time ſay that the word Helleniſts in this place diſtinguiſheth them from the Jews, when we ſee it only diſtinguiſheth from the Hebrews.

2. St. Luke calls Nicolas a Proſelyte of Antioch, ver. 5. would we therefore call him Ἑλληνιστὴν Ἀντιοχέα an Helleniſt of Antioch? we would rather term him Ἕλληνα a Greek, becauſe his very name ſhews him to have been originally a Greek.

3. As to that diſtinction in Chap. XI. 19, 20. (for I would rather term it a diſtinction than an Antitheſis) it doth not conclude the Helleniſts not to have been Jews, but intimates the difference only between Jews of a more pure and worthy rank, and Jews not ſo pure and worthy.

II. There are thoſe that think, and that truly, that the Helleniſts were Jews diſperſed amongſt the Gentiles: but that they were called Helleniſts for this reaſon eſpecially, viz. becauſe they uſed in their Synagogues the Greek Bible; which whether it be true or no, I queſtion, but will not diſpute it at this preſent; only thus far I will obſerve.

1. That the Greek Tongue was in mean eſteem amongſt the Jews, indeed they hated it rather than took any pleaſure in it, or had any value for it. [s] When Ariſtobulus the Aſmonean beſeiged his brother Hyrcanus, and ſome things had fallen out amiſs with them, through the Counſel of a certain old man skilled in the Greek learning, they ſaid at that time, curſed be the man that cheriſheth ſwine, and curſed the man that teacheth his ſon the wiſdom of the Greeks. [t] בפולמוס של טיטוס In the war of Titus, שלא ילמד יונית ארם את בנו they decreed that no man ſhould teach his Son Greek. The Gloſs upon this place, confounds the ſtories and would have the war of Titus the ſame with that of Ariſtobulus and Hyrcanus; but the Gloſs upon the former place rightly diſtinguiſheth, and grants there was ſuch a decree made in the days of the Aſmoneans, but having been neglected in proceſs of time, was revived and renewed in the war with Titus. Let it be one or the other, we may abundantly ſee what kind of reſpect the Greek Learning or Language had amongſt them. For this paſſage follows in both. Samuel ſaith in the name of Rabban Simeon ben Gamaliel. There were a thouſand boys בבית אבא in my Fathers School, of whom five hundred learnt the Law, and five hundred the wiſdom of the Greeks, and there is not one (of all that laſt number) now alive, excepting my ſelf here, and my Unkles Son in Haſia.

I rendred בבית אבא in my Fathers School, or Family, becauſe of what follows in both places; They allowed the family of Rabban Gamaliel the Greek Learning, becauſe they ware allied to the Royal blood. i. e. they ſprung of the ſtock and lineage of David. They permitted that that family ſhould be brought up in that learning, becauſe it became them for their honour and nobility to want no kind of Learning. But this they did not freely allow others; and if they did not permit the wiſdom of the Greeks, we can hardly ſuppoſe they excepted the Greek Tongue, eſpecially when we find it in the very terms of the decree, let no one teach his Son יונית Greek. Upon what I have already ſaid, I cannot but make theſe following remarques:

I. What an effectual bar they laid in their own way againſt the reading of the New Teſtament when they ſo renounced the Greek Tongue; which God had now honoured beyond their Syriac, though they will have that ſo much graced both in the Law, Prophets, and holy writings.

II. That even thoſe who underſtood little elſe but Greek, would very hardly admit the reading of the Law and the Prophets in their Synagogues in the Greek Tongue; in that it was ſo very grateful to their Countrymen, and the Decrees and Canons of the Elders did either require, or at leaſt permit an Interpreter in the reading of the Bible in their Synagogues.

III. How

III. How probable a thing is it that thoſe Jews, who having lived amongſt the Gentiles, underſtood no other Language but the Greek? for that very thing grew the leſs valuable with their own Nation that had retained the common uſe of the Hebrew Tongue; and were had in ſome lower eſteem than others.

2. If therefore they ſtood ſo affected toward the Greek Learning, what value muſt they have for the Greek Tongue? Grant that it were in ſome eſteem amongſt them, becauſe indeed moſt of the Learned Rabbins did underſtand it: yet what account muſt they make of thoſe Jews that knew no other Language but the Greek? Surely they muſt be lookt upon as in the lower, yea the loweſt degree of Jews, who were ſuch ſtrangers to the Language ſo peculiar to that nation, that is, the Hebrew. Such are thoſe whom we find mentioned in Hieroſ. Sotah.u

u Fol. 21. 2.

R. Levi ben Chaiathah going down to Ceſarea heard them קריין שמע אלוניסתין reciting their Phylacteries in Greek, and would have forbidden them, which when R. Joſe heard, he was very angry, and ſaid, if a man doth not know how to recite אשורית in the Holy Tongue, muſt he not recite them at all? let him perform his duty in what Language he can.

Ceſarea Philippi is the ſcene of this ſtory, a City that the Rabbins make very frequent and honourable mention of in both the Talmuds. This being one of the Cities in Decapolis, which were all under the Gentile or Greek juriſdiction, it ſeems there might be ſome Jews there that underſtood Greek but not Hebrew. Otherwiſe they would doubtleſs have ſaid over their Phylacteries in the Hebrew, though they could not do it in the Holy Tongue.

3. There were many Jews in ſeveral Countries, and thoſe very probably to whom both the Languages of Hebrew, and Greek, were their Mother-Tongues. The Hebrew in their own Country and the Greek among the Grecians. The Hebrew in the Families and Synagogues of the Jews; the Greek amongſt their fellow-Citizens the Gentiles. Such was Paul of Tarſus a Greek City, and yet was he an Hebrew of the Hebrews, Phil. III. 5. And ſuch thoſe of Cyprus and Cyrene ſeem to be who are mentioned Chap. XI. 19, 20. who in Cyprus, Phenice, and Antioch it ſelf preached the word of God amongſt the Hebraizing Jews (though perhaps they might alſo ſpeak the Greek Tongue) and at length to the Helleniſts in Antioch, i. e. the Jews who underſtood nothing but Greek, to whom the Hebrew Tongue was perfectly unknown. For ſo I would diſtinguiſh the Helleniſts from the Jews in that place, and not oppoſe them to the Jews, as if they were not Jews themſelves. And let me crave the Readers leave to give my judgment of theſe Hebrews and Helleniſts in theſe following particulars.

I. That the Helleniſts were Jews dwelling among the Gentiles, and not at all skilled in the Hebrew Tongue. The Apoſtle in that diviſion of his which he ſo oftentimes uſeth, of Ἰουδαῖοι καὶ Ἕλληνες Jews and Greeks, meaning by Greeks all other Nations excepting the Jewiſh only, ſpeaks chiefly to the capacity of the Vulgar, to whom by reaſon of the late circumjacent Empires of the Greeks, that way of expreſſing the Gentiles was moſt known and familiar: nor perhaps was it ſo very ſafe at that time to have brought in the Romans in that Antitheſis.

But may the word Helleniſt be taken with that latitude on the other ſide, that the phraſe may be applyed not to the Jews only who underſtood nothing but Greek, but to all the Jews alſo that did not underſtand Hebrew? Perhaps the ſtrict Etymology of the word may make ſomething againſt it; but ſhould it be granted, it would not be of ſo abſurd a conſequence, if we do but except the Parthians, Medes, Elamites, and the reſt of thoſe Eaſtern Countries, who were not of the Greek or Macedonian, but the Perſian and Babyloniſh Captivity or tranſmigration. For the very word Helleniſt, eſpecially as it is oppoſed to Hebrew ſeems to intend ſome ſuch thing; viz. that thoſe who are called Hebrews ſhould be thoſe who were of the Captivity and diſperſion beyond the River; and thoſe that go under the denomination of Helleniſts, are thoſe who after their return from this Captivity, have ſuffered ſome other removal or ſcattering among the Greek or Weſtern Countries, and underſtood no other Language but of thoſe Countries only, having loſt the uſe of what was originally their native Tongue, viz. the Hebrew or Chaldee.

II. As to the Hebrews, I ſuppoſe there are hardly any will deny but that all in general might be ſo called, that uſed the Hebrew as their own Mother-Tongue, nor can I imagine for what other reaſon Paul of Tarſus ſhould go under the denomination of an Hebrew, but becauſe the Hebrew Tongue in his Fathers family was his Mother-Tongue, and the Greek was the Mother-Tongue of the place where he was born. But that we may enquire a little more ſtrictly into the peculiar propriety of this title and denomination, let us propound this queſtion, viz. to whom that Epiſtle of Saint Paul to the Hebrews was particularly written?

I would ſay to thoſe of Paleſtine, for to them it is that the name of Hebrew doth of greateſt right belong, which theſe two particulars (if I miſtake not) will make very plain.

plain. 1. That it ſeems moſt proper that they ſhould be termed Hebrews who uſe the Hebrew Tongue and none elſe as their natural Language, rather than they who uſe the Greek and Hebrew Tongue indifferently. 2. Indeed the Meſopotamians uſed the Hebrew only as their Mother-Tongue, and ought in reaſon to be accounted amongſt the Hebrews in general, but they went commonly under the denomination of גולה the Captivity, becauſe they dwelt ſtill in the place whether they had been led captive, and had not returned into their own Land. But thoſe of Paleſtine who had returned thether were the moſt properly called Hebrews, becauſe they had paſt over from beyond the River, and had brought the transfluvian Tongue along with them.

And as to what concerns this preſent matter, viz. the murmuring of the Helleniſts againſt the Hebrews about an equal diſtribution of the common Charity: it may be made a queſtion whether any other beſides thoſe of Paleſtine had as yet ſold their Lands and Patrimonies. For, omitting that by reaſon of the diſtance of place, they could hardly yet be capable of doing it; that concerning Barnabas ſelling his Land in Cyprus, ſeems to hint ſome ſuch thing, and that it was a thing very extraordinary, and that had not deen done elſewhere. But our enquiry is chiefly about the Helleniſts not the Hebrews; and what we have ſaid concerning both, is ingenuouſly ſubmitted to the candor of the judicious Reader.

VERS. III.

Ἄνδρας ἐξ ὑμῶν μαρτυρουμένους ἑπτὰ, &c. Seven men of honeſt report, &c.

I. THIS office of the Deacon (to whom the charge and care of the poor was entruſted) was tranſlated from the Jewiſh to the Chriſtian Church. For there belonged to every Synagogue ג' פרנסים three Deacons with whom that care was depoſited. w w See Hor. in Matth. IV. 23. and elſewhere.

II. As to the number Seven, I would not be curious, the multitude of the poor, and the encreaſe of the Church made it neceſſary that the number of the Deacons ſhould exceed the number that were allotted for every ſingle Synagogue: why they ſhould be juſt ſeven, let him that hath confidence enough, pretend to aſſign a particular reaſon. Only from the number and character of the men. I cannot but call to mind the שבעה טובי העיר ſeven good men of the City frequently mentioned by the Rabbins: and I would ſuppoſe them choſen both out of the number of the CXX mentioned Chap. I. 15. and alſo by them only, and not the whole Church in general.

VERS. V.

Καὶ Νικόλαον προσήλυτον Ἀντιοχέα· And Nicholas a Proſelyte of Antioch.

I. WHereas this Nicholas only is termed a Proſelyte, it makes it evident that all the reſt excepting himſelf, were Jews, however they might be known by Greek names. Nor yet would I call them Helleniſts, but Hebrews rather, who underſtood Greek indeed (and for that reaſon the care of the Helleniſts was comitted to them) but yet the Hebrew was their own Mother-Tongue. For it is hardly ſuppoſable that Stephen when he pleaded his cauſe before the Sanhedrin and the whole multitude, would plead it in Greek though he underſtood it well.

II. It is ſo conſtant an opinion of the Antients that the moſt impure ſect of the Nicolaitans derived their name and filthy doctrins from this Nicolas, x that ſo much as to diſtruſt the thing would look like contradicting antiquity. But if it were lawful in this matter freely to ſpeak ones thoughts, I ſhould conjecture (for the honour of our Nicolas) that the name might take its derivation from ניכולא Necola, Let us eat together, thoſe bruits animating one another to eat things offered to Idols. Like thoſe in Iſai. XXII. 13. ניכול בשר' ונשתי חמר Let us eat fleſh and drink wine.

VERS. VI.

Ἐπέθηκαν αὐτοῖς τὰς χεῖρας· They laid their hands upon them.

WE read of this or that Rabbin conſtituting * Deacons in this or that Synagouge, a but not a word about laying on of hands in that action: and no wonder, when even in the promotion of their Elders, they commonly uſed only ſome form of words, and not this rite or ceremony; which we obſerve in notes upon Chap. XIII. The Apoſtles in this place and elſewhere retain the ancient uſage ἐπιθέσεως χειρῶν of impoſition of hands. At other times frequently, that they might in ordaining any to the miniſtry miniſtry impart to them the gift of the Holy Ghoſt; here, that they might ordain perſons to the office of Deacons without the gift of the Holy Ghoſt; For theſe ſeven had been ſo endowed already, verſ. 3.

VERS. VIII.

Ἐκ τῆς συναγωγῆς τῆς λεγομένης Λιβερτίνων· Certain of the Synagogue which is called the Synagogue of the Libertines.

Libertines i. e. ſervants that had received their Freedom, called in the Jewiſh writings משוחררים which

I. Muſt be underſtood of Servants that were of the Jewiſh Nation, for this was a rule amongſt them b אסור לארם לשחרר עבר כנעני It is not lawful to make a Canaanite (or Gentile) Servant free, and if any one doth make ſuch an one free, he tranſgreſſeth the Law לעולם בהם תעברו they ſhall be your bondmen for ever, Levit. XXV. 46. but if any one do make him free, he is made free. There is a diſpute about this matter in Sotah, c R. Iſmael ſaith, there is only רשות a Licence granted (if you have a mind) of keeping a Canaanite as bondman for ever. But R. Akibah ſaith, it is חובה a binding command, that every one who hath a Canaanite Servant is bound to keep him in his ſervice, and never to make him free. If it ſhould be granted what R. Iſhmael would have, that a man might, if he pleaſe, make a Gentile Servant, free, yet is it not likely there could be an whole Synagogue of ſuch, ſo made free.

Maimon. Avadim. cap. 2.

c Fol. 3. 1.

II. Thoſe therefore משוחררים Servants that had their freedom, whom the Talmudick writers ſo frequently ſpeak of, they were certain Jews who had either been ſold into bondage by the Sanhedrin, for theft, or who had ſold themſelves for meer poverty, and had now regained their freedom anew. Exod. XXI. 2. כי תקנה עבר עברי If thou buy an Hebrew Servant. * If thou buy him from the hand of the Sanhedrin, who ſell him for his thieving: or if he have ſold himſelf through meer neceſſity.

* R. Solomon upon the place

In the ſervitude of theſe there were theſe differences. d It is a Tradition. He that ſelleth himſelf is ſold for ſix years, or for more than ſix; He that is ſold by the Sanhedrin, is ſold but for ſix years only. He that ſelleth himſelf, is not boared through the ear with an awl. e He that is ſold by the Sanhedrin is boared through. He that ſelleth himſelf, they provide no viaticum for him: he that is ſold by the Sanhedrin, they do provide for him. A man that ſelleth himſelf, his Maſter cannot give him a Canaanitiſh handmaid to wife. To him that is ſold by the Sanhedrin, he may.

III. In what manner theſe are made free, either by paying a price, or by the year of Jubilee, or by the ſeventh year, or upon any other occaſions, having a writing of their freedom given them, Maimonides treats largely in Avadim; and the Talmudic writers in the place already quoted, and elſewhere.

I queſtion not but the Λιβερτῖνοι the Libertines in this place were ſuch, and that our Hiſtorian doth by this phraſe render the word משוחררים than which nothing was more commonly known in that nation, or more commonly mentioned in Jewiſh writers. And if ſo, then may we ſee what dregs of people, what a lowſy tribe (if I may ſo ſpeak) roſe up againſt our moſt bleſſed Martyr. Such as had been formerly either beggars, or thieves, afterwards ſlaves, and were now little elſe but a pack of knaves.

Κυρηναίων· Cyrenians.

What Cyrene that was from whence theſe Cyrenians are ſo called, St. Luke points to us Act. II. by its neighbourhood to Lybia, which whether the Interpreters rightly underſtand when they render Kir by Cyrene, let us conſult themſelves and ſee. So the Vulgar, and the Alexandrian M. S. in 2 Kings XVI. 9. The Vulgar and Targum in Amos, I. 5.

Whether theſe Cyrenians mentioned by St. Luke here and elſewhere, took their denomination from the City Cyrene, or the Country of Cyrene is hardly worth our enquiring. Strabo deſcribes the City, lib. 17. and Pliny the Country, lib. 5. cap. 5. but neither of them ſay any thing of the Jews dwelling there. However Dion Caſs. in the life of Trajan ſpeaks it out, Ἐν τούτῳ δὲ καὶ κατὰ Κυρήνην Ἰουδαῖοι, &c. In the mean time the Jews who dwelt about Cyrene, under the conduct of one Andrew, fell upon both Romans and Greeks, tear their fleſh, devour their entrals, beſmear themſelves with their blood, and cover themſelves with their ſkins. They ſawed many of them in ſunder from the Crown of the head, they threw many to the beaſts, and forced ſeveral of them to fight one with another. So that they deſtroyed at leaſt two hundred thouſand men. It muſt ſurely be an infinite number of Jews that could commit ſo great a ſlaughter; (the like the Jews did in Egypt and Cyprus) It might be a wonder how ſo vaſt a multitude of Jews could be got together in thoſe Countries. But this is not our preſent enquiry. That

That which is rather to be diſcuſt is, what Language the Cyrenian Jews uſed. I would ſay Greek; for that was the Language of Cyrene, the City having been built by the Grecians, and the whole Country under the Government of the Ptolomies, as Strabo tells us in the place before quoted. I would reckon them therefore among the Helleniſts to whom the Hebrew Tongue was ſtrange and forreign; unleſs that this Synagogue having been converſant at Jeruſalem, might perhaps have learnt the Language there.

Ἀλεξανδρέων · Alexandrians.

We met with a Synagogue of Alexandrians in Jeruſalem, mentioned in the Jewiſh Writers, There is a ſtory of R. Eliezar ben Zadoc that he took כנסת של אלכסנדריים the Synagouge of the Alexandrians, that was in Jeruſalem, ועשה בה צרכיו and turned it to his own uſe: word for word, Did in it all his buſineſs. e כל חפצו All his pleaſure.

e Hieroſ. Megil. fol. 73. 4. Jachaſ. f. 26. 4.

There is a diſpute in the place newly quoted, whether it be lawful to alienate a Synagogue from its ſacred to a common uſe: and it is diſtinguiſht betwixt בית הכנסת של יחיד the Synagogue of one man, and בית הכנסת של רבים a public Synagogue. And upon permitting that the former may be alienated but the later not, there is this ſtory which I have newly quoted, objected to the contrary, and this paſſage further added אלכסנדריים עשו אותה משל עצמן The Alexandrians build that Synagogue at their own charge, which doth both atteſt to what our ſacred Hiſtorian mentions of a Synagogue of Alexandrians at Jeruſalem: and argues that they were divers Synagogues here ſpoken of, one of the Libertines, another of the Cyrenians, and ſo of the reſt, which may be ſo much the more credible, if that be true which is related in the ſame place, viz. that there were CCCCLXXX Synagogues in Jeruſalem.

Καὶ τῶν ἀπὸ Κιλικίας · And them of Cilicia.

Saint Paul ſeems to have been of this Synagogue, but of the School of Gamaliel, for the Jewiſh youth ſent out of far Countreys to Jeruſalem, for education, being allotted to this or that Synagogue choſe this or that Maſter for themſelves according to their own pleaſure. Saint Paul had been brought up in a Greek Academy from his very childhood, viz. that of Tarſus: I call Tarſus both an Academy, and a Greek one too, upon the credit of Strabo, who ſpeaks thus concerning it. f Ταρσὸς χτίσμα ὄφι τῶν μετὰ τριπτολέμου πλανηθέντων Ἀργείων καὶ ζήτησιν Ἰοῦς · Tarſus was built by the Argives that wandred with Triptolemus in the ſearch of Io. And a little after, Τοσαύτη δὲ τοῖς ἐνθάδε σπουδὴ πρὸς τε φιλοσοφίαν, &c. They of Tarſus had ſo great a love to Philoſophy, and all liberal Sciences; that they excelled Athens, Alexandria, and if there were any other place worth naming, where the Schools and diſputes of Philoſophy, and all human arts were maintained. Hence is it ſo much the leſs ſtrange, that Saint Paul ſhould be ſo well ſtockt with the Greek Learning, and ſhould quote in his diſcourſes the Poets of that nation, having been educated in ſo famous an Univerſity from his very youth.

Ὡσεὶ πρόσωπον Ἀγγέλου, As it had been the face of an Angel.

GOD himſelf by a miracle bears witneſs to the innocence of this holy man and ſhews he had done no wrong to Moſes, when he makes his face ſhine as Moſes's had formerly done, and gave him an Angelical countenance like that of Gabriel, for if he had ſaid that Jeſus ſhould deſtroy that place, &c. he had but ſaid what Gabriel had ſaid before him.

VERS. II.

Τῷ Ἀβραὰμ ὄντι ἐν Μεσοποταμίᾳ· To Abraham when he was in Mesopotamia.

g ABRAHAM is like the friend of a King, who when he saw the King walking in darkſome Galleries, gave light to him by a window: which when the King ſaw, he ſaid unto him, becauſe thou haſt given me light through a window, come and give me light before my face. So did the Holy Bleſſed God ſay to Abraham, becauſe thou haſt given light to me, ממספוטמיא שלי ומחבריותיה out of my Meſopotamia, and its Companions, come and give light to me in the Land of Iſrael. Whether or no it be worth the while to enquire why God ſhould term it my Meſopotamia, as alſo what ſhould be the meaning of חבריותיה her Conſorts, or Companions: yet can I not but take notice that this adjunct doth once and again occur in the writings of the Jews. h O ſeed of Abraham my friend I took thee from the ends of the Earth; ממספוטמיא ומחבריותיה viz. from Meſopotamia and her Companions. i Who is he among you that feareth the Lord? This is Abraham: who walketh in darkneſs. Who came ממספוטמיא ומחבריותיה out of Meſopotamia and her Conſorts, and knew not whither; like the man that dwelleth in darkneſs. It is written indeed מאספמיא as if it ſhould be out of Spain, but I correct it by the authority of the Aruch, and indeed the very ſenſe it ſelf corrects it. The Gloſs hath nothing but this trifling paſſage in it, I have found the interpretation of Meſopotamia, viz. that it is the name of a City in Aram Naharaim.

g Bereſh. Rabba, fol. 32. 3.

i Ib. fol. 65. 1.

The Geographers do indeed diſtinguiſh betwixt Meſopotamia and Babylon, or Chaldæa; So in Ptolomys fourth Table of Aſia to omit other authors, Ἡ Βαβυλωνία περιέχεται, ἀπὸ μὲν ἄρκτων Μεσοποταμία, &c. The Country of Babylon is bounded, on the South lieth Meſopotamia, &c. And yet Babylon may in ſome meaſure be ſaid to be in Meſopotamia: partly becauſe it lay between the two Rivers Euphrates and Tigris, but eſpecially according to the propriety of Scripture Language, becauſe it was beyond the River. Which we may take notice was obſerved by the Vulgar Interpreter in Joſh. XXIV. 3. where what in the Hebrew is, I took your Father Abraham מעבר הנהר from the other ſide of the flood, he hath rendred it, I took your Father Abraham, De Meſopotamiæ finibus, from the borders of Meſopotamia.

Joſephus ſpeaking of Abraham and his removing from his Country, hath this paſſage, k Διὰ ἅπερ χαλδαίωντε καὶ τῶν ἄλλων Μεσοποταμιτῶν πρὸς αὐτὸν μετοικεῖν δοκιμάσας, &c. Wherefore the Chaldeans and other Meſopotamians moving tumults againſt him he thought fit to remove his ſeat, &c. Where we ſee the Chaldeans amongſt others are called, thoſe of Meſopotamia. Nor indeed without cauſe, when as Eratoſthenes in Strabo tells us l Τὴν Μεσοποταμίαν, &c. that Meſopotamia with the Country of Babylon, is contained in that great compaſs, from Euphrates and Tigris.

k Antiqu. lib. 1. cap. 8.

And ſo perhaps the Rabbin newly quoted, diſtinguiſheth; that that is Meſopotamia, which he makes to be called by God, לשי my Meſopotamia, is Charran, where the worſhip of God had been kept up in the family of Nahor; and which had been the native Country and breeder up of eleven Patriarchs. And ſo let תברותיה her Conſorts Babylon, and Chaldea; for in what other ſignification חברותיה here can be taken in, I cannot well tell.

In that Stephen ſpeaks of God appearing to Abraham while he was yet in Chaldea before he removed to Charran, when Moſes rather aſcribes that paſſage to Terah his Father Gen. XI. he ſpeaks with the Vulgar, according to the commonly received opinion of his Countrymen. Who not only taught that Abraham acknowledged and worſhipt the true God even while his Father Terah worſhipped Idols; but further, that Terah was ſo zealous an Idolater, that he delivered his ſon Abraham to Nimrod to be caſt into a fiery furnace. We have the tale in Bereſhith Rabba,* ridiculous enough.

* Fol. 42. 2.

VERS. III.

Ἔξελθε ἐκ τῆς γῆς σου, καὶ ἐκ τῆς συγγενείας σου, Get thee out of thy Country, and from thy kindred.

I Would not confound this paſſage with that in Gen. XII. 1. For Stephen and indeed the thing it ſelf aſſures us that this was ſpoken to Abraham, in Chaldea; but that, in Charran. Here is no mention of his going from his Fathers houſe, as there is there. Nor did did he indeed depart from his Fathers houſe, when he removed from Ur of the Chaldeans; for he took his father and whole family along with him. But he departed, when he removed from Charran, leaving his father buried behind him, and Nahor his brother, with his family.

VERS. IV.

Μετὰ τὸ ἀποθανεῖν τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ, &c. When his Father was dead, &c.

HERE ariſeth a difficulty, and upon that a controverſie, which we may take in the words of R. Salomon upon Gen. XI. And Terah died in Charran, that is, more than threeſcore years after Abraham had left Charran, and had ſetled in the Land of Canaan. For it is written, Abraham was ſeventy five years of age, when he went out of Charran, and Terah was ſeventy years old when Abraham was born. Behold Terah was one hundred and forty five years of age, when Abraham left Charran, and he had a great many years yet behind. There remained indeed, according to this calculation, ſixty years.

I. In that whole Chapter there is no mention of the death of any perſon there named, before or beſide that of Terah. Where by the way we may take notice of the boldneſs of the Greek Interpreters, who to every one of thoſe perſons have annext, καὶ ἀπέθανε, and he died, directly againſt the purpoſe of Moſes, and the mind of the Apoſtle, Heb. VII. 3. Now therefore why, when Moſes had paſt over the death of all the reſt that had been reckoned up before in that Catalogue ſhould it be put in concerning Terah only, that he died in Charran, were it not to ſhew, that Abraham did not remove from thence till after his Fathers deceaſe there? This R. Solomon, even while he is defending the contrary, ſeems ſomething apprehenſive of; For thus he expreſſeth himſelf; Why doth the Scripture tell of the death of Terah, before it mentions Abrahams removal? viz. leſt the matter ſhould be made public, and men ſhould ſay, Abraham did not give that honour to his Father that he ought to have done, relinquiſhing him now in his old age, and going away from him; the Scripture therefore ſpeaks of him as now dead, becauſe the wicked, even while they are alive, are accounted for dead.

How is this Rabbin miſtaken? For Terah now is no wicked man nor an Idolater, but converted, and therefore Moſes makes him chief in that removal out of Chaldea, that his converſion might be known; although the command concerning the departure from that Country came firſt to Abraham. And if it was not lawful for Abraham to have forſaken his Father being yet an Idolater, much leſs was it ſo, when he was now become a worſhipper of the true God.

II. It is indeed ſaid that Terah lived ſeventy years, and begat Abraham, Nahor, and Haran, but as it is againſt reaſon to ſuppoſe they were all begot in one year, ſo there is no neceſſity to think they were begot in the order they are placed in in the ſtory. Here that common maxim of the Rabbins takes place אין מוקדם ומאוחר במקרא there is no firſt and laſt in the Holy Scripture, i. e. the order of the ſtory does not neceſſarily determine the time of it. And the Gemariſts themſelves, however they ſuppoſe that Abraham might be older than Nahor one year, and Nahor than Haran one year; yet do they at length conclude רלמא אברהם זוטא ראחוה perhaps Abraham was the youngeſt of his Bretbren; m which they alſo confirm out of the order obſerved in numbring the ſons of Noah, where Sem is firſt in the Catalogue, though he was younger than Japhet.

m Sanhedr. fol. 69. 2.

It is commonly received amongſt the Jews, that Sarah Abrahams wife, was the daughter of his brother Haran, and that not without reaſon יסכה זו שרה Jecah (ſay they) is the ſame with Sarah, and Joſephus, ſpeaks it out, as a thing of antient tradition. Ἄρραν μὲν καταλείπων υἱὸν Λῶτον, καὶ Σάρραν καὶ Μελχὼ θυγατέρας ἐν Καλδαίοις ἐπέθανεν· Haran leaving one Son, Lot, and Sarah and Milcha two daughters dyed in Chaldea. n If therefore Sarah who was but ten years younger than Abraham was Haran's daughter (which ſeems to be in ſome meaſure confirmed, Gen. XX. 12.) we can by no means ſuppoſe Abraham to have been the firſt born amongſt the ſons of Terah, but Haran rather, unleſs we will trifle with ſome of the Rabbins, and ſay that Haran begat Milcha when he was but ſix or eight years old. But they conclude at length a little more rationally, if I underſtand what they mean, דרך חכמתן קא חשיב להו they reckon them up according to their wiſdom.

n Antiqu. lib. 1. cap. 7.

Conceive Abraham therefore born, not in the ſeventieth but in the hundred and thirtieth year of Terah, and that theſe words here recited by Stephen were ſpoken to him in Ur of the Chaldeans; but thoſe mentioned Gen. XII. 1. ſpoken in Charran; and and thus joyn the ſtory. Terah dyed in Charran: Then ſaid God unto Abraham, &c.

VERS. XIV.

Ἐν ψυχαῖς ἑβδομήκοντα πέντε· Threeſcore and fifteen Souls.

THE Hebrew Copies have it every where but threeſcore and ten. So alſo Joſephus ὁ Εἰς τὴν Αἴγυπτον, &c. He came to Egypt with his Sons, and all their Sons, ἦσαν δὲ οἱ πάντες ἑβδομήκοντα they were in all threeſcore and ten. Again elſwhere [p] Οὐ μετὰ ἑβδομήκοντα τῶν πάντων, &c. wherewith threeſcore and ten, all that were with him going down into Egypt, &c.

[o] Antiqu. lib. 2. cap. 4.
[p] Ibid. cap. 5.

So Ezekiel, Tragad. in Euſeb. de præpar. Evangel. * Ἀφ' ἧς Ἰακὼβ γῆν λιπὼν Χανα-ναίαν, Κατῆλθ' εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἔχων ἑπτάκις δέκα ψυχὰς σὺν αὐτῷ· From the time that Jacob having left the Land of Canaan, came down into Egypt, having ſeven times ten Souls with him. So the very Greek Verſion it ſelf in Deut. X. 22. Ἐν ἑβδομήκοντα ψυχαῖς, &c. Thy Fathers went down into Egypt with threeſcore and ten perſons; which is ſtrange, when they have it in another place ἑβδομήκοντα πέντε threeſcore and fifteen. We may eaſily diſcern that Saint Luke here follows that Verſion, that adds five Grand-children to Joſeph, Gen. XLVI. 20. Machir and Gilead, becauſe of thoſe words, Gen. L. 22. The Sons of Machir, the Son of Manaſſeh, brought up upon Joſephs knees. And Sutelah, and Tahan and Eden, becauſe it is ſaid, Joſeph ſaw Ephraims Children unto the third generation. Where, by the way, I cannot but think it ſtrange, why the Greek Interpreters ſhould ſelect theſe their additional perſons out of the Sons of Joſeph rather than any other of the Patriarchs: and further take notice, how though they reckon up nine Children of Joſeph, (υἱοὶ δὲ Ἰωσὴφ, &c. Now the Sons of Joſeph which were born to him in the Land of Egypt were nine Souls, ver. 27.) yet they name but ſeven. Joſephus the Hiſtorian ſpeaking of thoſe threeſcore and ten perſons that went down into Egypt, I will reckon them up (ſaith he) that I may ſatisfie thoſe who would pretend we took not our original from Meſopotamia, but from Egypt: It is ſtrange therefore that the Interpreters would add thoſe that were actually born in Egypt. But it ſeems that when they would confound the true number, they choſe thoſe upon the account of thoſe words in Gen. L. which we mentioned.

* Lib. 9. ca. 28.
† Vid. Gen. 46. 27. & Exod. 1. 5

As to theſe Children of Ephraim, and others whoſe ſtory is mentioned 1 Chron. VII. 20. the Maſters of Traditions tell ſome ridiculous tales of them; viz. that having not counted right as to the years of their bondage in Egypt, they went to invade the Land of Paleſtine before the appointed time, and fell by the ſword of the Gittiter. [q] But that they came to life again with thoſe whom Ezekiel raiſed from the dead, Chap. XXXVII. [r]

[q] Targ. in Cant. 2. 7.

I have in my notes upon Luke III. offered my conjecture why the Interpreter ſhould confound the number, and put threeſcore and fifteen, inſtead of threeſcore and ten: as alſo why the Evangeliſt ſhould follow that Verſion, and that number: and am of the ſame mind ſtill. In the mean time wondring at their retaining the true number, Deut. X. 22. Where Nobilius in his Scholia, tells us, Joſephus lib. 2. Antiquitatum &c. Joſephus in his ſecond book of Antiquities writing of Jacob, hath ſet the number. (I have quoted the paſſage already) And St. Jerom in his queſtions upon Geneſis, witneſſeth that the Septuagint ſo writ it. Alii codices, &c. Other Copies have Ἐν ἑβδομήκοντα ἓξ πέντε ψυχαῖς threeſcore and fifteen Souls.

If the Septuagint wrote ſo in this place, when elſewhere they have threeſcore and fifteen, I know no other reaſon can be rendred of it, but that Moſes is here introduced ſpeaking to the people of Iſrael, who very well knew the certain and true number; but elſewhere, where it is rendred by them threeſcore and fifteen, he is writing an Hiſtory for the whole world, to whom the preciſe number was not ſo well known. But one may ſuſpect the ſame pen did not tranſlate the Book of Deuteronomy, that had tranſlated the Books of Geneſis, and Exodus. So Gaphterim in Gen. X. 14. by the Interpreter of that Book is rendred Γαφθορείμ Gaphthoriim, or as it is in M. S. Alex. Καφθορείν Caphthoriin; but in the Book of Deuteronomy, Chap. II. 23. it is Καππάδοκας Cappadocians.

VERS. XVI.

Μετετέθησαν εἰς Συχέμ. Were carry'd over into Sychem.

לעולם ישניה אדם לתלמידו דרך קצרה Ever let a man teach his disciple concisely s, or briefly. So that a short way of speaking, especially in a thing plain, was not strange amongst the Jews; which rule if Steven follow'd in this place, he might do it more safely and unblameably in a story so well known.

s Glos in Zetachim, fol. 2. 1.

I. It was very commonly and without any kind of doubt receiv'd amongst them that the bones of the Twelve Patriarchs, as well as those of Jacob, were carry'd out of Egypt into Canaan t. It is written I will go down with thee into Egypt, ואנכי אעלך גם עלה and even in going up I will make thee to go up, Gen. XLVI. 4. מה ת'ל גם עלה What are we taught by גם עלה even in going up? He saith I will make thee to go up, and I will make all the other Tribes to go up too: teaching thereby שכל שבט ושבט העלה עצמות ראש שבטו עמו that every Tribe should carry up the bones of the Patriarch of his Tribe with it. Take notice by the way that the Seventy render גם נעלה εἰς τέλος, unto the end.

t Hieros. Sotah, fol. 17. 3.

u The bones of all the Patriarchs were carry'd out of Egypt and buried in the land of Canaan, as it is written, And ye shall carry up my bones with you, Gen. L. 25. w u Glos in Bava Kama, fol. 92. 1.

w See also Bereh. Rabba, fol. 115. 3. Glos in Maccoth. 11. 2. R. Sol. in Exod. 13. 19.

II. Thus far therefore Stephen speaks with the consent of that Nation, viz. that the bones of the Patriarchs were conveighed out of Egypt into Canaan. But what can we say as to their being bury'd in Sychem? Doubtless he spake according to the common received opinion amongst them in this thing also; though I cannot but say that all Jewish writers, as far as I have met with, are wholly silent in it. Nay Josephus himself will have them buried in Hebron. and that before the Israelites came out of Egypt x.

x Antiq. lib. 2. cap. 4.

The Talmudists speak very much of Joseph's being bury'd in Sychem, and amongst other things say this, That they stole him from Sychem, and restor'd him to Sychem again y. But as to the burying of the other Patriarchs there, they have not one word. Benjamin also in his Itinerary, speaking of Sychem mentions the Sepulcher of Joseph, and none but that. And so do the Cippi Hebraici, as the Learned Hottinger translates them, From Sechem at the distance of a Sabbath-days journey, lyes a village call'd בלאטה Belata, where Joseph the just of blessed memory lyes buried.

y Sotah, fol. 13. 2.

I conceive the reason why the Jews are so silent in this matter, may be because they fear it would be a reproach to themselves, and too great an honour for the Samaritans, that the Patriarchs bones should lye amongst them. As to Joseph's being buried there, there could be no denial of that, b cause the Scripture speaks it in expres terms, that he was buried in Sichem; but it is very grievous for them to acknowledg that all the other heads of the Nation and Tribes should lye there where the apostacy of the Ten Tribes first began; and after their expulsion the odious Nation of the Samaritans were seated; and for this very reason one might argue that Stephen would never have mention'd such a thing if it could have been contradicted by them. The Masters of the Traditions indeed do tacitly yield that the eleven Patriarchs were not buried in Hebron, when they admit but four couples there, viz. Adam and Eve, Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebecca, Jacob and Leah a. And if so, where were they buried? If we do but consider how the great charge and care of publick affairs was committed to Joshua, who was of the stock and lineage of Joseph, and from that very relation had a particular concern with Sichem, probability it self would argue (were there no other proof for it) that he would have as strict a care of the Patriarchs now dead as his Progenitor Joseph had had of them while they were yet alive.

a Sotah, fol. 13. 1.

Whence I cannot but wonder that the Samaritans dwelling in Sichem, having in their Letters sent lately into England made mention of the Sepulchers of Joseph, Eleazar, Phinehas, the Seventy Elders, Eldad and Medad, that are with them to this day, should say nothing of the Sepulchers of the eleven Patriarchs. But so long as all the other Tribes are in mean esteem amongst them, and the Tribe of Ephraim, i.e. (if I may so speak) the Samaritan Tribe being of greatest account, it is the less wonder if they are not so very sollicitous, at least do not boast so much of the heads of the other Tribes.

Καὶ ἐτέθησαν ἐν τῷ μνήματι ᾧ ὠνήσατο Ἀβραὰμ τιμῆς ἀργυρίου παρὰ τῶν υἱῶν Ἐμμὼρ τοῦ Συχέμ. And laid in the Sepulcher that Abraham bought for a summ of money, of the Sons of Emmor, the father of Sichem.

This passage is not a little obscure: not very unlike that in Gen. L. 5. saith Joseph, My father made me swear, saying, lo I die. In my grave אשר כריתי לי which I have digged for me, or, which I have purchas'd for my self, there shalt thou bury me. I will not contend about the word כריתי whether it should be render'd, I have digged, as the Greek, Jonathan's Targum, Targum, &c. have render'd it; or whether it should be, I have bought, as Onkelos; the Syriack and the Talmudists. Be it the one or the other, seeing the discourse is plainly about the cave of Macpelah, how can we say either this or that is true? I little question the former sense; for when Abraham had bought the Cave, and digged a Sepulcher in it for himself and Sarah; reason will tell us that Isaac did the same for himself and Rebecca; and Jacob for himself and Leah, for they both dwelt in Hebron as well as Abraham. But if we will admit of the latter sense (which the Rabbins tenaciously adhere to) there is no less a difficulty occurs than what is now before us. They indeed remove it by this blessed comment, viz. that when Jacob purchased the birthright from Esau, he did by a peculiar writing and deed of contract include this Cave within the bargain, as his own propriety. We may read the whole figment in Sotah, and the Targum of Jonathan in the places above quoted.

But to take this matter in hand a little more seriously.

I. It had been enough for Stephen to have made mention of the burial of Jacob and the Patriarchs without any addition about the purchase of the burying place, if he had not a design to hint something peculiar, in the mention he makes of it. Nor did it make for his cause at all to tell over a bare story, which they all knew, if there were not something included in it, that made for his defence. He had said before, ver. 5. concerning Abraham, that God had not given him any inheritance in the promised land, no not so much as to set his foot on; and here he tells them, that even Jacob and the Patriarchs had no place where they should be buried, but what they themselves bought for a sum of money: "And will you, O ye persecutors upon the meer promise of the land made to your Fa-"thers, be so confident as to perswade your selves it will be your abiding place for "ever, and that howsoever you behave your selves toward God, you cannot be remov'd "from it?

II. Ὃν ὠνήσατο Ἀβραὰμ τιμῆς ἀργυρίου, That Abraham bought for a sum of money. Thus far is no difficulty when the discourse is of the burial of Jacob in the Cave of Macpelah, but the knot is in the following words, Παρὰ τῶν υἱῶν Ἐμμὼρ τοῦ Συχέμ, of the Sons of Emmor, the father of Sichem. That the Text is not interpolated (as Beza and Heinsius would have it) appears from the universal consent both of the Copies and the Translations. For those that would have it interpolated, cannot shew one Copy, reading it otherwise, and all the Versions follow this reading, in the very words wherein the difficulty most lyeth. The Syriack indeed refer the words to Jacob only, rendring it in the singular number אישתני אותתסים And he was carried and laid, &c. but yet owns the following words in the Sepulcher that Abraham bought for a sum of money of the Sons of Hemor, where all the difficulty lyes. So also as to that clause, other Versions have it.

Now as to what is objected, let us take it in the words of Bereshith rabba b. R. Judan bar Simon saith, This is one of the three places, (viz. the Cave Jacob bought, Gen. XXXIII. 19.) concerning which the Nations of the world cannot reproach Israel, saying, that they took it by force and rapine: The places are these, the Cave of Macpelah, the house of the Sanctuary, and the Sepulcher of Joseph. The Cave of Macpelah, as it is written, And Abraham hearkened to Ephron, and weighed to Ephron, &c. Gen. XXIII. 16. The house of the Sanctuary, according as it is said, so David gave to Ornan for the place, &c. 1 Chron. XXI. 25. And the Sepulcher of Joseph, as it is said, He (Jacob) bought a parcel of a field, &c. Gen. XXXIII. 19. יעקוב קנה שכם Jacob bought Shechem; or that parcel of it; therefore Abraham did not. But, [b] Fol. 89. 1.

I. Let us take a little view of that passage, Gen. XII. 6. Abraham passed through the land unto the place of Sichem, עד אלון מורה Gr. ἕως τῆς δρυὸς τῆς ὑψηλῆς, to the high Oak: עד מישור מורה to the plain of Moreh. Vulg. Usque ad convallem illustrem, to the famous valley. Targ. Hierosol. & Samarit. to the vale of vision, &c. But our enquiry is for the place, rather than the Etymology. Deut. XI. 29, 30. Thou shalt put the blessing upon mount Gerizzim, and the curse upon mount Ebal. Are they not on the other side Jordan, by the way where the Sun goeth down, in the land of the Canaanites, who dwell in the Champaign, over against Gilgal אצל אלוני מורה besides the plains of Moreh.

Let us take the Talmudick Comments upon this place, [c] When the Israelites had passed over Jordan they came to mount Gerizzim and mount Ebal, which are in the Country of Samaria, neer Sichem, which is besides the plain of Moreh. According as it is said, Are they not on the other side Jordan, &c. And it is said elsewhere, Abraham passed through the land unto the place of Sichem, to the plain of Moreh. What is the plain of Moreh there? Gen. XII. 6. it is Sichem. And so the plain of Moreh is Sichem here also. Deut. XI. 30. [d] R. Eliezer ben Jose saith, In this thing have I accused the Samaritan Books of falsifying; and I said unto them, ye have falsified your Law, and gained nothing by it; for you say אלוני מורה שכם the plain of Moreh which is Sichem. For we confess that the plain of Moreh is Sichem. The Samaritan Text in Deut. XI. 30. hath אלון מורה מול שכם the plain of Moreh near Sichem; but no such thing in Gen. XII. 6. is added. [c] Sotah, fol 32. 1. [d] Ibid. fol. 33. 2.

If

If the word μνήματι, in the Sepulchre, did not lay ſome obſtacle in the way, I ſhould eaſily conceive that Stephen had his eye as intent (if not more) upon this place, as upon the Cave of Macpelah. It is not ſaid that Abraham bought this place, much leſs that he bought it for a burying place; but however, that he did buy it (though not under that notion of a burying-place) ſeems probable, becauſe this was the firſt place in which he pitcht his Tent, and built an Altar; all which he would hardly have done upon another mans ground. It is ſaid of Jacob that he bought a parcel of ground where he had ſpread his Tent, Gen. XXXIII. 19. And why ſhould we not think that Abraham did the ſame, only it is not expreſsly ſaid ſo of him as it is of Jacob.

It might be no improper queſtion here upon what conditions Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob fed their Cattel, and maintained their Families in the land of Canaan. Whether the places and fields they occupied were common, and had no proper owner? Whether Abraham not far from Sichem in the plain of Moreh, in the diſpoſal of himſelf and his flocks, intruded upon an others poſſeſſion, or whether it was all champaign without any Lord? It is probable it was neither one nor the other; and therefore ſome third thing muſt be found out, viz. that either they might purchaſe thoſe lands, or take them of the owners upon an agreed rent. It is ſaid of Abraham that he planted a Grove in Beerſheba, Gen. XXI. 33. How came he to any right in that piece of land? Had that place no Lord, no Prince, no owner till he came? If it had any Lord or owner (which is moſt probable) then it is eaſie apprehending how Abraham might come by the poſſeſſion of it, viz. by ſome ſum of money, though there is no mention made of it.

However, whether Abraham bought the plain of Moreh or no, it is very evident from the words of the Protomartyr, that the Patriarchs were buried in that place, where he in his very firſt entry upon that land had made his abode, where he had received the firſt promiſe of the land by viſion, and where he erected his firſt Altar; and I cannot believe but that either St. Stephen, or St. Luke would in this their ſhort way of ſpeaking, revive the memory of ſome ſuch thing; viz. that the Patriarchs were buried in that very ſame place where Abraham had made his firſt abode, where he had received the firſt promiſe of the land; yet that they did not poſſeſs that land any otherwiſe than in their graves.

VERS. XXV.

Ἐνομίζετο γὰρ συνιέναι τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς αὐτοῦ, &c. For he ſuppoſed that his brethren would have underſtood, &c.

MOSES was endowed with a ſpirit of Propheſie even in Pharaohs Court, (to which that paſſage may refer, that he was mighty in words and in deeds) and knew himſelf deſigned to redeem Iſrael out of Egypt, and ſo he thought that people conceived of him too. For they could not but know the ſtory of his miraculous preſervation in his infancy; his Providential education in a Prince's Court, and eſpecially the apparent ſigns of a Prophetick ſpirit in him. Which though Moſes himſelf ſpeaks nothing of, yet doth Stephen relate it, not without good authority, and the conſent of his Country-men, who all ſuppoſe Moſes miraculouſly born, and as wonderfully ſaved in the Ark of Bulruſhes; namely, that he was conceived when his mother was an hundred and thirty years of age; brought forth without any of the pangs of childbirth, and born טוב הוא good, that is הגון לנבואות apt for propheſying g. Note by the way how that fiction of Joſephus h concerning Pharaoh's putting his Crown upon the head of the child Moſes, and his throwing it to the ground, is told alſo by the Jewiſh Rabbins i only with this variation, that Moſes himſelf took the Crown from Pharaoh's head and put it upon his own.

VERS.

VERS. XLII.

Μὴ σφάγια καὶ θυσίας προσηνέγκατέ μοι, &c. Have you offered to me slain beasts and sacrifices, &c.

KImchi upon this place of Amos speaks out what the Jewish Schools think in this matter, by a passage taken out of Bab. Chagigah k, There is a Tradition concerning the daily sacrifice made in mount Sinai. R. Eliezer saith, that there were rules indeed given concerning it on mount Sinai, but the sacrifice it self was not offered. R. Akibah saith, it was offered, and from that time hath not ceased. But what do I prove (in these words) Have ye offered to me slain beasts and sacrifices, by the space of forty years in the wilderness, O ye house of Israel? viz. the Tribe of Levi that had not committed Idolatry, they offered, but Israel did not offer. And in those words the children of Israel kept the Passover in its time, seems to be some reproach reflected upon Israel, as hinting that they had observed no Passover in the wilderness but that. k Fol. 6. 1

It is most certain that Sacrifices were offered in the striking of the Covenant, Exod. XXIV. in the Consecration of the Altar and the Tabernacle, and in the celebration of that Passover; and this was all done in Sinai, before the fatal decree past of their not entring the land. But it may not without reason be suspected that though the daily Sacrifice were continued after that time, (for we find live-coals upon the Altar, Numb. XVI. 46. and it is not to be thought that fire would be perpetually burning on the Altar to no purpose.) But Gods complaint seems to be about the free-will offerings, that they ceased, and that none made oblations of their own good will. Nor let any think it strange that the Prophet, and after him the Proto-martyr counts up the time in that round sum of forty years, when it was indeed but eight and thirty and an half, for so doth God himself, Numb. XIV. 34.

VERS. XLIII.

Καὶ ἀνελάβετε, &c. And ye took up, &c.

THE word in Amos is ונשאתם which if we might render with R. Sol. in the future tense, And ye sha'l bear your Idols with you into captivity, as burdens laid upon your shoulders, it would take off a little of the difficulty that otherwise seems to lye in this passage (for it might be very reasonably questioned, whether the Israelites ever did this in the wilderness) but then this is directly contrary both to the Greek Version in that Prophet, and now to the Holy Ghost in this place, and to the very scope of the Proto-martyr in quoting it. For he speaketh of God as giving up the people to worship the host of heaven, and straightways suggests that they first desisted from serving God, and then addicted themselves to the worshipping of Idols. But the question is, whether the discourse in this place is concerned in the Idolatry they committed in the wilderness, or that in after-times. That it doth not point at the Idolatry in the wilderness, these following arguments seem to confirm.

I. Because there is no mention of any Idolatry committed in the wilderness after the Golden Calf, besides that with Baal-Peor. And it is hardly imaginable that Moloch and Baal-Peor were the same, and that Moloch and Remphan were not two different Idols. Nor is it probable at all that the Sacred Historian would have past over such a piece of wickedness without any taking notice either of the fault or punishment; especially when as every where else the History of their Idolatry is related so very accurately. But not to multiply arguments,

II. If Stephen refer this Idolatry of the Israelites to the times after those in the wilderness, and in that sense interprets the Prophet, he speaks the same thing that was commonly known and received amongst the Jews, viz. that the punishment of that sin of the Golden Calf descended and was derived to following generations. l R. Oshaiah saith, that to the times of Jeroboam the children of Israel suckt of one Calf, (the Gloss is, viz. that Calf they made in the wilderness) but from that time forward they suckt of two, and of a third too. (The Gloss is, those two of Jeroboam's, and the third of the wilderness.) R. Isaac saith, there is not any instance of vengeance that comes upon the world, wherein there is not a twenty fourth part of a pound of the first Calf. According as it is said, In the day that I visit I will visit their sin upon them. Exod. XXXII. R. Chaninah saith, after twenty four generations (the Gloss hath it in the Reign of King Zedekiah) this verse was accomplisht, as it is said, He cried in mine ears with a loud voice, the visitations of the City draw near, every man having his destroying weapon in his hand, Ezek. IX. 1. l Sanhedr. fol. 102. 1.

Τὴν σκηνὴν τοῦ Μολόχ· The Tabernacle of Moloch.

The Prophet Amos hath it ונשאתם את סכות מלככם Lat. Interlin. Et portastis Siccuth Regem vestrum, i.e. Ye carried Siccuth your King. So R. Sol. and Kimchi, Siccuth is the name of an Idol. For my part I am at a ſtand in this matter, as alſo in what words the Chaldee Paraphraſt hath rendred this clauſe. For in the Books publiſht amongſt us, it is סכות מלככם when as the Aruch citing the Targumiſt in this place ſaith, ית סכות פתכומרכת תרגם סכות פתכריכת Siccuth Malchechem with the Targumiſt is Succuth Pethachrechon. Obſerve Pethachrechon, not Pathcumarchon. And that it was ſo originally written in the Targumiſt, I do very much ſuſpect, however Kimchi owns only the other reading. For,

1. It is not eaſie, I may ſay not poſſible to give פתכומרכון that propriety in this place that it bears in Ezek. XIII. 18. and Chap. XVI. 16.

2. Whereas the ſame Paraphraſt renders מלכו in Iſa. VIII. 21. by פתלדיה and מלכם in Zephan. I. 5. by פתכריהון it is the more probable that he may render מלככם in this place by פתכריכון which word it ſhould ſeem he uſeth for ſome Idol, or heathen God, becauſe when he would expreſs a King taken in its proper ſenſe, he always retains the uſual word מלכא. If therefore according to the Copy quoted by the Aruch, it ſhould be read פתכריכון then the Chaldee Verſion falls in with the Greek, and ſhews that מלככם ſhould be rendered your Moloch; ſo that Moloch ſignifie an Idol, and Succuth not an Idol, but σκηνὴ τοῦ Μολόχ, the tabernacle of Moloch, which ſeems the more likely from the agreement of the two clauſes, Σκηνὴ τοῦ Μολόχ & ἄστρον τοῦ Ῥεμφάν, the Tabernacle of Moloch, and Star of Remphan.

But who or what kind of God this Moloch ſhould be, I will not ſpend much time to find out, this having been the buſineſs of ſo many Pens already, only this I cannot but obſerve, that both Moloch and Remphan were certain figures that repreſented ſome of the Cœleſtial Luminaries, becaute he ſaith, He gave them up to worſhip the hoſt of Heaven, &c. And that it is generally ſuppoſed that by Moloch was repreſented the Sun, partly becauſe of the Kingly name, and partly upon the account of the fiery form and ſhape of the Idol, and the fiery rites of its worſhip. It is alſo called Baal, Jer. XXXII. 35. They built the high places of Baal to offer their ſons to Moloch. Which whether it be the ſame Idol that Ahab brought in upon Iſrael, might not be unworthy our conſidering. There may be ſome colour and hint of that bloody worſhip in what the Prieſts of Baal did to themſelves, 1 King. XVIII. 28. They cut themſelves after their manner with knives and lancets till the blood guſhed out upon them.

Moloch (as the Jews deſcribe him) was an Image of braſs, having the face of a Calf, his hands open, like one ready to receive ſomething brought him from another. And ſo Diodorus Siculus deſcribes Saturn of Carthage, Ἦν δὲ παρ' αὐτοῖς ἀνδριὰς χεῖρας χαλκᾶς ἐκτεταμένας ὑπτίας, ὥστε τὸν συνιθέντα παῖδα ἀποκυλίεσθαι, καὶ πίπτειν εἰς τὸ χάσμα πλήρες πυρός. They had an Image of Saturn made of braſs, ſtretching out his hands, extended towards the earth, ſo that a child being put into them was thrown and rould in a great gulph of fire q. There we have alſo this paſſage out of Philo concerning the Hiſtory of the Phœnicians, Κρόνῳ τοίνυν ὃν οἱ Φοίνικες Ἰσραὴλ προσαγορεύουσι, &c. Saturn therefore whom the Phœnicians call Iſrael, having governed that Country after his death, was made the Star called Saturn. Of his wife Anobret he had one only begotten Son, whom therefore they call Jeoud, that being the term for an only begotten Son amongſt the Phœnicians to this day. Upon the breaking in of a very deſtructive war upon the Country, he takes his Son, and having decently adorned him, and prepared an Altar for him, ſacrificed him on it. This Iſrael by name was Abraham by the character, from whom whether they derived by direful imitation this horrid uſage of ſacrificing to Moloch, is no place at preſent to diſpute; the queſtion rather might be, whether the Iſraelites did act any ſuch thing themſelves in the wilderneſs; whether with the Tabernacle of the Lord they alſo erected a Tabernacle to Moloch too; whether having ſlighted the way of ſacrificing beaſts they inſtituted the offering up of their own children. Which how unlikely it was that Moſes ſhould either ſuffer it to be done, or having been done, ſhould paſs it by in ſilence, and make no mention at all of it, any one may judg. I ſhall conclude with that paſſage in Porphyrius quoted by the ſame Euſebius, worth our taking notice of: Καταλῦσαι δὲ τὰς ἀνθρωποθυσίας, &c. That theſe ſacrifices of men were aboliſht almoſt every where: Pallas tells us, who wrote excellently well concerning the myſteries of Mithra, under Adrian the Emperour.

q Apud Euſeb. Præpar. Evang. lib 4. cap. 16.

Καὶ

Καὶ τὸ ἄστρον τοῦ Θεοῦ ὑμῶν Ῥεμφάν· And the Star of your God Remphan.

In Amos it is כיון Chijun; in the Seventy, Ῥαιφάν, Rephan. I would not in this place heap up what learned men have ſaid in this matter; upon theſe two hinges the whole difficulty turns: Firſt, to reconcile the Septuagint with the Prophet Amos, and then to reconcile St. Stephen, or St. Luke with the Septuagint.

I. Foraſmuch as the Heb. כיון Chijun is Ῥαιφάν, Rephan in the Septuagint, I would not look for any thing Gigantick in the word Ῥαιφάν, Rephan, but ſomething rather weak and infirm. Any one knows that רפה and רפיון ſignifie weak and weakneſs; and from thence perhaps the word Ῥαιφάν, Rephan, may take its original, and not from רפא a Giant. And ſo the ſame thing might be done by the Interpreters in this name, that had been done by the Jews in the name of Beelzebul, viz. invented the name for meer contempt and reproach. The naked and native ſignification of כיון Chijun, is firm, upright, ſtable; and therefore is rendered by ſome in that place Baſis, or foundation; a name indeed moſt unfit for an Idol, which is a lye, vanity, nothing; this the Septuagint being apprehenſive of, might tranſlate it by a word perfectly contrary, but more agreeable to the thing it ſelf; viz. Ῥαιφάν, Rephan, that is in Hebrew, רפיון weakneſs, infirmity. If Ῥαιφάν, Rephan, does not denote Saturn in the Coptick language, as Kircher tells us.

II. But how Ῥαιφάν, Rephan, ſhould be changed into Ῥεμφάν, there have been various, and thoſe not impertinent conjectures. The Syriack and Arabick retain רפן and ראפאן which as to the ſenſe we have mentioned ſound properly enough to Eaſtern ears. And what if St. Luke or our Martyr, that they alſo (as much as might be) might ſound the ſame thing in the ears of the Greeks ſhould pronounce it by Ῥεμφάν, Remphan, where the ſound of the word Ῥεμβός, which ſignifies wandring, or tottering, might be included.

Be it therefore that Molech is the Sun, and Remphan or Chijun ſhould be Saturn; we read of the Introduction of Molech into the land of Iſrael, but of Chijun not at all, only in the Prophet Amos, and here in the mention of Remphan.

When I read that in 1 King. XII. 30. That all the people went to worſhip the Calf in Dan. And obſerve further that Dan was called Panias, I begin to think that Φὰν, Phan, in Ῥαιφάν, Rephan, and Ῥεμφάν, Remphan, may have ſome relation with that name; and that Dan is mentioned rather than Bethel, becauſe the Idolatry, or Calf of that place continued longer than that of Bethel.

Μετοικιῶ ὑμᾶς ἐπέκεινα Βαβυλῶνος· I will carry you beyond Babylon.

But the Hebrew words of Amos are, מהלאה לדמשק beyond Damaſcus, ſo the Greek ἐπέκεινα Δαμασκοῦ, beyond Damaſcus.

I. Nothing was more uſual in the Schools and Pulpits of the Jews, than for the Reader or Preacher to vary and invert the Text of the Scripture, to adapt and accommodate it to his own ſenſe. Hundreds of times we meet with this phraſe אל תקרא in the Talmudick Writers, and the Jewiſh Expoſitors, don't read this or that word ſo, but ſo, or ſo. Where forſaking the proper and genuine reading, they put another in the ſtead, that may better fall in with the matter they are upon. Not that they reject or vilifie the original Text, but to bring what they alledg more ingenuouſly to their own purpoſe. I have known this done in ſome words wherein they keep indeed to the ſame letters, but make the variation by the change of vowels. Which ſhews in the mean time that this was neither any ſtrange thing amongſt them, nor accounted any crime, but received rather with applauſe, to alienate the words of the Hebrew Text from their native and original reading, to deduce ſomething either true in it ſelf, or at leaſt ſmooth and ingenious. And if Stephen here after the uſage of the Schools, quoting this paſſage of the Prophet Amos מהלאה לדמשק beyond Damaſcus, had magiſterially ſaid as they were wont to do, אל תצרא don't read it לדמשק beyond Damaſcus, but לבבל beyond Babylon, it would have gone down well enough with his auditory, both by reaſon of the uſual cuſtom of the Nation, and principally becauſe what he ſaid was true. For,

II. Let us conſult another place in the ſame Prophet, Amos IV. 3. And ye ſhall go out at the breaches one againſt another, והשלכתנה החרמונה and ye ſhall caſt them into the palace. Where the Targum and Syriack, They ſhall carry them beyond the mountains of Armenia. And the Greek, Εἰς τὸ ὄρος τὸ Ῥομμάν, Unto the mount Romman. R. Sol. upon the place tells us, that Jonathan paraphraſeth להלאה מן טורי חורמני הן הרי חשך Beyond the mountains of Horman, they are the mountains of darkneſs. m Alexander King of Macedon אול לגבי מלכא קצא לאחורי הרי חושך went to the King of Cazia behind the mountains of darkneſs. Let me add one paſſage more. n Iſrael went into three Captivities, אחת לפנים מנהר סנבטיון one was within the river Sanbation, ואחר לדפני של אנטוביא *and the other was to Daphne of Antioch. VERS. LIII.

Εἰς διαταγὰς Ἀγγέλων· By the diſpoſition of Angels.

I. I Would not render this word Ἀγγέλων by the Hebrew word מלאכים Angels, as the Syriack and Arabick Interpreters have done; but by שלוחים meſſengers; ſo שליח צבור is ὁ Ἄγγελος Ἐκκλησίας, the Angel, or meſſenger of the Church. The Jews have a trifling fiction, that thoſe Iſraelites that were preſent at mount Sinai, and heard the Law pronounced thence by God himſelf, ſhould have been like the Angels, that they ſhould never have begot children, nor died, but for the time to come ſhould have been like to Angels, had it not been for that fatal and unfortunate crime of theirs in the matter of the Golden Calf q.

q Vid. Avod. Zarah, fol. 5. 1. & Hor. Heb. in Joh. X. 35.

If εἰς διαταγὰς Ἀγγέλων might admit of this paſſive conſtruction, that men might be diſpoſed into the ſame predicament or ſtate with the Angels; then I ſhould think our Bleſſed Martyr might in this paſſage remember them of their own opinion, and the more ſmartly convince them of their ἀνομία, tranſgreſſion of the Law, even from what they themſelves granted. As though he had ſaid, "Ye have received a Law which you your ſelves "confeſs, would have put men into an Angelical ſtate, and yet you have not obſer-"ved it.

II. But if this clauſe will not bear that interpretation, it is doubtful in what ſenſe the word Ἀγγέλων muſt be taken; and whether εἰς διαταγὰς, unto the diſpoſitions be the ſame with διὰ διαταγῶν, or διὰ διαταγῆς, by the diſpoſitions, or diſpoſition. That expreſſion in Gal. III. 19. agrees with this, διαταγεὶς δι ἀγγέλων, ordain'd by Angels; and in both theſe places it would be ſomething harſh to underſtand by Angels, thoſe heavenly ſpirits ſtrictly and properly ſo taken; for what had they to do in the diſpoſition of the Law? They were preſent indeed at Mount Sinai when the Law was given, as many places of the Holy Scriptures do witneſs; but then they were but preſent there, for we do not find that any thing further was done or performed by them. So that the thing it ſelf makes it neceſſary that both in this and in that place we ſhould underſtand by Angels, the meſſengers of God's Word; his Prophets and Miniſters. And the particle εἰς may retain its own proper force and vertue, that the ſenſe may come to thus much, viz. "Ye have received the "Law unto the diſpoſition of meſſengers, i.e. that it ſhould be propounded and publiſhed "by Miniſters, Prophets, and others, and that according to your own deſire and wiſh, "Exod. XX. 19. Deut. v. 25. and XVIII. 15, 16. and yet ye have not kept the Law. "Ye deſired Prophets, and ye had them, and yet which of thoſe Prophets have not you "perſecuted?

VERS. LVI.

Τὸν υἱὸν τῦ ἀνθρώπυ ἐκ δεξιῶν ἑστῶτα τῦ Θεῦ· The Son of Man ſtanding at the right hand of God.

CHRIST frequently calls himſelf the Son of Man, but it is rarely that we find him ſo called by others. But St. Stephen in this expreſſion recites that of Dan. VII. 13. I ſaw one like the Son of Man coming with the clouds of Heaven, and coming to the ancient of days, and they brought him before him. I would hardly have expected from a Jew what R. Saadiah ſaith upon this place, like to the Son of Man: והו משיח צדקינו This is the Meſſiah our righteouſneſs; but is it not written of the Meſſiah, poor and riding upon an Aſs? For he ſhall come in humility.------And they brought him before the Ancient of days, this is that that is written, The Lord ſaid unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand.

The

The Doctors in Sanhedrin r, talk much more out of the way, זכו עם ענני שמיא If they are worthy (i.e. the Israelites) then he shall come with the clouds of Heaven; but if they are not worthy, then he will come poor, and riding upon an Ass. The Proto-martyr declares he saw that of Daniel fulfilled now in Jesus; to which that in Isa. VI. 1. is something parallel. r Fol. 98. 1.

VERS. LVIII.

Καὶ ἐκβαλόντες ἔξω τῆς πόλεως ἐλιθοβόλων· And casting him out of the City they stoned him.

s I. בית הסקילה חוץ לבד" the place of stoning was without the Sanhedrin, according as it is said, bring forth him that hath cursed without the Camp, Levit. XXIV. 14. It is a Tradition בית הסקילה היה חוץ לג" מהנורת the place of stoning was without three Camps. The Gloss tells us that the Court was the Camp of the Divine Presence, the Mountain of the Temple, the Camp of the Levites, and Jerusalem the Camp of Israel. Now in every Sanhedrin in whatever City, the place of stoning was without the City, as it was at Jerusalem. s Hitrof. Sanhedr. fol. 23. 1, & Bab. Sanhed. fol. 42. 2.

We are told the reason by the Gemarists why the place of stoning was without the Sanhedrin, and again without three Camps, viz. ראי נפק בד" ויתיב בחוץ לג" מהנורת If the Sanhedrin go forth and sit without the three Camps; they make the place for stoning also distant from the Sanhedrin, partly lest the Sanhedrin should seem to kill the man; partly that by the distance of the place there may be a little stop and space of time before the Criminal come to the place of execution, if peradventure any one might offer some testimony, that might make for him. For in the expectation of some such thing,

II. אחר עומר על פתח בד" והסודרון בידו "There stood one at the door of the Sanhe- "drin having a Handkerchief in his hand, וסוס דחוק ממנו כדי שיהא רואהו and an horse "at such a distance as it was only within sight. If any one therefore say, I have something "to offer in behalf of the condemned person, he waves the Handkerchief, and the horse- "man rides and calls the people back. Nay if the man himself say, I have something to "offer in my own defence, they bring him back four or five times one after another, if it "be any thing of moment that he hath to say. I doubt they hardly dealt so gently with the innocent Stephen.

III. If no testimony arise that makes any thing for him, then they go on to stoning him: "The Crier proclaiming before him, N. the Son of N. comes forth to be stoned for "such or such a crime: N. and N. are the witnesses against him, if any one hath any "thing to testifie on his behalf, let him come forth and give his evidence.

IV. "When they come within ten cubits of the place where he must be stoned, they "exhort him to confess; for so it is the custom for the malefactor to confess, because "every one that confesseth hath his part in the world to come, as we find in the instance "of Achan, &c.

V. "When they come within four cubits of the place, they pluck off his clothes, and "make him naked.

VI. "The place of Execution was twice a mans height. One of the witnesses throws "him down upon his loyns; if he roul upon his breast they turn him upon his loyns "again. If he die so, well: If not, then the other witnes takes up a stone, and lays it up- "on his heart. If he die so, well; But if not, then he is stoned by all Israel.

VII. All that are stoned are hanged also, &c. These things I thought fit to transcribe the more largely, that the Reader may compare this present action with this rule and common usage of doing it.

1. It may first be questioned for what crime this person was condemned to die. You will say for blasphemy: For we have heard him speak blasphemous words against Moses, and against God. But no one is condemned as a blasphemer (מגרף) unless for abusing the Sacred name with four letters, &c. Hence is it that although they oftentimes accused our Saviour as a blasphemer, yet he was not condemned for this, but because כשף היסית והדיח את ישראל he used witchcraft and deceived Israel, and seduced them into Apostacy t. And those are reckoned amongst persons that are to be stoned, המסית והמדיח והמכשף He that evilly perswades, and he that draws into Apostacy, and a Conjurer. u t Sanhedr. fol. 43. 1. u Ibid. fol. 53. 1.

2. It may further be questioned whether our Blessed Martyr was condemned by any formal sentence of the Sanhedrin, or hurried in a tumultuary manner by the people, and so murdered: It seems to be the later.

Παρὰ τοὺς πόδας τοῦ Νεανίου. At a young man's feet.

Phil. verſ. 9. Τοιοῦτον ὢν ὡς Παῦλος πρεσβύτης, being ſuch an one as Paul the aged; by which we may compute, whether νεανίας here denotes mere youth, and not rather ſtrength, and ſtoutneſs, 2 Sam. VI. 1. כל בחור בישראל Every choſen man of Iſrael: where the Greek hath it πάντα νεανίαν ἐξ Ἰσραὴλ, every young man of Iſrael.

VERS. LX.

Ἐκοιμήθη. Fell aſleep.

דמך or רמך He ſlept, than which nothing is more common in the Talmudiſts.

CHAP. VIII.

VERS. II.

Συνεκόμισε τὸν Στέφανον. Carried Stephen to his burial.

* Sanhedr. fol. 46. 1. THEY * do not bury (any one condemned by the Sanhedrin) in the Sepulchres of their fathers. But there are two places of burial, belonging to the Sanhedrin; one for thoſe that are beheaded and ſtrangled; the other for thoſe that are ſtoned and burnt. The reaſon why ſuch are not to be buried with their fathers is this, שאין קוברין רשע עם צדיק Becauſe they do not bury the guilty with the innocent; which they deduce from the ſtory of an ordinary perſon caſt into Eliſha's grave, who continued not there but roſe again.

x Ibid. fol. 45. 2 x The ſtone wherewith any one is ſtoned, the wood on which he is hanged, the ſword by which he is beheaded, and the halter wherewith he is ſtrangled, is ſtill buried in the ſame place with him: or at leaſt very near him. That it was otherwiſe with Stephen, the words now before us do evince; but whether this was from the indulgence of the Sanhedrin toward the condemned perſon: or, becauſe he was not condemned by the Sanhedrin, let others judge.

Καὶ ἐποίησε κοπετὸν μέγαν ἐπ' αὐτῷ. And made great lamentation over him.

The Rabbins go on. לא היו מתאבלין אלא אוננים They do not make a lamentation over one condemned by the Sanhedrin, only bemoan him, i. e. inwardly, and in their heart only. שאין אנינות אלא בלב for this grief is not but in the heart. And it was a Vulgar conceipt amongſt the Jews, that by how much the more ſordidly the criminal was handled by the Sanhedrin, and how much the leſs bemoaned after execution, by ſo much the more it tended toward the remiſſion of his ſins. Whence the Gloſs upon the place, They do not bewail him, that ſo that diſgrace of his might turn to his attonement.

This generous and true Chriſtian courage of theſe good men burying St. Stephen, is deſervedly applauded by all: and thoſe that did thus bury him, did thereby publickly explode that ridiculous conceipt of expiation by undergoing the greateſt diſgrace here: for they knew well enough that the remiſſion of this Martyrs ſins, flowed from a more noble ſource.

VERS. V.

Εἰς πόλιν τῆς Σαμαρείας. Into the City of Samaria.

HAving done with the ſtory of Stephen, who was the firſt named amongſt the ſeven Deacons: the Evangeliſt paſſeth on to the affairs of Philip, who was the ſecond. Whether he betook himſelf to Sebaſte, or to Sichem, or to ſome other third City of Samaria, might be a reaſonable queſtion; becauſe it is ſaid, verſ. 14. that the Apoſtles heard that Samaria had received the Word of God; which ſeems more agreeably to be underſtood of ſome City in Samaria, rather than the whole Samaritan Country. Now what City ſhould that be, which as the Metropolis of that Country, is by way of Emphaſis called Samaria? It is certain that Sebaſte is that very City, which antiently was Samaria.

a שומרון

[a] שבשרת הוא שומרון Sebaſte is the ſame, which was Samaria, where to this day the Palace of Ahab is ſhewn. [b] Ἐν μὲν γε τῇ Σαμαρείτιδι, &c. In Samaria (Herod) fortifying a City with a noble wall of twenty furlongs, and carrying thither a Colony of ſix thouſand men, diſtributing good land amongſt them: and in the midſt of the City erecting a goodly Temple to Cæſar, and a grove about it of about three half furlongs, τὸ ἄλσος Σεβαστῷ ἐκάλεσεν called the City Sebaſte.

[a] Benjam. in Itinerar. [b] Joſeph. de Excid. l. 1. c. 16

Was this therefore the City of Samaria, where Philip now was, becauſe that was once the City Samaria? If we obſerve, how the City of Sichem was the very heart and ſeat of the Samaritan Religion, and the Mount Gerizim was as it were the Cathedral Church of that Sect; perhaps to this one might more fitly have reſpect, when mention is made of the City of Samaria, than any other place.

VERS. IX.

Σίμων προϋπῆρχεν ἐν τῇ πόλει μαγεύων. Simon, who before time in the ſame City, uſed Sorcery.

IF this was in Sichem, you will ſay, what became then of the Sichemites faith which Chriſt himſelf had already planted amongſt them? Joh. IV. It may be anſwered (though in ſo very obſcure a thing I would not be poſitive) that it was ſome years ſince the time when Chriſt had converſed in that City, and when as he had done nothing that was miraculous there, Simon by his Magicks might obtain the eaſier reception amongſt them. But however, grant, it was Sebaſte, or any other City of Samaria, that was the ſcene of this ſtory yet who did this Simon give out himſelf to be, when he ſaid μέγαν τινα εἶναι, that he himſelf was ſome great one? And what ſort of perſons did the Samaritans account him, when they ſaid of him, Οὗτος ἐστιν ἡ δύναμις τοῦ Θεοῦ μεγάλη, this man is the great power of God?

I. Did they take him for the Meſſiah? It is commonly preſumed that Simon was a Samaritan by birth; but ſhould Meſſiah ſpring out of the Samaritans? It is no impertinent queſtion, whether the Samaritans, when they looked for the Meſſiah, (Joh. IV. 25.) yet could expect he ſhould be one of the Samaritan ſtock, when they admitted of no Article of Faith that had not its foundation in the Books of Moſes? Could they not gather this from thence, that the Meſſiah ſhould come of the Tribe of Judah? A Samaritan perhaps will deny this, and elude that paſſage in Gen. XLIX. 10. by ſome ſuch way as this: It is true, the Scepter ſhall not depart from Judah, nor a Lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; but then this does not argue that Shiloh muſt derive his Original from the Tribe of Judah; only that ſome Dominion ſhould continue in Judah, till Shiloh ſhould appear. Where, by the way, it is worth our obſerving that the Samaritan Text and Interpreter in that place, inſtead of שילה reads שלה without the Jod; and inſtead of מבין רגליו from between his feet, that Text reads מבין דגליו from between his banners; and the Interpreter hath it מבין סדריו from between his Ranks, or Companies.

That figment concerning Meſſiah ben Joſeph, or Meſſiah ben Ephraim (for he goes by both thoſe names) whether it was firſt invented by the Jews, or by the Samaritans is not eaſily determined. The Jewiſh Writers make very frequent mention of him: but the thing it ſelf makes ſo much for the Samaritans, that one might believe it was firſt hatcht amongſt themſelves; only that the ſtory tells us that Meſſiah was at length ſlain, which the Samaritans would hardly ever have invented concerning him. And the Jews perhaps might be the Authors of it, that ſo they might the better evade thoſe paſſages that ſpeak of the death of the true Meſſiah.

II. However, it was impiety enough in Simon, if he gave out himſelf for a Prophet, when he knew ſo well what himſelf was; and if you expound his giving out himſelf to be ſome great one no higher than this, yet does it argue arrogance enough in the knave. I would not depreſs the ſenſe of thoſe words concerning John Baptiſt, Luke I. 15. ἔσται μέγας ἐνώπιον τοῦ Κυρίου, He ſhall be great in the ſight of the Lord: but if we take it in the higheſt degree, he ſhall be a Prophet before the Lord Chriſt; it carries both an excellent truth along with it, and alſo a moſt plain agreeableneſs with the office of John. And when Stephen expreſſeth Moſes to have been a Prophet, in theſe terms Ἦν δυνατὸς ἐν λόγοις καὶ ἐν ἔργοις He was mighty in words and deeds, perhaps it bears the ſame ſenſe with what the Samaritans ſaid and conceited concerning this Simon, that he was ἡ δύναμις τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡ μεγάλη, the great power of God.

VERS.

VERS. XIII.

Ὁ δὲ Σίμων καὶ αὐτὸς ἐπίστευσε. Then Simon himself believed also.

THAT is, He believed that Jesus of Nazareth was the true Messiah, and so was made capable of Baptism; (as in vers. 37.) and was indeed baptized in the Name of Jesus, vers. 16. And now O Simon, what thinkest thou of thy self, if hitherto thou hadst exhibited thy self as the Messiah? Darest thou after this pretend to be the Son of God? That which is commonly told of him, and which Epiphanius reports without alledging any others: Τὸν πατέρα ἔλεγεν ἑαυτὸν τοῖς Σαμαρείταις, Ἰουδαίοις δὲ ἔλεγεν ἑαυτὸν εἶναι τὸν υἱόν. To the Samaritans he gave out himself to be the Father, to the Jews to be the Son; betrays not only the blasphemy but the madness of the man, that amongst the Jews he should pretend himself to be the Son of God, when they would acknowledge no Son of God at all.

VERS. XVI.

Ἀπέστειλαν πρὸς αὐτοὺς Πέτρον καὶ Ἰωάννην, &c. They sent unto them Peter and John, &c.

c Hæres. 21. EPIPHANIUS here very apositely tells us, Ὁ Φίλιππος διάκονος ὤν, &c. Philip being but a Deacon, had not the power of imposition of hands, so as by that, to confer the gift of the Holy Ghost. It was the Apostles peculiar Province and Prerogative, by laying on of their Hands to communicate the Holy Ghost, that is, in his extraordinary gifts of Tongues and Prophesie; for as to the Spirit of Sanctification, they never dispensed that.

Peter and John besides the eminent station they held amongst the Apostles, were also to be the Apostles of the Circumcision in forreign Countries. James the brother of John was now alive, who with those two made up that noble Triumvirate, that had a more intimate familiarity with Christ. And one would believe, he ought also to have been sent along with them, but that they were sufficient; and that this was only as a prologue to their future charge and office of dealing with the Circumcision in forreign Countries.

They lay their hands upon some whom the Holy Ghost had pointed out to be ordained Ministers: And by so doing, they did communicate the gifts of Tongues and Prophesie, so very visible and conspicuously, that it is said, that Simon saw how through the laying on of the Apostles hands, the Holy Ghost was given. Amongst the Jews persons were ordained Elders, by three men: But here, this duumvirate was abundantly more valuable, when they could not only promote to the Ministry, but further, confer upon those that were so promoted, a fitness and ability for the performance of their office.

VERS. XIX.

Δότε κἀμοὶ τὴν ἐξουσίαν ταύτην, &c. Give me also this power, &c.

HOW infinitely mistaken is this wretch, if he think that the gifts of the Holy Ghost could be bought and procured by Silver or Gold; and how much more mistaken still, if he think that the power of conferring these gifts to others could be thus attained! The Apostles had a power of imparting these gifts, but even they had not a power of enabling another to impart them. Paul by laying hands on Timothy could endow him with the gifts of Tongues and Prophesie; but he could not so endow him that he should be capable of conveighing those gifts to another. This was purely Apostolical to dispense these gifts, and when they died, this power and privilege died with them.

It is easie apprehending what this wily wretch had in his thoughts and design, viz. an affectation both of lucre and vain-glory. Otherwise it might have been abundantly enough for him to have requested, give me also the gift of Tongues and Prophesie as ye have given to these.

VERS.

VERS. XXIV.

Δεήθητε ὑμεῖς ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ, &c. Pray ye to the Lord for me.

IF he begged this in earnest and from his heart, it is a wonder he should afterward break out into so much blasphemy and wickedness that Church-history reports concerning him, if that say true. d And when he did still more and more disbelieve God, and set himself more greedily in an opposition against the Apostles, &c. e Σίμωνα μέγαν μεγάλων ἀντίπαλον τῶν θεοπεσίων Ἀποστόλων, &c. Simon the great adversary of the great and Holy Apostles, &c. For him to beseech the Apostles earnestly to pray for him, and yet from thenceforth to oppose them to the utmost of his power? This certainly is the gall of bitterness and the bond of iniquity.

d Irenæ. lib. 1. cap. 20. e Euseb. lib. 2. cap. 14.

We have (if we believe the story) St. Peter and this Simon meeting with one another again at Rome, where the Apostle by his prayers tumbles this Magician headlong to the ground, while he was flying in the Air, and so Simon Magus breaths his last. If it had been taken notice of, that (if Philostratus may be believed) it is probable St. Peter and Apollonius Tyanæus were at one and the same time together in Babylon, doubtless there would have been some such tale as this framed about St. Peters triumphing over him also.

That in Justin Martyr concerning a statue erected at Rome to Simon Magus with this inscription Simoni Sancto Deo, To Simon the Holy God, is shewn by learned Men to have been so called by mistake, when it was rather a Statue erected Simoni Sango Deo. I fear there is some such mistake concerning St. Peters chair erected in Rome, as there was concerning the Statue of Simon erected at Rome.

VERS. XXVI.

Εἰς Γάζαν, αὕτη ἐστὶν ἔρημος. To Gaza, which is desert.

WHO is it speaks this clause [which is desert] the Angel or the Historian? Strabo indeed tells us, f that Gaza anciently was a noble City, destroyed by Alexander, καὶ μένουσα ἔρημος, and continues desert. But why is this added in this place, and by whom is it so? I would suppose it is added by the Angel, and that for this reason, because there was another Gaza not very far from that place where Philip now was, viz. in the Tribe of Ephraim, 1 Chron. VII. 28. שכם ובנותיה עד עזה ובנותיה Sichem with the Towns thereof, to Gaza with the Towns thereof, this was the dwelling of the children of Ephraim. Here is Gaza of Ephraim, but Philip must go to Gaza of the Philistins.

VERS. XXVII.

IN a French Treatise lately publisht, that bears the Title of Histoire de la haut Ethiopie, pag. 15. all the Ethiopian Kings are named and reckoned up, and Candace not mentioned. But at the end there is this animadversion upon it, Dans cette Chronologie il n'est point parle ny de la Reine Candace, ny de l' Imperatrice Helene, &c. In this Chronology there is no mention of the Queen Candace, nor of the Empress Helen; The Abyssins no more than the Jews use not to name the women in their Genealogies; a thing very common with all the Eastern Nations.

However, that there was a certain Candace Queen of the Ethiopians, nay that there were several Queens of that name, is so very plain both from Pliny and Strabo, that it would be an impertinent thing to seek for this Candace of ours any where else. The head of the Kingdom (saith Strabo) was Meröe, a City of the same name with the Island it self. Now the Country Meröe was made an Island by the river Nile Westward, and the river Astabora Eastward g.

g Ptol. tab. 4. Africa.

If our Eunuch here came indeed from Meröe, then may we call to mind that passage in Zeph. III. 10. From beyond the rivers of Æthiopia my suppliants, &c. But from what part soever of Candace's Empire he might come, and what way soever he went; that might be true of him, and a very long journy he must needs take, before he could arrive at Jerusalem. But the Ethiopick Version, cuts the journy much shorter, when it makes him travailing to the City Gaza; So rendring that passage, ὃς ἦν ἐπὶ πάσης τῆς γάζης αὐτῆς, not, who had the charge of all her treasure, but who was over all Gaza.

I am

I am apt to imagine this devotioniſt might come to Jeruſalem upon the ſame errand that had brought the Jews from all Countries, Acts II. viz. led hether by the Propheſie of Daniel, which had foretold the appearance of the Meſſias about this time. And one would wonder, that whiles he was at Jeruſalem, he ſhould have heard nothing concerning Jeſus. Or perhaps what he heard of him was the occaſion of his ſtudying at this time that paſſage in Iſaiah's Propheſie. Where now were the Apoſtles and the reſt of that holy College and company, that ſo great a perſon, and one of ſuch devotion ſhould be let go untaught and unſatisfied concerning the Lord Jeſus? Is it poſſible that he could be ignorant of the talk of his Death and Reſurrection, abiding in the City although as yet he might not believe it? But his inſtruction and converſion, is reſerved to a more peculiar miracle, that ſhould render it the more famous, and better known.

VERS. XXXII.

Ὡς πρόβατον ἐπὶ σφαγὴν ἤχθη. He was led as a ſheep to the ſlaughter.

THE Text in Iſaiah is indeed expreſt here according to the Greek Verſion, but whether the Eunuch uſed that Verſion or no, is no unjuſt queſtion. As alſo, whether he were a Jew or a Proſelyte; whether a Proſelyte made, or a meer Gentile; whether an Eunuch in the ſtrict, or in the larger ſenſe. Which things are not to be enquired into, becauſe we can no where be reſolved about them. The perverſneſs of the Jews is more obvious, who, to elude theſe expreſs and plain things about the ſufferings of the Meſſiah, do divert the whole ſenſe of this Chapter to another thing. It goes current amongſt them, that the afflicted people of Iſrael, are the ſubject of this Propheſie: although there are thoſe that would apply part of it to Jeremy; others, part of it to R. Judah the holy; nay ſome there are that will allow ſome part of it to the Meſſias himſelf, in the mean time providing that they admit not of his death; it would be very tedious to ſet down particularly their triflings and eluſions in this matter. I rather enquire who it is that the Greek Intetpreters apply this paſſage to? Whether they plainly and ſincerely underſtood them of the ſufferings and death of the Meſſiah? Let thoſe anſwer for them, who would have them inſpired by the Holy Ghoſt. If they were thus inſpired, they could not but attain the true ſenſe and ſcope of the Scripture, as well as the Grammatical ſignification of the words, and could not but diſcern here, that the Prophet treats of an afflicted, ſuffering, dying, buried Meſſias, &c.

And if ſo, how ſtrange a thing is it, that the whole Nation ſhould be carried away with ſo curſed, perverſe and obſtinate a denial of the Meſſiah's death? What? For Seventy two Doctors and Guids of the people, and thoſe divinely inſpired too, ſo plainly to foreſee the ſufferings and death of the Meſſiah foretold in this Chapter, and yet not to take care to diſperſe this Doctrine amongſt the people, nor deliver and hand it down to poſterity? But if they did do it, how came ſo horrid an averſneſs to this Doctrine to ſeize the whole Nation? If they did not, what execrable Paſtors of the people were they, to conceal ſo noble, and ſo neceſſary an Article of their Faith, and not impart it?

In like manner do the Jews commonly apply that famed Propheſie of Chriſt, Iſa. IX. 6. to King Hezekiah; I doubt alſo the Greek Interpreters lean that way, that clauſe Ἄξω ὑγίειαν αὐτῷ, I will reſtore health, or ſoundneſs to him, gives a ſuſpition of it.

VERS. XXXIII.

Ἐν τῇ ταπεινώσει αὐτοῦ ἡ κρίσις αὐτοῦ ἤρθη. In his humiliation his judgment was taken from him.

THE Hebrew Text is, מעוצר וממשפט לקח He was taken from priſon and from judgment; which the Seventy read thus, מעצרו ממשפט לקח If you render the word עצר in the ſame ſenſe with נעצר לפני יהוה 1 Sam. XXI. 7. Doeg (for devotion, ſaith Kimchi) was detained before the Lord: then is ſhewn ſo much the greater wrong done to Chriſt. He was ſnatcht from the place of his devotion, and from his work; and he was ſnatched from the place of judgment, that he could neither be ſafe in that, nor have juſt judgment in the other. Any one knows what עצרת ſignifies, namely, Being detained upon a Religious account, and what affinity the word עצר to ſhut up, may have with it, every one may alſo ſee.

Τὴν γενεὰν αὐτοῦ τίς διηγήσεται; Who ſhall declare his generation?

That is, who ſhall declare the wickedneſs of that age or generation wherein he lived, and by whom he ſuffered ſuch things? This and ſuch like paſſages are very uſual amongſt the the Jews. h In the generation in which the Son of David shall come, the Synagogue shall be a common stews, Galilee shall be destroyed, and Gablan shall be laid waste. ---- the wisdom of the Scribes shall putrifie, good and merciful men shall fail, yea and truth it self shall fail, and the faces of that generation shall be as the faces of dogs. ---- R. Levi saith, The Son of David shall not come, but in a generation wherein mens faces shall be impudent; and which will deserve to be cut off. R. Jannai saith, When thou seest the generation, after the slandering, and blaspheming generation, then expect the feet of King Messias, that is, his coming. While I read the Chaldee Paraphrast, in Isa. LIII. methinks I see a forehead not unlike the faces before mentioned; for he wrests the Prophets words with that impudence and perverseness from their own proper sense, that it is a wonder if his own Conscience, while he was writing it, did not check and admonish him.

VERS. XL.

Φίλιππος δὲ ε�ρέθη εἰς Ἄζωτον. But Philip was found at Azotus.

IF this was done at Gaza or near it, it was from thence to Azotus about two hundred and seventy furlongs; or thirty four miles or thereabout. * And Azotus was, as it seems, two miles from Jamnia, according to the computation of Antoninus his Itinerarium. From Gaza to Askalon sixteen miles: from Askalon to Jamnia twenty. We have the mention of one רבי פליפא Rabba Philippi, as it should seem, in the Jerusalem Talmud. i

VERS. II.

Ἠτήσατο παρ' αὐτοῦ ἐπιστολὰς εἰς Δαμασκὸν. He desired letters of him [the High Priest] to Damascus.

THESE letters were written from the whole Sanhedrin, k the head of which was Gamaliel, Paul's Master, yet they are attributed to the High-Priest, he being of a more worthy degree and order, than the President of the Council; that in Acts XXIII. 4. hath a peculiar Emphasis, τὸν Ἀρχιερέα τοῦ Θεοῦ, God's High-Priest, and hints to us the opinion that Nation had of the High-Priest, namely, that he was God's Officer; whereas the President of the Council was only an officer of the People, and chosen by men. The charge of the High-Priest was to take care about holy things: the charge of the President was to take care about the Traditions: for he was the מקבל the keeper and repository of Traditions.

k Vid. Acts XXII 5.

But the words we are upon do occasion a more knotty and difficult question, viz. whether the decrees of the Sanhedrin were of authority amongst the Jews in Countries abroad? As to Damascus there is the less scruple, because Syria in very many things was lookt upon to be of the same rank and condition with the land of Israel. But what shall we think of more remote Countries? For instance, Egypt or Babylon, where the greatest number of Jews above all other Countries in the World did reside?

I. There was no Sanhedrin of Seventy men, either in Egypt or Babylon, or indeed any where else, but that at Jerusalem. There were very famous Academies in Babylon, viz. that of Nehardea, that of Sorah, and that of Pombeditha. But a Sanhedrin no where. There was a very famous Cathedral Church at Alexandria, wherein were seventy pompous stalls, but it was but a Church not a Sanhedrin l.

l Hieros. Succah. fol. 55. 1.

II. In what veneration the Jerusalem Sanhedrin was held every where amongst all sorts of Jews, may be collected from this, that the rule and determination concerning intercalating the year, concerning the beginning of the year, and the appointed time of the feasts, &c. came from it, as also that was esteemed the keeper and repository of the oral Law.

III. The judgment of life and death in the matter of Heresie and heterodoxy belonged only to the Jerusalem Sanhedrin: and it is some such thing that is now before us. The Christians were to be sent from the Synagogues bound to Jerusalem, that if they would not deny their faith, they might be condemned to dye. The Synagogues by their three men, men, might ſcourge them, but they could not paſs ſentence of death: And theſe goodly men conceived there was no other way to extirpate Chriſtianity but by the death of Chriſtians.

IV. Whether therefore, theſe were mandatory letters, or only exhortatory which St. Paul deſired; the Fathers of the Sanhedrin knew the Synagogues were heated with ſo great an indignation againſt Chriſtianity that they would moſt readily undertake, what was deſired. Where, by the way, we may make this obſervation, That the power of Life and Death was not yet taken out of the hands of the Sanhedrin. I have elſewhere given you a copy of a Letter from the Sanhedrin to thoſe of Babylon, and alſo to thoſe of Alexandria m.

VERS. V.

Σκληρόν σοι πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζειν. It is hard for thee to kick againſt the pricks.

IN Syriac קשא הו לך למבעטו לעוקסא. It is well known that בעט ſignifies to kick, from Deut. XXII. 15. and 1 Sam. II. 29. nor is it leſs known what this word kicking in theſe places means. n R. Bibai ſat and taught ---- R. Iſaac ben Cahna בעט ביה kickt againſt him.

VERS. VII.

Ἀκούοντες μὲν τῆς φωνῆς, &c. Hearing a voice, &c.

BUT it is ſaid Chap. XXII. 9. They heard not the voice of him that ſpake unto me. They heard קול the Voice, or Sound; but they did not hear דבר the words. So we find the Jewiſh writers diſtinguiſhing. o There I will ſpeak with thee. The word ſhall be with thee, but not with them all. יכול לא היו שומעין את הדבר Perhaps they did not hear the words אבל היו שומעין את הקול but they heard the voice.

o Bemidb. rab. fol. 163. 1.

---- Μηδένα δὲ θεωροῦντες. But ſeeing no man.

But did Paul himſelf ſee him? See verſ. 17. Jeſus that appeared to thee in the way; and verſ. 27. He ſaw the Lord in the way. 1 Cor. IX. 1. Have I not ſeen Jeſus Chriſt our Lord? And Chap. XV. 8. He was ſeen of me alſo, &c. but did he ſee his perſon or his glory only? I would ſay he ſaw both; and ſo had obtained a more illuſtrious Viſion of him than any of the reſt, having ſeen him ſince he was glorified, which they did not. But whether he ſaw with his bodily eyes, or as Iſaiah, Cap. VI. 1. by Viſion only, let thoſe diſpute it that think fit.

Concerning Damaſcus the ſcene of this hiſtory, we may call to mind that of Zechar. IX. 1. The burden of the word of the Lord in the land of Hadrach, and Damaſcus the reſt thereof, &c. where the Targum; Damaſcus ſhall be converted, ſo that it ſhall be of the land of the houſe of his Majeſty. Kimchi hath it, Damaſcus ſhall be his reſt: that is, the habitation of his glory and of his prophet, &c. which things whither they have any relation to this place, let the Reader judge. Only I muſt not let it paſs unobſerved, that Paul the Converter of the Gentiles, was called to his Apoſtleſhip, and ſaw Chriſt in a Country, and almoſt in a City of the Gentiles.

St. Paul himſelf tells us that this voice which came from Heaven ſpake to him Ἑβραΐδι διαλέκτῳ, in the Hebrew tongue, Chap. XXVI. 14. which our Hiſtorian doth not mention, nor indeed thoſe paſſages, verſ. 16. 17, 18. which S. Paul there relates.

VERS. XII.

Ἐπιθεὶς αὐτῷ χεῖρα ὅπως ἀναβλέψῃ. Putting his hand on him, that he may receive his ſight.

ANANIAS himſelf adds, verſ. 17. that thou mighteſt receive thy ſight, and be filled with the Holy Ghoſt. Could Ananias therefore confer the Holy Ghoſt? This ſeemed the peculiar prerogative of the Apoſtles; could therefore a private Diſciple do this to an Apoſtle? By the impoſition of his hands could he impart the gift of Tongues and Propheſie? Will not this degrade our Apoſtle even below the ordinary Miniſters, who received theſe gifts by the impoſition of the Apoſtles hands, and ſhall he that is an Apoſtle take his Commiſſion from the hands of one that is not ſo himſelf? It was not ordinary for an Apoſtle to be baptiſed by one that was not an Apoſtle; and it would be ſtrange, if ſuch an one ſhould add over and above greater things to an Apoſtle.

It

It may be no needless question, who it was that baptized the rest of the Apostles, when Jesus himself baptized not, Joh. IV. 2. who therefore baptized those that did baptize? Let the Romanists say, who baptized Peter? I would say John the Baptist did. But do you think Peter was rebaptized? If so, by whom, when Jesus himself did not baptize?

CHAP. XII.

VERS. II.

Ἀνεῖλε δὲ Ἰάκωβον μαχαίρῃ. He killed James with the sword.

THIS kind of death is called הרג killing. p Four kinds of death are delivered into the hands of the Sanhedrin. סקילה stoning. שריפה burning. הרג killing (with the sword) חנק strangling. q The precept נהרגין concerning those that are to be killed, is this היו מחיון את ראשו בסייף they beheaded him with the sword as the (Roman) Kingdom does. R Judah saith, This is a vile disgrace to him. But they lay his head upon a block, and chop it off with an Ax. Others reply, there can be no death more disgraceful than that. You will say Herod (Agrippa) imitated the Roman customs as having no small relation to Rome. But beheading by the sword, was a death used amongst the Jews themselves; and they particularly fell under that sentence, that drew away the people to the worship of other Gods. r If they be but a few that seduce the people to strange worship, they are stoned, and their goods are not confiscated; but if their numbers be great, they dye by the sword, and their goods are confiscated.

p Sanhedr. fol. 49.2.

r Ibid. fol. 111. 2.

St. James indeed was but a single person, but Herod knew that there was Peter also and several others, who according to his judgment מחיין drew away the people to an irreligious worship; and deals with James, as he intended to do with the rest. So he falls, and his goods are confiscated. And so that begins to be accomplished which our Saviour had formerly told the sons of Zebedee, ye shall drink of my cup, &c. s The Rabbins say, Killing [by the sword] is an heavier punishment than strangling.

s Hieros. Sanhedr. fol. 29.4.

VERS. VII.

Αἱ ἅλυσις ἐκ τῶν χειρῶν. His chains from his hands.

I Am mistaken if the Jerusalem Talmudists do not express ἅλυσις ἐκ τῶν χειρῶν by כידו מניקיא Chiromanicæ, hand-manacles. t It is written, The Lord spake to Manasseh, and to his people, but they harkned not: Wherefore the Lord brought upon them the Captains of that host of the King of Assyria, which took Manasseh בחחים What signifies בחחים that is כידו מניקיא in manacles? The Targum on 2 Chron. XXXIII. thus renders it ואחדו ית מנשה בכידי מנקייה where, I am apt to suspect the word בידי is ill writ instead of כידו: but I stand corrected very willingly, if I guess amiss.

t Ibid. fol. 28.3

In those words of our Saviour, Bind the unprofitable servant hand and foot, &c. it is plain to see, how he alluded to manacles and fetters.

VERS. XV.

Ὁ Ἄγγελός ἐστιν αὐτοῦ. It is his Angel.

THAT is, An Angel in his shape; for it was familiarly received amongst them, that the Angels did sometimes put on the shape of this or of that person. u It is written, he hath delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh. Bar Kaphra saith, מלאך ירד בדמות an Angel descended in the shape of Moses, and made him flee. והיו סבורין במלאך משה והבריחו and they that came to lay hold on Moses, thought the Angel to be Moses. The Gloss is, The Angel quickned Moses in his flight, so that those that sought for Moses, were very little solicitous about him, because they thought the Angel was Moses. ✻ The Holy blessed God saith, I have said to mirth what doth it? What doth that crown in thine hand? Descend from my throne: in the same hour an Angel descended בדמיתו של שלמה in the shape of Solomon, and sat upon his throne.

u Debarim rabba fol. 290. 4.

✻ Midr. Cohelleth, fol. 87.4.

It is well known that the Jewish writers do take Elias for the Angel of the Covenant, Mal. III. 1. and how often have we Elias appearing in the shape of this or of that man?

x Sanhedr. fol. 109 1. y Hieros. Kilaim. fol 32.2.

x Elias came ואתרמי ליה בחד מיניהו עאל אליהו and seemed unto them as one of themselves. y On a certain day Elias came to R. Judah the Holy, in the shape of R. Chaiah Rubbah, &c. having touched his teeth he took away their pain; the next day R. Chaiah Rubbah came to him and said, how doth Rabbi, how do his teeth? To whom he replyed, from the time that thou touchedst my teeth with thy fingers, they were healed. לגביה ברמות ר' חייה רובה

VERS. XX.

Διὰ τὸ τρέφεσθαι αὐτῶν τὴν χώραν ἀπὸ τῆς Βασιλικῆς. Because their Country was nourisht by the Kings Country.

HERE we may call to mind that of Ezek. XXVII. 17. Judah and the land of Israel [O Tyre] were thy Merchants, they traded in thy markets wheat of Minnith and Pannag, and Honey, and Oyl, and Balm. So the Latine, the Interlinear, our English, and the Italian Versions. But others make Minnith and Pannag not places, but Merchandise ware, namely the Syriac, Arabic, Greek and the Chaldee especially, who hath rendred the words so that R. Solomon, and R. Kimchi, confess they knew not well what he means. As for Minnith we have it mentioned in Judg. XI. 33. for which the Syriac hath Makir for a reason not known; and the Greek, Arnon, for no reason at all. As for Pannag we meet with it no where else. Whatever it be, the words of the Prophet hint to us the same thing, that the Evangelist doth here; which is strengthned also from that in 1 King. V. 11. And Solomon gave Hiram twenty thousand measures of wheat for food to his houshold, and twenty measures of pure Oyl, thus gave Solomon to Hiram year by year.

VERS. XXIII.

Γενόμενος σκωληκόβρωτος ἐξέψυξεν. Being eaten of worms, he gave up the Ghost.

JOSEPHUS speaks more sparingly in this matter, Ἄθλιον ἡ αὐτοῦ τὴν κοιλίαν ἐφορίσασα ἄλγημα· The pains of his belly came thick upon him: speaking only of the torments of the belly, and suppressing the cause. And that (as it should seem) not only to conceal the Kings reproach, but to add something of honour to him. For lay that passage in the Talmud to this, חבין שהי צדיקים מתים בחולי מעיים Many just persons have dyed of the pain in the bowels. z On the contrary, to be devoured by worms was reckoned an accursed thing, and what befel none but men of greatest impiety. * Those that went to spy out the land of promise, and raised an evil report upon it, They had their Tongues hanging out, and falling upon their Navels, היו חולעות יוצאות מלשונם and worms issued out of their Tongues and crept into their Navels, and issued out of their Navels again, and crept into their Tongues. || A certain Priest (a Baithusean as it should seem) made incense without, and brought it within. --- There are who say, יצא חוטמו מונק חולעים that his Nose hung down, issuing out with worms; and that something like a calves hoof grew in his forehead.

CHAP. XIII.

VERS. I.

Ἦσαν δέ τινες ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ κατὰ τὴν οὖσαν Ἐκκλησίαν. There were some in the Church that was at Antioch.

COMPARE that passage Chap. XI. 27. with this place, and neither the word τινες, some; will seem redundant; nor the phrase κατὰ τὴν οὖσαν ἐκκλησίαν, so harsh, There came some Prophets from Jerusalem to Antioch, when yet, there were in the Church of Antioch some Prophets of their own already. And it seems to hint that the separation of Paul and Barnabas to the Ministry was done by the stated Ministers of that Church, and not by others that came thither.

Προφῆται ἢ διδάσκαλοι. Prophets and Teachers.

These offices indeed are distinguisht, 1 Cor. XII. 28. and Ephes. IV. 11. but here, they seem as if they were not so to be; for the Church of Antioch was not yet arrived at that maturity that it should produce Teachers that were not endowed with the Holy Ghost, and the gift of Propheſie; and the phrase κατὰ τὸν ἅγιον πνεῦμα ἐν ἐκκλησίαν seems to intimate some such thing, viz. that according to the state of the Church then being in that place, there were, nay it was necessary there should be prophetick Teachers, because there was not any who by the study of the Scriptures, was become fit for that office. But why then is it not rather said, Διδάσκαλοι Προφητικοὶ Prophetick Teachers, than Προφῆται ἢ διδάσκαλοι Prophets and Teachers? Namely, because there were Prophets who were not ordinary Teachers, but acted in their Prophetick office occasionally only; and they were such as rather foretold things to come, than ordinarily preacht, or taught chatechistically. But these were both Prophets, and constant Preachers too.

Μαναήν τε Ἡρῴδου τοῦ τετραάρχου σύντροφος. And Manaen which had been brought up with Herod the Tetrarch.

So Menahem is writ in the Alexandrian copy, at 2 Kings Chap. XV. Μαναὴν, Manaen: but the Roman hath, Μαναὴμ, Manaem. This our Manaens education with Herod the Tetrarch, brings to mind what is related in Juchasin. c Hillel and Shammai received their traditions from them (that is, from Shamaiah and Abtalion) But first were Hillel and Menahem. Menahem went off into the Kings family and service, עם שמנים אנשים לבושים זהב with fourscore men clothed in gold --- Menahem was grave and wise, like a Prophet, and uttered many Propheſies. He foretold Herod, when he was yet very young, that he should come to reign: And when he did reign, he sent for him, who foretold him also that he should reign above thirty years. And he did reign seven and thirty. Josephus (who is quoted also by this our Author) speaks much the same as to part of the story. d There was amongst the Essenes one named Menaem, who, besides that he was famous for the holiness of his life, had obtained of God a foreknowledge of future things. He called Herod while he was yet a child, King of the Jews, &c.

d Antiq. lib. 15 cap. 13.

I do not think this our Manaem, was the same person; nor do I say, that he was his son (for had the Essenes children?) But whereas this person was so accepted in the Court of Herod the Great, and our Manaen brought up with Herod his son; I cannot but suspect there might be something of kindred betwixt them. But that matter is not tanti: it is only worthy our considering whether this Menaen might not lay the foundations of his Christianity, while he was in Herod the Tetrarchs Court, where John the Baptist preacht, and that with some kind of approbation and applause even from Herod himself, Mark VI. 20.

As to the remaining part of the story, the Talmudists add this passage; e יצא מנחם ונכנס שמאי Menahem went out, and Shammai entred. But whether went Menahem? Abai saith, יצא לתרבות רעה he lasht out into all abundance of wickedness. Aba saith, he went into the service of the King, and with him went fourscore pair of Disciples, all clad in silk. I dare not say this Menahem was the same with our Menahem unless he were an hundred years of age or thereabout; and yet when I observe the familiarity that was between that Menahem and Herod the father; and how ours was brought up with Herod the son (which certainly was not put in by our Historian for no reason) it cannot but give me some apprehension that either he might be the person himself, or rather his son (if at least the Essenes had children) or in a word, some very near relation. Be it one or other, it is worthy enquiry, whether this our Manaen might not lay the foundation of his Evangelical religion in the Court of Herod the Tetrarch, when John Baptist preached there.

VERS. II.

Λειτουργούντων δὲ αὐτῶν τῷ Κυρίῳ καὶ νηστευόντων. As they ministred to the Lord and fasted.

I. THE more religious amongst the Jews fasted, and met in their Synagogues to the publick Prayers and Service, on the second and fifth day of the week: so that on those days it might be properly said of them, Ἐλειτούργουν, καὶ ἐνήστευον, that they ministred and fasted. On their Sabbath indeed ἐλειτούργουν, they Ministred, but they did not ἐνήστευον, fast; but on these days in the week, the second and the fifth they did both.

II. Perhaps it might be somewhat bold to say that the Church at Antioch, did according to the Jewish custom, observe the weekly fasts. And yet more bold to say, that Church chose those days for fasting which the Jews had done, viz. the second and fifth day of the week. But it would be most audacious to conjecture that they observed the Jewish Sabbath bath in some measure with the Lords day; and that with fasting, when as the Jews would by no means endure a fast upon that day. But whatever the day of this fasting was, or what occasion soever there was of it: from that ordinary custom of the Jews it is easie to judge of that phrase, λειτουργούντων, Ministring, viz. that a publick fast was celebrated with the publick assembly of the Church, and administration of holy things; which whether it was so done, vers. 3. where it is said, τότε νηστεύσαντες, καὶ προσευξάμενοι, then they fasted and prayed, may be some question: that is, whether at that time there was a publick fast of the whole Church, or a more private one amongst the Elders only.

VERS. III.

Ἐπιθέντες τὰς χεῖρας αὐτοῖς, &c. Laying their hands on them, &c.

f Sanhedr. cap. 1. hal. 3.

סמיכת זקנים ועריפת עגלה בשלשה f the ordaining of the Elders, and beheading the Heifer is by the three. In this thing therefore, this present action agreeth with the common usage of the Synagogue, that three persons, Simeon, Lucius, and Manaen lay their hands on two that were to be sent out, viz. Paul and Barnabas. But in that they lay on their hands, they do also recede from the usual custom. g After what manner is the ordaining of Elders for ever? Not that they should lay their hands upon the head of an Elder, but only should call him Rabbi, and say to him, behold thou art ordained, and thou hast power of judging, &c. Antiently, every one that had been promoted to be an Elder, promoted his Disciples also: But this honour the wise Men indulged to old Hillel, namely decreeing that no person should be ordained to be an Elder, but with the license of the President. But neither is the President to ordain any person, unless the Vicepresident assist him, nor the Vicepresident, unless the President assist him. But as to what belongs to the other Societies: It is lawful for one man to ordain with the allowance of the President; but let him have two more with him: For it is not an ordination unless by three; nor do they ordain Elders out of the Land.

g Maimon. Sanhedr. cap. 4.

It might not be unworthy our enquiry (if there were place for it here) both why they have abolisht the ceremony of imposition of hands, as also, why they should restrain the ordaining of Elders to the land of Israel only. We see the Church at Antioch doth otherwise, and by the same rule the Christian Church. But perhaps some will ask, upon what reason; when laying on of hands in the ordination of Elders, was hardly used at all, either under the first Temple, or before or under the second Temple. It was not under the second Temple, if we may believe the Rabbin newly quoted; or at least if it was used, it was abolished at last. And before the second Temple, where is there any sign or footstep of such a thing?

VERS. IV.

Κατῆλθον εἰς τὴν Σελεύκειαν. Departed unto Seleucia.

b Lib. 14.

THIS doubtless is Seleucia of Pieria, concerning which Strabo tells us, b Μετὰ δὲ τοῦτο Κιλικίαν πρώτη πόλις ἐστὶ τῆς Συρίας Σελεύκεια, ἡ ἐν Πιερίᾳ καὶ πλησίον Ὀρόντης ἐκδίδωσι ποταμός. Beyond Cilicia, the first City in Syria, is Seleucia which is said to be in Pieria. So Xylander Translates it, leaving out the Version of the last clause wholly, intimating that the river Orontes pours it self into the Sea not far from this place. And to this, the situation and distances in Ptolomy do agree.

Ἀπέπλευσεν εἰς τὴν Κύπρον. From thence they sailed to Cyprus.

k Dion. Cass. in Vit. Trajani.

How great a multitude of Jews there were in Cyprus, may be somewhat conjectured from the times of Trajan backward, from this story. k Ἐν τούτῳ οἱ κατὰ Κυρήνην Ἰουδαῖοι, &c. In the mean time the Jews who dwelt about Cyrene, under the conduct of one Andrew, fall both upon the Romans and the Greeks, feed on their flesh, eat their bowels, besmear themselves with their blood, and cover themselves with their skins: Many of them they sawed asunder, from the crown of the head down the middle; many of them they threw to the wild beasts; many of them they forced to fight amongst themselves, till they had destroyed above two hundred and twenty thousand men. In Egypt and Cyprus they committed the same kind of outrages, the the leader (of the Cypriots) being Artemion; where two hundred and forty thousand men were lost: whence it came to pass that a Jew might not come into Cyprus. But if by chance and stress of weather he put in upon the Island, he was killed. But the Jews, as by others, so especially by Lucius, whom Trajanus sent upon that expedition, were all subdued.

VERS. VI.

Ὧ ὄνομα Βαριησοῦς. Whose name was Bar-jesus.

VERS. VIII.

Ἐλύμας ὁ μάγος, οὕτω γὰρ μεθερμηνεύεται τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ. Elymas the Sorcerer, (for so is his name by interpretation.)

I. IT may be enquired, whether Ἰησοῦς, Jesus, in Βαριησοῦς, Barjesus, be a proper name, or an appellative. In the Arabic in the Polyglot Bible, it is writ as a proper name ישוע Jesu. But in the Arabic of the Erpenian edition, it is writ as an appellative יאסוס Jesus, and under the same notion, the Syriac taking the word, for Bar-Jesus, hath בר שומא Bar-Shumah, the Son of a Name, as Beza would have it: but trulier, the Son of a Swelling, or a Wound: for שומא and סומא is a Tumor or Pustle, in the Targumists, of Jonathan, and of Jernsalem, upon Levit. XIII. 2. and in the Syriac it is שומתא So also חבורה a Wound, is by that translated שומתא Isa. I. 6. and LIII. 5. And indeed Elymas, can no way be the interpretation of Bar-jesus, if Jesus here be a proper name, and especially if it must be writ ישוע

II. I would therefore write Bar-jesus in Hebrew letters thus, בר יעשוש a word derived from עשש which signifies to waste away, or be corroded and worn by a Disease. So Psal. VI. 8. עששה מכעס עיני mine Eye is consumed, or as the Interlinear, corroded because of grief. And that the Syriac had reference to this radix, when he renders it by בר שומא The Son of a Wound, or a Swelling proceeding from a Disease, is little to be doubted; and with this etymology the word Elymas agrees excellently well.

III. There are those that would have it to be the interpretation of the word Μάγος, that is, that the Arabic word עלימא and so Elymas is the same with Μάγος a Sorcerer, which does not seem very distant from truth; once indeed such a conceipt pleased me well enough; but since, these two things well considered, have led me another way.

1. Because it may reasonably be doubted, whether St. Luke would explain Μάγος, a well known word, by a word far more unknown. Besides, why should this Sorcerer only be called Elymas when as according to that etymology, all persons of the same art might have the same name.

2. Because the Syriac and Arabic do not begin the word Elymas with the letter ע Ain, but א Aleph. I little doubt therefore but this name Elymas takes its original from the Arabic word الم אלם Alima or Elima, which signifies to grieve or be tormented. And how this sense agrees with the word עשש any one may see. For what can be nearer akin than to consume away, and to grieve; and to waste away by a distemper, and be under torment? So that, I suppose, this Sorcerer was called in his own Hebrew name בר יעשוש Bar-Jesus, and went by that name among the Hebraizing Jews: but amongst those that speak Arabic, Elymas, which in the Arabic Tongue signifies the same thing. I confess it is something an unusual thing for St. Luke to render an Hebrew name by Arabic and not by Greek, which the Evangelists commonly do. But it seems, that this Magician was born and bred in some place or Country, where the Arabic was the mother Tongue, inhabited by Jews also, that used their own Language, and from thence he came to be known by this twofold name. I am mistaken, if Jabneh it self, a known Academy of the Jews, and sometime the seat of the Sanhedrin, was not in such a Country. For it may be made out elsewhere, that it is very probable the whole Philistine Country, at least the greatest part of it, did use the Arabic as their mother Tongue.

VERS. IX.

Σαῦλος δὲ ὁ καὶ Παῦλος. Then Saul who is also called Paul.

HERE is both his Hebrew and Roman name too, upon the account of that relation he had to both Nations. He was by his parentage a Jew, and so called Saul, but withal, he was a free denison of Rome, and thence had the name of Paul. Under the same notion Silas is called Silvanus; for he also was a Citizen of Rome, as may be collected out of Acts XVI. 37. The Apostle having hitherto conversed chiefly amongst the Jews retains his Jewish name, but being now declared the Apostle of the Gentiles, and traveling amongst the Gentiles, St. Luke gives him his Gentile name only.

VERS. X.

Υἱὲ Διαβόλου. Thou child of the Devil.

IS not this much of the same import with that in the Old Testament, בן בליעל Son of Belial? בכור שטן at first hearing seems to sound very harshly, and indeed at first sight might appear as if it signified the first-born of Satan; but it is given to a certain Rabbin to his praise, and as a title of honour, l in a far different signification, the word שטן taking its derivation from שוט to decline from.

VERS. XII.

Ἀνθύπατος. The Deputy.

THIS is a word much in use amongst the Talmudists, with a little variation only in the reading. m R. Chaninah, and R. Joshua ben Levi passed קומי אנטיפותא דקיסרין before the Ἀνθύπατος or Deputy of Cæsarea. He seeing them, rose up to them. His own people say unto him, Doest thou rise up to these Jews? He answered them and said, I saw their faces as the faces of Angels. See the Aruch upon the word.

VERS. XIII.

Ἦλθον εἰς Πέργην τῆς Παμφυλίας. They came to Perga in Pamphylia.

FROM Paphos in Cyprus, whether old or new (both being Maritim places situated on the Western shore of the Island) they seemed to Sail into the mouth of the river Cestrus, concerning which Strabo hath this passage. n Ἔιθ' ὁ Κέστρος ποταμὸς, &c. Then there is the river Cestrus which when one hath sailed sixty furlongs, he comes to the City Perga, near which is the Temple of Diana of Perga, in an high place, where every year there is a solemn convention. Ptolomey also speaks of the river Cestrus, and of the Cataract, concerning which Strabo hath some mention.

n Geograph. lib. 14.

But Mela o hath this passage, Thence there are two strong rivers Oestros and Cataractes. Oestros is easily navigable: but Cataractes hath its name from the violence of its running, amongst these is the City Perga, &c. One may justly suspect an error in the Writer here, writing Oestros for Cestros, and it is something strange that Olivarius hath taken no notice of it.

o Mela, lib. 1. cap. 14.

We may conjecture there was no Synagogue of Jews in Perga, because there is no mention of it, nor any memorable thing recorded as done by the Apostles here; only that John whose Sirname was Mark, did in this place depart from them; for what reason is not known.

VERS. XIV.

Παραγενόμενοι εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν τῆς Πισιδίας. They came to Antioch in Pisidia.

Strabo reckons up thirteen Cities in Pisidia p from Artemidorus, amongst which he makes no mention of Antioch. But Pliny q tells us, Insident vertici Pisidiæ quondam Solymi appellati, &c. There are that inhabit the top of Pisidia, who were once called Solymites, their Colony is Casarea, the same is Antioch. And Ptolomey, Πόλεις δὲ εἰσὶν ἐν Παμφυλίᾳ μεσόγειοι, φευγίας μὲν Σελεύκεια, Πισιδίας δὲ Ἀντόχεια. The inland Cities in Pamphilia, are Seleucia of Phrygia, and Antioch of Pisidia. Where the Interpreter most confusedly, Civitates sunt in Provincia Mediterranea, Phrygia quidem Pisidiæ, Seleucia Pisidiæ, Antiochia: that is, there are Cities in the midland Country, Phrygia of Pisidia, Seleucia of Pisidia, Antioch, and in the margin he sets Cæsarea.

VERS. XV.

Μετὰ δὲ τὴν ἀνάγνωσιν τοῦ νόμου καὶ τῶν Προφητῶν. After the reading of the Law and the Prophets.

BUT in what Language were the Law and the Prophets read, in this Synagogue? It is generally supposed that in the Synagogues of the Hellenists, the Greek Bible was read. But was that Tongue understood amongst the Pisidians? Strabo at the end of his thirteenth Book tells us, The Cibratian prefecture was reckoned amongst the greatest of Asia. Τέτρασι δὲ γλώτταις ἐχρῶντο οἱ Κιβυρᾶται τῇ Πισιδικῇ, τῇ Σολύμων, τῇ Ἑλληνίδι, τῇ Λύδων. The Cibyrates used four Languages, the Pisidian, the Solyman, the Greek, and Lydian. Where we see the Pisidian Tongue is expressly distinguisht from the Greek. If Moses and the Prophets therefore were read here in the Greek Tongue, were they understood by those in Pisidia? Yes, you will say, for the very name of the City Antioch speaks it, to have been a Greek Colony. Grant this: but then suppose a Jewish Synagogue in some City of Pisidia that was purely Pisidian, such as Selge, Sagalessus, Pernelissus, &c. or in some City of the Solymites, or of the Lydians, in what Language was the Law read there? Doubtless in the same

VERS. XVIII.

Ἐτροποφόρησεν αὐτούς. He ſuffered their manners.

THE particle ὡς ſeems to exclude the reading of ἐτροποφόρησεν, which word we meet with in the Seventy, Deut. I. 31. Ἐτροποφόρησε, God did indeed bear with them full forty years: and ſo you will ſay, ἐτροποφόρησεν αὐτούς, is not wide from the truth. But the Apoſtle adding the particle ὡς about the time of forty years, ſeems chiefly to reſpect that time, which went between the fatal decree, that they ſhould not enter the land, and the going in.

VERS. XIX.

THE Rabbins very frequently, when they mention the Canaanitiſh people, give them this very term of the Seven Nations. שבעה אומות

VERS. XX.

Ὡς ἔτεσι τετρακοσίοις καὶ πεντήκοντα. About the ſpace of four hundred and fifty years.

AMongſt the many things that are offerd upon this difficulty, I would chuſe this, that in this number are reckoned the years of the Judges, and the years of thoſe Tyrants that oppreſt Iſrael, computing them disjunctly and ſingly, which at firſt ſight any one would think ought to be ſo reckoned; but that 1 Kings VI. 1. gives a check to a too large computation.

1. The years of the Judges and Tyrants, thus diſtinguiſht, anſwer the Sum exactly.

The Judges.		The Tyrants.
Othniel	XL.	Chuſhan	VIII.
Eliud	LXXX.	Eglon	XVIII.
Deborah	XL.	Siſera	XX.
Gideon	XL.	Midian	VII.
Abimelech	III.	Ammon	XVIII.
Tolah	XXIII.	The Philiſtins	XL.
Jair	XXII.
Jepthah	VI.	In all	CXI.
Ibſan	VII.
Elon	X.
Abdon	VIII.
Sampſon	XX.
Eli	XL.
In all	CCCXXXIX.

So that reckoning three hundred thirty nine, and one hundred and eleven together, the Sum amounts exactly to four hundred and fifty.

Ant. lib. cap. 2. II. Josephus seems expressly to follow this computation. In the fourth year of his reign, and in the second month, which the Macedonians term Artemision, the Hebrews Ijar, Solomon began to build his Temple. μετὰ ἔτη πεντακόσια καὶ ἐννενήκοντα καὶ δύο τῆς Αἰγυπτίων ἐξόδου· After five hundred ninety and two years, from the Israelites going out of Egypt.

In 1 Kings VI. 1. there are reckoned four hundred and fourscore years. Josephus, five hundred ninety two, exceeding that number by a hundred and twelve years: So as the three years of the Tyrants makes the number to exceed in this place.

III. In the particular summing up of these years, I cannot omit what is said concerning Sampson in the Jewish Writers t. Sampson saith, O Lord Eternal, give me a recompence for one of mine eyes, in this world, and for the other, in the world to come. One place saith, וישפוט את ישראל ארבעים שנה And he judged Israel forty years. Another place saith, והוא שפט את ישראל עשרים שנה And he judged Israel twenty years. R. Acha saith, by this it is hinted that the Philistines were afraid of him twenty years after his death, as they had stood in fear of him twenty years while he was alive.

t Hieros. Sotah, fol. 17. 2.

From these words we might imagine that it was written concerning Sampson that he judged Israel Forty years, which yet is no where found: only it is said in two places (Judg. XV. 20. and Chap. XVI. 31.) that he judged twenty years. Whence the Jewish Writers draw that conclusion as was said before, viz. that the Philistines were under the terror of him, for the space of twenty years after he had been dead. Indeed it is said of Eli, That he judged Israel forty years, 1 Sam. IV. 18. which when I observe the LXX. rendring by εἴκοσι ἔτη, twenty years, I cannot but suspect they might somewhat favour the received opinion amongst the Jews.

VERS. XXXIII.

Ἐν τῷ ψαλμῷ τῷ δευτέρῳ. In the second Psalm.

u Hieros. Taanith, fol. 65. 3. "WHY are the daily Prayers to the number of eighteen? R. Joshua ben Levi saith, it is according to the eighteen Psalms, from the beginning of the Psalms to The Lord hear thee in the day of trouble [Psal. XX. 1.] But if any one say to thee, they are nineteen אמור לו למה רגשו לידת הוא מנין say thou to him, Why do the heathen rage, [i. e. the second Psalm] is not one of them. Hence they say, he that prays and is not heard, it is necessary for him to fast too.

I. Judge hence whether this second Psalm were joyned or confounded with the first, when it seems in some measure sequestred from the whole number. And do you observe the Rabbins way of arguing? Being to prove that the number of the daily Prayers being eighteen, was adapted to the number of the eighteen Psalms, from the beginning of the Book to that place, The Lord hear thee in the day of trouble, &c. Psal. XX. he takes refuge in a common Axiom of theirs, He that prayeth and is not heard, must fast also. As if that Maxim was founded upon the equality of numbers, and the authors of that Maxim did so design it. q. d. He that pours out eighteen Prayers, according to the number of those eighteen Psalms, and is not head, let him Fast and he shall be heard, according to the tenor of the Psalm immediately following, The Lord hear thee in the day of trouble, i. e. in the day when thou troublest and afflictest thy self with Fasting.

II. I will not make any nice enquiry for what reason they should exclude the second Psalm out of the number. We find in it, however shut out of the number, a considerable testimony to the resurrection of the Messiah: and perhaps to this the Apostle may have some respect in these words. But if not, by this his noting the number and order of the Psalm, we may guess he spake to this sense, viz. ye have a testimony of the Resurrection of Christ in the very entrance of the Book of Psalms, so near the beginning of it, that we meet with it even in the second Psalm.

Υἱός μου εἶ σύ, ἐγὼ σήμερον γεγέννηκά σε. Thou art my Son this day have I begotten thee.

R. Solomon confesseth that the Rabbins do interpret this Psalm of the Messiah, but he had rather it should be applied to David. For the Jews take special care that the Messias should not be acknowledged as the genuine Son of God. Hence *Midr. Till. Thou art my Son: Hence we may answer the Hereticks who say he is Son to God. Do thou answer, בן לי אתה אינו אומר He doth not say, thou art Son to me, אלא בני אתה but, thou art my Son. (A very learned distinction indeed!) As the Master speaking kindly to his Servant, may say to him, I love thee like my own son. So the Targumist ‖, The Lord said חביב כבר לאבא לי אנת Thou art beloved to me as a Son is to his Father.

* In loc.

‖ In loc.

w Succah, fol. 52. 1.

begotten Son of God. It would be a vain and impertinent thing to collect all their little artifices by which they endeavour to evade the force of this place. It were much more proper for us to observe the way of the Apostles arguing, and by what means he makes it out, that these words of the Psalmist point at the Resurrection of the Messiah. Take this passage by the way: x R. Honna saith, ג' חלקי' נחלקו היסורין There are three portions of chastisements divided. The Fathers of the world and all generations received one part: The generation of persecution another, and the generation of the Messias another. And when his time cometh, then will the Holy blessed say, עלי לבראתו ברייה חרשה it lies upon me to make him a new creature. And so he saith, היום ילדתיך to day have I begotten thee. x Midr. Tillin. ubi. supr.

When the Jews asked a sign of our Saviour, he constantly gives them the sign of Jonas the Prophet; that is, that his Resurrection which should come to pass, should be a most undoubted proof for him, that he is the Son of God, the true Messias. So Rom. I. 4. He was declared to be the Son of God, by his Resurrection from the dead. For so was he indeed distinguished from all mortals, and Sons of men. And God saith he had then begotten him, when he had given a token that he was not a meer man, by his divine power whereby he had raised him from the dead. And according to the tenor of the whole Psalm, God is said to have begotten him then, when he was ordained King in Sion, and all Nations subdued under him. Upon which words that passage of our Saviour uttered immediately after he had arisen from the dead, is a good Commentary: All power is given unto me, &c. Matth. XXVIII.

What do those words mean, Matth. XXVI. 29. I will not henceforth drink of this fruit of the Vine; until that day when I drink it new with you in my Fathers Kingdom? They seem to look this way, viz. I will drink no more of it before my Resurrection. For in truth his Resurrection was the beginning of his Kingdom, when he had overcome those enemies of his, Satan, Hell, and Death; from that time was he begotten and established King in Zion. I am mistaken if that of Psal. CX. v. 3. doth not in some measure fall in here also, which, give me leave to render by way of paraphrase into such a sense as this. Thy people shall be a willing people in the day of thy power: it shall be a willing people in the beauties of holiness, it shall be a willing people from the Womb of the morning: thine is the dew of thy youth. Now the dew of Christ is that quickning power of his, by which he can bring the dead to life again, Isai. XXVI. 19. And the dew of thy youth, O Christ, is thine. That is, it is thine own power and vertue that raiseth thee again. I would therefore apply those words from the womb of the morning to his Resurrection: because the Resurrection of Jesus, was the dawn of the new world, the morning of the new Creation.

VERS. XXXIV.

Τὰ ὅσια Δαβὶδ τὰ πιστὰ. The sure mercies of David.

IT hath been generally observed that this phrase τὰ ὅσια, is taken from the Greek Version in Isai. LV. 3. But it is not so generally remarked, that by David was understood the Messiah, which yet the Rabbins themselves, Kimchi and Ab. Ezra have well observed, the following Verse expresly confirming it. The Resurrection of our Saviour therefore, by the interpretation of the Apostle, is said to be the τὰ ὅσια τῦ Χριστῦ τὰ πιστὰ· The sure mercies of Christ. And God by his Prophet (from whence this clause is taken) doth promise the raising again of the Messiah, and all the benefits of that Resurrection. He had fortold and promised his death Chap. LIII. But what mercies could have been hoped for by a dead Messiah, had he been always to have continued dead? They had been weak and instable kindnesses had they terminated in death: He promises mercies therefore firm and stable that were never to have end, because they should be always flowing and issuing out of his resurrection

Whereas these things are quoted out of the Prophet in the words of the LXX, varying a little from the Prophets words; and those much more, Ἴδετε οἱ καταφρονηταὶ, Behold ye despisers and wonder, &c. vers. 41. it might be enquired in what language the Apostle preached, as also in what language Moses and the Prophets were read in that Synagogue, vers. 15. If we say in the Greek, it is a question whether the Pisidians could understand it. If we say in the Pisidian language, it is hardly to be believed the Bible was then rendred into that language. It is remarkable what was quoted above out of Strabo, where he mentions four tongues, amongst them the Greek and the Pisidian distinct from one another. But this I have already discust in the Notes upon Verse 15. of this Chapter.

VERS. XLI.

Ἴδετε οἱ καταφρονηταί, &c. Behold ye despisers, &c.

DR. Pocock [a] here, as always, very learnedly, and accurately examines what the Greek Interpreters Hab. I. read: saving in the mean time the reading which the Hebrew Bibles exhibit: for it is one thing how the Greek read it, and another thing how it should be truly read.

[a] Poc. Miscell. 3.

VERS. XLII.

Παρεκάλουν τὰ ἔθνη, &c. The Gentiles besought, &c.

IT is all one as to the force of the words as far as I see, whether you render them they besought the Gentiles, or the Gentiles besought them; the later Version hath chiefly obtained: but what absurdity is it if we should admit the former? And doth not the very order of the words seem to favour it? If it had been τὰ ἔθνη παρεκάλουν, one might have inclined to the later without controversie: but being it is παρεκάλουν τὰ ἔθνη, there is place for doubting. And if it were so that the Jews resented the Apostles doctrine so ill, that they went out of the Synagogue disturbed and offended, as some conjecture, and that not improbably, we may the easilier imagine that the Apostles besought the Gentiles that tarried behind, that they would patiently hear these things again.

Εἰς τὸ μεταξὺ σάββατον. On the next Sabbath.

I. The word μεταξὺ, as the Lexicons tell us, amongst other things, denotes, hence forward, or hereafter. Now this must be noted, that this discourse was held in the fore noon, for it was that time of the day only that they assembled in the Synagogue; in the afternoon they met in Beth Midras. Let us consider therefore whether this phrase will not bear this sense: They besought that afterwards upon that Sabbath, viz. in the afternoon, they would hear again such a Sermon. And then, whether the Gentiles besought the Apostles, or the Apostles the Gentiles, it dot not alter the case.

II. Let us inquire whether the Apostles and the Christian Church did not now observe and celebrate the Lord's day. It can hardly be denyed; and if so, then judge whether the Apostles might not invite the Gentiles that they would assemble again the next day, that is, upon the Christian Sabbath, and hear these things again. If we yield that the Lord's day is to be called the Sabbath, then we shall easily yield that it might be rightly called μεταξὺ σάββατον, the Sabbath after. And indeed when the speech was amongst the Jews or Judaizing Proselytes, it is no wonder, if it were called the Sabbath. As if the Apostles had said, to morrow we celebrate our Sabbath, and will you on that day λαληθῆναι τὰ ῥήματα, have these words preached to you?

III. Or let τὸ μεταξὺ Σάββατον, be the week betwixt the two Sabbaths (as that expression must be rendred Νηστεύω δὶς τὸ Σαββάτου, I fast twice in the week) then, as the sense is easie, that they besought them, the same things might be repeated on the following week, so the respect might have more particularly been had to the second and fifth day in the week, when they usually meet together in the Synagogue.

CHAP. XIV.

VERS. VI.

Εἰς τὰς πόλεις τῆς Λυκαονίας Λύστραν καὶ Δέρβην. To Derbe, and Lystra, Cities of Lycaonia.

STRABO tells us expressly that Iconium also was within Lycaonia [b]; Thence are the Lyconian Hills, plain, cold, naked, and pastures for wild Asses, &c. There are also the lakes, the greater called Coralis; the less, called Trogitis. Ἐνταῦθα δὲ πρὸς ἓω τὸ Ἰκόνιον ἔξω· About those places stands Iconium, a Town built in a better soil than what I mentioned as the pasture of wild Asses. Ptolomy also places Iconium in Lycaonia [c]. How comes it to pass then that St. Luke doth not call Iconium a City of Lycaonia, as well as Derbe

[b] Strab. Geogr. lib. 12.

[c] Ptol. tab. Asiæ. 1. cap. 6.

Derbe and Lystra? Because Iconium was of something a distinct jurisdiction. d Datur et Tetrarchia ex Lycaonia, &c. There is also granted a Tetrarchy out of Lycaonia, on that side that bounds upon Galatia, consisting of fourteen Cities, the most famous of which is Iconium. d Plin. Nat. Hist. l. 5. c. 27.

VERS. XI.

Λυκαονιστί. In the Speech of Lycaonia.

IT is hard to say what the Lycaonian Tongue was; nor is it easie to say why this was added, when it might have sufficed to have said, They lift up their voices, saying, the Gods, &c.

I. I should hardly be perswaded the Lycaonian Language was any Greek Dialect, when it sufficiently appears by what I lately quoted out of Strabo that there were peculiar Mother Tongues in these Countries, distinct from the Greek. And he himself remarketh *, That the Carians, who are situated something nearer Greece than the Lycaonians, were called by Homer Βαρβαρόφωνοι, people of a barbarous language; so the Phrygians also were Barbari, barbarous e. * Lib. 8. e Pausan. lib. 1.

Let us hear once again what Strabo saith f, The Coppadocians who use the same language, are those chiefly who are bounded South-ward, with that part of Cilicia, that is called Taurus East-ward by Armenia, and Colchis; ἢ τοῖς μεταξὺ ἑτερογλώττοις ἔθνεσι, and other interjacent Countries, that use a different language. What amongst these other languages, should be the Lycaonian, let him find out, that hath leisure and capacity to do it. As for my part I neither can, nor dare attempt it. f Strab. lib. 12.

CHAP. XV.

VERS. II.

Γενομένης οὖν στάσεως καὶ συζητήσεως, &c. No small dissension and disputation, &c.

WERE I to render these words into the Talmudick Language (which was the School Language) I would render στάσεως by פלוגתא, and συζητήσεως by ביעותא terms very well known in the Schools; according to which Idiom, if they were expounded, there would be no difficulty in them.

Ἔταξαν ἀναβαίνειν Παῦλον, &c. They determined that Paul should go up, &c.

Of this journey Paul himsel makes some mention, Gal. II. 1. where he intimates that he went up by revelation, that is, given to the Ministers of Antioch: for it would not have been said ἔταξαν, they determinded, if the Revelation had been made to Paul himself. Amongst others that accompanied him in his journey, Titus was one: But where he adopted him to himself, in those his journeys described Chap. XIII. and XIV. let him guess that can.

VERS. VII.

Ἀφ' ἡμερῶν ἀρχαίων. A good while ago, &c.

I Do not question but St. Peter in these words had an eye to that saying of our Saviour, I will give thee the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, viz. that thou mayst first open the door of the Gospel to the Gentiles. Then it was that the Lord chose him, that by his mouth first the Gentiles might hear the word of the Gospel, and might believe. This he saith was done ἐν ἡμέραις ἀρχαίαις, In former days: that is, as he speaks elsewhere, In the time when Jesus went in and out amongst them, Acts I. 21. which time is expressed by our Evangelists by ἀπ' ἀρχῆς· From the beginning, Luke I. 2.

VERS.

VERS. XVI.

[g] Sanhedr. fol. 69. 2.

RAB. Nachman said to R. Isaac, תי שמיע לך אמרת אתי בר נפלי Whence art thou taught when Bar Naphli will come? He saith unto him, מאן בר נפלי Who is this Bar Naphli? The other replied; it is the Messiah. Dost thou then call the Messias Bar Naphli? Yes, saith he, for it is written, In that day I will build again the Tabernacle of David, הנופלת Nopheleth, falling down.

VERS. XVII.

Ὅπως ἂν ἐκζητήσωσιν οἱ κατάλοιποι τῶν ἀνθρώπων, &c. That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, &c.

I. I Think it will hardly be denied by any but that St. James spake now in Hebrew, i.e. in the Syriac Tongue. For reason will tell us that the Council at Jerusalem would be managed best in the language of Jerusalem: and indeed the word Συμεὼν, Symeon, with which he begins his discourse, argues that he spoke Hebrew amongst Hebrews; not so much in that he saith Simeon and not Simon; as in that he saith Συμεὼν, with the letter υ, and not Σιμεὼν, Simeon; the Syriac Tongue affecting the letter u, in the first syllable, as in בוכרא גושמא דובתא Bucra, Gusbma, Ducha, and many such words. So also in proper names, בן סוטרא Ben Sutda, in Jerusalem Language, for Ben Satda, and מוגדלא Mugdala, for Magdala.

II. Neither, I presume, will it be denied that the Apostle quoting this passage of the Prophet recites the very words as they are in the Hebrew: which was always done in their Schools, and Sermons: when they recited any place or testimony of Scripture, they did it always in the very original words. But do you think that the Hebrew words of Amos, in the mouth of James, were למען ידרשו שאריית אדם That the residue of men might seek; in which sense the Greek words speak? The Hebrew Text in Amos IX. 12. is thus, למען ירשו את שארית אדום That they may possess the remnant of Edom. But the Greek Interpreters have it, ὅπως ἂν ἐκζητήσωσιν, &c. That the residue of men might seek after the Lord. where they add κύριον, the Lord, of their own, and is not the Prophets; nor indeed is it in the Roman Copy, but in the Alexandrian M. S. it is.

It is hardly worth our enquiry whether through carelessness or set design they have gone thus wide from the words of the Prophet; for indeed nothing is more common with those Interpreters than to depart after that manner from the Hebrew Text. One may suspect that they did it on purpose here, partly as envying so comfortable a promise made to Edom; and partly, because in the Prophesie next following it is said, There shall be no remnant of the House of Esau, Obad. vers. ult. where they distinguish that also by rendring שריד by Πυροφόρος, One that carrieth fire.

III. The Hebrew words of Amos quoted by James, do suit very well with his design and purpose, when to prove that God visited the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name, he cites this, I will build again the Tabernacle of David, that they may possess the remnant of Edom. Τὸ λεῖμμα τοῦ Ἐδώμ, The remnant of Edom, in the same sense with the τὸ λεῖμμα τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ, the remnant of Israel, mentioned, Rom. XI. 5. And by naming Edom one of the bittereſt enemies that Israel had, from whom a remnant should be taken out and reserved, the thing propounded is the more clearly made out, viz. That God had visited the Gentiles, &c. The words also in the Greek Version which St. Luke follows, do prove the thing too: mention being made of all Nations seeking after the Lord: and therefore he doth the more safely follow that Version here which indeed he doth almost every where; and for what reasons he so doth, I have observed in another place.

IV. I know that the Talmudic and other Jewish Writers understand by the Edomites, commonly the Romans; but why they do so, does not so well appear. But their impudence sufficiently appears, when they introduce the Romans owning themselves for the Children of Esau, or Edom, and making their boasts of it. [h] At Rome once within seventy years, מביאין אדם שלם They bring forth a sound man, [one that represents Esau] ומרכיבין אותו עֵל אדם חיגר and make him ride upon a lame man [that represents Jacob, and by that they shew how Esau now ruleth over Jacob] ומלבישין אותו בגדי אדם הראשון And they cloth him with the Garments of Adam [those were בגדי חמדות the Garments of desire that Esau had.] And they put upon his head קרקיפלו של רבי ישמעאל the skin of the head of Rabbi Ishmael [He was the High Priest, that had been killed by the Kingdom of the Romans;

[h] Avodah Zarah, fol. 11. 2.

Romans; but had so comely a face, that Cesar's Daughter caused the skin of it to be taken off and preserved in Balsom.] ותלו לו מחקל ווא רפינא And they hang upon him a Pearl of the weight of a Zuzee, ----- and proclaim before him, סך קיתי פלסמר אחוח דרמנא זייפנא The computation of the Lord (of Jacob, as one Glos, or of Isaac, as another) is falsehood. [That is, his Prophesie by which he promised Redemption to his Children, is a lye.] The Brother of our Lord [i. e. of Esau] is a deceiver. מאי רחמי חמי ורלאחמי לא חמי Whosoever sees [this sight at present] let him see it, and whosoever doth not see it shall not see it, [that is, till the seventieth year again.] What did thy deceiver get by his deceit, and what did that falsifier get by his falshood? And so at length conclude, ווי לרין בר יקום רין Woe to this man, when he shall arise. [Woe to Esau, when Jacob shall arise.]

I thought fit to transcribe these things, only to give you a specimen, with what confidence the Jewish Writers esteem the Romans for Edomites: of whom they hardly ever speak without spleen and hatred, curse and abhorrency. The words shut within the Parenthesis are not mine but those of the Glos.

V. I do not belive that the Romans were thus taken for Edomites by the Jews, when the Greek Version was wrote: but yet I do believe that at that time the Edomites were as odious to the Jews: so that it is no wonder, if those interpreters from that hatred should envy them those things Amos had foretold should happen to them that remained of Edom, and diverted his words another way. i This is the offering thou shalt receive from them, Gold, Silver, and Brass, Exod. The Gold is Babel: The Silver is Media: The Brass is Greece, Dan. II. But there is no mention of Iron: Why so? Because wicked Edom that wasted the Sanctuary is likened to that. To teach us, that God in time to come will accept an offering from every Kingdom, except Edom. i Shemoth rabba, fol. 152. 3.

VERS. XX.

Ἀπέχεσθαι ἀπὸ τῶν ἀλισγημάτων εἰδώλων, καὶ τῆς πορνείας. That they abstain from pollutions of Idols, and from Fornication.

I. IT may with good reason be asked, whether these four things were forbidden under one and the same notion; namely this, That the converted Gentiles might not give offence to the Jews, if they should not abstain from all these things. Or, whether there might not be something else interwoven, viz. that those converted Gentiles might not relapse into something of their former Heathenism: the abstaining from pollutions of Idols, and from Fornication, seems to respect this later, as that of abstaining from things strangled, and from blood, the former.

In the mean time one might wonder at the heart and forehead of the Nicolaitans, who not only practised, but taught diametrically contrary to this decree of the Apostles, Revel. II. 14,20. Those Balaamites, and Jezebelites: with what paint could they beautifie that horrid and accursed doctrine and practice of theirs? was it the liberty of the Gospel they pretended? or rather did they not abuse that love and charity commanded in the Gospel? Namely, making a shew of some more transcendent friendship amongst themselves, they would eat any thing with any Man, and lye carnally with any Woman.

I have oftentimes thought of those words of the Apostle, 1 Tim. IV. 3. forbidding to marry. Who were these that forbad to Marry, but especially upon what account did they forbid it? We know indeed upon what unreasonable reason Marriage is forbidden to some, in the Romish Communion, in these later ages of the world; but to whom, and upon what occasion it was forbidden in those lasts days of the Jewish Oeconomy (to which times the Apostle referrs, in this place) is not easily determined.

As to the clause that follows immediately in the Apostle, commanding to abstain from meats which God hath created to be received, &c. that passage comes into my mind, k When the Temple was destroyed the second time, the Pharisees [i. e. the Separatists] were greatly multiplied in Israel, who taught that it was not lawful to eat flesh, nor to drink wine. R. Joshua applied himself to them and said, My Sons who do you not eat flesh nor drink any wine? They say unto him, shall we eat flesh, that were wont to offer it upon the Altar, and that Altar is now broken down? shall we drink wine, that were wont to pour it out upon the Altar, which Altar is now gone? If it be so, saith he, then we should not eat bread, because the Offerings of bread-corn are ceased: we should not eat any fruits, because the offering of first-fruits is at an end. We should not drink water, because the drink offering is ceased, &c. And a little after, Since the Kingdom of iniquity [the Roman Empire] hath decreed sharp things against us---- it is but just that we should ordain amongst our selves שלא לישא אשה not to marry Wifes, nor beget Children, &c. and so it would come to pass that the seed of Abraham would decay and fail of it self. But let Israel rather be שגגין mistaken than מזידין presumptuous. k Bava bathra, fol. 60. 2.

How

How great a difference is there between theſe men, and the Nicolaitans? And yet theſe as fooliſhly and ſuperſtitiouſly erred in one extreme, as thoſe did impiouſly and filthily in the other. As to the Nicolaitans, we may wonder at their ignorance if they knew nothing of this decree of the Apoſtles; and their impudence in ſo bold a contradiction, if they did.

Ἀπὸ τῶν ἀλισγημάτων τῶν εἰδώλων. From pollutions of Idols.

In the Epiſtle of the Council it is, Ἀπὸ τῶν εἰδωλοθύτων· From meats offered to Idols. The Rabbins diſtinguiſh the matter (when they diſcourſe of what is forbidden concerning Idolatry) into אסורי אכילה things prohibited to eat, and אסורי הנאה things prohibited to uſe. The εἰδωλόθυτα, or things offered to Idols, were prohibited to eat. And all the Utenſils about any Idolatrous Sacrifice, were prohibited to uſe. Ἀλισγήματα τῶν εἰδώλων, doubtleſs comprehended all things offered to Idols, and perhaps all the Utenſils too: and it is no impertinent queſtion, whether that in the Epiſtle commanding them ἀπέχεσθαι εἰδωλοθύτων, to abſtain from things offered to Idols, did not reſtrain them from the uſe of all ſuch Utenſils, as well as from the eating of things offered.

Καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς πορνείας. And from Fornication.

Any one may diſcern how obvious this twofold enquiry is. Namely, of what Fornication the diſcourſe here is; and for what reaſon Fornication, whatſoever it is, ſhould be reckoned here amongſt the ἀδιάφορα, or indifferent things.

I. When I recollect what we frequently meet with amongſt the Rabbins, that ſome things are permitted מפני דרכי שלום for peace ſake; and ſome things forbidden מפני דרכי אמוריים by reaſon of the cuſtoms of the Amorites, or the Gentiles: I am apt to ſuſpect, in theſe decrees of the Apoſtles there is ſome relation to both: that it was permitted to the converted Gentiles, to Judaize in ſome things for peace ſake; but to abſtain in other, not that they might not Judaize, but that they might not do as the Heathen.

II. Particularly in this prohibition of Fornication, we muſt conſider, that it is not ſo proper to think there needed any peculiar command or preſcript of the Apoſtles, to thoſe that had embraced Chriſtianity, againſt Fornication in the common notion and acceptation of the word, whenas the whole tenor of the Goſpel preſcribed againſt it. And for that very reaſon I cannot perſwade my ſelf that by blood forbidden in this place, we are to underſtand murder.

III. There was a certain Fornication amongſt the Jews that ſeemed to them lawful, and had ſome colour of Legitimation: this was Polygamy, Hoſ. IV. 10. הזנו ולא יפרוצו They commit whoredom and ſhall not encreaſe: So the Chaldee and Syriac, and our own Tranſlation render it well. But now Fornication, as it denotes Whoredom, doth not wiſh or expect any off-ſpring, but the contrary rather: But the words relate to Bigamy, or Polygamy. For in caſe of the Wife's barrenneſs, it was a common thing for them to take to them another Woman, or more for propagation ſake; and this it is that God brands with the reproachful name of Fornication. They commit Fornication but do not multiply. Whatever elſe is underſtood by this word; I would certainly underſtand this, namely, That the Apoſtles preſcribed againſt Polygamy, a thing eſteemed indifferent amongſt the Jews (as fornication was amongſt the Gentiles) and therefore not unfitly mentioned here amongſt things indifferent.

Tell me in what place in the New Teſtament Bigamy, or Polygamy, is forbidden, if not in this? perhaps you will ſay in that of our Saviour, Matth. XIX. 4, 5. Where indeed proviſion is made againſt putting away of a Man's Wife, but hardly againſt Polygamy, eſpecially comparing the Apoſtles words, 1 Cor. VI. 16. Proviſion is made that Biſhops and Deacons ſhall not have two Wifes, 1 Tim. III. and I ſhould not believe but that the ſame proviſion is made againſt the Bigamy of the Laity. But where is that done, if not in this place?

IV. There was another Fornication, ordinarily ſo reckoned alſo in the opinion of the Jews themſelves (for they did not account the having many Wives to be Fornication) and that was, beſides what they call ſimple Fornication, their marrying within the prohibited degrees, that which they commonly called עריות Nakedneſs. Theſe Marriages they were ſo averſe to, that to ſome of them they alotted Death, to all of them לכרת or cutting off. Concerning which Maimonides ſpeaks largely l. In the mean time they allowed the Gentile that became a proſelyte to the Jeweſh Religion, to marry with his Kindred though never ſo near in blood, with his Siſter, if he pleaſed, or with his Mother, &c. m Hence perhaps aroſe that inceſtuous Marriage mentioned 1 Cor. V. They did well therefore to provide by this Apoſtolical decree, againſt ſuch kind of Marriages as theſe, being ſo odious to the Jews.

Καὶ

Καὶ τῦ πνικτῦ, καὶ τῦ αἵματος. And from things ſtrangled, and from blood.

Theſe (I ſuppoſe) were forbidden the Gentile converts for the ſake of the Jews, and by way of condeſcenſion, that they might not take offence. By blood therefore I can by no means underſtand murther; by πνικτὸν, ſtrangled, ſhall be conſidered by and by.

I. For wherefore ſhould any mention of murder come into this preſent controveſie? Were the Gentile converts to be brought over to Moſes? when the Moral precepts of Moſes ſcarcely came in their minds, as being the precepts even of Nature it ſelf. But the queſtion is about ceremonials, and what hath murder to do in that? and as I have already ſaid, what need could there be of ſuch peculiar caution againſt Murder to thoſe who had embraced the Goſpel of love and peace?

II. By the prohibition of blood therefore, I make no queſtion but that caution is given againſt eating of blood: which is more than once prohibited in the Law, Gen. IX. 4. Deut. XII. 16, &c. and there could hardly any thing (except an Idol) be named, that the Jew had a greater abhorrence for, than the eating of blood.

III. The Jews diſtinguiſh between אבר מן החי the member of a living beaſt, and דם מן החי the blood of a living Beaſt n. The former is forbidden by that, Fleſh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, ſhall you not eat. The later alſo is forbidden, Thou ſhalt not eat blood let out by the cutting of a vein, or any other way, from any beaſt, ſaith R. Chaninah in the place above quoted. See alſo Peſikta, and R. Solomon o, and inſtead of more, that paſſage: p Wherefore is blood forbidden five times in Scripture? [Gen. IX. 4. Levit. III. 17. & VII. 26. & XVII. 10. Deut. XII. 16.] That the blood of Animals that are holy might be included, and the blood of Animals not Holy, and the blood that was to be covered in the duſt, and the blood אבר החי of the member of a living Beaſt, ודם תמצית and the blood that is let out, by the cutting of a vein, or otherwiſe. God himſelf adjudgeth him that eats blood to be cut off, Levit. VII. 27, &c. But as to this matter there are wondrous nice and ſubtile queſtions and diſtinctions laid down in Maimonides; I will only tranſcribe this one: q As to the blood that is let out, and the blood of the members, viz. of the Spleen, the Kidneys, the Teſticles, and the blood gathered about the heart in the time of ſlaying, and the blood found about the Liver, they are not guilty of cutting off; but whoever eateth of any of that blood let him be ſcourged: becauſe it is ſaid, Thou ſhalt eat no blood. But concerning being guilty to cutting off, it is ſaid, becauſe the life of the fleſh is in the blood. A man therefore is not guilty of cutting off, unleſs he eats of that blood with which the life goes out.

IV. I know what the κρεάδια πνικτὰ, ſtrangled fleſh, in Athenæus * mean: but that hath no place here, nor is there any reaſon why ſuch Meats as he there ſets on the Table, ſhould be forbidden even to the Jew. Nor would I by πνικτὸν, ſtrangled, underſtand אבר מן החי the member of a living Beaſt, partly becauſe I ſuppoſe that included in the word αἷμα, blood; and partly becauſe it is thus determined by the Rabbins concerning it. r They learn by tradition that that which is ſaid in the Law, Thou ſhalt not eat the life with the fleſh, forbids the eating of a member torn from a living Animal: and concerning אבר מן החי the member cut off from a living Beaſt, God ſaith to Noah, But fleſh with the life which is the blood thereof, ſhalt thou not eat. So that, to eat a member ſo cut off, is to eat blood: and under that clauſe καὶ τῦ αἵματος, and from blood, is contained the prohibition of eating both דם מן החי the blood of a living Beaſt, and alſo אבר מן החי the member of a living Beaſt. And under that clauſe καὶ τῦ πνικτῦ, and of things ſtrangled, is the prohibition of eating fleſh of a Beaſt not well killed, ſo as the blood iſſueth not out as it ought to do. Concerning which there is a large diſcourſe in the Tract Cholin, obſcure and tedious enough; however, I cannot but note one paſſage out of it. ſ If any one deſire to eat of a Beaſt before the life of it be gone, let him cut off a piece of fleſh from the killing place, to the quantity of an Olive, and ſalt it very well, and waſh it very well, and ſtay till the life of the Beaſt be gone out of him, and then he may eat it: this is equally lawful both to the ſtranger and to the Iſraelite. When we ſpeak of not eating of fleſh which the blood is not duly got out of, it is not neceſſary we ſhould include within this rank נבלה that which dyes of it ſelf, and טרפה that which is torn of wild Beaſts.

VERS. II.

Ὁ δὲ Ἀρχιερεὺς Ἀνανίας. Ananias the High Prieſt.

IT is a queſtion among ſome Expoſitors whether this Ananias be the ſame Ananias that Joſephus mentions, that was High Prieſt. And I ask again, whether Ἀρχιερεὺς in this place, be to be neceſſarily rendred High Prieſt.

I. That Ananias the High Prieſt whom Joſephus mentions t, was ſent bound to Rome, by Quadratus the Governour of Syria, to render an account of his actions to Claudius Ceſar, and that, before Felix entred upon the procuratorſhip of Judea; but whether he ever returned to Jeruſalem again, is uncertain: ſtill more uncertain whether ever reſtored to his place of High Prieſt: and moſt uncertain of all, whether he filled the Chair at that time when Paul pleaded his cauſe, which was ſome years after Felix had been ſettled in the Government, Acts XXIV. 10.

t Antiqu. lib. 20. cap. 5. & De Excid. lib. 2. cap. 21.

II. About this time there was one Ananias, a man very much celebrated indeed, but not the High Prieſt, only the Sagan of the Prieſts, concerning whom the Talmudic Writers record theſe paſſages: u There were thirteen Corban Cheſts, thirteen Tables, thirteen Adorations in the Temple: But to them that were of the Houſe of Rabban Gamaliel ושל בית ר' חנניה סגן הכהנים and to thoſe that were of the Houſe of R. Ananias, Sagan of the Prieſts, there were fourteen, &c. w R. Ananias Sagan of the Prieſts ſaith, &c. Ananias Sagan of the Prieſts was ſlain in the time of the deſtruction (of Jeruſalem) with Rabban Simeon the Son of Gamaliel. x R. Ananias the Sagan, is ſaid to be ſlain on the five and twentieth day of the month Sivan, together with Rabban Simeon ben Gamaliel, and R. Iſmael. y

w Peſachin, c. 1. hal 6. & Miſn. Hieroſ.

x Tſemach, David.

y Juchaſin, fol. 57. 1.

If we cannot reconcile the Ananias in Joſephus, with this in St. Luke; let Ananias the Sagan be the Ananias mentioned in this place, who may very well be called Ἀρχιερεὺς, or High Prieſt, as may be evident from thoſe titles given to Annas and Caiaphas; Luk III. 2. Nor doth any thing hinder but that we may eaſily ſuppoſe that Ananias the Sagan was in the poſſeſſion of his Saganſhip at this very time.

VERS. V.

Οὐκ ᾔδειν, ἀδελφοί, ὅτι ἐστὶν Ἀρχιερεύς. I wiſt not Brethren, that he was the High Prieſt.

I. SUppoſe he might not know that man to have been the High Prieſt, or the Sagan (which is hardly probable) yet he could not be ignorant, from the rank he held, and the ſeat he poſſeſſed, that he muſt be at leaſt one of the Fathers of the Sanhedrin, and Rulers of the people, and ſo in reviling him, he tranſgreſſed that precept, Thou ſhalt not ſpeak evil of the Ruler of thy people, as well as if he had reviled the High Prieſt.

II. It is very little to the credit of the Apoſtle to think, that when he ſaid, God ſhall ſmite thee thou whited wall, &c. That he uttered it raſhly and unadviſedly, or carried away in an heat of paſſion and indignation, or that he did not know whom he thus threatned, or what degree and office he held. But he ſpoke it ſoberly, and as became an Apoſtle, by the Authority and guidance of the Holy Ghoſt. Nor did he, nor had he any need, to retract thoſe words, or make apology for his raſhneſs, but they are of the very ſame tenor with the reſt, that he uttered.

III. If this Ananias was that Sagan of the Prieſts that periſhed in the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, as hath been already ſaid, I would conceive his death was foretold prophetically by the Apoſtle, rather than that he raſhly poured out words, that he afterwards retracted. Let me therefore paraphraſe upon the words before us, "I know it is not lawful to "ſpeak evil of the Ruler of the people, nor would I have ſaid theſe things to him which "I have, if I had owned ſuch an one, but I did not own him ſo, for he is not worthy "the name of an High Prieſt.

IV. The Preſident of the Sanhedrin at this time was Rabban Simeon ben Gamaliel: his Father Gamaliel, having been dead about two or three years before. Paul knew Simeon, and Simeon very well knew him, having been fellow Diſciples, and both ſate together at the feet of Gamaliel; nor indeed could he be ignorant of any of the Rulers of the people, if they were of any age, becauſe he had been ſo long educated and converſed in Jeruſalem.

Jerusalem. So that it is very improbable he should not know either Ananias the High Priest, if he were now present, or Ananias the Sagan, or indeed any of the Fathers of the Sanhedrin if they had any years upon their backs.

Indeed not a few years had passed since he had left Jerusalem: But seeing formerly he had spent so many years there, and had been of that Degree and Order, that he was an Officer of the Sanhedrin, and had a Patent from them; he could not have so slippery and treacherous a memory, but that upon his return, he could readily know and distinguish their faces and persons. And whereas it is said in the Verse immediately following, That Paul perceived that the one part were Sadducees, &c. If it should be asked whence he came to distinguish so well concerning their persons; it may be answered, That (if he had no other ways to know them) he might understand that by his former knowledge of them; He had known them from the time that he himself had been a Pharisee, and conversed among them. See Chap. XXII. 5.

V. Forasmuch therefore as he saith οὐκ ἤδειν, I wist not, I do not see how it can argue so much an ignorance of his person (with whom he might have had some former transactions, in obtaining that accursed commission against the followers of Christ) but that it must relate to his affection rather than his understanding. So that the sense is, I knew not that there was any High Priest at all: or, I do not acknowledge this person for such an one. It was safer to inveigh against the person, than the office: But if he had said concerning the very office, I do not know that there is any High Priest at all; I question not but he had uttered his mind: being well assured, that that High Priesthood was now antiquated, by the death of our great High Priest, Jesus.

For let us lay down this Problem: Although the Apostle, as to other things, had owned the service of the Temple (for he was purified in it.) Yet, as to the High Priesthood, he did not own the peculiar ministry of that; doth it not carry truth with it? seeing God by an irrefragrable token, viz. the rending of the Veil of the Temple from the top to the bottom, had shewn the end and abolishing of that office.

But suppose the words of the Apostle relate to the person and not the office, and that they were spoken in reference to the man himself, I do not own him Ἀρχιερέα, High Priest, that he is not worthy of that title: Perhaps St. Paul knew of old how wicked a person he had been; or from his present injustice, or rash severity, had reason enough to make such a reply. To know, instead of to own and acknowledge, is not unusual in Scripture stile; that is a sad and dreadful instance enough, I know you not, depart from me, ye workers of iniquity. And in the Jewish Writings, when R. Judah being angry with Bar Kaphrah, only said to him, I know thee not, he went away as נזוף one rebuked, and took נזיפה the rebuke to himself. The story is this: z When bar Kaphrah came to visit him, he said unto him בר קפרא איני מכירך עולם O Bar Kaphrah, I never knew thee; He understood what he meant: Therefore he took the rebuke unto himself for the space of thirty days.

z Moed Katon. fol. 16. 1.

VERS. VIII.

Σαδδουκαῖοι μὲν γὰρ λέγουσι μὴ εἶναι ἀνάστασιν. The Sadducees say there is no Resurrection.

WHAT therefore is the Religion of a Sadducee? He Prays, he Fasts, he offers Sacrifice, he observes the Law, and yet doth not expect a Resurrection, or life Eternal. To what end is this Religion? It is that he may obtain Temporal good things, observing only the promise of them, made in the Law, and he seeks for nothing beyond the meer letter. That the Sadducees took their denomination from one Sadoc, a Disciple of Antigonus Socheus, is commonly received, and that not without reason. In the mean time it may not be amiss to enquire whether Sadoc did himself deny the resurrection; and whether he rejected all the Books of the Holy Scripture excepting the five Books of Moses, which the Sadducees in some measure did.

I. The Jewish writers do relate his story with so much variety, that as some represent him, we might think he denies the resurrection and future rewards; but as others, that he did not. For so say some, a Sadoc and Baithus, were the heads of the Hereticks, for they erred concerning the words of their Master, &c. b Sadoc and Baithus hearing this passage from their Master, be ye not as Servants that serve their Master for hire and reward sake, &c. they said among themselves, our Master teaches us, that there is neither reward nor punishment, &c. Therefore they departed from the rule, and forsook the Law, &c.

b Ramban in Avoth. cap. 1.

Others say otherwise; c Antigonus Socheus had two disciples, who delivered his doctrine to their Disciples, and their Disciples again to their Disciples; They stood forth, and taught after them, and said, what did our Fathers see that they should say, It is possible for a labourer to perform all his work for the whole day, and yet not receive his wages in the Evening? Surely, if our Fathers had thought there was another world, and the resurrection of the dead, they would not have said thus, &c. d Antigonus Socheus had two Disciples, their names

c Avoth R. Nathan, cap. 5.

d Aruch in ביתוסין

names Sadoc and Baithus: He taught them saying, be ye not as hirelings that ſerve their Maſters only that they may receive their pay, &c. They went and taught thus to their Diſciples, and to the Diſciples of their Diſciples לא אמרו פירושן but they did not expound his ſenſe. [Mark that] There aroſe up after them that ſaid, if our Fathers had known that there were a reſurrection, and a recompence for the juſt in the world to come, they had not ſaid this. So they aroſe up and ſeparated from the Law, &c. --- And from thence ſprung thoſe two evil Sects, the Sadducees and Baithuſians. Let us but add that of Ramban, mentioned before, לא הבינו כונתו Sadoc and Baithus did not underſtand the ſenſe of their Maſter, in thoſe words, Be ye not as Servants, who ſerve their Maſter for the rewards ſake, &c.

From all which compared together, as we find the Jewiſh writers varying from one another ſomewhat, in relating this ſtory; ſo from the later paſſages compared, one would believe that Sadoc was not a Sadducee, nor Baithus a Baithuſian; that is, that neither of them were leavened with that hereſie that denied the reſurrection, &c. There was an occaſion taken from the words of Antigonus miſunderſtood and depraved, to raiſe ſuch an hereſy, but it was not by Sadoc, or Baithus, for they did not underſtand the ſenſe of them, ſaith Ramban; and as it appears out of the Aruch, they propounded the naked words to their Diſciples without any Gloſs at all upon them, and their Diſciples again to the Diſciples that followed them. So that the name, ſect and hereſie of the Sadducees does not ſeem to have ſprung up till the ſecond or third generation after Sadoc himſelf: which, if I miſtake not, is not unworthy our remark, as to the Story and Chronology. There was a time when I believed (and who believes it not?) being led to it by the Author of Juchaſin, and Maimonides, that Sadoc himſelf was the firſt Author of the Sect and Heterodoxy of the Sadducees; but weighing a little more ſtrictly this matter from the allegations I have newly made out of R. Nathan and Aruch, it ſeems to me more probable, that that ſect did not ſpring up till many years after the death of Sadoc. Let us compare the times.

The Talmudiſts themſelves own that ſtory that Joſephus tells us of Jaddua, whom Alexander the great met, and worſhipped: but they alter the name, and ſay it was Simeon the juſt. Let thoſe endeavour to reconcile Joſephus with the Talmudiſts about the perſon and the name, who believe any thing of the ſtory and thing it ſelf, but let Simeon the juſt and Jaddua be one and the ſame perſon, as ſome would have it.[e] So then the times of Simeon the juſt, and Alexander the great are coincident. Let Antigonus Socheus, who took the chair after him, be contemporary with Ptolomeus Lagus. Let Sadoc and Baithus, both his Diſciples be of the ſame age with Ptolomeus Philadelphus. And ſo the times of at leaſt one generation (if not a ſecond) of the Diſciples of Sadoc may have run out, before the name of Sadducees took place.

If there be any truth or probability in theſe things, we ſhall do well to conſider them, when we come to enquire upon what reaſons the Sadducees received not the reſt of the Books of the ſacred Volume with the ſame authority they did thoſe of the five Books of Moſes. I ask therefore firſt, whether this was done before the Greek Verſion was writ? You will hardly ſay Antigonus, or indeed Sadoc his Diſciple was toucht with this error. He would have been a monſter of a preſident of the Sanhedrin, that ſhould not acknowledg that diſtinction of the Law, the Prophets and Holy writings. And it would be ſtrange if Sadoc ſhould from his Maſter renounce all the other books, excepting the Pentateuch.

The Sadducees might learn indeed from the Scribes and Phariſees themſelves to give a greater ſhare of honour to the Pentateuch, than the other Books, for even they did ſo: but that they ſhould reject them, ſo at leaſt as not to read them in their Synagogues, there was ſome other thing that muſt have moved them to it.

When I take notice of this paſſage, f that five of the Elders tranſlated the Law into Greek for Ptolomy; and that in Joſephus g that the Law only was tranſlated, and both theſe before ſo much as the name or ſect of the Sadducees were known in the world, I begin to ſuſpect the Sadducees, eſpecially the Samaritans, might have drawn ſomething from this example. At leaſt if that be true that is related by Ariſteas, that he was under an Anathema, that ſhould add any thing to, or alter any thing in that Verſion. When the Sadducees therefore would be ſeparating into a Sect, having imbibed that hereſie, that there is no reſurrection, and wreſted the words of Antigonus into ſuch a ſenſe, it is leſs wonder if they would admit of none but the Books of Moſes only, becauſe there was nothing plainly occured in them, that contradicted their error; and further becauſe thoſe antients of great name, having rendred thoſe five Books only into Greek, ſeem to have conſigned no other, for Books of a divine ſtamp, I do not at all think that all the Sadducees did follow that Verſion; but I ſuſpect, that the Samaritans took ſomething from thence into their own text. It is ſaid by ſome in defence of the Greek Verſion, that in many things it agrees with the Hebrew Text of the Samaritans

[g] Antiqu. lib. 1. cap. 1.

Samaritans, as if that Text were purer than our Hebrew, and that the Greek Interpreters followed that Text. They do indeed agree often; but if I ſhould ſay that the Samaritan Text in thoſe places, or in ſome of them hath followed the Greek Verſion, and not the Greek Verſion the Samaritan Text, I preſume, I ſhould not be eaſily confuted.

Shall I give you one or two agreements in the very beginning of the Pentateuch? In Gen. II. 2. the Hebrew Text is ויכל אלהים ביום השביעי For God ended his work on the Seventh day. But the Greek hath it Καὶ συνετέλεσεν ὁ Θεὸς ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἕκτῃ. God finiſhed his work on the ſixth day. The Samaritan Text agrees with this ויכל אלהים ביום הששי He finiſht his work on the ſixth day, &c. You will ſay the Greek Verſion tranſlated according to the Samaritan Text. I ſay the Samaritan Text was framed according to this Greek Verſion. Who ſhall determine this matter between us? That which goes current amongſt the Jews makes for me, viz. that this alteration was made by the Seventy two. [h] But be it all one, which followeth the other in this agreement we next produce, in the ſame Chapter, Gen. II. 19. ויצר יהוה אלהים עוד מן האדמה The Lord God had formed out of the ground. The Greek words are Καὶ ἔπλασε ὁ Θεὸς ἔτι ἐκ τῆς γῆς, The Lord God formed as yet out of the ground. The Samaritan Text agrees ויצר יהוה אלהים עוד מן האדמה We will not enquire here which follows which, but we rather complain of the boldneſs of both, the one to add the word ἔτι, the other עוד as yet; which ſeems to perſwade us, that God, after he had created Adam and Eve, did over and above create ſomething anew; which as yet to me, is a thing unheard of: and to whom is it not?

[h] Megill. fol. 9. 1. & Maſſech. Sopher. cap. 1.

Μὴ εἶναι ἀνάστασιν· That there is no reſurrection.

In my notes upon Matth. III. 9. I take notice out of the Gloſs upon Bab. Beraeoth, (if he be of any credit) that there were Hereticks even in the days of Ezra, who ſaid that there is no world but this; which indeed falls in with Sadduciſm, though the name of Sadducee was not known then, nor a long time after. But as to their Hereſie, when they firſt ſprung up, they ſeem principally and in the firſt place to have denyed the immortality of the Soul, and ſo by conſequence the reſurrection of the body.

I know that תחיית המתים in the Jewiſh Writers is taken infinite times for the Reſurrection from the dead, but it is very often taken alſo for the life of the dead. So as, the one denotes the reſurrection of the body, the other, the immortality of the Soul.

In the beginning of the Talmudick Chapter Helec, where there is a diſcourſe on purpoſe concerning the life of the world to come, they collect ſeveral arguments to prove תחיית המתים מן התורה the life of the dead, out of the Law, for ſo let me render it here, rather than the reſurrection of the dead. And the reaſon of it we may judge from that one agrument which they bring, inſtead of many others; viz. [i] Some do ſay that it is proved out of this Scripture. He ſaith unto them, But ye did cleave unto the Lord your God, היום כלכם are alive every one of you this day, Deut. IV. 4, פשטא דהיום כולכם היום It is plain that you are now alive, when Moſes ſpeaks theſe things; but he means this, that in the day wherein all the world is dead ye ſhall live. That is, ye alſo though dead, ſhall live; which rather ſpeaks out the immortality of the Soul after death, than the reſurrection of the body. So our Saviours anſwer to the Sadducees, Matth. XXII. 31,32. from thoſe words, I am the God of Abraham, &c. is fitted directly to confute their opinion againſt the immortality of the Soul; but it little, either plainly or directly ſo proves the reſurrection of the body, but that the Sadducees might cavil at that way of proof.

[i] Sanhedr. fol. 90. 2.

And in that ſaying of the Sadducees themſelves, concerning the labourer working all the day, and not receiving his wages at night, there is a plain intimation that they eſpecially conſidered of the ſtate of the Soul after death, and the non-reſurrection of the body by conſequence. Let the words therefore be taken in this ſenſe, The Sadducees ſay, Souls are not immortal, and that there are neither Angels nor Spirits, and then the twofold branch which our ſacred Hiſtorian ſpeaks of, will the more clearly appear, when he ſaith, but the Phariſees confeſs both.

It is doubtful from the words of Joſephus, whether the Eſſenes acknowledge the reſurrection of the body, when in the mean time they did moſt heartily own the immortality of the Soul. [k] Καὶ γὰρ ἐρραται παρ' αὐτοις ἥδε ἡ δόξα, φθαρτὰ μὲν εἶναι τὰ σώματα, καὶ τὴν ὕλην ἃ μόνιμον αὐτοῖς, τὰς δὲ ψυχὰς ἀθανάτους ἀεὶ διαμένειν· This opinion prevails amongſt them, that the body indeed is corruptible, and the matter of it doth not endure, but Souls endure for ever immortal. So that the queſtion cheifly is concerned about the Souls Imortality.

[k] Joſ. de excid. lib. 2. c. 12.

Mid-

Μηδ' Ἄγγελον μητε Πνευμα. Neither Angel, nor Spirit.

They deny that the ſoul is immortal, and they deny any ſpirits (in the mean time perhaps not denying God to be a Spirit, and that there is a Spirit of God mentioned, Gen. I. 2.) And it is a queſtion whether they took not the occaſion of their opinion from that deep ſilence they obſerve in Moſes concerning the Creation of Angels or Spirits, or from ſomething elſe.

There is frequent mention in him of the apparitions of Angels, and what can the Sadducee ſay to this? Think you the Samaritans were Sadducees? If ſo, it is very obſervable that the Samaritan Interpreter doth once and again render the word אלהים God, by מלאכים Angels. So Gen. III. 5. Ye ſhall be as Elohim. Samar. תהיונו כמלאכיה Ye ſhall be as Angels. Chap. V. 1. In the ſimilitude of God. Samar. בצורת מלאכיה In the ſimilitude of Angels. So alſo Chap. IX. 6. בצורת מלאכיה In the ſimilitude of Angels. And whereever there is mention of Angels in the Hebrew Text, the Samaritan Text retains the word Angels too.

Did not the Sadducees believe there were Angels once, but their very being was for ever vaniſht? that they vaniſht with Moſes and were no more. Did they believe that the ſoul of Moſes was mortal, and periſht with his body? and that the Angels died with him? otherwiſe I know not by what art or wit they could evade what they meet with in the Books of Moſes concerning Angels, that eſpecially in Gen. XXXII. 1.

You will ſay perhaps that by Angels might be meant good motions and affections of the mind. The Phariſees themſelves do ſometimes call evil affections by the name of Devils. יצר הרע שטן an evil affection is Satan. But they do not call good affections Angels; nor can ye your ſelves apply that paſſage ſo. The Angels of God met him, and he called the name of that place Mahanaim, i.e. two Camps, or two hoſts. One of thoſe Camps conſiſted of the multitude of his own family, and will you have the other to conſiſt of good affections?

If the Sadducees ſhould grant that Angels were ever created (Moſes not mentioning their Creation in his Hiſtory) I ſhould think they acknowledged the being of Angels in the ſame ſenſe that we do in the whole ſtory of the Pentateuch; but that they conceived that after the Hiſtory of the Pentateuch was compleated, thoſe Angels were annihilated, and that after Moſes there was neither Angel nor ſpirit, nor Propheſie.

I have in another place taken notice that the Jews commonly diſtinguiſht between Angels and ſpirits, and Devils. Where by ſpirits they underſtood either the Ghoſts of dead perſons, or Spirits in humane ſhape, but not ſo dreadful and terrible as the Angels; and what need is there any more (will the Sadducee ſay) either of Angel or Spirit, when God before Moſes died had made known his whole will by his writings, had given his eternal Law, compleatly conſtituted his Church?

It is an innocent and blameleſs ignorance not to underſtand τὰ βάθη τοῦ Σατανᾶ, the depths of Satan, and the ſecrets of Hereticks; and if in learning their Doctrines we miſtake, and perhaps not a little, the ſhame is not much. It is venial to err concerning them, to err with them, is mortal. Let the Reader therefore pardon my ignorance, if I confeſs I am wholly ignorant where lay the difference between the Sadducee and Baithuſian, whether they agreed in one, or whether they diſagreed in ſome things. The Holy Scriptures make no mention of the Baithuſians; the Jewiſh writings talk much of them, and in ſome things they ſeem to be diſtinguiſhed from the Sadducees, but in what it is ſomewhat obſcure.

We have the Sadducees diſputing with the Phariſees l, and we have the Baithuſeans diſputing with a Phariſee m, and a Baithuſean interrogating ſomething of R. Joſhua n, and frequent mention of them up and down in the Jewiſh writings. But particularly I cannot let paſs one thing I have met with o, Of old they received a teſtimony of the New Moon from any perſon whatſoever, משלקלו המינים but after that the Hereticks began to deal deceitfully, &c. So the Jeruſalem Miſna reads it. But the Babylonian משלקלו הבותוסין after that the Baithuſeans began to deal deceitfully, or lightly. And the Miſna publiſht by its ſelf at Amſterdam hath it, משלקלו האפיקורוסים when the Epicureans dealt lightly, &c. Where both the Gemara's tell us, The Baithuſeans endeavoured to lead the wiſe men into an error, and hired for the ſum of four hundred Zuzees, one of our own, and one of theirs, to give in a falſe teſtimony as to the New Moons, &c. The Gloſſes give this reaſon of it, The thirtieth day of the Month Adar fell upon a Sabbath, and the New Moon did not appear in its time. And the Baithuſeans were deſirous that the firſt day of the Paſſover ſhould fall upon the Sabbath, that the ſheaf-offering might fall upon the firſt day of the week, and ſo the day of Pentecoſt upon the firſt day of the week alſo.

Who now ſhould theſe Baithuſians be? Sadducees or Samaritans, or Chriſtians, or ſome fourth Sect? The Chriſtians indeed would have the day of Pentecoſt on the firſt day of the week, but whether they mean them in this particular let others judg. In other things otherwiſe. p Wherefore do they adjure the High Prieſt? [viz. that he rightly perform the ſervice

VERS. IX.

Γραμματεῖς ἐκ μέρους τῶν Φαρισαίων· The Scribes that were of the Phariſees part.

FOR there were alſo Scribes of the Sadducees part, and on both parts the Γραμματεῖς Scribes, muſt not be diſtinguiſht either from the Phariſees, or from the Sadducees that were now preſent in the Sanhedrin; but the meaning is, the Scribes that were of the Sect or profeſſion of the Sadducees, or of the Phariſees; and by this twofold diviſion the whole Sanhedrin is to be underſtood. But if we would take the thing more ſtrictly, there were in the Sanhedrin ſome Scribes who took the part of the Phariſees againſt the Sadducees, who yet were not of the Sect of the Phariſees; I ſhould believe the Shammeans and Hillelites were all againſt the Sadducees, and yet I ſhould hardly believe all of them of the Sect of the Phariſees. We find them frequently diſputing and quarrelling one againſt the other in the Talmudick writings, and yet do not think that either the one or the other favoured the Sadducee, nor that all of them bore good will to Phariſaiſm. There is a bloody fight between them mentioned q, The Shammeans (who at that time were the greateſt number) ſtood below and killed ſome of the Hillelites. This was done in the houſe of Hananiah ben Hezekiah ben Garon, whom they came to viſit, being ſick. A friendly viſit this indeed!

VERS. XI.

Οὕτω σε δεῖ καὶ εἰς Ῥώμην μαρτυρῆσαι· So muſt thou bear witneſs alſo at Rome.

HENCE the warrant and intimation given to St. Paul of appealing to Ceſar; it was a rare thing for a Jew to appeal to any Heatheniſh Tribunal, and it ſavoured of venomous malice the Sanhedrin had againſt Jeſus, that they delivered him over to an Heathen Judg. St. Paul therefore when he found no place or manner of eſcaping otherwiſe, was directed by this Viſion what to do.

VERS. XII.

Μήτε φαγεῖν μήτε πιεῖν, &c. Neither to eat nor drink, &c.

WHAT will become of theſe Anathematized perſons if their curſe ſhould be upon them and they cannot reach to murder Paul? (as indeed it happened they could not) muſt not theſe wretches helpleſly die with hunger? Alas! they need not be very ſolicitous about that matter, they have their Caſuiſt-Rabbins that can eaſily releaſe them of that Vow r, לאחר שנדר מן הכבר וו דיכל וו דלא יכול He that hath made a Vow not to eat any thing, wo to him if he eat, and wo to him if he do not eat. If he eat he ſinneth againſt his vow; if he do not eat he ſinneth againſt his life. What muſt ſuch a man do in this ſenſe? ילך אצל חכמים ויתירו לו את נדרו Let him go to the wiſe men and they will looſe his Vow, according as it is written, the tongue of the wiſe is health, Prov. VERS. II.

Οἱ δὲ Βάρβαροι, &c. And the barbarous people, &c.

Col. III. 11. Ἕλλην, Βάρβαρος, Σκύθης. Greek, Barbarian, Scythian.

I. THE Gentiles were called by the Jews יונים Ἕλληνες, Greeks; partly becauſe the Grecians excelled all other Nations in language and learning; partly becauſe the Jews had ſo long lain under the Empire of the Greeks, the Ptolomees on one ſide, and the Seleucidæ on the other. From whence, 1. חכמת יונית the wiſdom of the Greeks is commonly taken by the Rabbins for all kind of Gentile learning, wherein the Grecians peculiarly excelled. Hence that paſſage יפיותו של יפת יהא באהלי שם The beauty of Japhet ſhall be in the Tabernacles of Sem. The Gloſs is, This is the Greek tongue which is more elegant than any language of the children of Japhet. And Aruch in בחיבת יון מובהרת The Greek way of writing is moſt elegant. And hence is it, 2. that the Jews even while they were under the Roman yoke counted their years by the Epocha or Æra of the Greeks, that is, the Seleucidæ, whence that cavil of the Sadducee x, A certain Sadducee ſaid, I rebuke you, O ye Phariſees, becauſe you write the Emperour with Moſes. The Gloſs is, In writings of contracts they write the years of the Kings, and this alſo והוא כרת משה וישראל and this alſo is according to the Law of Moſes and Iſrael, viz. that they might reckon according to the years of the Seleucidæ. See Joſephus and the Book of Maccabees.

II. After the ſame manner that the Jews called all Gentiles Greeks, ſo the Greeks called all other Nations but their own, Barbarians t. Strabo largely diſcuſſeth the reaſon of that name, and him the Reader may conſult. Perhaps the Etymology of the word may have ſome relation with בר Bar a Chaldee word, which ſignifies without. Whence זר a ſtranger, or one of another Country, in the Samaritan Verſion is בראי Bari, a Foreigner; ſo that ברבראי the word being doubled denotes a great Foreigner. But to let Etymologies paſs, I take notice that the Syriack in that place of the Coloſſians before quoted, inſtead of Ἕλλην, Greek, hath ארמיא Arami; for Βάρβαρος, Barbarian, hath יוניא Ioni, or Greek, (which is chiefly to be taken notice of) and for Σκύθης, Scythian, ברבריא Barbari, whence theſe these inhabitants of Melita should be termed Βάρβαροι, Barbarous people, is something obscure, when doubtless the Island it self was under the Roman Jurisdiction, which the very name Publius, who was the chief of this Island, does make out. However the inhabitants seem to be Africans, brought over thither by the Carthaginians when they had possession of that Island. For I hardly think St. Luke would call the Romans, Barbarians, when they were so very cultivated a Nation; and all people were ambitious of the name of a Roman, St. Paul himself having obtained it. The people of Melita perhaps were transplanted out of Barbary it self, as that part of Africa at length was called.

y The fool hath said in his heart there is no God. אילו אנשי ברבריא ואנשי מרטניא These are the men of Barbary, and the men of Mauritania, that walk naked in the streets. Nor is there any thing more loathsome and execrable before God than he that goes naked in the streets. y Jevamoth, fol. 63. 2.

Παρασήμῳ Διοσκούροις· Whose sign was Castor and Pollux.

GEMINI in the Zodiack, commonly pictured sitting upon horses; and so they appeared (if we will believe the Historian) in that fight at the lake Regillus, leading on the Roman horse, and so pressing upon the enemy, that under their conduct the victory was obtained b. But another time the Pseudo-Castores, false Castors and Pollux appeared not so fortunately: c Λακεδαιμονίων ὅτι τραπεδῶ Διοσκούροις ἑορτὴν ἀγόντων, &c. While the Lacedemonians were celebrating the Feast of Castor and Pollux within their Camp, and had given themselves to sports and drinking, after dinner Gonippus and Pandoreus, [two Messenian young men that were wont to wast the Lacedemonians] of a sudden appear amongst these Lacedemonians, clothed in white Tunicks and purple cloaks, mounted on beautiful horses; the Lacedemonians beholding them, and supposing them no other than Castor and Pollux, and that they were come to their own Festivals, worship them, and make their prayers to them. But the young men as soon as they found themselves received in the midst of them, break through them, making slaughter every where with their launces, and so a great number being slain, they return safe to Audania, casting a reproach upon the Feast of Castor and Pollux. b Dionys. lib. 6. c Pausan. in Messeniacis, vel lib. 4.

From the habit of these Pseudo-Castors, false Castor and Pollux it is easie conjecturing in what form they were wont to be pictured, who in the judgment of the deceived people were the true ones. Comely young men, in comely apparel, and riding on horseback; and yet they are sometimes drawn on foot; as in that obscure passage of the same Pausanias d, Τὸ δὲ ἱερὸν τῶν Διοσκούρων ἔστιν ἀρχαῖον, αὐτοί τε ἑστῶτες, καὶ οἱ παῖδες καθήμενοι σφίσιν ἐφ' ἵππου, where the Latin Interpreter renders it, The Temple of Castor and Pollux is very ancient, d Pausan. in Atticis, vel. lib. 1.

cient, where young men are beheld ſitting on horſeback. But the words of the Author are plainly to this purpoſe, that Caſtor and Pollux are drawn ſtanding, and their boys on horſeback. There is ſomething parallel in another place of this Author that gives ſome light in this matter e, Μετὰ δὲ τοῦτο Διοσκόρων ναός· Ἄγαλμα δὲ αὐτοὶ τε καὶ οἱ παῖδες εἴσω, Ἀναξις καὶ Μνασίνους, σὺν τε σφίσιν αἱ μητέρες Ἱλάρεια καὶ Φοίβη. *After this is the Temple of Caſtor and Pollux. Ἤλθομεν εἰς Πυτιόλους. We came to Puteoli.

f Strabo, lib. 5. Πόλις f ἐμπόριον μέγιστον χειροποίητους ἔχουσα ὅρμους. It is a City, a very great Mart-Town, where there are havens for Ships, made by art and labour. Whence it is leſs wonder if now there were Chriſtians there, either ſuch as were Merchants themſelves, or ſuch as were inſtructed in Chriſtianity by Merchants trading there.

g Echah rabbathi, fol. 81. 2. The Jewiſh writers make ſome mention of this place with this ſtory g, Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eliezer ben Azariah, and R. Joſhua, and R. Akiba נכנסין לרומי ונכנסו ליוון ובאו לרומי went to Rome, i.e. made a voyage to Rome, [as in this Chap. ver. 14. Ἤλθομεν εἰς τὴν Ῥώμην, we went toward Rome] ושמעו קול המונה של רומי מפוטל יילום And they heard the ſound of the multitude at Rome, being diſtant an hundred and twenty miles. Therefore they began to weep, but R. Akiba laughed. They ſay unto him, O Akiba, why ſhouldſt thou laugh while we weep? He ſaith unto them, and why ſhould you weep? They make anſwer, have we not cauſe to weep, when theſe Gentile Idolaters worſhip their Idols, and yet remain proſperous and quiet, whiles in the mean time the Temple, the footſtool of our God, is become a flame, and an habitation for wild beaſts? Have we not cauſe to weep? To whom he anſwereth, for this very cauſe do I laugh, for if it be ſo proſperous with thoſe that provoke God to anger, how much more ſhall it be ſo to thoſe that do his will?

b Maccoth. fol. 24. 1. This ſtory is repeated elſewhere h, and there inſtead of פוטליולום Puteolus, it is ſet פרטיה and yet the Gloſs upon the place quoted out of Echah rabbathi tells us, that in the third Chapter of the Treatiſe Maccoth it is written פטולום.

St. Paul and the reſt abide at Puteoli ſeven days at the entreaty of the Chriſtians of that place, which redounded to the credit of the Centurion, whoſe leave muſt be obtained in that caſe; ſo that his yielding ſo far may ſomewhat argue that he favoured Chriſtianity.

VERS. XV.

Ἐξῆλθον εἰς ἀπάντησιν ἡμῖν ἄχρις Ἀππίου φόρου, καὶ τριῶν ταβερνῶν· They came to meet us as far as Appii forum and the three Taverns.

VIA Appia, and Appii forum are much ſpoke of in Authors, but the mention of the Three Taverns is not ſo frequent. There is mention in Zoſimus of τρία ἐμπορεῖα, i.e. The three Victualing houſes; where Severus the Emperour was ſtrangled by the Treaſon of Maximinus Herculeus, and Maxentius his Son.

CHAP. III.

VERS. XII.

Πάντες ἐξέκλιναν, &c. They are all gone out of the way, &c.

I. THIS with the following part of the quotation, is taken out of the fourteenth Pſalm, according to the Greek Verſion: being indeed added to the Hebrew context; which is in truth a thing not unuſual either to thoſe Interpreters, or the ordinary Interpreters in the Synagogues. We have already obſerved elſewhere, that there ſtood by the Reader of the Law and the Prophets in the Synagogues, an Interpreter, that was wont to render, what was read to the people in the Hebrew, into their own Language: and that it was a very uſual thing for thoſe Interpreters to expatiate, and by way of Comment to Preach upon the words that had been read. Concerning which I have given ſome inſtances; a thing alſo obſervable enough in the Chaldee Paraphraſts.

II. That the Greek Interpreters did the ſame thing upon this Pſalm, I do not queſtion: indeed the thing ſpeaks it ſelf: eſpecially if we take notice of the ſubject which is diſcourſed of there. But let this be taken notice of, by the way; that where ever any thing occurs in the Holy Scripture, that is either terrifying, or diſgraceful, or threatning, the Jews commonly apply it to the Gentiles, as by numberleſs inſtances might be confirmed. Theſe Interpreters therefore, having gotten ſuch a ſubject in this Pſalm, and according to the cuſtom of the Nation, applying it to the Gentiles; they heap together paſſages from other places of the Scripture, which they either believe, or would have, to look the ſame way, loading and ſtigmatizing the poor Heathen with odious characters enough; for to them the Jews make no doubt, but aſſuredly believe, all thoſe things do appertain.

III. Our Apoſtle follows their quotations exactly, tranſcribes their words, approves the truth of the thing, but diſproves the falſhood of the application, verſ. 19. q. d. You Jews expound theſe things of the Gentiles only, as if they did not in the leaſt belong to your ſelves. And with the ſame deſign likewiſe, have your Interpreters multiplied this heap of quotations, having their Eye on them: But ye muſt know that whatever things the Law ſaith, it ſaith to them who are under the Law.

CHAP. VIII.

VERS. XIX.

Ἡ γὰρ ἀποκαραδοκία τῆς κτίσεως. For the earneſt expectation of the creature, &c.

THERE is a twofold key hanging at this place that may unlock the whole, and make the ſenſe plain and eaſie.

I. The firſt is, this phraſe πᾶσα κτίσις which we render the whole Creation, verſ. 22, and we meet with it twice elſewhere in the New Teſtament, Mark XVI. verſ. 15. Κηρύξατε Κηρύξατε τὸ ἐυαγγέλιον πάσῃ τῇ κτίσει. Preach the Goſpel to every creature. Col. I. 23. Ἐυαγγελίῳ τῷ κηρυχθέντι ἐν πάσῃ τῇ κτίσει. The Goſpel which was preached to every creature. Now it is apparent enough what is meant by πάσα κτίσις in both theſe places, viz. all Nations, or the Heathen World. For that which in S. Mark is κηρύξατε ἐυαγγέλιον πάσῃ τῇ κτίσει, preach the Goſpel to every creature; in S. Matthew is, μαθητεύσατε πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, go and teach all Nations, teaching them. The very phraſe in this place lays claim to that very Interpretation. I have alſo obſerved upon that place of S. Mark, that that phraſe כל הבריות which ſignifies the ſame with πάσα κτίσις, every creature, is applied by the Jews to the Gentiles, and that by way of oppoſition to Iſrael.

2. The ſecond is, that word ματαιότητι, verſ. 20. which indeed is not unfitly rendred vanity; but then, this vanity is improperly applied to this vaniſhing, changable, dying ſtate of the Creation. For ματαιότης, vanity, doth not ſo much denote the vaniſhing condition of the outward ſtate, as it doth the inward vanity and emptineſs of the mind. So the Apoſtle ſpeaking of the Gentiles (concerning whom he ſpeaks here) tells us, Ἐματαιώθησαν ἐν τοῖς διαλογισμοῖς αὐτῶν, they became vain in their imaginations. [a] And again, Ἔθνη περιπατεῖ ἐν ματαιότητι τοῦ νοὸς αὐτῶν. The Gentiles walk in the vanity of their mind. [b] So alſo, that The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wiſe, ὅτι μάταιοί εἰσι, that they are vain. [*] To all which, let me add this obſervation further, that throughout this whole place, the Apoſtle ſeemeth to allude to the Iſraelites bondage in Egypt and their deliverance out of it; with a compariſon made betwixt the Jewiſh and the Gentile Church. When God would deliver Iſrael from his bondage, he challengeth him for his Son, and his firſt-born, Exod. IV. 22. And in like manner the people of the Gentiles do earneſtly expect and wait for ſuch a kind of manifeſtation of the Sons of God within and among themſelves. The Romans, to whom this Apoſtle writes, knew well enough, how many and how great predictions and promiſes it had pleaſed God to publiſh by his Prophets, concerning gathering together and adopting Sons to himſelf among the Gentiles; the manifeſtation and production of which Sons, the whole Gentile World with a neck as it were ſtretched out, doth now wait for.

VERS. XX.

Τῇ γὰρ ματαιότητι ἡ κτίσις ὑπετάγη, &c. For the creature was made ſubject to Vanity.

THE Gentile World were ſubject to Vanity of mind; but how, οὐχ ἑκοῦσα ἀλλὰ διὰ τὸν ὑποτάξαντα, not willingly, but by reaſon of him who hath ſubjected the ſame? May we not ſay, Ἐματαιώθη ἑκοῦσα, it became vain willingly, but ὑπετάγη ματαιότητι οὐχ ἑκοῦσα, it was made ſubject to Vanity, not willingly? For let us recur to the very firſt original of Gentiliſme, that is, to the firſt confuſion of Languages by reaſon of the attempt to build the Tower at Babel. I confeſs, there are ſome paſſages in the Gloſs of the Targumiſts upon this matter (Gen. XI.) that might move laughter; but, as to the ſum and ſcope of the thing they are worth weighing.

[e] Targ. Hieroſ. & Jonath.

[c] They ſaid, Go to, let us build us a City, and a tower, and let its head reach unto the top of Heaven, ונעביד לן בניתא וקרתא דתהי בה מגדו בראשיה and let us make us an houſe of worſhip in the top of it, and let us put a ſword into his hand, that he may wage war for us againſt our enemies, before we be ſcattered abroad upon the face of the whole Earth. We may ſmile indeed at that figment about the Idol and the Sword, &c. But certainly they do not altogether miſs the mark when they hint to us, that this Tower was built upon an Idolatrous account. So the Talmudiſts, [d] It is a tradition. R. Nathan ſaith, כולם לשם עו"ז נתכוונו they were all intent upon Idolatry. And hence it is that they commonly ſay, That, that generation hath no part in the world to come. Nor indeed does the ſeverity of the puniſhment (viz. the confuſion of Languages, by which true Religion was loſt in the World) argue any leſs, but that they ſinned againſt God in the higheſt degree in that wicked enterprize. They were inclinable to Idolatry willingly and of their own accord, but that they were ſubjected to that Vanity, proceeded from the juſt indignation and vengeance of God. The whole World lay under Heatheniſm from the firſt confuſion of Languages, to the bringing in of the Goſpel among all Nations, two thouſand years and upwards: And in this its moſt miſerable condition, who could not but obſerve that God was angry?

[d] Sanhedr. fol. 109. 1.

VERS. XXI.

Ἐλευθερωθήσεται ἀπὸ τῆς δουλείας τῆς φθορᾶς. Shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption.

THE word φθορὰ ſometimes, yea very frequently in the Holy Scriptures, denotes ſinful corruption; ſo 2 Pet. I. 4. φθορὰ ἐν ἐπιθυμίᾳ, corruption through luſt; 2 Cor. XI. 3.

XI. 3. φθαρῇ τὰ νοήματα ὑμῶν. Your minds should be corrupted; 1 Cor. XV. 33. φθείρουσιν ἤθη χρηστὰ, &c. Evil communication corrupts good manners, &c. So that the sense of the Apostle in this place seemeth to be this: The Gentile World shall in time be delivered from the bondage of their sinful corruption, that is, the bondage of their lusts and vile affections (under which it hath lain for so long a time) into a noble liberty, such as the Sons of God enjoy.

VERS. XXII.

Πᾶσα ἡ κτίσις συστενάζει, &c. The whole creation groaneth together, &c.

IF it be enquired, how the Gentile World groaned and travailed in pain; let them, who expound this of the Fabrick of the material World, tell us, how that groaneth and travaileth. They must needs own it to be a borrowed and allusive phrase. But in the sense which we have pitcht upon, the very literal construction may be admitted.

CHAP. XI.

BEFORE we apply our selves to the Exposition of this Chapter, let me make these few enquiries.

I. Whether the Jewish Nation, as to the more general and greater part of it, had not been rejected and blinded, before such time as our Saviour manifested himself in the flesh? I know well enough, that the casting off of that Nation, is commonly assigned to that horrid wickedness of theirs in murdering the Lord Christ, and persecuting the Gospel and his Apostles; a wickedness abundantly deserving their rejection indeed; but were they not blinded and cast off before? They were γεννήματα ἐχιδνῶν, a generation of Vipers, at the time that the Baptist first appeared amongst them; and this bears the same signification as the seed of the Serpent.

Our Saviour preacheth to them in Parables, that they might neither see, nor hear, nor be converted, nor their sins be forgiven them; Mark IV. 11, 12. which may give ground of suspicion, that that people were cast off to whom Christ preaches in such a form and manner of Oratory on purpose, that they should not be converted.

If they were Jews to whom S. Peter directs his first Epistle (as who indeed doth deny it?) then there is some weight in those words, Chap. II. 10. Ye were in times past, not a people.

II. Is it not very agreeable to reason and Scripture to suppose that Nation cast off, for the entertainment they had given to their fond and impious Traditions? A reprobate people certainly they were, whose Religion had made void the Commandments of God: A reprobate Nation, who in vain worshipped God, after the Commandments of Men, Matth. XV. and by such Commandments of Men, that had leven'd, yea poisoned their minds with blasphemy and hatred against the true Messiah, and the pure truth of God, Isa. XXIX. 13. Because the fear of this people toward me is taught by the precept of men----therefore the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, &c. May we not from this original derive the first original of the rejection of this people? And by how much the more they are bewitcht with the love of their Traditions, by so much the more we may suppose them separated from God, hardened and cast off. That the Apostle seems to look back to times before the murdering of our Lord, when he is discoursing about the casting off of that Nation.

III. Was not the Gospel brought unto and publisht amongst the ten Tribes as well as amongst the Jews, when the Apostle wrote this Epistle? The determination of this matter seems to conduce something toward the explaining of this Chapter, seeing throughout the whole Chapter there is no mention of the Jews singly, but of Israel.

The Gospel was to be preacht to the whole World before the destruction of Jerusalem, Matth. XXIV. 14. And was it not to the ten Tribes as well as other Nations? It makes for the affirmative, that S. James directs his Epistle πταῖς δώδεκαφυλαῖς to those ten Tribes as well as the other two. But the Apostles wrote to none, but to whom the Gospel was now come.

VERS. I.

Μὴ ἀπώσατο Θεὸς τὸν λαὸν αὐτοῦ; Hath God caſt away his people?

WE may obſerve what it is the Apoſtle propounds to diſcourſe, viz. not of the univerſal calling in of the Nation, but of the non-rejection of the whole Nation. Hath God ſo rejected his people, that he hath caſt them away univerſally? μὴ γένοιτο. God forbid. For I my ſelf am an Iſraelite, and he hath not caſt me away.

Ἐκ φυλῆς Βενιαμίν. Of the Tribe of Benjamin.

So Phil. III. 5. The Jaſper ſtone upon which was inſcribed the name of Benjamin in the Breſt-plate, was the firſt foundation in the New Jeruſalem, Revel. XXI. 19. In memory (as it ſhould ſeem) of this Benjamite, the chief founder of the Gentile Church. e The Jaſper of Benjamin fell one day out of the Breſt plate, and was loſt. Dama ben Nethinah having one like it, they bargained with him to buy it for an hundred pence, &c.

e Hieroſ. Peah. fol. 15. 3. & Kiddush. fol. 60. 2.

VERS. II.

Ὡς ἐντυγχάνει. How he maketh interceſſion, &c.

f Elijah begs of God that he would take vengeance on the Iſraelites, for the wickedneſſes they had committed.

f Lyr. Ger. in 1 Kings XIX.

VERS. III.

Τὰ θυσιαστήριά σου κατέσκαψαν. They have digged down thine Altars.

THY Altars? What Altars of God ſhould they be, that the Iſraelites had thrown down in Samaria? The Altar in the Temple was whole at that time: And what Altar had God beſides? R. Sol. upon 1 Kings XIX. Tells us, theſe Altars were private Altars raiſed to the Name of God. Such an one was that that Elijah repaired being broken down, 1 King. XVIII. 30.

There were indeed במות high places built up to Idols, but there were ſome alſo built up to God. And that (as the Jews grant) lawfully enough, before the Temple was built; which were uſed afterward: but the uſe of them became faulty, becauſe they were bound to go only to that Altar that was in the Temple. Theſe Altars were unlawfully built amongſt the two Tribes of Judah and Benjamin, becauſe the way lay open for them to the Altar at Jeruſalem; but it was not ſo unlawful for the ten Tribes within the Kingdom of Samaria, becauſe they could have no ſuch acceſs. It is queſtionable therefore, whether Elijah would call the high places or Altars in Judæa, though dedicated to the true God, the Altars of God; which being ſo dedicated in Samaria, he calls by the name of thine Altars.

VERS. IV.

Τῇ Βάαλ. To the image of Baal.

THOSE who would have the Hebrew Bibles corrected by the Greek Verſion, and contend that thoſe Interpreters were inſpired with a Prophetick Spirit; let them tell us here, who it was that miſtook, theſe Interpreters or St. Paul? For ſo they in 1 King. XIX. 18. Καὶ καταλείψεις ἐν Ἰσραὴλ ἑπτὰ χιλιάδας ἀνδρῶν πάντα γόνατα ἃ οὐκ ὤκλασε γόνυ τῷ Βάαλ. And thou ſhalt leave in Iſrael ſeven thouſand men, all the knees, which have not bowed the knee τῷ Βάαλ, to Baal. So the Roman and Alexandrian Edition. But the Apoſtle, Κατέλιπον ἐμαυτῷ ἑπτακισχιλίους ἄνδρας οἵτινες οὐκ ἔκαμψαν γόνυ τῇ Βάαλ. I have reſerved to my ſelf ſeven thouſand men, all that have not bowed the knee τῇ Βάαλ, to Baal. To paſs by the difference between καταλείψεις, Thou ſhalt leave, and Κατέλιπον, I have left, or reſerved, which is no little one; we will only examine the difference between the two Articles τῷ and τῇ.

Ahab had introduced Baal the Idol of the Tyrians, amongſt the Iſraelites, 1 King. XVI. 31. And were there but ſeven thouſand amongſt the whole ten Tribes of Iſrael that did not worſhip this Baal? Perhaps there were ſeventy thouſand, nay perhaps ſeven times ſeventy thouſand. For conſider the ſtory in 2 Kings X. 21. and it will appear that the worſhippers of this Baal were not ſo numerous, that they could amount to many thouſands, perhaps not many hundreds. But

But what did it avail them not to have worſhipped Ahab's Baal, if in the mean time they worſhipped Jeroboam's Calves? Jehu himſelf that rooted out Baal and his worſhippers out of Iſrael, yet did not he depart from the ſin of Jeroboam, namely, the Golden Calves. And what great matter was there in this divine anſwer to Elijah, if it had ſaid, I have reſerved to my ſelf ſeven thouſand men, who have not worſhipped τῇ Βάαλ, Baal, the God of the Tyrians, if in the mean time, they worſhipped the Calves in common with the reſt of that Nation? Elijah himſelf had ſlain theſe worſhippers of Baal, before he had this anſwer from God; and therein indeed had done a great act. But it was a ſmall matter, if all Iſrael, excepting ſeven thouſand only, ſhould ſtill worſhip this Baal.

By τῇ Βάαλ, therefore, with the femine Article, the Apoſtle teacheth us, that it muſt be underſtood not τῇ εἰκόνι Βάαλ, of the image of Baal, but τῇ δαμάλει Βάαλ, of the Calf of Baal. For all will confeſs, that Baal was a common name for all Idols. And that which follows, 1 Kings XIX. 18. Every mouth which hath not kiſſed him, takes light from that in Hoſ. XIII. 2. Let them kiſs the Calves.

Now Jeroboams Calves are called δαμάλεις in the feminine gender, 1 Kings XII. 28. Ἐποίησε δύο δαμάλεις χρυσᾶς, he made two Calves of gold. So Joſephus, g Δύο ποιήσας δαμάλεις χρυσᾶς, τέθηκε τὰς δαμάλεις, &c. Jeroboam making two golden Calves, places them, &c. And inſtead of more, the Book of Tobit comments ſufficiently upon τῇ Βάαλ. Tob. I. 5. Καὶ πᾶσαι αἱ φῦλαι συναποστᾶσαι ἔθυον τῇ Βάαλ τῇ δαμάλει, And all the Tribes that revolted together, ſacrificed to the Calf Baal. To this ſenſe therefore the words of God to Elijah come: I have left, or I have reſerved, to my ſelf, ſeven thouſand men that have kept themſelves untoucht with the common Idolatry of the Nation, in the adoration τῆς Βάαλ, of Baal, or of Jeroboam's Calf.

g Antiq. lib. 8. cap. 3.

VERS. V.

Οὕτως οὖν ἐν τῷ νῦν καιρῷ λεῖμμα, &c. Even ſo then at this preſent time alſo there is a remnant, &c.

HOwever we ſuppoſe the Jewiſh Nation, as to the more general maſs of it, was caſt off before the times of Chriſt; yet no queſtion, there was in all ages λεῖμμα κατ' ἐκλογὴν χάριτος, a remnant according to the election of grace, and in that age more eſpecially wherein Chriſt and his Goſpel began to ſhine out. And that he meant the calling of this remnant in that age and time wherein the Apoſtle wrote, and not any call of the whole Nation to be hereafter, what can be more plainly ſaid, than what is ſaid in theſe words, ἐν τῷ νῦν καιρῷ, at this preſent time?

Let us take a view of the Apoſtle's reaſoning; Hath God caſt away his people? No: for I alſo am an Iſraelite, and he hath not caſt me off. And as in the days of Elijah there was a remnant, even ſo it is ἐν τῷ νῦν καιρῷ, at this very preſent time. How unfitly would this argue that the calling of the Nation was to be after a great many ages? But if we will ſuppoſe that the Jews had for the greateſt part of them been caſt off, blinded and hardned before the times of Chriſt, and the Apoſtle, then this reaſoning will run eaſily, and ſmoothly: let it be granted, that the Nation, as to the main body of it, was caſt away for ſome ages paſt; yet, is it ſo caſt away, that there is no hope for any Jew? By no means. For ἐν τῷ νῦν καιρῷ, at this preſent time there is a remnant, as it was in the days of Elijah; I my ſelf am one of that remnant.

VERS. VIII.

Ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Θεὸς πνεῦμα κατανύξεως, &c. God hath given them the Spirit of ſlumber, &c.

SO the Greek Interpreters in Eſa. XXIX. 10. Πεπότικεν ὑμᾶς κύριος πνεύματι κατανύξεως. The Lord hath made you drink into a Spirit κατανύξεως, of compunction. The difficulty lies in the word κατανύξεως, which properly denotes remorſe or compunction, very wide from the meaning both of the Prophet and Apoſtle.

I. The Greek Interpreters, what Jews ſoever they were, do ſometimes frame a ſenſe of their own, and that not ſeldom, very forreign from the Hebrew truth: And very often uſe Greek words, in a ſenſe very different from the common idiom of the Greeks. There might be inſtances given abundantly both for the one and the other, if this were a place for it.

II. This very word we have in hand, they frame to their own ſenſe, different from the common acceptation of it. And whether they take it from κατανύττω, To prick, or from κατανυγάω, to grieve, or have any Eye to the word νύξ night, they attribute ſuch a ſenſe and ſignification to it, as denotes ſilence, aſtoniſhment, horror, &c. Gen. XXVII. 38.

Κατα-

Κατανυχθέντα ὁ Ἰσαὰκ (a clause of their own inserting) we may equally render it, Isaac being amazed and astonisht, or, grieved and prickt with sorrow, Psal. LX. 3. Ἔπότισας ἡμᾶς οἶνον κατανύξεως. Thou hast made us to drink the wine of compunction. The Hebrew is, יין תרעלה the wine of horror. So that the meaning of the word κατανύξεως in them, must be fetcht from themselves; and in this place from the Hebrew word תרעלה in the Prophet, rather than from any Greek Lexicon.

VERS. X.

Τὸν νῶτον αὐτῶν διαπαντὸς σύγκαμψον. Bow down their back always.

THE Apostle follows the Greek Interpreters, and they their own Paraphrastic and allusive way. The Hebrew hath it מתניהם תמיד המעד make their loins to quake continually. And so the Chaldee Paraphrast renders it too: but these, Bow down their back, to which the Syriac and Arabick incline. It is very true, that they whole loins are weak and feeble, do go bowing and trembling: but perhaps the Interpreters might allude to that in Deut. XXV. 2, 3. where the Malefactor condemned to be beaten with stripes, must be bowed down: To which that passage in the Psalmist seems to allude, Psal. I The wicked shall not rise up, or stand in judgment. The Greek Interpreters do frequently allude to the customs, yea, not seldom to the Traditions, of their own Country; whence one might the rather suspect an allusion in this place also. Such a kind of Version is that (seeing we are discourling about scourging) Prov. XXVII. 22. Ἐὰν ἀνὴρ ἄφρονα ἐν μέσῳ συνθλίψῃ. If thou shouldst beat a fool with stripes in the midst of the Sanhedrin, instead of, Though thou shouldst bray a fool in a mortar.

TO THE

Right HONORABLE and LEARNED

Sir William Morice Kt.

PRINCIPAL

SECRETARY of STATE,

AND ONE OF HIS

MAJESTIES

MOST HONORABLE

PRIVY COUNCIL.

RIGHT HONORABLE,

ALL that I have done in this Work, may well ſeem a continued Soleciſm: When I have with ſo unskilful a hand attempted to explain ſo abſtruſe an Epiſtle, and handled things ſo difficult in ſo brief a manner, and laſtly in daring to dedicate theſe ſo impoliſhed papers to a perſon of ſuch Judgment and Learning. And what account ſhall I give of theſe things?

I know indeed, that among thoſe Δυσνόητά τινα paſſages hard to be underſtood, which are in S. Pauls Epiſtles, 2 Pet. III. 16. this Firſt to the Corinthians claims no ſmall ſhare; an Epiſtle behind none for the variety of the things handled, and for the difficulty of the ſtyle wherewith they are handled, above all. Things theſe are to be trembled at, but alluring withal, and provoking a mind greedy of the knowledge of Holy Sciptures ſo much the more to the ſtudy of them, by how much they are the more difficult. So that it was neither arrogance nor raſhneſs, that I imployed my ſelf in theſe obſcurities; but a ſtudious mind, breathing after the knowledge of the Scriptures, and ſomething reſtleſs, when in difficult places it knew not where to fix. What fruit I have reaped, I ſay not any thing of, but this, that I repent not of my pains: for I have in ſome meaſure ſatisfied my ſelf, but whether I ſhall do others, is not in my power to judge. I hope it will not give offence upon this account, that if I miſtake, I miſtake only in Hiſtorical matters (as moſt of thoſe things are that here create difficulty) where there is no fear of daſhing upon the Analogy of Faith, or the Doctrine of the Church.

That I preſume, Right Honorable, to lay theſe my rude thoughts before your Learned Eyes, is not boldneſs, but Duty, Gratitude, and Obligation. I know well enough, ſuch is my meanneſs, that I am not able to invent or frame any thing, that may be worthy of that great Learning, wherewith you are ſo ſignally endowed. But it is your Goodneſs, with which you are as much endowed, that I and theſe my papers have to do with. They approach to pay their reſpects to it, and to render you all the thanks that poſſibly I can, for that Favour, Aſſiſtance, and Patronage, that your Honour vouchſafed to aid and comfort me with, when I and my affairs lay under adverſity, and hazzard. You, Great Sir, came in to my ſuccour, and when I was wholly a ſtranger to you, and you to me, yet you generouſly afforded me your helping hand, and that of your own accord, unasked, and with an earneſt diligence, care and affection. Oh! How much am I endebted to that kindneſs of yours, and wherewith ſhall I requite it? Let this iſſue of my Studies, whatever it be, ſerve as a Monument of my Vows; and having your Great Name inſcribed upon it, let it live and glory, and teſtifie to all the World the Obedience, Duty, and Gratitude that I owe you, Being

Your moſt Humble and

moſt Obliged Servant,

JOHN LIGHTFOOT.

OF CORINTH IT SELF.

CORINTH was ſeated in an Iſthmus by the ſpace of five miles parting the Egean Sea from the Ionian; joyning Greece to Peloponneſus by a ſtrait paſſage a.

In b the Iſthmus was the Temple of Neptune, and the Iſthmian Games every five years, for this cauſe inſtituted, as is ſaid, becauſe the Coaſts of Peloponneſus are waſhed with five Bays. Theſe Plays broke off by Cypſelus the Tyrant, the Corinthians reſtored again to their antient ſolemnity in the forty ninth Olympiad.

The c Bounds of the ſtraits of the Iſthmus, on this ſide is Lechæa, and Cenchræa on the other. The Haven of Cenchræa ſerves for the Traffick of Aſia, that of Lechæa for the Traffick of Italy. The Haven of Cenchræa was diſtant from the City LXX furlongs. The Lechæan Port lay under the City.

King Demetrius, The Dictator, Cæſar C. The Prince, and Domitius Nero, endeavoured to cut through the ſtraits with a navigable Channel, but unſuccesfully d. Corinth from that high Tower, which they call Acrocorinthus beholds both Seas. e That City, heretofore called Ephyra, was built By Siſyphus, in that time when Othniel was Captain and Judge of the Hebrews. f Hence the Tower Siſyphium at Corinth, from the name of the Founder. g From the coming down of the Heraclidæ into Peloponneſus, the City was under Kings for a long ſeries; then under yearly Princes h; afterwards under Cypſelus uſurping the Government, and after him under Periander his ſon; and after a long ſpace of time i, under Philip. Whoſe endeavours the Corinthians aided, and ſo deſpiſed the Romans for him, that ſome preſumed to caſt dirt upon their Ambaſſadors as they paſſed by their houſes. For which crime, and other wicked deeds, an Army was ſent thither by the Romans, and Corinth overthrown by L. Mummius.

When l it had a long time lain forſaken, it was rebuilt by Julius Ceſar; who built Carthage alſo at the ſame time: and into both, anciently ſplendid and famous Cities, he brought down Colonies of the Romans, eſpecially of ſuch as were Libertins. m They when they had begun to remove the rubbiſh, and had withal digged up graves, they found very many works made of baked Earth, and not a few of braſs, the workmanſhip of which they ſo admired, that there was no Sepulchre which they digged not up, and having got great plenty of ſuch things, they Sold them at a great price, and filled Rome, Necrocorinthiis, with the ſpoils of the Corinthian dead, for ſo they called thoſe works, which were taken from the Sepulchres, eſpecially ſuch as were made of Earth. And when Mummius laid the City waſte, there were pictures found of admirable workmanſhip, which were brought to Rome. For the Arts of Painting and Counterfeiting, and other Arts of that kind were very much improved in Corinth, and Sicyone.

The ſituation of the City now rebuilt was of this nature. There was an high Mountain, whoſe perpendicular was three furlongs, and an half: the Aſcent thirty furlongs; and it ended in a ſharp top. The Mountains name was Acrocorinthus. At the very foot of Acrocorinthus ſtood the City. The compaſs of the City made full forty furlongs; It was ſtrengthned with a Wall, as much of it as the Mountain had laid bare; Acrocorinthus alſo was walled, as far as it could be fortified with walling. And as we went up

(they are the words of Strabo) the ruins of the old City appeared; so that the whole compaſs was eighty five furlongs.

The Mountain on the top of it had the Temple of Venus, a Temple ſo wealthy, ὥςε πλείους ἢ χιλίας ἱεροδούλους ἐκέκτητο ἑταίρας· That it had more than a thouſand Whore-Prieſts, whom Men and Women had dedicated to the Goddeſs. n In the old City heretofore ſtood the Temple of Juno: where all the Corinthian women being gathered together, Periander the Tyrant by his Officers, ſtripped ſtark naked without any difference, and having carried their cloths into a certain pit he burnt them to Meliſſa his deceaſed wife, with whom he laid after ſhe was dead.

The Hiſtory of the firſt founding a Goſpel Church in this City, Act. XVIII. makes it plain, that there were very many Jews there, and one Synagogue of them at leaſt, if not more.

VERS. I.

Παῦλος. Paul.

WHO was also called Saul. He had a double name according to his double relation: the Hebrew name Saul, as he was an Hebrew: The Roman name Paul, as a Roman.

It was common in the Jewish nation, that among the Jews they went by a Jewish name, but among Heathens by another. That is, either by the same name turned into the Heathen Language; as Tabitha to the Jews, was Dorcas to them that spake Greek, and Thomas to the Hebrews, was Didymus to the Greeks; and perhaps Silas to the Jews was Tertius to the Romans, Rom. XVI. 21. from שלוש Shalosh, Three, and Jason was Secundus, compare Rom. XVI. 21. with Acts XIX. 4. Or they went by some different name; As Herod in Luke, Act. XII. 1, 2. is Agrippa in Josephus: and John is also Mark, Act. XII. 12.

Hence the Gloss upon Maimonides; a Perhaps he hath two names, viz. a Jewish and that whereby הלועזות those that are not Jews, do call him. And that passage, The b Israelites without the Land of Israel have names like the names of the Gentiles. Yea, hearken to what they say in the same Tract c concerning Jews dwelling even in the Land of Israel; a In Cerushin, cap. 3

b Hierof. Gittin, fol. 43. 2.
c Fol. 45 3.

Iſrael; Perhaps he hath two wives, one in Judea, another in Galilee. And perhaps he hath two names, one in Judea, another in Galilee. If he ſubſcribes his name, whereby he goes in Judea, to put away her who is in Galilee, or the name whereby he goes in Galilee, to put away her, who is in Judea, it is not a divorce.

It is no wonder therefore, if Saul who was born out of the Land of Iſrael, and free of the City of Rome, had a Roman name joyned with his Jewiſh. And it deſerves obſervation, that he being now made the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, always calls himſelf by his Gentile name, by his Jewiſh never: and that Luke proſecuting his acts, calleth his name Saul, while the ſcene of the ſtory is among the Jews, but Paul, while it is among the Heathen.

VERS. II.

Ἡγιασμένοις ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ. Sanctified in Chriſt Jeſus.

IT ſeems to be oppoſed to Τοῖς ἡγιασμένοις ἐν νόμῳ, thoſe that are ſanctified in the Law, or to reſpect that Law, Deut. XXIII. 1, 2, &c. concerning the excluding very many out of the Church of God: which is not ſo done under Chriſt.

Κλητοῖς ἁγίοις. Called Saints.

קרא קדש A holy Convocation, is ſo rendred in the Language of the LXX Interpreters, Levit. XXIII. 2. Αἱ ἑορταὶ κυρίου ἃς καλέσετε αὐτὰς κλητὰς ἁγίας. The Feaſts of the Lord, which ye ſhall call, called Holy. Verſ. 3. Σάββατα, ἀνάπαυσις κλητὴ ἁγία τῷ Κυρίῳ. The Sabboth, a Reſt, called holy to the Lord, See alſo verſ. 4, 7, 8, &c.

Sanctified in Chriſt, is a general word, which is ſubdivided into κλητὸς ἅγιος, Truly Saints, and ἐπικαλουμένους τὸ ὄνομα Κυρίου, Thoſe that call on the name of the Lord, Saints by profeſſion.

VERS. V.

Ἐν παντὶ λόγῳ, καὶ πάσῃ γνώσει. In all utterance, and in all knowledge.

THAT is in the Gift of Tongues, and Propheſying. Theſe he calls, in the verſe following Μαρτύριον τοῦ Χριστοῦ, The teſtimony of Chriſt, that is, The teſtimony whereby Jeſus is proved to be the true Meſſias, ſeeing he beſtowed ſuch gifts. So Revel. XIX. 10. The Teſtimony of Jeſus is the Spirit of Propheſie: not only the doctrine which the Prophet uttered, but the very gift of Propheſying. And 1 Joh. V. 8. The Spirit, and the Water and the Blood yield a teſtimony of Chriſt on Earth. The Spirit, or the gift of Propheſy, The Water or Baptiſm, and the Blood or Martyrdome. For ſeeing the extraordinary gifts of the Spirit did ſo abound, and ſuch infinite multitudes flocked to Baptiſm in the name of Jeſus, and very many for that name endured martyrdom, it was an undoubted teſtimony, that he was the true Meſſias.

VERS. XII.

Ἐγὼ μὲν εἰμι Παύλου, &c. I am of Paul, &c.

TO trace the original of this Schiſm, we may have recourſe to the twofold diviſion of this Church, into converted Jews, and Gentiles; which appears from their ſtory, Act. XVIII. The Gentile part perhaps boaſted the name of Paul, and Apollo: the Jewiſh that of Cephas and Chriſt. But of them again were divided into two. Some of the Gentile partly reverenced Paul either alone, or certainly above all others, as their Father, their Apoſtle, and the firſt that brought in the Goſpel among them, however he preached plainly, in a low ſtyle, and not according to humane wiſdom and art. But ſome preferred Apollo before him, as more profound, more elegant, and more quaint Doctor. See Act. XVIII. 24. Hence that large diſcourſe of the Apoſtle of this very manner of preaching from Chap. I. 17. to Chap. IV. 6. Where he ſaith, that he transferred thoſe things in a certain figure to himſelf and Apollo.

Ἐγὼ δὲ Κηφᾶ. And I of Cephas.

We will not here diſpute, whether Peter were ever at Corinth. For even they themſelves, who aſſert that he was ſometime there, yet deny him ever to have been there before the breaking out of this Schiſm. Whence therefore came there to be a Sect

Sect of his name? You will scarce be able to produce, a more probable reason, than that those of the Circumcision embraced him, who was the Minister of Circumcision, rather than the Minister of Uncircumcision. Let us take an Example from Mark himself, the Son, or Disciple of Peter, 1 Pet. V. 13. He being chosen by Paul and Barnabas for their companion, in their travail among the Gentiles, on a suddain departed from them, and returned to Jerusalem, Act. XIII. 13. And why so? I should bring this reason of it, which you may correct, if it displease, namely that he cleaving to Peter before, who was the Minister of the Circumcision, liked not what these Ministers of the Uncircumcision did among the Gentiles: but being better informed afterwards returned again to Paul. So also these Corinthians, and indeed all the Jews every where, that were converted, too much Judaizing as yet, how much more readily would they give up their names to that famous Minister of Circumcision, than to the Minister or Ministers of Uncircumcision? But why not to James or to John, who were as much Ministers of Circumcision?

I. Peter was the Minister of Circumcision without the Land of Israel, but James within; and it seemed more agreeable to these Corinthian Jews, that were seated without the Land of Israel, to choose to themselves the chief Apostle without the Land, than he who was within it. But you will say, John also was an Apostle of Circumcision without that Land, as well as Peter, and he was nearer Corinth, dwelling in Asia, than Peter, who was in Chaldea. True indeed, but

II. Peter was the Minister among the Circumcision of the purest name, namely, The Hebrews, when John was among the Hellenists: yea among the Hebrews of the purest blood, viz. The Babylonians: yea among the Circumcision taken in the largest sense, viz. among the Ten Tribes, as well as among the Jews. To which add

III. That Peter in this outshone the two other Apostles of Circumcision, that to him alone were committed the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven; that is, that he should first open the door, and bring in the Gospel among the Gentiles. Taking all these observations together, it is no wonder, if these Corinthian Jews Judaizing in very many other things, as appears from this Epistle, when they were minded to enrol themselves under some Apostle, it is no wonder, I say, if they would enrol themselves under Peter the Apostle of the Circumcision, rather than under Paul, the Minister of the Gentiles; under Peter an Apostle out of the Land, rather than under James, who was not: under Peter the Apostle of the purest Hebrews, and of Circumcision in the fullest name, than under John the Apostle of the Hellenists.

Yea it is no wonder, if the Christian Gentiles, whether Corinthians, or Beleivers of some other places, when they would enrol themselves under some peculiar Apostle, it is no wonder, I say, if they had regard to Peter, who first brought in the Gospel among the Gentiles, rather than any other, who brought in the Gospel into this, or that peculiliar place. So that opinion of the Primacy of Peter seems to have arisen, among the Jewish Christians, for the particular difference of his Ministery among the Circumcision; and among the Gentile Christians, for his bringing in of the Gospel among the Gentiles.

Ἐγὼ δὲ Χριστοῦ. And I of Christ.

If there were any among the Corinthians, who had been baptized by the Baptism of John only, as there were among the Ephesians, Act. XIX. 4. no wonder, if they said, Ἐγὼ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, I am of the Messias, not knowing as yet Jesus of Nazareth to be Him. But be it granted, that all were better taught by Paul or Apollo, when yet very many still enclined to Judaism, one may suspect, That they said, I am of Christ, or Messias, in that sense as we formerly were instructed of the Messias, namely, that every one should be enrolled and subjected under him only, as our Captain, not under any deputed by him, or supplying his place.

VERS. XIV.

Κρίσπον. Crispus.

THE name Crispus is also in use among the Talmudists. d R. Aibular, נגרי קריספי Nigri Crispi faith, אמר ר' קריספי e R. Crispus faith.

d Hieros. Jevamoth, fol. 2. 3.
e Ib. fol. 12. 2.

Γαΐον. Gaius.

If that Gaius or Caius, to which the third Epiſtle of John is writ, were the Corinthian Gaius, which is very probable, comparing Rom. XVI. 23. with the ſeventh verſe of that Epiſtle; then John ſeems to have written his firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians. I writ, ſaith he, to the Church: To what Church? Certainly, to ſome particular Church, and where Gaius himſelf reſided. But what Epiſtle is that which he writ? Who would not more fitly ſay, That it was the Firſt of his Epiſtles, than that that which he writ was loſt? And if theſe things are true, you may look for Diotrephes in the Church of Corinth, the ringleader in the Schiſm. But theſe things under correction.

VERS. XVII.

Οὐ γὰρ ἀπέστειλέ με Χριστὸς βαπτίζειν. For Chriſt ſent me not to baptize.

PAUL was not appointed a Baptiſt among the Gentiles, as John was a Baptiſt among the Jews: nor was the office of the one and the other alike. The Jews even from their cradles were inſtructed in the doctrin of the Meſſias, and in the Articles of Religion, ſo that John had no need to ſpend much pains to prepare them for Baptiſm in the name of the Meſſias now to come, and for the reception of the Faith of the Goſpel. But how much pains muſt Paul take among the Gentiles, who had not ſo much as ever heard, either of Chriſt, or of the true God? He preached therefore daily, and as it were drop by drop inſtils into them the doctrin of Religion; and it was no ſmall labour, leaſurely to lead them to a baptizable meaſure of knowledge, if I may have leave ſo to expreſs it. He baptized Gaius, Criſpus, Stephanas, that were Jews, who were preſently and with little labour inſtructed in the doctrine of the Goſpel: but others who did ripen more ſlowly to the knowledg of it, he committed to other Miniſters to be baptized, when they ſhould find them fitted for it.

VERS. XXI.

Ἐν ϛοφίᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐκ ἔγνω ὁ κόσμος, διὰ τῆς ϛοφίας τὸν Θεόν. In the Wiſdom of God the world by wiſdom knew not God.

THAT is, the World in its Divinity, could not by its wiſdom know God. Σοφία τοῦ Θεοῦ, The Wiſdom of God is not to be underſtood that wiſdom, which had God for its author, but that had God for its object: and is to be rendred Wiſdom about God. There was among the Heathen σοφία τῆς φύσεως, Wiſdom about natural things; and σοφία τοῦ Θεοῦ, Wiſdom about God, that is, Divinity. But the World in its Divinity could not by wiſdom know God.

VERS. VI.

Σοφίαν δὲ τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου. But the Wisdom not of this World.

THE Apostle mentions a fourfold Wisdom.

I. Heathen Wisdom, or that of the Philosophers, Chap. I. 22. which was commonly called among the Jews, חכמה יונית Grecian Wisdom. Which was so undervalued by them, that they joyned these two under the same curse. Cursed is he, that breeds hogs, and cursed is he who teacheth his son Grecian Wisdom a.

a Bava Kama, fol. 82. 2.

II. Jewish Wisdom: that of the Scribes and Pharisees, who crucified Christ, vers. 8.

III. The Wisdom of the Gospel, vers. 7.

IV. The Wisdom τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου, of this World: distinguished, as it seems, from the rest, where This World, is to be taken in that sense, as העולם הזה is, as it is opposed to העולם הבא The world to come. And he speaks of the last and highest Wisdom, which, who is there, that could obtain ἐν αἰῶνι τούτῳ, In this World, before the revelation of the Gospel in the coming of Christ, which was Αἰὼν ὁ μέλλων, The World to come? And this is that the Apostle does, namely, to shew, that the highest, yea, the soundest Wisdom of the Ages before going was not in any manner to be compared with the brightness of the Evangelick Wisdom.

VERS. IX.

Ἃ ὀφθαλμὸς οὐκ εἶδε, &c. Which eye hath not seen, &c.

R. Chaia bar Abba saith, R. Jochanan saith, All the Prophets propheſied not but of the days of the Messias, אבל לעולם הבא But as to the world to come, eye hath not seen, O God, besides thee, &c. These words are repeated elsewhere c upon another occasion. Where the Glos, The eyes of the Prophets could not see these things.

b Bab. Sanhedr. fo. 99. 1.

c Schabb. f. 63. 1

You see here the Rabbin distinguishes between the Days of Messiah, and the World to come; which is sometimes done by others: but they are very commonly confounded. And you see upon what reason, yea upon what necessity he was driven to this distinction; namely, that he supposed somethings laid up for those that waited for God, which the eyes of the Prophets never saw. But, saith he, the Prophets saw the good things of the days of the Messiah; therefore they are laid up for the world to come, after the days of the Messiah. Rabbin, learn from Paul, that the revelation under the Gospel is far more bright, than the Prophets ever attained to.

CHAP. III.

VERS. I.

Ὡς νηπίοις. As unto babes.

THE Hebrews would say תינוקות little children (from a word that signifies to give suck) Hence that saying is very common, תינוקות של בית רבן Children in School. d Rabh said to Rabh Samuel bar Shillah (the Schoolmaster;) Take a child of six years of age, and give him food as you would do an Ox. The Glos is, Feed him with the Law, as you feed an Ox, which you fatten. יהא אדם מתגלגל עם בנו עד יב' שנה Let a man deal gently with his son to his twelfth year. The Glos there, If he refuse to learn, let him deal gently with him, and with fair words, &c.

VERS.

VERS. XII.

Ξύλα, χόρτον, καλάμην· Wood, hay, ſtubble.

THAT the Apoſtle is ſpeaking of Doctrines is plain by the Context.

I. He ſuppoſeth theſe builders, although they built not ſo well, yet to have ſet themſelves upon that work with no ill mind, verſ. 15. He himſelf ſhall be ſaved.

II. By the ſeveral kinds of theſe things, Gold, Silver, Wood, Hay, Stubble, we may underſtand not only the different manner of teaching, but even the different kinds of Doctrines taught. For if they had all propounded the ſame Truth and Doctrine, it had been no great matter, if they had not all declared it in the ſame manner. But while ſome produce Gold, Silver, Wood, precious, pure, ſound Doctrine, others bring Hay, Stubble, Doctrine that is vile, trifling, and of no value or ſolidity; the very Doctrines were different, and ſome were ſuch as could endure the trial of the fire, and others, which could not.

III. There were ſome who ſcattered grains of Judaiſm among the people: but this they did not, as profeſſedly oppoſing the Goſpel, but out of ignorance, and becauſe they did not as yet ſufficiently underſtand the ſimplicity of the Goſpel. Paul calls theſe and ſuch like Doctrines Hay and Stubble, to be conſumed by fire: Yet while they in the mean time who had taught ſuch things, might eſcape, becauſe they oppoſed not the Truth out of malice, but out of ignorance had broached Falſhood.

VERS. XIII.

Ἡ γὰρ ἡμέρα δηλώσει, ὅτι ἐν πυρὶ ἀποκαλύπτεται. For the day ſhall declare it, becauſe it is revealed by fire.

TWO things ſhall diſcover every mans work, The Day, and The Fire. Both which you may not underſtand amiſs of the Word of God manifeſting and proving all things. For the light of the Goſpel is very frequently called the Day, and the Law of God called Fire, Deut. XXXIII. 2.

But I had rather in this place underſtand by the Day, the day of the Lord that was ſhortly coming, and by Fire the fire of Divine indignation to be poured out upon the Jewiſh Nation. And I am the more inclined to this interpretation, becauſe there is ſo frequent remembrance of that Day and Fire in the Holy Scriptures.

When therefore there were ſome, who built Judaiſm upon the Goſpel foundation, and that out of unſkilfulneſs, and ignorance, of the ſimplicity of the Goſpel, (for of ſuch the Apoſtle here ſpeaks;) he foretels and threatens, that the Day and Fire of the Lord is coming upon the Jews: by which the folly and inconſiſtency of that ſuperſtructure would not only be revealed, but that very ſuperſtructure it ſelf ſhould periſh.

This place being taken in this ſenſe, all the things the Apoſtle ſpeaks in this paſſage become plain. That Fire ſhall prove Doctrines, whether they are Evangelical, or no. If any ones Work or Doctrine will endure the trial of that Fire, he ſhall receive the reward of ſound Doctrine: if the Doctrine of any will not endure it, but be conſumed, he ſhall receive the damage of his pains and labour loſt, but he himſelf ſhall be ſaved, but this, as he is proved by Fire.

Would you have a parallel of a Doctrine and building of ſtraw, concerning which Paul ſpeaks? The e Rabbins deliver לא יסר אדם את ביתו בסיד Let no man plaiſter his houſe with lime, ואם ערב בו חול או תבן מותר But if he mix ſand and ſtraw with lime, it is allowed. The Tradition reſpects the times after the Deſtruction of the Temple, when by reaſon of the mourning for that fatal overthrow, it was not permitted them to whiten their Walls, but to let them be overrun with blackneſs, as a Colour fit for mourners. Therefore it was not permitted to whiten the Walls with lime only, leſt they ſhould look too bright; but if they were mixed with ſand and ſtraw, whereby the whitneſs of the lime might be darkned, then it was permitted. A Doctrine of ſtraw truly! from a ſuperſtruction of ſtraw, and that yields a very fit image of thoſe Jewiſh Doctrines, of which the Apoſtle ſpeaks, clouding the brightneſs of the Goſpel.

VERS. VI.

Μετεσχημάτισα εἰς ἐμαυτὸν καὶ Ἀπολλώ· I have in a figure transferred to my self and to Apollo.

AND why not to himself and Cephas? From this very place, if it may not elsewhere be proved, it appears Peter taught not at Corinth. The Apostle treats purposely of their principal Ministers, and it is past belief, that he would pass by Peter, if Peter had preached among them.

When he saith, That he transferred these things in a figure to himself and Apollo, he understands not the changing of names and persons; nor doth he transfer the names of others into his person, and Apollo's, that he might not reprove any by name; (which sense is commonly fixed to this place,) but the figure, which he useth, is this; namely, while he speaks of that preaching of the Gospel, which was plain, and rude, and very distant from humane wisdom; and on the contrary, of that preaching which was elegant, well studied, and more profound; these things, saith he, I have transferred in this Scheme to my self, and Apollo, the former way of preaching to my self, the latter to Apollo.

VERS. VIII.

Ἤδη κεκορεσμένοι ἐστε, &c. Now ye are full, &c.

A Bitter taunt: chastizing the boasting of the Corinthians, who had forgot from whom they had first received those Evangelical privileges, concerning which they now prided themselves. They were enriched with spiritual gifts; They reigned themselves being Judges, in the very top of the dignity and happiness of the Gospel; and that without us, saith the Apostle, as though ye owed nothing to us for those priviliges: and, O! would to God ye did reign; and that it went so happily and well with you indeed, that we also might reign with you, and that we might partake of some happiness in this your promotion, and might be of some account among you.

VERS. I.

Ὥστε γυναῖκά τινα τοῦ πατρὸς ἔχειν· That one should have his Fathers wife.

NOT his own Mother, but the wife of his Father, who was still alive, as it seems from the second Epistle to these Corinthians, Chap. VII. 12. I wrote to you, not in respect of him, that had done the wrong, nor in respect of him, that suffered the wrong. He that had done the wrong, was plainly this incestuous person; for it will scarcely be denied, but that the Apostle there speaks of that business. And who is he that suffered the wrong? The Father without doubt; now certainly alive and not deceased: for it would scarcely have been said of him, if dead, that he suffered wrong by this wicked action.

VERS. II.

Καὶ ὑμεῖς πεφυσιωμένοι ἐστε. And ye are puffed up.

IT is a wonder indeed, that they mourned not; but it is more wonderful that they should be puffed up and glory in such a wickedness, as is shewn at vers. 6. But whence proceeded so foolish and wicked a boasting?

I. Perhaps from the affectation of a party, and the bitterness of their contentions; the adverse party triumphing against that party in which happened so grievous a fall.

II. Perhaps by an ill conceit of the liberty of the Goſpel, they triumphed in this thing, as though the Goſpel had brought in ſuch a liberty againſt the Law.

III. Or it may ſeem, that the Father of the inceſtuous perſon was not a Chriſtian, but either a Heathen, or an unbelieving Jew, but the Mother converted to Chriſtianity, and ſo the Son alſo. And hence might happen the departing of the wife from the unbelieving huſband, and her marrying with the believing ſon. Thence might the glorying of the Corinthians proceed, not from this meerly, that the ſon had married his mother in Law, (for to think that, would be ridiculous) but that the Goſpel had ſo prevailed, as to ſeparate even a wife from an unbelieving huſband.

Καὶ οὐχὶ μᾶλλον ἐπενθήσατε ἵνα ἄρθῇ· And have not rather mourned, that he ſhould be taken away.

It was your Duty, O ye Corinthians, to have beſeeched God with prayers and faſtings, to take away from among you ſo wicked a man, if ſo be he repented not: but you are puffed up, &c. Πενθεῖν, To mourn, in this place ſeems to extend to the ſenſe of תענית Faſting, among the Hebrews.

[a] Sanhedr. cap. 7. hal. 4.

Theſe a are to be ſtoned; הבא על אמו ועל אשת האב He that lies with his mother, or with the wife of his father. He that lies with his mother is (doubly) guilty, both becauſe ſhe is his mother, and becauſe ſhe is his fathers wife. He that lies with the wife of his father, is (doubly) guilty, both becauſe ſhe is the wife of his father, and becauſe ſhe is the wife of another: whether his father be living, or dead, and whether ſhe be the wife of his father by eſpouſal, or marriage. See alſo Maimonides b. And elſewhere this very ſin is adjudged to cutting off: לו' כריתות תורה There c are thirty ſix cuttings off in the Law (or thirty ſix, who are to be cut off) הבא על האם ועל אשת אב He that lies with his mother, or with the wife of his father, &c.

[b] In Iſſure Biah, cap. 1. & 2.
[c] Cheritbuth, cap. 1. hal. 1.

It may indeed ſeem a wonder, that one and the ſame crime ſhould be adjudged to ſtoning, which was inflicted by the Sanhedrin; and, to cutting off, which was by the hand of God. But hear the Gloſſer, All thoſe cuttings off, ſaith he, are concerning things done preſumptuouſly, בלא התראה where there was no previous admonition, or proteſtation; but if there were previous admonition, ſome of them are adjudged to ſtrangling, and ſome to ſtoning. But if theſe things are done out of ignorance, a ſacrifice for ſin is required.

כרת Cutting off, was by the immediate hand of God, which this impious perſon had deſerved in the higheſt degree: for that this wicked act was done by him out of ignorance, it would be ridiculous to imagine.

VERS. V.

Παραδοῦναι τῷ Σατανᾷ. To deliver to Satan.

SECT.

A Few things concerning Excommunication among the Jews. Whether to excommunicate, and to deliver to Satan among them were the ſame.

BEing to ſpeak of Excommunication among the Jews, we muſt firſt ſpeak a little concerning נויפרה Reproof, which with the Babylonian Writers was the ſame with excommunication. אין נויפה פחות מז' ימים d Reproof, or admonition, is not leſs than for ſeven days: as it is ſaid, If her Father ſpit in her face, ſhall ſhe not be aſhamed ſeven days? (Numb. XII. 12.) Rabbi Chaſda ſaith, נדוי שלנו נויפה שלהן Our Excommunication (in Babylon) is like their Reproof (in the Land of Iſrael.)

[d] Bab. Moed Katon, fol. 16. 1

Theſe Examples are there produced. R. Simeon the ſon of Rabbi (Judah) and Bar Kaphra ſat reading, and when the place which they read was too hard, R. Simeon ſaid to Bar Kaphra, We have need of Rabbi for an Interpreter here. To whom Bar Kaphra, And what can Rabbi ſay in this matter? R. Simeon went away, and told this to his Father, who thereupon was angry. Bar Kaphra came to viſit him. He ſaid to him, O Bar Kaphra, I know you not. He knew what he meant, נהג נויפתא Therefore he underwent Reproof thirty days. And again, Rabbi ſometime commanded, that the Maſters teach not their Scholars in the ſtreets; applying thoſe words myſtically hither, The compaſs of thy thighs are like Jewels (Cant. VII. 1.) As the Thighs are in ſecret, ſo the words of the Law are in ſecret. R. Chaiia (ר' חייא) came forth, and taught the two ſons of his brother in the ſtreet, that is, Rabh, and Bar bar Channah. Rabbi heard this, and was angry. R. Chaiia came to viſit him. He ſaith to him עייא O Aija who ſhall read to thee in the ſtreet? (The Gloſs there, He called him עייא Aija in contempt: Who ſhall read to thee in the ſtreet, is as much, as if he had ſaid, Be gon hence) He knew why he uttered ſuch words againſt him. Therefore he took נויפה The Reproof for thirty days. R. Aſher

R. Asher sticks in this business, why Bar Kaphra, and R. Chaiia submitted themselves thirty days to that Reproof, when it extended not it self beyond seven days: concerning which let the Reader see, if he be at leisure, what he discourseth.

The difference between נזיפה Reproof, and נידוי Excommunication, was this.

I. That Reproof, or Correption had not need of absolution; Excommunication had.

II. Although he who was struck with such Reproof kept himself within doors, and went not abroad, as a man ashamed; yet others abstained not from his company. Before him who had struck him with that Thunder, he appeared not, nor conversed in public, yet any one might resort to him at home. So R. Chaiia is said to have taught Rabh at home those thirty days.

Reproof, נזיפה say the Masters, is, when some eminent man chides another, saying, How impudent is N. or something of that nature. Now the Condition of a man thus chidden, or reproved, is this. He hides himself, and keeps himself at home, as one ashamed, that he may not see his face, who shamed him, nor does he stand before him with his head uncovered. He abates also of his laughter, and of his words, and of his business, and makes himself sad before those that see him. But there is no need for him to withdraw himself from men, but he may eat and drink with them, and salute them. Nor needs he to please him, that reproved him, nor needs he absolution. But when he hath taken the Reproof upon him, and the time is expired, he is free. Compare the words of the Apostle, 1 Tim. V. 1. Πρεσβυτέρῳ μὴ ἐπιπλήξῃς, &c. Rebuke not an Elder, &c. with this passage.

And now to pass to Excommunication it self.

I. Excommunication was devised and found out by the Jews, if my eyes see any thing, to be a punishment of those faults, for which there was no other punishment decreed, either in the Holy Scriptures, or in the Traditions. I believe he scarcely was excommunicated among the Jews, for whose offence the punishment either of Cutting off, or of Death, or of Whipping, or of Restitution of double, or fourfold, &c. was openly appointed either by the Law, or by the Fathers of the Traditions. But in those things, concerning which there was no such appointment of punishment, what was to be done? There were faults worthy of punishment, but neither Law nor Scribes assign them any of all those punishments which were named: but certainly provision ought to be made, that such things be not done without punishment. Hence Excommunication was invented, as the general punishment of such faults. The thing it self (if I mistake not) speaks this, if we well weigh those things for which Excommunication was inflicted.

II. The causes or reasons of Excommunication were generally two: namely לממונא For mony; and לאפיקורסיא For Epicurism. This distinction we meet with in a place e in their Talmud, where they treat at large of Excommunication, and whence we have many things concerning this subject.

e Bab. Mocd Katon, fol. 16. 1.

Excommunication for mony was not, when one owing another mony did not pay it; for an Action at Law laid against him: but when he was summoned into Court, and adjudged by the Bench to pay it, and yet paid it not.

What אפיקורסיא Epicurism means, we may learn from the definition of Epicurus. f Epicurus is he, that despiseth the words of God. Epicurus is he that despiseth the Scholars of the wise Men. The Aruch saith thus, אפקר is he that speaks with an ill tongue: he is Epicurus. Among the Talmudists אפקר denotes one that is presumptuous, dissolute, a man governed by no rule. Thence אפיקורוס Epicurus, Lawless, dissolute, not circumscribed within the Laws of the Scribes. פקרו מינים is rendred by the Gloss העיזו פניהם g The Hereticks have hardned their faces. מתפקר בשליחא דרבי דינא The Gloss renders it, h He reproacheth the Messenger of the Sanhedrin.

f Sanhedr. fol. 99. 2.

g Megill. fol. 25. 2.

h Mocd Katon, fol. 16. 1.

More particularly. i Rambam of blessed memory saith, For twenty four causes they Excommunicate either man or woman; and these are they that are to be Excommunicated.

i Orach Chaim cap. 359.

1. He that vilifies a wise Man, yea after his death.
2. He that vilifies the Messenger of the Sanhedrin.
3. He who calls his companion, Servant.
4. He that sets at nought one word of the Scribes. There is no need to say, he that sets at nought the Law.
5. Who appears not at the day set him by the Bench.
6. Who submits not to the judgment of the Bench, they excommunicate him, till he do submit.
7. Who keeps any hurtful thing; for example, a fierce Dog, or a broken Ladder, they excommunicate him, till he put it away.
8. Who sells his farm to a Heathen, they excommunicate him, until he take upon himself all the wrong, which may thence come to an Israelite his neighbour.
9. Who gives evidence against an Israelite before a Heathen Tribunal; and by that Evidence wracks mony from him: they excommunicate him until he pay it back again.

10. A Butcher Prieſt, who divides not a portion to the other Prieſt, they excommunicate him, until he gives it.

11. Who profaneth the ſecond Feaſt day of the Captivity, although it be according to cuſtom. Of this day ſee Maimonides l.

l In Kiddush Hodsh, cap. 5.

12. Who doth any ſervile work on the Paſſover Eve afternoon.

13. Who mentioneth the name of God in vain, either in an Oath, or in Words.

14. Who compels the people to eat the holy things out of the bounds.

15. Who compels the people to prophane the Name of God.

16. Who intercalates the year, or months without the Land of Iſrael.

17. Who lays a ſtumbling block before the blind.

18. Who hinders the people from performing the precept.

19. The Butcher who offers a torn beaſt.

20. The Butcher who ſheweth not his knife to a wiſe Man, to be approved of.

21. Who hardens himſelf againſt knowledge.

22. Who hath put away his wife, and yet hath partnerſhip, and dealing with her.

23. A wiſe Man, that lies under an ill fame.

24. Who excommunicates him, that deſerves not excommunication. Theſe you have likewiſe in the Learned Buxtorph his Talmudick Lexicon in the word נדוי Niddui.

By how much the more carefully I look upon the cauſes and reaſons of Excommunication, ſo much the more I perſiſt in my opinion, that Excommunication was invented as a punishment for thoſe faults, for which no kind of puniſhment was decreed, either by the Law or by any Traditional Canons. Conſider them ſingly, and perhaps you will be of my opinion.

III. He againſt whom they were to proceed by Excommunication, was firſt cited, and a day ſet him wherein to appear, by a Meſſenger ſent him by the Bench, which certified him of the day, and of the perſons before whom he was to appear. מתרין שני וחמישי ושני m They appoint him the ſecond day of the week (on which day they ſit in the Court, and aſſemble in the Synagogue) and the fifth day of the week (on which day alſo there is an Aſſembly, and a Seſſion) and the ſecond of the week following. If he appeared not on the day firſt appointed, they look for him unto the day that was ſecondly appointed, and thirdly appointed. And this was when the caſe was about mony; אבל לאפיקורסותא לאלתר But if it were for Epicuriſm (if he made not his appearance on the firſt day appointed) they Excommunicate him without delay.

m Moed Katon, fol 16. 1.

IV. They firſt ſtruck him with ſimple Excommunication, which they call נידוי Niddui, in which there was not abſolute curſing. נידוי סתם אין בו קללה n In Niddui was not abſolute curſing. For they ſaid only יהא נידוי Let N. be under Excommunication.

n Piske הראש in Moed Katon, ſect. 55.

V. This Excommunication was for thirty days. אין נידוי פחות משלשים o Excommunication (Niddui) was not leſs than for thirty days. As it is ſaid, Until a month, until the fleſh come out of your noſtrils, Numb. XI. 20. But if the Excommunicated perſon appeaſed thoſe that Excommunicated him within that time, they abſolve him forthwith.

o Hieroſ. Moed Katon, fol. 81. 3

VI. But if he perſiſted in his perverſneſs, the thirty days being ended, they Excommunicate him again, מנדין ומקללין אותו Adding alſo a curſe. And this ſecond Excommunication they call שמתא Shammatha. מנין דמשמתינן p Whence is it, that we Shammatize? In that it is written, Curſe ye Meroz. Judg. V. 23. Rabbenu Aſher upon the place q, Barak Shammatized Meroz, as it is written, Curſe ye Meroz, which is both נידוי Excommunication, and קללה Curſing: for in the word ארור is both Excommunication and Curſing.

p Bab. Moed Katon, in the place before. q Fol. 34. 2.

VII. They publiſhed his offence in the Synagogue. פרטין חטאיה בציבורא r We particularly publiſh his crime in the Synagogue. The Gloſs is, They ſaid to his fellow Citizens, For this and this cauſe we Shammatize him.

r Moed Katon, in the place before.

VIII. If he perſiſt ſtill for theſe thirty days in his perverſneſs, מחרימין אותו They Anathematized him. מנדין ושונין לאחר ל' ומחרימין לאחר ס' They Excommunicate him, and after thirty days they again Excommunicate (Shammatize) him, and after ſixty they Anathematize. Rabbenu Aſher s ſaith, They Anathematize, ſaying, Let him be under Anathema. And this much more heavy, than either Niddui, or Shammatha. For in this is both Excommunication, and Curſing, and the forbidding the uſe of any men, unleſs in thoſe things only, which belong to the ſuſtaining of life. And they Anathematize not, but when a man hath hardened himſelf againſt the Bench once and again.

s In the place above.

IX. They give the reaſon of theſe proceedings in Moed Katon t in theſe words. Whence is it, that they ſend a meſſenger to him from the Court, (מבר" From the houſe of judgment?) Becauſe it is written, And Moſes ſent to Dathan, and Abiram.

t In the place alledged.

Whence is it, that they ſummon him to judgment? Becauſe it is written, And Moſes ſaid to Korah, Be thou and all thy company preſent.

Whence

Whence is it, that they cite him before some great and eminent man? Because it is written, Before the Lord.

Whence is it, that it is before N. or such a man? Because it is written, Thou and they and Aaron.

Whence is it, that they appoynt them a set time of Appearance? Because it is written, Be ye present to morrow.

Whence is it, that it is from time to time? Because it is written, There they called Pharaoh King of Egypt but a noise, he passed the time appoynted. (Jerm. XLVI. 17.)

Whence is it, that they Shammatize? Because it is written, Curse ye Meroz.

Whence is it, that they Anathematize? Because it is written, Curse ye.

Whence is it, that he is cursed, that eats and drinks with him, and stands within four cubits of him? Because it is written, ישביא The inhabitants thereof, as one would say, Sedentes ejus, or those that sit with her, Judg. V. 23.

Whence is it, that they publish his crimes in the Synagogue? Because it is written, Because they came not to the help of the Lord.

Whence is it, that they confiscate his goods? Because it is written, whosoever comes not within three days, according to the Councel of the Princes and Elders, all his substance shall be forfeited, Ezra, X. 8.

Whence is it, that we contend with him, and curse him, and strike him, and pull off his hair, and abjure him? Because it is written, And I contended with them, and cursed them, and struck some of them, and pulled off their hair, Nehem. XIII. 25.

Whence is it, that we tye and bind him? (The Gloss is, His hands and feet, and to a pillar to be whipped) Because it is written, Either to death or banishment, or confiscation of goods, or imprisonment, Ezr. VII. 26.

You see excommunication among the Jews, drawn out by their own pensil, from head to foot. And now whether this, themselves being Judges, were delivering into the hands of Satan, is matter of further enquiry, and more obscure inquiry too. Any such saying of Excommunication does not at all occur in terms, and whether it occur in sense, let the Reader judge from those things, that are spoken of the condition of the person excommunicate.

I. זה דין המנודה u This is the condition of a person excommunicate. They eat not nor drink with him, nor sit within four cubits of him, (his Wife, and Children, and Servants being excepted, to whom it was permitted to sit by him) when they give thanks (at meat) they joyn him not in the thanks, nor admit him to any thing, which wants the Ten men. But any may talk with him, and he hires workmen, and he is hird himself for a workman.

u Pisk. דראש in Moed Katon, cap. 3.

II. As to those things which respect Religion.

First, Persons excommunicate went to the Temple, as well as others. x All that go into the Temple, according to the custom, go in the right hand way, and go about, and go out the left hand way, except him to whom any thing happens, who walked about to the left hand.

x Middoth, c. 2. hal. 2.

Being asked, What is the matter with you that you go about to the left, he answered, Because I am excommunicate, (שאני מנודה) To whom the other replyed, He that dwells in this house, put it into thy heart, to hearken to the words of thy companions.

Secondly, y It is a Tradition. מנודה שונה ושונים לו He that is excommunicate expounds the Traditions, and they expound to him. He that is Anathematized expounds not to others, nor do they expound to him, but he expounds by himself, that he forget not his learning. And again, z It is permitted the Excommunicate person to deal in the Law. But to the person Anathematized it is forbidden. But he expounds by himself.

y Orach Chaijim, in the place before.

z Pisk. דראש in the place above, Art. 51.

Thirdly, he that turns over the Talmudical Authors shall very often observe, that a person Excommunicate, and he that mourns for the dead, are subject to the same conditions in very many things: yea the Mourner to worse conditions.

a The Mourner and the Person Excommunicate are forbidden to have their hair cut. The Mourner is bound to vail his head, the Excommunicate not. The Mourner on the first day is deprived of his Philacteries: The Excommunicate not. The Mourner is forbidden salutation: To the Excommunicate it is permitted: much more is it lawful to talk with him. The Mourner is forbid to imploy himself in the Law: To the Excommunicate it is permitted. But the Person Anathematized may not converse in the Law: but he expounds it to himself, and he makes himself a little tent for his food. The Mourner is bound to the rending of his garment; the Excommunicate not. The Mourner is forbid to do any work: to the Excommunicate it is allowed. The Mourner is forbid to wash himself, to the Excommunicate it is allowed. The Mourner putteth not on Sandals; the Excommunicate puts them on. The Mourner lies not with his wife, the Excommunicate lies with his, &c.

a Pisk. Haroth, in the place above, Art. 51.

From what hath been said it seems, that it may be concluded on one part, that Excommunication among the Jews scarcely sounded the same with Delivering to Satan: and there are some reasons also, by which it seems it may be concluded in like manner, that Delivering to Satan here in the Apostle, doth not sound the same with Excommunication.

cation. Be it granted, that he that is Excommunicated and caſt out of the Church, is rejected alſo by God, and is indeed delivered into the hands of Satan: this is not that which is our task at preſent to conſider; but whether Paul, by his, let him be delivered to Satan, or the Corinthians by that expreſſion, underſtood Excommunication. We embrace the negative for theſe reaſons.

I. Becauſe no reaſon can be rendred, why the Apoſtle, rejecting the vulgar and moſt known word Excommunication, ſhould fly to another that was very unknown, very obſcure.

II. The act of this wicked wretch was above Excommunication. And it was a ſmall matter for ſuch an impious man to be excommunicated. He deſerved death, as we have obſerved, two or three times over. And it was more agreeable to that extraordinary wickedneſs, that it ſhould have ſome more extraordinary puniſhment inflicted on it, then that very common one, of Excomunication.

III. Why ſhould the Apoſtle uſe ſuch earneſt councel, and exhortation to excite the Church to excommunicate one that ſo deſerved Excommunication? Was Excommunition a thing ſo difficult to be obtained among them? What need was there of the preſence of St. Pauls Spirit in a thing any Miniſters of the Church were empowred to do? What need was there of ſuch ſolemn determination (Ἤδη κέκρικα, I have determined already) in a thing, concerning which every one would conteſs that he deſerved Excommunication?

IV. To deliver to Satan was εἰς ὄλεθρον σαρκὸς, For deſtruction of the fleſh. But what could Excommunication avail to that in a man ſworn upon his luſts? You will ſay, Perhaps it might come to paſs, that it might have ſuch an effect. But I reply, when the Apoſtle ſaith, To the deſtruction of the fleſh, he ſpeaks not of a fortuitous effect, but of a certain or undoubted one.

Theſe are the reaſons, to omit others, whereby we are led to be of their opinion, who interpret the place of a miraculous action, namely, of the real delivery of this perſon into the hands and power of Satan, to be ſcourged by him, and tormented by him with diſeaſes, tortures and affrightments. And the Phraſes uſed by the Apoſtle about this matter, and the circumſtances of the thing it ſelf do very well accord hereunto.

Ἤδη κέκρικα ὡς παρών. I have judged already, as though I were preſent.

I. To deliver to Satan is never mentioned in Scripture, but when there was an Apoſtolic power, as here, and 1 Tim. I. 20. And that Apoſtolic power of ſtriking obſtinate perſons miraculouſly, or wicked ſinners with any puniſhment, was not uſually put forth by them, unleſs in the preſence of the parties, as by Peter againſt Ananias and Sapphyra, and by Paul againſt Elymas, and likewiſe, as it is very probable, againſt Hymeneus and Alexander: yet he, being now a great way diſtant, and remote, I have judged, ſaith he, and decreed to exerciſe at a diſtance this my power againſt this wicked man, as though I were preſent, and before his face; which indeed was not ordinarily done, but this was not an ordinary wickedneſs.

II. To this ſenſe is that clauſe to be rendred, καὶ τῷ πνεύματι μου, and my Spirit, that is, my Apoſtolical Spirit, or the gift of the Spirit conferred upon me. So the Spirit of Elias dwelt upon Eliſha, 2 Kings II. 15. that is, The Prophetical Spirit of Elias.

III. And compare that clauſe, Ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, In the name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, with the ſame manner of ſpeech, Act. III. 6. In the name of Jeſus Chriſt of Nazareth, riſe up and walk: namely, when a miracle was to be done. And alſo, IV. The word Δυνάμις, Power, is very uſually in the Goſpel referred to miracles; it is very rarely, if at all, uſed for the power of Diſcipline.

Let us conclude our diſcourſe of Excommunication among the Jews with a Tradition received among them which ſee if you pleaſe. חויא רבנן דטרקידה ליה ליח אסותא

b Schab. fol. 110. 1. b If the Rabbins Serpent bite any one, there is no cure for him. Bar Kaſha in Pumbeditha was bitten by the Rabbins Serpent, and there was no cure for him. The Gloſs is, Becauſe he had tranſgreſſed againſt the Excommunication of the wiſe men, therefore when he was bitten by a Serpent, there was no healing for him.

VERS.

VERS. IX.

Ἔγραψα ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ ἐπιστολῇ. I wrote to you in an Epistle.

IN an Epistle? What?

I. The Aorist Ἔγραψα, may be rendred, I had written, without any wrong to Grammar. I had written in this Epistle, Accompany not, &c. before the report of this wickedness came to me: but now hearing it, I sharpen my pen the more, and I bind you with a straighter prohibition, namely, That ye do not eat with such.

II. The Apostle had sent Timothy to the Corinthians before he wrote this Epistle, Chap. IV. 17. and it is very likely, that he sent some Epistle by him, in which he had so written. But Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus coming to the Apostle, and laying open the whole state of the Church of Corinth to him, and bringing him Letters and Questions from the Church, when as yet, as they knew, Timothy was not arrived at Corinth; he suppresses that Epistle, and comprizes it in this. And if you say, that is lost, you will say true in some respect, because the exact copy of that Epistle came not unto us: and you will not say true in another respect, because in this Epistle we have all things comprized in that, and much more besides.

Μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι. Not to company.

I. It is plain the Apostle riseth higher here, and obligeth them with a straiter admonition, than he had done before. He had written to them before Μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι: Not to company with them; now he writes, Μὴ συνεσθίειν. Not to eat with them.

II. It is plain also, that he aims his words at prophane Christians, not at Heathens, both now, and when he writ before. For there were among the Christians converted from Heathenism some without doubt, whose Parents, or Children, or Kinsmen, not yet converted, wallowed in Idolatry, Covetousness, and Whoredoms. But now a Christian was not to forget all these alliances. Nor was all familiarity and respect towards them to be cast away.

III. The word συναναμίγνυσθαι denotes, saith Camerarius, Necessitudinem aliquam interiorem, some more intimate friendship, or Alliances: which indeed in some respect is true, if that more inward friendship be distinguished into that which is more close, and less close Συναναμιξις is to be reckoned that conversation and friendship, which a Jew might enter into with a Jew, and not with a Heathen: according to the rule of which, as being very well known, it scarcely can be coubted, but the Apostle speaks.

I. A Jew might deal and traffic with a Heathen: nevertheless under this, and some other cautions of that nature. לפני אידיהן של עו"ג ג' ימים c Three days before the Festivals of the Heathens, it is forbid to give and receive with them, to lend to or to borrow of them, to restore or to fetch back any thing, &c. I scarcely believe this falls under the signification of the word συναναμίγνυσθαι, accompanying, c Avodah, Zarah, cap. 1.

II. To eat together and at one Table was συναναμίγνυσθαι, to accompany, which certainly appears enough from the strait prohibition of such eating with a Heathen. A Pharisee in Markets and Fairs would have dealing with a common person, but he would not eat with him. So a common person would trade with a Heathen, but he would not eat with him. The Apostle therefore does not oppose συναναμίγνυσθαι accompanying, and συνεσθίειν, Eating together, one against another, but propounds Eating together as a certain degree συναναμίξεως of Companying, or mixing together. For

III. There was, which by common experience may be observed, a much more inward friendship, than such a bare eating, namely, that which is called by the Jews Lawyers שותפות Copartnership in merchandize and traffic, and that which is called by us Deputation: both forbidden a Jew with a Gentile. אסור לאדם שיעשה שותפות בגוי d It is forbidden a man to enter into Co partnership with a Heathen: lest happly he must sometime swear, and is compelled to swear by his Idol. And Maimonides, אין הגוי נעשה שליח e A Heathen is not made a Messenger, or a Deputy, for any thing. Nor is an Israelite made a Deputy for a Heathen.

IV. Friendship was yet more close by contract of marriage and affinity: this the LXX call Συγκατάμιξις Jos. XXIII. 12.

And now it is not very hard to fathom the sense of the Apostle, which take in this Paraphrase. "I wrote you in an Epistle, that ye mingle not with Fornicators in any more "inward familiarity or friendship: which I understood not so much of Heathen Fornicators, as of those who are called Brethren or Christians. But now I write the "same thing, that ye mingle not in any such familiarity with them or others of that "stamp,

" ſtamp, as covetous, or Idolaters: no, not in that familiarity, that is moſt remote,
" namely, eating with ſuch a man at the ſame Table.

VERS. XII.

Τί γὰρ μοι καὶ τοὺς ἔξω κρίνειν; What have I to do to judge them that are without?

HERE perhaps one may ſtick at the Verſion and ſenſe commonly received. Beza reads Quid mea intereſt? What doth it concern me? The French, Qu'ay-je a faire de juger? What have I to do to judge? The Italian, Che appartienni à me giudicare? What doth it belong to me to judge? I know well enough the Phraſe τί μοι very frequently occurs in this ſenſe: but here we may upon good ground enquire, if it concerns thee not, O Bleſſed Apoſtle, to judge them that are without, why didſt thou judge Elymas with blindneſs? Why Hymeneus and Alexander by delivering them into the hands of Satan, when they were now Apoſtates, and no other than ſuch as were without?

What therefore if the words be rendred to this ſenſe, For why is power granted me to judge concerning them alſo that are without? That is, by my Apoſtolic authority, to ſtrike even a Heathen with ſome divine plague, if he be uncurably an Enemy, and Blaſphemer of the Goſpel; which I did to Elymas, &c. Why is this granted me, but to cut off ſuch as are paſt cure? And do not you alſo within your Sphere judge thoſe, who are within? But now thoſe that are without, which I thus judge and ſmite, God judgeth, and ſmites, and by his vengeance gives his ſuffrage to my cenſure.

Καὶ ἐξαρεῖτε, Therefore put away. In like manner, you alſo, doing what lies in you, may take away this man, and other ſuch wicked perſons by that hand of God. It can not be paſt over without obſerving, that Ἐξαρεῖτε is the future Tenſe, and it is not raſhly to be rendred by another Tenſe. We explain therefore the whole place by this Paraphraſe. " It is given me by God to judge thoſe alſo that are without, and do not " ye judge them that are within? But thoſe that are without, whom I judge, God him-
" ſelf judgeth, and you alſo by the like judgment may take away this wicked perſon
" out of the midſt of you. The LXX in Deut. XVII. 7. ἐξαρεῖς τὸ πονηρὸν ἐξ ὑμῶν αὐτῶν. Thou ſhalt take away the wicked perſon from among you. And elſewhere very frequently.

CHAP. VI.

VERS. I.

Κρίνεσθαι ἐπὶ τῶν ἀδίκων. Go to Law before the unjuſt.

WE cannot here but firſt of all produce the words of Titus the Emperour, thus diſcourſing to the ſeditious, that were beſieged in Jeruſalem; πρῶτον μὲν ὑμῖν ὃ τε χώραν ἔδομεν νέμεσθαι, καὶ βασιλεῖς ὁμοφύλους ὑπεστήσαμεν. Ἔπειτα τοὺς πατρίους νόμους ἐτηρήσαμεν, &c. Firſt, a we have granted you to dwell in your own Country, and have ſet over you Kings of the ſame tribes with your ſelves. Then, we have preſerved your Countries Laws, and have permitted you not only to live by your ſelves, but others alſo, according to your will.

a Joſeph. de bell. lib. 6. cap. 34.

That the Jews had not lived by their own Laws under the Roman Empire, is clearer than to need demonſtration. And the Gemariſts, being witneſſes, Judgment in mony matters, or in things pertaining to this life, was not taken from them before the times of Simeon ben Jochai. b Now I would have you tell me, whether the ſame things were not allowed the Jews converted to Chriſtianity? Let us tak an Example in this Corinthian Church: it conſiſted of Jews and Gentiles now converted. The Jews, while they believed not, had in their Synagouges ג' של בד' The Bench of Three, who judged περὶ τῶν βιωτικῶν, concerning things pertaining to this; and that by the permiſſion of the Roman Empire. Now they were tranſlated into a Chriſtian Synagogue, or Congregation, and with them Gentiles, who believed. Was that denyed them by the Romans in a Chriſtian Congregation, which was granted them in a Synagogue?

b Hieroſ. Sanhedr. fol. 24. 2.

First,

First, There was no Persecution at all as yet, raised against the Christians by the Romans, when the Apostle wrote these things. For not a few years passed before Nero brake forth into that wickedness.

Secondly, The Romans little cared to distinguish between a Judaizing Synagogue of the Jews, and a Christianizing Synagogue of the Jews. And that of Gallio was, as the business was indeed, See ye to it, I will be judge of no such matters, Act. XVIII. 15. It was free for them to judge of names and matters of their Law.

Therefore these Corinthians were worthy of reproof, in whose power it was freely to exercise such judgments among themselves; yet to the scandal of the Gospel, and the Christian name, betook themselves to Heathen Courts of justice.

VERS. II.

Οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι οἱ ἅγιοι τὸν κόσμον κρινοῦσι; Know ye not that the Saints shall judge the World?

THIS place is wrested to a twofold opinion. By the Fifth Monarchists, into I know not what sense; which I would rather you should ask them, than expect from me. By others into this opinion, That the Saints in the last judgment, shall sit together with Christ, and shall approve his judgment. And to this they bring those words of our Saviour, Mat. XIX. 28. Luke XXII. 30. When the Son of man shall sit upon the throne of his Glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, &c.

I wonder, the verses of so illustrious and notable a Subject as that is which we now handle, and that which is now quoted are, so much strained from their proper and genuine sense. Let me speak it by the leave of the Learned. Let us first weigh the words of our Saviour.

I. There is but small Logical arguing in this manner (if those words were to be taken in that sense, which they would have) You shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve Tribes of Israel, Therefore, all the Saints shall judg the world, as Assessors with Christ in the last judgment. Which harshness they thus smooth over, That c which he said to them, he said to all those that shall imitate them. d Here shall be some eminency of the Apostels above the rest of the Saints. And so very many others.

c Primasius. d Beza.

II. But Judas was present, when these words were uttered by our Saviour: and was not he to be concluded within that number of twelve? But omitting this, there were more also present when he said these words, who had followed him in the regeneration: and if all they, and all the Saints that should be in the whole world, were to be concluded within that priviledge of sitting with Christ upon the Bench, why is the number restrained, only to Twelve? You Twelve, that is, All Saints, shall judge the twelve Tribes of Israel; that is, the whole world, is so thorny a Gloss, that my fingers can by no means touch it.

III. We gave the sense of the words in their place. Namely, by Christ sitting in the Throne of his glory, is not to be understood his Tribunal in the last judgment; but when he should come in the glory of his vengeance, against the Jewish nation: then not the Persons, but the Doctrine of the twelve Apostles, should judge and condemn that most wicked Nation.

And as to the opinion it self concerning the Saints sitting with Christ.

I. Nothing is plainer in the Scripture, than that all shall stand before the judgment seat of Christ, 2 Cor. V. 10. as well the Sheep as the Goats, Mat. XXV. 32. &c. Mention indeed is made of reigning with Christ, but no where of judging with Christ in the day of judgment.

II. How little or nothing doth that sound, The Saints shall approve the judgment of Christ? Are thrones for this to be set up, that those, that sit upon them, should approve the judgment? The very Devils and damned themselves shall not otherwise chuse, but acknowledge his justice.

III. And what, I pray, is this manner of arguing, Saints in the last day shall approve the judgment and sentence of Christ; Therefore ye are able to judge concerning those things, which pertains to this life?

We therefore make no doubt, that the sense of these words, Know ye not that the Saints shall judge the World, most plainly is this, Know ye not that Christians shall be Magistrates, and Judges in the World? Which most clearly appears by these observations.

I. The word Ἅγιοι, Saints, in the verse before, denotes all Christians, as opposed to Infidels, not professing Christianity. But that all these shall judge the world with Christ, the espousers of that opinion will not acknowledg: and then let a reason be given, why the word in this verſe, is to be taken in a different and ſtricter ſenſe, than the ſame word is in the verſe aforegoing.

II. The Apoſtle ſpeaks as of a thing known, and confeſſed: Οὐκ οἴδατε; Know ye not? But whence was this known, or to be known, that Chriſtians ſhould be Magiſtrates, and judges of the world? Moſt eaſily and moſt plainly out of Dan. Chap. VII. 18, 27. Where when the four Heathen Monarchies, which had ſo long ruled the world under their Tyranny, fell: at length the Rule and Dominion and Empire under the whole Heaven was to be tranſlated to the people of the Saints of the moſt. In what ſenſe and in what latitude the word Saints is to be taken, one may learn from a very plain Antitheſis in that Chapter. The Rule, and the Dominion and Empire under the whole Heaven was before belonging to Heathens, but under the reign of Chriſt, it was the Saints, that is, the Chriſtians.

III. This ſenſe agrees very well with the Apoſtles argument: Think it not unlawful to decide among themſelves ſuch differences as ariſe among your ſelves: and by flying to Heathen Tribunals, do not bring a reproach upon the Goſpel: for conſider what is foretold by Daniel, which ye know well enough, namely, that the Saints, that is, the Chriſtians, ſhall hereafter poſſeſs the Dominion and Government of the whole world, as now a long while the Heathens have poſſeſſed and do poſſeſs it. If they ſhall one day be endued with a right of governing, certainly you your ſelves may determine of contentions now.

IV. That which is ſaid by the Apocaliptic, Chap. XX. 4. agrees with the ſenſe of this place. That when Chriſt had bound Satan, that he ſhould no more deceive the Gentiles as he had done before, by Idols, Oracles, &c. Thrones are ſet up, and Judgment is given unto them, who ſet upon them, that is a Power and Authority of judging and ruling, and exerciſing magiſtracy.

VERS. III.

Οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι Ἀγγέλους κρινοῦμεν; Know ye not that we ſhall judge Angels?

HE ſaith not as he did before, The Saints ſhall judge Angels, but We ſhall judge them. By Angels all confeſs Devils to be underſtood. But certainly all Saints, (according to the latitude of that word, in the verſe foregoing) that is, that profeſs Chriſtianity, ſhall not judge Devils. Nor is this judging of Angels to be underſtood in the laſt day. But the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the Miniſters of the Goſpel, himſelf, and others, who by the preaching of the Goſpel, and the name of Chriſt, ſhould ſpoyl the Devils of their Oracles and Idols, ſhould deprive them of their Worſhips, ſhould drive them out of their ſeats, and ſtrip them of their Dominion. Thus would God ſubdue the whole world under Chriſtian Power; that Chriſtian Magiſtrates ſhould judge men, and Miniſters of the Goſpel, Devils: and do not you now judge among your ſelves of ſome trivial differences?

VERS. IV.

Βιωτικὰ μὲν οὖν κριτήρια. Judgments of things pertaining to this life.

HOW judgments among the Jews were diſtinguiſhed into דיני ממונות Pecuniary judgments, and דיני נפשות Capital judgments, every one knows. Whether κριτήρια βιωτικὰ Judgments of things pertaining to this life, and דיני ממונות Pecuniary judgments, are the ſame, we do not diſpute: certainly under Pecuniary judgments, as they are oppoſed to Capital judgments, are compriſed all judgments below Capital. Hence is that which we obſerve elſwhere; Capital judgments were taken away from Iſrael, forty years before the deſtruction of the Temple. e And Pecuniary judgments were taken away from Iſrael in the days of Simeon ben Jochai. f e Hieroſ. Sanhedr. fol. 24. 2.

Τοὺς ἐξουθενημένους ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ. Who are leaſt eſteemed in the Church.

I. To interpret this word here for thoſe that are moſt vile, or moſt contemptible, which ſome verſions do, is certainly ſomewhat hard, and improper. What? Needy perſons, and ſuch as ſeek their living by almes, or hard labour, to make them Judges? Whence ſhould ſuch have skill to judge, or be at leaſure for it? How apt might they be to conſult rather their own gain, than juſt judgment? And who would not deſpiſe ſuch Judges? The word therefore ἐξουθενημένους, leaſt eſteemed, is not to be referred to the loweſt of the common people, but to the loweſt of the order of Judges.

II. That

II. That Order had these degrees in the Jewish Benches: according to the custom and disposition of which, it is very likely, the Apostel speaks.

1. There was the Great Sanhedrin consisting of LXXI Elders.
2. There was the Sanhedrin of Three and Twenty, in Cities of more note.
3. There was בר' של ג' The Bench of Three, in every Synagogue.
4. There was בר' של מומחין The Authorized or Authentic Bench.
5. There was בר' שאינן מומחין The Bench not Authorized; ἐξουθενημένος, not authentic.

III. We distinguish first, between בר' של שלשה The Bench of Three, appointed in every Synagogue, and בר' מומחין The Authorized Bench, however consisting also of three men. For the Bench of Three in every Synagogue, consisted of three Elders, ritely and by imposition of hands preferred to Eldership. But that Bench, which we stile Authorized, consisted not always of men, promoted by ordination to Eldership, but often of men, receiving authority to judge in such or such matters by some special Patent, granted them by the Sanhedrin. It consisted for the most part of חבירים Fellows of the Wise men, men learned indeed and Scholars, but such as were not yet elected into the Order and rank of Elders.

And the duties of the מומחין Mumchin, the Authorized Bench, was different from the Duties and offices of the Trinmviral Bench. This Bench was to judge of mony matters, of wrongs, &c. That, namely the Mumchin, was to judge of the first-born of Cattle to be offered to the Lord, whether they were without spot, or no: g of Womens charms to be worn or not, on the Sabbath: h of the knives of the Butcher-Priests, whether lawful, or not: and of divers things of that nature.

g See Bartenora, fol. 48. 1. h Schab. fol. 57. &c.

IV. When we rendred those words בר' שאינן מומחין The Bench not authentic, we meant it so called, not that the judgments and determinations of that Bench were of no value, but that that Bench received not its authority from the Sanhedrin, but was chosen by them, between whom the controversy depended.

i Rabh Nachman saith, A widdow (if she would sell somewhat of her dowry) hath no need בר' של מומחין Of the Bench of the Authorized; but hath need בר' של הדיוטות Of the Bench of Idiots, or private men. Maimonides l citing these words writes thus, A widdow, whether she became a widdow after marriage, or after Espousal is bound by Oath, and sells a piece of Land of her Husbands (for her maintenance) either in the Court of the Mumchin, the Authorized, or in the Court of those that are not Authorized: Now that Court or Bench is when three men are present, that are honest and skilful in valuing apiece of Land.

i Bava Mtzia, fol. 32. 1.

l In אשות cap. 17.

To this very ordinary Bench among the Jews, the Apostle seems to have respect in this place, and to prescribe the Corinthians for a means of ending their differences, which was easie, common, and void of cost and charges.

The Bench of the Mumchin one may not unfitly call τὸς Αὐξουθενημένος, such as were deputed by Authority; this Bench consisting of those that were not Mumchin, he calls ἐξουθενημένος, not vile or contemptible, but such as were not Authorized.

He exhorteth therefore, that if at any time suits arise among them, concerning pecuniary, or other matters, they by no means run to Heathen Courts, but rather chuse some private men among themselves, as Judges and Arbitrators in such matters.

דיני ממנות בשלשה הדיוטות: m Pecuniary judgments may be by three private men; גולות וחבלות ב' ג' מומחין Judgments of things taken away, and dammages, by the three Authorized. n The precept of pulling off the shoe of the Husbands brother, requires three Judges אפיל שלשתן הדיוטות Although those three be private men. And Rambam upon the place, הדיוטות אינן חכמים Private men, that is, not they that are the Wise men. And Rabbi Solomon, such who were not of the Bench of the Elders in their City: and yet in that case they might be Judges.

m Sanhedr. fol. 3. 1.

n Jevamoth, fol. 101. 1.

They, who were to judge in that affair, were called זקנים Elders, by God, Deut. XXV. 9: The wife of his brother shall come to him in the sight of the Elders, &c. And by the Talmudists they are called דינין Judges; and yet might be private men.

The same Fathers of the Traditions speak many things, of the Plaintiff and Defendant, chusing themselves Judges or Umpires, to decide their differences; and that both parties be bound to submit themselves to their sentence, although it be a form of judging, not altogether according to the form of the Statute. For example sake, Three Judges were required to determine concerning pecuniary suits, and they, by Canon and Statute, such as were made Elders or Presbyters by lawful ordination. But the contending parties might if they would, chuse themselves only one such Arbitrator, or Judge; or three private men, and not Elders. o The Rabbins deliver; Pecuniary judgments are by Three. ואם הורה מומחה וכו' But if he be authorized, he may judge alone. Rabh Nachman saith, As I judge alone of pecuniary matters. And so saith R. Chaija, As I judge alone of Pecuniary matters. Yea, if he be chosen by the contending persons, he may judge alone; for this hath obtained אם קיבלו עליהם If they take upon themselves, or undertook to submit themselves to the judgment of that one

o Sanhedr. fol. 5. 1.

one Elder, or those three private persons; they must submit, and the judgment was good.

[p] Cap. 1. Of this matter both Talmuds treat largely enough in the Tract Sanhedrin [p].

Out of the Babylonian take these passages in the place now alledged. "Rabh Nachman judged, and erred in his judgment. He came therefore to Rabh Joseph, of whom "he heard these words. אם קיבלוך עלי יהו לא חשלם If they have taken upon them (or "undertaken) to stand to thy judgment, thou art not obliged to the payment of the "damage, &c. And a little after, Rabban Simeon ben Gamaliel saith, הדין בשלשה ופשרה "בשנים Judgment is by three, and Arbitration, or Reconciliation, by two. And better "is the force of Reconciliation, than the force of Judgment. For when two Judge, "the parties contending may depart from their sentence. But when two Arbitrators "compose the difference, the Contenders cannot depart from their sentence. The reason of each is, because two Judges were not a just Bench: if therefore they would judge according to their Office, their judgment was of no avail; but if they were particularly chosen by the contending parties for Arbitrators, it stood. For as the Glos, "The "Contending parties cannot depart from the sentence of two, who compose the difference, for they choose them.

[q] Fol. 18. 1. Out of the Jerusalem Talmud this passage. "q R. Abhu sat judging alone at Cesarea. "His Scholars said to him, Did not Rabbi teach us this, That none should judge alone? "He answered them, When ye shall see me sitting alone, and yet shall come to me, ye "are like them, who take a Judge to themselves.

VERS. XII.

Πάντα μοι ἔξεστιν, &c. All things are lawful for me, &c.

THE Apostle now passeth to another subject, and treats underhand against that Plague, that got too much ground in the Church, even the wicked Heresie of the Nicolaitans, which perswaded the eating of things offered to Idols, and Fornication.

I. He that should deny the Sect of the Nicolaitans to have taken its name from Nicolas one of the seven Deacons, would seem certainly to go against all antiquity. And yet the Antients themselves do not sufficiently agree about the matter. Go to the Authors, and you will find them differing, whether the Heresie sprang from an action of Nicolas, or from some saying of his. What if it came from neither? But that the name of the Sect comes from the word ניכולה Nicolah, which signifies, Let us eat. For who knows not, that the Hebrew word נאכל might pass into ניכול among the Chaldees. And when nothing was more antient among those very wicked men, than mutually to exhort one another to eat things offered to Idols, saying to each other, and to others also, as we may gues, ניכולה Let us eat; how very fitly might they be called hence Nicolaitans by the Orthodox? אמרין ניכול בסר [r] Saying, Let us eat flesh.

[r] Targ. in Esa. XXII. 13.

II. Whencesoever the name of the Sect comes, one can scarce say, whether the Sect it self were more to be abominated, or more to be wondred at. For when the Synod of Jerusalem had very lately decreed against eating things offered to Idols, and fornication, Act. XV. it is a matter of astonishment, that presently a sort of men should spring up, and they such as professed the Gospel, who should oppose them with all boldness, and excite others with all industry and endeavour to eat things offered to Idols and to commit fornication.

III. Besides, that those naughty wretches used and abused the pretence of Christian liberty, in the doing of these most wicked actions; they invented arguments, fitted to conceal their wickedness, and to defend their boldness: which the Apostle reflects on in order.

The first is that, Πάντα μοι ἔξεστιν· All things are lawful for me. Which although Paul might very well say concerning himself, All things are lawful for me, as he doth, Chap. X. 23. Yet he seems secretly to whisper their very words, and argumentation: to which he also answereth, But all things are not expedient. But I will not be brought under the power of any.

The second is, The Belly is appointed for meats; Things offered to Idols are meats, Ergo. He answereth, God shall destroy both it and them. Therefore care is especially to be taken of the Soul, not of those things which shall perish. And be it granted, that the belly is for meats; but yet the body is not for fornication, but for the Lord.

VERS.

VERS. XVI.

Ἔσονται γάρ, φησὶν, οἱ δύο εἰς σάρκα μίαν. For two, saith he, shall be one flesh.

AND s they two shall be one flesh. מקום ששניהם בשר אחד namely, in that place, where they make only one flesh. Which is an apter Gloss, than you would take it to be at first sight; and which the Apostle most plainly hath respect to in this place. Those words in Moses regard a just marriage, but the Apostle bends it to carnal copulation with an harlot: whence it is necessary to take the words of Moses in this sense. Therefore a man shall leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife, and they two (only) shall be one flesh. That is, They between themselves only shall be carnally coupled, and not with any other man, or any other woman. s Beresh. Rabb. §. 18.

CHAP. VII.

VERS. III.

Τὴν ὀφειλομένην εὔνοιαν. Due benevolence.

WHAT is wont to be understood here, is known well enough. For although the word εὔνοια includes all mutual offices of living together, you see to what the Apostle applies it, vers. 5: and that not without reason, when the Jewish Masters seriously prescribed many ridiculous things of this matter; sometimes defining the appointed times of lying with the wife, sometimes allowing the Vow of abstinence. Modesty forbids to relate their trifles: I had rather the Reader should go to them himself, than defile our paper with them. Only these few things we cannot but produce, that a reason may in some measure appear, why the Apostle treats of this matter.

a Lying with the wife, concerning which mention is made in the Law, is this: Gentlemen, who neither exercise merchandize, nor any other work, every day. Workmen, twice a week. Scholars of the wise Men, every Sabbath Eve. a Chetub. cap. 5. hal. 6.

VERS. V.

Μὴ ἀποστερεῖτε ἀλλήλους, &c. Defraud you not one another, &c.

HE b that by a Vow constrains his wife from his bed, according to the School of Shammai, let him do it for two weeks; according to the School of Hillel, for one only. Rambam upon the place writes thus, Let him keep this his Vow for one week only. But if he will keep it longer, let him put her away, and give her her dowry. But they say, Let the Scholars go forth to learn the Law, even without the permission of their wives, for thirty days. These indeed are the words of R. Eliezar. But according to the wise Men, it is lawful for two or three years; and the Tradition is according to the wise Men. b Ibid.

You have examples of some that far exceeded these bounds, in the Gemara at the place alledged, which see.

Rambam concludes, (concerning the common people) Know thou, that it is in the power of the wife to retain her husband, from going to Sea, or into the Army, unless it be near at hand; lest she might be defrauded of her due bed. She may also restrain him from passing from one work to another, lest her bed be thereby diminished: the study of the Law only excepted.

VERS. VI.

Οὐ κατ' ἐπιταγήν. Not by commandment.

Συγγνώμη, permission, and Ἐπιταγὴ, Command, do something answer to those words, very usual among the Fathers of the Traditions, רשות and חובה But now they would have marriage enjoyned under a very severe command.

c The man is commanded concerning begetting and multiplying, but not the woman. And when doth the man come under this command? From the age of sixteen or seventeen years. But if he exceeds twenty years without marrying, behold he violates, and renders an affirmative c Maimon. in אשות cap. 15

tive precept vain. But if he be ſtudious in the Law, and converſant in it; and if he fears marriage, leſt the care of providing for his wife hinder his ſtudy in the Law; he may ſtill tarry. Becauſe he that is employed in the precepts, is free from that precept: much more he that converſeth in the ſtudy of the Law. He whoſe mind is always taken up in the ſtudy of the Law, as Ben Azzai, and he that is intent upon it all his days, if he marrieth not a wife, in his hand is no iniquity. But if affection prevail upon him, let him marry a wife, although he have now children, leſt he fall into evil thoughts. d Let not a man refrain himſelf from generation and multiplying, unleſs he hath children already. The Gemara upon this place thus, If he have children, let him refrain himſelf from generation and multiplying; but from marrying a wife, let him not refrain himſelf -------- It is forbid him to be without a wife, becauſe it is ſaid, It is not good for man to be alone. And whoſoever e gives not himſelf to generation and multiplying, is all one with a murtherer ------ He is as though he diminiſhed from the Image of God, &c.

d Jevamoth, cap. 6. hal. 6.

e Ibid. fol. 63. 2

The Apoſtle therefore determines againſt the Jewiſh Schools, that a man is not bound by the Law to marriage, but that he is in his own power in this affair, to contract himſelf, or not, as he finds himſelf continent or not. They ſaid it is a Command, that every one marry a wife; but he ſaith, I have not a Command.

VERS. IX.

Κρεῖσσον γάρ ἐστι γαμῆσαι, ἢ πυροῦσθαι. It is better to marry than to burn.

THAT you may apprehend the ſenſe of the word πυροῦσθαι to burn, hear a ſtory. f Some captive women were brought to Nehardea, and diſpoſed in the houſe, and in the Upper room (עלייתא) of Rabh Amram. אשקלו רתנא מקמי יהו They took away the ladder, or the ſtairs, (that the women might not go down, for they were ſhut up there, until they ſhould be ranſomed) As one of them paſſed by the window, the light of her great beauty ſhined into the houſe. Amram (taken with the womans beauty) ſet up the ſtairs again, which ten men ſcarcely could do (that he might go up to the woman) כי מטא לפלגא דרגא איפשח when he was now got to the middle of the ſtairs, he delayed his feet (and ſtopped, ſtrugling with that evil affection to overcome it) רמא קלא נורא בי עמרם And with a loud voice cried out Fire, Fire, in the houſe of Amram. (The Gloſs ſaith, This he did, that the neighbours flocking thither, he might deſiſt from his purpoſe, and from that affection out of ſhame) The Rabbins run to him, and (ſeeing nothing of fire or flame) ſay, Thou haſt diſgraced us. To whom he replied, It is better that ye be diſgraced in the houſe of Amram in this World, than that ye be diſgraced by me in the World to come. He adjured that evil affection to go out of him, and from thence it went out as a pillar of fire. To which he ſaid, Thou art fire, and I am fleſh, yet for all that I have prevailed againſt thee.

VERS. X.

Οὐκ ἐγώ, ἀλλ' ὁ κύριος. Not I, but the Lord.

AND on the contrary, Verſ. 12. Ἐγὼ λέγω, οὐχ ὁ κύριος. I ſpeak, not the Lord. I. Weigh firſt that diſtinction very uſual in the Schools, between קרא A text of Scripture, and סברא An Opinion. g Death by the ſword is worſe than death by the plague. איבעית אימא קרא איבעית אימא סברא: If you will I will produce a Text of Scripture (to prove this) If you will I will produce reaſon, or my opinion. If you will I will produce an Opinion. That renders one abominable, but not this. If you will, I will produce Scripture, Precious in the eyes of the Lord is the death (the plague) of his Saints. Famine is worſe than the ſword, איבעית אימא סברא If you will, I will produce an opinion. Famine afflicts a long while, the ſword not איבעית קרא If you will, I will produce Scripture: It is better for them that dye by the ſword, than that dye by famine. And, A burnt offering that is killed not under its proper notion, the blood of it is not to be ſprinkled under a notion that is not proper. If you will, I will produce סברא my opinion, or, reaſon, If you will, I will produce קרא a Text of Scripture. And very many inſtances of that nature.

g Bava Bathra, fol. 8. 2.

II. And now compare the words of the Apoſtle: Theſe things I ſay not, but the Lord: that is, This is not my bare opinion, but ſo ſaith the Scripture. And on the contrary, Theſe things I ſay, not the Lord: that is, This is my opinion, although there be not ſome Text of Scripture, which ſaith ſo in plain words. Thus he explains himſelf, Chap. IX. 8. Say I theſe things, and not the Law?

Γυναῖκα ἀπὸ ἀνδρὸς μὴ χωρισθῆναι· Let not the wife depart from her husband.

Nor without weighty reason doth he admonish concerning this thing also, since both among Jews and Gentiles, the opinion was too loose concerning the firmness of the marriage bond; and more loose among the Jews, than among the Gentiles.

I. Think first of the toleration of מיאונין among them, which take in their words, h If any marry a young maid, and she afterward will not have him for her husband, she may put him away, and depart from him; and there is no need of a bill of Divorse. Hence this is the form גט מיאון of a Bill of this kind of putting away (when the wife put away her husband) if it were demanded.

h Maimon. Gerush. cap. 11.

In the day N. of the week N. of the month N. of the year N. N. the daughter of N. put away before us, and said: My mother or my brethren deceived me, and wedded me, or betrothed me, when I was a young maid, to N. the son of N. But I now reveal my mind before you, that I will not have him, &c.

II. Among them also there was departing from each other by mutual consent. i A good man had a good wife: but because they had not children, גרשו זה את זה They mutually put away one another. That good man married a bad wife, and she made him bad. That good woman married a bad husband, and she made him good.

i Beresh. Rabb. §. 17.

They allow also the same license to the Heathen. l R. Jochanan saith, The sons of Noah have not divorse, but גרשו זה את זה they put away one another.

l Id. §. 18.

III. To omit the departure of the wife from the husband for the causes of lust, as Herodias departed from Philip, to be married to Herod, and Drusilla from Aziz, and married Felix m. A perverse wife might compel her husband, to put her away. A n wife which refuseth to lye with her husband, is called מורדת Rebellious: And they demand of her, why she is so rebellious: if she answers, I despise him, and cannot endure his bed, they compel him to put her away for a time. Yea, o R. Jochanan saith, A wife may put away her husband.

m Joseph. Antiq. lib. 20. c. 5.
n Maimon. in אשות cap. 14
o Beresh. Rabb. in the place last quoted.

Those departures therefore the Apostle altogether forbids. And when vers. 11. he saith, Ἐὰν δὲ καὶ χωρισθῇ· But and if she depart, he doth not so much tolerate them, as supposes them to happen, and provides against them all, as much as may be, by the following rules, Let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband.

VERS. XI.

Τῷ ἀνδρὶ καταλλαγήτω· Be reconciled to her husband.

COmpare Deut. XXIV. 4. Her former husband, which sent her away, may not take her again to be his wife. For the bond which was there made, is not dissolved here. בטלו מבוטל p He makes it void: it is made void: they are the words of Rabbi. (The Gloss is, The husband sends a bill of divorse to the wife: if either he himself afterwards goes to his wife, or sends a messenger to him, saying, The bill of Divorse, which I sent to thee, let it stand for nothing, it is nothing.) A Tradition. In former times he compelled the Bench in another place, who would make void the Bill, and made not the thing known to his wife. Gamaliel the Elder appointed, that they should not do this; because sometimes the wife not knowing of the withdrawing of the Bill, marrieth another, and so hath bastard children.

p Jevamoth, fol. 90. 2.

Behold καταλλαγή, a Reconciliation after a Divorse, (but the Apostle speaks not in this place of Divorse) and yet the Jews by their practice shewed, that they thought the bond of marriage was loosed by any Divorse, for they admitted second marriages.

VERS. XIV.

Τὰ τέκνα ὑμῶν νῦν ἅγιά ἐστιν· Now are your children holy.

ΑΚάθαρτα, Unclean, and Ἅγια, Holy, denote not children unlawfully begotten, and lawfully begotten, but Heathenism, and Christianism. There is indeed this Tradition among the Jews. q A son by unlawful wedlock that is, unlawful by consanguinity) is a son of the man in all regards, and is to be reputed for an Israelite, although he be misbegotten. ובן מן הגויה אינו בנו But a son begotten of a Heathen woman, is not his son. Where the Gloss, He is not called the son of the man, but the son of the woman.

q Maimon Issurei Biah, c. 12.

But the present discourse of the Apostle turns not upon this hing, namely, whether a son sprung from parents, whereof one was a Christian, the other a Heathen, be a legitimate issue, but whether it be a Christian issue. For it is sufficiently known, that the word קדושים Ἅγιοι, Holy, is very frequently taken for those that profess Christianity: and so the word קדושה Holiness in the Talmudists is taken in a like sense.

You ſee at firſt ſight, what that expreſſion, In Holineſs, means. In the ſame ſenſe the Apoſtle; Your children are born in Holineſs, that is, within Chriſtianity, if either father or mother be Chriſtian. And the children themſelves are holy, that is, Chriſtians.

u Hieroſ. Pſach. fol. 36. 2.

The Heathens were reckoned by the Jews for unclean, and ſo unclean indeed, that they could not contract uncleanneſs, no not from the moſt unclean thing, a Sepulchre u. Hence Heathen children were to them Ἀκάθαρτα, Unclean, and the children of Jews Ἅγια, Holy. To which ſenſe, very well known to the Nation, the Apoſtle alludes in theſe words.

VERS. XVIII.

Μὴ περιτμήσθω· Let him not become uncircumciſed.

x Beriſh. Rabb, fol. 46.

IN Talmudic Language, אל ימשך ערלתו "Let him not draw his foreſkin. x Let Circumciſion be four or five times repeated, if any one be ſo often משוך περιτμήσεις, "Drawn uncircumciſed. Again, y There were many in the days of Ben Cozba, שמשכו ערלתם who drew over the foreſkin, that were again circumciſed. And, תניא משך צדיק למול z A Tradition. VERS. XIX.

Ἡ περιτομὴ οὐδέν ἐστι. Circumciſion is nothing.

AMong many things which may here be ſpoken, we will obſerve only two; one from the very practice of the Jews, the other from the chief end of circumciſion.

I. You will wonder perhaps, Reader, when you hear, that ſome Jews always went uncircumciſed; yea, that ſome Prieſts not circumciſed, miniſtred at the Altar, and that without the complaint of any, and indeed without any fault. But the Fathers of the Traditions themſelves do confeſs this. Very frequent mention is made in the Talmudiſts of ישראל ערל An uncircumciſed Iſraelite, and כהן ערל An uncircumciſed Prieſt.

For "the Iſraelites are not bound to perform the precepts where Death will certainly follow. For it is ſaid, Laws, which if a man ſhall obſerve them, he ſhall live in them, not "that he dye in them.

Hence if the firſt, ſecond, third ſon ſhould dye by circumciſion, thoſe that were born after were not circumciſed, but were always uncircumciſed, and yet Iſraelites in all reſpects, Prieſts in all reſpects. f R. Nathan ſaith, I travailed to Ceſarea of Cappadocia, and there was a woman there, who had brought forth male children, which had died of circumciſion, the firſt, the ſecond, the third: they brought the fourth to me, and I looked upon him, and ſaw not in him the blood of the Covenant. He adviſed them to permit him a little while, though not circumciſed, and they permitted him, &c.

f Hieroſ. Jevamth, fol. 7. 4.

Now,

Now Jew, tell me, Whether Circumcision is any thing, especially whether it be of so much account, either to Justification, or to Sanctification, as you esteem it, when an Israelite might be a true Israelite, and a Priest a true Priest, without Circumcision.

II. Circumcision is nothing, in respect of the time, for now it was vanished, the end of it, for which it had been instituted, being accomplished. That end the Apostle shews in those words Rom. IV. 11. Σφραγῖδα τῆς δικαιοσύνης τῆς πίστως τῆς ἐν ἀκροβυσία· A seal of the Righteousness of the Faith in uncircumcision. But I fear the words, are not sufficiently fitted by most Versions to the end of Circumcision, and the scope of the Apostle; while they insert some thing of their own. The French Translation thus, Sceau de la justice de foy Laquelle il avoit durant le prepuce. A seal of the righteousness of Faith, which he had during uncircumcision. The Italian thus, Segno della giustitia della fede laquale fu nella circoncisione. A Seal of the Righteousness of the Faith which was without circumcision. The Syriac reads, וחתמא דכאנתא דהימנותה And a sign of the Righteousness of his Faith, The Arabic, of the righteousness of Faith, אלדי כאן which was in uncircumcision. Others to the same sense; as though Circumcision were given to Abraham for a sign of that righteousness, which he had, while as yet he was uncircumcised: which we deny not in some sense to be true: but we believe Circumcision especially looks far another way.

Give me leave to render the words thus, And he received the sign of Circumcision, a seal of the Righteouness of the Faith, which should hereafter be in Uncircumcision. I say, Which should be, not, which had been. Not, which had been to Abraham, as yet uncircumcised, but which should be to his seed uncircumcised, that is, To the Gentiles, that should hereafter imitate the faith of Abraham.

For mark well upon what occasion Circumcision was appointed to Abraham, laying before your eyes the history of it, Gen. XVII.

First, This promise was made him, Thou shalt be the Father of many Nations; in what sense, the Apostle explains in that Chapter: and then a double Seal is subjoyned to establish the thing, viz. The changing of the name Abram into Abraham; and the institution of Circumcision: ver. 4. Behold my Covenant is with thee, Thou shalt be the Father of many Nations. Why is his name called Abraham? For the sealing of this promise, Thou shalt be the Father of many Nations. And why was Circumcision appointed him? For sealing the same promise, Thou shalt be the Father of many Nations. So that this may be the sense of the Apostle, very agreeable to the institution of Circumcision: He received the sign of Circumcision a Seal of the Righteouss of Faith, which herafter the Uncircumcision (or the Gentiles) was to have and obtain.

Abraham had a double Seed: a natural seed, that of the Jews; and a Faithful seed, that of the believing Gentiles. The Natural seed is signed with the sign of Circumcision, first indeed for the distinguishing it self from all other nations, while they were not as yet the seed of Abraham. But especially, in memory of the justification of the Gentiles by Faith, when at last they were his seed. Therefore upon good reason Circumcision was to cease, when the Gentiles should be brought in to the Faith, because then it had obtained to its last and chief end; and from thenceforth ἡ περιτομὴ οὐδέν, Circumcision is nothing.

VERS. XXIII.

Μὴ γίνεσθε δοῦλοι ἀνθρώπων. Be ye not the Servants of men.

I Ask whether the Apostle speaks these words directly, and as his own sense; or by way of objection, to which he answereth in the verse following. The Jews were wont thus to object concerning themselves, by reason of their liberty obtained by the redemption out of Egypt; so that they would not endure by any means to be called Not free. Joh. VIII. 33. Rabban g Jochanan ben Zaccai said, The blessed Lord saith, The ear which heard my voice upon mount Sinai, at what time I said, For the children of Israel are my Servants, and not the Servants of Servants, but it goes, and obtains to its self the Lord, let that ear be bored.

g Kiddush. fol. 22. 2.

Perhaps these new Christians, that were of a servile condition, laboured under this pride, not as yet instructed concerning the true sense of Evangelical Liberty. Or this scruple stuck with them, whether it were lawful for a Christian to serve a Heathen, An Atheist, An Idolater, &c. such Questions are moved by the Masters, Whether an Israelite is to be sold for a Servant to a Heathen, Whether an Israelite that is a Servant is to be pressed with the same service, as a Canaanite.

If the Apostle speaks directly, he does not discourse concerning Servants particularly, but of all Christians in general. And it is far from his intention to take away the relation, that is between Masters and Servants: but he admonisheth all Christians, that they serve not the evil lusts and wills of men, but him that redeemed them with a price.

VERS. XXVI.

Διὰ τὴν ἐνεστῶσαν ἀνάγκην. For the present necessity.

AND by and by, verſ. 29. Ὁ καιρὸς συνεσταλμένος τὸ λοιπόν ἐστι, The time is ſhort, it remaineth. The Corinthians enquired of the Apoſtle by a letter in the caſe of marriage, as it ſeems by his anſwer.

I. Concerning Marriages between a believer, and an unbeliever, whether they were to be continued, or not continued.

II. Concerning the Marriages of Virgins, or ſingle perſons. But now, how a ſcruple ſhould ariſe to them in this latter, is ſomewhat obſcure. Among the Jewiſh Chriſtians a ſcruple might ariſe, whether it were lawful for a ſingle man to abſtain from marriage, becauſe in that nation, as we have obſerved, they commanded matrimony by Law. But if the queſtion were, whether it was lawful for a Virgin, or a ſingle man to contract Matrimony (For the Apoſtle anſwereth Οὐχ ἥμαρτες, Thou haſt not ſinned, as though it were asked rather, whether it were lawful to marry, than whether it were lawful not to marry) then you will ſcarcely conjecture whence it ſhould ariſe but ἀπὸ ἐνεστώσης ἀνάγκης, From the preſent neceſſity.

Our Apoſtle teacheth, that ſome forbad marriage, 1 Tim. IV. 3. But under what pretence? Either under this, that they babbled that marriage oppoſed the purity of the Goſpel, as Saturnilus in Jereny; or that they avoyded marriages for thoſe calamities that hung over them. They forbid marriage, ſaith the Apoſtle, and command to abſtain from meats. Hear the Gemariſts a little.

b Lib. 1. c. 22.

From the time that the ſecond Temple was deſtroyed, Phariſees (Separatiſts) were multiplyed in Iſrael, who eat not fleſh, nor drunk wine. To whom R. Joſuah, Why, O my Sons, do ye not eat fleſh, nor drink wine? And they anſwered, ſhould we eat fleſh, of which we were wont to offer on the Altar, and now it is periſhed? And ſhall we drink wine, of which we were wont to pour out upon the Altar, and now it is ceaſed. --- When a wicked Empire ruled over Iſrael, and decreed rough things againſt them, and made the Law, and the precept ceaſe from them, and permitted them not to circumciſe their children, they ſaid to R. Joſua, It is fit, that we reſolve among our ſelves, not to contract marriage, nor beget Sons, &c.

i Bava Bathra, fol. 60. 1.

Behold men prepared, and ſworn almoſt to perpetual abſtinence from marriage by reaſon of calamities. From the like cauſe alſo I ſuſpect, ſome Chriſtians might be in doubt, in the times of the Apoſtles. Our Saviour had foretold, that thoſe times ſhould be very rough, that went before the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, Mat. XXIV. And that not within the bounds of Judea only: but that judgment ſhould begin from the Temple of God every where, 1 Pet. IV. 17. and a day of Temptation ſhould come upon the whole world, Revel. III. 20. So that that prediction being known to the Churches, and the times now inclining towards thoſe calamities, it is no wonder, if concern and care about thoſe ſtraits invaded the Chriſtians, and deterred very many ſingle perſons from marriage.

CHAP. VIII.

VERS. I.

Οἴδαμεν ὅτι πάντες γνῶσιν ἔχομεν. We know that we all have knowledg.

ΓΝῶσις, Knowledg, of which the Apoſtle here ſpeaks, is the knowledge of the liberty of the Goſpel: but theſe words are ſpoken Ironically: as if he had ſaid, It is concluded by all, that they know ſufficiently that Evangelic liberty, and thereupon ſome run out into things which are not convenient. That Knowledg puffeth up, renders men bold, neglects the conſciences of others, and he that in this ſenſe ſeems to know ſomething, as yet knows nothing as he ought to know.

VERS.

VERS. IV.

Οὐδὲν εἴδωλον ἐν κόσμῳ. An Idol is nothing in the world.

I Render it, We know that there is no Idol in the World: that is a representation of God. Εἴδωλον An Idol, as the Lexicographers teach, is Ὁμοίωμα, εἰκὼν, σημεῖον, χαρακτήρ, σκιὰ, A likeness, an Image, a Sign, a Character, a Shadow. Idols indeed are in the World, made of wood, stone, gold, silver, &c. but οὐδὲν εἴδωλον, there is No Idol; there is no representation, or figure of God, and none can be. The Apostle hitherto, as I indeed think, puts on the person of those, who made no scruple in eating things offered to Idols: as though he had said, You say, "We know that there is no "representation of God in the World, and there is only one God, &c. Therefore those "graven Images, and those various Idols, are mere figments of humane mistake, and "to offer Sacrifices to them is a mere invention of men: there is nothing sacred, no-"thing of Religion in them, because there is no representation of God in them. Shall "we therefore, who are under the liberty of the Gospel, abstain from eating that flesh "which the foolishness of men only hath separated from common use, and offered to "stocks and stones, which have nothing of God in them, but are created only by the "same humane sottishness? Ye say truth indeed, but illy applied, and all have not this knowledg. Or if you render it, An Idol is nothing in the world, it comes to the same sense.

VERS. X.

Ἐν εἰδωλείῳ κατακείμενον. Sitting at meat in the Idol Temple.

COmpare those passages of the Talmudists. העובר עז מאהבה ומיראה a He that adores an Idol out of love or fear, Rabba saith, he is free, Abai saith, he is guilty. Abai saith, he is guilty, because he worships it. Rabba saith, he is free: אי קבליה עליה באלוה אית If he take it for God, he is so, he is guilty; או לא לא But if he doth not, he is not. And a little after, If he supposeth the Idol Temple to be the Synagogue, and adore an Idol, הרי לבו לשמים Behold his heart is towards God. אלא חזא אנדרטא But if he see a statue, and adore it, if he take it for God, he is guilty, מזיד as doing presumptuously. But if he takes it not for God לא כלום הוא It is nothing at all. The Gloss there is Behold his heart is towards God: although he know that that house is an Idol Temple, and he adores God in it, it is no crime, &c. If he see a statue, such as they are wont to set up for the picture of the King, and adore it, not under the Notion of an Idol, but in honour of the King, it is nothing. a Sanhedr. fol. 61. 2.

Hieronymus à sancta Fide cites this Talmudic passage in these words: b They say in the book Sanhedrin, If any worship an Idol out of love or fear, he is free; and R. Solomon glosseth thus: By love is understood, that if any Master should ask his Servant that out of love to him, he would adore him. By fear, that if any Master should threaten him, unless he would. Nevertheless R. Moses of Egypt glosseth otherwise, saying, that by love is understood if he be in love with the beauty of the image of that Idol; by fear, that if he fear, the Idol should hurt him; as the Worshippers of it think, that it can profit, or hurt, and that if he adore it in such a case, he is free. b Lib. 2. Contr. Judæos, cap. 2.

An excellent School, and excellent doctrine indeed! To omit other things, mark that, which prevailed also with these Corinthians אם לא קבליה עליה אלוה If he acknowledg not the Idol under the notion of God, it is nothing: and these men said also, An Idol is nothing. Therefore to be in an Idol Temple, to eat things offered to Idols, is nothing: for I own nothing of the Deity in the Idol, I know it is wood or stone, &c. But saith the Apostle,

First however the Idol it self be wood or stone, yet those things which are offered to it, are offered to Devils, Chap. X. 20. And Secondly, However you think your self so wise, as to judge of an Idol as a matter of nothing; yet all have not so accurate a judgment; and you by your example encourage others to eat things offered to Idols, even under the notion of things offered to Idols.

VERS. II.

Δι' ὃν Χριστὸς ἀπέθανεν· For whom Christ dyed.

HE useth the very same argument and reason, Rom. XIV. 15. And his words respect the quality of the person, than rather the person himself, barely considered. As though he had said, for tender consciences, and trembling at the word of God, for those that are burthened and grone under the yoke and weight of the Law, for such as sweat and pant in the ways of the Lord, to keep faith and a good Conscience; for such Christ dyed; and will you destroy such an one by your meat? He dyed, to loosen those yokes, and to lighten consciences pressed under those weights, and will you destroy such with your meat?

CHAP. IX.

VERS. I.

Οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐλεύθερος; Am I not free?

HERE some Interpreters in their Versions vary the order of the clauses, and read, Am I not free? and then after that, Am I not an Apostle? Moved to it hence undoubtedly, because it is greater to be an Apostle, than to be Free; and they supposed they should keep true order, if they proceeded from a lower degree to a higher. But they should have considered, that Paul did not barely treat of Christian Liberty, but of Apostolic Liberty: which appears also sufficiently vers. 5. Nor could he use a more accurate method in his business, than by first proving himself an Apostle, and then proving his Apostolic Liberty.

He is about to treat of his Liberty, or how lawful it is for him, to require maintenance for himself, his wife and family, if he had them, for his ministery in the Gospel among the Heathen, which Peter and the rest of the Apostles did among the Jews. It was formerly appointed by Jewish Lawyers, that Tithes were not to be required and taken of the Gentiles, maintenance was not to be asked from Heathens, and that a Jew should not make himself any ways beholden to an Heathen. Which so much the more also prevailed among them, because there was not any permission in the Law concerning these things, or at least that there was deep silence in the Law concerning them. These matters could not but raise a contest against him, concerning his maintenance among the Heathen, while he preached the Gospel to them.

Our Apostle therefore, the Minister of the Uncircumcision, flies to that, namely to defend himself by his Apostolical power among them, who had raised a difference against him about this business, Ver. 3. Be it granted, that it was appointed by the Traditional Laws, concerning taking no maintenance from Heathens; yea though it were granted, that it were so decreed by the Law of Moses; but I am an Apostle, I am free from such Laws; yea it is in my power to institute this for a Law to the converted Heathen, that those that preach the Gospel should be sustained by the Gospel.

Οὐχὶ Ἰησοῦν χριστὸν ἑώρακα; Have I not seen Jesus Christ?

PAUL saw the Lord twice. First in his journey to Damascus, when he was marked out for an Apostle. Secondly, In his Trance at Jerusalem, when he was marked out for the Apostle of the Gentiles, Act. XXII. 21. He alone among the Apostles saw the Lord after his ascension.

VERS. III.

Ἡ ἐμὴ ἀπολογία· My Apology, &c.

THE Apology it self follows, Have we not power, &c. unto ver. 15. The necessity of his Apology was, that he was accused by some of receiving maintenance from Heathen Churches for his preaching the Gospel: or it was observed with a stern countenance by some Cavilers, whether he would receive it, or not. Hence it was, that he applied applied himself to mechanic labour, whereby he might sustain himself, and get his living: Not that it was unlawful for him to demand a livelyhood of the Gentiles, but because he would not; to stop the mouths of the Jews that barked against him. Hence are those words, vers. 19, 20. I am free from all men, and yet I am become the Servant of all. To the Jews I became as a Jew, &c. Compare III. Joh. ver. 7. They took nothing of the Gentiles.

VERS. XIII.

Οἱ τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ παρεδρεύοντες· They that wait at the Altar.

HE distinguisheth between ἱερὰ ἐργαζόμενοι, labouring about holy things, and παρεδρεύοντες τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ· Waiting at the Altar. For there were some who wrought in the holy things, besides those who served at the Altar: concerning whom see the Tract Shekalim. [a] Among the rest were they המחלעים את העצים Who picked the worms out of the wood, which was to be layed upon the Altar: who being touched and infected with some spot, were not fit to minister at the Altar; but they were deputed to this office, and nourished out of the consecrated things.

[a] Cap. 5.

[b] Παρεδρεύοντες τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ· Assidentes Altari, sitting at the Altar, not in the proper and strictest sense: for it was lawful for none to sit within the Court, but for the King alone. [c] But rather Obsidentes, Besieging the Altar, and spred every where about it in the service of it. Some taking away the ashes, some killing the Sacrifice, others sprinkling the bloud, others laying the pieces of the Sacrifice upon the Altar, &c. Concerning which see the Tract Tamid. [d]

[b] Middoth, cap. 2. hal. 5.

[c] Joma, f. 69 2.

[d] Cap. 3. hal. 1. &c.

Παρεδρεύω signifies also to lay snares, which may also be applied to that emulous diligence, wherewith they did as it were lay snares for the Altar, contending in former times who should first go up thither to take away the ashes, and to make the fire, &c. concerning which these things are related. In e former times whosoever would clear the Altar of its ashes, did it (in the morning:) But when many strove together about that business, and ran, and went up by כבש the ascent of the Altar, &c. There was a time when two strove together, and ran with equal speed, and went up by the Ascent of the Altar, and one thrust the other, so that he fell, and his leg was broke, &c.

[e] Joma, f. 22. 1.

VERS. XXI.

Τοῖς ἀνόμοις ὡς ἄνομος· To them that are without Law, as without Law.

HE distinguished, as it seems by the verse before, between the Jews, and those that are under the Law. Which may be understood of the Jews in general, and of the Pharisees in particular: because the Pharisees seemed more to subject themselves to the Law, than the rest of the Nation. But by ἀνόμους, such are without Law, whether he means the Sadduces, who altogether opposed the Laws of Pharisees, or whether the Heathen, enquire. How he could yield himself conformable to the Heathen, it is not easie to judge; to the Jews, the Pharisees, the Sadducees he might conform himself in some things without scruple, that he might gain them: this only being understood of the Sadducees, that his conformity is to be understood in rites, not in the heresy about the Resurrection.

VERS. XXVII.

Μήπως ἀδόκιμος γένωμαι· Lest I should become a Cast away.

Ἀδόκιμος may well render the word פסול a word very usual among the Masters: especially, as it is opposed to the word כשר for כשר denotes δόκιμος, that is, approved, fit, either thing or person: פסול on the contrary denotes ἀδόκιμος, Not approved, not fit.

VERS. II.

Καὶ πάντες εἰς τὸν Μωυσῆν ἐβαπτίζοντο· And were all baptized unto Moſes.

THEY had been newly circumciſed before their going out of Egypt. For when God accuſeth them by the Prophet, that they complied with the cuſtoms of the Egyptians, and worſhipped their Idols, XX. 7, 8. it is more than probable, that they neglected Circumciſion, as alſo other of Gods appoinments, and yielded themſelves conformable to the Egyptians in all their irreligious rites. Whence by a peculiar precept God provided, when he inſtituted the Paſsover, that before the eating of it, every one ſhould be circumciſed: Exod. XII. 48. Which that it was done alſo, is clear out of Joſ. V. 5. All going out of Egypt were circumciſed.

To Circumciſion is added Baptiſm in the cloud and in the Sea; and the latter Seal took not away the firſt, but ſuperinduced a new obligation. They were not circumciſed into Moſes, but they were baptized into Moſes. The Jews themſelves confeſs, that they were baptized at mount Sinai, from thoſe words, Exod. XIX. 10. But the Apoſtle fetcheth the thing higher, that he may ſhew, that the types of the Goſpel Sacraments were both divine, and alſo miraculous.

VERS. III.

Ἐκ πνευματικῆς ἀκολουθούσης πέτρας· Of that Spiritual rock that followed them.

NOT that the very rock in Horeb followed them, but that ſtreams of water flowing from that rock followed them, and were gathered together into pools, whereſoever they encamped. Hence that Rhetorical figure very uſual in the Prophets, I will give in the Wilderneſs pools of water, when diſcourſe is of the watering of the Gentiles by the Goſpel and the Spirit. a During all the forty years they had a Well. And the Targum of Jonathan concerning another Well: b From the time that the well in Mattanah was given them, it was made again to them brooks, that were overflowing, and violent; and again it went up unto the tops of the mountains, and went down with them into the Vallies, &c.

VERS. VIII.

Ἐικοσιτρεῖς χιλιάδες· Three and twenty thouſand.

BUT in Numb. XXV. it is, Four and twenty thouſand. And in the Talmuds; c Thoſe four and twenty thouſand, that periſhed by reaſon of Baal-Peor, &c. And d Balaam came to receive his reward for the four and twenty thouſand, that had periſhed. Whence therefore is it in Paul, Three and twenty thouſand only?

c Hier. of. Sotah, fol. 21. 4.
d Bab. Sanhedr. fol. 106. 1.

To omit that, which is not unuſual in the holy Scriptures, when the ſame ſtory is recited in two places, to bring in ſomewhat different in the reckoning, either of the things, or the men, or the years; and that not without the higheſt reaſon. As compare 2 Kings, VIII. 26. with 2 Chron. XXII. 2. And 2 King. XXIV. 8. with 2 Chron. XXXVI. 9. and very many of that nature: Let us ſee what the Talmudiſts ſay of this ſtory.

They diſcourſe of it in divers places of the Tract Sanhedrin, e to this ſenſe: upon thoſe words of God to Moſes קח את כל ראשי העם Take all the heads of the people and hang them up before the Sun, they thus comment. Take all the Princes of the people, and make them Judges; that they may ſlay all thoſe that tranſgreſſed with Baal-Peor. ---- If the people ſinned, what did the Heads of the people ſin? Saith Rabh Judah, Rabh ſaith, God ſaid to Moſes, Divide to them Judgment ſeats. Wherefore? Becauſe they judge not two in one day. Now Jew find fault with Paul, if you liſt, and he hath wherewithal to anſwer you even from your own writers.

e Fol. 33. 1. & 64. 1. & 82. 2. & 106. 1. and elſewhere.

I. He ſaith not, that three and twenty thouſand were all, that fell in the caſe of Baal-Peor; but he ſaith, that three and thenty thouſand fell in one day.

II. It is manifeſt enough, that God made uſe of a double vengeance againſt the ſinners, namely, by Judges, and by a Peſtilence.

III. But

III. But now their own Countrymen say, It is not lawful for one Bench to judge two in one day. Or be it granted (which is granted also by their Country-men) that it is lawful to judge and slay two, so it be by the same kind of death, How many Benches, I pray, were set up? Or how many days were spent in puting to death a thousand men under that provision, Let one Bench put to death only one man, or at most two in one day.

Our Apostle therefore speaks with the vulgar: and saith not definitely three and twenty thousand perished just to a man, but three and twenty thousand at least; when according to that vulgar Canon, it is scarce credible, that a thousand men were put to death by those Benches; when one Bench put to death only one or two at most, in the space of one day.

The Levites being numbred presently after the plague of Baal-Peor, were just so many as the Apostle here numbers, Numb. XXVI. 62. So a number equal to the whole tribe of Levi perished in one day.

VERS. X.

Ἀπὸ τοῦ ὀλοθρεύτου. Of the Destroyer.

THE Jews call evil Angels מלאכי חבלה Angels ὀλοθρεύτας, Destroyers: and good Angels מלאכי שרת Angels λειτουργοὺς, Ministring. But I enquire, whether the Apostle speaks to this sense in this place. For where can we find the people destroyed and slain by an evil Angel? They perished indeed by the Pestilence, and by the plague for Baal-Peor, concerning which the Apostle spake before: but here he distinguisheth the destroying of them by the Destroyer, from that kind of death. Therefore the Apostle seems to me to allude to the notion, very usual among the Jews, concerning the Angel of death, the great destroyer, called by them Samael, concerning whom among very many things which are related, let us produce this only.

f A Question is propounded of a Cow delivered to a Keeper hired with a price, carefully and faithfully to keep her. She strayes in a Fen, and there dyes בדרכה in the common manner; that is, by no violent death; it is demanded, how far the Keeper is guilty? And it is determined, that if she had perished being devoured by Wolves, or drove away by thieves, and slain, then the Keeper were guilty by reason of negligence. But this, they say, was the work מלאך המות of the Angel of death. For they say שבקת מלאך המות בביתי גנבא הוה קיימא If the Angel of death had suffered her, she had lived in a Thiefs house. And the Gloss מלאך המות נמי בבית חשוכר קטיל לה The Angel of death might kill her even in the house of him, who hired the Keeper.

f Bava Mizia, fol. 36. 1.

You see how they ascribe it to the Angel of death, when any violent, known, and ordinary cause, and evident kind of death doth not appear. So the Apostle in this place, mentioneth the known and evident ways of death; serpents, pestilence, ver. 8, 9. and now he speaks of the common kind of death, (and not of some evident plague) whereby the whole multitude of those that murmured perished, Num. XIV. within forty years. He saith, they perished ὑπὸ τοῦ ὀλοθρεύτου, by that great Destroyer, the Angel of Death.

VERS. XI.

Εἰς οὓς τὰ τέλη τῶν αἰώνων, &c. On whom the ends of the World, &c.

HE saith τὰ τέλη τῶν αἰώνων, The ends of the Ages, not τὰ τέλη τοῦ κόσμου The ends of the World. Αἰων, age, in the Scripture, very ordinarily is the Jewish age. In which sense, Circumcision, the Passover, and other Mosaic rites, are said to be לעולם εἰς αἰῶνα, For an age. So the Disciples Mat. XXIV. 3. enquire of Christ περὶ τῆς συντελείας τοῦ αἰῶνος concerning the end of the age; and he answereth concerning the destruction of Jerusalem. In the same sense should I render the words of the Apostle, Tit. I. 2. To the hope of eternal life, which God hath promised πρὸ χρόνων αἰωνίων before the times of the Jewish ages: that is, God promised eternal life before the Mosaic Oeconomy: that life therfore is not to be expected by the works of the Law of Moses.

Thus therefore the Apostle speaks in this place; These things which were translated in the beginning of the Jewish ages, are written for an example to you, upon whom the ends of those ages are come. And the beginning is like to the end, and the end to the beginning. Both was forty years, both consisted of temptation and unbelief, and both ending in the destruction of unbelievers: that in the destruction of those that perished in the wilderness, this is the destruction of those that believed not, in the destruction of the City and Nation.

VERS.

VERS. XVI.

Τὸ ποτήριον τῆς εὐλογίας· The Cup of Bleſſing.

כוס הברכה The Cup of Bleſſing. So was that Cup in the Paſsover called, over which thanks were given after meat: and in which our Saviour inſtituted the Cup of the Euchariſt; of which we have ſpoken largely at Mat. XXVI. 27. When therefore the Apoſtle marks out the Cup of the Lords Supper with the ſame name, as the Jews did their Cup, he hath recourſe to the firſt inſtitution of it, and implies that giving of thanks was continued over it by Chriſtians, although new under another notion.

Thus his reaſoning proceeds: as we in the eating of bread, and drinking of the Euchariſtical Cup, communicate of the body, and blood of Chriſt: ſo in eating things offered to Idols, men communicate of and with an Idol. You communicate of the blood of Chriſt; therefore fly from Idolatry. I ſpeak to wiſe men; do you judge of the argument. For the very participation of the Euchariſt ſeals you up againſt Idolatry, and things offered to Idols.

Ὅτι ἡμεῖς οἱ πολλοὶ ἕν σῶμά ἐσμεν, οἱ γὰρ πάντες ἐκ τοῦ ἑνὸς ἄρτου μετέχομεν· For we all partake of one bread.

The manner of reaſoning, We all are one body, becauſe we partake of one bread, recals that to mind which among the Jews was called עירוב Mixing or κοινωνία, Communion. The manner and ſenſe of which learn out of Maimonides. g By the words of the Scribes, ſaith he, it is forbid neighbours to go (on the Sabbath day) ברשות היחיד in a place appropriated to one, where there is a diviſion into divers habitations, unleſs all the neighbours one the Sabbath Eve יערבו enter into communion.---- Therefore (Solomon; for they make him the author of this Tradition and Cuſtom) appoynted, that each place be appropriated to one man, there where there is a diviſion into divers Habitations, and each of the Inhabitans receive there a place proper to himſelf, and ſome place alſo is left there common to all, ſo that all have an equal right in it, as a Court belonging to many houſes, which is reckoned a place by right common to all. And every place which each hath proper to himſelf, is reckoned רשות היחיד a proper place. And it is forbid, that a man carry any thing from a place proper to himſelf into the place common to all (that is, on the Sabbath) but let every one uſe the place appropriate to himſelf alone עד שיערבו כולן until all enter into communion.

g In עירובין cap. 1.

ומה הוא העירוב: But how is that Communion made? יתערבו במאכל אחד They aſſociate together in one food which they prepare on the Eve of the Sabbath: as though they would ſay, כולנו מעורבין ואוכל אחד לכולנו We all aſſociate together, and we have all one food: nor does any of us ſeparate a propriety from our neighbour, but as we all have an equal right in this place which is left common to us, ſo we have all an equal right in the place, which every one takes to himſelf for his own.

And עירוב The conſorting together, which thoſe, that dwel among themſelves in the ſame Court, make, is called עירובי חצרות Κοινωνία, The Communions of Courts. And that conſorting together which they make, that dwell among themſelves in the ſame Walk or Entry, or which Citizens of the ſame City make among themſelves, is called שיתוף Participating together.

They do not conſort together in Courts אלא בפת שלימה בלבד but with a whole loaf. Although the bread of the bach be a whole Seah, if it be not a whole loaf, they do not enter into conſortſhip with it. But if it be whole, if it be no more than an Aſſarius only, they enter into conſortſhip with it.

How do they enter into κοινωνίαν, Communion, in the Courts? They demand of every houſe which is in the Court, one whole cake or loaf which they lay up in one veſſel, and in ſome houſe which is in the Court, although it be a barn, or a ſtable, &c. And one of the company bleſſeth, and ſo all eat together, &c.

Compare theſe things with the words of the Apoſtle, and they do not only illuſtrate his argumentation, but confirm it alſo. If it were cuſtomary among the Iſraelites to joyn together in one Political or Oeconomical body by the eating of many loaves collected together from this, and that, and the other man; we are much more aſſociated together into one body by eating one and the ſame bread appointed us by one Saviour.

VERS. XXV.

Ἐν μακέλλῳ· In the shambles.

THE b Gemarists treat of a question not much different from this, which the Apostle here treats of: namely, how far it is lawful to buy flesh in the shambles, and that from a Heathen, where there may be a suspicion concerning מריפה its being torn: and a story is brought in of one buying such torn flesh of a Heathen. Upon which case saith Rabbi הבשביל שוטה זה For this fool, who did that which was not decent נאסר כל מקולין Shall we forbid all shambles? See the place, if you list, and be at leisure to read it.

b In Cholin, fol. 95. 1.

Μηδὲν ἀνακρίνοντες διὰ τὴν συνείδησιν· Asking no question for conscience sake.

The Jews were vexed with innumerable scruples in their Feasts, as to the eating of the thing, as also to the company, with which they ate, and of the manner of eating. Of fruits and herbs set on the Table, they were to enquire, whether they were tithed according to custom, whether they were consecrated by the Truma, or some other way, or whether they were prophane: whether they were clean, or touched with some pollution or uncleanness, &c. And concerning flesh, that was set on the Table, whether it was of that which had been offered to Idols, whether it were of that which was torn, or of that which was strangled, or not killed according to the Canonical rule, &c. All which doubts the liberty of the Gospel abolished, as to ones own conscience, with this Proviso, that no scandal or offence be cast before another mans weak and staggering Conscience.

VERS. IV.

Προσευχόμενος ἢ προφητεύων κατὰ κεφαλῆς ἔχων. Praying or prophesying having his head covered.

IT was the custom of the Jews, that they prayed not, unless first their head were vailed; and that for this reason, that by this rite they might shew themselves reverent, and ashamed before God, and unworthy with an open face to behold him.

a Let not the wise Men, nor the Scholars of the wise Men pray, unless they be covered. So נוף He that was reproved by ſome great Rabbin, kept himſelf at home, as one that was aſhamed, nor did he ſtand before him, who made him aſhamed, with his head uncovered.

b Taanith, fol. 14. 2.

We may obſerve Onkelos renders ביד רמה With an high hand by ברישׁ גלי With an uncovered head; that is, confidently, not fearfully, or as men aſhamed. And Numb. XV. 30. The ſoul which committeth any ſin ברישׁ גלי with an uncovered head; that is, impudently. So Jonathan alſo in Judg. V. 1. The, ברישׁ גלי With an uncovered [illegible] by them.

VERS. V.

Πᾶσα δὲ γυνὴ· But every woman.

I. IT was the cuſtom of the women, and that preſcribed them under ſevere Canons, that they ſhould not go abroad but with their face vailed.

m Maimon. in אשות cap. 24

n Chetubb. fol. 72. 1.

o Schab. f. 80. 1

p Baba Kama, fol 50. 2.

If a woman do theſe things, ſhe tranſgreſſeth the Jewiſh Law: if ſhe go out into the ſtreet, or into an open Porch, ואין עליה רדיד and there be not a vail upon her, as upon all women, although her hair be rolled up under a hood. אי זו היא דת יהודית What n is the Jewiſh Law? Let not a woman go with her head uncovered. This is founded in the Law; for it is ſaid (of the ſuſpected wife) The Prieſt ſhall uncover her head (Numb. V. 18.) And the tradition of the School of Iſmael is, that the Daughters of Iſrael are admoniſhed hence, not to go forth with their heads not vailed. And, o Modeſt women colour one Eye with paint. The Gloſs there is. Modeſt woman went vailed, and uncovered but one Eye, that they might ſee, and that Eye they coloured. p One made bare a womons head in the ſtreet: ſhe came to complain before R. Akiba, and he fined the man four hundred Zuzees.

II. But however women were vailed in the ſtreets, yet when they reſorted unto holy Service, they took off their vails, and expoſed their naked faces; and that not out of lightneſs, but out of religion. סקבא רשתא דיגלא q The three feaſts are the Scabs of the year. The Gloſs is, The three feaſts (Paſover, Pentecoſt, and Tabernacles) are the breakings out of the year by the reaſon of the aſſociation of men and women, and becauſe of tranſgreſſions. Becauſe in the days of thoſe feaſts men and women aſſembled together, to hear Sermons, and caſt their Eyes upon one another. And ſome ſay, that for this cauſe they were wont to faſt after Paſſover and Pentecoſt.

q Kiddush. fol. 81. 1.

From whence it may readily be gathered, that men and women ſhould not ſo promiſcuouſly and confuſedly meet and ſit together, nor that they ſhould ſo look upon one another, as in the Courts of the Temple, and at Jeruſalem, when ſuch innumerable multitudes flocked to the Feaſts: but that women ſhould ſit by themſelves, divided from the men, where they might hear and ſee what is done in the Synagogue, yet they themſelves remain out of ſight. Which cuſtom, Baronius proves at large, and not amiſs, that thoſe firſt Churches of the Chriſtians retained.

When the women therefore did thus meet apart, it is no wonder, if they took off the vails from their faces, when they were now out of the ſight of men, and the cauſe of their vailing being removed, which indeed was, that they might not be ſeen by men. The Apoſtle therefore does not at all chide this making bare the face abſolutely conſidered, but there lies ſomething elſe within. For,

III. This warning of the Apoſtle reſpects not only publick religious meetings, but belongs to thoſe things, which were done by men and women in their houſes, and inner chambers: for there alſo, they uſed theſe rites, when they prayed and handled holy things privately, as well as in the publick aſſemblies. r Rabban Gamaliel journying, and being asked by one that met him concerning a certain vow, he light off his horſe ונתעטף and vailed himſelf, and ſat down, and looſed the vow. So R. Judah Bar Allai, on the Sabbath Eve, when he compoſed himſelf in his houſe, to meet and receive the Sabbath, they brought him warm water, and he waſhed his face and hands, and feet, והתעטף במרין מצוין And vailing himſelf with his linnin cloth of divers colours, he ſat down, and was like the Angel gel of the Lord of Hosts. So in the example of Nicodemus, lately produced, He went into his School alone privately, and vailed himself, and prayed. So did men privately, and women also on the contrary baring their faces privately. A reason is given of the former, namely, that the men were vailed for reverence towards God, and as being ashamed before God: but why the women were not vailed also, the reason is more obscure.

A more general may easily be rendred, viz. שאישה פטורה ממצורה That a woman was looſed, or free from the precept, that is, from very many rites, to which men were subject; as from the carrying of Fringes, and Phylacteries, from these or the other forms and occasions of prayers, and from very many Ceremonies and Laws, to which men were bound. s R. Meir saith, Every man is bound to these three benedictions every day: Blessed be God, that he hath not made me a Heathen: that he hath not made me a woman; that he hath not made me בור stupid, or unlearned. But Rabb Acha bar Jacob, when he heard his Son saying, Blessed be God, that he hath not made me בור unlearned, stuck at it; and upon this reason, as the Glos interprets, שגוי ואישה לא בני מצוה נינו Because a Heathen and a woman are not capable of the precept: but בור a rude or unlearned man is capable. Deservedly therefore God is blessed, that God made him not a Heathen, or a woman.

s In Menachoth, fol. 43 2.

By this Canon that a woman was looſed from the precept, they were exempted from covering the face during Religious Worship, when that precept respected men, and not women. But if you require a more particular reason of this exemption, what reason will you find for it? It is almost an even lay, whether the Canonists exempted women from vailing, because they valued them much, or because they valued them little. In some things, they place women below the dignity, and without the necessity of observing those or the other rites; and whether in this thing they were of the same opinion; or that on the contrary, they attributed more to the beauty of the faces of women, than of men, is a just question. But whether the thing bend this way or the other, the correction and warning of the Apostle doth excellently sute to this, or to that, as it will appear in what follows.

Καταισχύνει τὴν κεφαλὴν· Dishonoureth her head.

Dishonoureth her head? What head? That which she carries upon her shoulders? Or that, to which she is subjected? As the man to Christ, the woman to the man. That the Apostle is to be understood especially of the later, appears from the verse before, and indeed from the whole context. For to what end are those words produced, vers. 3. I would have you know, that the head of the woman is the man, &c. unless that they be applyed, and make to the Apostles business im the verses following.

Nor yet is the subjection of the woman, and the superiority of the man, all that by, and because of which the Apostle concludes, that a woman must not pray, but vailed, and a man the contrary. For if it were so argued by him, Let not a woman pray but with her head covered, because she is subject to her husband: it might be argued in like manner; Let not a man pray, but with his head covered, because he is subject to Christ.

I fear, lest that interpretation, which supposeth the vailing of women in this place, as a sign of the womans subjection to her husband, should more obscure the sense of this place, obscure enough indeed of it self. So one writes, t A woman ought to have a covering, that she may shew her self humble, and to be subject to her husband. And another, u Now the reason of the vailing of women is, because they are subject to men, &c. x Take a covering, by which is signified, that the wife is in the power of the husband. And lastly, y A vail, whereby is signified, that she is subject to the power of another. And very many to the same sense. But let me ask, t Primasius. u Carthusian. x Beza. y Camerarius.

I. Where, I beseech you, is a vail propounded as a sign of such subjection? It is put indeed as a sign of true modesty, Gen. XXIV. 65. and of dissembled modesty, Gen. XXXVIII. 14. but where is it used as a sign of subjection?

II. Hair was given to our grandmother Eve for a Covering (as the Apostle clearly asserts in this place) from the first moment of her creation, before she was subjected to a husband, and heard that, He shall rule over thee; yea, before she was married to Adam.

III. The Apostle treats not of wives alone, but of women in general, whether they were Wives, Virgins or Widdows.

IV. The obligation of subjection towards the husband follows the woman ever and every where; ought she ever and every where to carry a vail with her, as a sign of that subjection? Must she necessarily be vailed, while she is about the affairs of her family? Must she be vailed in the garden, in the fields, walking alone, or with her family? It is clear enough, the Apostle speaks of vailing only, when they were employed in Religious Worship; and that regard is had to something that belongs to the woman in respect of God, rather than in reſpect of her huſband. And although we ſhould not deny the vailing of the woman was ſome ſign of her ſubjection towards her huſband; yet we do deny, that the vailing, concerning which the Apoſtle here ſpeaks, hath any regard to it.

z Bereſhith Rab. §. 17.

V. The Jews aſſign ſhame as the reaſon of the womans vailing. z Why does a man go abroad with his head not covered, but women with their heads covered? R. Joſua ſaith, It is as when one tranſgreſſeth, and is made aſhamed: ſhe therefore goes with her head vailed. Behold a vail, a ſign indeed of ſhame, but not of ſubjection. And they fetch the ſhame of the woman thence, that ſhe firſt brought ſin into the world.

Therefore the Apoſtle requires the vailing of the woman in Religious Worſhip, by the ſame notion and reaſon, as men vailed themſelves, namely for reverence towards God. But certainly it may be enquired, whether he ſo much urgeth the vailing of women, as reproves the vailing of men. However, by this moſt fit argument, he well chaſtiſeth that contrary cuſtom, and fooliſhneſs of men: as though he had ſaid, Do ye not conſider, that the man is δόξα Θεῦ, The Glory of God, but the woman is only δόξα ἀνδρὸς, The Glory of the Man; that woman was made for man; that man is the head of the woman: and then how ridiculous is it, that men ſhould uſe a vail, when they pray, out of reverence and ſhame before God, and women not uſe it, whoſe glory is leſs? γυνὴ δόξα ἀνδρὸς, The woman is the glory of the man: So R. Solomon a, כתפארת אדם Like the glory of the man, that is, ſaith he, Like the woman, who is the glory of the husband. See alſo the Targum.

a In Eſay XLIV. 13.

Καταισχύνει τὴν κεφαλὴν· Diſhonoureth her head. קלות ראש The lightneſs of the head, among the Talmudiſts is Levity or irreverence: and if you ſhould render the Greek expreſſion in the ſame ſenſe, as though it were מקיל ראשו He vilifies his head, or מקילה ראשה She vilifies her head, one ſhould not much ſtray either from Grammar, or from truth. But the ſenſe ariſeth higher: a man praying covered, as aſhamed of his face before God, diſgraceth his head, Chriſt, who himſelf carried the like face of a man: eſpecially, he diſgraceth the office of Chriſt, by whom we have acceſs to God with confidence. And a woman praying not vailed, as if ſhe were not aſhamed of her face, diſgraceth man, her head, while ſhe would ſeem ſo beautiful beyond him, when ſhe is only the glory of the man: but the man is the glory of God.

VERS. VI.

Καὶ κειράσθω· Let her alſo be ſhorn.

IF ſhe be not vailed, let her be ſhorn. Yea rather, you will ſay, let her go with her hair looſe, for it was given her for a Covering by nature. Will the Apoſtle ſuffer this, or any civilized Nation? By no means. He ſaith, the hair of women was given them for a Covering, and yet requires another Covering; calling to mind the primitive reaſon, why the Covering of hair is given by nature to a woman, viz. to be a ſign of her reverence, humiliation, and ſhame before God. The Apoſtle permits women to gather and bind up their hair into knots by hairlaces; a thing done in all Nations, that were not fierce and wild; yea he would ſcarce ſuffer the contrary. But if any woman was ſo unmindful or forgetful, why the vail of her hair was granted her by nature, and ſo much aſſured of her beauty, and her face, as when ſhe prays, to take off her vail, the ſign of her reverence towards God; let her take off alſo, ſaith he, that natural ſign of reverence, the vail of her hair.

VERS. X.

Διὰ τοῦτο ὀφείλει ἡ γυνὴ ἐξουσίαν ἔχειν, &c. For this cauſe ought the woman to have power, &c.

THAT which commonly here obtains is, that by Ἐξουσίαν, Power, is underſtood A vail, a ſign of power above her, or of her ſubjection. But it is to be enquired, whether ἐξουσίαν ἔχειν, to have power, does not properly, yea, always denote to have power in ones own hand, not a power above one: as Matth. VII. 29. Joh. XIX. 10. 1 Cor. VII. 37. and IX. 4. and elſewhere a thouſand times.

Διὰ τοὺς Ἀγγέλους. Becauſe of the Angels.

Becauſe of the Angels? Whom? Whether becauſe of good Angels? or becauſe of bad? Or, becauſe of the Miniſters? The Reader knows what is ſaid for this ſenſe, and for that, and for the other, which we will not repeat.

I. Truly,

I. Truly, if I would understand A vail by ἐξουσία, Power, by Angels I would understand Devils, which are called Angels in this very Epistle, Chap. VI. 3. And if I were of opinion, that the Apostle treated here of publick Assemblies only, I would render his words to this sense: A woman in the publick Assembly of the Church ought to have her face vailed because of the Devils: namely, that they ensnare not men by the appearance of the beauty of womens faces, and provoke them to gaze upon their faces, and to behold them with lascivious eyes, while they ought rather to look up to Heaven, and to be intent upon divine things.

II. Or if by Angels are to be understood Ministers, our Interpretation, doth suit very well, which makes a vail a sign of shame and reverence before God, not of subjection towards the husband. For certainly this sounds more Logically, women are to be vailed in Religious Worship, as being ashamed before God; therefore let them be vailed before those, who are the Ministers of God; than that, women are to be vailed in Religious Worship, because they are subject to their husbands, therefore they are to be vailed before Ministers.

III. If we take Angels in the most proper sense, that is, for good Angels, and attribute its most proper sense to the expression, ἐξουσίαν ἔχειν, To have power, that is, to have power in ones own hand, then we might interpret the place after this manner; A woman hath not the power of her own head in her own hand, διὰ τὸν Θεὸν, in respect of God, but is to be vailed in reverence towards God: but she hath the power of her head in her own hand, of not vailing her self διὰ τὰς Ἀγγέλους, in respect of the Angels; for she oweth not such a Religious reverence to them.

IV. But I suppose the Apostle looks another way: And,

I. That he does not here speak in his own sense, but cites something usual among the Jews: not so much to dictate some rule for Christian women, as to produce a Jewish custom, in confirmation of those things, which he had said immediately before.

II. He had said, That the woman is the glory of the man, that she was of the man, that she was made for the man, &c. And this may testifie that which is said among the Jews, The woman ought to have in her own hand power of her head because of the Angels.

III. But now there was among them שילוחי קרושים Angels, or messengers of Espousals: who were deputed by this or that man, to espouse a wife for him that deputed him. Concerning which Angels the Masters here and there discourse largely: but especially see Kiddushin b. Where it begins thus, איש מקרש בו ובשילוחו A man espouseth a wife to himself either by himself, or by his Angel, or Deputy. b Cap. 2.

IV. But now although the Canons of the Masters required, and the custom of the Nation approved the vailing of womens faces in the streets: yet it was permitted women to bare their faces, to adorn them, to beautifie them in order to honest marriage: which reason it self, and the custom of the Nation confirms, and the Rabbins teach.

V. Hither the reasoning of the Apostle in this place seems to refer, Woman was created for man, vers. 9. Which is proved, O ye Jews, by your own consent; when ye decree, that a woman hath power, and ought to have it, in her own hand, over her own head because of the Angels of Espousals. Let her bare her face, if she will, that she may appear beautiful; let her vail it, if she will, that she may appear modest. She hath free power in her own hands, to promote her own Espousal, and Marriage, that she may be for a man, since she was created for man.

VI. It is true indeed, that especially obtained, which immediately almost followeth after the words newly alledged, מצוה בו יותר מבשילוחו It is commanded, that a man espouse a woman by himself, rather than by his Deputy: and that which presently follows, Let no man espouse a woman, before he see her c. But it was very frequently done, that after one had seen a woman, he betrothed her to himself by his Angels or Deputies, either out of his own modesty, or some necessity compelling him. c Kidduſh. fol. 41. 9.

VII. Hence the Apostle seems to make mention of those Angels, rather than of the men, that deputed them to that business, and that the more strongly to confirm and prove the thing, which he treats of. As if he should say, The woman hath not only power of her head, to bare her face before him, who is to be her husband, but before them, who are sent, and deputed by him, to betroth her: and from this very thing, saith he, it is clear, that the woman was created for the man, seeing she, that she might be for the man, hath such a power of uncovering her face before those Angels, who come to espouse her, when otherwise by the custom of the Nation it were not lawful. The Apostle conceals the word קרושים Espousals, and saith only Because of the Angels, not, Because of the Angels of Espousals: for by the very scope of his discourse that is easily understood; when in the words immediately going before, he saith, The woman is created for the man. So also the Talmudists very frequently use the single word שילוחים Angels, when once it is known, that they are speaking of Espousals.

VERS.

VERS. XIV.

Ἀνὴρ ἐὰν κομᾷ, &c. That if a man have long hair, &c.

WHether the Apoſtle reproves mens long hair, by occaſion offered from his diſcourſe of womens long hair; or (which is not improbable) that theſe Judaizing Corinthians as yet retained Nazarite-ſhip, and for that cauſe let their hair grow; that which he ſaith, That nature it ſelf teacheth, that it is a diſgrace for a man to have long hair, is ſufficiently confirmed from hence, that it is womaniſh. There were indeed divers Nations which wore long hair, as κομῶντες Ἀχαιοὶ, The long haired Acheans, in Homer; Gallia Comata, Gaul whoſe Inhabitants wore long hair, in the Hiſtorians, &c. But whether in this they followed the light of nature, or rather did it out of their barbarous breeding, or that they might appear more terrible to their enemies, is upon good reaſon inquired.

You will ſay then, whence comes it to paſs that the Nazarites let their hair grow, and that by divine command? I anſwer, it was a ſign of humiliation, and ſelf-denyal, as abſtaining from Wine and Grapes alſo was. It made a ſhew of a certain religious ſlovenlineſs, and contempt of a mans ſelf.

They are therefore very much deceived, who think that Abſalom let his hair grow out of pride, when he did ſo indeed by reaſon of a vow (at leaſt a feigned vow) of Nazarite-ſhip. The Jeruſalem Talmudiſts ſay very truly; אבישלום נזיר עולם היה d Abſalom, ſay they, was a perpetual Nazarite. Very truly, I ſay, in this, that they aſſert he was a Nazarite: but of the perpetuity of his vow we will not here diſpute. See 2 Sam. XV. 7, 8.

d Nazir, fol. 51.2.

There is, in Tacitus, a wicked Votary not unlike him, Civilis by name; of whom thus he ſpeaks, e Civilis, barbaro Voto, poſt cœpta adverſus Romanos arma, propexum rutilatumq; crinem, &c. Civilis by a barbarous vow, after armes taken up againſt the Romans, laid down his long red hair, the ſlaughter of the Legions being at laſt executed.

e Hiſt. lib. 4. cap. 14.

The Jews, if they were not bound by the vow of a Nazarite, cut their hair very often: and however they did it at other times, certainly always before a Feaſt, and that in honour of the Feaſt, that was approaching. Whence a greater ſuſpicion may here ariſe, that theſe Corinthians by their long hair profeſſed themſelves Nazarites.

f Moed Katon, cap. 3. hal. 1.

Theſe f cut their hair in the feaſt it ſelf: He that comes from a Heathen place, and he that comes out of priſon, and the excommunicate perſon, who is looſed from his excommunication. The ſenſe of the Tradition is this, Thoſe, who were detained by ſome neceſſity before the Feaſt, that they could not cut their hair, might cut it in the Feaſt it ſelf. But if no ſuch neceſſity hindred, they cut their hair before the Feaſt, and commonly on the very Eves of the Feaſt: g When any man cuts not his hair on the Eves of the Feſtival day, but three days before, it appears, that he cut not his hair in honour of the Feaſt.

g Piske Toſaph. at Moed Katon, Art. 78.

We cannot here omit this ſtory. h A certain Travailer, who was a Barbar, and an Aſtrologer, ſaw by his Aſtrology, that the Jews would ſhed his blood (which was to be underſtood of his Proſelytiſm, namely, when they circumciſed him) when a certain Jew therefore came to him, to have his hair cut, he cut his throat. And how many throats did he cut? R. Lazar ben Joſe ſaith, Eighty. R. Joſe ben R. Bon ſaith. Three hundred.

VERS. XV.

Ἡ κόμη ἀντὶ περιβολαίου δέδοται· Her hair is given her for a Covering.

THE daughter of Nicodemus being reduced to miſerable poverty, going to Rabban Jochanan to ſpeak to him, נתעטפה בשערה i vailed her ſelf with her hair, and ſtood before him. The poor woman had no other vail, therefore ſhe uſed that which was given her by nature: and ſhe uſed it (ſhall I ſay, as a ſign? Or) as an Inſtrument, and mark of modeſty, and ſhamefacedneſs.

i Bab. Chetubb. fol. 66.2.

VERS. XXI.

Ἕκαστος τὸ ἴδιον δεῖπνον προλαμβάνει· Every one taketh before other his own ſupper.

I. I Wonder the Agapæ, The love Feaſts, of which S. Jude ſpeaks, verſ. 12. ſhould among Interpreters receive their expoſition hence. In thoſe Feaſts, ſaith Beza, which they call Agapæ, that they uſed to take the holy Supper of the Lord, appears from 1 Cor. XI. Of which thing diſcourſe is had in Tertullians Apologetick, Chap. XXXIX. and in other writings of the Ancients. So he alſo ſpeaks at Act. II. 42. And upon this place, The

The Apostle, saith he, passeth to another Head of this Discourse, namely, the administration of the Lords Supper, to which the Love-feasts were joyned, &c. And upon the following verse, The Love-feasts, although they had been used a long while in the Church, and commendably too, the Apostles themselves being the Authors of them, yet the Apostle judgeth them to be taken away because of their abuse.

So also, Baronius: The use of a most commendable thing persevered as yet in the Church; that what Christ had done at his last Supper, and had admonished his Disciples to do in remembrance of him, that Christians meeting in the Church should sup together, and withal should receive the most holy Eucharist: Which nevertheless when the Corinthians fulfilled not as they ought, Paul doth deservedly reprove.

He that should deny such charitable Feasts to have been used in the Church together with the Eucharist, certainly would contradict all antiquity: but whether those Feasts were these Agapæ, of which the Apostle Jude speaks, whether those Feasts had Christ or his Apostles for their Authors; and whether these Corinthian Feasts were such; if any doubt, he doth it not without cause, nor doth he without probability believe the contrary. Of these Corinthian Feasts, here what Sedulius saith: Among the Corinthians, saith he, heretofore as some assert, prevailed an ill custom, to dishonour the Churches every where by Feasts, which they eat before the Lords Oblation. Which Supper they began a nights; and when the rich came drunk to the Eucharist, the poor were vexed with hunger. But that custom, as they report, came from the Gentile Superstition, as yet among them. Mark that; I should say, From the Jewish Superstition. The very same is in Primasius.

II. If I may, with the good leave of Antiquity, speak freely that which I think concerning the Agapæ, of which the Apostle Jude speaks, take it in a few words.

Those Agapæ, we suppose, were, when strangers were hospitably entertained in each Church, and that at the cost of the Church. And we are of opinion, that this laudable custom was derived from the Synagogues of the Jews: l In the Synagogues they neither eat nor drink, &c. But there was a place near the Synagogue, in which Travellers were wont to sleep and eat. Hence that in Pesachin, m where it is asked, why they consecrate the day (which was usual over a cup of wine) in the Synagogue? And it is answered, לאפוקי אורחים ידי חובתן That Travellers also may do their duty, who eat, and drink and feast in the Synagogue. Here the Glosser enquires, whether it were lawful to eat and drink in the Synagogues, when it is forbid by an open Canon. n And at length among other things he answereth thus, חדרים שמוכיח למיתת הכנסת קרי בי א כגישתא The Chambers which joyned to the Synagogue, are called Synagogues also, and from thence travellers heard the Consecration. There was therefore a certain Hospital, either near or joyning to the Synagogue, wherein travellers and pilgrims were received and entertained at the common cost of the Synagogue. Compare Act. XVIII. 7.

l Glos. in Bava Bathra. f. 3. 2.

m Fol. 101. 1.

n Megil. fol. 28. 1.

But now, that a custom of so great charity was translated into the Christian Church, there are many things which perswade: as also, that these entertainments of strangers were those Agapæ, concerning which St. Jude speaks in terms, and Peter in the same sense, though not in terms, 2 Pet. II.

I. Since the Apostolic Churches imitated the laudable customs of the Synagogues in all things almost, which might more largely be demonstrated, if this were a place for it; it is by no means to be thought, that this so pious, so Christian, so necessary a custom should be passed over by them, I say it again, so necessary. For

II. When the Apostles and Disciples travailed up and down preaching the Gospel, poor enough both by the iniquity of the times, and by the very command of our Saviour: and when at that time not a few were banished from their own dwellings for the profession of the Gospel; the honor of the Gospel, the necessity of the thing, and Christian piety and charity required, that they should be sustained by some such relief.

III. When Gaius is said to be the host of the whole Church, Rom. XVI. 23. You can scarce take this in another sense, than that he was deputed by the Church over the public Hospital; where he discharged his office so laudably, that he carried away a testimony of praise, (if he be the same Gaius, which it is probable he was) from St. John in his third Epistle, vers. 5.

IV. When mention is made of Widdows washing strangers feet, 1 Tim. V. 10. And when Phebe is said to be Διάκονον τῆς ἐκκλησίας τῆς ἐν Κεγχρεαῖς· A Servant of the Church at Kenchrea, Rom. XVI. 1. to omit other women, who are said to labour much in the Lord; you will scarcely fix a better sense upon these Charecters, than that they ministred in that public Hospital, of which we are speaking.

V. And this sense agrees excellently well, above all others, with the place of Jude alledged, as also with that of Peter, who treats of the same thing. For Jude speaks of Apostate Heretics, Seducers, the most wicked of all mortal men; whom, he saith, were σπιλάδες ἐν ἀγάπαις· Spots in their Agapæ. And do you think these were of the same Church, where they so fasted? Were these admitted without any scruple to the Agapæ, if they were appendages to the Lords Supper? For Jude saith ἀφόβως ἑαυτὸς ποιμαίνοντες· feeding themselves without fear, &c. How much more probable is it to think, that these strangers were unknown persons, under the form of believers, wandring up and down, and received in the common Hospital of the Church, and there scattering their errors; and that so much the more boldly, as they were themselves the more unknown. We are far from denying, that some Agapæ, Love-feasts, were used as appendages of the Lords Supper, in more antient ages of the Church: but whether in the times of the Apostles, we ask, and whether Jude means such, we very much doubt, and that such are here pointed out by the Apostle, we do not at all believe. Those banquetings of the Corinthians before the Eucharist, unless we are very much mistaken, look far another way: and I fear, lest while some pursue this place concerning the Lords Supper with such Commentaries of dread and terror, that some being moved and terrified thereby, do altogether avoid this Sacrament, as some deadly thing, and not to be medled with: I fear, I say, that they do hit upon the fault and error of the Corinthians in this business, and that they do not reduce that Ἀναξίως, Unworthily, to their proper crime.

We believe the Jewish part of this Church, although converted to the Gospel, yet retained somewhat of their old Leaven: and as they Judaized in other things, so in this about the Eucharist: so grievously erring concerning the proper end of it, that they thought it only an appendage of the Pasover; or some new or superadded form of the commemoration of the going out of Egypt. Into which error they might be the more apt to fall, they especially who were so inclinable to Judaism, both because it was instituted in bread and wine, which were in the Pasover; and because they had drunk in this from their very cradles, That the Messiah when he should come, would banish or change nothing of the rites of Moses, but would promote and raise all unto a more splendid form and pomp. That this was the error of the Corinthians about the Eucharist, these observations make evident, which the Apostle hints, both in this verse, and those that follow: of which in their order, as we meet with them. And first let us weigh this, that is under our hands.

I. It is clearer than the Sun, that the Apostle sharply reproves the Corinthians for these very Suppers: I say, for the very Suppers, and not only for an abuse happening in the Suppers. For ἴδιον δεῖπνον, his own Supper, he calls that, which was to be eaten at home, if any were so hungry before the Eucharist, that he could not abstain. He dishonoureth the Church with the Supper which was brought into it. Weigh these things and think, whether these Agapæ were those that are supposed.

II. The Corinthians placed somewhat of Religion in these Suppers, when they brought them into the Church. But what was that? Thus doing they retained the shaddow, and memory of keeping the Pasover, and very willingly they imitated the example of Christ in the Ante-supper, that they might the more freely serve their Judaism in so doing: yea, they dreamt that the Eucharist was instituted for the same commemoration with the Pasover. It was Epidemical among the Jews converted to the Gospel, that they embraced Christianity, but did not forgoe Judaism; yea, that they brought over the things of the Gospel, as much as could be, to the doctrins and practices of the Jews.

Ὃς δὲ μεθύει· Another is drunken.

There is none, that we know, that applies not ὁ μὲν πεινᾷ, One is hungry, to the poor, and ὃς δὲ μεθύει Another is drunken, to the rich: which we also once believed: but they seem rather to be applied to the different Nations. Drunken to the Jews, celebrating the Pasover in their Ante-suppers before the Eucharist; and Hungry to the Gentiles, not being hungry so much out of poverty, or necessity, as that they would not embrace such an Ante-supper, as favouring of Judaism.

We may interpret the word μεθύει, another is drunk, more favourably, than to extend it to extream drunkenness. For all know what שכר means, in Gen. XLIII. ult. They drunk largely with him; and Cantic. V. 1. Drink abundantly, O Beloved. Where the LXX read, Ἐμεθύσθησαν μετ' αὐτοῦ· They were drunk with him: and Μεθύσθητε, ἀδελφοί· Be ye drunk, Brethren. But if you will attribute an ignominious sense to it, it does not much differ from that liberal pouring in of wine, which was allowed, and used by some in their celebrating the Pasovers. But the Apostle seems to inveigh against the very use of the thing, namely, against the Suppers themselves, rather than against the abuse of them. For if the excess of those Suppers had been that, which is especially accused, he had bent the force of his reproof more directly against it; but of that there is not one Syllable, besides this word.

We

We therefore believe these two contrary expressions, One is hungry, and another is drunken, are thus to be understood. The Jewish part of the Church would by no means come to the Eucharist without a Paschal Ante-supper, and banquet, where they were treated, ate and drank deliciously, and plentifully, καὶ ἐμέθυον, and drank freely, and were filled, and raised to a pitch of chearfulness; when the Gentile party on the contrary abhorring this Judaizing, and avoyding such Ante-suppers, πεινᾷ, as yet were hungry, and approached to the Sacrament fasting, that is, not having supped. And this we suppose to be the true cause of that enormity, which the Apostle corrects, ver. 33. namely, that they would not tarry one for another: the Gentile party would not tarry, till the Jewish party had dispatched their own time, how much so ever it were, in eating their Suppers.

VERS. XXIII.

Ἐγὼ γὰρ παρέλαβον ἀπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου· For I have received of the Lord.

WHAT need had the Apostle to recur to this? Did the Corinthians doubt of the institution of the Eucharist? Or, of the authority of the Apostle, who delivered unto them that institution? It was neither one, nor the other; for they came to the Eucharist, and that because it was delivered them by the Apostle. But he calls them back hither for this reason, that from the words of Christ, who had instituted his own Supper, and from his words wherein he had delivered to them that institution, they might observe, that the scope and end of that institution was the commemoration of the death of Christ, not any Paschal commemoration.

I. Namely, that Christ had said, This is my body; This is my blood; to teach that the bread and wine now looked another way, than they had looked, when they were used in the Passover. In that the unleavened bread shewed their hasty deliverance out of Egypt, and the wine their joy for that deliverance. But in the Eucharist, the bread points out the body of our Lord broken, and the wine his blood poured out.

II. That he said also of the wine, that it is the New Testament in his blood: and what had it therefore to do with the Passover of the Old Testament?

III. That he said lastly upon both, Do this in commemoration of me. In commemoration of me, not in commemoration of the Passover, or any thing else.

VERS. XXV.

Τοῦτο τὸ ποτήριον· This Cup.

THAT our Saviour speaks here figuratively hath been sufficiently proved formerly by very many. But let us observe this moreover. That cup, which Christ used was mixed with water, if so be he retained the ordinary custom of the Nation in this matter, which is not in the least to be doubted. Of the custom of the Nation we have spoke at Mat. XXVI. 27. Now repeating this only thence: o The Wise men gave their votes for R. Eleazar, that none must bless over the cup of blessing, until water be mingled with it. This we note, that the harmony between the Sacramental Blood, as we may so call it, of the Old Testament, and this Sacramental Blood of the New may be demonstrated: and in like manner between this Sacramental Blood of the New Testament, and the very Blood of Christ.

o Bab. Beracoth, fol. 50. 2.

I. In the striking of the old Covenant, Exod. XXIV. there was blood mixed with water, Heb. IX. 19. and in this Sanction of the new, there was wine also mixed with water.

II. Out of Christs side with blood flowed water, Joh. XIX. 34. Unusual, beside the course of Nature, and that it might answer the Type.

Matthew and Mark exhibit the words of Christ thus, Τοῦτο ἐστὶ τὸ αἷμά μου τὸ τῆς καινῆς διαθήκης. This is my blood of the New Testament: Paul and Pauls companion, Luke thus, Τοῦτο τὸ ποτήριον ἡ καινὴ διαθήκη ἐν τῷ ἐμῷ αἵματι· This cup is the New Covenant in my blood: to the same sense with the former; but more explained. And here again, let us compare the Sanction of the old Covenant, Exod. XXIV.

I. A figurative expression is used in that History: when it is said that Moses sprinkled the blood upon all the people; that is, upon the twelve pillars erected by him, to represent the twelve tribes, vers. 4. So also in this place, This is my blood, that is, The representation of my blood.

II. Of the blood then ſprinkled it might be ſaid, This is the blood of Chriſt, of the old, or firſt Teſtament. The very blood then, and from thence repreſented the blood of Chriſt: becauſe under the Old Teſtament there was from time to time to be ſhedding of blood. But now wine is a repreſentation of the blood of Chriſt: becauſe thence forward the ſhedding of ſuch kind of blood was to ceaſe.

III. The old Covenant was not eſtabliſhed in the blood of that Paſchal Lamb in Egypt, but in the blood of Bulls and Goats in the wilderneſs. And the reaſon was, becauſe when the Paſsover was inſtituted, the Laws and Articles, concerning which the Covenant was entred into, had not been promulgated: but when they were publiſhed and written, then the Covenant was eſtabliſhed. In like manner Chriſt in the inſtitution of Baptiſm eſtabliſhed not the New Covenant: Baptiſm was the beginning of the Goſpel, Mark I. 1. But when he had delivered the doctrin and articles of the Goſpel, then he eſtabliſhed the New Teſtament.

Ἡ καινὴ διαθήκη· The New Teſtament.

p Hieroſ. Peah, fol. 17. 2.

אי זו היא מתנה תהא לי להיות ולעמוד ואם מתי אי זו היה דיתיקי נכסי לפלוני p What is giving? Behold all my goods are given to N. from this time. What is Διαθήκη, a Covenant? Let mine be my own, and remain ſo, but when I dy, let N. have them. So the Apoſtle, Heb. IX. 16. Ὅπου γὰρ διαθήκη, &c. Where a Teſtament is, there muſt of neceſſity be the death of the Teſtator, &c.

I. This Cup is not only a ſign of the blood of Chriſt, nor only a Seal as a Sacrament; but the very Sanction of the New Teſtament, that is, of the whole Evangelic adminiſtration, not only the Sanction of a Covenant, but the Sanction of the Covenant under the Evangelic adminiſtration. From thenceforth was the ceſſation of Judaiſm. So that blood, Exod. XXIV. was not only the Sanction of the Covenant of grace, and the Sanction of the Covenant of the peculiarity of the people of Iſrael, but the Sanction of theſe things under ſuch an Oeconomy.

II. While therefore we receive this Sacrament, we profeſs and proteſt againſt all other diſpenſations and religions, beſides that of the Goſpel. Hence in the times immediately following the aſcention of Chriſt, the communication of the Euchariſt was ſo frequent; viz. that they, who had been now newly converted from Judaiſm, by the uſe of this Sacrament, might ſhew, that they renounced their Judaiſm, and profeſſed the Faith and Oeconomy of the Goſpel.

III. Our Communion therefore in this Sacrament is not ſo much Spiritual, as External, and declarative of our common and joynt profeſſion of the Chriſtian Faith. We are far from denying, that the Saints have a Spiritual Communion with God, and among themſelves in the uſe of the Euchariſt; yea we aſſert there is a moſt cloſe Communion between true believers and God. But what is that Spiritual Communion of Saints among themſelves? Mutual love, one heart, prayers for one another, &c. But they may exerciſe the ſame Communion, and do exerciſe it, when they meet together to any other part of Divine Worſhip. They may and do act the ſame thing, when they are diſtant from one another. Therefore their Communion in this Sacrament, which is diſtinctly called the Communion of the Euchariſt, is, that they meet together, and by this outward ſign, openly and with joynt minds profeſs, that they are united in one ſacred knot and bond of Chriſtian Religion, renouncing all other Religions.

IV. When therefore we approach to the Euchariſt in any Church, we do not only communicate with that congregation, with which we aſſociate at that time, but with the whole Catholic Church in the profeſſion of the true Evangelic Religion.

VERS. XXVI.

Τὸν θάνατον τοῦ Κυρίου καταγγέλλετε· Ye do ſhew the Lords death.

IT is known, what the הגדה in the Paſsover Supper was, namely, a Declaration of the great works of God in the deliverance of the people out of Egypt. The ſame, as it ſeems, would theſe Judaizing Corinthians retain in the Lords Supper; as if the Euchariſt were inſtituted and ſuperadded only for that commemoration. The word καταγγέλλετε does very well anſwer to the word הגדה the Declaration: and while the Apoſtle admoniſheth them, that the death of Chriſt is that which is to be declared, it may be gathered, that they erred in this very thing, and looked ſome other way.

VERS.

VERS. XXVII.

Ἀναξίως· Unworthily.

THE Apostle explains himself vers. 29. Where we also will speak of this verse.

VERS. XXVIII.

Δοκιμαζέτω ὴ ἄνθρωπος, &c. Let a man examine himself, &c.

HE had said before verse 19. Ἵνα οἱ δόκιμοι φανεροὶ γένωνται, That they which are approved may be made manifest. And in the same sense he saith δοκιμαζέτω, Let a man approve himself, in this place; not so much, Let him try, or examine himself, as Let him approve himself; that is, Let him shew himself approved by the Christian Faith and Doctrine. So Chap. XVI. 3. Ὅυς ἐὰν δοκιμάζητε· Whomsoever ye shall approve. We meet with the word in the same sense very often.

VERS. XXIX.

Μὴ διακρίνων τὸ σῶμα τὸ Κυρίου· Not discerning the Lords body.

THIS is to be meant of the proper act of the understanding: viz. Of the true judgment concerning the nature and signification of the Sacrament. If it were said indeed, Μὴ διακρίνων τὸν Κύριον· Not discerning the Lord, it might be rendred in the same sense, as He knew not the Lord, that is, he loves him not, he fears him not, he worships him not. But when it is said, Μὴ διακρίνων τὸ Σῶμα· Not discerning the body, it plainly speaks of the act of the understanding: He does not rightly distinguish of the body of the Lord. And this was a grievous error of these Judaizing Corinthians, who would see nothing of the body of Christ in the Eucharist, or of his death; their eyes being too intent upon the commemoration of the Passover. They retained the old Leaven of Judaism in this new Passover of the Eucharist. And this was their partaking of the Sacrament ἀναξίως, unworthily, as assigning it a scope and end much too unworthy, much too mean.

Ther are, alas! among Christians, some who come to this Sacrament ἀναξίως, unworthily; but whether this unworthily of the Corinthians, be fitly applied to them, I much doubt. How mean soever I am, let me speak this freely, with the leave of good and pious men, that I fear, that this discourse of the Apostle, which especially chastized Judaizers, be too severely applyed to Christians, that Judaize not at all: at least that it be not by very many Interpreters applied to the proper and intended scope of it.

Of these Corinthians receiving the Eucharist unworthily in the sense of which we spake, the Apostle speaks two dreadful things.

I. That they became ἔνοχοι τῷ Σώματι καὶ τῷ Αἵματι τοῦ Κυρίου· Guilty of the body and blood of the Lord, vers. 27. With this I compare that of the Apostle, Heb. X. 29. He hath trampled under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the Covenant, by which he, the Son of God, was sanctified, a common thing. And Heb. VI. 6. They crucify again to themselves the Son of God, καὶ παραδειγματίζειν, and put him to an open shame. Of whom is the discourse? Not of all Christians, that walked not exactly according to the Gospel rule (although they indeed esteem and treat Christ too ignominously) but of those that relapse and Apostatize from the Gospel to Judaism, whether these Corinthians too much inclined, and are admonished seasonably to take care of the same guilt: for when any professing the Gospel, so declined to Judaism, that he put the blood of Christ in subordination to the Passover, and acknowledged nothing more in it, than was acknowledged in the blood of a Lamb, and other Sacrifices, namely, that they were a mere commemoration and nothing else, oh! how did he vilify that blood of the eternal Covenant: He is guilty of the blood of the Lord, who assents to the shedding of his blood, and, gives his vote to his death, as inflicted for a mere shaddow, and nothing else; which they did.

II. That they ate and drank κρῖμα ἑαυτῷ, Judgment to themselves. But what that judgment is, is declared vers. 30. Many are sick, &c. It is too sharp, when some turn κρῖμα by Damnation, when the Apostle saith most evidently vers. 32. that κρινόμενοι κρῖμα by Damnation, when the Apostle saith most evidently vers. 32. that κρινόμενοι παιδευόμεθα, ἵνα μὴ κατακριθῶμεν· When we are judged we are chastened, that we should not be condemned.

Thus as in the beginning of the Moſaical Diſpenſation, God vindicated the honour of the Sabbath, by the death of him that gathered ſticks; and the honour of the worſhip in the Tabernacle, by the death of Nadab and Abihu; and the honour of his Name, by the ſtoning of the Blaſphemer: ſo he ſet up like monuments of his vengeance in the beginning of the Goſpel Diſpenſation, in the dreadful deſtruction of Ananias and Sapphira, for the wrong and reproach offered to the Holy Ghoſt; in the delivery of ſome into the hands of Satan, for contempt of, and enmity againſt the Goſpel; in this judgment, for the abuſe of the Euchariſt; in the deſtruction of ſome by the Plague for Nicolaitiſm Revel. II. 23, &c.

VERS. XXXIII.

Ἀλλήλως ἀνδέχεσθε · Tarry one for another.

NOT that he allowed thoſe Ante-ſuppers of the Judaizers, and commands the Gentile party of the Church to wait till the Jewiſh part eat thoſe Suppers: but having before wholly condemned thoſe Paſchal Ante-ſuppers, he would take away all dividing into parties, and that all might reſort to the Euchariſt together with one accord, not ſeparately, and in parts and contentions.

CHAP. XII.

VERS. III.

Λέγει Ἀνάθεμα Ἰησοῦν · Calleth Jeſus accurſed.

VERY many Jews, that were Magicians, Exorciſts, Conjurers, wandred up and down, who boaſted that they were endued with the Holy Ghoſt, taught much, and did miracles; and yet called our Lord Jeſus Anathema. But be ye certain, ſaith Apoſtle, that theſe men neither ſpeak, nor act, nor are acted by the Spirit of God: For no man ſpeaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jeſus accurſed. On the other part alſo, the whole Jewiſh Nation indeed denyed, that the Holy Ghoſt was given to the Gentiles. The Holy Ghoſt, ſay they, dwells not upon any without the land of Iſrael a. Hence is that, Act. X. 45. The believers that were of the Circumciſion were aſtoniſhed, that even upon the Gentiles had been poured out the gift of the Holy Ghoſt.

a See R. Sol. in Jon. I.

But, ſaith the Apoſtle, when the Gentiles confeſs Jeſus is the Lord, they do not this but by the Holy Ghoſt. And ſo he inſtructs Chriſtians, that they be not deceived by the crafty and magical Spirits of the Jews; and in like manner he ſtops the mouth of the Jews, that they ſhould not deny the Holy Spirit to be beſtowed upon the Gentile Chriſtians.

VERS. VIII.

Λόγος σοφίας, &c. The word of Wiſdom, &c.

WHEN the Apoſtle in this very Chapter numbers up thrice the gifts of the Spirit, perhaps it will not be in vain to make them ſtand parallel in that very order, wherein he recites and ranks them.

VERS. X.		VERS. XXX.

Ἑρμηνεία γλωσσῶν, Interpretation of Tongues.		Διερμηνεύειν, Interpret.

We will not be ſo curious, as to conclude, that all the words that are placed in parallel denote the very ſame things, when Paul himſelf inverts his own order concerning the Gifts of Healings, and of Miracles, or Powers, verſ. 9. and 28. and 30. Yet we cannot be ſo negligent, but to obſerve a little his order, that we might fetch ſomething out of it.

Λόγον σοφίας, The word of Wiſdom therefore we attribute to the Apoſtles: becauſe they unfolded in a divine clearneſs the whole myſtery of the moſt deep Wiſdom of God concerning Chriſt, and the Salvation of Man. Concerning which our Apoſtle very frequently.

Λόγον γνώσεως, The word of Knowledge, we attribute to the Prophets, that is, The Knowledge of things to come.

But how do we apply πίστιν, Faith to Teachers? That by Faith in this place is not to be underſtood juſtifying Faith, is granted, as I think, by all; and that upon good reaſon, when the Apoſtle treats here only of the extraordinary gifts of the Spirit: Nor can I indeed underſtand it of the Faith of Miracles; not of the Faith of doing Miracles, becauſe δυνάμεις, Miracles, and χαρίσματα ἰαμάτων, Gifts of Healings, are particularly, and diſtinctly reckoned up: Nor of the Faith of believing Miracles, becauſe the diſcourſe here is of the ways and perſons that actively propagated the Goſpel, not paſſively that received it. By Faith therefore I would underſtand Fiducia, that is, a holy boldneſs, confidence, and magnanimity, wherewith thoſe moſt holy Preachers of the Goſpel were armed; ſo that they could not be terrified by any thing, nor by any perſon. See Act. IV. 13. But eſpecially verſ. 29. 31. And in this ſenſe Faith may very well be attributed to Teachers.

Miracles, and the Gifts of Healings are very eaſily both diſtinguiſhed, and underſtood. You have them again ſo diſtinguiſhed, Mark VI. 5. and XVI. 17, 18.

Ἀντιλήψεις, Helps, were they probably, who accompanied the Apoſtles, and baptized thoſe that were converted by them, and were ſent here and there by them to ſuch places, to which they, being employed in other things, could not come: as Mark, Timothy, Titus, &c. The Talmudiſts ſometimes call the Levites מסעדו לכהנים Ἀντιλήψεις ἱερέων, Helps of the Prieſts.

Προφητεία, Propheſie, and Ἀντιλήψεις, Helps, are placed in parallel according to the order of the Apoſtle; and do agree indeed excellently well together, if you take Propheſie for Preaching: which is done very frequently.

Κυβερνήσεις, Governments alſo, and διακρίσεις πνευμάτων, Diſcerning of Spirits ſtand parallel; and that they denote one and the ſame thing, I ſcarcely make a doubt. But κυβερνήσεις in this place to me ſounds not Governments, or a power of ruling, but it ſpeaks a deep and profound reach: in which ſenſe it occurs in the LXX Interpreters more than once; and anſwers to the Hebrew word תחבולות Prudent counſils, Prov. I. 15. נבון תחבלות יקנה Ὁ νοήμων κυβέρνησιν κτήσεται. The Interlinear Verſion reads, Intelligens conſilia ſolertia poſſidebit; The Underſtanding man ſhall poſſeſs wiſe counſils. Aben Ezra ſaith, תחבלות ענין עצה ומחשבה Tabbuloth denotes counſel, and thinking. See alſo Kimchi, and R. Solomon upon the place. And the ſame LXX, Chap. XI. 14. באין תחבלות יפל עם reads, Οἷς μὴ ὑπάρχει κυβέρνησις, πίπτουσι· They who have not κυβέρνησιν, fall. What the word means you may eaſily gather from the Antitheſis in the following words, ותשועה ברב יועץ Σωτηρία δὲ ὑπάρχει ἐν πολλῇ βουλῇ· But ſafety is in in much Counſil. And again,

Chap.

Chap. XIV. 6. בתחבלות תעשה לך מלחמה The Seventy read, Μετὰ κυβερνήσεως γενέσθω πόλεμός σοι. War is made with κυβέρνησις. The Vulgar reads, Cum diſpoſitione inter bellum, with diſpoſing, or, ſetting things in order.

Διάκρισις πνευμάτων, Diſcerning of Spirits, was the Judging between Magical and Diabolical Spirits, and their operations, and between the operations and ſpeech of the Holy Ghoſt. For many falſe Prophets had at that time gone out into the World, 1 Joh. IV. 1. and that, Κατ' ἐνέργειαν τοῦ Σατανᾶ ἐν πάσῃ δυνάμει, καὶ σημείοις καὶ τέρασι ψεύδους· According to the working of Satan in all power, and ſigns, and lying wonders. So that it was not eaſie, I had almoſt ſaid, it was impoſſible, to diſtinguiſh between their wonders, and the true miracles of the Holy Ghoſt. But the moſt merciful God taking pity upon his people, among other gifts of the Holy Ghoſt ſhed abroad for the edification of the Church, granted this alſo to ſome, that they might diſtinguiſh of prophetical Spirits, whether they were true and divine, or falſe and diabolical. That this deep reach is pointed out under this word Κυβερνήσεις, the Apoſtles order, the ſignification of the word, and the thing it ſelf do not a little perſwade. For when among all the gifts of the Spirit, there was ſcarce any, either more uſeful, or more neceſſary, than this judging of Spirits, I think he would hardly omit it in his ſecond Enumeration. But where will you find the mention of it, if not in that word?

VERS. I.

Γλώσσαις τῶν Ἀγγέλων· With the tongues of Angels.

a Bava Bathra, fol. 134. 1.

R Abban a Jochanan ben Zaccai omitted not שיחת שרים ושיחת רקלים ושיחת מלאכי השרת The ſpeech, or the Talk, of Devils, of Palms, and of Angels: but had learned it. The Gloſs is, The ſpeech of Devils, to exorcize them, and of Angels, to adjure them. The Apoſtle ſpeaks according to the conception of the Natioa.

Κύμβαλον ἀλαλάζον· A tinkling Cymbal.

b Erachin, fol. 13. 2.

Κύμβαλον, A Cymbal, in the Talmudiſts is צלצל Of which thus they write, ואסף במצלתים לשמיע b And Aſaph with loud Cymbals, 1 Chron. XXV. The little bells, or Cymbals, were two, (as appears from the Dual number) But when they performed one work, and one man performed it, they are called one. The Aruch ſaith, They were two balls of braſs, and they ſtruck one againſt another.

But now κύμβαλον ἀλαλάζον, A tinkling Cymbal was, when theſe two Balls were ſtruck one againſt another without any either meaſure or tone of Muſick, but with a rude, inartificial, and howling ſound, Mark V. 38. Κλαίοντας, καὶ ἀλαλάζοντας, Weeping, and howling.

We may obſerve in theſe inſtances, which are compared with charity, and are as good as nothing, if charity be abſent, that the Apoſtle mentions them, which were of the nobleſt eſteem in the Jewiſh Nation; as alſo the moſt precious things, which could be named by them, were compared with this more precious, and were of no account in compariſon of it.

I. Λαλεῖν γλώσσαις τῶν Ἀνθρώπων· To ſpeak with the Tongues of men, with thoſe Interpreters is, to ſpeak the Tongues of the ſeventy Nations, or at leaſt, To ſpeak the Tongues of many Nations. So they relate it to the praiſe of Mordechai, that he perfectly underſtood the Languages of the ſeventy Nations; and they require of the Fathers of the Sanhedrin, that they be ſkilled in many Languages, that the Sanhedrin hear nothing by an Interpreter.

c Maimon. in Sanhedr. cap. 2.

II. Λαλεῖν γλώσσαις Ἀγγέλων· To ſpeak with the Tongues of Angels. For this ſingular praiſe they extol Jochanan ben Zaccai in the example alledged.

III. Εἰδεῖν μυστήρια πάντα, &c. To know all myſteries, &c. So they from the ſame place cited above; Hillel the Elder had eighty Diſciples: thirty, who were worthy to have the holy Spirit dwell upon them, as it did upon Moſes. Thirty worthy, for whom the Sun ſhould ſtop his courſe, as it did for Joſua. Twenty were between both. The greateſt of all was Jonathan ben Uzziel; the leaſt was Jochanan ben Zaccai. He omitted not (but perfectly underſtood) the Scripture, the Miſhnah, the Gemara, the Idiotiſms of the Law, and the Scribes, Traditions, Illuſtrations, Compariſons, Equalities, Gematries, Parables, &c.

CHAP. XIV.

VERS. II.

Ὁ γὰρ λαλῶν γλώσσῃ· He that speaketh in a Tongue.

Speaking in a Tongue? In what Tongue? You will find this to be no idle question, when you have well weighed these things.

I. There is none with reason will deny, that this whole Church of Corinth understood one and the same Corinthian or Greek Language: as also, that the Apostle here speaks of the Ministers of that Church, and not of strangers. But now it seems a thing not to be believed, that any Minister of that Church would use Arabic, Egyptian, Armenian, or any other unknown Languague publickly in the Church; from whence not the least benefit could accrue to the Church, or to the Minister himself. For although these Ministers had their faults, and those no light ones neither, yet we would not willingly accuse them of mere foolishness, as speaking an unknown Language for no reason: nor of ostentation, as speaking only for vain glory. And although we deny not, that it was necessary, that those wonderful gifts of the Holy Ghost should be manifested before all the people, for the honour of him that gave them; yet we hardly believe, that they were to be shewn vainly, and for no benefit.

II. The Apostle saith, vers. 4. Ὁ λαλῶν γλώσσῃ ἑαυτὸν οἰκοδομεῖ· He that speaketh in a Tongue edifieth himself. Which how could he do from those Tongues, when he could have uttered those very things in his Mother Tongue, and have reaped the same fruit of edification?

III. The Apostle tolerates an unknown Tongue, if an Interpreter were present. But I scarce believe he would tolerate, that one should prate in Scythian, Parthian, or Arabick, &c. when he could utter the same things in the Corinthian Language, and without the trouble of the Church, and an Interpreter.

We are of opinion therefore, nor without reason, that that unknown Language, which they used, or abused rather, in the Church, was the Hebrew; which now of a long time past was not the common and Mother Tongue, but was gone into disuse; but now by the gift of the Holy Ghost it was restored to the Ministers of the Church; and that necessarily, and for the profit of the Church. We enquire not, in how many unknown Languages they could speak, but how many they spake in the Church; and we believe that they spake Hebrew only.

How necessary that Language was to Ministers, there is none that doubts. And hence it is, that the Apostle permits to speak in this (as we suppose) unknown Language, if an Interpreter were present, because it wanted not its usefulness. The usefulness appeared thence, as well to the speaker, while he now skilled and more deeply understood the original Language; as also to the Hearers, while those things were rendred truly, which that Mystical and Sacred Language contained in it.

The foundations of Churches were now laying, and the foundations of Religion in those Churches; and it was not the least part of the Ministerial task at that time, to prove the Doctrine of the Gospel, and the person, and the actions, and the sufferings of Christ out of the Old Testament: now the Original text was unknown to the common people; the Version of the Seventy Interpreters was faulty in infinite places; the Targum upon the Prophets was unconstant, and Judaized; the Targum upon the Law was, as yet none at all; so that it was impossible to discover the mind of God in the Holy Text without the immediate gift of the Spirit, imparting perfect and full skill both of the Language and of the sense: that so the foundations of Faith might be laid from the Scriptures, and the true sense of the Scriptures might be propagated without either error, or the comments of men.

The Apostle saith, Let him pray, that he may interpret, vers. 13. And Interpretation is numbred among the extraordinary gifts of the Spirit. Now let it be supposed that he spake Latine, Arabick, Persian: either he understood what he spake, or he did not: if he did not, then how far was he from edifying himself? And yet the Apostle saith, He that that ſpeaks in a Tongue edifies himſelf. If he underſtood what he ſpake, how eaſie was it for him, to render it in the Corinthian Language? There are many now Learned by ſtudy, who are able to tranſlate thoſe Tongues into the Corinthian or the Greek without that extraordinary gift of Interpretation, immediately poured out by the Holy Ghoſt. But let it be ſuppoſed, which we do ſuppoſe, that he ſpake in the Hebrew Tongue, that he either read, or quoted the holy Text in the original Language; and that he either preached or prayed in the phraſes of the Prophets; it ſufficed not to the Interpretation, to render the bare words into bare words, but to underſtand the ſenſe and marrow of the Prophets Language, and plainly and fully to unfold their myſteries in apt and lively and choiſe words, according to the mind of God: which the Evangeliſts and Apoſtles by a divine ſkill do in their writings.

Hear the judgment of the Jews concerning a juſt Interpretation of the holy Text. They are treating of the manner of eſpouſing a woman. Among other things theſe paſſages occur. חר" על מנת שאני קריינא The Rabbins deliver; If he ſaith, Be thou my Eſpouſer, if I read: If he read three verſes in the Synagogue, behold ſhe is eſpouſed. R. Judah ſaith, Not until he read, and interpret. יתרגם מרעתיה may he interpret according to his own ſenſe? But the Tradition is this, R. Judah ſaith, המתרגם פסוק כצורתו He that interprets a verſe according to his own form, behold he is a lyar. If he add any thing to it, behold he is a Reproacher and Blaſphemer. What therefore is the Targum? Or what Interpretation is to be uſed? Our Targum.

a Bab. Kiddush. fol. 49. 1.

The Gloſs there writes thus. He that Interprets a verſe according to his own form,] that is, according to the literal ſound. For example, לא תענה על ריב Exod. XXIII. 2. He that interprets that thus, לא הסהיד על רינה Thou ſhalt not teſtifie againſt judgment, is a lyar: for he commands, that judgment be brought forth into light. But let him ſo interpret it, Thou ſhalt not reſtrain thy ſelf from teaching any that enquire of thee in judgment. So Onkelos renders it.

If he add any thing to it.] If he ſay, Becauſe liberty is given to add ſomewhat, I will add whereſoever it liſts me: he ſets God at nought, and changeth his words. For whereſoever Onkelos added, he added not of his own ſenſe. For the Targum was given in Mount Sinai; and when they forgat it, he came and reſtored it. And Rab. Chananeel explains thoſe words, He that Interprets a verſe according to his own form, by this example, וראו את אלהי ישראל Exod. XXIV. 10. He that ſhall render it thus, וחוו יה אלהא דישראל And they ſaw the God of Iſrael, is a lyar; for no man hath ſeen God, and ſhall live: And he will add to it, who ſhould render it, והוו ית מלאכא דאלהא And they ſaw the Angel of God. For he attributes the Glory of God to an Angel. But let him interpret it thus, וחוו ית יקרא דאלהא And they ſaw the Glory of the God of Iſrael. So Onkelos again.

So great a work do they reckon it to interpret the ſacred Text. And theſe things which have been ſaid perhaps will afford ſome light about the gift of Interpretation.

But although the uſe of the Hebrew Tongue among theſe Miniſters, was ſo profitable and neceſſary; yet there was ſome abuſe, which the Apoſtle chaſtiſeth; namely, that they uſed it not to edification, and without an Interpreter: and further, while I behold the thing more cloſely, I ſuſpect them to Judaize in this matter, which we have before obſerved them to have done in other things; and that they retained the uſe of the Hebrew Language in the Church, although unknown to the common people, and followed the cuſtom of the Synagogue. Where,

I. The Scripture is not read, but in the Hebrew Text; yea, as we believe, in the Synagogues even of the Helleniſts: as we diſpute elſewhere of that matter.

II. Publick prayers in the Synagogue were alſo made in Hebrew, one or two excepted which were in Chaldee. b They were wont to repeat the prayer, whoſe beginning is קריש after Sermon. For the common people were there preſent, who underſtood not the holy Language. Therefore this prayer they compoſed in the Chaldee Tongue, that all might underſtand. The reſt they underſtood not.

b Gloſs. in Beracoth, fol. 3. 1.

III. He that taught, or preached out of the chair, ſpoke Hebrew, and by an Interpreter. c The Interpreter ſtood before the Doctor, who preached, חכם לוחש לו לשון עברית And the Doctor whiſpered him in the ear in Hebrew, and he rendred it to the people in the mother Tongue. And there in the Gemara, a ſtory is related of Rabh, who was preſent as Interpreter to R. Shillah: and when R. Shillah ſaid, קרא גבר The Cock crows, Rabh rendred it, קרא גברא when he ſhould have rendred it קדא תרנגולא Hence there is very frequent mention in the Books of the Talmudiſts of אמוריה מתרגמניה של פלוני and של פלוני The Interpreter of this and that Doctor.

c Gloſs. in Joma, fol. 20. 2.

While I conſider theſe things uſed in the Synagogues of the Jews, and remember that a great part of the Church of Corinth conſiſted of Jews; I cannot but ſuſpect, that their Miniſters alſo uſed the ſame Tongue according to the old cuſtom. Namely, that one read the Scripture out of the Hebrew Text, another prayed, or preached in the Hebrew Language, Language, according to the custom used in the Synagogues. Which thing indeed the Apostle allowed, so there were an Interpreter, as was done in the Synagogues: because that Language full of misteries, being rendred by a fit Interpreter, might very much conduce to the Edification of the Church.

I suspect also that they Judaized in the confused mixture of their voices: which seems to be done by them, because the Apostle admonisheth them to speak by turns, ver. 27. and not together. Now from whence they might fetch that confusedness, judge from these passages. d The Rabbins deliver. In the Law one reads, and one interprets; And let not one read, and two interpret. But in the Prophets one reads, and two interpret. But let not two read, and two interpret. And in the Hallel, and in the book of Esther ten may read, and ten interpret. d Megil. fol. 21. 2.

The Glos is thus, Let not one read in the Law, and two interpret.] Much less, let two read. And the reason is, because two voices together are not heard. But in the Prophets, let one read, and two interpret] Because the interpretation was for the sake of women, and the common people, who understood not the holy Language. An it was necessary, they should hear the interpretation of the Law, that they might understand the precepts: But of the interpretation of the Prophets they were not so accurate.

Ὁ δὲ προφητεύων· He that propheseth.

The word προφητεύειν, To propheste, comprehends three things, Singing Psalms, Doctrin, and Revelation: as vers. 26.

I. To Propheste is taken for singing Psalms, or celebrating the praises of God, 1 Sam. X. 5. A Choir of Prophets shall meet thee with a drum, a pipe and a harp, and המה מתנבאים they shall propheste. Where the Chaldee ואינון משבחין And they shall sing or praise. And Chap. XIX. 24, 25. ובול מיול ומשבח And he went forward singing. And he put off his (royal) garment, ושבח and sung.

From this signification of the word propheseying, you may understand in what sense a woman is said to propheste, Chap. XI. 5. that is, To sing Psalms. For what is there said by the Apostle, A man praying or propheseying, and a woman praying or propheseying, is explained in this Chapter, when it is said, I will pray, and I will sing.

II. To propheste is to preach, or to have a doctrin, as vers. 26. Hence the Chaldee almost always renders נבוא a Prophet by ספרא a Scribe, or Learned, or one that teacheth. When it is very ordinarily said of those, that were endued with extraordinary gifts, That they spake with Tongues, and Propheseied, Act. X. 46. it is said, that they spake with Tongues and magnified God. For, they propheseied, is said they magnified God. And that, these two ways, either by praysing God, or by preaching and declaring the wonderful things of God, Act. XI. 11.

III. To Propheste is to foretel and teach something from divine revelation; which is expressed vers. 26. by Hath a revelation. In those times there were some who being inspired with a Spirit of Revelation, either foretold things to come; as Agabus did a famine, Act. XI. 28. and Pauls bonds, Act. XXI. 10. or revealed the mind of God to the Church, concerning the doing or the not doing this or that thing: as Act. XIII. 2. By the Prophets of Antioch they separate Paul and Barnabas, &c.

VERS. V.

Θέλω δὲ πάντας ὑμᾶς λαλεῖν γλώσσαις· I would that ye all spake with Tongues.

THE words do not so much speak wishing, as directing; as though he had said, I restrain you not to propheseying alone, however I speak those things, which are vers. 1, 2, 3. But I will exhort, that ye spake with Tongues, when it is convenient, but rather, that ye propheste. He had said, Tongue, in the singular number, vers. 2, 4. because he spake of a single man; now he saith, Tongues, in the plural number, in the very same sense, but that he speaks of many speaking.

Would the Apostle therefore have this, or doth he perswade it, or doth he wish it, if so be it be a wish; I would have you all speak in the Church in the Punic, Egyptian, Ethiopic, Scythian, and other unknown tongues? Think seriously to what end this could be. But if you understand it of the Hebrew, the end is plain.

VERS. XV.

Τί ἐστιν ; What is it then?

THE Apoſtle renders in Greek the Phraſe מהו moſt common in the Schools, e Rabba asked Abai, בא עליה ונתארסה מהו A man goes in to the woman, when ſhe is eſpouſed: what then? Or what is to be reſolved in that caſe? Again, f The wife ſaith, I will ſuckle the Infant: but the husband ſaith, thou ſhalt not ſuckle him. The women hearken. But the husband ſaith, that ſhe ſhould ſuckle it, the wife ſaith not. מהו What is then to be done? g One goes in the ſtreet, and finds a purſe, מהו What is to be done with it? behold it becomes his. But an Iſraelite comes, and gives ſome ſigns of it, מהו What is then to be reſolved on? ילמדנו רבינו h Let our Maſter teach us, כהן בעל מום מהו שישא את כפיו A Prieſt that hath a blemiſh, מה ἐστιν ; What is it, that he lift up his hands, to bleſs the people? that is, What is to be reſolved concerning him? whether he ſhould lift up his hands or no? And the determination of the Queſtion follows every where.

To the ſame ſenſe the Apoſtle in this place, τί οὖν ἐστιν ; What therefore is to be done in this caſe, about the uſe of an unknown tongue? he determines, I will pray with the Spirit, and I will pray with the underſtanding.

So verſ. 26. Τί ἐστιν, ἀδελφοί; What is it, brethren? that is, What is to be done in this caſe, when every one hath a Pſalm, hath a doctrin, &c. He determines, Let all things be done to edification.

Προσεύξομαι τῷ πνεύματι, &c. I will pray with the Spirit, &c.

That is, in the demonſtation of the gifts of the Spirit; and I will pray with the underſtanding, that is, That I be underſtood by others.

VERS. XVI.

Ὁ ἀναπληρῶν τὸν τόπον τοῦ ἰδιώτου· He that occupieth the room of the unlearned.

הדיוט Hidjot, a word very uſual among the Rabbins. ר' מ' היה דורש לשון הדיוט i R. Meir explained, or determined, in the private tongue. So alſo R. Judah. And Hillel the old. And R. Jochanan ben Korchah, &c. The Gloſs is, Private men were wont to write other wiſe, than according to the rule of the wiſe men. There חכם and הדיוט a wiſe man, and ἰδιώτης, are oppoſed. So כהנים הדיוטות Private Prieſts are oppoſed to Prieſts of a worthier order: and which we have obſerved before הדיוטות ἰδιῶται, Private men, are oppoſed to דיינין Judges.

i Bab. Metzia, fol. 104. 1.

In 1 Sam. XVIII. 23. איש רש ונכלה a poor and contemptible man, in the Targumiſt is גבר מסכן והדיוט a poor and private (Hidiot) man.

According to this acception of the word ἰδιώτης among the Jews, the Apoſtle ſeems in this place to diſtinguiſh the members of the Church from the Miniſters, private perſons from public. So in thoſe various companies celebrating the Paſchal Service, there was one, that bleſſed, recited, diſtributed and was as it were the public Miniſter for that time and occaſion; and all the reſt were ἰδιῶται, or private perſons. So alſo in the Synagogues, the Angel of the Church performed the public Miniſtry, and the reſt were as private men. Theſe were indeed perſons among them, who were not in truth private men, but Judges and Magiſtrates, and learned men; but as to that preſent action, their preſent capacity) they ſupply the place, or ſuſtain the condition of private perſons, as to the preſent action, as men contradiſtinct from the public Miniſter. ἰδιώτης indeed occurs for a common, or unlearned man, verſ. 23. Which yet hinders not at all, but that in this place it may be taken in the ſenſe mentioned.

Πῶς ἐρεῖ τὸ Ἀμήν, &c. How ſhall he ſay, Amen, &c.

It was the part of one to pray, or give thanks, of all to anſwer Amen. l They anſwer Amen after an Iſraelite bleſſing, not after a Cuthite, &c. But m They anſwered not אמן יתומה the Orphan Amen, ולא אמן חטופה nor the ſnatched Amen, &c.

m Hieroſ. Berac. fol. 12. 3.

The Orphan Amen was, when Amen was ſaid, and he that ſpake, weighed not, or knew not why, or to what he ſo anſwered. To the ſame ſenſe is מזמורא יתופה n An Orphan Pſalm, that is, a Pſalm, to which neither the name of the Author is inſcribed, nor the occaſion of the compoſure יתמא among the Talmudiſts is ſometimes a Fool, or Unlearned.

n Bab. Avod. Zarah, fol. 24. 2.

learned. Let it be so, if you please, in this phrase. Such is the Amen, concerning which the Apostle in this place; when any one answers Amen foolishly to a thing not understood.

VERS. XXI.

Ἐν τῷ νόμῳ γέγραπται· It is written in the Law.

IN the Law, that is, in the Scripture. In opposition to דבריהם The words of the Scribes. For that distinction was very usual in the Schools. זה מתורה This we learn out of the Law, and זה מדבריהם And this from the words of the Scribes. דברי תורה אין צריכין חיזוק o The words of the Law (that is, of the Scripture) have no need of confirmation. But the words of the Scribes have need of confirmation.

o Tosapht. in Jevamoth, cap. 1.

The p former Prophets, and the latter, and the Hagiographa are each styled by the name of the Law; so that there is no need of further illustration. Whence is the Resurrection of the dead proved out of the Law? From those words או יבנה בנה לא נאלר Jos. VIII. 30. It is not said, Then he built (in the preterperfect Tense) but יבנה He shall build (in the future Tense) מכאן לתחיית המתים מן התורה Hence the Resurrection of the dead is proved out of the Law.

p Bab. Sanhedr. fol. 91. 2.

Whence is the Resurrection of the dead proved out of the Law? From thence, that it is said, Blessed are they that dwell in thine house, עוד יהללוך They shall always praise thee, (Psal. LXXXIV. 4.) היללוך לא נאמר It is not said, they do praise thee, but יהללוך They shall praise thee. Hence the Resurrection of the dead is proved out of the Law.

Whence is the Resurrection of the dead proved out of the Law? From thence, that it is said, Thy Watchmen shall lift up their voice. קול יחדיו ירננו They shall sing with their voice together, (Esa. LII. 8.) רננו לא נאמר It is not said, They sing, but ירננו They shall sing, Hence the Resurrection of the dead is proved out of the Law.

Behold the former Prophets called by the name of the Law; among which is the book of Josua; and the latter Prophets, among which is the Book of Esaiah; and the Hagiographa, among which is the Book of Psalms.

VERS. XXVI.

Ἕκαστος ὑμῶν ψαλμὸν ἔχει· Every one of you hath a Psalm.

THAT is, when ye come together into one place, one is for having the time and worship spent chiefly in singing Psalms, another in preaching, &c. One prefers singing of Psalms, another a Tongue, another preaching, &c.

VERS. XXVII.

Κατὰ δύο ἢ τὸ πλεῖον τρεῖς· By two or at most by Three.

THE Apostle permits the use of an unknown Tongue, as you see; and I ask again of what Tongue? Let that be observed which he saith, vers. 22. Tongues are for a sign, not to them, who believe, but to them, who believe not. And unless you prove there were in the Church, such as believed not, which it implies, I would scarcely believe he permitted the use of unknown Tongues, under any such notion; especially when he had said immediately before, Let all things be done to edification. But suppose, that which we suppose of the Hebrew Language, and the thing will suite well.

This our most holy Apostle saith of himself, Chap. IX. 20. To the Jews I became a Jew, that I might gain the Jews: which seems here to be done by him; but neither here, nor any where else, unless for edification, and that he might gain them. They would not be weaned from the old custom of the Synagogue, as to the use of the Hebrew Tongue in their worship; and for the present, he indulges them their fancy, and this not vainly, since by the use of that Tongue the hearers might be edified, a faithful interpreter standing by; which in other Languages could not be done any thing more, than if all were uttered in the Corinthian Language.

If any speak in a tongue, let it be by two, &c. Let one read the Scripture in the Hebrew Language, let another pray, let a third preach. For according to these kinds of divine worship, you will best divide the persons, that all may not do the same thing.

VERS. XXIX.

Προφῆται δὲ δύο ἢ τρεῖς λαλείτωσαν· Let the Prophets ſpeak two or three.

LET one ſing, who hath a Pſalm: let another teach, who hath a doctrine: and if a third hath exhortation or comfort, as verſ. 3. Let him alſo utter it.

VERS. XXX.

Ἐὰν δὲ ἄλλῳ ἀποκαλυφθῇ καθημένῳ· But if any thing be revealed to another that ſitteth by.

THAT is very frequently ſaid of the Jewiſh Doctors יושב הוה He ſate: which means not ſo much this barely, He was ſitting, as He taught out of the Seat of the Teacher, or he ſate teaching, or ready to teach. So that indeed, he ſate, and he taught are all one. Examples among the Talmudiſts are infinite. In the ſame ſenſe the Apoſtle: If ſomething be revealed to ſome Miniſter, who hath a ſeat among thoſe that teach, &c. not revealed in that very inſtant, but if he ſaith, that he hath received ſome revelation from God, then ὁ πρῶτος σιγάτω, let the firſt be ſilent; let him be ſilent, that hath a Pſalm, and give way to him.

VERS. XXXV.

Αἰσχρὸν γάρ ἐστι γυναιξὶν ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ λαλεῖν· For it is a ſhame for women to ſpeak in the Church,

COmpare that: q The Rabbins deliver, הכל עולין למנין שבעה Every one is reckoned within the number of Seven (of thoſe that read the Law in the Synagogues on the Sabbath day) אפילו קטן ואפילו אשה Even a child, even a woman. But the Wiſe men ſay, let not a woman read in the Law, מפני כבוד צינעור For the honour of the Synagogue. Note that it was a diſgrace to the Church, if a woman ſhould read in it: which was allowed even to a child, even to a ſervant: much more if ſhe uſurped any part of the Miniſterial Office. It was alſo uſual for one or the other ſitting by, to ask the Teacher of this or that poynt: but this alſo the Apoſtle forbids women; and that for this reaſon, Becauſe it is not allowed women to ſpeak, but let them be ſubject to their husbands, verſ. 34. It was allowed them to anſwer Amen with others, and to ſing with the Church, but to ſpeak any thing by themſelves it was forbidden them.

VERS. V.

Καὶ ὅτι ὤφθη Κηφᾷ· And that he was ſeen of Cephas.

NAmely going to Emmaus. See what we have ſaid at Mark XVI.

VERS. VI.

Ἔπειτα ὤφθη ἐπάνω πεντακοσίοις ἀδελφοῖς ἐφάπαξ· Then he was ſeen of above five hundred brethren at once.

IN a Mountain of Galilee, Mat. XXVIII. 16. When it is added by the Evangeliſt, Οἱ δὲ ἐδίστασαν· But ſome doubted, which is to be warily underſtood; not that ſome of the Eleven now ſtill doubted of his Reſurrection; for Thomas himſelf had believed before: but that ſome of that multitude, aſſembled there with the Eleven, doubted. Therefore it is not only, congruous, but neceſſary to render that verſe thus, And they (the Eleven Diſciples) ſeeing him, worſhipped him; but others doubted. Not ſome of the Eleven, but others of the company.

VERS.

VERS. VII.

Ἔπειτα ὤφθη Ἰακώβῳ· After that he was seen of James.

WHAT James? The Son of Zebedee, or of Alpheus? It is more probable to understand it of James the Son of Alpheus; and that he was alive, when Paul wrote this; and that the Apostle seems on purpose to treat of the appearance of Christ to Peter and James the Minister of the Circumcision, and to himself, the Minister of the Uncircumcision. See the story of one James, a Disciple, as he is stiled of Jesus. a a Avodah Zarah, fol. 16. 2. & 27. 2.

VERS. VIII.

Ὡσπερεὶ τῷ ἐκτρώματι, &c. As one born out of due time, &c.

נפל An untimely birth, Job. III. 16. to the LXX Interpreters is Ἔκτρωμα: and which is to be marked, they render נפל טמון An hidden untimely birth, ἔκτρωμα ἐκπορευόμενον ἐκ μήτρας μητρὸς, an untimely birth proceeding out of his mothers womb; when the word טמון hidden, seems rather to denote the contrary; namely, That it never went out of its mothers womb, but was always hidden there. So the Chaldee, נפלא רטמוע במעינא an untimely birth hidden in the womb.

Hence the word מפלת very usual among the Talmudists for a woman bringing forth an abortive, המפלת כמין בהמה חיה ועוף A b woman that comes before her time, and brings forth, in the figure of a beast, or a bird. והטפלת סנדל או שליא ושפיר מרוקם Coming before her time, and bringing forth a sandal, secundine, or a figured lump, &c. Numb. XII. 12. Ὡσεὶ ἔκτρωμα ἐκπορευόμενον ἐκ μήτρας μητρὸς ἡ κατεσθίει τὸ ἥμισυ τῆς σαρκῶν αὐτῆς. As an untimely birth coming out of the mothers womb, and devoureth the half of her flesh.

b Cherithuth, cap. 1. hal. 3.

As though the Apostle should say; How far am I from an Apostle? As much as some mishapen and deformed lump, brought forth by an abortive birth, differs from the shape of a man. You may render the words in English more apt and clear, unless I am mistaken in my conjecture, after this manner, As to a thing born out of due form, than as they are rendred, As to one born out of due time. Παιδίον μὴ ἐξεικονισμένον· A child not shaped, So the LXX in Exod. XXI. 22.

VERS. XX.

Ἀπαρχὴ τῶν κεκοιμημένων· The first fruits of them that slept.

ALthough the Resurrection of Christ compared with some first fruits hath very good harmony with them, yet especially it agrees with the offering of the Sheaf, commonly called עומר not only as to the thing it self, but as to the circumstance of time. For first there was the Passover, and the day following was a Sabbatic day, and on the day following that, were the first fruits offered. So Christ our Passover was crucified. The day following his crucifixion was the Sabbath; and the day following that, he the first fruits of them that sleep, rose again.

VERS. XXIX.

Ὁ βαπτιζόμενοι ὑπερ τῶν νεκρῶν· They are baptized for the dead.

I. IN this sense you may best understand these words: Otherwise what shall they do, who undergo martyrdom, and are baptized in that sense, as baptism denotes death by martyrdom; if the dead are not at all raised? For

I. That Baptism is taken for martyrdom, appears enough, Mat. XX. 22, 23.

II. See how very well the connection of the following verse agrees to this sense. What shall they do, who have undergone, and do undergo martyrdom, if there be not a Resurrection? Τί καὶ ἡμεῖς κινδυνεύομεν; And why do we also every day, and every moment, go in danger of martyrdom?

III. He argues from them that die in Christ, that is, in the Faith of Christ, ver. 18. And do you believe he would omit an argument from those that die for the Faith of Christ?

IV. He saith Τί ποιήσουσιν; What shall they do? Not ποιοῦσιν; What do they? Not what they mean, or denote, or signifie by this, that they are baptized, &c. But, what shall they do? Or what shall become of them? They have delivered their bodies to martyrdom, and what shall become of them, if their bodies rise not again. So Jer. V. ult. מה תעשו לאחריתה What will ye do in the end? That is what will become of you?

There

There lies no ſenſe in the words, as to this ſenſe which we propound, but in the Phraſe למת עבד, For the Dead: which let us illuſtrate by a like Phraſe. The Jews baptized a Proſelyte לשם גר Under the Notion, or in the name of a Proſelyte; and a ſervant to be ſet free לשם משוחרר Under the Notion, or in the name of a Libertine. But now when it was ſaid, N. is baptized לגר for a Proſelyte. N. is baptized למשוחרר for a Libertine; are not theſe words uttered well in Greek, Ὁ δεῖνα βαπτίζεται ὑπὲρ προσηλύτου· ὑπὲρ ἐλευθέρου· Such an one is baptized for a Proſelyte, for a free Man?

II. If the rendring the word ὑπὲρ in this ſenſe ſeem ſomewhat uncouth, let it be ſuppoſed that the Apoſtle ſpeaks of waſhing and purification appointed to the Jews after the touching a dead body, and the rendring will be nearer. Upon that Law thus R. Bechai; He that toucheth a dead body is to be purified with the water of purification with aſhes, namely, thoſe of the Red Cow, which purifies him that is defiled by the dead. Whence aroſe among us the cuſtom of waſhing hands, when we come from a dead perſon; רמז למי פרה Which intimates the water of the Red Cow, והוא גם כן רמז לתחיית המתים And intimates alſo the Reſurrection of the dead. But after what manner doth it do that? Hear Zohar upon that matter; [c] The ſpirit of uncleanneſs dwells upon men by reaſon of the dead. מאי אסווהא But what remedy have they? That which is written, ואל עפרם ישובון And they ſhall return to their duſt, that is, To the duſt of the burnt Red Cow, whereby they are purified. And the ſpirit of uncleanneſs departs, and another Holy Spirit is ſhed abroad. God gave Iſrael counſil, that they ſhould uſe all manner of remedies, whereby they might obtain the life of the world to come: namely, that they be found pure in this world, and holy in the world to come. Concerning whom it is written, I will ſprinkle upon you pure water, and ye ſhall be purified, Ezek. XXXVI.

[c] Fol. 86.4.

We cannot omit that: [d] Anciently it was a cuſtom to baptize Veſſels over women dying in their monthly courſes. מטבילין את כלים על גבי נדות At which thing the menſtruous women that were alive bluſhed. Therefore they appointed to baptize over all women, for the honour of menſtruous women, that were alive. Anciently they baptized over profluvious men departed. For which the profluvious men that were living were aſhamed. They appointed therefore, that they ſhould baptize over all men in honour of the profluvious men that were alive.

[d] Bab. Mocd Katon. fol. 27. 2

VERS. XXXI.

Νὴ τὴν ὑμετέραν καύχησιν ἣν ἔχω, &c. I proteſt by your rejoycing, which I have, &c.

THAT which the Apoſtle aſſerts is this, that he died daily; that is, was trod upon, ſuffered contempt, underwent danger, expected death. And that this is ſo, I appeal, ſaith he, to your boaſting, O ye Corinthians. But in what ſenſe is that boaſting to be underſtood? Not the Apoſtles boaſting of them: for then it would more properly have been ſaid ἡμετέραν καύχησιν, Our boaſting, than ὑμετέραν, Your. Nor was there indeed any reaſon, as things then ſtood, why the Apoſtle ſhould boaſt of them. Nor is their boaſting in the Apoſtle to be underſtood: for alas! how did they too much undervalue him! The boaſting therefore that he hints, was their boaſting againſt him; and this is it that he calls upon, and appeals to. Every day, ſaith he, I dye, I am deſpiſed, trod upon, am in hazzard: and for witneſs of this I call and appeal to your very boaſting againſt me: which indeed I reckon for my boaſting in Jeſus Chriſt. It became not you to glory againſt me; but ſince ye do it, I glory in this very contempt, and reproach.

VERS. XXXII.

Εἰ κατὰ ἄνθρωπον ἐθηριομάχησα· If after the manner of men, I have fought with beaſts.

THIS is that great danger, concerning which he ſpeaks, 2 Cor. I. 8, 9. which is not at all to be underſtood of the Tumult raiſed among the Epheſians by Demetrius: for this Epiſtle was written before that tumult: but according to the letter, that the Apoſtle was really caſt to wild beaſts in the Theatre. Nor does it obſtruct this opinion, that Luke relating the Acts of Paul, omitted this ſo notable an Hiſtory, ſince he hath omitted very many other: nor that thoſe that fought with beaſts, were different from thoſe that were caſt to beaſts, ſince the latter muſt fight with them, or periſh without any hope. But on the contrary there are theſe two things make for it.

I. That in Demetrius his inſurrection, the chief of Aſia (Aſiarchæ) afforded themſelves Pauls friends, Act. XIX. 31. That is, Thoſe Prieſts among the Heathen, whoſe office it was, to publiſh thoſe Plays of the Theatre for the honour of the Gods. Ἠξίουν τε Ἀσιάρχαι Φίλιππον, ἵνα ἐπαφῇ τῷ Πολυκάρπῳ λέοντα. Ὃν ἦν μὴ εἶναι ἔξω αὐτῷ. ἐπειδὴ πεπλήρωκει τὰ κυνηγέσια· [e] They asked Philip the Aſiarch (The Interpreter renders it Muſ.

[e] Euſeb. Eccleſ. Hiſt. lib. 4. c. 15

nerarius, The setter forth of the Games) to let loose a Lion upon Polycarp: But he answered, He might not, because now the fighting with wild beasts (those Games) was over. The same were the Phœnicharchæ, and the Syriarchæ f.

f Novell. 89. at the end, &c.

But now whence came it to pass, that these Asiarchs were friends to Paul? Was it as being persons that embraced the Gospel? Why therefore were they still Asiarchs? But it seems rather that Paul, being set to combate with beasts, was preserved by some wonderful and stupendious manner; so that the Asiarchs themselves seeing the miracle, were carried away with admiration of the thing, and the good will towards him.

II. What else doth Κατὰ ἄνθρωπον ἐθηριομάχησα mean, than I have fought with beasts in that manner as men fight with beasts? Or, I have fought with beasts in this very humane body. And that which he adds, Ἐν Ἐφέσῳ, In Ephesus, renders the sense more clear, and restrains it much more to the letter. For if it were so to be understood, I fought at Ephesus with Demetrius and his fellows, as if it had been with beasts, it had been much more suitable to have brought an example of his stoning in Lystra, Act. XIV. 19. of his whipping at Philippi, Act. XVI. 22, 23. &c. For in Demetrius his uproar at Ephesus you find him to have born or undergone no, not one blow, I had almost said, nor any danger. Gaius and Aristarchus indeed being drawn into the Theatre endured some violence, being perhaps presently to be cast to the beasts. But read and read again the whole story, Act. XIX. and there is not a syllable of any wrong, that Paul at that time endured in his person.

VERS. XXXVI.

Ἄφρων· Fool.

שוטה would the Talmudists say, Sot, mad man. g Rabban Jochanan ben Zaccai answered the Baithuseans (denying also the Resurrection of the dead) and said, שוטים מנין לכם Ἄφρονες, Fools, whence did this happen to you, &c.

g Gloss. in Taanith, fol. 17. 1.

VERS. XLV.

Οὕτω καὶ γέγραπται· And so it is written, &c.

OF the former no doubt is made, for it is written Gen. XI. 7. But where is the latter? Throughout the whole sacred book: thence the Jews speak so many things and so great of the Spirit of Messias, and of Messias quickning.

Ὁ ἔσχατος Ἀδὰμ εἰς πνεῦμα ζωοποιοῦν· The last Adam was made a quickning Spirit.

Job XIX. 25. אני ידעתי גאלי חי ואחרון על עפר יקום I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand in the latter day upon the earth. Job seems to me in this place in the words, אחרון על צפר יקום to speak in the same sense with Ὁ ἔσχατος Ἀδὰμ, The last Adam. Of the former Adam it was said, עפר אתה ואל עפר תשוב Dust thou art, and to dust thou shalt return. And I know, saith Job, that my Redeemer liveth; and he shall arise from the dust another, or a latter; and I shall see the Lord made of the same flesh that I am of, &c. Intimating the Incarnation of the Messiah.

Εἰς πνεῦμα ζωοποιοῦν· A quickning Spirit. The Spirit of the Lord moved upon the face of the waters, Gen. I. 2. וה רוחו של מלך המשיח This is the Spirit of King Messias. So the Jews speak very frequently. And also, משיח עתיד ליונין ישיני עפר Messias shall quicken those that dwell in the dust.

It cannot be past over without Observation, by what authority Paul applies those words of Psal. XCII. Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast founded the earth, &c. to the Messias, Heb. I. 10. to prove his Deity and dignity. But thou art deceived, O Paul would a Hebrew say, These words are to be applied to God the Father, not to the Messias. The Apostle hath what to reply from the very confession of the Jewish Nation; You acknowledge that Spirit which was present at, and president over the Creation, was the Spirit of the Messias.

It ought not also be past by without observation, that Adam, receiving from him the promise of Christ; and believing it, named his wife Chava, that is, Life. So the Seventy, Καὶ ἐκάλεσεν Ἀδὰμ τὸ ὄνομα τῆς γυναικὸς αὐτοῦ ζωή· And Adam called his wives name Life, Gen. III. 20. What? Is she called life, that brought in death? But Adam perceived Τὸν ἔσχατον Ἀδὰμ, The last Adam, exhibited to him in the Promise, to be πνεῦμα ζωοποιοῦν; A quickning Spirit; and had brought in a better life of the Soul, and at length should bring in a better of the body. Hence is that Joh. I. 4. Ἐν αὐτῷ ζωὴ ἦν. In him was life.

VERS.

VERS. XLVII.

Ὁ δεύτερος ἄνθρωπος ὁ Κύριος. The second man is the Lord.

Gen. IV. 1. Eve conceived and brought forth Cain, and said, קניתי איש את יהוה I have possessed, or obtained, τὸν ἄνθρωπον τὸν Κύριον, A man the Lord; that is, That the Lord himself should become man. For let me so turn it, depending upon these reasons.

I. That this Interpretation is without any manner of wresting the particle את; yea it is according to its most proper signification and use.

II. That without doubt, Eve had respect to the promise of Christ, when she named her son; as Adam had respect to the promise in the denomination of Eve.

VERS. LV.

Ποῦ σου, θάνατε, &c. O death, where is thy, &c.

Hos. XIII. 14. אהי דבריך מות The Seventy read it, Ποῦ ἡ δίκη σου θάνατε; Where is thy revenge, O Death? And thus speaks Aben Ezra, There are some which invert the word, אהי I will be, as though it were איה Where. And very truly; as it is said, אהי מלכך vers. 10. Where is thy King. Where the Chaldee אן מלכך (Not, I will be thy King, but) Where is thy King? So that the Greek Interpreters, and the Apostle after them, translated אהי Ποῦ, Where, properly, and truly.

The word דבריך in the Prophet, is rendred by the Targumist and the Rabbins, to signifie A Word: but some as Kimchi acknowledges, understand it to signifie The Plague; and that upon good ground, because the word קטב Destruction, is joyned with it; as רטב Destruction, and דבר The Plague, are joyned together, Psal XCI. Where see the Targum and R. Solomon, and compare the Greek Interpreters with them.

CHAP. XVI.

VERS. I.

Περὶ δὲ τῆς λογίας τῆς εἰς τοὺς ἁγίους. Now concerning the Collection for the Saints.

UNLESS I am much deceived מגבית אכמים in the Jerusalem Writers denotes, in the like sense, τὴν λογίαν εἰς τοὺς σοφούς The Collection for the wise men.

They have this story: a R. Eliezer, R. Josua, and R. Akiba went up to Cholath of Antioch, על עסק מגבית חכמים Employed in the Collection for the wise Men. One Abba Judah was there, who performed the Law with a good Eye. Being now reduced to poverty, when he saw the Rabbins, he was dejected. He went home with a sad countenance. His wife said to him, Why doth thy countenance languish? He answered, The Rabbins are come, and I know not what to do. She said to him, You have one field left: Go, and sell half of it, and give to them. Which he did. And when they were departed, he went to plow in the half of his field, and found a great treasure, &c. I produce this the more willingly, that it may be observed, that collections were made among the Jews in forrain Nations, for the poor Rabbins dwelling in Judea, in the same manner as they were made among Christians in forrain Nations for the poor Jews converted to Christianity in Judea.

a Horaioth, fol. 48. 1.

VERS. II.

Κατὰ μίαν σαββάτων· On the first day of the Week.

בחד בשבת In the first of the Sabbath, would the Talmudists say.

I. That day was every where celebrated for the Christian Sabbath: and which is not to be past over without observing, as far as appears from Scripture, there is no where any dispute of that matter. There was controversie concerning circumcision, and other points of the Jewish Religion, whether they were to be retained, or not retained; but no where, as we read, concerning the changing of the Sabbath. There were indeed some ſome Jews converted to the Goſpel; who, as in ſome other things they retained a ſmatch of their old Judaiſm, ſo they did in the obſervation of days, Rom. XIV. 5. Gal. IV. 10. but yet not rejecting, or neglecting the Lords day. They celebrated it, and made no manner of ſcruple, as appears, concerning it: but they would have their old feſtival days retained too: and they diſputed not at all, whether the Lords day were to be celebrated, but whether the Jewiſh Sabbath were not to be celebrated alſo. So they admitted Baptiſm, but it went againſt them not to admit Circumciſion alſo. And ſo alſo in ſome other Articles of Judaiſm, not rejecting the Goſpel, but ſuperinducing ſomething of Judaiſm. As I have ordained in the Churches of Galatia, ſaith the Apoſtle, ſo do ye alſo: On every firſt day of the Week, &c. And yet the ſame Apoſtle ſaith of the ſame Galatians, Ye obſerve days, and months; Not that they refuſed the Chriſtian Sabbath, but that they retained the Jewiſh Sabbaths.

II. The Lords day ſufficiently commended it ſelf by its own authority: nor could the inſtitution of it at all be doubted by the converted Gentiles, as never knowing, or at leaſt owning, any other Sabbath: nor by the converted Jews, if they acknowledged Jeſus for the true Meſſias; becauſe they had learnt in their Schools, that Meſſiah ſhould make a new Law, as Moſes had made the old. And that alſo, which they had drunk in from their cradles, that Meſſiah ſhould not aboliſh the Inſtitutions of Moſes, but raiſe them higher, and make them more ſplendid, although it might be more a ſcruple among them of the aboliſhing the Jewiſh Sabbath; yet it could make none of ſuperinducing the Chriſtian Sabbath.

III. In that controverſie of the change of the Sabbath, from the Jewiſh to the Chriſtian, which ſome proſecute too much without any cauſe, they reckon the Scriptures ſilence concerning the Inſtitution of the Lords day for a denial of the thing; as if it were by no means to be believed, becauſe it is not expreſſed in plain words.

Among many things ſaid in that caſe, let us put in theſe few.

I. The Holy Text indeed is ſilent of this matter, while the ſcene of Chriſtian affairs is laying in Judea, mention being only made by the Evangeliſts of the appearances of Chriſt, the firſt day of the week; namely, on that day, wherein he aroſe from the dead, and the firſt day of the week following, Joh. XX. 26. But when the ſcene is transferred to the Gentiles, then there is very open mention of it; namely, in this place, and Act. XX. 7. and Revel. I. 10.

II. For the chief care concerning mentioning the Sabbath was this, that mention might be made of that Sabbath, which was to be among the Gentile Churches, and was to endure for ever. And of that, mention is moſt evidently made in the hiſtory of thoſe Churches.

III. Therefore the former ſilence does by no means argue, that the Apoſtles and Diſciples in Judea converted to the faith, did not celebrate the Lords Day, or that they obſerved it not by Divine Inſtitution; but by good right and reaſon the mention of it is reſerved to its moſt proper place, that is, in the ſtory of the Gentile Churches.

Θησαυίζων · Laying up.

For theſe, ſaith Beza, are true riches laid up in Heaven, &c. By occaſion of whoſe words, let us add theſe few paſſages of the ſame ſubject.

A certain woman came to Rabban Jochanan ben Zaccai, and ſaid, Sir, vouchſafe me ſuſtinence. To whom he anſwered, And who art thou, my daughter? I, ſaith ſhe, am the daughter of Nicodemus ben Gorion. And, replied he, O daughter, what is become of the riches of the family of thy Father? She anſwered ר' לא כדין מחלין מחל בירוש מלח ממון חסך O Rabbi, Do not they uſe this Proverb at Jeruſalem, The ſalt of riches is the want of them. ואמרי לה חסך But thoſe that ſtood by ſaid to her, But mercy, or alms, is their ſalt. Where the Gloſs is, Whoſoever will ſeaſon his riches, that is, make them not to putrifie, let him beſtow them in alms, and the want of riches ariſing from ſuch a cauſe, is the ſeaſoning of them. b Bab. Chetubb. fol. 66. 2.

VERS. V.

Μακεδονίαν γὰρ διέρχομαι · For I do paſs through Macedonia.

THERE is a diviſion about the ſenſe and tranſlation of theſe words: and here indeed the whole hinge of the controverſie turns upon the place whence this Epiſtle was writ.

There are ſome that render it to this ſenſe, I am now paſſing through Macedonia; which without doubt he did, whoſoever he were, who firſt joyned thoſe words to the end of the Epiſtle, Πρὸς Κορινθίους πρώτη ἐγράφη ἀπὸ Φιλίππων · The firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians Corinthians was written from Philippi: and they muſt do the ſame, who think it ſent from thence.

But the Vulgar and Interlineary Interpreter; For I ſhall paſs through Macedonia, in the future tenſe, is more true, and beſt of all. For that this Epiſtle was ſent from Epheſus, theſe and other things make plain.

I. That the Apoſtle ſalutes the Corinthians in the name of the Churches of Aſia; which it is probable he would not at all have done, if he now were in Macedonia. But be it granted, that he very lately coming out of Aſia, carried the ſalutations of thoſe Churches along with him, it is as improbable, that he would not alſo ſalute them in the name of the Churches of Macedonia.

II. It appears that he wrote this Epiſtle before he came into Macedonia, from what he ſaith in the ſecond Epiſtle, Chap. II. 12, 13. and Chap. VII. 5, 6, 7. For when he met not Titus at Troas; whom together with Stephanus, Fortunatus, and Achaicus he had ſent to Corinth with this Epiſtle; nor as yet could know what fruit it had gained among the Corinthians, he haſtned a journey into Macedonia. And when he came thither, and found not Titus there, he ſtayed for ſome time with an unquiet mind, until Titus, the meſſenger of good news at laſt came.

III. He ſaith, verſ. 8. Ἐπιμενῶ δὲ ἐν Ἐφέσῳ· I ſhall tarry in Epheſus: as if he would ſay, Here at Epheſus, where now I am, I ſhall remain until Pentecoſt.

VERS. VIII.

Ἐπιμενῶ δὲ ἐν Ἐφέσῳ· But I will tarry in Epheſus.

WHETHER he tarried at Epheſus until the time determined by him, that is, Pentecoſt, or the uproar of Demetrius drove him away thence ſooner, is uncertain. Being driven thence Macedonia received him, as is related, Act. XX. Where although among his travails, there is no mention of his journy to Corinth, yet thither he travailed, while his companions went before to Troas, and expected him there.

VERS. IX.

Θύρα γάρ μοι ἀνέῳγε, &c. For a door is opened to me, &c.

See Act. XIX. 17, 18, 19, 20.

VERS. X.

Ἐὰν δὲ ἔλθῃ Τιμόθεος· But if Timothy come.

THIS place deceived him again, who added the ὑπογεγραφὴν, the Underwriting to this Epiſtle: in whoſe fancy, Timothy was ſent with Stephanus, Fortunatus, and Achaicus, to bring the Epiſtle to the Corinthians: by no light miſtake: for Timothy indeed was ſent, but from Epheſus into Macedonia with Eraſtus, Act. XIX. 22. to ſee the Corinthians in his return, but not at all ſent thither out of Macedonia by the order of the Apoſtle, which he dreams of.

VERS. XIX.

Σὺν τῇ κατ' οἶκον αὐτῶν Ἐκκλησίᾳ· With the Church which is in their houſe.

SO alſo it is ſaid of them, when they were come back from Rome, that they had a Church in their houſe, Rom. XVI. 5. And the ſame is ſaid of Philemon, Philem. verſ. 2. and ſee Coloſſ. IV. 15. But in what ſenſe to underſtand this, is ſomewhat obſcure.

I. Perhaps there were in Aquila's houſe ſome, which travailed with him from Rome; being driven thence by the Edict of Ceſar, and boarded with him in the ſame houſe, while they were in their baniſhment. But what then ſhall we ſay of them, when they went back to Rome to their own dwelling? And alſo, what ſhall we ſay of the Church in the houſe of Philemon?

II. Or perhaps Aquila was the Churches Hoſt, as Gaius was at Corinth; in whoſe houſe were other men and women, appointed to that office with him. And it may be, he performed the ſame Office at Rome, when he went back. And it may be Philemon did the ſame at Coloſſ; and thence that of the Apoſtle to him, Prepare me a lodging, verſ. 22. But all theſe things are ſomewhat uncertain: nor can one ſee, where to fix his foot. Let me therefore add another conjecture alſo.

III. It

III. It is well enough known, what בית מדרש Beth Midrash, The Divinity School, or the Chappel, was among the Jews; and what the difference was between it, and בית הכנסת The Synagogue. Now Beth Midrash was called also בי רבנן Be Rabbanan, The School of the Rabbins. And it is enquired, מאי בי רבנן ביתא רבנן What c is the School of the Rabbins? It is the House of the Rabbins. Where the Gloss, Why do they call בתי מדרשות the Divinity Schools, Be Rabbanan? Namely, Because it is their House for any use. In that place the Gemarists treat of Synagogues set apart for holy use; and how far it was lawful to put them to common uses, either when they now flourished, or were fallen to decay, and antiquated as to sacred uses. And concerning the Beth Midrash, which was very near of kin to the Synagogue, it is concluded, as you see, that it is as the very house of the Rabbin, teaching in it, and to be used by him for any use.

c Megill. fol. 28 2.

Mention of the בי רבנן Be Rabbanan, or Beth Midrash, and the very thing, concerning which we now are speaking, brings to remembrance the בי אבידן Be Abidan; of which the Talmudists write; but in a double and various sense. The mention of it occurs in Bab Avodah Zarah d, where it denotes a Heathen Temple. R. Eliezer Ben Parta is examined by a Roman Magistrate, and among other things, this is demanded of him, Why did you not go to בי אבדן Be Abidan, The Temple? He answered, I am an old man, and I was afraid, lest you should tread me under foot. To whom the other replied, Was ever any old man trod under foot? A miracle happened; For that very day was an old man trodden upon. Where the Gloss, בי אבידן Be Abidan is an House, or Temple, where they eat and drink in honour of an Idol, ומבולין זיבול עו And void dung (that is, sacrifice) to an Idol, &c.

d Fol. 17. 2.

But elsewhere e it occurs in another sense. ספרי דבי אבידן וגו' The Books of the Be Abidan, do they snatch them out of the fire, or do they not snatch them? אין ולא Yes, and No: that is, sometimes they do, and sometimes they do not. But what the books of the Be Abidan were, the Gloss teacheth in these words, ספרי כתבו להם מינים להתווכח עם ישראל The Hereticks wrote books of Disputations to themselves against the Jews: ומקום שמתווכחים שם קרי ליה בי אבירן And the place where the dispute is, is called Be Abidan. By Hereticks, no doubt is to be made, but that Christians are understood: and that Be Abidan in this place is not to be taken for a Heathen Temple, is clear enough from what follows: Rabh, say they, went not into Be Abidan, much less לבי נצרפי Into a Heathen Temple. Samuel went into a Heathen Temple, but went not into Be Abidan. They said to Rabba, מ"ט לא אתית לבי אבידן Why went you not to Be Abidan? He answered, There is a certain Palm in the way, and hindreth me. We will stock it up, say they. The place of it, saith he, is difficult to me. The Gloss writes, Rabh and Rabba feared to go into Beth Abidan, lest in the dispute they might rise up against them, and kill them.

e Schabb. fol. 116. 1.

And now let us return to our own business. What hinders, but that we may be of opinion, that the House of Aquila at Ephesus, and Rome, and of Philemon at Colosse, might serve for such a purpose; namely, sometimes for holy Lectures, and disputes either with Jews, or among Christians. Not that the publick Assembly in the Church should be neglected; but that some number out of the Church; perhaps the whole company of Ministers, and Teachers assembled here, and others, who breathed more after Gospel Mysteries; where the more obscure Articles and Points of Faith were handled, and disputes were held, if the thing required it, either among themselves or against the Jews.

VERS. XXII.

Εἴς τις οὐ φιλεῖ τὸν Κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, ἤτω Ἀνάθεμα Μαρὰν ἀθά. If any love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema Maranatha.

THE word Anathema sounds indeed all one with חרם Cherem, among the Hebrews; as we may see abundantly (to omit all other examples) in the seventy Interpreters, in the last Chapter of Leviticus compared with the Hebrew.

And the word is taken in a threefold sense especially in the Holy Scripture; which the Author of Aruch notes in the word חרם Cherem, and that from the Author of Tosaphoth f.

f Ad Erachin, cap. 4.

I. חרמי כהנים The Anathema or somewhat devoted to the Priests, that is, something which being consecrated to God, necessarily falls to the Priests. חרמי כהנים אין להם פדיון The Anathemae's of the Priests do not admit Redemption; but they are to be given to the Priests for Trumah, or an oblation.

g Bab. Erachin, fol. 28. 2.

II. חרמי גביה An Anathema, or that which is devoted to the most High. Examples of which you have, Levit. XXVII. 27, 28. &c. Where the Seventy thus, Πᾶν ἀνάθεμα ἅγιον ἅγιον ἔσται τῷ κυρίῳ· Every Anathema ſhall be holy to the Lord. In Bab. Nedarim [b] it is called חרם שמים That which is devoted to Heaven.

[b] Fol. 28. 2.

III. חרם אשר יחרם מן האדם An Anathema which is devoted of men. Of this Levit. XXVII. 29. Where again the Seventy thus, Πᾶς ὁ ἐὰν ἀναθεθῇ ἐκ τῶν ἀνθρώπων, οὐ λυτρωθήσεται, ἀλλὰ θανάτῳ θανατωθήσεται· Every Anathema, or devoted of men ſhall not be redeemed, but ſhall dye the death. But what is the Anathema of men? The Author of Toſaphtoth anſwered, אלו חייבו מיתות בד' He that is condemned to death by the Sanhedrin. R. Solomon ſaith, When an Iſraelite devoted his man ſervant, or his maid ſervant, that were Canaanites, to death. R. Menahen ſaith, When the Iſraelites in war devoted their enemies to deſtruction, if they overcame them, as was done by them, Numb. XXI. [i] Whence is it, that when any condemned to dye by the Sanhedrin is led forth to ſuffer death, another goes forth interceding and ſaying, I will pay for his Redemption: Whence is it, I ſay, that he ſaith this to no purpoſe? Namely, Thence, becauſe it is ſaid, Every Anathema of men ſhall not be redeemed, but ſhall be puniſhed with death.

[i] Bab. Chetubb. fol. 37. 2.

If therefore we enquire into the original and proper nature of this Anathema, it was certainly the deſtining of ſome Malefactor to moſt certain death and deſtruction. Hence is that in the Chaldee paraphraſt in Eſa. XLIII. ult. Where for אתנה יעקב לחרם I will deliver Jacob to Anathema, he renders it, אמסר לקטלא I will deliver him to be ſlain.

And now in reference to the words Maran-atha, very many Commentators agree, that this Phraſe is a certain form of Excommunication, and that it is the higheſt, and heavieſt. Thus, ſay they, is the extremeſt kind of Anathema marked; as though he would ſay, Curſed be he to the coming, and in the coming of the Lord.

They aſſert this to be the third kind of Excommunication among the Jews, and think that it ſounds the ſame with שמתא Schammatha, and interpret שם אתא God cometh to the ſame ſenſe.

But let me, with the leave of ſo great men, ſpeak freely what I think in this buſineſs.

I. I have not found, in my reading, in any places, although I have ſought diligently, in any Jewiſh Writers that I have peruſed, where Maran-atha occurs once for a form of Excommunication. Nor have I found in any Chriſtian Writer, the leaſt ſign, whereby might be ſhewn in what place, or in what Hebrew Author that Phraſe is found in ſuch a ſenſe. Yea to ſpeak out plainer, as the thing is, I do not remember, that I have found this Phraſe Maran-atha, in any ſenſe at all, in any Rabbinical or Talmudic Writer; at any time, in any place.

II. But thoſe Commentators mentioned, do ſilently confeſs, that Maran-atha indeed, in ſo many ſyllables, does not occur in the Hebrew Writers: but שמתא Schammatha, which ſpeaks the ſame thing, occurs very frequently: and ſo they interpret שם אתא God cometh.

But paſſing over this, that this interpretation ſeems to betray an ignorance of the word שמת from thence Schammatha is derived; the Talmudiſts, to whom that word is ſufficiently common, and well known, produce another Etymology of the word שמתא Schammatha. מאי אמתא What ſignifies Shammatha? Rabba anſwered, שם מיתה Sham metha, There is Death. Samuel anſwered, שם תהא or תיתי Let Death be there, or come thither; as it is written, The curſe ſhall come into the houſe of the Thief, and ſhall lay it waſte, Zach. V. They have theſe and the like ſayings; but no mention in them of שם אתא God cometh.

[l] Bab. Moed Katon, fol. 16.

What the Apoſtle means by Maran-atha, we ſhall more eaſily trace, when we ſhall have obſerved this firſt, That the Apoſtle chiefly directs the dint and ſtroke of this Anathema and Curſe, againſt the unbelieving Jews, who were moſt bitter enemies againſt the Lord Jeſus, and his Goſpel: which I cannot but think, being induced thereunto by theſe four reaſons.

I. Becauſe the Jews above all other of humane race, loved not the Lord Jeſus, neither yet do love him. The Holy Scripture teaches this abundantly; unhappy experience teaches it. The Pagans indeed love not Chriſt, becauſe they knew him not: but becauſe they know him not, neither do they hate him. The Turks indeed love not Jeſus, in that manner as the Chriſtians do; but they do not hate him in that manner as do the Jews.

II. Becauſe he ſpeaks here in the Language and Dialect of the Jews, namely, in that Syriack phraſe, Maran-atha. He had ſpoke Greek through the whole Epiſtle; he ſpeaks Greek in all his Epiſtles: but when he ſpeaks here in the Jewiſh Language, the thing it ſelf ſpeaks it without all controverſie, that he ſpeaks concerning the Jews.

III. The Jews only of all mortals, called Jeſus accurſed, (ſee Chap. XII. 1.) therefore the Apoſtle deſervedly ſtrikes them above all other Mortals with a curſe, rendring like for like.

IV. Hither

IV. Hither I, or rather doth the Apostle, bring those words of Esaiah, Chap. LXV. 15. Ye shall leave your name for a curse to my chosen. Hither also may be brought that of Malachi, Chap. IV. wherewith the Old Testament is concluded פן אבוא והכיתי את הארץ בחרם lest I come, and smite the land with (Anathema) a Curse. Lest I come: this is the same with that which the Apostle saith, Maran-atha, The Lord cometh. And, I will smite with Anathema, the same with that in this verse, let him be Anathema. Against whom is the threatning in the Prophet? Against the unbelieving Jews. Against the same is both his threatning and curse of the Apostle; taken (methinks) out of the very words of the Prophet.

And now you may easily fetch out the sense of the word, Maran-atha. The Holy Scripture speaks great and terrible things concerning the coming of Christ to punish the Nation of the Jews for their not loving, yea hating Christ, and treading the Gospel under foot. It is called his coming in his Kingdom, in the Clouds, in Glory: which we observe elsewhere. So that I should much more readily interpret this expression Maran-atha, that is, our Lord cometh, in this sense, from this common manner of speech, and which is so very usual to the Scripture; than to run to I know not what Jewish form: which yet is not at all to be met with among the Jews.

CHAP. I.

Concerning the Hebrews and Helleniſts.

WHEN the Helleniſts and Hebrews are diſtinguiſhed, Act. VI. 1. it ſeems to be leſs obſcure, than when diſtinction is made between the Helleniſts and the Jews, Act. XI. 20. For that the Helleniſts were Jews, almoſt all agree.

The reaſon of the diſtinction may be fetched, either from their Diſperſion or from their Language. Διασπορὰ τῶν Ἑλλήνων · The Diſperſion of the Greeks, Joh. VII. 35. may be plainly diſtinguiſhed ἀπὸ τῆς διασπορᾶς τῶν Βαβυλωνίων · From the Diſperſion of the Babylonians. The Jews diſpered by the Victories and Colonies of the Greeks, from the Jews diſperſed by the Babylonian Captivity, and the Perſian Dominion.

But the difference is rather fetched from their Language: They being called Hebrews, to whom the Hebrew was the Mother Tongue, that is, The Syriac, or Chaldee, they Helleniſts, to whom the Greek Language was ſo.

Under the name of Hebrews, there is none but would place the Paleſtines, the Babylonians, the Aſſyrians, the Syrians, if they knew what was the common Mother Tongue of all theſe Countries, eſpecially, if they that knew all theſe Countries were placed by the Tamudiſts themſelves, in effect under the ſame rank and alliance of cuſtoms and privileges as well as under the ſame Language. Hence are theſe and ſuch like expreſſions to be met with in them.

a Whoſoever dwells in Babylon is as though he dwelt in the Land of Iſrael. b All forreign Land is called מדינת הים Heathen, except Babylon. Where by בבל Babylon, they underſtand all thoſe Countries, unto which the Babylonian Captivity was carried, and led away.

a Bab. Chetub. fol. 31.
b R. Sol. in Git. cap. 1.

And theſe paſſages they have of Syria. c In three reſpects, Syria was like to the Land of Iſrael. It was bound to tithes, and the ſeventh year. You might go thither in purity: and he that bought a farm in Syria, was as though he bought one in the Suburbs of Jeruſalem. And again, d Syria as to ſome judgments is as the Land of Iſrael. And again, e They bring out (the fruits of the ſeventh year) into Syria, but not without the Land. Note, that Syria was not reputed without the Land; but in divers things to be united with Paleſtine. And many paſſages of that nature may be produced both of Syria, and of Babylon.

c Gittin f. 8. 1.
d Maimon. in Demai, cap. 6.
e Sheviith, cap. 6. hal. 6.

Now then when our diſcourſe is of the Helleniſts, the Jews of theſe Countries and of this Language are to be diſtinguiſhed from thoſe: not denying nevertheleſs, that even among theſe here and there were alſo Helleniſts: as the Synagogue of Alexandria at Jeruſalem: they of Ceſarea, who f recited their Phylacteries in the Language of the Helleniſts: and they of Antioch, of whom mention is made in that place of the Acts alledged.

f Hieroſ. Sotah, cap. 7.

No body doubts, that the Syriac was the Mother Tongue of all Syria; and yet who will doubt, who hath read the Hiſtory of the Syro-Grecians, that there were very many in Syria, whoſe Mother Tongue was Greek? And hence that knot is very eaſily untyed, Acts, XI. The Diſperſed Diſciples, that preached the Goſpel, found in Antioch ſome Helleniſts, that is, whoſe Mother tongue was Greek, among the Jews, whoſe Mother tongue was Syriac.

CHAP. II.

Of the Hebrews in Babylon, and the adjacent Countries.

THE people that returned from Babylon are numbred, Ezr. II. and the ſum total is computed to be Forty two thouſand three hundred and threeſcore, verſ. 64. And yet the number of the families there particularly reckoned amounts not to more than thirty thouſand. So that thoſe twelve thouſand which are comprized within the ſum total, and yet are not numbred by their families, were either Plebeians, and perſons of no name, or ſuch who could not derive their Genealogy, as verſ. 62. or perhaps not a few of them were of the ten Tribes.

But how great a multitude of Jews yet remained in Babylon, when that number went back to their acient Country, you may conjecture by theſe two things, to omit others.

I. That of the Four and Twenty Courſes of the Prieſts there returned only four, a as the Jeruſalem Talmudiſts obſerve, and that well, out of Ezr. II. 36. And although you may conceive a leſs proportion by far in the reſt of the people; yet the number of thoſe that tarried behind did far exceed the number of thoſe that returned.

a Taanith, fol. 68. 1.

II. The people had taken root in Babylon: and the ſeventy years of the captivity had in a manner made them forget their own Country. They had been commanded of God to build themſelves houſes, to plant gardens, and to compoſe themſelves for a long continuance in that place; Jer. XXIX. 5, 6. And at length neceſſity paſſed into pleaſure; and having obtained quiet, commodious, and gainful ſeats, they judged it better to be there, than to return into an unmanured Country, full of danger, and want.

Hence the Maſters diſpute, whether that whole company, that went up with Ezra, went not up by compulſion, and מר סבר אפרושי אפרושינהו ומנפשייהו b One Maſter thinks, that in ſeparating they ſeparated themſelves, and voluntarily went up. Another Maſter, בעל כרחייהו אסקינהן That they were carried away by compulſion. For as the Gloſs ſpeaks, They that remained at Babylon enjoyed their quiet; but thoſe that went up to Jeruſalem were preſſed with poverty, and with all kind of labour and fear, by reaſon of thoſe that dwelt about them.

b Bab. Kiddush. fol. 69. 2.

Concerning thoſe that tarried behind, the Jews themſelves have theſe words.

I. That a purer blood of Jews remained in Babylon, then was of thoſe that went up. c Becauſe that Ezra carried away with him the dregs of the people, and left Babylon like pure flower; that is, as the Gloſs writes, All that were of impure blood he carried away thence with him. Hence is that, כל הארצות עיסה לאי ואי עיסה לבבל All Lands are as a mixed (or impure) lump, compared with the Land of Iſrael: and the Land of Iſrael is a mixed lump, compared with Babylon, viz. As to purity of blood.

c Ib. fol. 27. 1

II. That the blood of the ſtock of David remained more noble in Babylon, than that which aſcended in the family of Hillel: becauſe that was of the male ſeed, this of the female. d

III. Yea, this prevailed with them in the Talmudic times. It is forbid to go out of Babylon into another Land, even from Pombeditha to Be Cubi: and Rabb Joſeph excommunicated one, who went from Pombeditha to Be Cubi

And if we would propound ſome ſpecimen of the numerouſneſs of the Jews inhabiting that Land, we might take a view of their three Univerſities under thoſe times, viz. at Naardea, Sora, and Pombeditha: as alſo divers other places famous for Rabbins, ſuch as,

CHAP. III.

In the ſame Regions were the ſeats of the ten Tribes.

TRacing the ſeat of the Ten Tribes by the light of the Scriptures and the Talmudiſts, we find they were placed in Aſſyria, and Babylon, and the bordering Countries: diſpoſed under their Captivity in thoſe very Lands, wherein the Divine Counſel had decreed the two Tribes alſo ſhould be diſpoſed, when they ſhould undergo the ſame lot: that thoſe Tribes which had bordered upon each other in their own Land, ſhould border alſo upon each other in a ſtrange Land: and that they, whom God had united in the promiſe of their future call, ſhould be alſo united in the ſame habitations, that they might be called together.

e Lib. 23.

These things the Jews speak of the first seats of the ten Tribes; and that they also remained there in after ages, they are so assured, that in the Talmudists, f provision is made concerning Espousals, that they contract not with any of the ten Tribes. And the Glos there is, בדוכתייהו הוו רובא מי' שבטים In those places were very many of the Ten Tribes.

f Jevamoth, in the place above.

And while the Masters strictly provide, that the stocks of pure blood be preserved, and name very many places in Babylon, and the Countries adjacent, where families of pure blood were, and where they were not; they poynt with the finger as to others, so also to the ten Tribes residing there, as people of impure blood, and with whom they were not to mingle.

But now, if the Seats, Cities, Countries of the ten Tribes, in the times of the Talmudists, were so well known, much more were they so in the times of the Apostles; which were not so far removed from their first Captivity. That people therefore in that time skulked not in I know not what unknown Land, a thing now conceived of them, but that the preaching of the Apostles came also to them, as well as to other Nations. One may say this with the greatest assurance, upon the credit of S. James, who writes his Epistle to the whole twelve Tribes and also upon the credit of the Apocaliptic, in whom the twelve Tribes are sealed, Chap. VII. And the words of our Saviour argue the same thing, of the Twelve Apostles, that were to judge the Twelve Tribes, implying, that they all Twelve heard of the sound of the Gospel concerning the reception or rejection of which that judgment was to be.

Under this notion, unless I am much mistaken, is the Apostle to be understood, treating of the calling of Israel, Rom. XI. not of the Jews only, but of the whole Twelve Tribes of Israel. And this is that mistery, concerning which he speaks at vers. 25. namely, that hardness, or blindness happened to Israel ἀπὸ μέρους by parts, or separately; first the Ten Tribes were blinded, and some hundreds of years after the two Tribes: and both the one and the other remained under that state, until the fulness of the Gentiles came in, when the Gospel entred, and so all Israel, Δωδεκάφυλον. The whole Twelve Tribes, namely, they, who were Λεῖμμα, the Remnant κατ' ἐκλογὴν χάριτος, according to the Election of Grace, vers. 5. were saved. For those words, Ἄχρις οὗ τὸ πλήρωμα τῶν ἐθνῶν εἰσέλθῃ· until the fulness of the Gentiles come in, are not so to be understood, as if the gathering of the last handful of the harvest of the Gentiles were to be expected, before that calling of all Israel: but they are opposed to that seldom coming in of Heathens to true Religion before the preaching of the Gospel. For at that time they were added to the Church by drops only, and very rarely. But when the Gospel entred, they flowed in as in a full stream, καὶ ἐν ὅλῳ τῷ πληρώματι τῶν ἐθνῶν· And in the whole fulness of the Gentiles. And so (which is a great mistery) first the Gentiles were blinded, and after them the ten Tribes were blinded, and after them the two Tribes were blinded; all laying under that miserable condition, until all at last were inlightened by the Gospel, and closed together into one body. And that the Apostle spake of his own times, when the Gospel was now newly brought to the Gentiles, he himself sufficiently ratifies and makes known by those words, Ἐν τῷ νῦν καιρῷ· At this present time, vers. 5.

CHAP. IV.

Peter preaching the Goſpel in Babylon.

THE whole world therefore being thus divided into Iſraelites, and Gentiles; and the Iſraelites again into the Ten Tribes, and the Jews; and the Jews again into Hebrews and Helleniſts; and the Hebrews into thoſe who dwelt within the Land of Iſrael, and thoſe that dwelt without it: hence ſomething may be obſerved which concerns the Evangelical and Apoſtolic Hiſtory.

I. And this firſt, as to the four Evangeliſts, namely, that Matthew writ for the Hebrews within the Land of Iſrael, and Syria: Mark for the Hebrews without the Land in Babylon and Aſſyria; where alſo were the ten Tribes: John for the Helleniſts: Luke for the Gentiles.

II. Then, when James, Peter and John are celebrated for the three Apoſtles of the Circumciſion, Gal. II. 9. hence one may fitly diſtinguiſh each Apoſtles Dioceſs: viz, Paleſtine, and which borders upon and is reckoned with it, Syria to James: Babylon and Aſſyria to Peter: and the Helleniſts, eſpecially of Aſia, and ſuch as were further off, to John.

Babylon, I ſay, and Aſſyria to Peter: which he himſelf confirms, when he dates his First Epiſtle from Babylon; and in his Second שיחתו כבבל a He uſeth the Babylonian Idiom. You would believe the word Boſor to be pronounced for Beor, Chap. II. 15. or it was a ſoleciſm of Peter, or an error of the Tranſcribers: but it favours of the Chaldee dialect, and plainly teaches, what that Babylon was, where Peter then was.

a See Kiddush. fol. 71. 2.

It was ordinary with the Chaldeans to change ש Schin into ע Ain; and on the contrary ע Ain into ש Schin: ש into ע as שפם Shepham into עפמיא Apamia, Num. XXXIV. 11,12. Where ſee the Targums, Samaritane and Jeruſalem and Jonathan. שטר A bill of contracts עיטור in the Talmudiſts, and divers others of that nature. And ע into ש or ס as in עד A witneſs שהד The letter He only put in, and עד Until, in the Samaritane Dialect, is changed into סעד with a letter in like manner put in. So ערק to divide is alſo סרק and לועז a Cheek, is alſo ליסרז And very many of the like variation; which, being obſerved, do openly teſtify that Peter was in Babylon of Chaldea, and ſpoke Chaldee, when he ſaid בסור Bozor for בעור Beor.

Nor was there in all the World any Country, in which that great Apoſtle of Circumciſion could preach, more agreeably, and ſuitably to his office, than in Babylon, and the adjacent places; where were Hebrews of the pureſt blood, and where the Ten Tribes were; the Circumciſion in its full name.

Hitherto we have traced the Hebrews, or thoſe Jews, whoſe Mother tongue was Syriac or Chaldee, namely, the Paleſtines, Syrians, Aſſyrians, Babylonians, Meſopotamians, and an infinite number of Iſraelites of the twelve Tribes ſprinkled among them, uſing alſo the ſame Language. Now let us ſee briefly what Bibles were uſed in their Synagogues.

CHAP. V.

The Hebrew Bible read in the Synagogues of the Hebrews.

THE Jeruſalem Talmudiſts ſay, a There were five things wanting under the ſecond Temple, which were under the firſt; the fire from Heaven, the Ark, Urim and Thummim, the oyl of anoynting, and the holy Spirit, or the Spirit of Propheſie: Let the Hebrew Tongue, the Prophetic Language, be added alſo.

a Taanith, fol. 56. 1.

Of the Spirit of Propheſie the Babylonian Talmudiſts have theſe words alſo: b From the death of the later Prophets, Haggai, Zechary, and Malachi, the holy Spirit ceaſed from Iſrael. In the firſt generation indeed after the return out of Babylon, that the gift of propheſie flouriſhed, thoſe Prophets, and indeed very many others do witneſs, if we believe the Maſters of the Traditions. For thus they ſpeak: c Among the eighty Elders, who oppoſed the Statute of Eſther and Mordecai, concerning the Feaſt of Purim, as if it were an innovation in the Law, more than thirty were Prophets. But that generation being

c Hieroſ. Megil. fol. 70. 4.

being extinct, the gift of Prophesie vanished also, and appeared no more before the morning of the Gospel. To this that of St. John hath respect, Chap. VII. 38. Οὔπω γὰρ ἦν πνεῦμα ἅγιον· The Holy Ghost was not yet: and Act. XIX. 2. Ἀλλ' οὐδὲ εἰ πνεῦμα ἅγιόν ἐστιν ἠκούσαμεν· We have not heard, whether there be any Holy Ghost.

Whether the use of the Mother Hebrew Tongue was continued in that first generation, as the gift of Prophesie was continued, we shall not dispute: this certainly we cannot pass by, that those Books of the sacred Canon, which were writ in that generation, viz. Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, Esther, Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi, (only a little in the Book of Ezra excepted) all were written in the Hebrew Language.

Whether the Hebrew Language were at that time the vulgar speech, or not, without all doubt in the ages following, the Syriac or Chaldee was the Mother Tongue both in Babylon and Palestine: and yet the Hebrew Bible was read in their Synagogues, not understood by the common people, but rendred into Chaldee their Vulgar Tongue by an Interpreter.

The Gemarists assert, that it was so done in that first generation, while they thus explain those words of Nehemiah, Chap. VIII. 8. d They read in the Law of God, במקרא In the Hebrew Text מפרש זה תרגום explaining it, that is, with the Targum.

In all the following ages these things obtained. e If any write the holy books, in any Language, or in any Character; yet he shall not read in them (publicly in the Synagogue) עד שהם כתובי אשורית unless they be written in Hebrew. f R. Samuel bar Rabh Isaac went into the Synagogue, and saw a Minister there interpreting, and not any standing by him for an Interpreter. He saith to him, This is forbid you: for as the Law was given by a Mediator, so it is to be handled with a Mediator. Hence were there so many and so accurate Canons concerning an Interpreter in the Synagogues. g He that reads in the Law, let him not read to the Intepreter more at one time, than one verse. The Glos saith, Lest the Interpreter mistake. And, h The deed of Ruben is read, but it is not intepreted. The deed of Thamar is read, but it is not interpreted. The first History of the golden Calf is read and interpreted: the second is read, but is not interpreted. Where the Glos is, That History which Aaron himself relates of the Calf, is called the second History of the Calf. In it are these words ויצא העגל הזה And there came out this Calf. Therefore that story is not interpeted, lest the common people err, and say, That there was something that came forth from it self. But they understood not the Hebrew Text it self. Let that be marked. The Gemarists go on: R. Chaninah ben Gamaliel went to Chabul, and hearing there a Minister of the Synagogue reading those words, ויהי בשכן ישראל And it came to pass when Israel dwelt, He said to the Interpreter, Be silent and interpret not; and the wise men commanded him.

Very many passages of that nature might be produced, whereby it appears plain, that the Hebrew Text was read in the Synagogue of the Hebrews, that is, of those of Babylon and Palestine, and whose so ever Mother Tongue was Syriac or Chaldee. But whether it were read in the Synagogues of the Hellenists, further enquiry must be made.

CHAP. VI.

What the Jews think of the Versions.

THOSE Canons which we have cited concerning reading and interpretation, do they bind the Jews, Palestines, and Babylonians only, or other Jews, and the whole Nation whereso ever dispersed? Those Canons are in both Talmuds, and as all other Traditions compriſed in that Book do bind the whole Nation, unless where the reason of times, and the difference of places dispense; so why should not these bind concerning reading the Law, and the Prophets in the Synagogues out of the Hebrew Text?

The whole Jewish Nation were carried out with the highest zeal and veneration towards the Hebrew Text, which to neglect in the Synagogues was accounted among them for a high impiety. It was read in the Synagogues of the Hebrews, and rendred very frequently in the very words of Onkelos and Jonathan. And why were not the Targumists themselves read rather, and the business done by fewer? Because the original Text is by no means to be neglected. And why the Hellenists should be cooler in this business than the Hebrews, who can give a reason?

Therefore, how much the more zeal and honour they had for the Hebrew Text, so much the less grateful to them was the Version of it into another Tongue. For they thought so much of honour, vertue and worth departed from the holy Text, as that Language or those very letters were departed from.

I. In that Canon כתבי קדש מטמאים את הידים The holy Books pollute the hands; whereby, as they ſay, the worth of thoſe Books is proved, if there be made any change of the Language or Characters, ſo much they believe the nobility of them is diminiſhed. a For the Targum if it be written in Hebrew, and the Hebrew Bible, if it be written in the Language of the Targum, and the writing changed they defile not the hands; and indeed thoſe Books do not defile the hands, unleſs they be writ in Hebrew.

a Jadaim, cap. 4. hal. 5.

II. It is diſputed, b Whether it be lawful to ſnatch the holy Books out of the fire on the Sabbath day, when that cannot be done without ſome labour. And it is concluded without all ſcruple, that if they are wrote in Hebrew they ought to be ſnatched out, but if in an other Language, or in other Characters, then it is doubted. Yea R. Joſe ſaith, They are not to be ſnatched out.

b Schabb. fol. 115. 1.

III. It is diſputed further, אם מותר לאבדן ביד if the holy Books ſo written ſhall come to your hands, whether you may deſtroy them with your own hand either by cutting or tearing them, or throwing them into the fire: and it is concluded indeed in the negative: which yet is to the ſame effect, as though it were determined in the Affirmative. Let them be laid up, ſay they, in ſome foul place, where they may be conſumed by themſelves.

And it is related of Rabban Gamaliel firſt, that when ספר איוב תרגום The Book of Job made into a Targum, was brought to him, he commanded, that it ſhould be buried under a heap of ſtones. Which example alſo a certain Rabbin afterward urgeth to his great grand-ſon Gamaliel, that he alſo ſhould bury under ground the Book of Job Targumized, which he had in his hand, to be conſumed.

The Book of Job Targumized was that Book tranſlated into the Chaldee Language, the Mother Tongue of the Nation, the Tongue into which the Law and the Prophets were rendred in the Synagogues, and yet by no means did they tolerate the Verſion of that Book (which indeed was not read in the Synagogues) though rendred in that Language, much leſs would they tolerate the Verſion of the Law and the Prophets into a more remote and more Heathen Language.

Theſe things well conſidered, one may with good reaſon ſuſpect, that the Jews thought not ſo honourably of any Verſion, as to caſt away the Hebrew Bible, and to eſpouſe that in the room of it. And what they might, or did, think concerning the Greek Verſion of the LXX, as it is called, let us, as much as we can, briefly ſearch.

CHAP. VII.

A Compariſon of the Hiſtory of the LXX as it is in Joſephus, and as it is in the Talmudiſts.

THE ſtory as it is in Joſephus, and Ariſteas hath no need to be repeated, being ſo well known to all. From which how vaſtly different is it from the ſtory as it is related in the Talmudiſts? Which we tranſcribe verbatim from Maſſecheth Sopherim a thus,

There is a ſtory of five Elders, who tranſcribed the Law for Ptolomy the King in Greek. And that day was bitter to Iſrael as the day wherein the golden Calf was made. Becauſe the Law could not be turned according to all things requiſite to it. And again there is a ſtory of King Ptolomy, that he aſſembled ſeventy two Elders together, and diſpoſed them into ſeventy two Cells. But he revealed not to them why he had aſſembled them. But coming in to every one of them ſaid to them, write me out the Law of Moſes your Maſter; God put counſel into each of their hearts, that their minds agreed in one. And they wrote out for him the Law by it ſelf. But they changed thirteen places in it.

The Babylonian Talmud f relates the ſtory in the like manner, this only excepted, that there is no mention of the five Elders; as alſo that this clauſe is wanting, They wrote out the Law for him by it ſelf.

b In Megill.

I. Joſephus

I. Josephus speaks glorious things of letters sent from the King to the High Priest sending for Interpreters, of Presents sent to Eleazar, and other things consecrated to the Temple, of many Talents spent by Ptolomy for the redemption of the Jews, of honourable rewards conferred upon the Interpreters: all which according to the account of Josephus and Aristeas amounted to such a sum, that one might with reason believe the whole Alexandrian Library was not worth so much, yea a whole years tax of Egypt would scarcely have been of that value.

But of all this there is deep silence in the Talmudists; and yet usually they want not either for Will or Elocution, when something is to be declared for the glory of their own nation. They are not silent of the gifts of Monobazus and Helena, Nicanor, Ben Kattin, &c. of the gifts of Princes either given or lent to their Rabbins, but of these vast expences of Ptolomy, there is not one Syllable.

II. In Josephus the Interpreters are sent for by letters, and that under that notion, that they should interpret. But in the Talmudists they are convened, being altogether ignorant what they must do.

III. In Josephus they turn (the Law at least) into Greek: in the Talmudists it is obscure, whether they translated any thing at all. Of the five Elders indeed it is said in terms, that כתבו יונית they transcribed in Greek, that is, they turned, as the word which followeth להתרגם to interpret, sufficiently explains. But of the Seventy there is no such thing: but only this, That they transcribed the Law by its self, and changed thirteen places in it.

There is a passage indeed, where the Babylonian Talmudists are brought in with their relation, whereby one might think, that they intimated that the Seventy translated into Greek. Our c Masters, say they, permitted not that the holy Books should be transcribed, but into Greek. And it is a Tradition R. Judah saith, when they permitted to transcribe in Greek, they permitted it of the Book of the Law only. ומשום מעשה דחלמי המלך And that because of that which happened to King Ptolomy: Or let it be as it is rendred by some, Whence the work was begun with Ptolomy the King.

c Megil. f. 9. 1.

But if any should say, that they transcribed indeed in Greek, that is, the Hebrew Text in Greek letters, and translated not, you would scarcely refute him out of the Talmudists especially, when elsewhere they distinguish between writing out בכל לשון in any Language, d that is, in the Characters of any Language, and writing out תרגום בכל לשון by a Version into any Language: and when there was a publication and edition of a double Hebrew Text in Origens Hexapla and Octapla e Δι' Ἑβραϊκῶν καὶ Ἑλληνικῶν γραμμάτων, In Hebrew and Greek Characters, he seems not to have been without his Copy, in which the Hebrew Text it self was written out in Greek Letters.

d Scabb. fol. 115. 1.

e Epiphan. haeres. 63.

What at length does that mean, They writ out the Law by it self? Certainly either this, They transcribed the Law only, and not the other Books; or rather, they transcribed the Hebrew Law it self in Hebrew, and turned it not.

They wrote out, say they, the Law by it self, and changed thirteen places in it, the examination of the latter clause will yield light to the former, and will give its vote to him that says, that it does not appear in the Talmudists, that the LXX translated at all, but that they only transcribed the Hebrew Books in Hebrew.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the thirteen places, that were changed.

BOTH Talmuds, as also other Rabbins, who relate the story of the LXX Elders, add always this that they changed thirteen places in the Law: which they also reckon up. But now when those different readings are not found in the Greek Version, that story is exploded by the most, as a mere fiction; when indeed the change was not in the Version, but in the Hebrew Transcription. Let the thing speak it self.

They wrote, say they, אלהים ברא בראשית God created in the beginning, Gen. I. 1. not בראשית ברה אלהים In the beginning God created. Lest the King should say, Bereshith is God, and there were two powers, and the first created the later a. But now in the Greek Version it was impossible, that such a scruple should arise; it could arise only from the Hebrew a See the Gloss in Megill. & fol. 9. 1.

Hebrew Text: and it must necessarily be, that this change, intended for an amendment, should be reckoned to be in the Hebrew words themselves.

They write, ותשחק שרה בקרביה And Sarah laughed among her neighbours, Gen. XVIII. 12. for בקרבה within her self.

They wrote, לא חמר אחד מהם נשאתי Whatsoever was desirable I took not from them, Numb. XVI. 15. for חמר אחר one Ass. Now who will doubt, but that the change was made in the Hebrew words themselves? In the former from the affinity of the words; in the later from the similitude of the letters.

But instead of more, let this one Example serve. They wrote, וישלח את ואטוטי בני ישראל And he sent worthy men of the children of Israel, Exod. XXIV. 5. for את נערי young men. Now if it be asked, whether they wrote the very word ואטוטי or the sense of it in the Greek Language, the Jerusalem Gemarists witness, that that very same word was writ by them in this story. Three books, say they, were found in the Court of the Temple. In one of them was written מעון קדם Deut. XXXIII. 27. in two was written מעונה They received those two, and they rejected the third. In one was written, וישלח את ואטוטי בני ישראל He sent worthy men of the children of Israel. In two was written וישלח את נערי בני ישראל He sent young men of the children of Israel. They received those two, and rejected the third. In one was written תשע היא nine. In two was written, אחד עשרה היא eleven. They received those two, and rejected the third.

Now it may be asked, What, I pray, were those two Copies, in which it was written, מעונה and נערי and אחד עשרה They were Hebrew Copies, without all controversie: and so was that without all doubt in which it was written מעון and ואטוטי and תשע

There is no reason therefore, why that tradition of the thirteen places changed should bear so ill a report, and be accounted for a fiction, because those thirteen alterations are not met with in the Greek Version. For the Talmudists plainly treat of the Seventy two not Translating out of Hebrew, but transcribing the Hebrew Books themselves.

Let us also add the introduction that the Jerusalem Writers make to this history. *b*The Jerusalem Talmudists, say they, wrote ירושלם ירושלימה צפון צפונה תימן תימנה Jerusalem, Jerushlema, Tzaphon, Tzephona, Teman, Temna. That is, they changed the writing of these Hebrew words: and immediately they add, ג' דברו שינו חכמים לתלמי המלך The wise Men altered thirteen places for Ptolomey the King. Which is also to be understood of the Hebrew words themselves, otherwise this does not suite with what goes before.

b Megill. f. 71. 4

CHAP. IX.

In what value the Version of the Seventy, as it is commonly called, seems to have been among the Jews.

THUS it remains doubtful, whether the Talmudists acknowledge any Version of the Seventy two Elders, or no. Let it be granted therefore, that they attributed Θεοπνευστίαν, Divine inspiration to them, from hence, that being put asunder, yet they all conspired in one mind and sense; nevertheless it will not at all follow thence, that any honour was given by them to this Version, which is carried about under that name.

One may much more readily perceive in it the breath of Jewish Traditions, than any inspiration of the Holy Ghost: And although their own Traditions were of account certainly to the Nation; and for the patronizing them, many things seem to be put into the Version, which favour them; yet this did by no means so much obtain with them, as that they valued the Version above the Hebrew Original, and that the casting away that, made choise of this to themselves; but they always reserved to the Hebrew Text its due honour.

I. What the Learned among them might judge of the Greek Version, one may somewhat gues from hence, that even a Christian himself seriously reading and viewing it, may observe many things in it, whereby he may discover by what counsils, cautions, and craftiness that Version was published; especially, if together with it he hath in his Eye, the Manners, Traditions, Ordinances, and State of the Jewish Nation; to which allusion is very frequently made, and respect had by those Interpreters. The matter may be illustrated by one or two examples, as to their Traditions.

Gen. XX. 18. Ὅτι συγκλείων συνέκλεισε κύριος ἔξωθεν πᾶσαν μήτραν - Because the Lord in shutting shut up all the Womb without. Whence comes the putting in of the word ἔξωθεν, Without? It agrees with the Tradition, that the Wombs were barred up against copulation a. Exod.

We omit more paſſages of the ſame obſervation and ſuſpition; and they are not a few.

But I do not remember, that I have found one clauſe alledged out of the Verſion of the LXX in the whole Talmud, either one or other.

Let it alſo be added, that m the Book of Ben Syra is a prohibited book, and yet you may find it cited in both Talmuds. In that of Jeruſalem, in the Tract Beracoth n: where it ſeems to be the book of Syracides. But otherwiſe in divers other places o. But I do not, I ſay, remember, that I have found the Verſion of the Seventy alledged in any place; and I ſcarce think, that ſuch an allegation could paſs me unobſerved. Which thing more encreaſeth my ſuſpicion, that thoſe Jews owned not ſuch a Verſion, and that they underſtood the Tranſcription of the Seventy, not to be the Verſion, but the copying out the very Hebrew Text it ſelf. And as to the Verſion it ſelf, whereof we are ſpeaking, how they ſtood affected towards it, one may in ſome meaſure learn from this, that when another Verſion is alledged by them, they cite not this at all. m Sanhedr. fol. 100.2. n Fol. 11. 2. o Bab. Chetub. fol.110.2. Chagig. fol. 13,1. Bathra, fol 98. 2. eſpecially, Sanhedr. in the place before.

III. The Jews knew well enough, that the Greek Verſion was not publiſhed for Jews, but for Heathen: and was done by their labour, who came unwillingly to that work, nor would have ſuffered any ſuch thing, if it had laid in their power to have hindred it. But now with what faithfulneſs ſuch a thing was done, the thing it ſelf ſpeaks, and the Jews knew it well enough; who knew alſo well enough with what ſmall affection the whole Jewiſh Nation ſtood towards the Heathen.

By no argument therefore ſhall any perſwade me, that that Verſion was a pure and accurate Verſion, exactly according to the Hebrew truth, which the Interpreters had in their hands; and that the differences which we now perceive in our Bibles, were riſen thence, that the Jews depraved the Hebrew Text according to their pleaſure. For I ſhall never believe, that any Maſters of the Jews would exhibit a pure, uncorrupted and exact Bible to the Heathen in the Greek Verſion; and obtrude an interpolated, depraved, corrupt one upon themſelves. And let us call themſelves in for judges in this caſe.

II. In

I. In Gen. II. 2. The Greek words are, Συνετέλεσεν ὁ Θεὸς ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ἕκτῃ · And God finiſhed on the ſixth day. Was it to that very ſenſe in the Copy, which the Interpreters uſed? They changed, and wrote, ſay the Gemariſts, ויכל ביום הששי He finiſhed in the ſixth day. The Gloſs writes, That it might not be ſaid, that God did any thing on the Sabbath. In their Hebrew Copy it was, as it is in ours, ויכל ביום השביעי And God ended his work on the ſeventh day; but they changed it in the Hebrew Tranſcript, whereof we ſpake, and ſo did the Interpreters in the Greek Verſion.

II. In Exod. XII. 40. The Greek words are, Ἡ δὲ κατοίκησις τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ ὧν κατῴκησαν ἐν γῇ Αἰγύπτῳ, καὶ Χαναὰν, &c. Now the ſojourning of the children of Iſrael, which they ſojourned in the Land of Egypt, and in Canaan, &c. Did the Interpreters read ſo in their Hebrew Copy? No. They changed, ſay the Talmudiſts, and writ, בארץ מצרים ובארץ כנען In the Land of Egypt, and in the Land of Canaan. In the Copy which was in their hands, thoſe words ובארץ כנען In the Land of Canaan, were abſent: but they added it of their own. The Gloſs ſaith, Leſt it ſhould be ſaid, a lie is written in your Law: for behold Kohath was among thoſe that went down into Egypt. And if you reckon all the years of Kohath, Amram, and Moſes, they amount not to four hundred.

III. In Numb. XVI. 15. The Greek words are, Οὐκ ἐπιθύμημα ἀδενὸς αὐτῶν εἴληφα · I have not taken the deſire of any of them. Was חמר Deſire, writ in the Copy the Seventy uſed? No, It is an alteration, ſay the Maſters; for it was writ חמר an Aſſe, and they transferred it into חמר deſire. The Gloſs writes, That it might not be ſaid, Perhaps he took not an Aſſe, but he took away ſome other deſirable thing. And you may know the Lion by his paw.

Let theſe things be ſpoken to prove, that it is not ſo Heterodox to ſuppoſe that the Greek Verſion was not read in the Synagogues of the Helleniſts, but the Hebrew Text, ſo as it was in the Synagogues of the Hebrews. And now let us briefly weigh, what things are ſaid on the contrary ſide.

CHAP. X.

What things are objected for the Affirmative.

I. FIRST, That paſſage is objected, a R. Levi went to Ceſarea, and hearing them read the Leſſon שמע Schma, Deut. VI. in Greek, would hinder them. R. Joſe obſerving it, was angry, ſaying, He that cannot read in Hebrew, ſhall he not read at all? Yea, let a man read in any Tongue, which he underſtands, and knows, and ſo ſatisfie his Duty. So the words are rendred by a very learned Man.

But the Gemara treats not of reading the Law in the Synagogues, but concerning the repeating of the paſſages of the Phylacteries, among which the firſt was שמע ישראל Hear, O Iſrael; Deut. VI. Therefore the word קורין is not to be rendred reading, but repeating. In which ſenſe the word קרא occurs very frequently in the Maſters. As קראה עיר פרה b She recites the book of Eſter by her mouth; that is, without book. And, c Heretofore every one that could לקרות Recite (that paſſage uſed in offering the firſt fruits, Deut. XXVI.) קרא Recited. And he that could not recite מקרין אותו they taught him to recite: or they recited for him.

II. That example and ſtory is urged concerning reading the Law and the Prophets in the Synagogue of Antioch of Piſidia, Act. XIII. 15. To which there is no need to anſwer any thing elſe, but that it begs the Queſtion.

III. That alſo of Tertullian is added, d Sed & Judæi palam lectitant, Vectigalis libertas vulgo auditur (or, aditur) ſingulis Sabbatis. But the Jews alſo read openly, the liberty of the Tax is heard (or, gone unto) every Sabbath day.

I anſwer, Be it granted, that Tertullian ſpeaks of the Greek Verſion, which is not ſo very evident; that which was done under Severus doth not conclude the ſame thing done in the times of the Apoſtles: but eſpecially when Severus was, according to the ſenſe of his name, very ſevere towards the Jews, as Baronius teacheth, and Spartianus long before him. Under whom Sabbaths could not be kept by the Jews, but under a Tax. And be it granted, that the Greek Verſion was read then by them at Rome (as the Gloſſer upon Tertullian deſcribes the ſcene of the affair) that was alſo under a Tax; not by the choiſe of the people, but by pure compulſion.

IV. That of Juſtin Martyr is produced; Εἰδέ τις φάσκοι μὴ ἡμῶν τὰς Βίβλους τούτους ἀλλὰ Ἰουδαίοις προσήκειν, διὰ τὸ ἔτι καὶ νυῦ ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς αὐτῶν σώζεσθαι. e But if any ſay, that theſe books belong not to us, but the Jews; and therefore they are to this day preſerved in their Syna-

Synagogues. And, Ἔμειναν αἱ βίβλοι ἐν παῖς Αἰγυπτίοις μέχρι τῦ δεῦρο, &c. fThe books remained even among the Egyptians hitherto, and are every where among all the Jews, who reading them underſtand them not. f Apolog. 2.

V. But that is inſtead of all, that Philo and Joſephus follow the Greek Verſion; and that (which is ſtill greater) the holy Pen-men do follow it in the New Teſtament in their allegations taken out of the Old. Therefore without doubt, ſay they, that Verſion was frequent and common in the Synagogues, and in the hands of men; and without doubt, of the higheſt authority among the Jews; yea, as it ſeemeth, of divine. Theſe are the arguments which are of the greateſt weight on that ſide.

That I may therefore anſwer together to all, let us expatiate a little in this enquiry.

CHAP. XI.

By what Authors and Counſils it might probably be that that Greek Verſion came forth, which obtains under the Name of the Seventy.

I. IT was made and publiſhed without doubt not for the ſake of the Jews, but of the Heathen. We have Joſephus a witneſs here in his ſtory of the Seventy; granting him to be true in that relation, what moved Ptolomey ſo greedily to deſire the Verſion, to purchaſe ſo ſmall a Volume at ſuch vaſt expenſes? Was it Religion? Or a deſire of adorning his Library? By that paint does Joſephus colour the buſineſs: but reaſon will dictate a third cauſe, and that far more likely. For both the Jewiſh and Heathen Writers teach, that Egypt at that time was filled with an infinite multitude of Jews: and what could a prudent King, and that took care of himſelf and his Kingdom, do elſe, than look into the manners and inſtitutions of that Nation, whether they conſiſted with the peace and ſecurity of his Kingdom; ſince that people was contrary to the manners and Laws of all other Nations.

When therefore he could neither examine nor underſtand their Law, which comprized their whole Religion, Polity, and Oeconomy, being writ in Hebrew; it was neceſſary for him to provide to have it tranſlated into their Vulgar Tongue. Hence aroſe the Verſion of the five Elders, as we may well ſuppoſe; and leſt ſome fraud or colluſion might creep in, the aſſembling of the Seventy two Elders was occaſioned hence alſo. And does it not favour of ſome ſuſpicion, that he aſſembled them being altogether ignorant what they were to do? For let reaſon tell us, why we ſhould not rather give credit to the Talmudiſts writing for their own Country-men, than to Joſephus writing for the Heathen. And if there be any truth in that relation, that when he had gathered them together, he ſhut them up by themſelves in ſo many chambers, that ſtill increaſeth the ſame ſuſpicion.

II. Let it be yielded that they turned it into Greek: which as we have ſeen, is doubtful; yet the ſpeech in the Gemariſts is only concerning the Books of Moſes, and concerning the Law only in Joſephus. Who therefore Tranſlated the reſt of the Books of the Holy Volume? It is without an Author perhaps, ſhould we ſay, the Jeruſalem Sanhedrin, but not without reaſon. For,

III. The Jews, whereſoever diſperſed through out the World, and they in very many Regions infinite in their numbers, made it their earneſt requeſt, that they might live and be governed by their own Laws, and indeed they would live by none, but their own. But what Prince would grant this, being altogether ignorant what thoſe Laws were? They ſaw their manners and rites were contrary to all other Nations; it was needful alſo to ſee, whether they were not contrary to the peace of their Kingdoms. That very jealouſie could not but require the Verſion of thoſe Laws into the common Language, and to force it alſo from them, how unwilling ſoever they might be. The great Sanhedrin therefore could not conſult better and more wiſely for the ſafty, and ſecurity, and religion of the whole Nation, than by turning their Holy Books into the Greek Language, that all might know what it was that they profeſſed. They could not but ſee, but thoſe Books would at laſt, though they were never ſo unwilling, come forth in the Vulgar Language; nor could they hinder, but they would every where happen into the hands of the Heathen: therefore that it would be far better, that a Verſion ſhould come forth by their care and authority, which might be according to their pleaſures; than that ſome ſhould come forth in one place, and ſome in another, which perhaps might turn to the diſgrace of the Holy Text, or to the danger and reproach of the Nation, or might too much lay open the Holy Myſteries among the Heathen.

By theſe Authors, and by theſe reaſons, I confeſs ingenuouſly, it is my opinion, that that Verſion was made, which goes about under the name of the Seventy. Nor are there ſome things wanting in the Verſion it ſelf, which hint ſome ſuch counſil in the publiſhing of it. For,

IV. Even a blear Eye may ſee clearly enough, that it was hammered out, and dreſſed with more caution, than conſcience; more craft than ſincerity: 1. That as much as might be, the Holy Books might remain free from any reproach or cavilling of the Heathen. 2. That they might ſoften ſome things, which might be injurious to the Jewiſh Nation, either as to their peace, or reputation; or which might create offence to the Gentiles. 3. That the myſteries, and the bare truth of the Holy Books might be revealed as little as poſſibly could be, to the Heathen. All which might be demonſtrated by ſuch numberleſs examples, as to leave no occaſion to doubt of that matter, behind it.

By theſe and the like cautions and ſubtilties was that Verſion made; wherein the Tranſlators had leſs care, that the Interpretation ſhould come out ſincere and true; but proviſion was chiefly made, that any thing ſhould be thruſt upon the Gentiles ſo it were without danger, and that the Glory and ſafety of the Jewiſh Nation might be maintained. And may it be allowed me to ſpeak out what I think. Among the various Copies and Editions of this Verſion, which go about; I do not eſteem that Copy for the moſt genuine, which comes neareſt to the Hebrew Text, but that which comes neareſt to the mind of the Tranſlators in ſuch like cautions.

It is ſaid, as we ſaw before, that when the five Elders had turned the Law, That day was bitter to Iſrael, as the day wherein the Golden Calf was made. And why? Becauſe the Law could not be turned according to all things convenient to it. Did their grief ariſe hence, becauſe it was not turned, nor could not be, clearly, exactly and evidently enough, that the Heathen might ſee the full and open light of it? Who will believe that this ever was the Jews deſire or wiſh? But their trouble proceeded rather from hence, that thoſe five had not Tranſlated it cunningly, warily and craftily enough, as the Gentiles were to be dealt withal.

Of this matter there was care enough taken in this Verſion: the Authors ſetting all their ſtrength and wits on work, that, according to their own pleaſures, it might come forth ſuch as they would have it; and might ſerve their purpoſe both as to themſelves, and as to the Gentiles. This they eſtabliſhed, and ſtrengthned by their own authority, not as a pure Verſion, and ſuch as was to be recommended to their Countrymen, but as fit enough to ſtop the mouths and ſatisfie the curioſity of the Heathen; and leſt any among them might attempt another, in which thoſe cautions and proviſions might not be ſufficiently obſerved.

This they laid up in their Sanhedrins and Synagogues, that it might be ready, and ſhewn to the Heathen, as a Symbol and token of the Jewiſh Law, Faith, and Religion, if at any time the matter, and neceſſity called for ſome ſuch thing.

We grant therefore to Juſtin Martyr, that that Verſion was in the Synagogues and hands of the Jews: but one would not conclude from that, that it was read in the Synagogue inſtead of the Hebrew Text. And we will yield alſo to Tertullian, that that Verſion was read at Rome in his age in the Synagogues of the Jews; but being compelled ſo to do, by that ſuſpicion, whereof we ſpake; namely, that it might be known to all, what the Law and Religion of the Jews was, whether it conſiſted with the Roman Government. Our Queſtion is, whether the Helleniſts choſe to themſelves the reading of the Greek Verſion, and neglected the Hebrew Text: and ſeeing for the moſt part they lived by their own Laws and Ordinances, you will hardly any where ſhew me, eſpecially in the times of the Apoſtles, concerning which we ſpeak, or in the times before them, that they were compelled to reject the one, and to read the other.

And as to that which is objected concerning Philo and Joſephus; tis no wonder if they writing for the Heathen, followed that Verſion, which was deſignedly made for the Heathen.

But that is of the greateſt weight of all, which is objected concerning the Evangeliſts and Apoſtles, who embraced that Verſion in their quotations out of the Old Teſtament? To which the Anſwer is very eaſie. Namely, Thoſe Holy Writers had to do with two ſorts of men, Jews and Gentiles: the Volume of the New Teſtament was in the hands of both. A Gentile deſires to examine the quotations, which are brought out of the Old Teſtament. But not underſtanding the Hebrew, whether ſhould he go, but to the Greek Verſion, which he underſtands. So that it was not only ὀκ συγκαταβάσεως, out of condeſcenſion, that thoſe Holy Writers followed the Greek Verſion, but out of pure neceſſity: for otherwiſe it was impoſſible, that their allegations out of the Law and the Prophets could be examined by the Gentiles. And if a Jew having the New Teſtament in his hand, ſhould complain and quarrel, that in their quotations they departed from the Hebrew Text, they had an anſwer ready, viz. This very Verſion which which is cited is that very ſame, which ye have writ, publiſhed, and propounded to the World, as the Symbol and token of your Law and Religion, and as your own very Bible.

If we would deſignedly attempt a full diſquiſition concerning that Verſion, we might, it may be, more at large demonſtrate all theſe things which have been ſpoken, by various inſtances, reaſons and methods. But let this ſuffice at preſent. This diſcourſe was raiſed by occaſion of the mention of the unknown Tongue, Chap. XIV. which we ſuppoſe was Hebrew: formerly uſed in the Helleniſtical Synagogue of the Corinthians, and which they would retain, being now converted to the Goſpel: too much wreſting to Judaiſm the gift of Tongues, in the ſame manner, as they did the other privileges, and ordinances of the Goſpel: and uſing an unknown Language ſo much the rather, becauſe the gift of Tongues was granted from Heaven, uſing it to an end plainly contrary to the gift it ſelf; unhappily perverting it, and not requiring, not admitting now an Interpreter, which before was done by them, as if they thought God had given unknown Tongues, to be unknown to all, beſides thoſe to whom they were given.

In what I have ſaid of the Greek Verſion, and of the not reading it among the Helleniſts, I know, I have very learned Men differing in their opinions from me; and heretofore I my ſelf was of a contrary judgment: Whence, I hope, the Reader will be the more eaſily perſwaded, that I do not ſpeak theſe things from a deſire of contention, but from a ſerious enquiry, as far as I am able, into the thing, from often repeated thoughts, and a moſt hearty deſire of ſearching after truth.

A SERMON PREACHED AT St. Michaels Cornhil,

Before the NATIVES of STAFFORDSHIRE.

JOHN X. 22, 23.

And it was at Jeruſalem the Feaſt of the Dedication, and it was Winter. And Jeſus walked in the Temple, in Solomons porch.

THE Text is ſuitable to the occaſion: Here is a Feaſt as well as yours; a Feaſt in Winter as well as yours; and as I ſhall ſhew you anon, a Feaſt on the five and twentieth day of November as well as yours. If Chriſt will vouchſafe his preſence at yours, as he did at this in the Text, the parallel will not be ſo pregnant as it will be happy.

Of all the four Evangeliſts John is moſt punctual, nay, he only is punctual to give account of the Feſtivals that intercurred, between Chriſts entrance into his Publick Miniſtry at his Baptiſm, and the time of his Death; that renowned and ſignal ſpace of time, of half a week of years, as they be called, *Dan.*9. 27. or three years and an half, in which Chriſt performed his Miniſtery, and wrought Redemption. And this he doth partly, that he might the more remarkably count out the time, and partly that he might ſhew how careful our Saviour was to obſerve thoſe Feſtivals.

He names you the four Paſſovers that intervened.

The firſt Paſſover after his Baptiſm in Chap. II. when he whipped Buyers and Sellers out of the Temple.

The ſecond in Chap. V. when he healed the long diſeaſed Man at Bethesda.

The third in Chap. VI. 4. a little before which he fed five thouſand Men miraculouſly.

The fourth and laſt in Chap. XVIII. at which he ſuffered.

He gives you alſo account of his being at the Feaſt of Tabernacles, Chap. VII. and of his being at the Feaſt of Dedication in the words that I have read.

To the expounding of which, the very way that I muſt go, cannot but mind me to Obſerve this to you.

That Humane Learning is exceeding uſeful, nay exceeding needful to the Expounding of Scripture.

The Text gives the riſe of this Obſervation, and it gives the proof of it. Here is the mention of the Feaſt of Dedication, and not one tittle elſe in all the Scripture concerning it.

it. And so there is the bare mention of Solomons porch, and indeed it is mentioned once again in Act. III. 11. but neither here nor there any more than the bare name. Certainly the Holy Ghost would never have mentioned these things, if he would not have had us to have sought to know what they meant. But how should we know them? The Scripture gives not one spark of light to find them out, but Humane Learning holds out a clear light of Discovery.

Would you know what this Feast of Dedication was? Upon what occasion instituted? How celebrated? At what time of Winter it occurred? The Scripture speaks not one word of all these, but Humane Authors, the Talmud, Maimony, Josephus, the first book of Maccabes tell you all fully.

And would you know what Solomons porch was, and where it was, and in what part of the Temple it was, in Scripture you can never find it; but consult Humane Learning, and Writers, and they will tell you it was a Cloister-walk on the East bound of the utmost Court of the Temple; and they will tell you the very space and fashion of it.

Here is a Text fallen into our Hands occasionally (a Thousand others of the like nature might be produced) let any of those that deny Humane Learning to be needful in handling of Divinity, but expound me this Text without the help of Humane Learning, and I shall then think there is something in their Opinion.

Two things lead them into this mistake. 1. Because they conceive the New Testament (which part of the Bible Christians have most to deal withal) is so easie of it self that it needs no pains, or study to the Expounding of it. 2. And the less, because, say they, the Spirit reveals it to the Saints of God, and so they are taught of God, and can teach others.

Give me leave partly for our settlement in the Truth about this Point, and partly for the stopping the mouths of such gainsayers, out of many things that might be spoken, to commend these four to you.

I. That in the time when Prophecy flourished, the standing Ministery that was to teach the people were not Prophets, but Priests and Levites: that became Learned by Study. And for that end God disposed them into forty eight Cities, which were as Universities, where they were to Study the Law together, that they might be inabled to teach the people. And you may see the very Prophets themselves, sending the people to them to be Instructed, Hag. II. 2. Mal. II. 7. It is but a wild thing now when Prophesie is ceased so many hundred years ago, to refuse Learning and a Learned Ministery, and to seek instruction we know not of whom.

II. There is no ground in Scripture to believe, nor promise to expect, that God doth, or ever will, teach men the Grammatical or Logical construction of the Scripture Text. Tis true indeed that he gives to a gratious Saint the Spirit of Wisdom and Revelation in the knowledge of Christ, as it is Ephes. I. 17. But how? Revealing to him by experimental feeling, that which he knew indeed before in Scripture, but only by bare Theory. As for example, A man before his conversion knows by reading and hearing what Faith and Repentance are in their definitions, but when he comes to be Converted, the Spirit of Grace reveals these to him in feeling and experience. And further Revelation as to the understanding of Scripture there is not the least ground-work in Scripture, whereupon to expect it.

III. When God had committed the New Testament to writing, he had revealed all that he would reveal to men on Earth, of his will and way of Salvation. The words in Joh. XVI. 13. are appropriate to the Apostles. None ever were or will be, whom God led into all Truth, save the Apostles. He leads indeed every Saint he hath, into all Truth needful for him, but the Apostles into all Truth needful both for themselves, and the whole Church. Because God by them was to give the rule of Faith and Manners to all the Church. Now when all the Truth that God would reveal was revealed and compact in the New Testament, as all Light in the body of the Sun, must we still look for further Revelation to explain this Revealing? It was foretold that the Light that God would exhibit under the Gospel should be as the Light of the Sun sevenfold, and must we look for another Sun of Revelation to give Light to this Sun? The New Testament revealed the Old, and must we look for Revelations to reveal the New? And so we may look in infinitum.

IV. The main difficulty of the New Testament requires study to unfold it rather than Revelation. The Old Testament needed further Revelation to unfold it, and further was promised. And accordingly the New Testament was a further Revelation, that did unfold it. For the great difficulty of the Old Testament was in the Sence; the Language every Child could understand, for it was their Mother-tongue. But when they could understand what the words meant, they could not understand what the Sence meant; nor was it possible to find it out in abundance of places without further Revelation. But the main difficulty of the New Testament is in the Languages; unlock that clearly, and the Sence ariseth easie. The Old Testaments difficulty was in the Kernel, the New in the Shell.

For

For beſides, that Greek, the Original is not the Native Tongue now of any part of the World, there is ſuch intermixture of Septuagint Greek, Hebrew Idioms, Talmudichal Phraſes, and Alluſions to the Jews Opinions and Cuſtoms, that the greateſt difficulty is to explain the Language: that done the Sence is plain. Now certainly, it is more likely to obtain underſtanding of Languages by Study, than to attain it by Revelation: unleſs any one will yet expect that miraculous gift of Tongues, which I ſuppoſe there is none will make himſelf ſo ridiculous, as to ſay they expect. But this only by the way.

In the Text, as there are two Verſes, ſo are there two diſtinct things obſervable.

In the former a Feſtival mentioned, in the latter Chriſts preſence there intimated, and either of them illuſtrated by three circumſtances.

I. The Feſtival. 1. By its Name. It was the Feaſt of Dedication. 2. By the Place. It was at Jeruſalem. 3. By the Time. It was Winter.

II. Chriſts preſence there. 1. By the place where he was. In the Temple. 2. The particular place in the Temple, Solomons porch. 3. His poſture there, He was walking. He was at the Feaſt at Jeruſalem, though it were Winter, and he walked in the Temple, belike to get him heat, becauſe it was Winter.

The Feaſt of Dedication (as the Authors before mentioned do inform us) was inſtituted upon this occaſion. Antiochus Epiphanes, one of the Kings of Syria, one of the Horns of the fourth Monarchy, Dan. VII. 24. having the Nation of the Jews under his Power and Tyranny, raiſed againſt them and their Religion a very ſad Perſecution. He forbad them to Circumciſe their Children: he reſtrained the exerciſe of their Religion, burnt the Books of the Law, ſet up Idolatry, defiled the Temple, ſet up an Idolatrous Altar upon the very Altar of the Lord in the Court of the Temple. And all this for a Time, two Times, and half a Time; as Daniel ſtyles it, Dan. VII. 25. or three years and an half.

The Jews had never felt ſuch miſery of that nature before, and Daniel in his twelfth Chapter foretelling of that a long time before it came, ſaith, That it ſhould be ſuch a time of trouble as had never been ſince they were a Nation.

At laſt Judas Maccabæus prevails againſt his Power and Tyranny, ſhakes off that Yoak, reſtores the People and Religion, deſtroies his Idolatry, purges the Temple, pulls down his Idol-Altar, that he had erected there, yea alſo the Altar of the Lord which it had ſtood upon and defiled, reareth up a new Altar, and on the 25th day of the month Ciſleu, which was the ninth month, or their November, dedicates the Altar, and ſets the Publick Service of the Temple afoot again. And thereupon he and the generation ordained that day, and ſeven days forward for the Feaſt of Dedication, to be kept annually throughout all ſucceeding Generations, as may be read at large in 1 Macc. IV. and in the Authors beſide, that I named. I might Obſerve from hence

How joyful a thing it is, and how joyful and perpetual a Memorial it ought to carry, when decayed Religion is reſtored to a Nation.

Oh! that England might ſee that day, and come to ſuch a Feaſt of Dedication!

But I deſire to fix upon the latter Verſe of the Text, and to obſerve Chriſts preſence at that Feaſt, which is the more remarkable and ſtrange, becauſe there were three things, that might not only have warranted his abſence thence, but even perſwaded and urged it, according to the three circumſtances we obſerved in the former verſe, the Feaſt it ſelf, the Time and the Place.

I. The Time. It was Winter. An ill time to travail; and Jeruſalem was a very long journey from Capernaum, the place of Chriſts habitation. And the Evangeliſt ſeems to have added this circumſtance the rather, that we might look upon his preſence there as the more remarkable.

II. It is ſaid that Chriſt was at this Feaſt at Jeruſalem; whereas he might have kept it in his own Town. For although indeed the three Feſtivals, that God had appointed by Moſes, Paſſover, Pentecoſt, and of Tabernacles, required mens perſonal appearance at Jeruſalem; yet the two Feaſts, that were ordained afterwards, Purim and Dedication, as the Jews Records tell us, might be kept at their own homes.

III. And that which was the main thing indeed, this Feaſt was not ordained either by the immediate appointment of God, as thoſe three were to Moſes, nor was there then any Prophet in thoſe times, that by Divine Warrant could authorize its inſtitution: but it was only of a Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Sanction, appointed by the Higher Powers in that Generation. As our fift of November is indeed of Religious obſervation, and yet but only of Humane Inſtitution. Theſe reaſons might have kept Chriſt from going up to Jeruſalem at this Feaſt, and yet you ſee that he is there. From whence I Obſerve, and on which I ſhall inſiſt.

That

That our Saviour held in Communion with the Church of the Jews in which he lived in the publick exerciſe of Religion; And, I might add, in conformity to the common cuſtom of the Nation in Civil Converſe.

An Obſervation that the Text plainly affordeth, thoſe conſiderations laid to it, that I have mentioned. For look upon this Feaſt as a thing of Religion and Religious Obſervation, he is preſent at it, as holding Communion with the Church in the publick exerciſe of Religion, or look upon it only as a civil Commemoration, and of a civil Inſtitution, he is preſent at it, becauſe he kept in conformity with the common cuſtoms of the Nation in civil Converſe.

I begin with the former: And we are upon a Subject very ſeaſonable in theſe times of our great Diviſions and Separations, and not unſeaſonable for your Meeting and Feaſt of Love and Unity. And I know no point, that may more uſefully and profitably be ſtudied and looked into toward the reconciling our great Separations than this, if ſo be the example of our Saviour be of Authority and value with us.

For clearing the way of our diſcourſe, let me firſt Obſerve theſe things to you.

I. That when I ſay, he held Communion in the publick exerciſe of Religion, I mean, their National Religion, by which indeed they were a National Church. A National Religion and a National Church are phraſes, that will not now be allowed of by many among Chriſtians, though they will allow them for current among the Jews. Though indeed there can be no clear reaſon given of the difference.

Tis true indeed, that no Nation can now be ſaid to be a National Church in that reſtriction, that the Jews were, who were ſo a National Church, that no people were of the Church beſides: yet is there the very ſame cauſe, that made them a National Church, that may make other Nations ſo now. Their being a peculiar people did not make them a National Church, for that made them only an only Church. Nor did their Ceremonial Rites in Religion make them a National Church, for that made them only a diſtinct Nation. But that that did properly make and denominate them a National Church, was the Worſhip of God, and the exerciſe of Religion went through the whole Nation. And I ſee not why Chriſtian Nations, where there is the very ſame reaſon, may not alſo cary the very ſame name.

In the Apoſtles times indeed there was no National Church of the Goſpel, and that is moſt true that they plead that hold the contrary to what I aſſert; namely, that it is not ſaid the Church of Achaia, the Church of Galatia, Judæa, Macedonia, &c. but the Churches. And there is very good reaſon why it is ſo ſaid. For thoſe whole Nations had not yet received the Goſpel: but as there was a Chriſtian Church in one place, ſo there was a Heathen Temple in another, and a Jewiſh Synagogue in another, nay it may be three for one, ten for one. But when the whole Nation came to profeſs the Goſpel, and there were no Church but Chriſtian, then whole Achaia, whole Macedonia, &c. were National Churches.

Obſerve that in Eſay XIX. 24, 25. In that day ſhall Iſrael be the third with Egypt and with Aſſyria, even a bleſſing in the midſt of the Earth. When the Lord of Hoſts ſhall bleſs, ſaying, Bleſſed be Egypt my people, &c. Aſſyria the work of my hands, and Iſrael mine inheritance. Iſrael was a National Church, becauſe the whole Nation profeſſed Religion and Worſhipped God. Egypt and Aſſyria could not be called ſo, when Heathen Temples, and Idolatrous Worſhip, and Jews Synagogues and Judaiſmes were intermixed; but when all Egypt and all Aſſyria came to own the ſame Religion, and Worſhip of God in the way of the Goſpel, why might they not hear the ſame name of National Churches, as well as Iſrael?

We mean then that Chriſt held Communion with the Church of the Jews in the publick exerciſe of that Religion which was the ſeated and fixed Religion of the Nation, and which went through the Nation.

II. The Religion of the Phariſees, Sadducees, and Eſſeans was not the National Religion, but Sects and excreſcences from it: therefore it no whit denies Chriſt Communicating with the Religion of the Nation, though he did not Communicate with the Religion of theſe Sects.

You may take up in your thoughts the whole Nation of the Jews when Chriſt came among them, in two parts: and you may very well ſo take them up, under the repreſentation of an overflowing flood. Let Jordan their own River be the inſtance. It is ſaid in Joſ. III. 15. That Jordan overflowed his banks all barley harveſt. Then a great part of the water ran in the channel, and another part flowed over the banks, and waſted what was in the way. So the greateſt part of the Nation kept in the channel of their National Religion, and a great part, namely theſe Sects, overflowed the bounds, went beyond the proper current, eſpecially the firſt and the laſt, and ſpoiled all with overdoing.

Now

Now out of whether of theſe two parts did Chriſt gather thoſe thouſands, nay thoſe ſeveral ten thouſands, as Act. XXI. 20. that came into the profeſſion of the Goſpel? Some indeed from among thoſe Sects, but the far greateſt part from among them that kept in the channel of the National Religion. For obſerve what ſad doom the Scripture paſſes upon thoſe Sects ſeverally and jointly.

The Phariſees ſingle, Chriſt curſeth and denounceth wo againſt, Matth. XXIII. over and over again.

The Phariſees and Sadducees together, John proclaimeth a generation of Vipers, Matth. III.

The Phariſees and Sadducees and Eſſeans altogether, the three evil Shepherds that miſlead the people, Chriſt profeſſeth that he hated them, as they did him, Zech. XI. 8.

Now it is no wonder if Chriſt Communicated not with the Religion of them, that were ſo abominable in themſelves and to him, and their Religion ſo wild; and it had been a wonder, if he ſhould not have Communicated with them to whom he came more eſpecially to be a Miniſter, and from among whom he was to gather ſo great an harveſt.

And now having premiſed theſe things, to come to prove and clear the aſſertion before us, we ſhall firſt conſider the obligations that lay upon Chriſt and bound him to hold Communion with the Church wherein he lived, and the examples and inſtances that ſhew he did ſo. The former will evince de jure, the latter de facto.

I. Need I to prove that Chriſt was a member of the Church of the Jews? And if that be granted, it can hardly be denied that he was bound to keep Communion with the Church of which he was a member. The Apoſtle in Rom. IX. 5. tells us that Chriſt was of the blood of the Jews, and was he of their Nation only and not of their Church? He was Miniſter of the Circumciſion, and was he not of the Church of which he was Miniſter?

II. I need as little to prove that he was admitted to Communion with the Church by Circumciſion. That ſtamped him for an Iſraelite, and joyned him to Iſrael. In Exod. XII. 44. But every mans ſervant, that is bought for money, when thou haſt circumciſed him, then ſhall he eat thereof. Circumciſe him and thou bringeſt him into Communion; then he may eat, nay then he muſt eat the Paſſover.

III. Now as he was a member of the Church of the Jews, as a Jew, and admitted to the full Communion with it by Circumciſion, ſo there were two things beſides ingaged him, that he did not, that he might not depart from that Communion.

1. The obligation of the Law was upon him for things of Divine Inſtitution. And

2. The tenderneſs of his own Heart, not to give offence in things indifferent.

Firſt, The Apoſtle tells us, Gal. IV. 4. That he was made under the Law. He was under the Moral Law, as Man, bound to obſerve it upon duty, as all men are. He was alſo put under it, as Mediator, that he might fulfil it; and ſo he ſaith himſelf, Matth. V. 17. I am not come to deſtroy but to fulfil. It is a ſtrange quotation the Apoſtle makes in Heb. III. to prove, that Chriſt was not aſhamed to call his Saints brethren, verſ. 12. I will declare thy Name amongſt my brethren, that is plain and pregnant; but verſ. 13. And again, I will truſt in him. How doth the proof ſpeak to the thing propoſed? Why, very properly thus, As the Saints truſted in God, ſo did he; as it was their duty, ſo it was his; he being bound as Man to the obedience of the Moral Law, as well as any of his; and to it as Mediator, for the fulfilling of it in behalf of his.

Nay he was put under the whole Law and œconomy of Moſes: the Ceremonial Law, which was the great Law of their Religion, as well as the Moral.

Take their Ceremonial Religion in all its relations, and he was under the bond of all.

1. As it was a badge of diſtinction to difference an Iſraelite from all other Nations, ſo he was bound under it, as being a Jew.

2. As it was a way of Gods inſtituted Worſhip, ſo he was bound under it as one Religious.

3. As it was the bond of Iſraels Communion in Gods Worſhip, ſo he was bound under it as a member of that Church.

True you will ſay, he was bound to theſe rites, that were of Divine Inſtitution, but a great part of their Religion conſiſted then of Humane Inventions, which neither were of Divine Authority, nor ſome of them ſeemed of any great Solidity: Yet

Secondly, Even in theſe things, whilſt they were not ſinful in themſelves, he would not break off Communion from the way of their Religion, becauſe he would not give offence. That reaſon that he gives about paying the half Shekel, went along with him in other things, Matth. XVIII. 27. Leſt we give them offence. He might have ſtood upon the argument, that he uſeth in verſ. 26. his own immunity from ſuch payments, as being the great Kings Son, to whom they were paid. He might have ſtood againſt the preſent imployment of the mony ſo paid. It was for the repair of the Temple, and now the Temple was become a den of thieves. It was for buying things for the ſervice at the Altar, Altar, and he might have pleaded the corruption of the Priests and of the service; but he stands not out, but complies upon this account, lest we should give them offence.

When he had healed a Leper, in Matth. VIII. 4. He commands him to go and shew himself to the Priest, and to offer his gift due upon such occasions. And why should he injoin him the ordinary observance, when his cleansing was extraordinary? Why should he send him to undergo the common rites of cleansing, when he was intirely cleansed already? And these rites also seeming not to carry much solidity with them. For he must stand in the Court gate of the Temple, and not himself go in, but thrust his head in, that the blood of his offering might be put upon the tip of his ear. For neither might the blood be brought out of the Court, because it was holy; nor might he go into the Court, because he was not yet cleansed, but thus standing and thrusting in his head he saved both cautions. A strange rite and posture, you will say, yet will Christ for all that, have the man to undergo those common rites used in that part of Service, because he would not give offence either by crossing or hindring.

His own precept speaks not only his own practise, but even his own mind and sence; and he would never go contrary to that, to which he exhorted others in Matth. XXIII. 1. The Scribes and Pharisees sit in Moses chair, they are the chief Magistrates and sit in the Legislative chair, therefore whatsoever they command you, in things not sinful, do.

And it was a great deal easier to bring in sinless humane inventions into Divine Worship then, than it is under the Gospel. For when even their whole Religion given and appointed by God himself consisted namely of Ceremony, it was less to add Ceremony to Ceremony, than it is now under the Gospel; whose simplicity hath excluded such Ceremoniousness altogether. God by Moses had given general rules for Sacrifice, Purifications, Worship, and other things. Now there were some particulars necessary for the carrying on of those generals, which either were not at all, or not plainly set down by Moses. Now if the Learned Leaders of that Nation finding it needful that something should be stated in those particulars, and did according to their best judgment determine such and such things, it was but helping forward Ceremoniousness by Ceremoniousness, and stating particular practises suitable to the general end and intent, which how any Ceremoniousness may be to the Gospels is not so easie, if possible at all, to find out or digest. And therefore although I would set before you the great example of our Lord and Master of holding Communion with the Church, yet upon this very thing, that we are now speaking of, it may give every one a time to consider whether Humane Inventions do so well and sinlesly comply with Divine Worship now, as they might do then.

And thus having considered Christs obligations to hold Communion, now let us come to observe his practise. And that we shall take up in these two heads. His Publick Devotions, and his Gospel Institutions. And the former in observing his demeanor at the Festivals in Jerusalem, and in the Synagogue.

As to the first, God appointed the three Festivals, Passover, Pentecost, and of Tabernacles, for Religion and for Communion, and for Communion the rather.

I say, for Communion the rather. For the Services that Israel were to perform at them at Jerusalem, might have been done by them there, had they severally gone up thither; but God would have them to go up, and meet there altogether; and to do those things altogether, that he might tie them to Communion in Religion, as well as to Religion; and that they might own and keep their Communion, as well as their Religion.

Our Evangelist gives us account of Christs resorting to these Festivals, and can we think that when he came there, he failed of either of the ends, for which all came thither? And that he went up, as the rest of the Church did, to withdraw from the Communion of the Church, or to cross it when he came there? Let us look on the examples this Evangelist gives us.

I. He gives an account of his going up to the Passover; and unless there may be some scruple about the third from Joh. VI. he resorted to all between his Baptism and his Death. Now in all the Evangelists you cannot find that when he came there he differed the least tittle from the custom and order that was constantly used by the Church at that Solemnity. Nay they that are versed in the Jews Records, and see their customs there, may shew you how he followed the Rubrics and Ritual of that Passover from point to point. His manner of sitting at the Table, his beginning the Meal with a cup of Wine, his ending it with a cup of Blessing, his using Bread and Wine, his concluding with a Psalm; and indeed his whole demeanor at the Meal, compared with the Jews Rubric and custom for the Solemnity, do clearly speak that he kept close Communion with the whole Church in that great Symbol of Communion. He that was to be the Paschal Lamb himself and to fulfil what the Typical Ordinance signified, would not, might not confound or cross the constant received order of that Solemnity.

II. He

II. He gives us an account of his being at the Feaſt of Tabernacles, Chap. VII. and that he ſhould go up then, and to the Feaſt, one may think it ſtrange, if he conſider what ſtrange rites and cuſtoms were then uſed.

1. That all the People, Men and Children, ſhould go up and down with Palm and Willow-branches in their hands, ſinging and ſhaking them, and walking in proceſſion with them. One would think it had been too light a thing for him to have been preſent at, yet he is ſo far from breaking Communion for ſuch a rite as this, or croſſing it; that he admits the entertainment of himſelf into the City at another time with the very ſame proceſſion.

2. But this was not all. This might plead for ſomething of Divine Inſtitution from Levit. XXIII. 40. but there was another cuſtom yet ſtranger; and what warrant can we find of it? Every day of that Feſtival one of the Prieſts took a ſilver Flaggon, went and fetch'd water at the fountain Siloam, and came and poured it on the Altar. All the year long they poured Wine upon the Altar for the drink Offering; but now and never but now, they poured water too. None could tell who inſtituted this rite, nor upon what occaſion, nor well what it ſignified; only the Jews Records tell us, that ſome ſaid it ſignified the pouring out of the Holy Ghoſt. Now at night, after the water had been thus poured on the Altar by day, the grandees of the people, the graveſt, wiſeſt, and of chiefeſt authority, met in one of the Courts of the Temple, and there by torch-light danced, capered and ſung, that you might have thought the men beſides themſelves. And this, they ſaid, was the rejoycing for the pouring out of the water: inſomuch that it grew into a common Proverb, He that never ſaw the rejoycing for the pouring out of the water never ſaw rejoycing in all his life. One would think that theſe were ſtrange paſſages for Chriſt to be preſent at, or to hold Communion with them that uſed them, and yet he is ſo far from withdrawing or croſſing, that he inſtructs the people to know the right meaning in this cuſtom, or at leaſt would draw their minds higher than the bare rites, Joh. VII. 37, 38. In the laſt day, that great day of the Feaſt, Jeſus ſtood and cried, ſaying, If any man thirſt, let him come unto me and drink. He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath ſaid, out of his belly ſhall flow rivers of living water. q. d. Ye go to Siloam for water from that Text [for the Jews themſelves ſay the cuſtom took ground from that Text] Come to me for water and drink: and ye pour out a Flaggon of water upon the Altar, to repreſent the pouring out of the Holy Ghoſt, I am he that pour him out, and he that believeth on me, even rivers of waters ſhall flow out of him.

III. He giveth us an account in the Text of his being preſent at the fear of Dedication. The chiefeſt Solemnity of which was this ſtrange cuſtom alſo, viz. To light up candles in every houſe: one candle the firſt night of the Feaſt, two the ſecond, three the third, and ſo to increaſe the number of the candles as the account of the days increaſed, ſo that on the eighth night, there were at leaſt eight candles burning in every houſe. I ſay, at leaſt eight. For Maymony tells us, that thoſe that would ſhew themſelves forward and zealous indeed lighted up a candle the firſt night for every perſon in the houſe. As, if there were ten perſons, ten candles the firſt night, twenty the ſecond, and ſo augmenting every day, that on the eighth night there were burning eighty candles. From this, as Joſephus tells us, the Feaſt was called φῶτα, that is lights: and he conceives the reaſon of the cuſtom to have been becauſe of the light that roſe to the people after the great darkneſs of their miſery.

One would ſcarely think that Chriſt ſhould make any account of a Feſtival, when ſuch a thing as this was one of the greateſt Solemnities: and yet becauſe he will ſhew his Communion with the Church, he goes to Jeruſalem to this Feaſt, or at leaſt is there preſent at it; when he might as well have kept it at home; and he goes, though in Winter, when ſo evil travailing.

Many more examples might be produced, by which might be illuſtrated his holding Communion in the Feſtivals at Jeruſalem, but theſe may ſuffice. And now from theſe, let us follow him to the Synagogues.

The Evangeliſts make it plain that it was his manner to go to the Synagogues every Sabbath day. And what to do there? To diſturb the Congregation? To croſs the Service? To ſit dumb whilſt others ſung Pſalms? To put on his hat [that I may expreſs it by our known Engliſh garb] while others ſit bare? To do every thing or any thing croſs to the order of the Synagogue? As there are too many among us at this day of this croſs-grained humour. No; no ſuch thing came near his moſt meek and Divine Spirit. His noiſe or troubleſomneſs was not heard in the Streets, much leſs in the place and time of Divine Worſhip. But he went to the publick Congregation to joyn with the Congregation in the Worſhip of God, as the duty of the Sabbath did require. He went indeed to preach, but withal he joyned with the Congregation in other parts of Divine Service, as he deſired that they ſhould joyn with him in that. We will alledge but one example, having a further hint about this to give hereafter.

It

It is ſaid Luke IV. 16. That as his cuſtom was, he went to the Synagogue on the Sabbath day, and ſtood up for to read. It had been his conſtant cuſtom to go to that Synagogue of Nazareth, his Pariſh Church, every Sabbath day, but this is the firſt time that he Preached there. And in the clauſe, He ſtood up for to read, there is more than every one obſerves. He Preached in other Synagogues, but he Read in none but this. For he that read in the Synagogue was a member of the Synagogue; and he by reading ſhewed that he owned himſelf and was owned to be one of This. Now what a kind of people the Congregation of Nazareth was, we may ſomewhat gueſs from that paſſage, Can any good thing come out of Nazareth? But plainly enough from what follows in the ſame ſtory, that they would have murthered him, becauſe his Doctrine pleaſed them not, verſ. 29. And yet did he keep himſelf till then to that Congregation, owned himſelf a member of it, read in it as a member of it, till his function called him, and the fear of his life forced him thence.

And thus much be ſpoken of his Publick Devotions, from thence we paſs to his Goſpel Inſtitutions, and they ſpeak to the very ſame tenour, that the other did, that he held Communion with the Church of the Jews in which he lived. Of which I ſhall give you theſe four inſtances.

I. His Inſtitution of Baptiſm. Think not that Baptiſm was never uſed till John Baptiſt came and baptized. It was uſed in the Church of the Jews many generations before he was born, and for the very ſame end that he uſed it; and it hath been uſed ever ſince, viz. for Introduction and Admiſſion into the Church. The Jews did not only uſe Baptiſm in their legal Waſhings and Purifications, but alſo in the way that we do, viz. to admit into their Church. There own Records (enemies ſufficient to our Chriſtian Baptiſm) yet thus far bear witneſs alſo to it; and an Enemies teſtimony is a double witneſs. For they tell, that when any Proſelytes came in from among the Heathen, to embrace the Faith and Religion of the Jews, they firſt Circumcized them, and when they were whole, then they Baptized them: and that they ſo Baptized the whole family, where the Maſter came in, even Wife and Children with him. So that Baptiſm of Men, Women and Children was no new thing among them, when John Baptiſt came Baptizing, but a thing as well known as with us now. And hence it was that Chriſt gave no rule how to Baptize, or when to Baptize; becauſe they knew the manner, and knew that Men, Women, and Children were Baptized, as we know it now. It pleaded no precept to Baptize Infants, and no example. It needed not: for Chriſt took up Baptiſm as he found it, a thing commonly known, and it was needful only to give a precept to make it an Evangelical Ordinance. As for other circumſtances how to Baptize and when to Baptize, there needed no ſuch rule, ſince common cuſtom and uſe of the Ordinance had taught that for many ages before. The Parliament makes a Law, let every one reſort to the publick Congregation on the Sabbath, and expreſſes no more. He would be laughed at, that in after times ſhould deny, that Praying, Preaching, Singing Pſalms, &c. ſhould not be uſed in the Congregation, becauſe there is no ſuch Command in the Parliaments Act. Common and known cuſtom and the conſtant uſe of ſuch things in the Congregation made it needleſs to inſert thoſe particulars. And ſo it is in this caſe.

Doth not this ſpeak Chriſts Communion with the Church of the Jews, and his compliance with the publick exerciſe of their Religion, when he would take one of their Ordinances [and no one knew, who firſt inſtituted it among them] and make it an Evangelical Ordinance?

I might ſpeak the like of his Inſtitution of the other Sacrament, the Lords Supper, but I need to ſpeak no more of that, than what I ſaid about his keeping of the Paſsover before.

II. His Inſtitution of a ſtanding Miniſtry under the Goſpel, ſpeaks alſo his conformity to the Church of the Jews. They had a ſtanding Miniſtry, ſo would he. They ordained their Teachers by Impoſition of Hands, he ordained the like Ordination. Remarkable is that of the Apoſtle, Heb. VI. 2. Obſerve here the Doctrine of Impoſition of Hands in Ordination is a fundamental Point, as well as the Doctrine of Faith and Repentance. See verſ. 1. Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Chriſt, let us go on unto perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith towards God, of the doctrine of Baptiſm, and of laying on of hands, &c. As the Doctrine of Faith is a fundamental point, ſo this; That a Goſpel principle, ſo this. And what a point of Faith it is, may be ſeen by propoſing this Queſtion, with the Church, when the Apoſtle wrote, would propoſe, Whither muſt we go for inſtruction, when the Apoſtles and inſpired men are gone? Why, ſaith the Apoſtle, this is a fundamental Point, that Chriſt hath ſet up a ſtanding Miniſtry by Ordination. Hence that Evangelical promiſe and prediction, Eſa. LXVI. 21. And I will alſo take of them for Prieſts and for Levites, ſaith the Lord. Not Prieſts and Levites, as they offered Sacrifices at the Temple, but as they were the ſtanding Miniſtry through the Nation. And ſee v. 20. They ſhall bring all their brethren for an offering unto the Lord. Think

Think you, if Chriſt had deſpiſed the current of the publick practiſe of Religion among the Jews, he would have ſo confirmed to it in a thing of ſuch weight?

III. His inſtitution of Gods publick worſhip under the Goſpel ſpeaks alſo the ſame conformity. The publick worſhip of God among the Jews was twofold. At the Temple and in the Synagogues.

At the Temple, Sacrificing, Waſhings, Purifyings, &c.

In the Synagogues, Reading, Preaching, Hearing, Praying.

That at the Temple was Ceremonial, and that Chriſt aboliſhed, having fulfilled what Ceremonies meant. But the worſhip in the Synagogue was moral and perpetual, and ſo tranſlated by him into the Chriſtian Church.

In that great Controverſie, that hath been ſo much canvaſed, about Church Government, I ſhould firſt lay down this for a foundation, which may, I conceive, be very clearly made good.

That Chriſt by himſelf and his Apoſtles platforming the model of Churches under the Goſpel, did keep very cloſe to the platform of Synagogues, and Synagogue-worſhip under the Law. This might be ſhewed by ſhewing parallel practiſes in the Apoſtolick Churches to thoſe that were in the Synagogues. As a publick Miniſter, Deacons, Reading, Preaching, Praying, Collections for the Poor, and Love-Feaſts, or entertainment of ſtrangers at the publick charge; but I ſhall fix particularly upon the publick Miniſter.

All the Titles that are given to Miniſters of the Goſpel are the very ſame that were given to the publick Miniſter in the Synagogue. A Goſpel Miniſter is called Angelus Eccleſiæ, ſo was the Miniſter in the Synagogue called שליח ציבור the Angel or Meſſenger of the Congregation. The Miniſters of the Goſpel are called Epiſcopi, Biſhops or Overſeers ſo was the Miniſter in every Synagogue called חזן הכנסת Chazan Hacconeſeth, the overſeer of the Congregation. They are called Rulers, Elders, and thoſe that are ſet over the people, ſo were the Miniſters of the Synagogue called in every title.

Now doth not all this ſpeak Chriſts owning conformity to the Plat-form, Diſcipline and Worſhip in the Synagogues, when he thus tranſlated all into the Chriſtian Church? And this doth plainly ſhew what we hinted before, that Chriſts reſorting conſtantly to the Synagogue was to joyn with them in the Worſhip there, as well as to preach or to heal what diſeaſed he met with there.

IV. His inſtitution of the Lords Prayer tells that he held Conformity with the Church in the publick exerciſe of Religion. They that are of opinion that the Lords Prayer was not given for a form to be uſed totidem verbis, that it is not fit to be joyned with our Prayers, that it is not fit to be ſaid by all, becauſe all may not call God, Our Father; did they but clearly ſee in what conformity to the practiſe in the Jewiſh Church, both the Prayer was given, and every petition and phraſe in it doth go, they would be of another opinion, if they be not eſpouſed to their own.

The ſureſt and ſafeſt conſtruction of phraſes and paſſages in the New Teſtament, is not by framing a ſence of our own, which we think fair and probable, but by obſerving how ſuch phraſes and paſſages, were underſtood by them to whom they were then uttered, according to the common uſe and ſignification of ſuch phraſes and paſſages, in the vulgar ſence and uſe of the Nation. It is not what conceits or conſtructions we can mint out of our invention to maintain the opinions about this Prayer, that I mentioned before; but it is beſt to caſt, how the Diſciples, to whom it was given, did or could conceive of it upon ſuch obſervations on it as theſe.

They knew, that ſuch ſhort forms of Prayer were uſual in the Nation. That ſuch forms were given by Maſters to their Scholars to be uſed verbatim. That ſuch were to be ſubjoyned to their other Prayers. That the moſt common title, whereby the whole Nation called God, was, Our Father which art in Heaven. That every petition in this Prayer was ſuch as was alſo uſual in the Nation. So that they ſaw that Chriſt had given this Prayer directly according to the cuſtom, ſtile and form of the Nation, and that he had given no exception to them about it. Therefore how could they underſtand or conceive of it according to the common cuſtom of the Nation in ſuch caſes, but that it was to be uſed in terminis and to be joyned to their Prayers?

By theſe few examples, indeed of multitudes that might be produced, you ſee an evident proof of his holding communion all along his practiſe.

Thus have I done with the former part of the Doctrine, viz. That our Saviour held in communion with the Church of the Jews in the publick exerciſe of Religion. I ſhould now take up the latter; That he conformed to the common cuſtoms of the Nation in civil converſe. And here we are come into as large a field as the other, if not larger; a ſubject of abundant proof and clearneſs, and which if I ſhould go about to evidence by all examples that might be produced, the day would fail me. I ſhall ſay no more upon it but this, That beſides that what is ſaid already doth abundantly prove it, one that hath peruſed the Jews Writings, and obſerved both the common dialect, and the cuſtoms of the Nation in thoſe thoſe times, may obſerve Chriſts conformity, to their cuſtoms almoſt in every one of his actions, and his conformity to their Phraſe, Language and Manner of ſpeech, almoſt in every one of his Speeches.

And as here is Wiſdom, ſo here is Learning from knowledge of their Cuſtoms and Languages to unlock the phraſes and paſſages of the New Teſtament, to which it alludes all along. It is not what we can gueſs upon theſe and the other ſpeeches of Chriſt, where he is obſcure; but the beſt way to find out the ſence is to obſerve how ſuch words which are their own Language, would be taken according to the common acceptation of them in the Nation, and how they underſtood them, to whom they were ſpoken.

I might be large in Application. And indeed in our divided times one can never ſpeak too much upon this ſubject. But what need I do more among Chriſtians, than to leave ſo plain a copy of Chriſt before them? I ſhall leave only this requeſt with you concerning what hath been ſpoken: Deal as the Bereans, Search the Scriptures diligently. Let this hint your poor Countryman hath given you go along with you, as you read the New Teſtament: See there whether ever you find Chriſt, but going on in that communion I have ſpoken. And till you find him dividing, I hope there is none here, but will account his Example a rule inviolable.

And let me give you caution againſt that Opinion, that by miſtake of a Text or two, ſticks not to ſay, that the Goſpel doth naturally produce diviſion, Matth. X. 34,35. Think not that I am come to ſend peace on Earth, I come not to ſend peace but a ſword. For I am come to ſet a man at variance againſt his father, &c. And Luke XII. 51, 52. Suppoſe ye that I am come to give peace on Earth, I tell you, nay, but rather Diviſion, &c. It were ſtrange, if theſe ſhould be natural effects of the Goſpel of peace; and how doth ſuch production agree with that of Eſa. II. 4. They ſhall beat their ſwords into plow-ſhares, and their ſpears into pruning hooks. Nation ſhall not lift up ſword againſt Nation, &c. And Chap. XI. 9. They ſhall not hurt nor deſtroy in all my holy mountain. And it were ſtrange that Chriſt and his Goſpel ſhould be of ſo different tempers; he to keep ſo cloſe to communion himſelf, and to give a Goſpel that ſhould break it. But miſtake not the Texts, They ſpeak not that Chriſt would ſend thoſe diviſions by the Goſpel, but by his vengeance. He was moſt fearfully to deſtroy the curſed unbelievers, the Nation of the Jews, and one dreadful way of the execution of that vengeance was by ſending a Spirit of diviſion among the Nation, whereby they even deſtroyed themſelves. The ſtories of their horrid Civil Wars, Burnings, Plunderings, Aſſaſſinations one of another; the like example is in no ſtories, is a moſt plain expoſition of thoſe Texts, and a dreadful accompliſhment of that denuntiation. The other Texts I mentioned, they ſhew the natural and genuine product of the Goſpel. They ſhall beat their ſwords into plow ſhares, &c. But when will that be? Never, according to univerſal obtaining. Ever have been Wars, and ever will be, becauſe ever will be Luſts. And yet theſe are fulfilled in the ſence propoſed by the Prophets, viz. that God hath fully afforded means for this. The Goſpel hath enough in it to move men to peace, but the fault is in themſelves. God hath not failed, but men fail. As it is in Rom. III. 3. What if ſome did not believe, ſhall their unbelief make the faith of God of none effect? So what if ſome be unpeaceable, ſhall their diviſions make the Goſpel of peace of none effect? So in other propheſies to make like conſtruction, Jer. XXXI. 34. They ſhall no more teach every man his neighbour, for they ſhall all know me from the leaſt of them to the greateſt. It never was, never will be, Eſa. LXV. 20. There ſhall be no more thence an Infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days. It never was nor will be. Yet God hath accompliſhed what he promiſed; He hath afforded means that it might be ſo.

Let me therefore leave this great copy of peaceableneſs and communion with you.

A SERMON

PREACHED BEFORE THE

Staffordſhire-Natives,

At St. Mary Wolchurch

LONDON,

Novemb. 22. 1660.

S. JUDE Verſ. 12.

Theſe are ſpots in your Feaſts of Charity.

I Muſt take up that Stile and Strain of excuſe to begin withal, that St. Paul doth to his Countrymen about his Appeal unto Cæſar; I have nothing, ſaith he, to accuſe my Nation of, though I have been put upon it to make ſuch an Appeal. So I, I have nothing, Dear Countrymen, to accuſe this your Feaſt of Charity of, nor nothing to accuſe any of, that are to come to it, though I have choſen theſe words, that ſpeak ſo point blank of ſpots that occurred in ſuch kind of Feaſts. But I have fixed upon the words, partly that I might ſpeak in ſome kind of parity to that diſcourſe that I made to you at our laſt meeting upon this occaſion, and chiefly that I might give you caution againſt ſuch, that to Feaſts are ſpots, to Charity deſtructive, and to all meetings dangerous.

Who they were that our Apoſtle meaneth, I ſhall clear to you by theſe two Obſervations.

I. That as it was foretold by the Holy Spirit in the Prophets, that the beſt and moſt comfortable things, that ever ſhould accrue to the Church of the Jews, ſhould accrue to them in the laſt days, that is, of Jeruſalem. (For ſo is that expreſſion, the laſt days, in moſt places of Scripture, to be underſtood.) So was it alſo foretold by the ſame Spirit, that the worſt things that ever ſhould accrue to it, ſhould be in thoſe laſt days alſo. It was foretold, that in thoſe laſt days, Eſa. II. 2. That the mountain of the Lords houſe ſhould be eſtabliſhed in the top of the mountains, and ſhould be exalted above the hills, and that all Nations ſhould flow unto it. That in thoſe laſt days, Joel II. 29, 30, &c. God would pour out his Spirit upon the ſervants and upon the handmaids; and that he would ſhew wonders in the Heavens and in the Earth, &c. That in thoſe laſt days, Hoſ. III. 5. the Children of Iſrael ſhould return, and ſeek the Lord their God, and David their King, and ſhould fear the Lord and his goodneſs. And all other things of the greateſt comfort. So it was alſo foretold, That in thoſe laſt days, perilous times and perſons ſhould come, II Tim. III. 1. In thoſe laſt days there ſhould come ſcoffers, walking after their own luſts, II Pet. III. 3. In thoſe laſt days, there ſhould be many Antichriſts. I Joh. II. 18. And by this we know that it is the laſt time.

Among all other the ſad things that befel in thoſe laſt days of Jeruſalem and the Commonwealth of the Jews, one of the greateſt was, that there was a moſt horrid and very general Apoſtacy or falling away from Faith in the moſt Churches of the Jews, that had embraced the Goſpel; they turning back to their old Judaiſm and vain Traditions again. Of this the Spirit had ſpoken expreſly. I Tim. IV. 1. Of this our Saviour had foretold in that ſad application of the Parable. Matth. XII. 45. When the unclean ſpirit is gone out of a man he walketh through dry places, ſeeking reſt and findeth none. Then, he ſaith, I will return into my houſe, from whence I came out; and when he is come, he findeth it empty, ſwept and garniſhed. Then goeth he, and taketh with himſelf ſeven other ſpirits more wicked than himſelf, and they enter in and dwell there; and the laſt ſtate of that man is worſe than the firſt. Even ſo ſhall it be alſo unto this wicked generation. The Devil had been caſt out of a very great part of the Nation of the Jews. He thought to find reſt there, but found none; ſuch notable ſucceſs had the Goſpel of Chriſt found in that Nation. Upon which the Devil marſhalleth up all his malice, ſtrength and ſubtilty, taketh with him ſeven other ſpirits more wicked than himſelf, and ſo he at laſt prevails, to cauſe a grievous defection in the People from Chriſtianity: they enter in and dwell there, and their laſt ſtate was worſe than their firſt. So was it with that generation. Of this he had foretold, Matth. XXIV. 12. And becauſe iniquity ſhall abound, the Love of many ſhall wax cold. Of this the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, II Theſſ. II. That before the terrible day of the Lord, and his vengeance, againſt Jeruſalem (for ſo that phraſe doth ſignifie almoſt continually) there ſhould be a falling away. Of this you find ſad footings in the Church of Galatia. Gal. III. 3. & IV. 9, 10. of Coloſſe, Col. II. 20. of Epheſus, Revel. II. 4. And indeed you may track the footing of it in all the Epiſtles of the Apoſtles.

II. The chief curſed promoters and procurers of this backſliding, was that multitude of falſe Teachers of the Jewiſh Nation, that went about pretending to have the Spirit of Prophecie and Revelation; and many of them working Miracles by the power of Magick; ſo ſhaking the minds of men, and drawing them away from the Faith of the Goſpel of Chriſt. Of theſe our Saviour had foretold, when he foretold of the miſeries that ſhould occur in thoſe laſt days of Jeruſalem, Matth. XXIV. 24. Of theſe the Apoſtle foretold, when he ſpake of the Jewiſh Antichriſt (for of the Jew he ſpeaks, II Theſ. II.) and ſaith, he would come after the working of Satan, with all power, and ſigns, and lying wonders, verſ. 9. And of theſe the ſame Apoſtle ſpeaks in that obſcure place, I Cor. XII. 3. No man ſpeaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jeſus accurſed. For divers went about pretending to the Spirit, and yet curſed our Lord Jeſus. Mention and footing of theſe you may find almoſt in all the Epiſtles of the Apoſtles, more eſpecially in the ſecond Epiſtle of S. Peter, and in this Epiſtle of S. Jude throughout. Theſe are they that the Text ſaith were ſpots, certain deceivers crept in, παρεισεδυσαν, verſ. 4. men that took on them to have the Spirit, but were ſenſual, not having the Spirit, verſ. 19. and filthy dreamers, verſ. 8: Theſe were the Spots.

What theſe Feaſts of Charity were is ſome ſcruple. The more general opinion is, that they were Solemn Meals, which every Congregation had, and eat at together at receiving the Sacrament: ſome think inſtantly before, ſome after: And the groundwork of this opinion is that, I Cor. XI. 21. In eating every one taketh before other his own ſupper. Thereupon Beza without any ſticking. At thoſe Feaſts, ſaith he, which they called Ἀγάπας, they received the Sacrament, as is plain out of I Cor. XI. Whereas ſuch Feaſts as theſe Suppers, were as far from the Apoſtles meaning, as the Apoſtle is far from commending or approving them. For you may obſerve that he doth not only, nor ſo much, condemn the miſdemeanors at thoſe ſuppers, as he doth the ſuppers themſelves, as a miſdemeanor. For 1. He tells plainly, that by them they vilified the Church, or the place of their publick meeting. 2. That they ſhamed the poor, who could not bring in ſo good commons and victuals. And 3. That if they were ſo hungry, they ſhould eat every one at home.

There are ſuch dreadful and terrible gloſſes made of the unworthy eating and drinking at theſe Feaſts here mentioned, that many Chriſtians now a days are terrified from partaking of the Lords Supper, for fear leſt they fall under this unworthy eating and drinking, and the Judgment conſequent upon it. Whereas, I know you will think it ſtrange, if I ſay it, yet I fear not to ſay it, that I believe, there is not a Chriſtian now in the World, that receives the Sacrament unworthily in that ſence the Apoſtle ſpeaks of unworthy receiving there. Miſtake me not, I ſay, in that ſence that the Apoſtle ſpeaks of there. For whereas all Churches conſiſted then of Jews and Gentiles, and this of Corinth particularly, as appears in the ſtory of its firſt planting, Acts XVIII. and hence were their diviſions: this was the cauſe of their other diviſions, I Chap. I. 12. The Gentile party ſaying, I am of Paul, &c. The Jewiſh party, even in all Churches, in this Church undoubtedly, hankered too much after their old Judaiſm, this old leaven that the Apoſtle gives gives them caution againſt, Chap. V. 8. Two ſmacks of Judaiſm you find them tainted with, which the Apoſtle hints in that XI. Chap. before he ſpeaks of their miſreceiving of the Sacrament. The firſt was, that the men would not pray, but with their faces covered. Which was a meer Judaizing ſuperſtition. And the other that they wore long hair: as it appears by his ſo ſmartly reproving the thing, which reliſhed of the rite of Nazarites, a meer Judaick cuſtom. Upon that very account did Abſalom wear his long hair: which ſome think, he did of pride, becauſe that kind of pride is grown into faſhion among us. But he did it as being or pretending to be under a Nazarites vow, II Sam. XV. 8. And as they thus Judaized in thoſe two things, (and I might ſhew their ſpeaking with ſtrange Tongues, &c. had a ſmatch of Judaiſm alſo) So did they Judaize about the Sacrament.

It was a common and generally received opinion among the Jewiſh Nation, That Meſſiah when he came ſhould no whit alter, much leſs aboliſh any of their Moſaick Ordinances, but ſhould inhance them to a greater glory. That he ſhould make their Sacrifices, Purifications, Sabbaths, Feſtivals, and all other uſances, far more reſplendent and glorious, than ever they had been. According to this opinion did theſe Jewiſh Chriſtians of Corinth underſtand and conceive concerning the Sacrament. They obſerved not, that it was a Remembrance of Chriſts death, which the Apoſtle minds them to obſerve, verſ. 26. nor did they diſcern the Lords body at all in it, as the Apoſtle laſheth them for not doing, verſ. 29. But they reputed it only as a farther inhancement of their delivery out of Egypt; and that Chriſt had only ordained it, as a further addition to this Paſſover, and to that Memorial. Hence thoſe Procœnia were in imitation of the Paſſover-ſuppers, Judaizing in them, and in their opinion and receiving of the Sacrament. Which were as far from being any ground for theſe Feaſts of Charity in that ſence, that they are commonly interpreted in, as Judaiſm from Chriſtianity, Error from Truth, as a thing odious and to be abhorr'd in Chriſtianity from a thing laudable and of divine approval.

If therefore I may have liberty to diſſent from an opinion ſo generally received, I ſhould ſay, theſe Feaſts of Love were the Entertainment of ſtrangers. It was a conſtant cuſtom among the Jews, that at every Synagogue a place and perſons were appointed for the reception of ſtrangers, as appears by their own Writings. That this cuſtom was tranſlated into Chriſtian Congregations, may be concluded, partly by the neceſſity of ſuch a thing, at that time when the Apoſtles and Diſciples went abroad to preach without mony or proviſion of their own, and could not have ſubſiſted without ſuch entertainments, and partly, becauſe we read of Gaius, Rom. XVI. 23. and Phœbe verſ. 1. and women that waſhed ſtrangers feet.

So did theſe falſe Teachers walk abroad, and came as ſtrangers (for they crept in unawars, verſ. 4.) taking on them to be true: and ſo the Churches entertained them in ſuch entertainments, in thoſe Feaſts of Charity, at the common charge, looking on them as true Miniſters and Diſciples, but they proved Spots and Rocks (for ſo the Greek word ſignifies) in thoſe entertainments. Spots, that ſhamed the company they converſed with, and ſoiled them with the filth of Errors and falſe Doctrines; and Rocks, at which multitudes of Souls daſhed, ſplitted, and ſhipwracked Faith and their Salvation.

I am not ignorant of the variety of Reading and Interpretation of theſe words, as much as in moſt places: but I ſhall not inſiſt upon that: for it would be but expence of time, ſince both Antiquity embraceth the Reading, as we do, and an eaſie diſcovery might be made by what miſtakes other Readings and Interpretations took place.

In the words there are three parts.

I. The Perſons, in the firſt word Theſe.

II. One particular act of theirs, hinted in the laſt words, they crept into their Feaſts of Charity.

III. What and how they proved there, they were Spots or Rocks, and did miſchief.

I might take up words by way of Deſcant upon the preſent occaſion, and tell you what are Spots in the Feaſts and Entertainments, Riot and Drunkenneſs, obſcene and filthy Communication, Quarrelling and Contention, Uncharitableneſs and Forgetting of the Poor; theſe and other things are Spots. But I keep cloſe to the Apoſtles meaning, and conſider the perſons he ſpeaks of, ſuch as I deſcribed unto you, falſe Teachers, that pretended to the Spirit, and to preach and work Miracles by the Spirit. And I ſhall diſcourſe a little concerning the great deluſion that is by pretence of the Spirit: and this the rather that I may ſpeak ſomething like in ſubſequence to that I treated upon at our laſt Meeting. Then I exhorted you to hold Communion by the example of Chriſt. For ſeparation I then told you, was the undoing of our Church. Now I give caution againſt the pretence of thoſe that Preach and Expound Scripture by the Spirit. For that is the cauſe of Separation, and hath proved the ruine of Religion.

And

And although this change of times doth ſeem to promiſe that this deluſion in time will dye, ſo that the preſent diſcourſe may ſeem not ſo very pertinent, yet doth that miſchief now live, move, delude, and captivate ſilly ſouls little leſs than it hath done all along. Therefore give me leave a little to diſcover this deluſion to you, that you may not only be the better fenced againſt it, that it do not deceive you, but that you may be the better furniſhed to ſtop the mouths of thoſe that pretend to it.

For the proſecuting this argument, you muſt diſtinguiſh between the falſe pretence to the Spirit of Sanctification, and to the Spirit of Revelation. By the former men deceive themſelves, by the latter, others. They deceive themſelves, by conceiving they have the former, becauſe they have ſomething like it; but theſe deceive others by the pretence of the latter, though they have nothing like it.

There is no grace, but there is a falſe coin minted by the Devil to diſſemble it. As the Harlot takes the live-child from the unwitting mother, and foſters the dead one in the room: and ſo lyes the poor woman deceived: and ſo the poor man is deceived, and thinks he hath ſaving grace, when tis but common, and the Spirit of Sanctification, when tis but the Spirit of Bondage. But I ſhall not inſiſt on this. But proceed to the other pretence, viz. to the Spirit of Revelation and Propheſie, whereby theſe, in the Text, deceived others.

I ſhall not need to ſhew you how this hath been the great cheat in all times. There were falſe Prophets before the captivity, and falſe Prophets after it; ſuch pretenders almoſt in all times. I ſhall ſtrip this deluſion naked, and whip it before you by obſerving theſe four things.

1. No degree of holineſs whatſoever doth neceſſarily beget and infer the Spirit of Revelation, as the cauſe produceth the effect. It is the firſt cheat that theſe men put upon themſelves and others by concluding, I am a Saint, therefore I have the Spirit, and I preach and expound Scripture by the Spirit: whereas, I ſay, no degree of Sanctification doth neceſſarily beget and produce that of Revelation. I clear this from the nature of the thing it ſelf, and by examples.

Firſt, From the nature of the thing. The Spirit of Holineſs and Revelation are far different, therefore the one is not the cauſe of the other. The cauſe and the effect have a parity and ſimilitude one with another; but theſe are far from being ſo.

1. They are impartible to different ſubjects: Holineſs only to holy men; the Spirit of Revelation ſometimes to wicked men. So it was imparted to Balaam, Numb. XXIII. ſo likewiſe to Judas and Caiaphas.

2. They are beſtowed upon different ends: Holineſs for the good of him that hath it, Revelation for the benefit of others.

3. They are of different mannars and operations. The Spirit of Sanctification changeth the heart; Paul is a Saul no more; Revelation doth not. Judas is Judas ſtill.

4. They are of different Diffuſion in the Soul: Sanctification is quite through, I Theſſ. V. 23. Revelation only in the underſtanding.

5. They are of different Effects; Sanctification never produceth but what is good: Revelation may produce what is evil. Knowledge puffeth up.

Now ſee what a cheat they are in This to themſelves, (if they believe it themſelves) and to others that believe it, in this argumentation, I am holy, therefore I have the Spirit of Revelation.

To the further confuting of this, add but two Examples.

1. The firſt Adam. He was as holy as created nature could be, and yet had he the Spirit of Revelation? Not the Spirit at all. He was moſt holy, yet had not the Spirit of Sanctification, moſt full of knowledge, yet had not the Spirit of Revelation: but all his holineſs was founded only in his nature, as he was created. God made him holy, and left him to ſtand upon his own holineſs, and had not the aſſiſtance of the Spirit at all. So he had great knowledge, yet not the Spirit of Revelation, either to know things to come, or to know things beyond their natures and cauſes. But

2. Conſider the ſecond Adam. He was holineſs it ſelf, yet had he not the Spirit of Revelation by that holineſs. In Chriſt there were two things. The holineſs of his perſon, by union with the Godhead, and the Indowment of the Spirit upon his perſon. He was ſo holy that he was not only without ſin, but he was impeccable, Rom. VIII. 3. as we are a Law that cannot but ſin, ſo he contra. Now this holineſs of Chriſts perſon or nature is to a clean different end to what the guifts of the Spirit upon him were. His perſon was ſo holy, that he might perform the Law, ſatisfie juſtice, pay obedience, conquer Satan. But the guifts of the Spirit were to fit him for Mediatorſhip, to caſt out Devils, to reveal the will of God, to work Miracles to confirm that Doctrine.

As theſe differ in their ends, ſo are they from different originals; holineſs from the purity of his nature, indowments by extraordinary donation. If he had the Spirit in extraordinary guifts of Revelation and Miracles, by vertue of his holy nature, why was that Spirit Spirit given ſo viſible, Matth. III. and given when he was to begin his Mediation? Conſider his own words, Mark. XIII. 32. But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no not the Angels which are in Heaven, neither the Son but the Father: Some are aſhamed to confeſs their ignorance of any thing, yet he doth it plainly. For the Divine Nature in Chriſt acted not to the utmoſt of its power. Tis clear from this paſſage of Chriſt, that by his nature he had not the Spirit of Revelation, but he had it by the immediate guift of God. For it pleaſed not God ſo to reveal that day and hour to him, while he was here on Earth. So that by this example you may ſee much more the fallacy of that argument, I am a Saint, therefore I have the Spirit of Revelation. Whereas Chriſt himſelf could not ſay ſo.

II. The Spirit of Revelation is given indeed to Saints, but means little that ſence, that theſe men ſpeak of, but is of a clean different nature. The Apoſtle prays, Epheſ. I. 17. That God would give unto them the Spirit of Wiſdom and Revelation in the knowledge of him. And God gives this Spirit; but in what ſence? Not, to foreſee things to come, not to underſtand the Grammatical conſtruction of Scripture without ſtudy, not to preach by the Spirit: but the Apoſtle explains himſelf, verſ. 18. The eyes of their underſtanding being enlightned, that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the Saints. So that the Revelation given to the Saints is this, that God reveals the experience of thoſe things, that we have learned before in the Theory from Scripture, a ſaving feeling of the hope of his calling, and the riches of the glory of his inheritance. Here let me ſpeak three things.

1. To feel the experience of Grace is not by new Light, that was never known before, but by application of what was known before. As the Queen of Sheba firſt heard of the Fame of Solomon, then found by experience. Compare we our knowledge of Spiritual things to a Banquet, to your Feaſt this day. A man before Grace ſees the banquet God hath provided for his people, hath by the word learned the nature and definition of Faith, Repentance, Holineſs, Love of God, and Love to God, but as yet he does but ſee the banquet; when Grace comes, then he ſees and taſtes theſe things in experience and ſence in his own Soul. He had a light before from the Word, now it is brought ſo near his heart that he feels warmneſs, he feels life and ſence and operation of theſe things, is as it were changed into theſe things; as in II Cor. III. 18. We with open face beholding as in a glaſs the glory of the Lord, are changed into the ſame image from glory to glory. Now this is not the Spirit of Revelation in that ſence, that theſe take it in, but tis ſo called, becauſe it is by a light and operation above natural light and operation. As common grace is called grace, becauſe 'tis above the ordinary working of nature, ſo this is called revelation, becauſe above the work of common light.

2. How do men come to aſſurance of pardon and ſalvation? Not by the Spirit of revelation in their ſence, not by any immediate whiſpers from Heaven, but another way. As in Rom. XV. 4. Through patience and comfort of the Scriptures we have hope. In Scripture is your comfort, and in your own conſcience; and in them is your aſſurance. A Saint makes this holy Syllogiſm.

Scripture, Major, He that repents, believes, loves God, hath the pardon of his ſins.

Conſcience, Minor, Lord, I believe, Lord, I love thee.

Saint, from both makes the Concluſion, Therefore I am aſſured of the pardon of my ſins, and my Salvation.

Thus Chriſt would bring S. Peter to aſſurance of his Eſtate after his denial, by this trial, Loveſt thou me? Not by any revelation that Chriſt loved him, but it was aſſurance enough, if he loved Chriſt. And here by the way let me ſpeak one word for trial, whether we have the Spirit of Sanctification, that we be not deceived in the reſt. Never believe you have the Spirit of Sanctification, unleſs your heart be changed to love God. Among many ſigns this is the moſt ſenſible and undoubted. I ſay, unleſs the heart be changed, and changed to love God. Change of heart is the mother habit of all Graces. God ſpeaks enough in Ezek. XXXVI. 26. A new heart will I give you, and a new ſpirit will I put within you. In that queſtion about perſeverance and loſs of grace, as in the caſe of David, Peter, &c. we ſay, That the Act may be ſuſpended and loſt for the preſent, but the Habit not. Now by habit we mean not the particular ſeed of this or that Grace, but the change of the Heart, the materia prima of all Graces. That is never unchanged back again: the ſtone is taken away. The heart indeed may freez into ice, as Davids and Peters, but never turn into ſtone again.

I ſay

I say further, To love God. A man may feel some kind of change of heart in common grace. Common grace is Gods ordinary way for working Saving grace; his keys, Illumination, stirring of Conscience, fear of Hell, some kind of Grief. Now though these go not so far as to come to saving grace, yet saving grace comes not but by the inlet of these. And here many are deceived, if they have some such stirrings within them, if startled, pricked, have some sorrow for sin, though all from the Spirit of bondage, yet think they have repentance, godly sorrow enough. And here were an insuperable difficulty of discerning a mans estate, whether yet under common grace only, but that this resolves it, If I Love God. Peters startling of Conscience, grief, tears, were good signs, but never sure signs, had not this seasoned all, Lord I Love thee.

So that a mans assurance of his happy estate is not by any Spirit of Revelation, but of Sanctification, not from Inspiration, but from the work and testimony of a good Conscience; the Spirit of God in grace bearing witness to our Spirits.

3. I may add, A Saint in Heaven finds nothing, but what he knew before in little, what he tasted before in little, but then is filled. As he hath heard, so now he seeth in the City of God: hath heard of the Beatifical Vision, of partaking of God, of Eternity; now he enjoys it, not by any new Revelation of the Spirit, but by blessed experience. So that the deareſt Saint of God hath no further promise of Revelation, then in this sence.

III. There is no promise in Scripture, whereupon the Spirit of Revelation is to be expected after the fall of Jerusalem. It is a delusion by which the men, we speak of, deceive themselves and others, when they think and assert, that what promises are made of Revelation, or of great light, are to be applied to these times. How have these places been as it were worn thread-bare by them for this purpose, Esay LIV. 13. All thy Children shall be taught of the Lord; and Jer. XXXI. 33, 34. And this is the Covenant I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my Law in their inward parts, &c. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, saying, Know the Lord, for they shall all know me, &c. and others; as if they had been directly aimed for these very times, and as if directly for England: whereas I say again, there is no promise, upon which the Spirit of Revelation is to be expected after the fall of Jerusalem. This assertion is more important and proveable, than seems at first sight. I limit Prophesie to expire at the fall of Jerusalem. Whosoever saith not so, will not know where to limit it, and what that age was wherein it was extinguished. And if no limit, than how great is the danger we are in, who live in these times, when so many of contrary minds pretend to Prophesie: and then there were no age, but there would be some persons Oracular as Moses. If any limit then, where is it fixed? I say at the fall of Jerusalem. And I will prove it by what they bring to prove Prophesie for these days, Act. II. 17. And it shall come to pass in the last days saith God, I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh, and their sons and their daughters shall Prophesie, &c. By the last days, they would understand it of the World, I, of Jerusalem. So in divers places besides. That it is so to be understood in the place, S. Peters application makes out. Who applies this place of the Old Testament unto himself and the Christians at that time; upon occasion of their speaking strange Languages. What absurdity would there also be in his applying this place?

The old Oeconomy is as the old World, the Evangelical is the new Heaven and the new Earth. So that the last days of the old World are the last days of the old Oeconomy. Hence the destruction of Jerusalem is spoke of as the destruction of the old World, and Christs coming is said to be in the last days. So that if we take not the pouring out of the Spirit in the last days, in that sence, we swerve from the sence of the phrase in Scripture. And hence it appears that Spirit to be in those last days, and that it was affixed to them from propriety of phrase.

To this we might add, the manner of imparting the Spirit in those times; It was either by effusion upon many together, Act. II. & X. or by impostion of hands upon some single ones. Now who dares think that ever was since the fall of Jerusalem, such manner of giving, or ever will be? And these are the only ways of imparting the Spirit that are spoke of since Christ ascended.

To all we might add, that at the fall of Jerusalem all Scripture was written; and Gods full will revealed; so that there was no further need of Prophesie and Revelation.

Therefore those places they cite, are misapplied both as to the time and also as to the proper sence of them. So that here is a discovery of the third delusion, that Prophesie still continues, whereas it was to cease at the fall of Jerusalem, and there is no promise, whereupon any hath reason to expect it in these times.

IV. The

IV. The ſtanding Miniſtry is the ordinary Method that God hath uſed for the inſtruction of his Church. It has ever been Gods way, ſince he firſt wrote words, to teach his Church by a ſtudious learned Miniſtry, who were to explain the Scripture by ſtudy, not by the Spirit. Miſtake not, this Miniſtry conſiſted not of Prophets, (they were occaſional, and of neceſſity,) but of Prieſts and Levites. We are ſent to them, Hag. II. 11. Thus ſaith the Lord of Hoſts, ask now the Prieſts concerning the Law, Mal. II. 7. For the Prieſts lips ſhould keep knowledge, and they ſhould ſeek the Law at his mouth, for he is the meſſenger of the Lord of Hoſts. We have mention made of the ſons of the Prophets in the Old Teſtament; theſe were not inſpired, but underſtanding was inſtilled into them by Elias, and they ſat at his feet; ſuch were thoſe of Iſſachar. So the Diſciples ſat at the feet of Chriſt. The true Apoſtles indeed were inſpired becauſe there was a neceſſity of it. But when the New Teſtament was written, there was no further need of inſpiration. And then the Church was ſufficiently inſtructed by ordinary Miniſters, therefore was Timothy left at Epheſus, Titus in Creet. Thefore was the Impoſition of Hands, Hebrews VI. 2.

I conclude all with that ſuitable adviſe of St. John, I Chap. IV. 1. Beloved believe not every Spirit, but try the Spirits whether they are of God, becauſe many falſe Prophets are gone out into the World.

A

PREACHED BEFORE THE

Staffordshire-Natives,

At St. Michaels Cornhil

LONDON,

Novemb. 26. 1663.

ROM. V. Vers. 1.

Being justified by Faith we have peace with God.

THIS Text may seem very unsuitable to this occasion; but certainly to no occasion, no company, no season can it be unsuitable, can it be unseasonable to speak, hear, meditate of the infinite mercy of God in justifying men, and of the unexpressible happiness of man in having peace with God.

But I have chosen this Subject to treat upon in a methodical succession to what I have discoursed upon heretofore, being called to this Employment: At my first being upon this task before you, from those words in X. Joh. 22, 23. which speaks of Christs being at Jerusalem at the Feast of Dedication, I shewed you at large how our Saviour held Communion with the Church of the Jews; and thereupon I spake of such unity, against Schism. At my second from those words, Jud. vers. 12. These are spots in your Feasts of Charity, I shewed that the spots spoken of were false Teachers, that went abroad pretending to the Spirit, and so deceiving; and therefore I spake of taking heed of such delusions, against Heresie and Error. And now what can I more orderly and methodically speak upon, after speaking of keeping Peace with the Church, and keeping Peace with the Truth, than of having Peace with God?

Yes, you will say, To have taken in first having peace one with another. True, that might not have been immethodical. But you speak that in my stead; this Loving, Friendly, Brotherly meeting discourses that for me, and makes a visible Sermon of your peace one with another. And I have made that as it were a Text, whereupon to raise an occasional meditation to the tenor of that, which the Text that I have read, speaks. And let me raise it thus, If it be so good, and pleasant and happy a thing to see brethren thus live together in unity, thus to meet together, to walk together, to Feast together in Love, Unity and Peace; Sursum corda, lift up your hearts, and from this lustre you see of the Sun shining in this water below, look up to the light that is in the body of the Sun it self, and meditate how excellent, how pleasant, how happy a thing it is to have peace with God, to walk in peace with God in his own ways, to converse in peace with God

God in his own Houſe, to Feaſt in peace with God at his own Table, and at night to lie down and ſleep in peace with with God in his own Boſom.

This is the laſt Epiſtle the Apoſtle wrote before his apprehenſion and impriſonment. He wrote it from Corinth, where he touched in his journy to Jeruſalem, his laſt journy thither. He wrote it in the ſecond year of Nero immediately after Eaſter, when Claudius, who had hindred the Myſtery of iniquity from its working in its full ſcope, by his diſcountenancing the Jewiſh Nation, had now been taken away above a year and an half ago. And now that myſtery did find it ſelf looſe, and acted in its full activity: thoſe of that Nation, that had not embraced the Goſpel perſecuting it with all virulency, and multitudes of thoſe that had embraced it apoſtatizing from it, and becoming its bitter enemies.

This double fruit of gall and wormwood proceeded from one and the ſame root of bitterneſs, viz. Their doting upon Judaiſm: the word taken in a Civil ſence, as they accounted it a privilegial excellence to be a Jew, or in a Religious ſence, as they expected to be juſtified by their Judaical works.

So that the very ſeaſon and preſent juncture of affairs might very well give occaſion unto the Apoſtle, to handle the two Themes that faced theſe two great deluſions, ſo copiouſly in this Epiſtle, above all other places, viz. The caſting off the Jews, and coming in of the Gentiles, to decry their boaſting of being Jews; and Juſtification by Faith, to face their dangerous principle of Juſtification by their Works.

How he proſecutes his Diſcourſe upon the point of Juſtification by Faith from the beginning of his Epiſtle hither, any one may ſee plainly; firſt, confuting the opinion concerning Juſtification by Works, and then proving that it is by Faith.

As to the former, in Chap. I. he ſpeaks of the works of the Heathen, moſt abominable, and clean contrary to juſtifying: in Chap. II. of the works of the Jews, moſt failing and infinitely ſhort of juſtifying; and yet concludes, as to the ſecond head he handles, that the Believers of the one Nation and the other are juſtified, Chap. III. 30. as well the circumciſion ἐκ πίστεως, by faith and not by works, as the uncircumciſion διὰ πίστεως, through faith, though it had been of ſo contrary works.

In Chap. IV. he inſtanceth in Abraham, as ſerving to both his purpoſes, ſhewing that he was not juſtified by his Works, but by believing, and that the rather becauſe it was a common opinion and ſaying among the Jews, אברהם קיים את כל התורה כולה That Abraham performed all the Law to a tittle, and conſequently that he was juſtified by that performance. He ſheweth, that he belived and was juſtified by his faith, before he received circumciſion, in which they placed ſo much of juſtification, and that he received Circumciſion σφραγῖδα τῆς δικαιοσύνης τῆς πίστεως τῆς ἐν τῇ ἀκροβυστίᾳ, a ſeal of the righteouſneſs of faith, which he had being yet uncircumciſed, and a ſeal of the righteouſneſs of faith which ſhould be in the uncircumciſion, or Gentiles, that ſhould come to believe, (as thoſe words will alſo bear) that he might be the Father of all that believe, though they be not circumciſed, that righteouſneſs might be imputed to them alſo; verſ. 11.

In this verſe before, as he begins to apply the Doctrine he had cleared, and the word Therefore infers no leſs. Upon which I ſhall not inſiſt to examine, whether by it he infers only the firſt clauſe of the Text, as proved already, That Juſtification is by Faith: or the ſecond alſo, as proved likewiſe, or now added to be proved, That being Juſtified by Faith, we have peace with God. Nor ſhall I inſiſt upon the connexion, but take the words as they lie ſingly before us; and methinks they are as Ephraim and Manaſſeh before Jacob, both clauſes ſo excellent, that we may be at a ſtand on which to lay the right hand; ſo great the myſtery of Juſtification, and ſo incomparable the happineſs of having Peace, that on which ſhall we fix to diſcourſe in this hour? I may not paſs the former, but in a word or two by the way, hint ſomething of the great myſtery of Juſtification.

I. It is a myſtery and wonder, that I may ſay with that Apoſtle, even the Angels deſire to look into, and that men have cauſe with amazement to look upon, that ever a ſinful wretch, a condemned perſon, ſhould be juſtified before God. But ſo it was in the Law, he that was unclean with the deepeſt died legal uncleanneſs that could be, if purified with the Purification of the Sanctuary, he became clean.

II. It is a myſtery, that a ſinner ſhould be juſtified, and yet whiles he lives in this world he is ſinful ſtill. But ſo likewiſe it was in the Law, the Leper was cleanſed, yet he was a Leper ſtill, Levit. XIII. 13. In a caſe there mentioned the Prieſt was to pronounce him clean. His condition was changed as to his reſtoring to the publick Worſhip, and to the Congregation, but his inherent diſtemper was not wholly removed.

III. It is a myſtery, that a ſinner ſhould be juſtified by Gods juſtice: the property of which is to condemn ſin and to puniſh ſinners. For we are juſtified not only by the grace and mercy of God, but by the very juſtice of God. And methinks the very word Juſtification ſpeaks no leſs, I am ſure the Apoſtle ſpeaks ſo in Chap. I. 17. For therein is the righteouſneſs righteousneſs of God revealed from faith to faith. In the Law was revealed the righteouſneſs or juſtice of God condemning, and in the Goſpel the righteouſneſs or juſtice of God juſtifying.

IV. It is a myſtery, that mans believing ſhould juſtifie: it being an Act of man, and ſo infinitely unadæquate to Gods juſtifying. But as in the Law, he that would have his attonement made at the Altar, and have his acceptance there, muſt of neceſſity take the Prieſt in his thoughts, and in his way to do it for him; ſo Faith doth inevitably include alſo Chriſt the object of believing, and his merit. So that you cannot define this Goſpel faith but with this comprehenſion, that it is a truſting in the grace and promiſe of God through Chriſt.

V. It is a myſtery, that a ſinner ſhould be juſtified or made righteous by the righteouſneſs of another. This is ſtrange to the ears of the Jews, who expected to be juſtified every one by his own righteouſneſs. Whereas they might have learned at the Temple, that even the holieſt things there, were not holy of themſelves, but made holy by ſomething elſe; the Sacrifice by the Altar, the Prieſt by his garments. And this is that Faith that the Apoſtle ſpeaks of in the place mentioned before, The righteouſneſs of God revealed from Faith to Faith, I. Rom. 17. i. e. a righteouſneſs beyond that that the Jew expected by Faith in God, who immediately truſted in God upon the account of his own righteouſneſs: whereas This is a Faith or truſting in God upon the righteouſneſs of Chriſt.

VI. It is a myſtery, that whereas Faith is not the ſame for degree and meaſure in all that believe, yet juſtification is the ſame in all that believe, though their belief be in different meaſures and degrees. So once in the Wilderneſs all gathered not Manna in the ſame meaſure, yet when all came to meaſure, they had all alike, none above an Omer, none under. Sanctification indeed receiveth magis & minus, and one hath a greater degree or leſs of holineſs than other, but Juſtification is not ſo. For all are juſtified alike; the truth of faith juſtifying, not the meaſure. So actual ſinfulneſs recipit magis & minus, and ſo ſome are greater ſinners ſome leſs, but origine ſui, 'tis not ſo, but ſin is alike in all.

But my diſcourſe ſhall light down and ſtay upon that which in the Text is the lighting down of the happineſs of being juſtified, viz. That ſuch have peace with God.

The very word, to have Peace with God may make a Chriſtians heart to leap within him, it ſpeaks ſo much happineſs. Did not our hearts burn within us, ſay they in the Goſpel upon Chriſts gracious diſcourſes with them. It is enough to warm a heart, if it be not, if it will not be, a ſtone; if it be ſenſible, if it will be ſenſible, what it is to be a ſinner: to hear that an offended, juſt, dreadful, all-powerful God, will be at peace with him, that hath offended him.

Why art thou ſo dull O my Soul, why ſo ſtupid within me, as not to ſtir, not to be affected at the ſounding of ſuch tidings as theſe, that it is poſſible for a ſinner to have peace with God? Cain, why art thou ſo unquiet in thy conſcience, if thou do well ſhalt thou not be accepted, but if thou do not, there is a ſin offering lies at the door, and thou mayeſt have an attonement. Wretch that thou art, if thy heart relent not at ſuch tidings as theſe!

When the Devil had ſet enmity twixt God and Man at the fall of Adam, it was a lovely dawning towards mans recovery, when God ſet enmity twixt Man and the Devil: for their friendſhip had been Mans undoing. But it was the glorious Sun-riſing, or noontide rather, when God aboliſhed the enmity betwixt Man and himſelf, and brought and ſpake Peace.

In the Angels ſong, that they ſung at the birth of our Saviour; that part of the Ditty ſpake a great deal of happineſs, that ſpake of Peace on Earth twixt man and man; which was now to be by reconciling Jew and Gentile in the Goſpel: but that part of it ſpake more happineſs, that ſpake of Δοκία ἐν ἀνθρώποις, Gods good will towards men, or Peace twixt Men and God.

Now what it is to have peace with God, who can utter? Tis a fit Theme for an Angel from Heaven to diſcourſe upon, who never had enmity with God, or rather for a Saint in glory, who had once been at enmity, but now knows what the ſweetneſs of peace with God is in its full enjoyment. Take the proſpect of it thus reflexly. Take your ſtand in your thoughts from a death-bed, a very convenient ſtand to take our view in all our actions. Think of your dying condition, and conceive all your ſins then muſtered before you, the vanity, folly and wretchedneſs of an ill led life preſenting themſelves before you in their horror and confuſion, your conſcience flaſhing the very flames of Hell into your faces: imagine that you beheld God frowning, and his face full of indignation; in a word that you ſaw plainly your loſt and undone Condition; and then ſpeak, heart, what is it to have peace with God? Solomon, wilt thou have riches? Sinner, wilt thou have preferments, wealth, pleaſure, all contents the World can afford? No, Lord, let me have Peace with God, which is above ten thouſand Worlds.

It

It is very incident to any, that treateth upon this Subject, to be carried by a kind of delightful impulſe and inforcement, to diſcourſe what happineſs it is to have Peace with God. And no wonder, when the field is very pleaſant to ſpatiate in: But I ſhall according to the proper rule of method, firſt, inquire into the nature of the thing it ſelf, and then, if time permit, ſpeak of that happy fruit of it.

Of the former of theſe I ſhall diſcourſe Negatively and Poſitively.

I. Negatively, what is not this Peace, nor any ſign of it: but is counterfeit coin: And

1. Outward Peace, or proſperity in the things of this World is no ſign at all of Peace with God. The men of the World are willing to delude themſelves with this Sophiſm, All things go well with me, therefore 'tis ſo twixt God and me. 'Tis true, outward proſperity in Scripture-phraſe is often termed by the name of Peace; and it is true alſo, that outward proſperity is often promiſed upon pleaſing God in obedience to his Commandments, as in Levit. XXVI. and Deut. XXVIII. and in multitudes of other places. And hence ſome may be ready upon the enjoyment of worldly proſperity to think they may conclude upon the favour of God, and that they are at peace with him, and all well 'twixt God and them.

But that promiſe of the Covenant is to be interpreted according to the tenor of the Covenant it ſelf: which is, That it is abſolutely a Covenant of Grace and Peace, but it is conditionally the Covenant of ſomewhat elſe, viz. of temporal things. In 1 Tim. IV. 8. Godlineſs hath the promiſe of the life that now is, and of that which is to come: Of the life to come abſolutely, of this conditionally. Gods Covenant is, that they that keep his Covenant, ſhall have grace; that is abſolute: and it may be proſperity, it may be adverſity; that is conditional. But this may be, ſpoils all. By no means. Thou ſhalt have proſperity, if beſt; thou ſhalt have adverſity, if beſt: Riches if good for thee, proſperity if better.

And in that queſtion, whether wicked men have right to the creature, the determination is made more eaſie, this being obſerved, That there is a great deal of difference betwixt a right to the Creature, and a Covenant-right, which is, that the uſe of the Creature be for our good. For Dominium temporale non fundatur in gratia. It is not grace that gives intereſt to the uſe of the Creature, but to the bleſſing on the Creature, 1 Tim. IV. 5. The creature is ſanctified by the Word of God and Prayer. The matter is not, whether we have the uſe of the Creature, but whether the Creature be ſanctified, and becomes a bleſſing. God hath promiſed, keep my Covenant, and be bleſſed in thy basket and thy ſtore, &c. and yet thouſands have kept Gods Covenant, and walked hungry and naked; as in Heb. XI. 36, 37. Theſe good men, if they had not well underſtood the tenor of the Covenant of Grace, might have diſputed with God, Thou haſt promiſed to them that keep thy Covenant, that they ſhall be ſo and ſo bleſſed, we have done it, but where is the promiſe? As they plead Pſal. XLIV. 11. 17. Thou haſt given us like ſheep appointed for meat, &c. All this is come upon us, yet have we not forgotten thee, neither have we dealt falſly in thy Covenant. But ſaith God, and they knew it well, The tenor of the Covenant abſolutely is Grace, and that you have, but other things are but conditional, viz. as they may be beſt for you.

Let no man then deceive himſelf; ſeek not the living among the dead. A full bag, and cheſt, and barn is a very improper place to ſeek for the Peace of God in. A mans outward condition is not a ſign of his intereſt in the Covenant of Grace and Peace: but if that condition will be a bleſſing to him, and will forward and help him on the better to Grace and Peace, the end of the Covenant, then he ſhall have it: A man proſperous in the World grows proud, ſecure, inſulting. Is this Covenant Proſperity? No, it is clean contrary to the end of the Covenant, which is the forwarding men in grace. So that I may wind my aſſertion higher, That outward peace and plenty is ſo little a ſign of Peace with God, that it is oftentimes a ſign rather of his enmity. See Eccleſ. V. 13. There riches are ſaid to be kept for the owners thereof to their hurt. And Mal. II. 2. There God threatens to curſe theſe bleſſings. But I need ſay no more upon this point, but only to mention, that our Saviour ſets his Peace and this peace of the World in oppoſition, in XIV. Joh. 27.

2. There is another falſe coin that counterfeits Peace with God, and that is mens having peace in their own conſciences. I ſhall diſcover how deceiveable it is, by ſpeaking to this ſecond aſſertion.

That inward peace in the Conſcience doth not at all infer having Peace with God. And let me add a third and ſpeak reverſely,

That having peace with God doth not neceſſarily infer inward peace of Conſcience.

1. That inward peace in the Conſcience doth not infer having Peace with God. By inward peace in the Conſcience I mean, the oppoſite to pangs, troubles, ſtorms of conſcience. And this peace is the common temper of the moſt conſciences in the world; they have no diſquiet at all. Who hath uſed to viſit the ſick on their dying beds, hath he not found it it too common, that Conſcience hath been in this temper? I thank God, nothing troubles me, all is quiet in my Conſcience. As Eliſha over Hazael, upon foreſight of his miſchievouſneſs to come, ſo could I weep over ſuch a poor Soul, to ſee it go out of the World with ſuch a deluſion as this in its right hand.

Ah! ſay not peace, peace, when there is no peace. For here indeed is neither peace with God, nor peace of Conſcience properly ſo called. But if you will have the Spirit of God to word it, it is the Spirit of ſlumber, Rom. XI. 8. It is an impenitent heart, Rom. II. 5. It is ἀπαλγησὰς, paſt feeling, Eph. IV. 19. In a word it is a Nabals heart dead within him. And that ſuch a Conſcience ſhould be quiet it is no wonder; for mortui non mordent. But it would be a wonder if ſuch a peace in the Conſcience ſhould be a ſign of peace with God. Into ſuch a peace, let not my Soul, my Conſcience enter.

It was a ſtrange requeſt of him that ſaid to his Father, Smite me, I pray thee. But I hardly know a more pertinent requeſt, that a ſinner can put up to God, and it muſt be mine continually; and I know, that all that know what belong to the right frame of Conſcience, will pray with me, Lord ſmite me I pray thee, wound me, laſh my Conſcience and ſpare it not, rather than ſuffer me to lye and dye, and periſh under ſuch peace of Conſcience as this is; if ſuch ſtupidity may be called peace.

Doth any one by ſuch a peace of Conſcience as this argue his peace with God? I muſt now alſo wind this aſſertion higher, as I did the former: It is ſo far from inferring peace with God, that it directly argues peace with the Devil. And our Saviour the God of Truth, and the Prince of Peace bears witneſs to it, Luk. XI. 21.

2. But doth not Peace with God argue or infer Peace of Conſcience? That is the ſecond thing I ſhould ſpeak to. And here I could inſiſt with delight, for it is a very material caſe of Conſcience.

It is a myſtery in Divinity and experience, that an unregenerate perſon can hardly be driven off from preſuming on his Salvation, and that a regenerate man can hardly be brought to hope of his Salvation. That he who is furtheſt from having peace with God ſhould ſcarcely be driven from not doubting of his peace with him, and that he that undoubtedly hath his peace with him, ſhould ſo hardly be driven off from doubting it. Many a good Soul is in the world that is juſtified, and hath without queſtion quoad rem ipſam, his peace with God, according to the divine Oracle of the Text; and yet is as to the ſence of it, exceeding far from peace of Conſcience; full of troubles and fears at all times.

Think you not David was juſtified, and that his peace was made with God? Who can doubt it? And yet you have him ſore broken, Pſal. XXXVIII. 8. Think you not that he that penned the ſeventy ſeventh Pſalm, was juſtified, and had peace with God, be he David or Aſaph? Who can doubt it? And yet you have his ſore running, &c. verſ. 2. Was it not he that compoſed the eighty eighth Pſalm juſtified and had peace with God? It is paſt all queſtion; and yet you have him ſadly bemoaning, at verſ. 15, 16. That from his youth up all his life he was ſo terrified in Conſcience that he was even diſtracted, and that he felt the fierce wrath of God go over him, and his terrors cutting him off.

But let my lot be with ſuch mourners of Zion; let me have ſuch breakings of heart, whilſt others delight to be ſecure. Let me be in tears, and ſuch trembling of Conſcience, as theſe men were: and thoſe that delight in having no trouble there, let them take it to themſelves.

If this caſe were inconſiſtent with having peace with God, then were ſuch a condition of all mens moſt miſerable; but it is ſo far from being inconſiſtent, that it is the common and conſtant condition of all that obtain peace with him, though it be not alike to all, and in the ſame degree. It may ſeem as ſnow in Harveſt to ſpeak of a mourning, afflicted, grieved Conſcience at a Feaſt of mirth; but to ſhew that yet ſuch an unquiet Soul may be, for all that, at Peace with God, will make the caſe like that at the laying the foundation of the new Temple in Ezra, Chap. III. that the ſound of rejoycing may drown that of weeping.

I could gladly and delightſomly, as I ſaid, ſpeak to this caſe, and ſhew for the comfort of ſuch afflicted Conſciences, how little their caſe doth deny having peace with God: how comfortable ſuch a condition is, though it be bitter alſo. I might clear the ſtate and nature of ſuch mens Condition, Partly, by obſerving under what predicament ſuch a caſe comes in the Covenant of Grace. Partly, by obſerving the quality of ſuch trouble, and how clear it is from being ſinful. Partly, by obſerving the extent of the ability of Conſcience to judge of a mans eſtate. Partly, by obſerving the proper original from whence it ariſeth in the Soul it ſelf. Partly, by obſerving the purpoſe of God in ſtating Conſcience in ſuch a Condition. By every one of which might be evinc'd, that Conſcience may be at miſerable trouble within it ſelf, and yet that perſon at moſt intire peace with God: that his peace with God may be moſt undoubtedly ſure, when his Conſcience doth moſt doubt of it.

But

But these would require the hour to begin again to have time to speak to them. And indeed it may seem as mourning at a banquet of Wine, to speak of an afflicted Conscience at a Feast of rejoycing.

II. And therefore having thus spoke to the negative, I shall come to the positive, and shew what it is to have Peace, having shewed what it is not. But when shall I begin and when end? First, a discourse of this subject must begin at the suburbs of Hell, enmity with God, and end in the highest Heaven, the full enjoyment of him in glory. Secondly, it must proceed to shew the original of this enmity, from the disjunction of sinful nature from the holy nature of God, and from disobedience of life and will to the divine Will and Law. And now thirdly, it comes to Jerusalem, the vision of Peace. The thing it self what it is, we may take up in two considerations briefly.

1. It is a laying away and extinguishing of Gods hatred and enmity against a sinner.

2. It is not only privately, the laying aside the wrath of God, but positively, the flowing in of the love of God. Moses prays to God, Lord, shew me thy Glory. Oh! what a sight is it, when the cloud of unbelief is over, how lovely and sweetly does the Son of righteousness arise upon us?

But I give not the whole definition of Peace with God, unless to God reconciled to man, I add, Man reconcil'd to God. We may observe, how the Holy Ghost expresses the great Reconciliation: the main stress lies in the reconciliation of man to God, Col. I. 20. God through the blood of the cross hath reconcil'd all things to himself. He saith not, hath reconcil'd himself to all things, but all things to himself. And in II Cor. V. 19. God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself. He saith not, reconciling himself unto the World; and vers. 20. We pray you in Christs stead, be ye reconciled unto God. The great business is for man to be reconciled unto God; Absalom unto David. Here then is the main trial, to know whether God be at peace with you; see if you be at peace with him. This is the Note in the Index, and if we find it there, we may be sure to find the other in the Book. As he that looked Westward, for the rising of the Sun, saw it sooner, guilding the tops of the Mountains, than they that looked for it in the East. So this is the best way to see whether God be at peace with us: let us look back upon our selves, and see how our Condition is towards God. Some hold, that the answer by Urim and Thummim was by the rising of the stones in the High Priests breastplate. Though I am not of their mind, yet I may allude unto it in the case in hand; Look into thine own breast, make thine observation thence, see how thy heart stands affected towards God: and by that thou mayest understand what Gods Answer to thy Question is, viz. Whether he be at Peace with thee?

A SERMON PREACHED AT HERTFORD Assise,

March 1660.

REVEL. XX. 4.

And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and Judgment was given unto them.

THIS portion of Scripture out of which I have taken this Text, is as much misconstrued, and as dangerously misconstrued, as any one portion of Scripture in all the Bible. How much, I shall shew you in the unfolding of it: and how dangerously, you may read in the late example, of a handful of unhappy men, who thought to have brought our great City, but indeed brought themselves, to a fatal end and untimely grave, meerly upon the misconstruction of this Scripture. I must therefore humbly crave your patience a little, whilst I speak something for the discovery of the meaning of the context, that so I may facilitate and plain the way to the understanding of the meaning of the words that I have chosen.

What work the Millinary and Fifth-monarchists make upon this place, I need not tell you, I would that matter were not so well known as it is. To whom, and to whose opinion, I must do as he did in the story; who when a great company of men were met together and wanted a head over them: and had agreed that he should be their chief, that could first espy the Sun rising the next morning; whilst all the rest stood gazing into the East for that purpose, one among them turned the clear contrary way and looked Westward; and he espied the shining of the Sun on the hill tops before him, sooner than they could espy the body of the Sun arising in the East before them. So I to these men and their opinion. They look forward and make account, that the things that are here spoken of their accomplishment and fulfilling, are yet to come. I look backward and fear not to aver that the things here spoken of have received their accomplishment not long ago. They look forward, and expect that the 1000 years that are here mentioned, are yet to begin. I look backward, and make no doubt, that those 1000 years ended and expired above half a thousand years since.

And the reason of this difference between us, is because there is propotionable difference between us about subjectum quæstionis, the subject and matter that the Apocalyptick here aimeth at.

He speaks up that great and noble Theme that all the Prophets so divinely and comfortably harp upon, namely the calling of the Gentiles: that they should come in out of their dark and deluded estate, to the light and embracing of the Gospel, and to become the Church and People of the living God: This is the Theme of our Apocalyptick here, and he speaks to it in seven particulars.

I. As to the way and manner that God used to bring them in: that Christ the great Angel of the Covenant, should by the power of the Gospel chain up the Devil that he should deceive them no more as he had done.

The

The miſtakers I mentioned, do either ignorantly or wilfully err about the ſubject handled here; and conſtrue it to this ſenſe, that the Devil ſhould be bound by Chriſt that he ſhould not perſecute, diſturb and diſquiet the Church as he had done: but that all along theſe thouſand years their ſhould be only ſome time of peace and tranquillity, and not one cloud of diſquieture or diſturbance by the Devil or his inſtruments eclipſe it. A ſenſe as far from the Holy Ghoſts meaning as the Eaſt is from the Weſt.

There is not a word here of the Devils binding that He ſhould not diſturb the Church: but of the Devils binding that He ſhould not deceive the Nations. "Ινα μὴ πλανήσῃ τὰ ἔθνη ἔτι· let a Grecian Read the words and he will render them, that He ſhould not deceive the Heathen any more. The Devil had deceived and kept the poor Heathen in deludedneſs by Idols, Oracles, falſe Miracles, horrid Myſteries of irreligiouſneſs, and a thouſand couſenages for above two thouſand years: namely, from their firſt caſting off at the confuſion of Babel, till the Goſpel was brought in among them by the Apoſtles. By the Goſpel there, Chriſt diſſolves thoſe charms of deluſion, brings down Idolatry, ſilences the Devils Oracles and Miracles, and chains up the Devil from that power and liberty of deceiving all Nations as he had done.

II. He ſaith, the Devil was chained up in this ſenſe a thouſand years: uſing a known expreſſion of the Jews and alluding to an opinion of theirs, partly that he might ſpeak the more to be underſtood, when he uſeth an expreſſion ſo well known, and partly that he might face the miſtake of the Jews in that opinion.

It was their conceit and fancy, as I might ſhew you out of their writings, that Meſſias when he ſhould come ſhould reign among the Jewiſh Nation a thouſand years, but as for the Heathen he ſhould deſtroy them.

No, ſaith our Apocalyptick, His reigning a thouſand years ſhall be among the Nations or the Gentiles, and he ſhall not come to deſtroy the Gentiles, but to deliver them: To deliver them from the power and deluſions of Satan, to chain up Satan that he ſhall deceive them no more as he had done: but that whereas before for ſo long a time together they had been only taught of the Devil; now they ſhould all be taught of God, as had been foretold, Eſa. LIV. 13. and as our Saviour himſelf applies it, Joh. VI. 45.

III. He ſpeaks of Chriſts diſpoſal of the Heathen when he ſhould have brought them in from under the deceivings of the Devil, to the knowledge and embracing of the Goſpel, viz. That he would platform them into Kingdoms, States, and Civil Governments, and that he would ſet up Chriſtian Kings, and Magiſtrates, and Judges among them, and that is the meaning of the words of the Text, And I ſaw thrones, and they ſat upon them, and Judgment was given unto them: as I ſhall ſhew to you by and by.

IV. He relates, That the Souls of thoſe that were beheaded for the witneſs of Jeſus, nor had worſhipped the beaſt nor his image, &c. ſhould live and reign with Chriſt a thouſand years.

Where he faceth another erronious opinion of the Jews again: which was that the Kingdom of Meſſias ſhould be a pompous Kingdom, and of earthly ſplendor and glory. And that thoſe that ſhould reign with him, ſhould do it in the injoyment of all earthly magnificence and worldly ſtate.

No ſaith our Apocalyptick, they that ſuffer with him are thoſe that ſhall reign with him: as alſo ſaith the Apoſtle, II Tim. II. 12. That howſoever he ſhall ſet up Kings and Magiſtrates to rule for him, and under him, yet his Kingdom is not of this World; but the way to reign with him is by ſuffering, ſelf denial, induring for him, dying for him.

V. He calls this calling in of the Gentiles, The firſt Reſurrection, verſ 5. And a wondrous one too: when they that had ſo long lain dead, in darkneſs, treſpaſſes and ſins, ſhould now be revived to live unto God: as Epheſ. II. 1. and our Saviour uſeth the very ſame expreſſion of the ſame perſons, Joh. V. 25.

VI. He telleth, that ſome of thoſe dead ſhould not live again, till the thouſand years ſhould be fulfilled, verſ. 5. Not that they ſhould live again when the thouſand years ſhould be fulfilled, but that they had loſt the opportunity of living in thoſe thouſand years, when light and life was offered and tendred through the world. For

VII. When thoſe thouſand years ſhould be expired Satan ſhould be looſed again, and deceive the World as he had done, verſ. 7, 8.

And if you begin to count the thouſand years from the time that the Goſpel was firſt brought in among the Gentiles by Paul and Barnabas and other of the Apoſtles, you will find that the end and expiring of them will fall to be in the very depth and thickneſs of Popery: and then was the Devil got looſe again, and deceived the Nations by as groſs and wretched deluſions as ever he had done before.

And thus you have a brief account of the meaning of this portion of Scripture, ſo much miſtaken and miſconſtrued: and by this time you ſee that the meaning of my Text is, as I gave it you before, namely that in the Church of the Gentiles called in, God ſhould ſhould ſet up Thrones, and Kings, and Magiſtrates, and put Judgment into their hands, to govern and judge the World and to adminiſter Juſtice.

So that they that from this place would argue againſt Magiſtracy and Civil Government in the Chriſtian Church, do no leſs miſtake, than they did theſe words of God in the Prophet Jeremy, Jer. XIII. 12. who when God told them That every bottle ſhould be filled with wine, and his meaning was, that every perſon ſhould be filled with his indignation, as it is explained in the next verſe; they ſo far miſconſtrued, that they anſwer, We certainly know that every bottle ſhall be filled with wine: meaning bottles in the proper ſenſe, and that they ſhould be filled with good liquor to maintain them ſtill in their luxury and jovialty. So the miſtakes we ſpake of, would from this Scripture argue againſt Magiſtrates and the Civil Power: whereas there is hardly a place of Scripture that ſpeaks more home and throughly for it than this doth.

And this I ſhall further clear to you partly out of the words of the Text themſelves, and partly from two other places that ſpeak the ſame thing.

In the Text, it is ſaid, Judgment was given unto them; what can this mean, but power and authority to be Magiſtrates and Judges? Yes ſay our miſtakers, It means that the Saints at the day of Judgment ſhall ſit upon ſeats with Chriſt approving and applauding his Judgment. And they miſapply other Scriptures as much for the confirmation of this, as they do this to ſuch a conſtruction. And thoſe are Mark XIX. 28. Luke XXII. 30. which ſpeak one and the ſame thing. Where Chriſt ſpeaks not at all of the Saints judging the World in ſuch a ſenſe as they fain to themſelves, but only the twelve Apoſtles [and Judas if you well obſerve the places, to be reckoned for one] judging the twelve Tribes of Iſrael. And the meaning is but this, that when Chriſt ſhould come to reveal himſelf in his glorious appearing in vengeance againſt Jeruſalem and the Jewiſh Nation, the Doctrine that they had Preached ſhould condemn the twelve Tribes that had not believed it, as if they themſelves ſat on the Thrones to judge and condemn them. And ſo ſome of the Ancients have of old well underſtood it, that it is not ſpoken of their Perſons but of their Doctrine, Judging and Condemning.

And to the true ſenſe, that I ſay the Text ſpeaketh, ſpeaketh alſo that equally abuſed place, I Cor. VI. 2. Do ye not know that the Saints ſhall judge the World, i.e. know ye not that there ſhall be a Chriſtian Magiſtracy: that Chriſtians ſhall be Kings and Magiſtrates to rule and judge the World?

And the very ſame ſenſe ſpeaketh Dan. VII. 18. 26, 27. from whence both my Text and that paſſage of Paul are taken; know ye not, ſaith he, that the Saints ſhall judge the World? How ſhould they know it? Why? Plainly enough out of that place in Daniel, where in verſ. 18. it is foretold, That the Saints of the moſt High ſhould take the Kingdom, and poſſeſs the Kingdom for ever and ever. And in verſ. 26, 27. The Judgment ſhall ſit (as in the Text) and the Kingdom, and Dominion, and the greatneſs of the Kingdom under the whole Heaven ſhould be given to the people of the Saints of the moſt High.

Two conſiderations will put the matter out of all queſtion.

I. That the word Saints means not ſtrictly, nor really Sanctified, in oppoſition to men not really ſanctified, but it means Chriſtians in general in oppoſition to Heathens. And ſo the Apoſtle himſelf clears it in the verſe before that I cited. Dare any of you go to Law before the unjuſt and not before the Saints? What is meant by the unjuſt there? Heathens or Infidels as he calls them, verſ. 6. And then what is meant by Saints? But Chriſtians in oppoſition to Heathens.

II. Obſerve the tenor of the contents in Daniel, and that will illuſtrate the ſenſe of theſe verſes that I produced. He ſpeaks before of the four Heathen Monarchies, the Babylonian, Mede-Perſian, Grecian, and Syrogrecian, that had had the Kingdom and Dominion and Rule in the World, and had tyrannized in the World, eſpecially againſt the Church that was then being: but at laſt they ſhould be deſtroyed, and upon their being deſtroyed Chriſt ſhould come and ſet up his Kingdom through the World, and then the Kingdom, and Rule, and Dominion in the World, ſhould be put into the hands of Saints or Chriſtians, and they ſhould Rule and Judge in the World, as thoſe Heathen Monarchies had done all the time before.

And thus you have the words unfolded to you, and I hope according to the meaning of the Holy Ghoſt.

And now my Lords and Gentlemen, you may ſee your own picture in the glaſs of the Text; for you are of the number of thoſe of whom it ſpeaketh. In it you may ſee your ſelves, Imbenched, Commiſſioned and your work put into your hands.

In the firſt clauſe, The inſtitution of the Function, the ordaining of Magiſtracy and Judicature: I ſaw Thrones ſet. In the ſecond, The Commiſſionating of Chriſtians unto that Office and Function, They ſat upon them. In the laſt, The end of this Office, and the employment they are ſet upon in it, Judgment was given unto them.

Thrones

Thrones set: by whom? By him that had been the great agent in the verse before, Christ that had bound the Devil and chained him up.

They sat upon them? Who? They that are the persons mentioned in the verse before. Men of the Nations, undeceived from the delusions of Satan, and brought into the truth of the Gospel.

Judgment was given them: for what end? For Judgment sake, that they might execute judgment and righteousness among the Nations.

And so I have my words fairly cut out before me, and the matter and the method of the Text calls upon me to speak unto these three things.

I. Of the institution of Magistrates, as an ordinance of Christ.

II. Of Christian Magistracy as a Gospel mercy.

III. The great work, the all in all of Magistracy, The execution of Judgment.

I. Of all the offices of Christ, he executed only one of them peculiarly and reservedly himself, without the communicating of any acting in it to any other, but as to the execution of the other two, he partly acteth himself, and partly importeth some acting therein by deputation to others.

His Priestly office, that that most concerned, and had the greatest stroke in mans redemption, he executed intirely himself, and no other had share, no other could have share in the executing of that with him.

None could be capable of offering any of his all-sufficient Sacrifice with him: none could be capable of offering the incense of mediation with him. But in his Kingly and Prophetick offices he acteth himself and he deputeth others to act for him.

As the great Prophet, he teacheth his Church himself, by giving of the Scriptures, and instructing his holy ones by his Spirit, yet withal hath he deputed Ministers to be her Teachers.

And as the great King of the Church, and of all the World, he ruleth in both himself: in the hearts of his people by his Word and Spirit, and amongst his enemies with a rod of Iron: yet withal hath he deputed Kings, Judges and Magistrates to be Rulers for him.

These two great Ordinances you have couched in this very place. In the verse before the Text, Christ chaineth up the Devil, that he should no more deceive poor men as he had done before. And how did he this? By the Ministry of the Word and Preaching of the Gospel: And in the words of the Text, he setteth up Thrones, and sets men upon them; for what? To execute Magistracy and to administer Judgment.

And so likewise are they closely hinted in that place of the Apostle that I cited, I Cor. VI. Know ye not that the Saints shall judge the World, or Christians be Magistrates? and in the next verse following, know ye not that we shall judge Angels, or we Apostles and Ministers judge Devils and overthrow their Idols, Oracles, Miracles and Delusions by the Ministry of the Gospel?

And so if I should take Pastors and Teachers, Ephes. IV. 11. for Magistrates and Ministers, I believe there were no solœcisme in the thing: and I am sure the Jews called their chiefest Magistrates פרנסים Pastores in their common speech. And if the Apostle may be shewed there to speak in their vulgar dialect, as he doth indeed all along his Epistles, it would save a controversie and question that is raised upon that place.

These two Functions are the two standing Pillars and Ordinances, the Jachin and Boaz, that our great Solomon hath set up in his Temple to stand with the Temple while it standeth.

These are two choice strainings and distillings of the precious ointment that was poured on the head of our great Aaron that runs down upon the skirts of his clothing.

Yours, my Lords and Gentlemen, is a beam of that lustre that shineth in the Royal Crown of Christs Kingly office. It is a coin stamped, with the Image and superscription of the great Cesar of Heaven and Earth sitting in his Empire and Dominion over all.

I remember a Phrase of Pliny in his Epistles, speaking of a vertuous and gallant daughter that imitated to the life the vertues and gallantry of a noble Father, Filia patrem exscripserat, the daughter had copied out her father to the life. Magistracy is a daughter of that Royal Father, that said, All power is given to me in Heaven and Earth: and it is a copy of her father. He himself hath drawn his own picture in it in little, as he sitteth in his Royal Domination, and given that image of himself to you to wear always about you.

Let me therefore only tell you the story of a King that always wore his Fathers picture, who had been a worthy Prince, about him: and ever and anon would look on it, and say, Ne quid unquam faciam indignum tali patri. O may I never do any thing unworthy such a father. Your wisdom, and worth, will make the Application.

A good Magiſtrate hath one part of the image of Chriſt more than other good men: as Adams dominion over the Creatures was part of the image of God upon him as well as holineſs and righteouſneſs was the image of God in him: So is his Power and Commiſſion to rule Kingdoms in the World, the very image of Chriſt ruling and judging, if Righteouſneſs and Holineſs be added; and Adam in all his glory was not arraied like ſuch a Perſon.

I am unwilling to inſiſt and ſpend time to prove that Magiſtracy is Chriſts ordinance, leſt I ſpeak but as he did at Rome, who had written a large diſcourſe in praiſe of Hercules: he was but jeered for his pains and folly, to go about ſo ſeriouſly to commend Hercules, whom none, ſaid they, did ever diſcommend. What ſober man does or can deny, Kingſhip and Magiſtracy to be of Chriſts ordaining? and I am unwilling by being urgent in the proof of it, ſo much as to ſeem to undervalue the judgment of any in the Congregation ſo far, as to think, this great and important truth needs any proof to him.

Only let me ſay this, to thoſe that do deny it, That it is a very ſtrange Logick they make, when they conclude thus, Jeſus is King Jeſus, and he is Lord and Ruler of all, therefore he will endure no Kingſhip elſe, no Potentates, no Civil Government. Thou thoughteſt me like unto thy ſelf, is the complaint of God againſt the prophane in Pſal. L. 21. Men that would Rule, and would have none to Rule but themſelves, would perſwade you Chriſt is of that mind, and ſo make that perſwaſion a ſtalking-horſe to their ambition.

I am ſure God himſelf, concludes after another manner in the ſecond Pſalm. I have ſet my King upon my holy hill of Sion: what infers he thereupon? Not, Therefore O ye Kings give up your Kingſhip, Nor O ye Judges of the Earth, judge the Earth no more. But therefore be wiſe O ye Kings, &c. and do your duty in your places.

When our Saviour Chriſt came to ſet up his Kingdom of the Goſpel, as among the Jews, he took away and aboliſhed only that of their Laws and Ordinances that were Ceremonial, and that that related only to them as peculiar people, but let that ſtand that was Moral, and that that was not of that peculiar relation: ſo among them Gentiles when he made them his Church, he took away and deſtroyed only that that was ſinful and abominable among them, and which did moſt properly denominate them Heatheniſh, as ſtrangers and enemies to all Goodneſs and Religion: but that that was innocent, uſeful and neceſſary, he perpetuated among them.

Among the Jews he aboliſhed the worſhip at the Temple, as purely Ceremonious, but he perpetuated the Worſhip of the Synagogue, Reading the Scriptures, Praying, Preaching, and Singing of Pſalms, &c. tranſplanted it into the Chriſtian Church as purely Moral. So among the Gentiles, he deſtroied their ignorance, Idolatry, corruption of manners, deluſions of Satan, as purely Heatheniſh. But he perpetuated Kingſhip, Magiſtracy, civil Government as uſeful and profitable, and taken up upon the very pure light of nature and inevitable neceſſity,

I may compare what he did in this to what he did about Baptiſm. He found when he came, that it had been in uſe among the Jews for admiſſion of Proſelytes to their Church, many hundred of years before he himſelf or John Baptiſt were born: and hence he was not ſollicitous to give rules what perſons, and ages were to be baptized, nor in what manner now, for that was known both then and many generations before he came, as well as we know it now: but he took up Baptiſm as he found it continued in the Chriſtian Church, only he inhanced the dignity of it by Sanctionating it for a Goſpel Sacrament.

So when he came among the Gentiles, he found that Magiſtracy and Civil Government had been among them in all generations, and he takes it up as he found it, and continues in the Chriſtian Church, only he inhanced the dignity of it in Sanctionating it now for a Goſpel Ordinance. And I muſt add for a Goſpel Mercy.

II. And that is it that I obſerve from the ſecond clauſe in the Text, They ſat upon them. A Chriſtian Magiſtracy is a Goſpel Mercy: Chriſtian Kings are Inthroned, and Chriſtian Magiſtrates are Impoured for a mercy unto Chriſtians. The context for ſeveral verſes together ſpeaks of ſeveral things, as Goſpel mercies: and my Text coming in the midſt of them ſpeaks of that that is of the ſame nature and qualification.

It was a Goſpel Mercy that the Devil was chained up that he ſhould deceive the Nations no more as he had done in the verſe before the Text.

It is a Goſpel Mercy that thoſe that ſuffer for Chriſt, and die for Chriſt, are not loſt, but reign with him in glory in this ſame verſe with the Text.

It was a Goſpel Mercy that the Heathen that had been ſo long dead in ignorance and all manner of ſinfulneſs ſhould have a Reſurrection and come to the life of grace and glory; in the fifth verſe.

And it is a Goſpel Mercy, in the Text, that Chriſtians are ſet up to be Kings, Rulers and Judges among Chriſtians.

We

We need not go far for proof of this, for the flouriſhing condition of England, both in Church and State under ſuch Government and Governors, gives evidence and example ſufficient in this caſe. And vox populi, the univerſal joy and acclamations of all the Nation upon the happy reſtoring of his Sacred Majeſty, ſpeaks the ſenſe and atteſtation of the whole Nation, nay of the three Nations unto the truth, and their ſenſibleneſs of this mercy. The ſhout of a King, of a moſt Chriſtian King was among them.

I know your own thoughts prevent me in the proof of this, and read the truth of it in this days occaſion; who is here that is a lover of right and honeſty, that is a ſon of peace and order, and deſerves indeed the name of a Chriſtian, whoſe heart rejoyceth not within him to ſee ſuch occaſion as theſe? Juſtice looking down upon us from Heaven: Deputies ſent us from our great King in Heaven as well as from his Sacred Majeſty, and they of our own Nation, Religion, Profeſſion, of the ſame Body, Church and Nation with our ſelves, adminiſter Judgment among us to relieve the oppreſſed, to pull the unjuſt gotten prey from the jaws of the cruel; to puniſh the evil, to incourage the good, and to cauſe Righteouſneſs to run down like a ſtream, and Judgment like a running brook.

If any deſire further proof, I muſt remit him to ſuch Prophetick prediction as theſe, Kings ſhall be thy nurſing Fathers, &c. And I will give them Judges of themſelves, and Rulers of their own people.

And let them but compare the difference of the Jews condition, when they were under the Government of Heathens in their own Land, Perſians, Grecians, Romans, and when they were under the Government of thoſe of their own Blood and Nation. And it deſerves more obſervation than moſt men beſtow upon it, that Paul appealed from the Bench of his own Nation, to a Heathen tribunal, a thing I believe hardly ever paralleld in that Nation; but it ſhews what a wretched condition they were then come unto. Now I call that a Goſpel Mercy.

1. That is for the benefit of thoſe that profeſs the Goſpel. And that Chriſtian Magiſtracy is ſo, he knows not the meaning of Chriſtianity and Chriſtian Magiſtracy that can deny it.

2. That is a Goſpel Mercy that is diſpenſed by Chriſt in a Goſpel way of diſpenſation, and that Chriſtian Magiſtracy is ſo I ſhall evidence to you by this demonſtration.

There is a Magiſtracy in Turkey, China, and Tartary, as well as in England, and there were a Senate at Rome, as well as a Parliament in England, and all diſpoſed by Chriſt who is made Lord of all: but there is as much difference betwixt the way of diſpenſation, as there is betwixt Chriſts ruling over all the World as he was Creator, and diſpenſing common bounty, and his ruling in his Church as Mediator, and diſpenſing peculiar mercy. As much as betwixt his ruling in all Nations as the Conqueror of all Gods enemies, and his ruling in his Church, as the Saviour and Mediator of his people. God hath made him Lord and Chriſt, Act. II. 36. There is more diſtinction in the words than many are aware of. He is Lord over all: He is Chriſt to his own choſen.

3. That is a Goſpel Mercy that doth promote and advance the efficacy of the Goſpel: And that a Chriſtian Magiſtracy doth ſo, if it need any proof I ſhall ſhew it by this one inſtance.

There are great promiſes in the Prophets, of mercy to be exhibited under the Goſpel, which ſeem incredible, and which ſome look for ſtill to be accompliſhed according to the letter, and hence their expectation of ſuch glorious times to come; whereas they are accompliſhed long ago and accompliſhing daily, but never were, nor ever ſhall be according to the letter. Such are

That in Eſa. II. 4. They ſhall beat their ſwords into plough-ſhares. And that in Eſa. XI. 6. The wolf ſhall dwell with the lamb. And that in Eſa. LXV. 20. There ſhall be no more thence an Infant of days, &c. What ſhall we ſay to theſe things? Were they ever fulfilled according to the letter? No, nor ever ſhall be.

And yet God is faithful, and hath performed his promiſe, he hath done his part of what was promiſed, and his own people partake of the promiſe: and why ſhould we look for any further?

There will be warrings in the World whilſt there are luſts in the World, for warrings come from luſts, Jam. IV. 1. And there will be luſts in the World, while there are men in the World, for every imagination of the thoughts of mens hearts are evil, only evil, and evil continually, Gen. VI. 5. But God hath done his part, he brought the Goſpel of peace into the World, that might have taught men and wrought men to better, but it is their own faults and wretchedneſs that they are not better. And though Saints of God have this promiſe accompliſhed in themſelves, and they are knit together in the unity of the Spirit and the bond of Peace; and what accompliſhment more can be expected?

And

And ſo there will be Woolviſh and Serpentine affections and actions of men in the World, where there is ſin in the World: and there will be ignorance in the World, and men will be infants in underſtanding, whilſt there is Fleſhlineſs and Worldlineſs in the World; yet God hath done his part, he hath brought the Goſpel into the World, that might tame mens brutiſh affections and curb their actions; and the Saints of God have this effect wrought upon them, but ſome men will be Wolves and Lions ſtill.

He hath brought the light and knowledge of the Goſpel into the World, that men need not to be infants in underſtanding; and the Saints of God that imbrace the Goſpel, come to be aged men in knowledge: but men will be ignorant ſtill.

Hath not God therefore performed his promiſe? As Eſa. V. 4. What could God have done more to this purpoſe than he hath done, in affording the means for the effecting of this, as much as could be afforded?

And here comes in the work and imployment of the Magiſtracy: God is ſo fully a performer of his promiſe, that he hath left the iſſue not only to the bare preaching of the Word, but he hath ordained alſo the Sword and Authority of the Magiſtracy, to reſtrain men from their fightings and brutiſhneſs, and to force them out of their wilful ignorance, when the only preaching of the Word will not perſwade them. As when the Prieſts with the ſounding of their Trumpets will not ſerve the turn to ſubdue Jericho, an hoſt of men of arms muſt be ready to aſſiſt the work and to do it.

It is in mercy to mens Souls that God hath ordained Magiſtracy, as well as it in mercy to their Eſtates, and for the ſecuring of their Perſons. It is a bond of love, whereby he would draw men from their own ruine and the ruining of others; a holy, tender and loving violence, whereby, when the Miniſtry of the Goſpel cannot perſwade them to be good, he would reſtrain them from being evil, and would conſtrain them to be better than they are. A holy violence that would make men good whether they will or no.

Such a mercy is a Chriſtian Magiſtracy: An Ordinance ſtamped with Chriſts own Kingly picture, and ſent for a token to his Church of ſpecial love and mercy: As Aaron in his breſt-plate of Judgment carried Urim and Thummim, Light and Perfection. So Magiſtrates in the Breſt-plate of Judgment, they always carry about with them, have written there as it were with Chriſts own finger, Power and Mercy: Power, derived from Chriſt to them, and mercy derived from Chriſt by them to the Church.

The Pagans and Infidels Magiſtracy that is among them, it is true, is an ordinance of Chriſt, Rom. XIII. 2. The powers that be are ordained of God. But theſe are but crums that fall from his Table of common providence, as he is the great Ruler of all the World. But Chriſtian Magiſtracy is a full furniſht Table of mercy from him, as the Father and cheriſher of his Church.

Mercy to our Eſtates for their preſervation, mercy to our Lives for their ſecurity, mercy to the Nation for its peace, mercy to Widows for their incouragement, mercy to the Goſpel for its maintaining, mercy to Souls for their reducing. Such a mercy is a Chriſtian Magiſtracy, and ſo is the end, and ſuch the fruit of the execution of their Office, the execution of Judgment, which is the third thing I have to ſpeak to from the third clauſe in the Text, and Judgment was given unto them.

III. He ſaith not Power, for that would not have included Judgment, but he ſaith Judgment which includeth alſo lawful power, yea and ſomething elſe, Righteouſneſs and Juſtice.

I am aſſured there is none that hear me this day, is ſo little acquainted with the ſtile of Scripture, but he knoweth that when it ſpeaketh of Judgment as the work of the Magiſtrate, it meaneth the execution of Juſtice or of right Judgment: Shall not the Judge of all the World do right? Gen. XVIII. 25. The very title of Judge ſpeaketh doing right, as it was with the Judge of all the World, ſo with the Judges of any part of it.

This, my Lords and Gentlemen, is your work and imployment to judge righteous Judgment, to plead the cauſe of the oppreſſed, to relieve the fatherleſs and widow, and him that hath no helper, to reward every one according to the Juſtice of his cauſe before you.

As you carry the ſtamp of Chriſts own image in your Power, ſo it is no whit to the life, if Juſtice be not ſtamped there alſo. And your being a mercy to the people, is by doing Juſtice to the people.

I ſhall not here go about to teach you what you have to do in your Imployment and Function. I am far from ſuppoſing that either you know not your duty, or that I know it better than your ſelves. Only give me leave to be your remembrancer a little of what is the charge that lies upon you: and that not by ſetting any rules before you, but by ſetting ſome Divine copies before you, moſt fairly written, upon which to look with a ſingle eye may be enough to ſtir you up to your duty: and that the more becauſe we are commonly more wrought upon men by example than by precept: I ſhall only propoſe three: two copied out by God in his own example; and the third, a ſingular copy ſet out in his Word. The firſt, I ſhall be bold, to offer to you of the Magiſtracy. The ſecond, to all that have to do with you at the preſent occaſion, Counſel, Jurors and Witneſſes; and the third, before all that hear me.

The firſt is this, You know Gods Attributes, Power, Mercy and Juſtice. Now God acteth not any of his Attributes according to the utmoſt extent of the infiniteneſs of it, but according to the moſt wiſe and moſt holy counſel and diſpoſal of his own Will. God never acted his Power according to the utmoſt infinity of his Power: for elſe whereas he made one World, he might have made a Thouſand.

He never acted his Mercy according to the utmoſt infinity of his Mercy, for then whereas he ſaveth but a little flock, he might have ſaved all Men and Devils.

Nor did he ever act his Juſtice according to the utmoſt infinity of his Juſtice, for then all fleſh would fail before him and the Spirits that he hath Created.

But his Will as I may ſpeak it, acts as Queen Regent in the midſt of his Attributes, and limits and confines their actings according to the ſacred diſpoſal of that.

So that he ſheweth his Power, not when and where he can, but when and where and how he will ſhew his Power: He ſheweth his Juſtice not when and where he can, but when and where he will ſhew his Juſtice: And he will ſhew Mercy, not on whom he can, but on whom he will ſhew Mercy, Rom. IX. 18.

Look upon this copy and then reflect upon your ſelves and your Function. You have your Attributes, let me ſo call them, of Power, Mercy, Intereſt in the people, and the like; now how are theſe to be acted by you? An unjuſt Magiſtrate, like him Luke XVIII. would be ready to miſwrite after the copy, and ſay, I will act theſe after mine own will, as God acteth his after his own will. No, he is miſtaken: let him look better on his Commiſſion. The Judgment that is put into his hand, is the Will of God put into his hand. As the Apoſtle ſaith, This is the Will of God, even your Sanctification: ſo This is the Will of God, even the Judgment that is given him; his Commiſſion carries it not, ſic velis ſic jubeas, do not thou with thy Power what thou wilt, but ſic volo ſic jubeo, Do in thine Office as it is my Will and as I Command.

The Sun in Heaven ſends down his ſhine upon the Earth, and we are to ſet all our dials by that light, and not by any candle of our own.

The Will of God as it is the rule of all his own actions, ſo he ſends down the beams of it in his Word to men to be the rule of theirs. By the Miniſtry, God puts his Will revealed in his Word into the hands of men, to do according to that rule, and not by any rule of their own Will. So the Commiſſion that he puts into the hands of the Magiſtracy, is the Will of God to act by, as he hath revealed in his Word, not to act according to their own mind. Not to ſhew Mercy, Juſtice, Power, and Favour as they pleaſe, but as Gods Will appears in their Commiſſion.

It was the cuſtom in Iſrael that when the King was Crowned, the book of the Law was put into his hand, the Will of God to be his rule, and not his own. So when Joſhua is made chief Magiſtrate, God inſtates him in his Power, and with all put the Law into his hand, Joſh. I. 8. This book of the Law ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, &c. And ſo at the Crowning of young Joaſh, 1 King. XI. 12. They put the Crown upon him and gave him the Teſtimony.

Look then upon the Copy that is before you, and look upon the Commiſſion he hath given you. His Will in Heaven acts all his glorious Attributes, and as I may ſpeak it with reverence, his Will rules them. He hath tranſcribed his Will in little in your Commiſſion, to act all yours: Now his Will be done by you upon Earth, as it is done by himſelf in Heaven.

A ſecond Copy, that I would preſent before you, and before all that have any thing to do with you at preſent about Judicature, Counſel, Witneſſes and Jurors, is Gods own righteouſneſs, and that eſpecially in one particular example. It is needleſs to tell you from Scripture, that the righteous God loves righteouſneſs, delights in righteouſneſs, practiſes righteouſneſs, commands righteouſneſs. That one acting of his does demonſtrate all theſe to admiration, and that is his Juſtice in juſtifying a ſinner. Much is ſpoken in Scripture of this righteouſneſs of God, and indeed never enough. My righteouſneſs is never to be revealed: To bring in everlaſting righteouſneſs: New Heavens and a new Earth wherein dwelleth righteouſneſs, &c. Never enough ſpoken, never enough conceived of this Righteouſneſs: the moſt myſterious acting of Heaven, the wonder of wonders among men, the Juſtice of God in juſtifying a ſinner: A Divine Juſtice that exceeds divine Juſtice, Divine Juſtice turned into Mercy. You may think I ſpeak ſtrangely: if I do it, I am ſomething excuſable, with Peter raviſhed with the Transfiguration. I am upon a ſubject that may ſwallow up all minds with amazement; but I clear my meaning.

In

In Rom. I. 17. It is said, Therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith. Revealed in the Gospel, not in the Law. Was there no revelation of Justice till the Gospel came? Yes, the Law revealed Justice, but it was condemning Justice; as that Text speaks, From faith to faith, so from righteousness to righteousness. Gods Justice was most divine that appeared in the Law to condemn, but that Justice exceeded in the Gospel to justifie. Where are they that talk of being justified by their own works? Then must they have a righteousness of their own, that must out-vy Gods condemning justice, which is infinitely just. But his own justifying justice doth out-vy it. As it is said, Where sin abounded, Grace did superabound: So where condemning Justice was glorious, justifying Justice was much more glorious.

I said, Justice was turned into mercy; I say, the greatest Justice into the greatest mercy. How are we justified and saved? By Mercy? True, and yet by Justice become mercy, not ceasing to be Justice, what it was, but becoming Mercy, what it was not. Here is a lively Copy before you; God so loveth, so acteth justice, that he will satisfie it upon his own Son, that he might glorifie it by way of mercy on all justified. His greatest mercy appeareth in this acting of his justice; and you are the greatest Mercy to a people when you do them the most Justice.

A third and last Copy that I would set before you all, that hear me this day, is fairly, yet seems strangly written with Gods own hand in the Gospel. In divers places of the New Testament, where mention is made of the Law, and where you would think it meant both the Tables, it comes off only with mention of the Second, Matth. XIX. 17. If thou wilt enter into life, keep the Commandments. You would look for all the Ten, but look forward, and he pitcheth only upon the second Table. So Rom. XIII. 8. He that loveth another hath fulfilled the Law. You would look for the whole Law to be mentioned there, but look forward in vers. 9. and only the second Table is mentioned. So Jam. II. 8. If you fulfil the Royal Law according to the Scripture, &c. you would look for the whole Law, but he concludes all under this, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thy self. Why, where are the Duties of the first Table? See, how God put even all religion in the second Table. As it is said, Behold! how he saved Lazarus; so, Behold! how God loveth honest, upright, charitable dealing 'twixt man and man.

I shall not insist, to shew you the reason of this strange passage. I might tell you it is, because whatsoever men pretend of Religion towards the Commands of the first Table, it is nothing, if it appear not in our obedience to the second. I might tell you, God puts you to that that is more in your own power, as to obey the second Table, is more so than the first. But I leave the Copy in your own hands to read and comment on. And when you have studied it the most, you will find this to be the result, how God requires, how God delights in our righteous, upright, charitable dealings one with another.

A SERMON PREACHED AT HERTFORD Aſſiſe,

March 13. 1663.

JUDG. XX. 27, 28.

And the Children of Iſrael enquired of the Lord. For the ark of the Covenant of the Lord was there in thoſe days. And Phinehas the ſon of Eleazar the ſon of Aaron ſtood before it in thoſe days.

AND it was time to enquire of the Lord, conſidering their preſent condition, and exigent: and it was well they had the Ark in thoſe days to enquire at, conſidering the evil of thoſe days, and their exceeding wickedneſs. And it was ſtrange that Phinehas was then there, conſidering the time of the ſtory, when he is thus brought in. The three clauſes in the Text, that hint their inquiring, and the manner of their inquiring, and the Perſon by whom; they inquired of the Lord, and they inquired at the Ark of the Covenant, and they inquired by Phinehas, require each one a ſerious explication; and each one explicated, it may be will afford ſomething of information, that every one hath not obſerved before.

I. They enquired of the Lord. And it was time to enquire indeed when buſineſs went ſo croſſly with them, that though the Lord himſelf had encouraged them to that war, yet they loſe ſo many thouſands in the battel. At their firſt muſtering they ask counſel of God, and he allows their quarrel, and appoints their Captain, verſ. 18. And the Children of Iſrael aroſe and went up to the houſe of God, and asked counſel of God, and ſaid which of us ſhall go up firſt to the battle againſt the Children of Benjamin? And the Lord ſaid, Judah ſhall go up firſt. And yet when they come to fight, they loſe two and twenty thouſand men, verſ. 21. They ask counſel of God again, and he bids them go up, and yet when they come to fight again they loſe eighteen thouſand men more. And now after the loſs of forty thouſand men, they inquire again, and indeed it was very full time.

But what was it they inquired about? If why they thus fell when God himſelf had encouraged them to the War, which was a very juſt Quære; Had I or you been there, we might have reſolved them without an Oracle. There is an accurſed thing in the midſt of thee, O Iſrael; and a very ſtrange accurſed thing, that it is not ſtrange, that thou canſt not ſtand, but falleſt thus before thine enemies.

In the Chapter before, a Levites Concubine plays the whore, and runs from him, and as he fetches her again, ſhe is paid in her kind, and whored with at Gibeah till it coſt her her life. Hereupon all Iſrael muſters in arms as one man, and ſolemnly vows and reſolves to avenge her quarrel. But in the Chapter before that, Idolatry is publickly ſet up in the Tribe of Dan. And in the Chapter before that, it is publickly enough ſet up in the the Town of Micah, and yet not one man, that ſtands up or ſtirs in the quarrel of the Lord. Oh Iſrael that art thus zealous in the quarrel of a Whore, and haſt been no whit zealous in the cauſe of the Lord, it is no wonder if thou fall and fall again before thine enemies.

So that it was the Juſtice of God that encouraged them to this war, and it had two parts to act. Firſt, To puniſh Iſrael for that Idolatry againſt which they ſtirred not, and now ſtirred ſo in the cauſe of a Strumpet. And then ſecondly, To puniſh Gibeah and Benjamin for the abominable fact about that Strumpet, the one for acting and the other for abetting it, and not delivering the offenders to deſerved puniſhment.

So that had they inquired why they fell ſo many in the war, when God himſelf had ſet them to it, this anſwer might eaſily have been given without asking at an Oracle; and no queſtion but Phinehas, or what other holy men were in the army, did ſadly obſerve it.

But before we paſs further, the obſervation, how God encourages them to this war, and yet foils them in it, minds me of two caſes, that are ſomething parallel, but only in this excepted, that they had not a precedent and dormant cauſe, why God ſhould ſo check, when he had commanded and encouraged, but only a preſent and emergent.

The one is Jacob commanded and encouraged by God to go from Haran to his own Country, and God promiſed to be with him, and yet Chriſt the Angel of the Covenant meets him by the way, wreſtles with him, ſeeks to kill him, and he eſcapes ſo narrowly, that he lamed him all his life. The emergent reaſon was, becauſe Jacob upon news of Eſau's coming with four hundred armed men, was ſorely ſhaken in his faith, foiled with diſtruſt, and ſends him a great multitude of cattel before he had tithed them, as his Vow was to do. Hence God that had commanded him, doth ſo check him; but he wept and made ſupplication, recovers his faith and ſcapes with life, though not with all his limbs.

The other is Moſes, commanded and encouraged by God to go for Egypt to deliver the people, and the power of miracles put into his hand: And yet Exod. IV. 24. It came to paſs by the way in the Inn, that the Lord met him, and ſought to kill him. The emergent cauſe was Moſes diſtruſt likewiſe: He had long declined the Employment, as doubting and pleading his own inſufficiency for it; and though God had given him this token, that he ſhould bring the people to worſhip God at that mountain, yet durſt not Moſes venture to leave his wife behind him, leſt he ſhould not come to ſee her any more, but takes her with him though now in childbed, and her child not yet eight days old, to be circumciſed. And for this diſtruſt God that had commanded him, yet doth check him with ſo great a danger. But he recovers his faith, ſcapes with life, ſends back his wife, and goes on his journey.

But theſe failings with theſe good men were ſuddain and emergent. This fault of Iſrael had been ſometime dormant, and they dormant under it; but now God awakens them with the alarm of a grievous ſlaughter; that if ever they will inquire about their condition and buſineſs, it is time for them to inquire now. But how do they do it?

II. And that is a ſecond thing to be inquired after. The Ark and Phinehas are here mentioned, becauſe their inquiry was by Phinehas, and his inquiry at the Ark.

And was it poſſible that Phinehas ſhould be then alive? He was one of the perſons that came out of Egypt, Exod. VI. 23. And it was three hundred and fifty years at leaſt, ſince they came out of Egypt, to the death of Sampſon, which you ſee is ſet before this ſtory in the XVI. Chap. let Phinehas be ſuppoſed to have been in the ſwaddles, when they came out, yet muſt he be at the leaſt three hundred and fifty years old, if he were alive at the death of Sampſon, which is far above the date, that the ages of men went at at that time. Before the Flood indeed the Patriarchs lived almoſt to a thouſand years. But at the Flood mans age was halved, ſo that none that was born after, lived up full to five hundred. At the Confuſion of Babel it was halved again; ſo that none born after that lived up, no not to two hundred and fifty, as is eaſie to obſerve by computing the Ages in Gen. XI. Nay the Ages of men ſtood not at that meaſure neither, but at the murmuring in the Wilderneſs, Numb. XIV. they were ſhortned again, and the common ſtint of mans life brought to ſeventy or eighty years, or thereabouts, as Moſes tells us in the XC. Pſalm. Which Pſalm was penned by him upon that very occaſion.

So that it is not ſo much as to be imagined, that Phinehas attained to three hundred and fifty years of age; which he did and more if the time of this ſtory were according to the order of placing it in this book. But as it is very uſual in Scripture to diſlocate ſtories out of their proper time and place, and that upon moſt divine reaſon; ſo it is done here; and indeed more ſignally, than in any other place whatſoever. This ſtory of of the war at Gibeah, and that before, of the Idolatry ſet up in Dan; and that before that, of the Idolatry ſet up by Micah in Mount Ephraim, being ſet in the latter end of the Book, which indeed for their proper time ſhould have place near the beginning. And that Firſt, Becauſe in Chap. II. 7. it is ſaid that Idolatry broke out among them, aſſoon as the firſt generation that had ſeen the wonders in the Wilderneſs was dead and gone. Now that Idolatry of the Danites, with the Idol of Micah, was the firſt publick breaking out. And thereupon Dan is omitted to be named among the ſealed of the twelve Tribes, Revel. VII.

Secondly, It is ſaid that this occurrence at Gibeah was, when no King, i. e. no Judge, in Iſrael was yet riſen. It is repeated three times over, Chap. XVIII. 1. Chap. XIX. 1. and Chap. XXI. 27. to point out, that theſe ſtories occurred, before any Judge was.

Thirdly, The wickedneſs at Gibeah is reckoned for the firſt notorious piece of villany in the Land, Hoſ. X. 9. O Iſrael thou haſt ſinned from the days of Gibeah.

Fourthly and laſtly, That paſſage in Judg. V. 8. ſpeaks clearly of this matter. They choſe new Gods; then was war in the gates: was there a ſhield or ſpear ſeen among forty thouſand in Iſrael? They choſe new Gods refers to the Idolatry in Dan. Then was war in the gates, to this Civil war in Gibeah in their own gates. Was ſhield or ſpear ſeen among forty thouſand? To the forty thouſand that fell in this war, as if neither ſhield nor ſpear had been among them.

I ſhall not trouble you with large diſcourſes to ſhew why theſe ſtories are diſplaced, and laid in this place, whereas they occurred ſo ſoon in the ſtory of this book. I ſhall only commend this to your Conception. Sampſon their laſt Judge, after whoſe death their ſeat declined, was of Dan: and their firſt publick Idolatry was in Dan. Sampſons life was ſold for eleven hundred ſhekels of ſilver of every Philiſtin Prince, Chap. XVI. 5. And then look at the eleven hundred ſhekels of ſilver conſecrated for making Micahs Idol, Chap. XVII. 2. which was ſet up in the Tribe of Dan, Chap. XVIII. 29. And you may eaſily perceive, that the Holy Ghoſt hath laid theſe ſtories thus together, that their ſin in Dan, and ſhame in the fall of Sampſon of Dan might be caſt up together. Their laſt Judge, Sampſon of Dan came to ſo fatal and unhappy an end, and no wonder for their firſt Idolatry was in Dan. And thus you ſee, how Phinehas is ſtill alive in this ſtory, and he named becauſe they inquired by him: and the Ark named becauſe he enquired at the Ark. Which is the third inquiry.

III. But how enquired he? By Urim and Thummim. So was Gods direction to them Numb. XXVII. 21. And Joſhua ſhall ſtand before Eleazar the Prieſt, who ſhall ask counſil for him after the Judgment of Urim before the Lord. As Joſhua the chief Commander in his time did enquire by Eleazar the father, ſo did the chief commander now by Phinehas the ſon, and both by the judgment of Urim and Thummim.

But how was that? There are ſo many opinions about what Urim and Thummim was, and ſo great obſcurities made, how the Oracle was given by it, that it may ſeem to require another Oracle to tell how that Oracle was given. I ſhall not tire you with diverſities of opinions, I ſhall briefly lay down ſome particulars concerning this thing, upon which I my ſelf am abundantly ſatisfied about it, and upon which I ſuppoſe any that is not over curious may receive ſatisfaction.

1. None but knows the Dreſs of the High Prieſt, Exod. XXVIII. and particularly the breſt-plate, the twelve ſtones, and the names of the twelve Tribes ingraven in upon them. And then it is ſaid at verſ. 30. And thou ſhalt put in the breſt-plate of judgment the Urim and Thummim. By the breſt-plate there is meant, as in verſ. 15, 16. viz. that piece of imbroidred work fourſquare, and doubled of a ſpan ſquare, in which the twelve precious ſtones were to be ſet. And by the Urim and Thummim is meant the twelve precious ſtones themſelves, which are called Urim or Lights, or Brightneſs, becauſe of their ſhineing Luſtre; and Thummim or Perfections, becauſe with moſt exact and perfect compacture they were all ſet and fixed in a plate, and border of gold in that embroidred piece, or that piece of cloth of gold.

2. The inquiry by Urim and Thummim was not upon any private occaſion, nor by a private man; but by the Prince or Commander in chief, and that in ſome matter that concerned the whole Nation. This might be largely cleared, but needeth not; only this I cannot but obſerve, that till Solomons time there is mention and example of this enquiring by Urim: by Joſhua, here in the Text, by Saul, by David, but after Solomons time no ſuch mention: not becauſe the Oracle then failed, but becauſe till David had done the work, the whole Land, in the full extent that God had promiſed, namely to Euphrates, was not conquered. And therefore in thoſe times this Oracle was ſtiring for the direction of the Prince or chief Commander in that expedition and employment.

3. There was no enquiring of any Prieſt by Urim, who was not inſpired by the Spirit of Propheſie. And hence it is that, as the Jews well obſerve, after the firſt generation after the return out of Captivity, the Oracle by Urim and Thummim, was not under the ſecond Temple at all: becauſe thenceforward there never was any High Prieſt, that had the Spirit of Propheſie, or divine Inſpiration. The caſe of Caiaphas was ſingular, and it was but once, XI. Joh. 51. Being High Prieſt that year he propheſied. The emphaſis and main reaſon lies in that year: that year when Viſion and Propheſie ſhould be ſealed, that year, when the Spirit ſhould be poured down in ſo abundant a meaſure, as it was, Act. II. He being High Prieſt that year, had one drop of that ſhowre of divine Inſpiration that fell that year, and he Propheſied. But before him had there been no High Prieſt, that was indued with the Spirit of Propheſie from the times of Nehemiah, Chap. VII. 65. and accordingly not the Oracle by Urim and Thummim.

4. That Oracle therefore was not given by any audible Voice from off the Ark, nor by riſing of the letters of the Names of the Tribes in the precious ſtones, that ſhould ſpel out the anſwer, for two or three letters in the Alphabet were wanting in thoſe Names: nor was it by change of Colour in the letters or ſtones, as is conceited by ſome; but the manner of inquiring and receiving anſwer was thus. The High Prieſt with all his Habiliments on, particularly the Breſt-plate with the twelve precious ſtones in it upon his breſt, the Names of the twelve Tribes ingraven in the ſtones, ſtood before the Ark, only the Vail between, and ſo he preſented the Names, and repreſented the Perſons of the twelve Tribes before God. He propoſed the thing that was inquired, as Phinehas here in the Name of the People, ſhall I go up againſt my Brethren? And the Lord preſently inſpired him with immediate Revelation, diſcovering to him what was his mind in that caſe, and ſo he told it the people. As Phinehas here, Go up now againſt Benjamin again, and you ſhall prevail.

And thus have we done with the Hiſtorical concernment of the Text. And now inſtead of any doctrinal Obſervations upon it, I might take into Conſideration three material inquiries, which lie fairly hinted in the three parts I have ſpoken to.

I. From the firſt part, that ſpeaks of the Children of Iſraels inquiring of the Lord, we may be juſtly moved to inquire, how the Children of England may inquire of the Lord in their doubtings or perplexities as Iſrael did.

II. From the ſecond part that ſpeaks of the Ark being there in thoſe days, it may juſtly call upon us to conſider, why or whereupon the Ark carried that Name and Title that it doth here, and in many other places? viz. The Ark of the Covenant.

III. From the third and laſt part, that ſpeaks of their enquiring by Phinehas the High Prieſt, it may juſtly move this Quære, whether the High Prieſt were Prophetick or Oracular by his Function? I take the hint for this, from the Rhemiſts note upon Caiaphas his Propheſying, Joh. XI. 50. where they ſay, that the gifts of the Holy Ghoſt followed his Order and Office, though he were ſo wicked; and ſo bring it home to Peters chair, that the Pope ſitting there cannot want the Spirit.

I ſhall eſpecially pitch upon the two firſt, Namely, to take up that Inquiry, Why the Ark was called the Ark of the Covenant? And the reſolution of that Quære will help not a little to reſolve the firſt, as to the maineſt things, that we are to enquire of the Lord about.

How frequently the Ark is called by this title, The Ark of the Covenant, I need not inſtance: hundreds of places do evidence it. But what could any one ſee in the Ark, that might ſpeak Gods Covenant? There was indeed the Mercy ſeat upon it, and the two Cherubims at the ſeveral ends of it, and the cloud oft between, and this was all that any Iſraelite could ſee, that looked upon it. But this was not that that intitled it to that Title; but the two Tables of the Law that were in it. And ſo Moſes himſelf doth make the expoſition, Exod. XXXIV. 28. He wrote upon the Tables the words of the Covenant, the ten Commandments. Deut. IX. 11. At the end of forty days and forty nights, the Lord gave me the two Table of ſtone, the Tables of the Covenant. And to ſpare more inſtances you find the terms Covenant and Commands to be convertible, or to mean one and the ſame thing, Pſal. CV. 8. He hath remembred his Covenant, the word which he Commanded. And Pſal. CXI. 9. He Commanded his Covenant for ever. He Commanded his Covenant; a ſtrange expreſſion, and a comfortleſs expreſſion as one would think: his Covenant to be nothing but a company of impoſſible Commands: his Covenant to be nothing but a Law, the Miniſtration of which, the Apoſtle tells us, was the Miniſtration of death, II Cor. III. As he, I thought he would have ſtroked his hand over the ſore, and prayed, and he bids only, Go waſh in Jordan. So one would think, it ſhould be ſaid, He hath promiſed, tendred, ingaged his Covenant, and it comes off only with this, He hath Commanded his Covenant.

And here we are come to the great queſtion, Under what notion the Moral Law ſtands in the Covenant of grace? You know who they were, that have held, and I doubt too many many hold it at this day, that to Iſrael it was a Covenant of Works, and thereupon infer, that Chriſtians are delivered from the obligation of the Moral Law, becauſe they are not under the Covenant of Works, but the Covenant of Grace. And accordingly they underſtand that diſtinction of the old Covenant and new, mentioned ſo much by the Apoſtle in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, that the old Covenant means the Moral Law, and the new Covenant the Goſpel. To theſe men let me firſt ſpeak in the ſtyle of God to Abraham, Gen. XV. 5. Look up to Heaven and count the Stars, if thou canſt number them. So look up to Heaven, and ſee the old Moon and the new, and obſerve them. Are they really two ſeveral Moons? No, but one and the ſame Moon under various ſhapes. Or look on the Earth, upon a perſon now Regenerated; he was before an old Creature, now he is a new, II Cor. V. 17. What is he now a really diſtinct perſon from what he was before? No, but of a different condition only: the ſame man, but his condition and temper changed. So the Covenant of Grace is the ſame, like Chriſt the chief Tenor of the Covenant, yeſterday and to day and the ſame for ever: the ſame from the firſt day that it was given to Adam, to the laſt day of the World, and till Time ſhall be no more. The ſame under the Law, the ſame under the Goſpel, but clothed in different garments, in adminiſtrations of various faſhions.

The Covenant of Grace to the Jew, was Believe in Chriſt and be ſaved, as it is to us, as the Apoſtle clears in all his Epiſtles, more particularly in Heb. XI. But to them God added thus, Becauſe the Doctrine of Chriſt is not yet ſo clear, uſe theſe Ceremonies; which figure out the actings and Office of Chriſt, the Prieſthood his Mediating, the Sacrifices his Death, cleanſing with Blood his purging of Sin, and the like. And becauſe no other people is yet to be admitted to the Church and true Religion, but themſelves, uſe theſe Ceremonies, to diſtinguiſh you from all other people, till time come, that the Gentiles come to be admitted. So that theſe Ceremonies were not the Covenant of Grace to them, nor a Covenant of Works to them, but only the manner and mode of the adminiſtration of the Covenant of Grace, till the Goſpel ſhould come; which when it came, and Chriſt was come, then the Doctrine of Chriſt was clear; and all Nations were come in, then were theſe Ceremonies laid aſide, and a clean different adminiſtration of the Covenant of Grace brought in; and under theſe reaſons are theſe different adminiſtrations called the old and new Covenant. So that the Ceremonial part of the Law is called the old Covenant, but the Moral doth not fall under that title, nor vaniſh as the other did.

And ſecondly, To theſe that we are ſpeaking of, let me propoſe this queſtion, Did God go backward in his Covenanting, firſt to give a Covenant of Grace to Adam, when he had broke his Covenant of Works, and after to give a Covenant of Works to Iſrael, and to lay by his Covenant of Grace? The Sun in the ſky ſtood ſtill once, and went backward once: but the glorious Son of Righteouſneſs that roſe in the Covenant of Grace, the firſt day of Adam, never ſtood ſtill, never went back, but is ſtill keeping his courſe, to ſave by Grace, to ſave in the Covenant of Grace, and not by Works; If I go to Jonathans houſe again, ſaith Jeremy, I ſhall ſurely die; and if God ſend man back to a Covenant of Works, when Adam himſelf failed in his Covenant of Works, man is but loſt for ever.

And thirdly, Let us read the Draught of the Covenant it ſelf; This Indenture made betwixt the great God, and poor duſt and aſhes, ſinful and miſerable, witneſſeth, That God of his infinite Love, and Grace, and Mercy, doth promiſe, and demiſe, and let to this poor creature, Grace and Glory, intereſt in himſelf and Heaven. Provided always, That man keep his Law, and do thoſe Commands that God lays upon him. For God could not make a Covenant of Grace, but it muſt include Commandments and a Law: unleſs he would have conditioned thus with him, Do what thou wilt, live as thou wilt, Eat, Drink, Revel, be Epicure, be Atheiſt, and yet thou ſhalt enjoy me for ever, thou ſhalt be bleſſed for ever. We may tremble at ſuch Language. The Stool of wickedneſs could do no more. And how cheap and vile a thing were God, if to be enjoyed on ſuch terms as theſe. Man as he is a Creature muſt have a Law from his Creator, or elſe God ſhould reſign his authority, and let man be his own God. Our obedience to God is founded in God himſelf: If God be God ſerve him: an argument ſo urgent that tis never to be diſſolved. And therefore that clauſe is ſet before the ten Commandments, and ſet after divers Commands afterwards, I am the Lord, as an argument ſufficient to challenge obedience. There is nothing can diſſolve the bond of mans obedience to his Creator, unleſs God would ceaſe to be God, for if God be God ſerve him.

And therefore the Covenanting for Grace is ſo far from abating of a Law to be laid upon man, that it requires it the more: becauſe in that he is not looked upon only as a Creature, to ſerve his Creator; but as a Creature, that is to enjoy his Creator. Accordingly when God created Adam, he wrote a Law in his Heart, and made a Covenant with him upon the full terms of the Law for perfect obedience, and this is commonly called called his Covenant of Works with Adam. The ſhort Draught of that Covenant is this, If thou performeſt perfect obedience according to the tenor of this Law, To love the Lord with all thy heart, &c. thou ſhalt be bleſſed, and enjoy God for ever; if not then thou ſhalt be curſed, and periſh for ever. Now obſerve the two contrary parts of this Propoſal of God, which we cannot but conceive to have been the tenor of the Covenant of Works with him. Firſt, The Promiſſory part, If thou performeſt perfect obedience, thou ſhalt be ſaved. There is mercy, that God promiſeth Salvation, as well as Juſtice that he requires obedience. For Adams obedience was due from him as a Creature, though there had been no Salvation for him. But in the Threatning part there was nothing but Juſtice, If thou performeſt not perfect obedience, thou ſhalt periſh: and all the equity in the World in it. For as ſuch obedience was due from him to God, ſo was he then able to perform it, and deſerved perdition, if he did not.

But Adam fell, and that Covenant of Grace came in; and then what became of the equity of that Law? Did the Covenant of Grace extinguiſh Gods juſt claim of mans obedience? Nay, of mans perfect obedience? No, for God muſt not loſe one tittle of his right and due; but that Grace that made the Covenant did contrive that Chriſt muſt pay the perfect obedience, and the believer the beſt obedience he can. As he under the Law that could not reach a Lamb, &c. his ſacrifice was not remitted, but that ſacrifice abated, and he was to bring what he could, two Turtles: So man is now grown poor, and cannot perform perfect obedience, yet the Covenant of Grace doth not remit his obedience, but abates the execution; takes perfect obedience in his behalf from Chriſt, but requires the perfecteſt he can perform from him too. So that a ſinner, though he cannot perform obedience, is not therefore acquitted from the Laws challenge of obedience; nor a Believer, though Chriſt has paid perfect, nay infinite obedience for him, yet he is not acquitted from obeying the beſt he can. And the reaſon is, becauſe nothing can diſannul Gods juſt claim of obedience from his creature.

So that this Law of obedience being founded in Gods being God, and in our being his creatures, it is impoſſible that God ſhould make a Covenant with man for Grace and Salvation, and this not be included. Now though in the Covenant of Grace it ſtands not as in Adams Covenant of Works, as by the performance of which to be juſtified, yet doth it ſo ſtand in it, as without Works performed there is no participation of God, nay without which the Covenant is no Covenant. What is ſaid of the Sacramental Elements, the like may be ſaid in this caſe. Elementum, adde verbum, & fit Sacramentum. Here are the Elements, add the word of inſtitution, and it becomes a Sacrament. So hoc eſt promiſſum, adde legem, & fit fœdus. Here is the promiſe, add the Law, and it is a Covenant. For though Promiſe and Covenant be ſometimes convertible, yet the Promiſe barely conſidered is not the Covenant, without the Conditions of the Law affixed to it. And under this notion, in Gods own Language, the Commandments of God are the Covenant of God; Pſal. CIII. 18. To thoſe that keep his Covenant, which is explained in the next clauſe, which remember his Commandments to do them. They that keep his Covenant? One would think it ſhould be, To thoſe to whom he keeps his Covenant. But herein the main ſtreſs of the matter lies, if they keep his Commandments, there is no doubt of the God of Truth performing his promiſe. As the ſtreſs of Gods reconciliation to man is laid mainly in Scripture upon mans being reconciled to God, II Cor. V. 19. God was in Chriſt reconciling the World unto himſelf; Col. I. 20. To reconcile all things to himſelf: Not ſo much himſelf to the World, as the World to himſelf: not ſo much himſelf to all things, as all things to himſelf: for here is the great buſineſs to get man reconciled unto God, and then no doubt of Gods being reconciled to man. So there is no doubt of Gods performing his promiſe of Grace and Salvation, but the great buſineſs is, mans performing his part and keeping his Law.

And thus having ſpoken to that Queſtion, which in our enumeration came the ſecond, Why the Ark is called the Ark of the Covenant? It hath made ſome way to anſwer the firſt, How may Chriſtians inquire of God in their doubtings, as Iſrael did here and elſewhere, in theirs?

I muſt anſwer briefly, and that in the Words of Gods himſelf, Eſa. VIII. 29. To the Law and to the Teſtament. To the written Word of God. Search the Scriptures. As you might appeal to Balaam to bear witneſs concerning the bleſſedneſs of Iſrael, whereas he was called forth to curſe them: So for the proof of this matter, viz. That there is now no other way to enquire of God, but only from his Word; you may appeal to thoſe very Scriptures, that they produce, that would maintain, that there are Revelations and Inſpirations ſtill, and that God doth ſtill very often anſwer his People by them.

They produce that, That they ſhall all be taught of God, that is, ſay they, All the Saints ſhall be taught by the Spirit; but that paſſage aims a clean other way, as relating to the Gentiles, as it doth in Eſa. LIV. 13. hence it is quoted: It means that whereas they in their Heathen blindneſs had been taught of the Devil by his Oracles, Prophets, Pythoneſſes, neſſes and the like; God would bring in the Goſpel among them, and ſo they now ſhould be taught of God. Or as relating to the Jews, as Chriſt applies it, Joh. VI. 45. the meaning is, that whereas they had been taught by men, either by Scribes and Phariſees, which were evil men, or by holy Prieſts and Prophets, which were but men, they ſhould in time be taught, and now were of God himſelf; Chriſt Preaching among them, as the Apoſtle obſerves, Heb. I. 1.

They produce that, Heb. VIII. 11. And they ſhall not teach every one his neighbour and every man his brother, ſaying, Know the Lord, for all ſhall know me from the leaſt to the greateſt: from Jer. XXXI. whereas the meaning is but this, that by the Word of the Goſpel ſhould come in ſo clear light, and ſo great means of knowledge, that none but might know God, if they would ſeek to know him. And to the very ſame ſence and tenor ſpeaks that ſtrange expreſſion, Eſa. LXV. 20. There ſhall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days, for the child ſhall dye an hundred years old. That is, there ſhall be ſo clear and great means of knowledge by the Goſpel, that none needed to be a child in underſtanding, if they would but labour to know: and that even the young child might ſpeak it ſelf to be, as it were, an hundred years old for knowledge, if men would apply themſelves to the means afforded for knowledge.

They produce that, in I Joh. II. 27. The anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you, &c. Whereas the Apoſtle himſelf doth explain what that anointing is, namely Truth; But as the ſame anointing teacheth you of all things and is Truth: which is the very common title of the Goſpel in the Goſpel. To ſpeak fully to this matter I ſhould clear this,

I. That after God had compleated and ſigned the Scripture Canon, Chriſtians muſt expect Revelations no more. It was promiſed by God, that he would pour down of his Spirit in the laſt days, but it means the laſt days of Jeruſalem; and when ſhe had finiſhed her days, and ſeen her laſt, the Spirit in ſuch kind of effuſion is to be looked for no more.

II. I ſhould ſhew, that the Scripture containeth all things neceſſary for us to know or to enquire of God about. Tis not for you to know the times and the ſeaſons, Act. I. Tis not for Peter to enquire what ſhould become of John; What is that to him? Joh. XXI. 22. But what is neceſſary for us to know, to the Law and to the Teſtimony, there you may learn it. I need not to tell you that you may enquire there and learn what to believe, what to do, what to avoid, how to demean your ſelves towards God, towards your Neighbours, towards your Selves, how to come to Heaven and the like. For I hope none come hither at this time upon the preſent occaſion, but have conſulted with this Oracle to direct them, Whether to go to ſuite with their Neighbour or no, how to bear Witneſs, how to Counſil, how to Determin. But the common curioſity of men is ready to enquire, how ſhould I know my Fortune? Why I may tell them from this Oracle, if I may uſe the term Fortune in ſuch a caſe, Eſa. III. 10, 11. Say ye to the righteous, it ſhall be well with him, for they ſhall eat the fruit of their doings. Wo unto the wicked, it ſhall be ill with him, for the reward of his hands ſhall be given him.

But ſhall I propoſe a caſe of the greateſt concernment that a man can poſſibly enquire about, and that is, How ſhall I know, whether my ſins are pardoned, whether I have the favour and love of God, whether I ſhall be ſaved? At Urim and Thummim they never enquired about any of theſe things; and I believe ſuch queſtions were rarely propoſed by any to any Prophet. And yet this Oracle we are ſpeaking of, the Law and Teſtimony, will reſolve this Quære, as far as is needful for any man to know, ſo little are we behind them in the advantage of inquiring of God.

Is there any here that propoſeth this queſtion from a good heart, and for a good end? Let me cloſe with him in the words of God, Eſa. XXI. 12. If ye will enquire, enquire ye.

But firſt let me tell him, That a man may be ſaved, though he do not know he ſhall be ſaved, till he come to Salvation. And I doubt not but there are many in Heaven, that were never certain that they ſhould come there, till they came thither. A good man may die doubting, fearing, trembling, and yet his eſtate be ſure for bleſſedneſs, though he be never aſſured of it, till he enjoy it. For it is Faith that ſecures Salvation, and is abſolutely neceſſary for it, Aſſurance is not ſo abſolutely neceſſary. If he kill me, yet will I truſt in him, ſaith Job. A ſtrong Faith, but little Aſſurance; and yet his eternal ſtate ſecure enough.

Secondly, A man may have Faith and yet not know that he hath it. As how many of the dear Saints of God have groned under this doubtfulneſs? And anſwerably a man may have Certainty of Salvation, as to the thing it ſelf, though not Aſſurance as to his own apprehenſion. I deny not all this while, that Aſſurance may be had, though it be not obtained by all; and that it is to be ſtriven after according to that, give all diligence to make your calling and election ſure.

But to the coming to satisfaction upon this inquiry, do as the Priest in his inquiries, put on the brest-plate, and go and stand before the Ark of the Covenant, and there inquire. Bring your Covenant to face the Law, and then consult with it. For this purpose consider these properties of Conscience.

1. The actings of Conscience are only about things twixt us and God.

2. The actings of Conscience in this case, and indeed in all, are not directly, but by reflexion: the very name of Conscience imports no less, a knowledge by reflection. Thus a sinner by his Conscience knows he hath sinned. How? By reflecting on the Law, knows he hath deserved wrath by the Law.

3. As Conscience condemns, in the same method it comforts and acquits. In Rom. II. 15. Conscience accuses or excuses in the same way; both by reflexion upon a Law. For

4. The ultimate resolution in this inquiry must be from the Mandatory part of the Covenant, not the Promissory. Many a man deceives himself, undoes himself by judging his case from the promises, and not taking his Resolution thence whence it should come, viz. his Conscience, and Gods Commandments laid together. God hath promised pardon, mercy, salvation, therefore I doubt not, saith a secure soul, but all will be well with me. But how knowest thou these promises belong to thee? Go to the Mandatory part of the Covenant, the Moral and Evangelical Law: and lay Conscience to that, as face and glass, and there what seest thou? The Law commands thus and thus: look in Conscience, hast thou done thus? If so, thou mayst conclude that thou shalt participate of the promises that are affixt to such Commandments. Thou canst not look on the Sun in Heaven, but mayst see it in a pail of water. Thou canst not immediately discover whether God loves thee, has pardoned thee, intend thee for Salvation; but thou canst do it by reflexion twixt Law and Conscience, twixt this and the Conditions of the Covenant. Peter does not conclude, Lord, thou lovest me, but Lord I love thee. Look on the Command, Love the Lord, then look in Conscience, and that gives the reflexion; and so thou mayest be secured.

A

PREACHED AT

HERTFORD Aſſiſe,

March 29. 1663.

PET. III. 13.

Neverthelesſ we according to his promiſe, look for new Heavens, and new Earth, wherein dwelleth righteouſnes.

IT is well they might ſo, and had warrant of promiſe ſo to do, otherwiſe where had their expectation been? The verſes immediately before ſpeak nothing but devaſtation and ruine of Heaven and Earth, and if there had been nothing beyond that to be looked after, their hopes and expectancy had been ruined alſo: but we, ſays our Apoſtle, look for new Heavens and a new Earth.

But of what nature they, is all the queſtion. I doubt ſome men conſtrue theſe words of the Apoſtle as far diſtant from his ſenſe almoſt, as the Earth is diſtant from the Heavens: whilſt they conceive from hence, that after the diſſolution of all things yet there ſhall be a renewing of Heaven and Earth, and they ſhall be as before, as to their ſubſtance and form, only their quality changed. To this they apply, Rom. VIII. 19, 20. For the earneſt expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifeſtation of the Sons of God, &c.

They would make our Apoſtle ſay Sibboleth whether he will or no: whereas he ſpeaks Shibboleth plain enough to a far differing ſenſe.

For the diſcovery of his meaning, have patience a little, whilſt I make this obſervation clear unto you, which may be uſeful to you in reading ſeveral places of Scripture.

That the ruine and deſtruction of Jeruſalem and the Jewiſh commonwealth and œconomy, is ſet forth in Scripture in ſuch expreſſions, as if it were the deſtruction and diſſolution of the whole world. Moſes beginneth this ſtile in Deut. XXXII. 22. where he is ſpeaking of that vengeance. For a fire is kindled in mine anger and it ſhall burn to the loweſt hell, and it ſhall conſume the earth with her increaſe, and ſet on fire the foundations of the mountains. Would you not think that the diſſolution of all things were in mention? Look upon the context and you find it to mean no other than the deſtruction of that Nation. Jeremy yet higher, Chap. IV. 23. I beheld the earth, and lo, it was without form and void: and the heavens, and they had no light: You would think all the world were returning there to her old chaos again. Add yet further, I beheld the mountains, and lo they trembled, and all the hills moved lightly. I beheld, and lo, there was no man, and all the birds of the heavens were fled. You would think that the whole univerſe were diſſolving, but look but in the 27 verſ. and it ſpeaks no other than the diſſolution of that people, For thus hath the Lord ſaid, The whole land ſhall be deſolate.

Our Saviour yet higher, Matth. XXIV. 29. The ſun ſhall be darkned, and the moon ſhall not give her light, and the ſtars ſhall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens ſhall be ſhaken. And then ſhall appear the ſign of the Son of man, &c. who would not conclude that theſe expreſſions mean no other thing in the world, than the laſt diſſolution of the World and Christs coming to Judgment: yet look well upon the context and it speaketh plainly that the meaning is only of the dissolving of the Jews City and State: and Christ speaks it out most plainly at vers. 34. where he asserts, that that present generation should not pass till all those things were fulfilled.

The beloved Disciple follows his Masters stile upon the very same subject in the sixth of his Revelation, where after he had described the means of the destruction of this wretched people under the opening of certain seals, by Sword, Famine and Plague; he comes at last in vers. 12, 13, 14. to speak their final dissolution it self in the very like terms. The Sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the Moon became as blood. And the stars of Heaven fell unto the Earth, and the Heavens departed as a scroll that is rolled together, and every mountain and Island were removed out of their places. One would think the final dissolution of all the world were spoken of: but look in the 16th verse and you find the very same words that our Saviour applies to the destruction of that people, Luke XXIII. 30. They said unto the mountains fall on us, and hide us, &c. Our Apostle Peters meaning is no other in the expression before my Text, where when he speaks of the Heavens being dissolved by fire, the Earth and the works therein burnt up, and the elements melting with fervent heat, he intends no other thing, then the dissolving of their Church and œconomy by firy vengance, the consumption of their State by the flame of Gods indignation, and the ruine of their elements of Religion by Gods fury. Not the Elements in Aristotles sense, of Fire, Air, Earth and Water, but the Elements in his brother Pauls sense whom he mentions presently after my Text, the carnal and beggerly Elements of their Mosaick rites and traditionary institutions.

By this time you plainly see in what sense The new Heavens and the new Earth is to be taken in the Text: but for the fuller and clearer understanding of these things still, give me yet a little further patience to shew you, that as the destruction of that old World of the Jewish people and œconomy is uttered by such expressions, as if it were the destruction of the whole universe; so the times going near before, and concurrents going along with that destruction, are phrased by expressions also sutable. And this I shall observe to you in four heads.

I. There is much mention of the last days in Scripture, which in most places is not to be understood of the last days of the World, as some take them, and so mistake, but of the last days of Jerusalem and the Jewish State. And indeed the greatest mercies that were promised to that people were promised to occur in those last days, as Esa. II. 2. Hos. III. 5. Joel II. 28. as he is cited by this our Apostle, Act. II. 17. these things are not to be allotted to the last days of the World, but to the last days of that City; as Peters very allegation out of Joel makes it plain, if there were no more proof. Now, saith he, is fulfilled that which was spoken by the Prophet Joel, In the last days I will pour out, &c. These are the last days, there intended, and now the thing hath received its accomplishment. For how improper is it to construe him in such a sense as some do, This is that which Joel foretold should come to pass in the last days of the world two or three thousand years hence?

And so on the contrary the worst of men and times are foretold to be in those last days of Jerusalem, because they did not improve those mercies, I Tim. IV. 4. and II Tim. III. 1. and our Apostle in the third verse of this Chapter; let the Apostle John explain all, I Joh. II. 18. Little children, it is the last time, and as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists whereby we know that it is the last time.

II. In such a sense are such Phrases as these to be understood, I Cor. X. 11. Upon whom the ends of the World are come. Not the very best times of the World, for the World hath lasted sixteen hundred years since Paul spake that; and how long yet it may last, who knoweth: but the end of that old World of the Jewish State, which then hasted on very fast. In the same sense are the words of our Apostle in his first Epistle, Chap. IV. 7. The end of all things is at hand; Not the end the World but of that City, Nation and œconomy: the like is that James V. 9. Behold the Judge standeth before the door; and divers other of the like nature.

III. The vengance of Christ upon that people in that final destruction, is set out and called, his coming, his coming in his Kingdom, and in clouds, and with power and great glory. His coming, Joh. XXI. 22. In his Kingdom, Matth. XVI. ult. In power and glory, Matth. XXIV. 30. Nor is this any figure, for observe, vers. 34. This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled. Accordingly the day of that vengeance is called The day of the Lord.

IV. The state of the Church and Gospel after that dissolution, of that old World, is called sometimes the World to come, Heb. II. 5. sometimes new Heavens and new Earth, as in the Text; sometimes all things new, as II Cor. V. 17. Old things are past away, behold, all things are become new.

So

So that by this time you ſee plainly the meaning of our Apoſtle at this place. In the verſes before he ſpeaks of the diſſolution of the Jewiſh Church and State in ſuch terms as the Scripture uſeth to expreſs it by, as if it were the diſſolution of the whole World: And in the words of the Text, of the new face and ſtate of the Church and World, upon the diſſolution when a new people and new œconomy took place: We according to his promiſe.

The promiſe is in Eſa. LXV. 17. For behold I create new Heavens and a new Earth. Where if you look into the context before, you ſhall find the ſenſe juſtified that I put upon the words, and theſe new Heavens and new Earth, created after the Jews caſting off and deſtruction. It is a ſtrange opinion that would perſwade you that the moſt glorious things that are foretold by the Prophets ſhould come to paſs when the Jews are called, which calling is yet expected: whereas thoſe glorious things are plainly enough intimated to come to paſs at the Jews caſting off. I might name many places: I ſhall not expatiate upon that ſubject here: this very Chapter ſpeaks enough to juſtifie what I ſay. In the ſecond verſe God complains, I have ſpred out my hands all the day long to a rebellious people. This the Apoſtle in the tenth of the Romans and the laſt, applies unto that people. But to Iſrael he ſaith, All the day long have I ſtretched forth my hand to a diſobedient and gainſaying people.

The Prophet along the Chapter telleth what ſhall become of that people. At verſ.6. I will not keep ſilence, but will recompence, even recompence into their boſom, Your iniquities, and the iniquities of your fathers together (ſaith the Lord) which have burnt incenſe upon the mountains, and blaſphemed me upon the hills, therefore, &c. At verſ. 12. I will number you to the ſword, and ye ſhall all bow down to the ſlaughter. At verſ. 13. Behold my ſervants ſhall eat, but ye ſhall be hungry, &c. At verſ. 15. You ſhall leave your name for a curſe to my choſen. And then follows the promiſe that is related to in the Text, For behold I create new Heavens and a new Earth.

Though you are gone yet all the World ſhall not be gone with you. For though I deſtroy my old people, the old Heavens and Earth, of the old œconomy, yet I ſhall provide my ſelf a new people of the Gentiles, when the Jews ſhall be a people no more: and when that old World is deſtroyed, I will create new Heavens and a new Earth.

Such another paſſage is that of our Saviour, Matth. XXIV. 31. where when he had deſcribed the ruine of the Jewiſh Nation in the terms we have ſpoken of before; and it might be queſtioned, what then ſhall become of a Church, and where ſhall it be? The Son of man, ſaith he, ſhall ſend his Angels or Miniſters, with the ſound of the trumpet, of the Goſpel, and they ſhall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of the Heaven to the other, among all Nations.

Thus had Peter read this great promiſe in Eſay the Evangelical Prophet, thus had he heard it from the mouth of the great Prophet, his ſacred Maſter; and therefore it is no wonder, if when it is confirmed by the mouth of two ſuch witneſſes, he undoubtedly look for new Heavens and a new Earth according to ſuch a promiſe. But what is meant by righteouſneſs in this place?

1. Not Gods primitive or diſtributive righteouſneſs or juſtice: for that was ever, Gen. XVIII. The Judge of all the World did right ever ſince the World was: In the old World, in all the World, and the ſame for this yeſterday and to day and for ever.

2. Not that men were more righteous toward the latter end of the World, than before, as ſome dream of ſuch glorious things yet to come: for there is no ſuch promiſe in all the Scripture. True indeed that promiſe of ſuch glorious things was in the laſt days of Jeruſalem; but where is any promiſe of any ſuch things in the laſt days of the World?

3. Nor doth it mean the glorified eſtate, for where do you find righteouſneſs applied to that eſtate? It is commonly applied to the ſtate of believers here.

4. Therefore it means juſtification of ſinners, or that righteouſneſs by which they are juſtified.

The righteouſneſs of God, which is witneſſed by the Law and the Prophets: Even the righteouſneſs of God which is by faith of Jeſus Chriſt unto all and upon all them that believe, as the Apoſtle moſt divinely doth expound it.

This is the righteouſneſs that is ſo glorioufly ſpoken of throughout all the Scriptures, Dan. IX. 24. To bring in everlaſting righteouſneſs; Eſa. LVI. 1. My righteouſneſs is near to be revealed; to which that is agreeable, Rom. I. 17. In the Goſpel the righteouſneſs of God is revealed from faith to faith. Why? Was not the righteouſneſs of God revealed in all times before? Was not his juſtice revealed in the Law? Yea his condemning juſtice, but his juſtifying juſtice in the Goſpel.

This the meaning of the Apoſtle here: That as God had promiſed to Create new Heavens and a new Earth, a new Church and People and œconomy among the Gentiles, when the old Judaick one ſhould be deſtroyed: ſo in this new created World, juſtifying righteouſneſs ſhould dwell moſt evidently and appear moſt glorious, when ſuch abominable ones as the Gentiles had been ſhould be juſtified. Juſtifying righteouſneſs had ſhewed it ſelf in the World in all generations from Adam and righteous Abel, upon all that believed; but upon the believing Gentiles moſt eſpecially both becauſe of the multitude that were juſtified, and men that before had been ſo far from righteouſneſs.

You may ſee a picture of what is intended in this Text, in the fourth of the Revelation, where there is a ſcheme of this new World that our Apoſtle ſpeaketh of from the promiſe in the Prophet. There is a ſcene faſhioned of Chriſt ſitting in the midſt of the Goſpel Church, platformed according to the form of Gods dwelling in the midſt of the people of Iſrael in his Tabernacle, and upon the mercy ſeat. His throne is ſaid to be in Heaven, in the ſecond verſe, but it means in his Church: for ſo Heaven is taken in moſt places in the Revelation: And obſerve before his Throne in Heaven is a Sea of glaſs, verſ. 6. as the molten Sea was before the Temple: there is an Altar before the Throne, and offering of Incenſe, Chap. VIII. 3. as there was at the Temple: nay there is the Temple it ſelf filled with ſmoke, Chap. XV. 8. as the Tabernacle and Temple were at their Dedication.

About his Throne were, Firſt, four living Creatures on the four ſides of it, as the four ſquadrons of Prieſts and Levites pitched on the four ſides of the Tabernacle betwixt God and the people. On the outſide of them ſat four and twenty Elders, the repreſentative of the whole Church, as the ſquadrons of the people pitched on the one ſide of the ſquadron of the Prieſts and Levites. And it is ſaid theſe four and twenty Elders were clothed in white; which ſpeaks the very things we are ſpeaking of; for ſo doth the Holy Ghoſt himſelf explain it, in the XIX. Chap. verſ. 8. The fine linnen is the righteouſneſs of the Saints. And in Chap. VII. 14. They have waſhed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Strange waſhing, waſht them white in blood? You would think that ſhould make them of another colour: but the whiteneſs that we are ſpeaking of is the pure white of Juſtification, and nothing can purifie to that dye but the blood of Chriſt.

And here let me alſo crave your patience a little to ſpeak to another Text of Scripture, which ſpeaketh fully to the matter we are upon, but which is not ſo clearly rendred to its proper purpoſe, but that it hath produced no little controverſie. And that is theſe words in Rom. IV. 11. Abraham received the ſign of circumciſion, a ſeal of the righteouſneſs of the faith which he had yet being uncircumciſed. Generally all Tranſlations run in the ſame tenor: whereas theſe words which he had yet are not at all in the Original, as you that cannot read the Original may ſee by that that they are written in a different character. The Greek hath it thus, σφραγίδα τῆς δικαιοσύνης τῆς πίστεως τῆς ἐν τῇ ἀκροβυστίᾳ. verbatim to be rendred thus, He received the ſign of circumciſion, a ſeal of the righteouſneſs of faith, in the uncircumciſion: And not to be underſtood of the righteouſneſs of faith which Abraham had in his uncircumciſion: though it is true he had it, but a ſeal of the righteouſneſs by faith which was to be in the uncircumciſion, or in the believing Gentiles. And that this ſenſe is moſt agreeable to the intent of the Apoſtle in that place, needs no more proof then the ſerious obſerving of the nature of his diſcourſe from thoſe words forward. And that it is moſt agreeable to the end of the inſtitution of circumciſion, needs no more proof than the ſerious obſerving of the ſtory of its inſtitution.

That you have in Gen. XVII. where this promiſe is given to Abraham, Thou ſhalt be the father of many Nations. In what ſenſe the father of many Nations, the Apoſtle clears in the words next following thoſe that we are upon. That he might be the father of all them that believe, though they be not circumciſed, that righteouſneſs might be imputed to them alſo. So that this was the Covenant that God makes with Abraham there, that the uncircumciſion ſhould believe and become the ſons of Abraham imbracing his faith.

This Covenant and promiſe God confirms with a double ſeal. 1. With the change of his name from Abram to Abraham: from אברם a high father to אברהם the father of a great multitude: and 2. With the ſeal of Circumciſion; A ſeal of the righteouſneſs by faith which ſhould be in the uncircumciſion, or in the Gentiles that ſhould believe.

Ponder the words and the context, and the ſtory of the inſtitution of Circumciſion well, and you will find this to be the main aim and end of it. Not a ſeal of the righteouſneſs by faith which Abraham had being uncircumciſed, but of the righteouſneſs by faith that the uncircumciſion ſhould have, when they came to believe. And it ſpeaks the very ſame thing with the Text, that when God ſhould create the new Heavens and the new Earth of the Gentile Church, when the Jewiſh ſhould be caſt off, that righteouſneſs or juſtification by faith ſhould dwell and ſhine in it.

I have been ſomething long in the explanation of the words, but the neceſſity of the thing may plead my excuſe. And now they being thus explained, they offer three moſt noble Themes for diſcourſe before us.

I. Here is mention of a new World.

II. Of Gods Promiſe.

III. Of

III. Of Juſtification or Righteouſneſs.

And upon which of theſe ſhall I fix? Any of the three would take up the time that is allotted: therefore I will lay my right hand upon Ephraims head which is the youngeſt.

The word righteouſneſs you ſee is laſt born in the Text, and yet indeed the birthright is due unto it. It is the firſt aim of our Apoſtle that he looketh at, and the other two are but appendices to it in his aim. Follow his eye with yours and ſee where he fixeth. Righteouſneſs is the thing he looketh after, the new Heavens and the new Earth are the ſtate and place where he looketh for it; and the promiſe is the proſpective through which he looked at it.

I ſhall therefore pitch upon that as the main ſubject of the Text, and from the eye of the Apoſtle ſo intent upon it; Obſerve,

How deſirable a thing to be looked after, righteouſneſs is, as it ſpeaks juſtification.

Me thinks Peter ſpeaks here concerning this righteouſneſs, much like the tenour that the Pſalmiſt doth concerning God, in Pſal. LXXIII. 25. Their is nothing in the new Heaven but thee, and nothing in the new Earth, that I look after beſides thee. His brother Paul is of the ſame mind and ſong, Phil. III. 8, 9. I do count all things but dung that I may win Chriſt. And be found in him, not having mine own righteouſneſs which is of the Law, but the righteouſneſs which is of God by faith. Offer him as Satan once did to our Saviour, and try him with hæc omnia tibi dabo, Paul, chooſe through all the World what thou wilt have, honours, riches, pleaſures, profits, take what thou wilt and have. Lord, let me have the righteouſneſs which is of God by faith. All things in the World are but dung to it. His great Maſter had taught him, and teacheth us all that this is. the thing ſo deſirable and to be longed after, Matth. V. 6. Bleſſed are they which do hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſs.

How ſhall I ſpeak upon this ſubject? A theme fit to be diſcourſed on by the Tongue of an Angel, or by the Tongue of a Saint in glory. If a Lazarus ſhould come out of Heaven to preach on Earth, as the rich man would have had him in that parable, how would he upon his own experience of the excellency of it, magnifie this righteouſneſs? Nay if a Dives could return from Hell to preach to his brethren, and adviſe them that they ſhould not come into the place of torment, he would tell them that all things in the world are but dung, and there is but unum neceſſarium, to get that righteouſneſs which is of God by faith.

Lazarus, how cameſt thou to Heaven? Why, I was juſtified, Rom. VIII. 30. Whom he juſtified, them he alſo glorified. Dives, how cameſt thou to be damned? Becauſe I was not juſtified.

I ſhall not enter into any of the various and nice diſputes about Juſtification, I ſhall only ſpeak ſomething of the incomparable excellency of it, that if it may be, I may warm your hearts a little, in the deſire and longing after it, which is ſo deſirable and to be longed after.

And this I ſhall do by conſidering the nature of it, and the effects, and I need to look no further: Its like the Ark of the Covenant, overlaid with gold within and without. Tis all glorious within in its own nature, and all glorious without in its fruits and effects.

For the firſt, the nature of juſtification: How ſhall I define or deſcribe it? As the Apoſtle doth Faith, Heb. XI. 1. Faith is the ſubſtance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not ſeen; not ſo exactly defining it to ſpeak out its whole nature, but as beſt applicable to his preſent diſcourſe: So I of this, to ſpeak of it according to the theme propoſed, as it is deſirable and to be longed after, let me ſay, Juſtification is a mans being intereſſed in all Chriſts righteouſneſs: and if any thing be to be longed after, ſure that is, To be intereſſed in all Chriſts righteouſneſs.

Laban ſpake high, when he ſaid, All theſe things thou ſeeſt are mine, theſe Children are my Children, &c. XXXI. Gen. 43. But how high and glorious is that that may be ſaid of a juſtified perſon? All thou heareſt of Chriſt is thine, his life is thine, his death is thine, his obedience, merit, righteous ſpirit, all is thine. The Jews ſpeak much when they ſay all the ſix hundred and thirteen precepts are comprehended in Juſtus ex fide vivet, The juſt ſhall live by faith. But they are far from conſtruing the thing aright, when they look for juſtification by their own works: and it is a monſter of Doctrine in their ears, that men are to be juſtified by the righteouſneſs of another and by the obedience of another.

But the Goſpel, as the Apoſtle tells us, Reveals that great myſtery; For therein is the righteouſneſs of God revealed from faith to faith: Rom. I. 17. Here are two ſcruples, 1. Did not the Law reveal the righteouſneſs of God? How then is it aſcribed to the Goſpel, that it reveals it? And 2. How doth it reveal it from faith to faith?

True

True indeed the Law revealed Gods condemning righteouſneſs, but the Goſpel his juſtifying righteouſneſs; the righteouſneſs of God in a more ſingular excellency. Glorious is the righteouſneſs of God in all its actings, his condemning juſtice, his rewarding juſtice, but moſt ſingularly glorious is his juſtifying juſtice; and this moſt eſpecially is exalted in Scripture as the righteouſneſs of God, of the choiceſt eminency.

And, ſecondly, this Righteouſneſs is revealed in the Goſpel from faith to faith. How, is that? I cannot take it only from one degree of faith to another, but from one kind of faith to another. The Jews that expected juſtifying by their own works, yet had they a faith in God, they believed in him, looked for good from him, but they knew not what faith in God through Chriſt was, they looked for juſtifying from God, and had a faith or belief they ſhould obſerve it; but were utter ſtrangers to juſtifying through faith in Chriſt, this therefore the Goſpel reveals as the great myſtery of ſalvation. The righteouſneſs of God juſtifying a ſinner, and this from immediate believing in God, to believing in him through Chriſt Jeſus, and expecting juſtifying from by our own righteouſneſs, to expecting juſtifying by the righteouſneſs of Chriſt.

The Apoſtle in Rom. V. from verſ. 12. forward, confirms that that I propoſe, that juſtification is by imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſs; and the compariſon that he there uſeth, clears the matter fully. He to open that great point of juſtification by the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, takes a parallel, from the imputation of Adams ſin, and you may ſee how all along he ſets the one againſt the other: let us ſpeak a little to that parallel.

1. Does not the matter of imputation in his diſcourſe there, and in deed in it ſelf argue ſome deſcending relation, as I may tell it? Imputation is upon relation of deſcention.

He ſpeaks of Adams ſin imputed: to whom? To them that are in relation to him in deſcent, all his poſterity. The Angels ſin is not imputed to him, nor his to Angels, nor Angels to Angels, but Adams to all his poſterity, becauſe of their relation to him. The ſin in violating the command given him, is imputed to all his poſterity, becauſe his poſterity: for they all were in him, and incloſed in the Covenant, for it was made not with Adam as one man, but with all humane nature included in him: and ſo his guilt deſcended to them upon that relation.

So the righteouſneſs of Chriſt is imputed: to whom? To thoſe that are related to him, his ſeed ſuch as are born of him. The compariſon of the Apoſtle muſt run parallel; Adams ſin imputed to his ſeed, Chriſts righteouſneſs to his.

2. All the ſeed of Adam are made ſinful alike by his ſin, ſo all the ſeed of Chriſt are juſtified a like by his obedience.

Original ſin hath not magis & minus, but all originally ſinful alike; though all not actually ſinful alike. So Juſtification hath not magis & minus, but all that are juſtified are juſtified alike. Sanctification hath its degrees. Adams righteouſneſs and holineſs were equally perfect, but the righteouſneſs and holineſs of Saints not ſo: for they are juſtified by an infinite righteouſneſs, but they are not ſanctified by an infinite holineſs.

3. All the righteouſneſs of Chriſt is imputed to him. Not one Saint one part, another another, but every one all. As anima tota in toto & tota in qualibet parte. So all the righteouſneſs of Chriſt is to all believers, and all to every one. As a million of men are in the Sun, and one partakes not one of one part of his light and beams, and another of another, but every one of all. So here as the firſt inhancement of the deſirableneſs of juſtification, it makes us partakers of Chriſts righteouſneſs: Oh what a treaſure is this!

A SERMON PREACHED AT HERTFORD Aſſiſe,

March 17. 1664.

JOHN VIII. 9.

And they being convinced by their own conſcience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldeſt even to the laſt.

EVEN ſo be it with all that deal in falſhood, as theſe perſons do, that are ſpoken of by the Text. So be it with every one who at this time and occaſion when Conſcience ſhould be ſtirring, and doing its juſt work toward the forwarding the execution of Juſtice, can find in his heart to hinder it, or to perſwade it to the contrary: Any one that can ſwallow down and choak his Conſcience with a falſe Oath, any one that ſhall intend a falſe Teſtimony, lay in a falſe accuſation, or maintain a wrong cauſe. Awake Conſcience, awake, and do thy duty, fly in his face and make him bluſh and be aſhamed; admoniſh, chaſtiſe, correct and hinder him that he being convinced of his own Conſcience, may either get him out, or at leaſt it may get him off from being ſo injurious to others, or to his own ſoul.

There is hardly any Commentator upon the Goſpel or this Chapter, but he will tell you that this ſtory of the adulterous woman was wanting and left out of ſome Greek Teſtaments in ancient time, as appears by this, that ſome of the Fathers ſetting themſelves to expound this Goſpel make no mention at all of any part of this ſtory. So Nonnus turning all this Goſpel into Greek verſe hath utterly left out this whole ſtory, and ſo hath the Syriac New Teſtament firſt printed in Europe; and ſo Jerome tells us did ſome old Latine tranſlations. When I caſt with my ſelf whence this omiſſion ſhould proceed, I cannot but think of two paſſages in Euſebius.

The one is in his third Book of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, the very laſt clauſe in that Book, where he relates that one Papias, an old Tradition-monger, as he characters him, did firſt bring in this Story of the adulterous woman, out of a book called the Goſpel according to the Hebrews. For ſo is that paſſage of Euſebius commonly underſtood.

The other is in his fourth Book of the Life of Conſtantine, Chap. 36, 37. Where he relates, That Conſtantine enjoyned him, and committed to his truſt, to get tranſcribed πεντήκοντα σωμάτια, which the laſt Tranſlation renders fifty Copies of ſuch parts of Scripture, as he thought might be moſt uſeful for the Churches of Conſtantinople: But his Greek expreſſion ſeems rather to mean fifty Copies of the Goſpel compacted into one body by way of Harmonizing them together: which I am the rather induced to believe, partly, becauſe of thoſe Canones Euſebiani, which are ſo famous, and were in tendency to ſuch a purpoſe: partly becauſe he relates that he finiſhed the work according to the Emperors command, and ſent him the books τεσσαρσὶ καὶ τριάσι by ternions & quaternions: which ſeems to mean three or four Evangeliſts compacted together according as they joyntly related the ſtory.

Now

Now if Euſebius believed that this ſtory was introduced by Papias, as he ſeems to do, you may well conclude, that he would be ſure to leave out this ſtory in all his fifty Copies, which he thought unfit to be compiled with the Evangelical Story, as having no better authority, than the introduction of it by ſuch a man. Or if the ages before Euſebius were of the ſame belief with him in this matter, you may ſee why this ſtory might alſo be wanting in thoſe times.

But I ſhall not trouble you about this matter, which is now paſt all diſpute. For I believe it is hardly poſſible in all the World to find now a printed New Teſtament, either in the Original Greek, or in any other language, either Eaſtern or Weſtern, wherein this ſtory is not inſerted without any queſtion. Nor had the thing been ever diſputed, if the ſtory it ſelf had bee ſearched to the botom, for then of it ſelf it would have vindicated its own authority, to be Evangelical and Divine.

It tells of a Woman taken in adultery in the very Act, I could eaſily be perſwaded to ſay, And in the very Temple too. For as our Saviour ſaith, They had made that Houſe of prayer a den of Thieves, ſo I doubt, they made it ſometimes a neſt of Whores. And at this time there was offered an extraordinary occaſion and opportunity for ſuch a lewdneſs. For as the Chapter preceding tells you at verſ. 37. That the day next before this occurrence was the great and laſt of the Feaſt of Tabernacles; ſo the Jews Records will tell you, that that night, as alſo others of the ſame Feaſt, was ſpent by the chief men in the Nation in dancing, ſinging, ſporting, and even revelling in the Temple-Court, vaſt companies of men and women looking on. Now if ſuch night-work as that did produce ſuch a deed of darkneſs as this, it was no wonder. But I leave this as not aſſerted.

The Scribes and Phariſees bring this woman to Chriſt as he ſat teaching in the Temple, to have his ſentence upon her, as it is like ſhe was firſt brought to them to have theirs. If I ſhould conſtrue the Scribes and Phariſees here for the Members of the Sanhedrin, or bench of Judicature, it might plead the warrant of the words of our Saviour, Matth. XXIII. 2. where he uſeth the ſame expreſſion in the ſame ſence. The Scribes and Phariſees ſit in Moſes chair, i. e. the Sanhedrin ſit in Moſes Legiſlative Magiſtratical ſeat. As alſo the warrant of his words in this very ſtory, where aſking the woman, Hath no man condemned thee, he ſeems to intimate, that thoſe that accuſed her had alſo power to judge and condemn her. However it is well known, that Scribes and Phariſees in Scripture language ſpeak the men of the moſt eminency and dignity in the Nation.

They propoſe the caſe to Chriſt as a point of Scruple, though they intend ſomething worſe in it. This woman was taken in adultery in the very act. Now Moſes in the Law commanded us, that ſuch ſhould be ſtoned, but what ſayeſt thou? And indeed there were two ſcruples in the caſe.

One was as to a point in their Civil Law, viz. whether a woman taken in the very act of Adultery, might not have the benefit of Divorce, as well as a woman deprehended an Adultereſs by ſome other diſcovery: ſince that permiſſion of divorce was to mitigate the ſharpneſs of the Law of putting her to death.

The ſecond was as to a point of Civil Policy, which you may pick out of their words to Pilate, Joh. XVIII. 31. The Jews ſaid unto him, It is not lawful for us to put any man to death. It is very generally underſtood, as if they meant, that the Romans had taken away from them the power of Capital puniſhments. But the Jews more truly give the reaſon of it, viz. That Murtherers and Malefactors were grown ſo numerous, and headſtrong, and ſo ſtrong a party, that the Sanhedrin could not, durſt not execute juſtice upon them. And let me add one other Record of theirs, which ſuits with the thing, we are upon, namely, they ſay, That Adulterers grew ſo common, ſo innumerable, that they were glad to lay aſide that practice by trying the adulterous wife by giving her to drink the bitter waters preſcribed by God in the fifth of Numbers. And that Rabban Jochanan ben Zaccai, who I doubt not was of the Sanhedrin at this very time, cauſed it to be laid aſide, alledging that ſaying of the Prophet Hoſea, I will not puniſh your daughters when they commit whoredom, nor your ſpouſes when they commit adultery, Hoſ. IV. 14.

Now take it either way, whether the Romans had taken away the power of Capital puniſhments out of their hands, or Malefactors had overpowred it, that it durſt not act, a juſt ſcruple aroſe in this caſe, what to do with this woman?

But theſe men come not for reſolution of queſtions, but for catching advantages, which Chriſt well knoweth, and therefore gives them no anſwer, but ſtooping down, and with his finger wrote on the ground. Our Engliſh hath added as though he heard them not, which is rarely to be found in any Greek Teſtaments. Some few indeed have μὴ προσποιούμενος, as not regarding: which might very well have been ſpared, ſince Chriſt, when he had ſhewed that he heard and regarded, by ſaying to them; Whoſoever is without ſin, let him caſt the firſt ſtone, yet he ſtoops down and writes on the ground again.

An

An action and geſture that ſeems ſo ſtrange to Beza, that he plainly profeſſeth that for this very paſſage, he had a ſuſpition of the whole ſtory, that it is not Goſpel. It may be it ſeemed to him too like the geſture of David, ſcrabbling on the walls and doors in a diſſembled franticknes. But if he had turned the other end of his Perſpective, it would have looked more like Gods writing with his finger on the two tables of ſtone, for the Temple-floor was ſtone alſo.

Some on the other hand as confident, as he was ſuſpitious, will tell you verbatim what it was that Chriſt wrote: who let enjoy their confidence and fancy. It is enough for us, if we can diſcover why he wrote, and what his intent was in this geſture. To the diſcovery of which let me obſerve theſe things to you.

I. That as the trial of an adulterous wife is the thing that is in tranſaction, ſo Chriſt acteth in ſome conformity to the trial of the adulterous wife preſcribed by God, in the fift of Numbers. And much like, if I miſtake not, did Moſes act in the trial of Spiritual adultery, the Idolatry with the Golden Calf. In Exod. XXXII. 27. He ſaith to the Sons of Levi, Put every man his ſword by his ſide, and go in and out from gate to gate throughout the Camp, and ſlay every man his brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbour. Now how could they know among ſo many thouſands who were guilty? Why, as the adulterous wife drinking the water mixed with the duſt of the Sanctuary floor, gave evidence of her guilt by her belly ſwelling; ſo Moſes by Gods direction beats the Calf to powder, ſtrews the powder upon the water of the brook that deſcended out of the Mount, Deut. IX. 21. cauſes the people to drink of it, and probably God cauſed ſome like token to appear upon the faulty.

II. The Jews have a Maxim in reference to the trial of the ſuſpected wife, moſt agreeable to ſence and reaſon, viz. That her trial proved of no effect, unleſs her huſband that accuſed and tried her, were himſelf free from unchaſtity. Though ſhe indeed had played the whore, and though ſhe drank the bitter waters, and the Prieſt denounced the curſe appointed to be denounced, yet that all had no effect upon her to make her belly to ſwell, and her thigh to rot, if her husband were an adulterer too, or a defiled perſon.

Our Saviour acts here directly according to the equity of this Maxim, and ſets himſelf purpoſely to try theſe accuſers, who accuſed the woman, and brought her to be tried. As if he had thus ſpoken out unto them, You have brought this woman to me for me to ſentence her, as a Judge, but who made me a Judge or a Magiſtrate among you? But let me act this once as perſonating the Prieſt that was to try the ſuſpected wife, and let me go by the equity of your own rule: you ſay the trial of an adulterous wife proved to no effect upon her to bring her to condign puniſhment, if her husband were guilty of the like crime. You accuſe this woman and put her upon my trial, are you your ſelves free from the like fault? If you be, ſtone her. He that is without ſin, let him caſt the firſt ſtone. But if you be not, expect not that this her trial ſhould be of effect to her condign puniſhment, becauſe you the accuſers are guilty of the like fault, or of ſome ſuch notorious fault your ſelves.

If we ſhould ſtrictly underſtand the words, He that is without ſin, for he that is without the guilt of this ſame ſin of uncharity, among you, it were but agreeable to the conſtruction of the phraſe, Luke VII. 37. a Woman in the City that was a ſinner; which is commonly underſtood a Common ſtrumpet. And it were agreeable to that title that Chriſt once and again puts upon that generation, calling it a wicked and adulterous generation. And it were but agreeable to the laſcivious temper of the Nation, as I obſerved before. But take it to mean ſome other notorious crimes, you ſee our Saviours dealing is exactly according to the equity of that Maxim mentioned, viz. No trial of the adulterous wife to condemn her, if the husband that accuſed her be an Adulterer himſelf.

III. Whereas the Prieſt in the trial of the ſuſpected wife, was to ſtoop down and take of the duſt of the Sanctuary, to make her drink it; and he was to write the curſes he denounced againſt her in a book; the geſture of our Saviour here remembers both. His ſtooping down, and making the pavement of the Temple as his book, and writing in the duſt there ſomething moſt likely bitter and grievous againſt them he tried.

VI. The trying Prieſt wrote the curſes in the book, and as ſoon as he had done he blotted them out with the bitter waters again: becauſe the matter was doubtful, that he was upon, whether the woman was guilty or no: if the were guilty then there were curſes written, if ſhe were not, then they were blotted out: But here Chriſt is ſure of the guilt of the perſons he puts to trial, and therefore he writes not, and blots out again, but he writes and he writes again. And herein he imitates the acting of the trying Prieſt again. For he, as the Jews expound his acting, firſt denounced the curſes, then made the Woman drink the bitter waters, and then he denounces the ſame curſes again. So Chriſt ſtoops down, and writes ſome ſuch thing, it is like, of the ſame nature, and then potions theſe whom he tries with that draught, that went down ſo bitter with them, He

He that is without ſin, &c. and then ſtoops down and writes again; which while he is doing, They being convinced by their own conſciences, went out one by one, &c.

I have been the longer upon the whole ſtory, partly to unfold theſe things that are moſt material in it, which, it may be, every eye doth not obſerve in reading of it, and partly to vindicate it to its native and genuine authority of Evangelical and Divine. And now to ſpeak of the words and paſſage in the Text.

The firſt gloſs we may make upon them may be in ſilence and wonder. For θαυμαστὰ ἀκούεις, you hear of ſtrange things in it.

1. That the Conſciences of ſuch men as theſe ſhould be brought to any conviction at all, men ſworn to miſchief and to be unconſcionable.

2. That ſo many ſuch Conſciences ſhould be convinced all alike, and altogether and all at one ſtroke. For the very words intimate, that they were ſome number, and that conviction ſeized upon the whole number.

3. That they ſhould be convinced with theſe few words, He that is without ſin, &c. when they had taken no thoughts of any ſuch thing before.

4. That they ſhould be ſo overpowred by conviction, as to their own ſhame before the multitude to proclaim their guilt by departing away and not ſtanding to it.

But, by way of Doctrine hence,

So little is any man able to ſtand before, or to ſtand againſt the Conviction of his own Conſcience, when Chriſt is reſolved to ſet it on.

And this is that I ſhall inſiſt upon out of the words; which ariſeth very pregnantly out of them, and lieth very plain in them to be obſerved: That little is any man able to ſtand before, or to ſtand againſt the Conviction of his own Conſcience, when Chriſt ſets it on.

Think you that if the poor guilty Delinquent, that ſtood now at the bar, had ſpoken the very ſame words to them that our Saviour doth, that they would have had the ſame effect upon them? Had ſhe ſaid, He that is without ſin among you let him caſt the firſt ſtone at me; do you think they would have parted with Conviction of Conſcience as they did? Their anſwer to another poor perſon, that was innocent, that went about a little to inſtruct them; Thou waſt altogether born in ſin, and doſt thou go about to teach us, in the next Chapter, may give you a gueſs what their anſwer would have been, if ſhe had gone about thus to try them; Thou a whore juſt now taken in the act of adultery and doſt thou go about to reprove us? But it is Chriſt that ſpeaks the words, and Chriſt reſolved to ſet conviction home upon them, to ſhame them before the company, and to confound them in their own Conſcience: and therefore he ſends Thunder with his Lightning, adds his Power to his Word; and with theſe two edges of the Sword of his mouth he cuts ſo keen, that they are neither able to avoid the ſtroke nor to abide it. So little is any man able to ſtand before or to ſtand againſt the Conviction of his own Conſcience, when Chriſt is reſolved to ſet it on.

For the proof and atteſtation of this truth, I might call for all the mourning men and mourning women, that ever were in the World, either under the torture of horror of Conſcience, or under the pangs of Remorſe. I might call even Heaven and Hell to bear witneſs to it; either the Saints in glory, that have been here ſo convinced of their duty, that they were not able, nay not ſo much as to be willing to ſtand againſt it: or the damned in Hell, eternally ſo convinced of their guilt and condition, that they are utterly unable to ſtand before it.

But as he once that had received an unjuſt ſentence of death againſt himſelf from a wicked Judicature, cited all his ſentencers within ſuch a time to anſwer God and him; ſo let me make ſuch a challenge, what Conſcience ſoever is here, or in all the World, that is moſt unconſcionable, that can ſwear and forſwear, lie and oppreſs, whore and drink, or commit any ſin without remorſe or feeling: Whoſoever is come or ſhall come to this preſent meeting and occaſion with intent to take a falſe Oath, to bear falſe Witneſs, to lay in a falſe Plea, or to maintain a wrong Cauſe; I chalenge every ſuch a Perſon, every ſuch a Conſcience at one time or other, either in this life, or within a moment after he is departed out of it, to bear witneſs and to ſubſcribe to this truth, That little is any one able to ſtand before or againſt the conviction of his own Conſcience, &c.

To ſpeak of Conviction of Conſcience at ſuch a time and meeting as this, is to ſpeak of an Aſſiſe in the Soul at the Aſſiſe of the County, of Conviction of Conſcience at a time when Conſcience and Conviction had need to be ſtirring in a ſpecial manner: A ſubject for diſcourſe very agreeable to the occaſion, could I but frame a diſcourſe adæquate to the ſubject. But I muſt crave your help and aſſiſtance for ſuch a work; that as I am to ſpeak of Conſcience and Conviction, ſo your Conſciences would go along, and ſpeak alſo alſo to it, and make out in the diſcourſe of your own Conſcience what I ſpeak too ſhort concerning Conſcience or Conviction. That whereas all that I can ſpeak will be but as a very ſhort note in the Index, you would turn into the book of your hearts, and ſee how largely you can read it there.

You ſee thereby three things plainly before us to ſpeak unto, Conviction of Conſcience, and Chriſts ſetting it on, and man unable to withſtand ſuch ſetting on. No one of which but might take up more time in diſcourſe than is allotted; and therefore I ſhall twiſt all together in theſe conſiderations.

I. Firſt, Being to ſpeak of Conviction of Conſcience, I may begin much after that œnigmatical ſtile, that the Apocalyptick uſeth in ſpeaking of the eighth beaſt in Revel. XVII. 8. where he ſaith, That he was and is not, and yet he is. So there is Conviction of Conſcience, that is not Conviction, and yet it is. As there are too many in the World, that have no Conſcience at all, and yet have a Conſcience. As Abſoloms long hair ſignified he was a Nazarite, and under a vow: but Nazariſm in an Abſolom ſignified as good as nothing, and yet as to his condemning it ſignified ſomething.

There is Conviction of Conſcience, if we may call it Conviction of Conſcience, that is a thing without life, without feeling, without fruit, like Pharaohs thin ears of corn, that ſprang up like ears of corn, but are blaſted as ſoon as ſprung up, and are empty and come to nothing. Conſcience and Memory are ſo lodged together in the faculty of the Underſtanding, as two infants laid together in one and the ſame cradle, that Conſcience cannot but receive ſome jogging, ſome motion, ſome touch from its cradle-fellow, and its cradle.

The profaneſt wretch that is, cannot but ſometimes be told by his own heart, that he hath done evil, and that he doth not well: he cannot but remember, that he hath committed ſuch and ſuch abominable actions: he cannot but be convinced he hath done what he ſhould not, that he hath incurred guilt and danger in ſo doing: he cannot but be convinced he ſhould do otherwiſe; and yet all this while he hath no impreſſion upon his heart, no remorſe, no amending, but doth the ſame things ſtill and ſtill. Here is a ſpark of Conviction ſtruck out between the flint and ſteel, between his memory and underſtanding, and it lights into the tinder of his Conſcience: but this is damp and dead, that it takes no fire, and the ſpark preſently goes out and dies. A blaſted Conviction, like Pharaohs thin ears; an abortive Conviction, ἔκτρωμα in the Apoſtles language though in another caſe, a thing born out of due form, Conviction born dead, and not ſhaped or formed to the feature of a due conviction. I may compare it to letters written in paper with the juice of a Lemmon, out of which you cannot ſpell either ſentence or ſence without bringing it to the fire: and fire in time will make theſe letters legible, to him that now will ſee nothing in them.

II. Secondly, There is a Conviction of Conſcience, that brings with it ſome overpowering, ſome more, ſome leſs, ſome for one end, ſome for another. I ſay, ſome overpowering. In that diſpute about the reſiſtibility or irreſiſtibility of grace, as far as I can ſee into the diſpute, this diſtinction might be uſeful and advantagious toward the determining of it, viz. to conſider what the Spirit of God doth to the heart by way of trying it, and what it doth with intent and reſolution to overpower it. The former part of the diſtinction you have in Exod. XX. 20. Fear not, for the Lord is come to prove, or try, you. The latter in Eſa. XXVI. 11. They will not ſee, but they ſhall ſee and be aſhamed. The former in Revel. III. 17. Chriſt ſtands at the door and knocks, to try whether he ſhall be entertained. The latter in Ezek. XXII. 14. How can thy heart indure, and thy hands be ſtrong in the day that I ſhall deal with thee, when I break in reſolved to overpower thee? As in that blaſted conviction I ſpake of before, there was a trying but no over powering, ſo there is ſome over powering conviction alſo, that is but for trial.

There was ſome overpowering Conviction upon the Conſciences of thoſe men in the Text, and that in a very great degree, when it packt them out of the room and company, but this was far from overpowering them to the utmoſt end of Conviction; but it was only by way of trial, how they would improve this Conviction to that utmoſt end. So that was a very overpowering Conviction upon the Conſcience of Herod, that made him reverence John Baptiſt, and to hear him gladly and to do many things according to his doctrine, but it was far from attaining the utmoſt end of Conviction: it was only by way of trial, whither he would come up to the utmoſt end or no. This Conviction neither they in the Text, nor Herod could reſiſt, for Conviction brake in, whether they would or no, but the ultimate operation of Conviction they reſiſted; becauſe in this Conviction the Spirit of God did only try them, not reſolved to overpower them to the utmoſt fruit and effect of Conviction.

III. Thirdly, Now the ultimate effect of Conviction is double and divers, according to the duplicity and diverſity of the matter of Conviction it ſelf; namely, when the Conſcience is convinced of its condition, or when it is convinced of its duty. The former mer ſo, that it is awaked like Jonah with a ſtorm, and not able to ſtand before the Conviction, but is broke all to pieces by terror and torture: the latter, that it is not able to ſtand againſt the Conviction, but is overcome and overpowered to cloſe with its duty.

I ſhall illuſtrate the former, by comparing the caſe with a known ſtory, and the latter by ſpeaking to a caſe of Conſcience worth the knowing.

For the firſt, it is well known how God tried the Hearts and Conſciences of Pharaoh and the Egyptians, by Moſes words and miracles, and how again and again he in ſome degree did over-power them; but ſtill they reſiſted, and came not up to the proper and ultimate effect of Conviction, to own and to do their duty. At laſt he brings them into the horror of three days darkneſs: and in that darkneſs they are haunted with dreadful and horrid Apparitions of Fiends and Devils. For obſerve in Pſal. LXXVIII. 49. when the Holy Ghoſt is reckoning up the Plagues of Egypt; and inſtead of mentioning the Plague of darkneſs in expreſs terms, he mentions that that was the very quinteſſence of that Plague, He caſt upon them the fierceneſs of his anger, wrath and indignation and trouble, by ſending evil Angels among them. What Conviction, think ye, theſe mens Conſciences were ſtruck withal, in the ſence of their condition, when they are ſo overborn with it, and even cruſhed all to pieces with horror, and are brought even into the ſuburbs of Hell? They felt the fierceneſs of the anger, wrath and indignation of the Lord; they ſaw his dreadful executioners about them, Fiends and Devils: and they are all the while chained up in fetters of darkneſs, that they cannot out-run their horror: they cannot abide the horrid confutation of Conſcience they are under, nor can they avoid it. Ah! wo, wo, wo to the people, to the perſon is in ſuch a caſe.

And to ſuch a caſe doth God ſometimes bring the Conſciences of men even in this life, though not exactly in the very ſame kind of execution. Who hath read the ſtory of Spira? Does he not ſee him and his Conſcience in as dreary a condition as theſe men, though not in the very ſame way of tormenting? What ails Lamec to howl ſo horribly, Gen. IV. 23, 24 that he had ſlain young and old, and undone the World by the curſed example of his Polygamy; that he is in ſeventy and ſevenfold more curſed condition than Cain, who had ſlain only one Abel. Lamec, what is the matter? Oh Conviction, Conviction of Conſcience, ſet on with ſuch horror, that it grinds his ſoul even to powder, and he cannot ſtand before it, he cannot ſtand under it. What ails thee, Judas, to confeſs thy fact againſt thy ſelf with ſo much ſadneſs and confuſion of ſpirit? Why to caſt down thy thirty pieces of Silver, which thou hadſt got ſo notoriouſly, and bought ſo duly? Oh! Conviction of mine own Conſcience, which bears me down, and lies heavier on my Soul, than a thouſand thouſand milſtones. They ſhall ſay to the Rocks fall on us, and to the Hills cover us. And thoſe weights ſeem lighter, than the burden of Conſcience, that lies upon them.

Here is Conviction of Conſcience overpowering ad ultimum quod ſic, as far as poſſible in that kind, and as far as poſſible in this World: a man ſo throughly convinced of his loſt, undone, damnable condition, that his Conviction is his Hell already, and he cannot ſuffer, or feel more of Hell till he come there. But Secondly, There is a Conviction of Conſcience overpowering to the utmoſt effect of Conviction, that is ſmoother like Jacob, and not ſuch a rough thing as this Eſau: a child of the freewoman, and of the promiſe, and not of this ſpirit of horror and bondage: and that is when a man is ſo convinced in Conſcience concerning his duty, that he cannot but with all earneſtneſs ſet to it and keep to it. As in Jer. XX. 9. The word of the Lord was in my heart as a burning fire ſhut up in my bones, that I was weary of forbearing and could not ſtay. This I ſhall illuſtrate to you by looking into a caſe or ſtate of Conſcience, referring ſomething to the Conviction ſpoken of laſt before, and alſo to this we are ſpeaking of now.

Many a dear child of God walks in darkneſs, and ſees no light from the time of his new birth to his grave; he walks in brokenneſs of Heart and dejection of Spirit, and never ſees good day. His example may be inſtance enough for all others, in Pſal. LXXXVIII. 15, 16, 17. I am afflicted and ready to die even from my youth up, I ſuffer thy terrors, I am diſtracted. Thy fierce wrath goeth over me, and thy terrors have cut me off. They came round about me daily like waters, they compaſſed me about together. Now what is that that bears ſuch a Soul up that it does not ſink under deſpondency and deſpair? It is a wonder that ſuch a one can live, and what is it that he lives upon? Upon the ſtrong and overpowering Conviction and ſence of his duty. Every child of God that is born to God by the new birth is in Rebecca's caſe, with a Jacob and Eſau ſtruggling in her, but the younger overcoms the elder. He hath a twofold overpowering of Conſcience in him, namely, concerning his loſt condition, and concerning his duty, and the latter overcoms the former. He hath thoſe pangs and anguiſhes of Conſcience through the ſight of his ſins, and ſence of Gods diſpleaſure, that it brings him to the very brink of Hell, and of the gulph of diſpair, but he hath withal ſo ſtrong an impreſſion of his duty, that that keeps him from ſinking or falling in.

A

A travailer towards Heaven walks upon two legs, Hope and Sence of his duty. Now many and many a time his hope like Jacobs thigh is sinnew-shrunk and lame, and hath no strength at all in it; yet he makes shift to bear upon his other leg, the sence of his duty, that Jacob-like at last he limps out to his journies end. The hope of a good Soul may be in the dark, that he cannot see the glimmering of the least spark of it, but the sence of his duty is always in his sight, that he cannot but look on it, and walk after it.

The case of Jonah in the Whales belly, Jon. II. 4. I said, I am cut off from the light. Why Jonah, then thy case is desperate, and there is no hope. But I will yet look toward thy holy Temple. That is my duty, and I must not give out from it. That good man in Psal. LXXXVIII. thou seest, thou hast waited, and prayed, and laboured for comfort all thy time, and no comfort comes, there is no hope, strive no longer. I, but it is my duty to wait, and pray, and labour, and I must hold to that, and not give out. Job dost thou not see thy hopeless case, dost thou still hold thine integrity, blessing God and dying? Ah! thou speakest like a fool, saith he, though God kill me, yet will I trust in him, I will wait on him, this is my duty, and I must do it.

Oh! This is worth your laying to heart. If ever your case come to despond in hopes and comforts, yet to bear up with this, Though I cannot see it is the Will of God to shew me comfort, yet I am sure it is his Will that I should hold out in doing my duty. I long for assurance of pardon of my sins, and cannot find it. I pray, and wait, and labour for grace, and hope, and comfort, and cannot feel it. My heart is as sad as ever, as dull, as slippery, as incumbred as ever, yet come what will I must not leave my hold, I must pray, and wait, and labour still, it is my Duty. Thus hath many a sad Soul been born up under despondencies, that have seen no light, hope nor comfort; that it hath been a wonder how they have holden up: yet have lived upon a hidden manna: as in Revel. II. 17. have been born up upon this crutch, the overpowering Conviction of their Conscience concerning their Duty.

IV. Fourthly, Every Conscience in the World must at one time or other come to such ultimate Conviction, in the one kind or other, either to confusion and horror, or to conversion and setting to his duty. Cain, if thou do well, shalt thou not be accepted, but if thou do not well, sin lies at the door, Gen. IV. 7. The word in the Original signifies sin, but more commonly a sin-offering, and that laid at the door. And that I take to be the meaning of the place, and this to be the first doctrine of Repentance in the Bible. Though thou do not well, yet there is a sin-offering to make thy peace: repent and thou shalt be pardoned, but if thou do not repent, sin and vengeance lies at the door, ready to seize upon thee. Sinner, if thou improvest trying Conviction, as thou oughtest to do, thou mayest come to the kindly overpowering Conviction to set thee to thy duty for thy everlasting comfort; but if not, expect overpowering Conviction at one time or other to thy eternal horror: And to this sence could I easily be induced to believe those borrowed expressions of Daniel mean, Dan. XII. 2. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame, and everlasting contempt: A resurrection of dead Consciences, as well as dead bodies. Conscience of it self is one of the sleepiest things in the World, if God would let it sleep, but he will suffer no Conscience to sleep for ever. But up sluggard, Jonah why sleepest thou, either call upon thy God or betake thy self to thy duty, or into the Sea of horror and confusion, and sink and be drowned. Job. V. 28,29.

And so much be spoken, or rather so little of much that might be spoken, concerning the first thing that lay before us to be spoken to, viz. Conviction of Conscience.

A SERMON PREACHED AT HERTFORD Assise

Time, July 16. 1665.

JOHN XIV. 2.

In my Fathers house are many mansions, &c.

THE words are the words of our Saviour, and much mistaken (if I am not much mistaken) by many as to the time when they were spoken, and by many as to their sence which they intend. The first verse of the thirteenth Chapter, and the last verse of this, state the time of their speaking, and the consideration of the case of the persons to whom they were spoken must state their meaning.

Very many conceive that the story of the foregoing Chapter was at the Passover-supper: that it was at the Passover-supper, when Christ washt his Disciples feet, gave Judas the sop, and foretold Peter of his denial: whereas the very first words in that Chapter do plainly tell it was before the Feast of the Passover came; and the nine and twentieth verse of it tells us, that when our Saviour said to Judas, what thou doest do quick, the Disciples thought he meant, Buy those things that we have need of against the Feast, which was not yet come.

Matthew and Mark resolve us both of the time and place, namely, that it was not at the Passover, but two days before; and that it was not at Jerusalem, but at Bethany, two miles off, Matth. XXVI. 2. 6. Mark XIV. 1. 3. Two days therefore before the Passover, at Bethany, at a common supper, Christs head is anointed, he washeth the Disciples feet, Judas receives the sop, and the Devil with it, goes in the night to Jerusalem, and plots for the betraying of his Master against the Passover come. And after his departure Christ speaks of his own departure from them, and tells Peter, The Cock shall not crow, till thou have denied me thrice.

That very passage hath bred that mistake about the time, as if it were on the Passover night, and that no Cock should crow till Peter had so denied him. Whereas it is apparent that he denied him but once before the Cock crew, Mark XIV. 68. and forward; and that he denied him twice after the Cock had once crowed. But our Saviours meaning is, that he should deny him thrice in the time of Cock crowing.

This matter is the more material for consideration, because of that assertion of some, That Judas received the sop at the Passover-supper, but that he stayed not till the administration of the Lords Supper, but went out; whereas indeed he had received the sop two nights before the Passover-supper came.

At the same place at Bethany, though not exactly at the same time with the story before, Christ utters his discourse of this Chapter: and you see how he concludes his discourse at the last verse of the Chapter, Arise, let us go hence, that is from Bethany to Jerusalem on the Pas-over day.

He begins his discourse of this Chapter with Let not your hearts be troubled, &c. and presently comes on with the words of the Text, In my Fathers house are many mansions.

About

About the juncture of which words there is ſome ſcruple. Some apply them thus, though I go alone, yet there is room for you alſo where I go. Others thus, That whereas he had ſaid to Peter, Chap. XIII. 36. Thou canſt not follow me now, but thou ſhalt follow me afterwards, he ſaith now to the reſt, let not your hearts be troubled, there are many manſions in my Fathers houſe; There is room for you as well as for Peter. Some underſtand many manſions ſo, for much room: ſome for divers degrees of glory.

But we ſhall the better diſcover the bent of his words, if we obſerve the three ſtays that he gives to their troubled minds in the three firſt verſes. We muſt take notice withal of the three things that might eſpecially trouble their minds. The three ſtays are, Believe in me: In my Fathers houſe: I will come to take you. And of the diſcomfiture that troubled their minds.

I. The firſt and not the leaſt was that he had told them that he was going from them, and that could not but go very near their hearts: ſo loving, ſo divine a Maſter to be taken away from their heads. They had forſaken all to follow him, and he now to forſake them, that they can follow him no more: they no more to enjoy the ſweet delight of his company, the ſaving and ſavoury flavor of his diſcourſes, and rare example of his life and converſe. Of all this they were very ſenſible, but moſt of all, that he ſhould be taken from them in ſuch a manner: As the Children of the Prophets ſaid to Eliſha, Knoweſt thou that thy Maſter this day will be taken from thine head? Diſciples, know ye that your Maſter will preſently be taken from you? Yes, we know it, he hath told us ſo. But do you apprehend that he is to be taken from you by ſuch a ſhameful, cruel, horrid death? That he was to be taken away from them at all, how might it juſtly trouble their hearts; but overwhelm their hearts, if they knew the manner how?

Againſt this ſadneſs he chears them with all the arguments and comforts that we meet with in the Text and Context: ye will not ſee me any more, yet believe in me: I go from you, but I go to prepare a place for you. Though I leave you, yet I do not forſake you, for I will come and take you to my ſelf. But beſides this,

There was a two fold trouble and diſcomforture might lie upon their hearts by looking upon themſelves with reflexion upon two common and received opinions and tenets of the Nation; in which they themſelves had been trained up even from their infancy, till they met with their Maſter.

And the firſt was, that if a Jew forſook his Judaiſm he ſhould have no part in the World to come. A ſowre ſauce, that no doubt the unbelieving Jews would lay in the diſh of the Diſciples, and all other of the Nation, that were turned Chriſtians. Oh! ye have forſaken your Religion, and what will become of you? The Apoſtles diſcourſe ſeems directly to face ſuch a reproach, in I Theſ. IV. 13, 14. I would not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning them that ſleep, that ye ſorrow not as others that have no hope. What were they Sadducees, that denied any Reſurrection? And did they account them that were dead to be diſſolved into nothing, and quite loſt and gone? Or acknowledging the Reſurrection, did they think their fellow Chriſtians that were dead were gone to perdition, and were in a damned eſtate? Or was not this old Jewiſh Maxim rather caſt in their teeth: (for the firſt foundation of this Theſſalonian Church was of Jews). You and your Sect have turned your back upon your Judaiſm, and forſaken your Religion; and where are they that are dead, and what will become of you, when you die? When as you have been taught from your child-hood, He that forſaketh his Judaiſm ſhall have no part in the World to come. You forſook to follow a certain Jeſus, have forſaken the Religion of your Fathers, and what will you do in the latter end, when ye come to die? Why, ſaith the Apoſtle, Doubt not, but as many as ſleep in Jeſus, Jeſus will bring with him, and raiſe them even as God raiſed Jeſus.

Now this might trouble the minds of the Apoſtles. They had forſaken their Judaiſm, and turned their backs upon the Religion, they had been trained up in from their cradle, to follow the new doctrine, and precepts of their Maſter: and now their Maſter is going from them; and what have they to comfort themſelves againſt that dagger-doctrine, He that forſakes his Judaiſm, &c. why, Let not your hearts be troubled, ye believe in God, be not affraid to believe alſo in me on the terms that I have told you, even to the forſaking of your Judaiſm, and to the embracing of my new way of adminiſtration. For in my Fathers houſe are many manſions: Manſions for you that believe in me, as well as for them that under Judaiſm believe in the Father; manſions for them under the Goſpel-adminiſtration under which I have brought you, as well as for them, that are under Legal adminiſtrations, which you have left. If it were not ſo I would have told you, and will not deceive you.

III. It was a common and received doctrine and opinion of the Nation, that Meſſias ſhould have a pompous Kingdom; that he ſhould give ſplendid entertainment to his followers upon earth, feaſting, banqueting, great ſtate and bravery. And the Apoſtles themſelves, were not yet cleared of that opinion, as appears by the requeſt of Zebedees ſons, ſons, that one of them might ſit on his right hand, and the other on his left in his Kingdom: and by that queſtion of the Diſciples, Act. I. 6. &c. Lord, wilt thou at this time reſtore the Kingdom to Iſrael? &c.

Now theſe poor men took Jeſus indeed for the Meſſias, but as yet they have ſeen no ſuch entertainment at all. They poor and their Maſter poor too. He ſo far from giving any ſuch treatment, that he had not where himſelf to lay his own head; and they ſo far from finding any ſuch entertainment, that they had met with nothing but poverty, danger, contempt and obloquy. And now their Maſter is going from them, and what is become now of their expectation of that bravery and Kingdom? Why, Let not your hearts be troubled, I have noble entertainment for you, but that is not to be here, but in my Fathers houſe; and thither I am going to prepare it and a place for you: and I will come again and take you to my ſelf to treat you there.

So that reading the words with the foil and ſet off of thoſe two opinions, which help to illuſtrate the ſence by reflexion, you may obſerve in them theſe Two things.

I. That Chriſts entertainment of his people is in Heaven.
II. That there they all meet in that bleſſed entertainment, though here they were under various and different adminiſtrations.

Many manſions in the Text ſpeaks not ſeveral and divided places in Heaven, as the ſeveral Cabbins in Noahs Ark, but it reflects upon the many adminiſtrations they were ſeverally under upon earth: though under various and different, and almoſt contrary adminiſtrations on earth, yet all meet in his Fathers houſe, for there are many manſions, and there is the place of his entertaining them.

I ſhall not need to prove that by his Fathers houſe he meaneth Heaven, the very words following, I go to prepare, &c. make that plain enough. But I ſhall ſpeak to both the Propoſitions before us as it were twiſtedly together in the method in which Chriſt acteth as to the things ſpoken of. And firſt this,

I. Chriſt ſaw it good to bring his Church through various adminiſtrations of the matters of Religion, and of the way of Salvation. I ſay not through various Religions and ways of Salvations, but through various adminiſtrations of the matters of Religion and of the way of Salvation, before the Law, under the Law, and under the Goſpel.

I ſhall not need to clear this in particulars; it is ſo conſpicuous, and ſo well known to all, that it were but expence of time to inſiſt upon the proof of it. Only let me ſay this upon it, that God uſed theſe various adminiſtrations to his Church according to the diverſity of the age of that myſtical body, Child-hood, nonage and conſiſtency. And this the Apoſtle ſpeaks plainly for me, Gal. IV. at the beginning, where he tells us, that as the heir in nonage differs nothing from a Servant, but is under Tutors and Governors, and ſubjection; ſo we when we were Children, that is, while Chriſts body was under age, were in bonduge under the rudiments of the World, till the fulneſs of time come. Before the Law, the Church was in its child-hood, ſmall and little, confined within the compaſs of one or few families: and then God brought it up upon his own knees, documenting it, (as a mother does her child beford ſhe ſend it to School) with his own lively Voice, in Viſions, Revelations, or his own Words ſpoken from Heaven.

When it grew bigger and ſo very numerous in Egypt, God then ſet it forth to School, under the written Law, a School-Maſter, as the Apoſtle calls it, and a ſharp one too: and it was no more than needed, that it ſhould be put under the laſh and ferule of ſo ſevere a diſcipline. For now the youth began to wax wanton, and to forſake God that had ſo tenderly brought it up, and to betake it ſelf to the Idols of Egypt, as Ezekiel tells you in his twentieth Chapter. Therefore to School, child, to School, under the laſh of a ſeveer Law to keep under that youthfulneſs, that was ſo ready to grow exorbitant.

And in this School the Church yet under age, was under a twofold adminiſtration, viz. under the Law with Prophets and Revelations under the firſt Temple, and under the Law without Prophets and Revelations under the ſecond.

At laſt comes in the Goſpel; and the Church is taken from School, and put to the Univerſity, and now it comes up to perfect manlineſs; the Gentiles are called in, and that makes up the compleat body. It might be an Inquiry, why the Church was to grow up towards conſiſtency three thouſand nine hundred twenty eight years, viz. ere Chriſt came?

That is, the perfect man and the meaſure of the ſtature of the fulneſs of Chriſt, which the Apoſtle ſpeaks of, Epheſ. IV. 13. which ſome conceive to mean the ſtature of the bodies of the Saints when they ſhall riſe from the dead, juſt proportionated to the ſtature of Chriſts body when he died; which is as far from the meaning of the Apoſtle, as it is from hence to the Reſurrection: but he means the perfect growth and full ſtature of Chriſts myſtical myſtical body, the Church, which was growing up from generation to generation, and now, when the Gentiles came in their full conflux, was come to its full conſiſtency and manhood.

And of the ſame body is his meaning in that obſcure and much miſtaken place, Rom. VIII. 23. And not only they, i. e. the whole creation, or πᾶσα κτίσις, every creature, which means no other thing than the Gentile or Heathen World: not only they grone to come in-to the Evangelical liberty of the children of God, but we alſo of the Jewiſh Nation, who have the firſt fruits of the Spirit, grone within our ſelves, waiting for the redemption, to wit, the adoption of our body: we wait for the redeeming and adopting of the Gentiles to make up our myſtical body.

To the ſame ſence is the meaning of the ſame Apoſtle in that alſo miſtaken place, Heb. XI. ult. That they without us ſhould not be perfect. He little means, that they that believed before the coming of Chriſt were not perfectly ſaved; as the Papiſts from thence would prove their Limbo: But his meaning is, they without us were not the perfect body of Chriſt; but we under the Goſpel came in to make that up: nor they ſo perfect in the Doctrine of Salvation, as under the revealing of the Goſpel at our coming in. So that this is the firſt thing, That Chriſt ſaw good to bring his Church through various adminiſtrations.

II. Secondly, Though the manner of adminiſtration were thus various, yet the way of Salvation in them all but one and the ſame, viz. by Faith in Chriſt: as the Apoſtle plainly evidenceth in the Chapter juſt now cited, Heb. XI. As the brazen Oxen under the Laver, their faces looked ſeveral ways, but their hinder parts met in one centre under the Laver, ſo theſe Adminiſtrations indeed looked divers ways, without Law, with Law, with Prophets, without Prophets, without Goſpel, with Goſpel, yet agreed in all one and the ſame centre, Faith in Jeſus Chriſt. I have a large field before me, to ſhew that all the holy ones, that lived and died before Chriſt were ſaved by believing in Chriſt. But I ſhall confine my ſelf to obſerve this by a rule of contraries, namely thus.

It is ſomething to be wondred at, that in our reckoning the various adminiſtrations under which Chriſt brought his Church to glory, we may not number the firſtborn adminiſtration that was in the World, and which one would think was the likelieſt way to have brought to Heaven, and that was the ſtate of innocency. But this we muſt except from the general rule, and leave it quite out. He that will obſerve ſhall find that Chriſt deſcended moſt of younger brothers: and anſwerably Salvation deſcended not from this elder brother in Gods adminiſtration, that ſtate of innocency, but ſomething elſe had the birth-right: Ruben loſt it, and it deſcended to Joſeph.

It was never Gods intent to bring men to Salvation by the way of innocence, in which Adam was created. This appears plain enough by the Iſſue. Nay, did God bring the holy Angels to Salvation by the way of the perfection of their nature, in which they were created? Meerly being in Heaven doth not denominate Salvation. The Angels that fell were there, and it proved but little Heaven to them. And merely beholding God face to face doth not denominate Salvation: for we have no cauſe to think, but the Angels that fell, had beheld his face, as well as they that ſtood: but this is Salvation to behold him as he is, and to be like unto him, I Joh. III. 2. Like him, not in infinity, omnipotency, ubiquity, but like him in holineſs, holy as he is holy. Now though Adam was like unto him by Creation, being formed in his Image, and the Angels like unto him by Creation, as eminently alſo carrying the ſame Image; yet herein both come ſhort, of that Image that doth conſummate the Saints and Angels in glory, viz. that though they were perfectly holy by Creation, yet they were not unchangeably holy: for unchangeableneſs was not to be found in created nature. And what the holy Man in the book of Job ſaith concerning Wiſdom, we may ſay concerning immutability: Where is unchangeableneſs to be found, and where is the place of immutability? The Sea ſaith it is not in me, and the Earth ſaith it is not in me. Men ſay it is not in us, the Angels ſay it is not in us, but the Truth ſaith it is only in God.

Therefore to bring Men and Angels into the Eſtate of Glory, that, ſet Infinity aſide, they ſhould be like unto God, perfectly holy and unchangeably holy as God is holy, eternally holy as God is holy; it was needful not to leave them bottomed only upon the excellency of their created natures, be that never ſo excellent, but to ingraff, and as I may ſay, incorporate them even into the unchangeable God himſelf, the Lord Chriſt. The Saints in glory are unchangeable, how? Both in nature and affection, their eſtate unchangeable, yea their very thoughts which were ſo unfixed and fluid, become unchangeable. They are ſo infinitely raviſhed with the beauty and love of God in beholding him as he is, that they cannot turn the leaſt thought away or aſide from him. And they are ſo ingraffed and united into Chriſt, that the corruptibleneſs of them being now laid aſide, they are become unchangeable, as Chriſt himſelf is unchangeable. The Angels that fell wanted this uniting, ſo that though they beheld the face of God, yet their hearts hearts turned away from him: becauſe they had no other uniting to God, then what lay in their own created holineſs, which was changeable and ſoon changed.

So that, I ſay, God never intended to bring man to Salvation by the way of created innocency, becauſe he intends to glorifie grace and not nature, and to bottom all that were to be ſaved upon Chriſt, and not on themſelves. It may ſeem ſtrange, that Adam, when his wife had brought in ſin and death into the World, ſhould name her Eve, life, whereas before he had only named her Woman. Call me not Naomi, but call me Marah, might ſhe very well have ſaid unto him; Call me not life, but call me death and miſery, for I have been the unhappy introducer of both. But Adam had now heard of Chriſt, he had received his promiſe, and laid hold on it, and found a better life now by him than before.

And to this refers that in *Joh.*I.4. In him was life, and that life was the light of men. In the verſe next before he had ſaid, All things were made by him, and without him was nothing made that was. Then had all living things that were created their life from him. What need he then to add, in him was life? Namely becauſe he intends that life in Chriſt, that we are ſpeaking of. Which life, he ſaith, was the light of men. And the light ſhone in darkneſs, and the darkneſs comprehended it not. Life in Chriſt held out in the promiſe to Adam, was the light that all holy men from Adam forward looked after and walked by. And that light ſhone in the darkneſs of mans now ſinful and undone condition. That light ſhone in the darkneſs before the Law, when their was no light of a Law, but what was written in the heart of man. That light ſhone in the darkneſs of the Types and Figures that were in the Law, when the Law was given. And that light ſhone in the darkneſs and obſcurities of the cloudy Propheſies of the Prophets. And at laſt it ſhone out fully without any darkneſs at his coming in the Goſpel, and that, at verſe the ninth, was the true light that inlightneth every man that came into the world, that inlightneth the Gentiles, even all the World.

So that all along even from the firſt day of Adam, under the various adminiſtrations, in which it pleaſed God to carry on this Light, this was the life and light of men, None but Chriſt, none but Chriſt. They that went before him, before the Law, and under the Law; and they that come after, under the Goſpel, crying Hoſanna to him, expecting and finding Salvation from him.

III. And this leads me to the third thing we are to ſpeak of, viz. Chriſts entertaining all his, that thus under theſe ſeveral Adminiſtrations believed in him, in his Fathers houſe, in Salvation and Eternity.

I, at the laſt he did ſo, will the Romaniſt ſay, but firſt, by your leave, were all the believers before Chriſt came entertained in Limbo? Truly very courſe entertainment, when the good men had ſerved God all the day, and at night ſhould have received their wages, there was yet none for them, but they muſt to Limbo, and wait yet (it may be) two or three thouſand years, and then they ſhall be paid. Poor Abel ſerved his Maſter faithfully and truly all his time, dies in his Maſters ſervice, and for his Maſters ſake, and when he comes to expect his reward in Heaven; no, Abel, thou muſt to Limbo, and there ſtay till Chriſt come and fetch thee out, about three thouſand five hundred years after thou comeſt thither. Very hard payment. And a ſtrange buſineſs, that Abraham whilſt he lived ſhould converſe with God as a friend, and walk and talk with him, and entertain God at his Table; and when he is dead, he is become a mere ſtranger to God, thruſt into a hole in Limbo, where no light of God, no communion with him at all, but God and Abraham are now mere ſtrangers.

Such mad abſurdities doth the limiting of the Spirit and operation of Chriſt to the bodily preſence of Chriſt produce and bring into the World. Such is the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation, and ſuch this of Limbo. Tranſubſtantiation that maintains that there is no receiving Chriſt virtually in the Sacrament, unleſs we receive him bodily, his very fleſh and blood. And this of Limbo, that none went to Heaven, till Chriſt went in his real preſence to Limbo, after his Death, to fetch them thence, and bring them to Glory.

I had thought Abraham had been in glory before. For when Chriſt before his death doth propoſe that parable of Abraham in joys, and Lazarus in his boſom, certainly he is propoſed not as being in Limbo, but in Heaven. And when Moſes appears to Chriſt in Glory, Luke IX. 31. do you think he came out of Limbo in that glory? But what need I trouble you with the confutation of ſuch abſurdities? If it be the Spirit and Power of Chriſt, that operates for mans Salvation, and not his bodily preſence: if it be the fruit and effect of Faith to unite to Chriſt, and to bring into the enjoyment of all the benefits of Chriſt, grace and glory: and if all the holy ones under thoſe various adminiſtrations, before the Law, under the Law, and under the Goſpel, had ſuch faith in Chriſt, what doubt can be made of their Salvation, when they died, and that they were received and entertained by Chriſt in the Manſions of his Fathers houſe?

The

The last word You in the Text, I suppose, is that where the Emphasis especially lies. I go to prepare a place for you, as I have prepared place for others before you: for Enoch, Abraham, &c. before the Law; for Moses, Aaron, Joshua, David, &c. under the Law; I am now going also to prepare a place for you; and there is place for you, that are come under an administration, clean different from all theirs. For in my Fathers house are many mansions.

Being then to speak of Christs entertaining all his in Heaven, let me begin my discourse with sursum Corda, Christians, lift up your hearts; that that you have to look after is above. It is the Voice of my beloved, I am going to prepare for you in my Fathers house. O my soul, look not after any lower preparation. The husks and draff of this World is not the provision, that Christ makes for his. And why should I feed upon Onyions and Garlick, when if I will seek after it, there is Manna enough for me, the food of Angels. I am going to prepare a place for you in my Fathers house, is a word that might make a Soul never to be quiet till it come there, and that might make it to scorn and slight all this trash here below, in reaching out and breathing after the provisions that are there.

Lift up your heads and hearts, ye afflicted and dejected, and despised servants of the Lord Jesus; though your bread here be bread of affliction, and you mingle your drink with weeping, though ye walk in hunger and poverty, under derision and persecution and trouble, though oppressed, afflicted, tormented, yet here is enough to make amends in the end for all. I go to prepare for you. Be content with your dinner of bitter herbs, and sower sauce, apud superos cœnaturi, there is a supper provided for you in eternal mansions.

What entertainment Jew and Millenary look for in Christs personal reign upon Earth, let them enjoy when they can meet with it, but if you be risen with Christ seek those things that are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God, preparing for you. Let us begin at the lowest step of Jacobs ladder, and climb up gradatim to the top of it, where it is lodged in Heaven.

First, This World is not a place for Christs entertaining of His; as it proved but a course Entertainment of Christ, when he was here. My Kingdom, saith he, is not of this World, nor indeed can it be, let Jew and Millenary conceit what they please. For observe that passage in III. Gen. 17. where as soon as Adam is fallen, the Earth is cursed, Cursed be the ground for thy sake, in sorrow shalt thou eat of it. Did I say, as soon as he was fallen, the Earth is cursed, I should rather say, as soon as Christ is promised, the Earth is cursed: for there is as proper a connexion between those two as between his fall and that curse. Christ is promised and the Earth is cursed, that Adam and all the Saints of God might not look for blessedness upon the Earth but in Christ; nor for Christ nor his Kingdom upon this cursed Earth, but in Heaven.

O Jew the Earth is cursed, where canst thou find a place upon it for Messias blessed Kingdom? All is but as Meshek and the Tents of Kedar to him, he finds not a place here to lay his head. I may say the title over Christs head was and is a stumbling block under the Jews feet; where it was written Jesus of Nazareth, and they looked for Messias of Bethlehem; King of the Jews, and they saw nothing in him but poverty and contempt.

In Joh. XVII. 24. Father I will, that those whom thou hast given me, be with me, where I am. Where I am, where is that? Not here, wherein is poverty, contempt and dishonor, as he experienced when he was here, but to see my glory: there where he is glorified. Alas! What treatment can he provide for them here? Can he spread a table for their full satisfaction in this Wilderness; where he found none for himself? The dish he sets before them is, In this world you shall have tribulation, but be of good chear, there is better chear provided for you in my Fathers house. This is but a Wilderness, you are passing through, Canaan is the land provided for the flowing with milk and hony. In my Fathers house there are μοναὶ πολλαὶ many abiding places, here you are flitting from place to place and no abiding; but I have prepared a Rest for the people of God.

An unfit place here, where there is nothing but changes and vicissitudes, and where in a moment Amnons mirth and feasting may be turned into mourning and misery. All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change cometh, saith Job. Why he met with changes enough; but he means his great change, when he should be changed no more, than that that he looks for and trusts in. An unfit place this, when the house may be blown down, whilst we are feasting in it, as it happened to Jobs children. This World then is no fit place for Christ to entertain his people in.

Secondly, A believer in this World is not yet capable of the Entertainment that Christ has to give him; therfore that is reserved for him in his Fathers house. As Christ tells his Disciples, I have many things to speak to you, but you cannot bear them. So I say in our present case, Christ hath many excellent treatments to entertain them withal, but here they they are not fit for them; while we are in this corruptible flesh, we want the wedding garment. Flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God. So corruptible bodies are not garments fit for these divine entertainments.

1. The Soul in these bodies does not act to the utmost extent its nature is capable of. It is like a bird, that let out injoys a whole World of liberty, but not before. There is a kind of immensity in the Soul, and this is one part of Gods image. Any one Soul among us could hold as much wisdom, goodness, &c. as God in its degree and capacity, but it is straitned in these bodies, that it cannot act to such an extentiveness. As the River is straitned within its banks till it fall into the Ocean; so the Soul here is straitned by ignorance, infirmities, pressures, but at death it slips into the Ocean of Eternity, where there is no more straitness.

2. How impossible is it in these mortal bodies to see God, as he is? How hard through the fogs of flesh to see the things of God? How impossible to behold God in his essence? In the mount will the Lord be seen, and not in the low vallies of mortality and corruption. Oh! I cannot but with rapture consider of the strange and blessed change, that blessed Souls find, as soon as ever departed. Here we are groping after him, and much ado we have to discern a little of him; here one cloud or other is interposing twixt our contemplation, and that Sun. But as soon as we are got out of the body we behold that incomprehensible light, as he is. Oh! what rapture of Soul will it be, to see all clouds dispelled, and to look with open full eye upon the Sun. Oh! this is our God, we have groped, we have waited for him. What the Apostle saith II Cor. III. ult. But we all with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image, from glory to glory: This is of transcendent comfort for believers, it being their happiness here to behold as in a glass the glory of the Lord, and to be changed into the same image. What ravishment of Joy will it be to find it effected to the utmost in Eternity?

3. How impossible is it to keep the heart fixed on God here? While flesh hangs on it, that will be making it to flag aside.

A SERMON PREACHED AT HERTFORD Aſſiſe,

April 6. 1666.

I JOHN V. 16.

There is a ſin unto death, I do not ſay that he ſhould pray for it.

AND it is a deadly ſin indeed that outvies and excludes the charity of this Apoſtle. A man as his Writings evidence of him, and as Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory teſtifies concerning him, compoſed altogether of Charity. His Epiſtles evidence to you how urgent he is for love one to another; and Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory will tell you that his common ſalutation to all he met, was, Let us love one another: But here he hath met with a wretch to whom he cannot find in his heart to ſay God ſpeed. A deadly ſin and a deadly ſinner, to whom he cannot allow the Chriſtian, the Common, the needful Charity of his own or other mens prayers. O no, It is a ſin unto death.

The uttering of the firſt clauſe, There is a ſin unto death, may not undeſervedly nor impertinently move ſuch another inquiry in the Congregation, as the uttering of thoſe words of our Saviour, One of you ſhall betray me, did move at his Table every one then to ſay, Is it I, and every one here to ſay, is the ſin mine? As it was time for every one of Iſrael to look about him leſt the thing ſhould fall to his ſhare, when Joſhua proclaimed among them, There is an accurſed thing in the midſt of thee O Iſrael, Joſh VII. 13. So when the Holy Ghoſt proclaimeth in the words of the Text, There is a ſin unto death, is it not time, is it not pertinent for every one that is within hearing to look about and take heed leſt this dead Concubine do lie at the threſhold of his door as ſhe did in Gibeah, Judg. XIX. And what hath any notorious ſinner to ſay for himſelf why the Law of the Text ſhould not proceed againſt him and condemn his profaneneſs, uncleanneſs, wickedneſs, unconſcionableneſs under the name and title of a ſin unto death: ſeeing it ſeemeth a great deal more currant that there is ſin unto death, than that there ſhould be any ſin that is not unto death, as our Apoſtle ſaith there is in the words immediately going before thete that I have choſen.

In theſe that I have choſen you ſee there are two clauſes, and out of either of them ariſe two Queſtions.

Out of the former, I. What ſin it is the Apoſtle means? And II. Why he titles it by ſuch a name, A ſin unto death?

Out of the latter, I. Why he forbideth to pray for it? And, II. Why he forbideth not to pray for it? I mean, why he ſpeaketh not out in down right terms, I ſay, that he ſhould not pray for it, but ſays only, I ſay not that he ſhould.

The Rhemiſts Popiſh Expoſitors upon the place will anſwer you even all theſe queſtions with a breath, if you will but take their words, and little more than their bare word muſt you expect for the proof and confirmation of what they tell you.

1. They will tell you, that the ſin our Apoſtle means is any ſin whatſoever, that any one lives in unrepentant all his time.

2. They

2. They will tell you, that it is titled A ſin unto death, becauſe he lives in it till his death, and ſo dies in it.

3. They will tell you, that the Apoſtle by not praying for him, means not praying for him, when he is dead: but he that ſins not a ſin unto death, that is, that lives not in his ſin till he die, but repents of it before, for him you muſt pray after his death.

For that the place is moſt properly or only meant of praying for the departed, ſay they, this convinced that neither the Church, nor any man is debarred here from praying for any ſinner while living, nor for remiſſion of any ſin in this life. And ſo they go on.

When I read theſe mens Annotations on this Scripture, they often mind me of Benhadads ſervants with ropes about their necks, catching at any word that fell from the King of Iſraels mouth, that might be for any advantage to their forlorn and loſt cauſe and condition. Theſe mens Popiſh cauſe hath had the rope about its neck now a long time, and been in a loſt and forlorn caſe, and I cannot tell, whether I ſhould laugh or frown, to ſee what pitiful ſhift, and ſhameful ſcrambling they make for it, by catching at any word or ſyllable in the Scripture or Fathers, and wreſting, and twiſting, and twining it to any ſeeming or colourable advantage to their condemned cauſe to ſave it from execution.

Certainly they are at a very hard pinch for proof of praying for the dead, when they make ſuch a ſcraping in this portion of Scripture to rake it out thence: whereas the words are as far from meaning the living praying for the dead, as the dead praying for the living.

And at the very ſame game they be in their notes upon our Saviours words concerning the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, that it ſhall never be forgiven in this World, nor in the World to come, Matth. XII. 32. Their note is, that ſome ſins may be remitted in the next life, and conſequently this proves Purgatory. As the poor frantick diſtracted wretch at Athens, that fed and pleaſed himſelf with this fancy, that every ſhip that came into the Port was his ſhip, that all the goods that came into the Town were his goods, whilſt he himſelf in the mean time was miſerably poor, naked, and ready to famiſh: ſo theſe men think every verſe in Scripture brings in ſomething to their ſtock, every ſaying of the Fathers ſomething to their bank; whilſt in the mean while, their pitiful cauſe walks ſtarven, and poor, and blind, and naked, and ſtands in need of all things.

The ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt indeed is diſtinct and ſomething different from this ſin unto death, that our Apoſtle ſpeaketh of; yet ſince there is ſuch a particular ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, that is ſo deadly, why ſhould not theſe men think, that ſin in the Text, that carries ſo deadly a name, is a particular ſin likewiſe?

It is true indeed that a ſin in which a man continues unrepenting until his death and in which he dies, may very juſtly be called A ſin to death, that is, a ſin until his death, and it will prove A ſin to death eternal, but that the Apoſtle means here a particular ſin, and that he eſtimates it, not by its length but by its weight, not by how long the party continues in it, but by how grievous the ſin is in it ſelf will appear as we go along, partly by diſcovery of the reaſon of the title he puts upon it, and partly by diſcovery of the very ſin it ſelf that is here intended.

But before we begin with the diſcovery of the reaſon of the title, let us a little look firſt into the meaning of thoſe words of our Saviour, Joh. XX. 22. He breathed on them and ſaith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghoſt, whoſe ſoever ſins ye remit, they are remitted to them, and whoſe ſoever ſins ye retain, they are retained. Do not the Apoſtles here receive a new power, or priviledge, or guift which Chriſt had not imparted to them before? Elſe why ſuch an action as he had never uſed toward them before, ſo breathing on them?

The common acceptation of theſe words, whoſe ſoever ſins ye remit or retain are remitted or retained, is to make them to mean the ſame thing, with what ye bind on Earth ſhall be bound in Heaven, &c. But beſides that the expreſſions are of a vaſt difference, why if Chriſt had given them the very ſame power in thoſe words, that he doth in theſe, why ſhould he repeat it, eſpecially why ſhould he uſe ſuch a ſolemn and unuſual rite toward them to breath upon them?

He had given them power of miracles, and healing, and caſting out Devils before without breathing upon them: He had given them power of binding and looſing, that is of eſtabliſhing or aboliſhing the rites and Laws of Moſes, for ſo the Phraſe in the common acceptation of the Nation did only ſignifie; and this he did without breathing upon them. Therefore certainly in this his new action and theſe his new words, as I may call them, he gives them ſome new power, and that in two kinds.

1. In his breathing upon them and bidding them receive the Holy Ghoſt, he gives the Holy Ghoſt, to give again, or he gives them power by the impoſition of their hands to beſtow the Holy Ghoſt as the ſacred Story tells you, the Apoſtle did, and none but the Apoſtles could do.

And

And 2. In his words, whoſe ſoever ſins ye remit or retain, he gives them a punitive or executive double power, viz. To ſtrike deſperate or incorrigible and horrid tranſgreſſors with ſome corporal puniſhment or ſtroke, or elſe to give them up to Satan to be tortured and ſcourged in body, and vexed and diſquieted in mind. Where had Peter his warrant to ſtrike Ananias and Sapphira with death, but from theſe words? And Paul to ſtrike Elymas with blindneſs, and to deliver Hymenæus and Alexander unto Satan, but from that Apoſtolick power which Chriſt granted to the Apoſtles in theſe words?

Well: might not theſe ſins very well be called ſins unto death, that were overtaken with ſuch deadly and dreadful penalties?

Was not that ſin a ſin unto death, that was to be retained, as retaining is ſet in di rectoppoſition to remitting? Thus may we bring the ſubjectum quæſtionis into a far narrower compaſs than the Rhemiſts bring it, who do bewray their ignorance one way, that they may ſerve their own turn another: their ignorance of the proper original of the Phraſe ſin unto death, that they may ſerve their turn about praying for the dead.

The greateſt difficulties of the Scripture lie in the Language: for unlock the Language and Phraſes, and the difficulty is gone. And therefore they that take upon them to preach by the ſpirit, and to expound the Scripture by the ſpirit, let them either unlock to me the Hebrew Phraſes in the Old Teſtament, and the Greek in the New, that are difficult and obſcure, or elſe they do nothing. Now to attain to the meaning of ſuch dark and doubtful Phraſes, the way is not ſo proper to put on them a ſenſe of our own, as to conſider what ſenſe they might take them in, to whom, and among whom, the things were ſpoken and written in their common Speech.

If it were well conſidered how the Jewiſh Nation underſtood binding and looſing in their Schools and in their common Speech, we ſhould never need to mint ſuch ſenſes of our own to put upon the Phraſe, it would ſo be done to our hands.

Such an obſcure Phraſe is that of our Saviours, about the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, that it ſhall never be forgiven neither in this life, nor, &c. And the collection that the Rhemiſts make upon it, may ſeem very Logical, for in that he ſaith, that ſin ſhall not be forgiven in the World to come, doth it not argue that ſome other ſins are then forgiven? But this is their own ſenſe and Logick, it is not our Saviours.

Now how ſhould we know our Saviours ſenſe? By conſidering how they would underſtand it to whom the words were ſpoken, in their common acceptation and Language, viz. they would ſoon underſtand it to be a direct facing and confuting of their fooliſh opinion concerning forgiveneſs of blaſphemy againſt God; which was, that repentance and the day of expiation expiated a third part of the ſin, corporal puniſhment inflicted by the Magiſtrate expiated another third part, but death did quite wipe it clean out: for ſay they, it is written, This ſin ſhall not be purged from you till you die, which argues, that it was purged by death. No ſaith our Saviour, neither in this life either by repentance, nor day of expiation, nor corporal puniſhment, nor pardon in the life to come, by the purging and wiping out of death.

Such an obſcure Phraſe is this before us. A ſin unto death, and it ſeems a fair ſenſe which the Rhemiſts have put upon it of their own, viz. that it ſhould mean A ſin a man lives in till he die. But this is their own ſenſe, it is not the Apoſtles: Now how ſhould we know the Apoſtles ſenſe? By conſidering how they underſtood this Phraſe in their common Language to whom he wrote: And how was that? Take it up by this Obſervation.

That in the Jewiſh Schools, and Nation, and Language, this was a moſt frequent and ordinary ſaying, אם שוגג חשארת If a man do ſuch or ſuch a thing as ſhould not be done, ignorantly, he is to bring a ſin offering and that attones for him. But אם מויד נכרת if he do it wilfully, he is bound over to cutting off.

And in this they ſpeak but the words of the Law, in Numb. XV. 27, 28. If any ſoul ſin through ignorance, he ſhall bring a ſhe goat of the firſt year for a ſin offering. And the Prieſt ſhall make an attonement for him that ſinneth ignorantly. But the ſoul that doth ought preſumptuouſly; whether he be born in the Land, or a Stranger, the ſame hath reproached the Lord: That ſoul ſhall be cut off from among his people.

Now what is meant by cutting off? If you aſk ſome they will put a ſenſe of their own upon the Phraſe, and tell you it means a cutting off or ſeparating a perſon from the Congregation and publick Aſſemblies by Excommunication. But aſk the Jews to and among whom the thing was ſpoken, what it means in their common ſpeech and acceptation, and they will tell you, cutting off means כותה ביד שמים Death by the hand of Heaven. Death or deſtruction by the hand of God. Interpreting the matter to this purpoſe, that if a perſon ſinned wilfully and preſumptuouſly, there was no ſin offering allowed in that caſe, but the party ſo offending fell immediately under liableneſs to divine vengance, to be deſtroied or cut off by the hand of Heaven.

And

And this interpretation of the Phraſe of cutting off, the Apoſtle Paul doth juſtifie in that paſſage, Heb. X. 26. If we ſin wilfully after we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for ſin; but a certain fearful looking for of judgment, &c. That Text of Moſes lots out the family of the Achan that we are ſpeaking of, the ſin unto death: and this Text of the Apoſtle takes him by the poll, and tells what ſin it is.

It tells you what ſin it is, viz. Sinning wilfully after we have received the knowledge of the truth: It limits to you, why it is called a ſin unto death; becauſe there is no other way upon the committing of it, but a certain fearful expectation of judgment and fiery indignation. And it gives you ſome intimation why no praying for it, becauſe no ſacrifice for it.

Before we come to ſpeak upon the words, we have ſome cauſe to muſe and mourn over them. As it is ſaid, Origen wept over that paſſage of the Pſalmiſt that after his Apoſtaſie ſtung him, in Pſal. L. 16, 17. But unto the wicked God ſaid what haſt thou to do to declare my ſtatutes, or that thou ſhouldeſt take my Covenant in thy mouth, ſeeing thou hateſt inſtruction and caſteth my words behind thee.

If there be no ſacrifice for ſin but a fearful expectation of judgment and fiery indignation when we have ſinned wilfully, after we have once received the knowledge of the truth: Men and brethren, what ſhall we do? Take the truth in the ſenſe that may help moſt to favour us, for the Goſpel, as it means there indeed. And take ſinning wilfully for as excluſive a term as you can, to ſhut and exclude us out of the guilt here intended; yet who can ſay but he hath ſinned wilfully ſince he received the knowledge of the Goſpel over and over?

If I ſhould take Jeremiahs courſe in his fifth Chapter and verſ. 4. and forward, ſending firſt to the poor or inferior rank and aſk them, Have you not ſinned wilfully ſince you receiv'd the knowledge of the Goſpel in your private deportment? Or go to the great ones or to them in power, dignity and eſtate, and aſk them have you not ſinned wilfully ſince you receiv'd the knowledge of the truth in your publick imployment? I cannot ſay what every one, or any one, may anſwer: but I am ſure the faireſt way, and upon the juſteſt reaſon for every one to anſwer, were as tis Job VII. 20. I have ſinned, what ſhall I do to thee, O preſerver of men? I have ſinned wilfully what ſhall I do to thee, O thou giver of the Goſpel?

The word the Apoſtle uſeth here is ἑκουσίως, which in the beſt and neareſt propriety ſignifies willingly, and ſo it ſhreds a lapful of gourds the more into the pot of pottage, to make it the more bitter. For though ſome conſcience may contend to ſecure it ſelf againſt the accuſation of ſinning wilfully, yet who can ſay but he hath ſinned willingly ſince he received the knowledge of the Goſpel, and that many a time over?

The allay ſhall I ſay, or the ſmartneſs of this word is beſt to be judged by the contrary word, which the Greek Interpreters uſed in the caſe of Moſes, we have alledged. What he ſpeaks of ſinning ignorantly, they render Ἀκουσίως ſinning unwillingly, and ſo they oppoſe unwilling ſinning and preſumptuous ſinning one againſt the other. And anſwerably the Apoſtle uſing the word, but doth moſt directly oppoſe unwilling, ἑκουσίως, that doth moſt directly oppoſe Ἀκουσίως, he ſheweth plainly that he takes it in the ſame direct oppoſition, namely to ſignifie ſinning wilfully or preſumptuouſly.

But what is this particular ſin that he doth intend? What is that ſinning wilfully with him, that with our Apoſtle is a ſin unto death? Gueſs it by the ſtory of thoſe times, which ſhews it plain enough, that I may not ſpend more time than is needful about the diſcovery of it. Our Saviour in the end of his parable of the unclean ſpirit caſt out of a man, and walking in dry places, and becauſe he could find no reſt there, returning to the place whence he came out, with ſeven other ſpirits worſe than himſelf, and dwelling there, hath this ſad cadence, Even ſo ſhall it be alſo to this wicked generation, Matth. XII. 45. Ah! unhappy generation, the Devil caſt out and returning again, abſent a while himſelf, but returning with ſeven other Devils worſe than himſelf: how great, how ſad an apoſtaſie doth this intimate in the Jewiſh Nation, from the Goſpel, which had caſt out the unclean ſpirit for a while from among them?

Such an Apoſtaſie very deadly and general, from the Goſpel after they had received the knowledge of it, and ſo evidently recorded in the Apoſtles Epiſtles, that I need not to recite it: and ſo copiouſly, that I ſhould but tire you with citing places. Take but theſe two or three.

Gal. I. 6. The Apoſtle intimates that they were removed, and ſoon removed, from him that called them into the grace of Chriſt. II Tim. I. 15. All Aſia which once had been all for Paul, were now departed from him. II Pet. II. 22. It was happened to ſome according to the Proverb: The Dog is returned to his vomit.

Such

Such instances are numerous. But this was not all: The cast out Devil did not only return, but seven worse Devils returned with him. They did not only Apostatise from the Gospel they had professed, but became bitter enemies and persecutors of the Gospel from which they Apostatized. This cursed root of gall and wormwood did sprout forth into Hell, as cursed branches, fruits of Sodom; direct revolting to their old Judaism, or downright falling, into Nicolaitisme: the one gainsaying liberty of the Gospel, the other turning it into Libertinism. The one an enemy to the Gospel because of its Spiritualness, the other because of its Holiness.

The Jewish Nation were so doting upon their Ceremonies and formal manner of Religion and Worship, that as you find all along the story of those times in the Acts of the Apostles, and their Epistles; the unbelieving Jews cried down the Gospel, and were bitter enemies to it, because it cried down their Ceremonies. And many and many of those that had believed, Apostatized from it, upon the same dotage, and became as bitter, nay if possible, more bitter enemies against them than the other.

The Nicolaitans stumbled at another block, interpreting the liberty of the Gospel, and they fell into all looseness and uncleanness, to eat things sacrificed to Idols and to commit Fornication: and they became as horrid enemies to the Gospel as the other, because it taught and perswaded a better course. These things lie so clear in Scripture to be observed, that I should do but a needless work to insist on them.

Thus whereas that was a happy wonder of Paul, Gal. I. 23. That he now preached the Gospel, which he once destroied: the contrary is an unhappy monster with these men, they now destroy the Gospel which they once professed: and it is not unlikely, what some of them preached. Instances of this are little less copious than the other. I shall offer you but two: the one foretelling that such a thing should be, and the other telling that such a thing was come to pass.

Act. XX. 29, 30. This I know that after my departure shall grievous Wolves enter in among you, spoiling the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise speaking perverse things, &c. To which this ecchoes, I Joh. II. 18. Little children, it is the last time. And as ye have heard that Antichrist should come, even so now are their many Antichrists, whereby we know that it is the last time. They went out from us, &c. They went out from us: There is their Apostasie from the Gospel: They are Antichrists, there is their enmity against it.

And by the way learn from the Apostle there how to construe the last times; which Phrase occurs so frequently, viz. for the last times of the Jewish State and City.

And I must crave leave to understand that passage concerning the man of sin, in II Thes. II. of these very persons, and of those very times. I read the Romish Antichrist in the Revelations in great Letters, but truly I can read none but the Jewish Antichrist in this place.

This then more peculiarly is the sin our Apostle meaneth here, and the Apostle Paul in that place of the Epistle to the Hebrews, that I cited; as might be shewed out of that and this Epistle, if it were needful; but I suppose that is not much needful, since the thing speaks it self; and it is so plain, that there could not be a more deadly sin, and there was not a more horrid sin in those times, than such horrid Apostasie, and such horrid enmity.

Every presumptuous sin in the Text was cited in Moses, was a sin unto death, in the sense that the Jewish Nation understood a sin unto death, viz. that brought to an immediate liableness to cutting off by divine vengeance. Now this was a sin of presumption, and despising the Word of God, as Moses explains what that presumptuous sinning is, in a high degree, which as the Apostle tells in the same Chapter, that it was a treading under foot the Son of God, &c. Therefore it is no wonder, if with Paul, there be no Sacrifice for it, and with this Apostle, no praying for it.

But why does not this our Apostle speak out, and say, I say he should not pray for it, but says only, I do not say that he should.

Let me lay to this expression that passage of our Saviour, Matth. XVIII. 17. If he neglect to hear the Church let him be to thee as a Heathen or a Publican. By which our Saviour doth not excommunicate such a one out of the Church, for he saith, not let him be to the Church but thee as a Heathen. But he discharged and acquitteth the party injured from those duties and offices which he ought otherwise to him as a brother.

Our Apostles expression is much like to the same tenor: He takes care of the Consciences of the people of God, as well as he sheweth the two conditions of the sinner he speaketh of. There were some that might be in a strait what to do in this case. They were commanded by their Lord and Master to pray for their enemies: these enemies of theirs were become so like their Father the Devil, that it might pose their Consciences whether they should pray for them or no. Therefore this divine Apostle useth a happy temper: that he will lay no charge on them, that are so pinched, to pray for them: nor indeed forbid those to pray for them that are more inlarged: for undoubtedly the the indifferent expreſſion of the Apoſtle as I may call it, ſeems plainly to carry with it ſuch a conſideration.

Ye ſee here in the Text a deadly wounded wretch, like Amaſa, II Sam. XX. wallowing in his own blood: if you call in Moſes and Paul to give their Coroners verdict concerning the manner and cauſe of his death from thoſe Texts of theirs that we have cited, they will tell you that he is felo de ſe, that he deſtroied himſelf; and they will tell you, that it was by wilful ſinning after the knowledge of the truth, wilful ſinning againſt the Word of God.

That ſin is the more deſperately deadly, by how much it is the more deſperately wilful: Hoſ. V. 11. Ephraim is oppreſſed, and broken in judgment, becauſe he willingly walked after the Commandment. One would think it ſhould be, becauſe he did not willingly walk after the Commandment: but by Commandment is meant the idolatrous Commandment of Jeroboam, the Statutes of Omri; and Ephraim was broken in pieces, becauſe he walked after them, and broke the more, becauſe he walked after them willingly. If the motions of ſin which are by the Law, do work in them to bring forth fruit unto death, as the Apoſtle ſays, Rom. VII. 5. much more the motions of ſin, which are clean againſt the Law. I muſt confeſs I do not underſtand the irritating or provoking power of the Law, which ſome collect from this place: for to me it is without doubt that the meaning of the Apoſtle is, The motions of ſin that were by the Law miſtaken, not efficiently; for ſuch was the Judgment of the Jews concerning the Law, viz. That it did reſtrain only the outward action, but regarded not the internal motion: and ſo the Apoſtle ſeems to give ſome hint of his own miſtake a while of the Law about the point of luſt. Now if the fruit of thoſe motions of ſin which are by the miſtake of the Law be ſo deadly, how muſt the actings of ſin which are againſt the known Law wilfully committed be much more deadly?

Among the grains (ſhall I call them?) or the talent weights that are caſt into the ſcales to make ſin weigh exceeding ſinful, this adds not the leaſt aggravation, if it do not indeed the greateſt, that it was done knowingly and wilfully. And therefore in that couſen german ſin to this we are ſpeaking of, (for to me they are clearly diſtinct) the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt; the grievouſneſs of it in compariſon of ſinning againſt the Son, lies not in regard of the perſons ſinned againſt, as if the Holy Ghoſt were a nobler perſon than the Son: but in regard of the manner of ſinning: the Son they knew not in ſo much humility, and ſo blaſphemed him out of ignorance; but they ſaw the apparent evidence of the Holy Ghoſt in the miracles they ſaw and yet blaſphemed him wilfully.

This dies the ſins of wicked men of ſo deep a dye above the ſins of the Saints of God: becauſe thoſe ſin with whole propenſity of mind, theſe of infirmity and againſt their wills. And I cannot but remember the determination of St. Auſtin in a point of this nature; About chaſte Chriſtian matrons and virgins that were raviſhed by the enemy when he broke into the City: he determines well that they were not defiled though they were defiled; their minds pure, though the body polluted: and he concludes, Duo fuerunt, aſt unus adulterium commiſit; there were two in the action, but one of them in the adultery. And that here one ſinned wilfully, the other had no mind to the ſin at all.

This then if there were nothing elſe doth ſufficiently aggravate the grievouſneſs of wilful ſinning, that it carries the very image and ſuperſcription of the ſin of the Devil: it is as it were fleſh and bone of his bone, and ſin of his ſin, very Devil of very Devil.

Does any aſk me, what was that ſin of the Devil? It has been conceived by many that it was ſuch a Pride, as made him aſpire to be equal with God, or above him, to ſet his Throne even with God, or to unthrone him: and to this purpoſe have thoſe words been applied, Eſa. XIV. 12, 13. How art thou fallen, from Heaven, O Lucifer, ſon of the morning, &c. For thou haſt ſaid in thine heart, I will aſcend into Heaven, I will exalt my throne above the ſtars of God, &c. I will be like the moſt High. Which words indeed mean only the arrogance and haughtineſs of the proud King of Babylon. Does any one then aſk me what was the ſin of the Devil? I ſhould anſwer, deſperate malicing the honour and happineſs of man, in which God had placed him, and deſperate deſpiting and ſcorning of that charge and command that God had laid upon Angels concerning man, that they ſhould attend him and keep him in all his ways. And both theſe deſperately wilful, for he could ſin at no lower rate: for he could not ſin of ignorance being an Angel: and an Angel could have no tempter to ſin but himſelf.

I ſhall not go about to define or circumſcribe exactly the bounds wherin to conclude wilful ſinning: I ſhall not confine this evil ſpirit with any circle: becauſe I would have every one to look well about, leſt the caſe be his own, and not I but every mans own Conſcience to judge whether he be guilty of wilful ſinning or no. What thinks the Conſcience of a falſe witneſs, of a forſworn deponent, that knowingly and reſolvedly takes takes a falſe oath, perverſe juſtice, and ſeeks the injury of his neighbour: doth not this man know his ſins wilfully? What thinks the common ſwearer, the common prophaner of the Lords day, the unclean perſon, the riotous and wanton, the deceiver, oppreſſer, ſcoffer of the power of godlineſs, does he not know or think that he ſins wilfully? If they will not know it, nor think ſo, but be more wilful ſtill in wilful ſhutting their eyes againſt conviction; let me leave that ſaying of the Lord himſelf written as it were upon theſe walls for a witneſs againſt them (ſhall I ſay?) or as a doom upon them, which you have Eſa. XXVI. 11. They will not ſee: but they ſhall ſee, and be aſhamed for their envy at the people, yea and the fire of Gods enemies ſhall devour them. The Apoſtle Ecchoes the laſt words in that paſſage we cited, expectation of fiery indignation which ſhall devour the adverſaries.

I might ſhew the deadlineſs of ſuch wilful ſinning eſpecially by two Obſervations.

I. That it is a moſt deadly ſymptom, when the actus primus voluntatis, when the will is ſo deſperately poiſoned at the bottom. The acting of any ſin is deadly enough of it ſelf, but when it is committed by the full bent of the firſt act of the will, it is as poiſoning the bullet to make it the more deadly, which was killing enough of it ſelf before. Chriſtian, how readeſt thou? Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy mind and withal thy heart. But wilful ſinner, how acteſt thou? To oppoſe the counſel and command of the Lord with all the heart, and mind, and ſoul. To love and follow and commit wickedneſs with all the heart, and mind, and ſoul. If this be not a deadly wound under the fifth rib, a mortal Plague at the bottom of the Will, what can you call the Plague of the Heart?

II. Such ſinning doth not only proceed from ſuch a deadly principle, but it adds more deadlineſs to that principle. Every wilful ſinning doth add more hardneſs and more wilfulneſs of ſinning to the Heart ſtill. A hard Heart doth harden by ſinning: and the more the ſin is wilful, the more the Heart gathers hardneſs.

The Jews fein this the creeping on of the tempter to Eve, that the Serpent asked the Woman, why not eat of this Tree? She anſwered, Becauſe God hath ſaid, Ye ſhall not eat of it, neither ſhall ye touch it, leſt ye dye. Firſt, he drew nigh to it, and ſaid, Thou ſeeſt I am nigh it and yet do not dye: then ſhe toucht it, and then eat of it. So do wilful ſinnings draw on one another, and from one the Heart is imboldned to another. If ſuch ſinners would but find time with an impartial candle of ſelf examination to look into their own Hearts, they would find the too ſad experience of this truth written there in black letters indeed.

But becauſe few ſuch will read their own Hearts, let me leave that verſe of the Apoſtle with them, to read and to ſee what conſtruction they can make of it, to ſave their own ſtake. If we ſin wilfully after we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for ſin, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which ſhall devour the adverſaries.

A

PREACHED AT

HERTFORD Aſſiſe,

March 27. 1669.

ACT. XVII. 31.

Becauſe he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteouſneſs, by the man whom he hath ordained, whereof he hath given aſſurance unto all men, in that he hath raiſed him from the dead.

Occaſional meditations, are Samſons hony gathered out of a dead carcaſe: Heavenly thoughts taken up from Earthly occurrences: the Sun and Heaven ſeen in looking downward into the Water: from the Earthly objects that man meets with here below, the Heart raiſing meditation upon them to ſome Heavenly purpoſe. The true Philoſophers ſtone indeed that turns what a man meets withal into ſome golden meditation. And this divine Elixir our Saviour uſed very much. From the occaſion of the Samaritan Womans fetching water he raiſeth his diſcourſe and her thoughts, to conſider of the water of his Grace, Joh. IV. And upon the occaſion of the peoples following him for loaves, he would raiſe their minds to think of the meat that periſhed not, but indureth to Eternal Life, Joh. VI. And in all his parables which were ſo exceeding frequent with him, wherein he was ſtill teaching ſome Spiritual and Heavenly things, by ſome Earthly reſemblance, whatſoever the particular intent of every ſeveral parable was, yet this intimation went in general with them all, That there was to be an improvement of the obſervation of Earthly things and occurrences to Heavenly thoughts and meditations: As he in the ſtory that looked toward the Earth, and pointed toward the Earth, and yet cried O Cælum.

Methinks ſuch a noble and remarkable occaſion as we now meet withal, ſhould not be let paſs without ſome elevated meditation. And when we ſee our Aſſiſes, Judges, Trials, Sentencings, methinks a ſurſum corda may do very well in thoughts taken of the great and dreadful Judgment. As Eſa. XXXIII. 17, 18. Thine eyes ſhall ſee the King in his beauty; Thy heart ſhall meditate terrors.

A right occaſional meditation. The right of an Earthly King in his royalty, may juſtly move and ſtir up the heart to meditate the terrors of the King of glory. The ſight of a Judge in his authority and honour, and the ſight of the day and of the paſſages of an Aſſiſe, may very properly and ſhould indeed ſtir up the heart to meditate the terrors of that great day which the Lord hath appointed, wherein he will judge the World in righteouſneſs, by the man which he hath ordained, of which, &c.

Such a reflection cauſed me to chooſe theſe words to diſcourſe upon at this time: at the Aſſiſe of our County to ſtir up the remembrance of the greateſt Aſſiſe of all the World, a meditation that can never be but uſeful, and more eſpecially at ſuch a time as this, this, that gives some specimen and Idea in little of the thing, and does as it were in landskip lay the thing before us.

The Apostle in this place is discoursing to the University men of Athens, It is said, vers. 21. That the Athenians spent their time in nothing, but to tell or hear some new thing. And here was strange business for them to purpose. Strange news to them to hear such a Sermon against their Idolatry, to hear speak concerning the Resurrection of the dead, and an universal Judgment of all the World, and all the World to be judged by a man that God had ordained. Such riddles to flesh and blood, and to the wisdom of this World, are the great matters and mysteries of the Gospel and of Salvation.

The Judgment to come that he speaks of in this verse, he characters or pictures in divers colours or circumstances.

I. The object of it. He shall judge the World.

II. The manner, He shall judge it in Righteousness.

III. The time, At a day which he hath appointed.

IV. The agent to be imploied in it, The man whom he hath ordained.

V. And lastly, the certainty of it, He hath given assurance thereof, &c.

There is some controversie about the translating of that clause, He hath given assurance. In the Greek it is, πίστιν παρασχὼν πᾶσιν which will admit a double construction. The Vulgar Latin and the Syriack gives one, our English and the French another.

The Vulgar Latine renders it, Fidem præbens omnibus. Which I should have supposed might freely have been rendred in the sense our English gives, Giving assurance to all; but that I find some expositions constrain him another way, viz. Affording faith to all, and the Syrian inclines the same way, for it renders Restoring every man to his faith, or to faith in him: As if the meaning were, that God by the Resurrection of Christ did restore the World to faith and believing, from that ignorance and infidelity, which it lay under before; which is a real and a very noble truth, but I question whether that be the Apostles meaning in this place.

For he is shewing, That God had appointed an universal Judgment, and hath ordained Christ to be Judge: and for proof and confirmation of both, especially of the latter, he saith as our English well renders, he hath given assurance; and as the French, he hath given certainty in that he hath raised: and the Greek very clearly bears such a sense. And this to be the sense that is intended, is yet further clear, by observing the argumentation of the Apostle in this place. Read the verse before, The times of their ignorance God winked at, but now commandeth every man to repent. Because he hath appointed a day, &c. Why? Was not this day appointed before that time that Christ was risen? The Jews will tell you that Heaven and Hell were created before the World: then certainly the Judgment that was to deem to Heaven or Hell was appointed before. But our Saviour in the sentence that he shall pronounce at that Judgment, Matth. XXV. Come ye blessed of my Father, receive the Kingdom prepared for you, &c. shews that the appointing of the day of Judgment was of old time, long and long ago before Christs Resurrection: but the Apostle tells that he had never given such assurance of it before as he did then, by raising him that should be Judge.

The Apostle at this portion of Scripture doth plainly shew three things. First, He lays down a doctrine. Secondly, He proves it. And thirdly, He makes application. His doctrine is, That God hath appointed a day wherein he will Judge the World in Righteousness. His proof, From Gods own real vouchment, He hath given assurance in that he raised Christ from the dead. His application therefore, Let all men in every place repent.

I should deserve a just censure, if I should refuse the Apostles method to take another: and not tread in the steps of that Logical proceeding that he had printed before. Yet I shall decline to insist much upon the confirmation of the doctrine, as a particular head by it self, since the taking up the second thing, the proof of it is the doing the same thing. Only I shall call out as the Prophet Esay doth in the place cited, who assoon as he had said, Thy heart shall meditate terrors, presently subjoyns, where is the Scribe, &c. So while our heart is meditating of terrors, of the thing we are speaking, this day, which God hath appointed wherein he will Judge the World, &c. Where is the Sadducee, where the Atheist, where the Disputer of this World? What say they to this thing?

I. The Sadducee, will tell you, That there is no Resurrection, neither Angel nor Spirit. Act. XXIII. 8. And would perswade us, that Moses was of the same opinion, because he speaks not of any such things in terminis in all his book.

It is a common received opinion among the Learned, that the Sadducees refused all the Books of the Old Testament, but only the five Books of Moses: If they mean it absolutely, I must confess my small reading hath not taught so far as to be satisfied in that: But if they mean it with some qualification, then I believe the thing is very true. In such a qualified sense, as to say the rest of the Jews refused the third part of the Bible, which they call כתובים Christians render the word Hegiographa: that is they refused to have have it read in the Synagogue. The Law and Prophets they read there every Sabbath; Act. XIII. 15. but admitted not the reading of Job, Pſalms, Solmons books, Daniel, Lamentations, Chronicles, Ezra, &c. not ſo much out of the undervaluation of thoſe books, but becauſe they accounted the other were ſufficient. So if you ſay the Sadducees admitted no other Books of the Old Teſtament to be read in their Synagogues, on the Sabbath, but only the books of Moſes, I doubt not but you ſpeak very true: but that they utterly rejected and made nothing of the reſt of that Sacred Volume, I am yet to ſeek for ſatisfaction. And I ſuppoſe ſomething may be ſaid out of the ancient records of the Jews that might countenance the contrary: but it is not now time and place to enter into ſuch a diſcourſe.

But you will ſay, If they had them in their cloſets though not in their Synagogues, If they read them, though not there, If they believed them, how could they be ignorant of the reſurrection, Judgment to come and World to come, of which there is ſo plain declaration in the reſt of the Old Teſtament, though not in Moſes?

The anſwer is eaſie: Becauſe they had this principle, that nothing is to be believed as a fundamental Article of Faith, but what may be grounded in Moſes.

The very Phariſees themſelves did not far differ from them in this principle: and I could produce a Phariſee in their own writings, ſaying, That if a man believed the Reſurrection, &c. yet believed not that it was taught and grounded in the Law of Moſes, he ſhould not be Orthodox. Now why Moſes did ſo obſcurely intimate theſe great fundamentals, in compariſon of other parts of the Bible, I ſhall not trouble you with diſcuſſing, though very acceptable reaſons may be given of it. We find the Reſurrection aſſerted by our Saviour out of Moſes, by one argument; and we find it aſſerted by many arguments, by the Phariſees againſt the Saducees in the Jews own Pandect: and ſo we leave the Sadducees to take his anſwer and confutation there. But

II. Behold a worſe then a Sadducee is here; and that is a Chriſtian Atheiſt. Oh! give me that word Chriſtian again, that I ſpeak not contradictions. And yet there are too many in our times; O! that I might not ſay in our Nation, that were Baptiz'd into the Chriſtian Faith, that live in a Chriſtian Church, and would go under a Chriſtian Name, and yet that deny theſe great points of Chriſtian Religion, and greater too if there may be greater.

There are too many of Atheiſtical principles now adays, that ſay what you can for the aſſuring that there is an Eternal Judgment, yet you never aſſure them. Non perſuadebis etiamſi perſuaſeris, You cannot perſwade them, though you do perſwade. They will make but a puff at ſuch a Doctrine, and tell you that Religion and ſuch Doctrines preached, are but as bugbears of policy, to keep men in awe and order. I need not to inlarge their ſayings to this purpoſe, they are but too large and broad in themſelves. I have only this to ſay to them at this time.

Let me mind you of that paſſage, Zech. XI. 8. where the Prophet ſpeaking in the perſon of Chriſt hath theſe words, Three Shepherds alſo I cut off in one month: and my ſoul loathed them, and their ſoul alſo abhorred me. The three Shepherds that he means were the Phariſee, Sadducee and Eſſean, the ringleaders and the wrongleaders of the Jewiſh Nation. Shepherds that cauſed the unfortunate ſheep to go a ſtray, and there fed them not but did deſtroy them. Now how can it be ſaid that Chriſt cut them off, and eſpecially now in one moneth? When it is moſt apparent, that theſe three Sects and Hereſies continued many years, many ſcores of years after our Saviour was aſcended into Heaven. Nay Phariſaiſme is alive among all the Jewiſh Nation unto this day.

The meaning is this, that Chriſt delivered a Truth and Doctrine, enough and enough, again to confound and deſtroy thoſe curſed Hereſies, and to direct into the way of Truth: but if thoſe Hereticks will not be convinced and imbrace that Doctrine and Truth, that Doctrine and Truth in time will confound, condemn and deſtroy them. The Word that I ſpeak, ſaith Chriſt, ſhall judge you at the laſt day.

God gives his Word, and whether men will hear or whether they will forbear, it is and will be the Word of God for ever. And if men will not believe it, God will not be beholden to them to believe it: let them believe it at their own peril. A Papiſt will not believe the Divine Authority of the Scriptures for themſelves, God and the Scripture will never be beholden to him to believe it: they need not to beg his believing of it, but let him look to it if he do not believe it.

If God have given ſuch demonſtrations of the Judgment to come, as may aſſure all the World of the certainty of it, and an Atheiſt, an Epicure, a Fool will not believe it; if he will not believe what a Felix believed and trembled at, if he will not believe what Devils believe and tremble at, God will never come crouching to him to beg of him that he will believe it, but let him diſbelieve it at his own peril, and take what comes.

When

When God gave the Scriptures he never intended they should stand at the curtesie of every curious carping Atheist, whether they should be of Authority and be believed or no: but God gives them in their Divine Authority and Majesty: and laid them a sure foundation in Sion, elect, precious and glorious, that he that will build upon them may build and prosper: but if any cross, or quarelsom, or wilfully blind Bayard, will stumble at them, where he might walk plain; let him take his own hazard, and stumble, and fall, and be broken, and snared, and taken: while in the mean while, the foundation of God remaineth sure, and the Divine Scriptures will be the Divine Scriptures, and retain their Truth and Author, when such a wretch is dasht all to pieces.

III. There cometh the Disputer of this World, such as these Scholers of Athens that Paul was now discoursing with, that will have nothing believed but what may be grasped by humane reason, and he will tell that it is very unlikely there should be an universal judgment; because it is very unlikely there should be a Resurrection. That bodies in the grave, that have been dust these thousand thousand years, should live and rise again the same; Oh! how many arguments he frames to shew you that it is against all Logick, Philosophy, nature, reason.

I shall first reply to him as Paul to Agrippa, King Agrippa, believest thou the Scriptures, I know that thou believest. Oh! thou disputer, believest thou there is a God? I hope thou believest. If not, I shall give thee the answer much like that I gave the Atheist before, God will be God whether thou wilt or no: as Scripture will be Scripture whether thou believest it or no. But if thou believest that God is, and that he is what he is, then why doest thou go about to measure the great things of God, by the pitiful scant measure of poor humane reason?

I remember the check in the story of him that went about such a thing. He was deeply studying upon the mystery of the Trinity, and went about to fadom it by reason and to suit it to reason: as he was thus studying at the Sea side, he saw a child that was about to empty the ocean into a ditch, with a spoon, and when he told him how simple and vain a thing he went about; Even so dost thou, saith the child, or an Angel in likness of a child, when thou goest about to draw out the profound and bottomless mystery of the Sacred Trinity by thy silly reason.

What? Must we then believe things that are clear contrary to reason? I Answer, There are no points in all the mysteries of Divinity contrary to reason, if we resolve them into the right Principle; that is, if we resolve them into the power, will and working of God. That this vast Universe should be created of nothing in a moment, that God should become man, that dead bodies should be raised again, that this mortal should put on immortality, are high mysteries, many regions above natural reason, but not a whit contrary to reason, if you resolve them, as I said before, into the Power, Will and Working of God.

Let Philosophy and humane reason therefore cavil, as much as they can, against the Resurrection, as a thing unlikely, incredible, impossible; I shall only answer in the tune of them that when they saw a thing as unlikely and incredible, yet brought to pass by Divine Power, viz. Elias pouring water on and about the Altar and bringing fire, they fell on their faces and cried, The Lord he is God, the Lord he is God.

And if the Lord he be God, the Lord be God, he can raise all the dead in a moment and bring them to Judgment, as he Created the World in a moment by the Word of his Power: If it be but his Will so to do. And that it is his Will so to do, he hath given assurance, in that he hath appointed a day wherein to judge the world in righteousness, by the man that he hath ordained. And of that appointment and ordaining, he hath given assurance, in that he raised him from the dead.

And so we are come to the second part of our task, or the second thing that I named to be spoken, viz. the assurance that God hath given of the Judgment to come, and more particularly, of that whereby he hath assured that Christ shall be Judge, viz. in that he raised from dead. The assurance God hath given of the Judgment to come we may distinguish into verbal and real. Assurance that he hath given in his Word, and in his Providential dispensation.

I need not to insist upon his verbal assurances, of the certainness that he hath given of such a thing in Word, for he that runs may read them. Such as these, Eccles. XI, 9. & XII. ult. II Cor. V. 10. and multitudes of passages to the same purpose. So that the Apostle reckons Eternal Judgment for one of the fundamental Articles of our Christian Faith, and that it is so clearly asserted that he finds he needs not to insist much upon the proving of it, Heb. VI. 2.

And as the verbal assurances that God hath given of this in Scripture are so very many, so the real ones that he hath given in his dispensations are not few. I shall but mention some, and pitch only upon this mentioned in the Text, Christs Resurrection.

I. Was

I. Was not the Judgment of all the World by Water in the days of Noah, a prognostication and assurance of the Judgment to come at the end of the World? Certainly they must need conclude so, that thinks that Peter speaks of the last Judgment, in II Epistle III. 6, 7. where he hath these words, The World that then was, being overflowed with water, perished. But the Heaven and Earth that now are, are kept in store reserved unto fire.

II. Was not the Judgment and sad conflagration of Jerusalem, and destruction of the Jewish Church and Nation, an assurance of the Judgment to come; when the expressions whereby it is described are such, as you think they meant nothing else but that final Judgment? As Christs coming: coming in clouds, in his glory, in his Kingdom. The day of the Lord, the great and terrible day of the Lord: The end of the World, the end of all things: The Sun darkned, the Moon not giving light: The Stars falling from Heaven, and the powers of Heaven shaken: The sign of the Son of man appearing in Heaven, Heaven departing as a scroll rolled together, and every mountain and hill removed out of its place, &c. You would think they meant nothing but the last and universal Judgment, whereas their meaning indeed is Christs coming in Judgment and vengeance against the Jewish City and Nation; but a fore signification also of the last Judgment.

III. I might speak of particular fearful judgments upon persons and places. Are not they assurances of the Judgment to come? I am sure the Apostle Peter raiseth them to such a signification in his second Epistle and second Chapter, where when he had mentioned the Judgment of the Angels that fell: of the Judgment of the old World by water, and of Sodom by fire, he makes this conclusion, vers. 9. The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the ungodly to the day of Judgment to be punished.

IV. Are not the Tribunals and Judicatures that God hath set up on Earth, assurances that he hath given of a final Judgment to come? Upon which we may take up the stile of the Psalmist, in Psal. XCIV. 9. He that planted the ear shall he not hear? So he that hath erected Judicatures shall not he Judge?

V. Is not the Judicature that he hath set up in every mans soul an undoubted assurance of the Judgment coming? Where the Conscience, as one very well defines it, is Præjudicium judicii, A foretaste, a Preface to the Judgment to come?

VI. And lastly, The very prospering of the wicked in this World, and the affliction of the righteous is an undoubted assurance that the day is coming, when both the one and other is to be judged according to their works, and receives a reward according to their works. And with this very Argument, Will. Tyrius, in his bello sacro, relates that he satified Amalrich King of Jerusalem, when he desired him to give him some proof of this very point. So that that very prosperity in this World, that deceives Atheistical men to think, there shall be no Judgment, is continually a growing argument that there shall.

Upon all these things I might have spoken very largely, but I hasten to that assurance that is in the Text, viz. The Resurrection of Christ, may give assurance to all the World of his coming to Judgment. It is worth your observing these two things about the Jews asking a sign from our Saviour.

1. That he ever denies to give them a sign, Matth. XII. 39. He wrought signs and wonders among them above number, but he would never work that that should be a mere sign. His healing diseases, &c. were not mere signs, but were benefits by miracle wrought for the People: as the Plagues on Egypt were not mere signs, but punishments wrought by miracle.

2. That he still when they asked a sign referred them to his Resurrection, Joh. II. when he whips the buyers and sellers out of the Temple, and they ask him, what sign shewest thou seeing thou doest these things: He refers them thither, vers. 19. Destroy this Temple, and in three days I will raise it up: speaking of the Temple of my body. So Matth. XII. 39. when the Scribes and Pharisees are at it, Master we would see a sign from thee, he still refers to his Resurrection: No sign shall be given but the sign of the Prophet Jonas. As Jonah was three days and three night buried in the Whales belly, but rose again and was cast alive on shore, so shall the Son of man be buried and rise again. And why thus refer them still to his Resurrection? Because that was the great sign and demonstration that he was the Messias, the Son of God, Rom. I. 4. Declared to be the Son of God with power by his Resurrection from the dead. And

Observe that allegation of the Apostle, Act. XIII. 33. God hath raised up Jesus, as it is also written in the second Psalm, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. Was this Resurrection day the day of the Lords begetting him, was that the first day that he was the Son of God? It was the day that he was first declared in full power, and that it was manifest that he was the Son of God. It was the day of his Victory and putting on his Kindom, the day of his Trophea and Triumph, and the sign that he was the Son of God, the true Messias. And the Jews that would not believe that, no sign would serve to make them them believe. That indeed you'l say gave assurance to all men that he was the Son of God, the true Messias; but how did that give assurance that there should be an universal Judgment, and he the Judge? Truly he that knows what the true Messias means, needs no more proof and demonstration of that than his very Character. He is heir of the World, he is Prince and Saviour, he is King in Sion, he is set up above all Principality and power, as the Scripture speaks these and divers other things of him: and doth any man need more evidence of his being judge of all the World?

But our question is how that is inferred or argued from his Resurrection?

The Resurrection of Christ did beget and effectuate a double Resurrection, for you have mention of a two fold Resurrection in Scripture.

First, There is mention of the first Resurrection, Rev. XX. 5. The Millenary not able to clear the notion whereof, nor to spell out the meaning, hath bewildred himself in those wild conceptions, as he hath done. The first Resurrection began and took place presently after our Saviours own Resurrection: for it means no other than the raising the Heathen from their death in sin, blindness and Idolatry, to the life, light and obedience of the Gospel. And so the Apostle titles their estate, writing to the Ephesians, which had been some of them, Ephes. II. 1. You hath he quickned who were dead in trespasses and sins. And to that very tenor are those words of the Prophet, Esay XXVI. 19. Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. The Gentiles to be raised from their spiritual death presently upon his raising from his bodily. And who so shall well weigh those words of our Saviour, Joh. V. 25. The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live: will clearly find them to mean nothing else. So that the Resurrection of Christ had first influence and virtue to cause this spiritual Resurrection; the Resurrection of souls, the raising up of the Gentiles from the death of sin: And whence it had this influence, it is easie to read, viz. because by his Resurrection he had conquered the Devil, who had so long kept the poor Heathen under that spiritual death.

Will you have a Commentary upon that passage, in Psal. CX. 3. Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power. First, His Resurrection day of power, Rom. I. 4. Then look into the story of the Acts of Apostles, the history of the times next following his Resurrection. You may wonder there to see people coming in by flocks and thousands, to the acknowledgment and entertaining of the Gospel, three thousand at one Sermon, Chap. II. five thousand at another, Chap. IIII. and further in that book, in a little time, the Gospel running through the World, and imbraced and intertained of all Nations. Oh! it was the day of his power; and thy people shall be willing in day of thy power. He had now Conquered Hell and Satan by his death and rising again, whose captives those poor heathen had been two and twenty hundred years, and now he said to the captives, Go free; and to the prisoners, Go forth, and so they did.

And upon the very like account, his Resurrection hath influence to the causing and effectuating the general Resurrection at the last day. For though it might be a little too long, to hold that the wicked shall be raised by the very same virtue of Christs Resurrection that the godly shall, yet it is not too large to hold, that they shall be raised by some virtue of his Resurrection, viz. as his Resurrection had conquered death, and brought him to those articles, that he must in time give up and restore all prisoners and dead, that they may come and give account to him that conquered him. I have the keys of the grave and death, saith he in the Revelations, he had wrung the keys out of the jaylors hand, and opened the prison doors, that the prisoners should come out when he calls.

Very observable to the purpose we are upon, viz. that Christs Resurrection did assure that judgment and that he should be judge, is that in Phil. II. 8, 9. He humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore also God hath highly exalted him. Obedience was that debt that was to be paid to God. Whereas much stress is laid upon the torments that Christ suffered; it is very true, that he suffered as much as, I may say, God could lay upon him short of his own wrath, and as much as the Devil could withal his wrath: but that was not the debt that was due and to be paid to God. Wrath, and torment, and damnation was rather the debt that was to be paid to man. But the debt was obedience. For easie is it to observe, how Satan had got the day of God, as with reverence I may speak it, when he had brought the chief creature of Gods creation, and in him all mankind, to disobey God and to be obedient to him; and had carried it for ever, had not an obedience been paid again to God that outvied that disobedience. How might Satan triumph, Man that is the darling creature to the Creator, and that is set up Lord and Ruler of all Creatures, and to whom even the Angels are appointed to be ministring Spirits; I have brought this brave Gallant, to forsake his Creator and to follow and obey me. But forth steps this noble Champion of God, and in the form of a servant incounters this triumpher, and mauger all his spite and power and vexatiouſneſs; he pays God an obedience incomparably beyond the obedience that Adam ſhould have paid; incomparably outweighing the diſobedience that Adam ſhewed. He paid an obedience that ſhould anſwer for the diſobedience of all his people. An obedience that ſhould be a ſtock for all his people. Nay he paid an obedience that outvied all the diſobediences of all men and Devils. For he paid an obedience that was infinite.

Now his Reſurrection did demonſtrate that he had made full payment, or elſe Satan and Death might have kept him ſtill in the grave, their priſon, if a farthing had been yet unpaid.

Now he having by his Reſurrection conſummated the payment of ſo great obedience, and vindicated the honour and quarrel of God againſt his enemies; In all juſtice and equity the Lord exalted him above all, that all ſhould be ſubject and homagers to him, and that he might take account, and reward accordingly, thoſe that obey him, and that obey him not. And ſo the Lord hath appointed a day in which he will judge the World in righteouſneſs by him, whereof he hath given aſſurance unto all men in that he raiſed him from the dead.

And are you aſſured that there will be ſuch a day and ſuch a Judgment, and ſuch a Judge, and you, and you, and you: then Men and Brethren, what have we to do? Let me firſt propoſe this ſuppoſal.

Suppoſe this very day were the day that God hath appointed to Judge all the World; and that this Aſſiſe of our County ſhould be turned into the univerſal Aſſiſes of all the World. Suppoſe that inſtead of the ſounding of the High Sheriffs trumpets, we ſhould have the great trump ſound and call, Ariſe ye dead, and away you living, and come to Judgment. Art thou prepared to meet thy God O Iſrael? Art thou prepared to meet that Judgment O Iſrael? How many or rather how few of us are able to ſay, My heart is ready, my heart is ready, come Lord Jeſus, come and welcom? Such a call will undoubtedly once come, and we cannot tell how ſoon: and when it comes, it will not be at that lenity that Feſtus uſed with Paul, Wilt thou go up to Jeruſalem and be judged before me of theſe things: but, For all theſe things God will bring thee to Judgment, whether thou wilt or no.

Oh! what ſhrugging and unwillingneſs and drawing back would there be, with too many. Oh! a little more time, a little more reſpite, a little more ſpace of repentance and making ready. No, Time muſt be no more, no way elſe but thou muſt away and go to judgment. How wholeſom therefore is that Counſel, and oh! that there were ſuch a heart in this people as to take the leſſon out, II Pet. III. 11, 14. Seeing then that all theſe things ſhall be diſſolved, what manner of perſons ought ye to be in all holy converſation and godlineſs? And ſeeing beloved, that ye look for ſuch things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without ſpot and blameleſs.

How large a diſcourſe might be made for the ſetting on of this exhortation from the ſeveral particulars in the Text: that the day is certainly appointed, that the Judgment will be of all the world, that it will be in righteouſneſs, that it will be by Chriſt. Another hour would be too little, a whole day would be little enough and the meditation of it may well take up our whole lives.

The ſame Apoſtle that ſpeaks the words here, hath epitomized them all into two words in the place I cited before, Heb. VI. 2. Eternal Judgment. Bonarges, two was of thunder, Judgment and that Eternal, words of a dreadful ſound, and yet I know not a fitter motto to be written over all our occaſions. Eternal Judgment, a very fit ſentence to be written over a bench of Judgment, over a Jury's chamber door, in all our chambers, over all our doors, in all our hearts: that looking upon and remembring always Eternal Judgment, we may learn righteouſneſs.

Every Aſſiſe is a picture in little of this great Aſſiſe that is to be of all the World. And that that draweth the trueſt lineaments of it and moſt to life is Righteous and impartial dealing. I ſay Righteous and impartial dealing, rather than Righteous and impartial judging; becauſe there may be Righteous and impartial judging, where there is unrighteous and partial dealing.

You will ſay this is a paradox, or rather a contradiction: and you will ſay the like or rather much more, if I ſhould ſay, That there may be righteous Judging, when there is not righteous Judgment: and yet if you weigh theſe things in your thoughts you will find that they are the words of Truth and ſoberneſs.

A worthy upright good Judge, he judgeth according to the evidence that is given in, and the teſtimony that is laid before him: here his Judging is right and righteous, becauſe he judgeth according to his Conſcience, and according to his evidence; but it proves that the evidence was falſe, and the teſtimony deceiving: here the Judgment is not right, becauſe not according to the very truth of the caſe, although the judging of the Judge be righteous, becauſe according to his Conſcience and ſincerity of his heart.

And

And herein indeed our Aſſiſes ſeem ſhort of picturing the great Aſſiſe to the full proportion [as the thing ſignifying commonly comes ſhort of the thing ſignified] becauſe there can be no ſurprizal of the Judge Eternal by any falſe information, here the beſt and wiſeſt Judge may be ſo ſurprized. And ſo was once as good and as wiſe a Judge as any we have upon record, and that was David, being deceived by the falſe information of wretched Ziba, to paſs a moſt unjuſt ſentence againſt innocent Mephiboſheth, and to give away all his land to the cheating informer.

Therefore if I ſhould apply my ſelf to give direction to thoſe that have to do in this great buſineſs that lies before you, I ſhould not be ſo arrogant as to offer to do it to you, my Honoured Lords, who know your works far better than my ſelf: No, I ſhall not ſo much as offer to give you a caution that you be not ſurprized by falſe information, your own wiſdom and grave prudence prevents all need of ſuch exhortation. I ſhould rather apply my ſelf to Witneſſes and Juries, which it may be are not many of them here, to admoniſh them to deal in the fear of the Lord, and in remembrance of the Eternal Judgment: that they go not about to deceive the Lords and the Kings Vicegerents by any falſe colours or diſſimulation, that they bring not double and redoubled guilt upon their own heads: that there be no coſening Ziba among them, that for baſe or by ends of their own ſhall go about to wrong an innocent Mephiboſheth, or to abuſe a good David by fair but falſe ſuggeſtions, to induce him to do contrary to right and equity.

PREACHED AT

HERTFORD Assise,

August 6. 1669.

S. JOHN XVIII. 31.

Then Pilate said unto them, Take ye him and Judge him according to your Law. The Jews therefore said unto him, it is not lawful for us to put any man to death.

A Strange Assise is the Evangelist recording in his story here: the Judge of all the World judged and condemned: and he before whose tribunal all sinners must once stand, standing and falling before a sinful tribunal: such a person sentenced, such injustice in that sentence, that the World never did, never must see its parallel.

But who is he, and where is he that durst presume in his heart to do such a thing? As Ahasuerus once in a far lesser matter? And the answer may be given in the words of Esther, that immediately follow [the name only changed] The adversary and the enemy is this wicked Pilate: The adversaries and the enemies are these wicked Jews, whom you have discoursing in the words of the Text; and whom you have acting all along this Tragedy.

Whose persons, Logical method calls upon us first to consider, and then to consider of their words and discourse.

Pilate said, and the Jews answered. Persons, if you look wistly upon them you may see more than their bare persons. For you may read the Roman power and tyranny in the one, and the Jews malice and mischievousness in the other: and upon the full view the Roman and the Jew conspiring together and becoming guilty of this horridest fact that ever was committed under the Sun, the murthering of the Lord of life and glory.

Let us begin first with Pilate, who stands first in mention in the Text, as he stands representative of Rome, whose authority he carried, and whose Tyranny in this case he exercised. Methinks there is hardly a more remarkable passage in the whole book of the Revelations, then that Chap. XIII. 2. The Dragon gave his power, and seat, and great authority unto the Beast. Which in plain English is this, The Devil gave his power, and seat, and great authority to Rome. For that by the Dragon is meant the Devil, there is none but grant, and that by the Beast is meant Rome, even Romanists themselves do not deny. When you read that passage in S. Luke IV. 5, 6. that the Devil shewed our Saviour all the Kingdoms of the World, and the glory of them; do you not presently conceive, that he shewed him Rome her Empire and Glory? For then where was the pomp and glory of the World, but within that City and Empire? And when you read that he said unto him, All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them, do you not presently conceive that he offered to make him Cæsar, or Lord of that vast Empire, if he would fall down and worship him? And how pat do these words of his, for that is delivered to me, and to whom- whomsoever I will, I give them, agree with these in the Revelations, The Dragon gave his power and seat and great authority unto the beast?

It neither is, nor indeed could be said so of the other Monarchies or Empires that had gone before. It is not said the Dragon gave his power to the Babylonian Empire, nor to the Persian nor Grecian nor Syrogrecian: nor indeed could it be so truly and pertinently said so concerning them, as concerning Rome. For the Dragon had a business for Rome to do, which the other neither did nor could do for him, which was to put the Lord of life to death. The old Serpent knew from of old, that he was to bruise the heel of the seed of the woman, that he was to compass the death of Messias, and it was reserved to Rome and her power and tyranny to be the instrument of such an action, and the Dragon gave his power, seat, and authority to that City for that purpose, that it might do his business in murthering Christ, and his members after him.

Pilate, who carried with him the authority and commission of that City, confessed him innocent, and yet condemned him, pleaded for him that he was not guilty, and yet crucified him; and that mainly upon the account of Rome, and for her sake, because forsooth there must be no King but Cæsar, or who was set up or kinged by Cæsar.

In Revel. XI. 8. where mention is made of slaying the two witnesses, it is said, their dead carcasses shall lie in the streets of that great City, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified. The last clause, where also our Lord was crucified. may seem to direct your eyes to Jerusalem, but the title, The great City, which Chap. XVII. ult. is defined, The great City, which ruleth over the Kings of the Earth, calls them back again to look at Rome, as our Lords crucifier, by whom, that work must be done, or not done at all, for to such a tenour do the Jews tell Pilate in the Text, when they say, It is not lawful for us.

Before ever I should turn Romanist, I must be satisfied in this scruple and question. How comes the Jew and Jerusalem, so cursed a Place and Nation for the murther of our Lord, and the Romanist and Rome, so blessed, as to be the holy mother Church of all the World, when that City and Nation had as deep and bloody a hand in the murther of the Saviour of the World, as the other, if not deeper?

I remember the story of one of the Grand Seignors, that when he had received a foul and base foil before a poor and contemptible Town, Scodra, if I mistake not the name, for very rancour and vexation, and that he might be whetting on himself continually to revenge, he commanded him that waited nearest on him, to be minding him continually with these words, Remember Scodra. May I be so bold as to hint such a memorandum to you against Rome. As oft as you read, or rehearse, or hear rehearsed that article in our Creed, He suffered under Pontius Pilate, Remember Rome, and that under that it was our Saviour suffered: and the article minds you of so much: and if it were not intended for such a memorandum, had it not been enough to have said He suffered, without any mention of Pontius Pilate at all? Let us reason with the Romanist a little after the manner of his own Logick. He argues thus, Peter was at Rome and sat Bishop there, and suffered martyrdom and died there; Ergo, Rome is the mother Church, and head of all Churches. We argue in like manner, Pilate was at Jerusalem, sat Judge there, condemned and crucified the Lord of life there, and that by the Power and Authority of Rome; Ergo, let Rome look to it, how she clears her self of that fact and guiltiness. And so I have done with the first party in mention in the Text, Pilate, and he invested with the Roman authority.

The other party are the Jews, more peculiarly the Sanhedrin invested also with the Jewish power, and Representatives of the whole Nation. How busie and active the Jews were in this bloody business needs no illustration of mine, the Sacred pens of the Evangelists have done that abundantly.

Only I might speak to this circumstance, and not impertinent question, whether the Jews did not indeed think him to be the Messias, and yet murthered him?

Pilate condemned him, though he knew him innocent, and did not they murther him though they knew him to be the very Christ?

Methinks that passage in the Parable of the husbandmen in the Vineyard speaks very fairly for the Affirmative, Matth. XXI. 38. When the husbandmen saw the Son, they said, this is the heir, come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his inheritance. They knew him to be the heir, and yet they kill him, nay they kill him because they know him to be the heir, and that by killing him they shall get the inheritance. It is said indeed, they knew him not, Act. XIII. 27. which if you interpret, that they knew not the dignity of his person, and that he was God as well as man [the Jews will not be perswaded of the Godhead of Messias to this day] that does not deny, but that they might take him for the Messias howsoever. But I shall not dispute this case. If they took him for Messias, they thought he was not a Messias for their turn, nor that he was likely to answer their expectation, in what their wretched traditions had taught them to look for from Messias. For,

I. From

I. From Messias they expected Pomp and Statelineſs, a royal and victorious Kingdom: they ſee him appear in a low condition, and contemptible poverty.

II. From Messias they expected an advancing and heightening the rites of Moſes: they ſaw that he began to take them down.

III. By the Messias they expected to be redeemed and delivered from their ſubjection to the Roman yoke. He taught them to give Cæſar his due, and to ſubmit to the government God had ſet over them.

IV. By the Messias they expected, that the Gentiles ſhould be ſubdued, trod under their feet and deſtroyed. He taught that they ſhould be called, converted and become the Church.

So that if they took him for Messias, they thought he was a Messias that would mar all, and was far unlike the Messias their traditions had taught them to look for. And therefore be he Messias or no, they will rather kill the heir, than they themſelves loſe the inheritance, which they thought they ſhould have done, if he ſhould have lived.

It were worth the labour, if that were the taſk that were before us, to trace theſe two Nations, Jew and Roman, after this fact; as I may ſay, by the blood, and to conſider, as they made themſelves yoke-fellows, like Simeon and Levi, in this guilt and evil, ſo whether God yoked not them alſo together under the like curſe and vengeance.

Yokefellows indeed are the Jew and Romaniſt above all the people of the World, in a deluded fancying their own bravery and privilege above all the World beſides. He that comes to read the Jewiſh Writings, eſpecially thoſe that are of the nature of Sermons, will find this to be the main ſtuffing of them, almoſt in every leaf and page, How choiſe a people is Iſrael, how dearly God is in love with Iſrael, what a happy thing it is to be the ſeed of Abraham, how bleſſed the Nation of the Jews above all Nations, and ſuch ſtuff as this all along: And is not the ſtyle of the Romaniſt to the very ſame tune? How holy the Church of Rome, how glorious the Religion of the Church of Rome, what ſuperiority and preeminence hath the Church above all Churches; and all the men in the World are Hereticks and Apoſtates and Caſtaways, if they be not Romaniſts. Whereas if both the Nations would but impartially look upon themſelves, they would ſee that there are ſuch brands upon them two, as are upon no Nation under Heaven, now extant; I ſhall but glance at theſe few particulars.

I Is not the Jew Antichriſt, viz. Theſ. II? Examine the place ſeriouſly, and compare it with 1 Joh. II. 18. and with II. Joh. 7. and other places in the Epiſtles, and you may ſee it plain. And is not Rome Antichriſt in the Revelations? Rome her ſelf doth not deny it, if you allow her but her diſtinction of Heathen and Chriſtian.

II. Have you not obſerved a horrid Apoſtaſie in the Apoſtles time in the Church of the Jews, of thoſe who had imbraced the Goſpel? Evidences are abundant in the New Teſtament, I ſhall name but two, 2 Tim. I. 15. All Aſia is fallen away, and departed from Paul at one clap. This thou knoweſt; that all they which are in Aſia are turned away from me. And in XII. Matth. 49. our Saviour compares that generation to one that had the Devil caſt out of him, but he returns again into him with ſeven worſe Devils, ſo ſhall it be, ſaith he, to this wicked generation.

And who alſo hath not obſerved a horrid Apoſtaſie in the Church of Rome, (They themſelves only excepted, who will not ſee) from that Faith and Religion, for which that City was once renowned through the whole World, I. Rom. 8? And that direful Apoſtaſie in the Chriſtian Church of the Jews, was never ſo matched and paralleld in the World as by the Apoſtaſie in the Church of Rome.

III. Were there ever two Nations, two Churches under Heaven ſo beſotted with Traditions and the Doctrines of Men, as the Jew and Roman? Weigh them well together, and is not that as true of the Roman to every tittle, that our Saviour ſpeaks of the Jew, XV. Matth. 3, 9. That they had made the Commandment of God of none effect by their traditions, and that they taught for Doctrines the Commandments of men?

He that ſhall ſeriouſly compare their Doctrines together, about Opus operatum, Sin venial, the merit of Works, Purgatory, Freewil, the point of Juſtification, and multitudes of other points in Religion and Divine Worſhip, will ſee the Romaniſt has gone to School to the Jew, and indeed the Scholar is not a whit behind the Maſter.

IV. And to ſpare more, Is not the Jew doomed to a perpetual curſe in that paſſage, Eſay LXV. 15. Ye ſhall leave your name for a curſe unto my choſen? And in other paſſages of like nature, that might be produced, not a few.

And is not Rome doomed to perpetual perdition in that paſſage, Numb. XXIV. 24. Ships ſhall come from the coaſt of Chittim, and ſhall afflict Aſſar, and ſhall afflict Eber, and he [Chittim] ſhall periſh for ever. Where Chittim is Rome or Italy by the conſent both of Jews and Chriſtians, both of Proteſtants, and even Romaniſts themſelves.

And

And thus much concerning the perſons before us. Pilate and the Jews, Repreſentatives of the Jewiſh and Roman Nation, Actors of the Jewiſh malice and Roman tyranny.

And now let us conſider their words, the handling of which will bring our diſcourſe nearer the preſent occaſion.

Pilate ſaid, Take him, &c. for he very well knew they might do ſo, for any reſtraints the Romans, who were their Lords, had put upon them in that caſe. Joſephus tells us the Romans ſuffered them to live by their own Laws and Religion; and he records a ſpeech that Titus their Conqueror made to them, while he beſieged their City, to perſwade them to yield, in which he uſeth this argumentation. The Romans have always permitted you to live by your own Laws, and why then ſhould you rebel againſt them? And he alſo records a ſpeech that himſelf made to them to the ſame purpoſe, to perſwade them to yield, in which he uſeth the very ſame argument. And certainly Pilate did not ſpeak it in a way of jearing of them; when he bid them Take him, &c. as knowing they were reſtrained by the Romans.

They, though ſuch a reſtraint were not upon them, yet anſwer, It is not lawful, &c. It is not lawful, i. e. we cannot, we may not, it is not in our power; for ſuch a conſtruction will the Greek expreſſion very well bear; and if they uſed their own Jeruſalem language, I doubt not but their words were לית לנא רשותא which is an expreſſion very obvious and frequent in the writers in that Language, and ſignifies in that latitude, as to mean, we have not liberty, power, privilege.

Now how or when, or whereupon, did they loſe this power? If the Romans had taken it away from them, how then did they afterwards arraign and condemn and execute S. Stephen, and would have done no leſs without all doubt to S. Paul, if they might have had their own way? And their own ſtories tell us of their judging and condemning to the fire, after this, a Prieſts daughter for playing the whore in her fathers houſe, and execution was done accordingly. And yet, they ſay, they cannot judicially put any man to death, which power indeed if they had loſt, they loſt it more like fools, than like ſlaves, and it was not at all taken from them by the Romans, but they let it drop from them by their own folly.

Their own Writers and Records do tell us at what paſs it was with them at this time, in this manner.

Forty years, ſay they, before the deſtruction of the Temple, did the great Sanhedrin, or chief Court or Councel riſe, and depart out of the room Gazith, and then the power of judging in Capital matters was taken away from Iſrael. Gazith, the room where this great Court ſat, was in the Court of the Temple near unto the altar; or as themſelves expreſs it, near to the divine preſence, which, they ſuppoſed, dwelt upon the altar, and looked on them how they acted in judgment. They thought therefore that by the very reverence and venerableneſs of the place, and preſence, they were bound to judge malefactors, and to execute them unfailingly, which at the laſt they ſaw, they could not do, and therefore they reſolve to riſe and depart from that place.

The caſe was now with them much like to that gloſs of ſome of the Hebrew writers upon the firſt words of the book of Ruth. The words properly are thus, It came to paſs in the days when the Judges judged. But they invert it thus, It came to paſs in the days, when they judged the Judges. And a ſhrewd inverſion indeed, when the people judge their Judges, and malefactors aw and over-power the Magiſtracy. And juſt ſuch was their caſe now. Their Country did ſo ſwarm with all manner of wickedneſs and villanies, that they were grown beyond the correction of the Magiſtracy, that they out dared the Magiſtracy. As Jezebel. The Sanhedrin could not, durſt not judge them. Nay theſe go further than defie and dare, they even conquer and maſter. So that not any but is glad to yield and reſolve, that they will not go about to puniſh ſuch villanies and wickedneſs any more, for they ſaw that it was but in vain to go about it, and that they could not do it without their own danger. And ſo their own Records tell us, That adulteries were grown ſo common and open, that the Sanhedrin determined, there ſhould be no more trial of the ſuſpected or adulterous wife by the bitter waters, which God had preſcribed, Numb. V. That murders were ſo common and ordinary, that the Sanhedrin determined, there ſhould be no more the beheading of a Heifer, which God had preſcribed for the expiation of an uncertain murder, Deut. XXI. And Murtherers ſo numerous and potent and impudent, that the Magiſtrate could not, durſt not judge them for fear of being themſelves murdered. And therefore the great Sanhedrin reſolves, Come let us riſe and ſit here no longer, for it is better for us to riſe and depart hence, than by ſitting here to contract guilt to our ſelves, when the very place challengeth from us, that we do judgment and execution, and we cannot do it. And ſo they roſe and went thence, and then ceaſed and failed the judging of Capital offenders through out all the Courts of Iſrael. And this account do their Writers and Records give, how it came to paſs that they loſt that power, that they could not, might not, put any malefactor to death. And ſo you have a Commentary of of their own Nation and Hiſtorians, upon their words here in the Text. I might yet add further from them.

1. That ſometimes they returned to the Hall or room Gazith to ſit upon Capital offendors, as blaſphemers, falſe Prophets, notoriouſly inceſtuous, &c. when they thought good; but never returned thither to ſit upon murther.

2. That when they did ſit there and Judged and Sentenced, yet they hardly ever executed, but referred the offendors to the puniſhment of God. And they will tell you, That God at one time or other, did bring them to ſome kind of death in ſome ſort ſutable to that the Sanhedrin ſhould have put them to.

Sometimes indeed malice and ſpite made them venture an execution doing, when they ſaw they might do it without their own danger, when they executed S. Stephen for a Heretick, and Benſatda for a Seducer, if by him they meant not our Saviour himſelf.

But that that we have the moſt reaſon to conſider of, is how the Nation came to this paſs of Vice and Villany, that Vice and Villany were not only incorrigible, but were grown terrible to thoſe that ſhould correct them: Wickedneſs ſtrong, and Magiſtracy feeble: Murthers, Plunderings, Aſſaſſinations, all manner of Abominations ſwarming, and no power in them that were in power to puniſh them.

Not to ſpeak of the ſecret diſpoſal of God for the executing of his vengeance upon that ſinful Nation in giving them up to themſelves and to confuſion, but to look only at thoſe things that are apparent.

I. The growth of Villany was from the not puniſhing of villanies in time: and the Magiſtrates want of executing Judgment made them loſe the power of executing Judgment. And they could not puniſh malefactors when they ſhould, becauſe they would not do it, when they might. The ſword of Juſtice ruſted in the ſcabbard, that they could not draw it, becauſe they let it reſt in the ſcabbard when they ſhould have drawn it.

As that generation was the wickedeſt that the Earth had carried in our Saviours character, A wicked and adulterous generation, a faithleſs and perverſe generation, a Serpent and Viper generation, a generation wicked above expreſſion, as appears by that expreſſion of the Prophet Eſay LIII. 8. Who ſhall declare his generation, i. e. the generation wherein he lived; ſo the ſame Prophet ſpeaking of the very ſame time and generation, ſhews from whence the above wickedneſs of the generation grew, Eſay LIX. 14. Judgment is turned away backward, and juſtice ſtandeth afar off: truth is fallen in the ſtreets, and equity cannot enter. And it diſpleaſed the Lord, that there was no judgment. Which very Scripture the Jews themſelves do produce to prove that the Meſſias ſhould come in the worſt of times and generations. Now

II. There were two things that hindred and ſpoiled the execution of Juſtice and Judgment, like two worms lying at the root of Judicature; that like the worm that ſmote Jonas gourd, kild execution of Judgment at the very root, that that tree was clean blaſted, dried up and withered.

The firſt let me Emblem by this homely Emblem. The Ape loving and hugging her young ſo dearly, that ſhe hugs, and preſſes, and cruſhes them to death. They had ſo fooliſh and fond a prizing and tenderneſs to a Jew forſooth, becauſe he was a Jew, that that very fondneſs helpt to hug and cruſh the Nation to this confuſion and ruine. O noli tangere, meddle not with him ſo ſeverely, he is an Iſraelite of the ſeed of Abraham, he is not to be dealt with as you would with another man. I could tire you with evidences of this fondneſs and folly in multitudes of inſtances. Shall I but give you one of their own ſtories.

A father ſent out his ſon to hire labourers to come to work with him. The ſon agreed with him for ſo much mony a day, and meat and drink; when his father underſtood that he had agreed to find them their diet, Ah ſon, ſaith he, what haſt thou done? Though thou ſhouldeſt keep as noble and royal a Table for them as ever Solomon did, thou couldeſt never make good thine agreement for their diet; for they are the children of Abraham, and no treatment or entertainment can riſe up to their deſert and dignity. John Baptiſt very well knew how high their pulſe beat upon this delirium, which he bids, Think not to ſay within your ſelves, we have Abraham to our Father: for this they thought, was privilege enough and would ſerve for all things.

It was the Doctrine of their Schools and Pulpits, That every Iſraelite was to have a portion in the World to come, in the benefits and happineſs of the days of Meſſias, for ſo the expreſſion means there. And why, I pray you, every Iſraelite? Why forſooth becauſe he is an Iſraelite. And this very Maxim learnt, and believ'd, and taught by Nicodemus, made the Phariſee at a nonplus, when our Saviour told him he could not ſee the Kingdom of Heaven or Meſſias except he were born again. For he thought his being born a Jew and Iſraelite would ſerve well enough for that purpoſe and that he needed no more.

I could

I could produce you instances in their own Authors, where this very argument is used to check and hinder execution of justice upon a malefactor Jew. O do it not, for he is a child of Abraham, of the stock of Israel, and flock of God. Though never so horrid a villain, yet O do not put him to death, for he is a Jew. Nay, they stick not to tell, that Elias himself hath appeared to hinder the execution of malefactors with this very argument. And some of their great Doctors and Grandees have not stuck to say, That that Sanhedrin that puts one man to death in seven years, nay in seventy years is a bloody Court; And if we had been in those times, say they, when executions were done, there should never have been any in our time done.

Needed there any other seed for the breeding of mischief and villany in the Land, of all sorts and sizes and without number, than such a fond and senceless principle and practice as this? Sow but such remisness of executing justice and judgment in a Nation, and presently you will have a very plentiful crop of all manner of mischief, like that Hemlock crop in Hos. X. 4. Judgment springeth up as Hemlock in the furrows of the field.

By the way upon this fond and mad principle of theirs, of Jew-prizing, I cannot but observe these two things.

I. Their deadly spleen and malice against our Saviour, when contrary to this their National principle, they did not only pursue him eagerly to put him to death, but for that end delivered him up to the Heathen power, which I question whether they had ever done so by Jew before.

II. How heavy the hand and vengeance of God was upon them in their Civil Wars and Seditions among themselves, when contrary to their Nation-principle of Jew-prizing, they fell Jew to destroy Jew, the seed of Abraham to murther the seed of Abraham, in the horridest assassinations and destractiveness, that any story recordeth.

A second hinderer and destroyer of the execution of justice among them I may emblem by that foolish Roman Emperor, that while he should have been busied in consulting and taking care about the great affairs of state, he made it a very great business and employment he followed, to catch flies. Our Saviour tells you these men did much the like, Matth. XXIII. 22. You tithe mint, and annise, and cummin, and have omitted the great things of the Law, Judgment, Mercy and Faith. They were punctual about things of little or no weight, and remis about matters of moment, and the greatest import, severe about things, that were indeed as good as nothing, and careless about those things, that were indeed all in all. Like Israel at the battel of Gibeah, Judg. XIX. zealous to avenge the quarrel and injury of a whorish woman, the Levites Concubine, but never mind the avenging of the quarrel and injury done to God by the setting up Michals and the Danites Idol. They were extreme punctual in requiring the washing of hands before meat, but as our Saviour tells them, their tradition gave leave to starve their parents with saying, Corban, or let whatsoever I should relieve thee by, be dedicated for sacred, and they made no matter of letting father or mother perish for want of sustenance. They were very exact in looking that no one should come into the mount of the Temple with staf in hand, or shoes on their feet, or their purse at their girdle, against which they had a strict Law; but they made nothing to keep a Market or Fair of Oxen, and Sheep and Doves there: they had Tabernæ, Shops there, where they sold Salt and Oyle and Frankinsence and such things as they used about the Altar. And the Sanhedrin it self, when it removed out of the room Gazith, came and sat down close by those Shops, and never quecht at it, to make the Temple an house of Merchandize. What a deal of doe do they keep about our Saviours healing on the Sabbath day, but when a woman is taken in adultery in the very act, the Sanhedrin brings her to our Saviour to lay a trap for him by trying what he would determine in that case: but of more done to her for her crime you have no news. And to spare more, He that reads their Pandects and Canons and their determinations, and debates there, may justly stand amazed to see how serious and grave they be in a thousand things, that are but trash and chaf, and that deserve nothing but laughter, and how slight and little looking after these great things that concern true Piety, Justice, Charity and a holy Life. How smartly they measure the violation of a tradition of the Elders about toys and trifles, and take no notice of the violation of the Divine Law of God about the greatest matter. And so our Saviour speaks enough of this in that short passage, Ye strain at a gnat and swallow a Camel. Those traditions were the ruine of Religion and Justice in the Nation, and proved consequently the utter ruine of the Nation it self.

It is observable concerning that unhappy Nation, that before their Captivity into Babylon, they were all for Idolatry, but after their return out of Captivity they abhorred Idolatry, but were all for Traditions, they changed naught for naught, or rather naught for worse. For indeed their Traditions, one may justly say, were more destructive than their Idolatry. Their Traditions wrought them and brought them them to murder the Lord of life and glory, which their Idolatry would hardly ever have brought them to. And the very principles of their Traditions were such, that they had not been right Scholars in that School, they had not been faithful to their principles, if they had not destroied him. So directly contrary to the tenor of the Gospel, and to the quality and appearance of Christ were those cursed Traditions, that if they sought not withal might and main, to destroy them and root them out, the beast did not work according to the nature of the beast, but clean contrary to it.

It is very generally conceived that God rejected that Nation for the murther of the Lord of life. And that was a very just cause and reason why they were rejected. But if I should say, God rejected the bulk and mass of that Nation long before the death of Christ for those cursed Traditions, I believe, I should not speak it without good proof and warrant. And it is observable that John Baptist calls them a generation of Vipers, which in plain English is, The seed of the Serpent, at his first preaching among them. And it is observable, that which we are upon, that wickedness and villanies were grown so abounding and so predominant, that they were past the Magistrates correcting, before ever our Saviour comes to be arraigned. And it is no wonder they were grown so abounding and predominant, when their very Principles led them to make crimes of those that were but trifles, and no crimes of those that were crimes indeed: to omit the great things of the Law, whereby they might have beaten down cruelty, dishonesty, and debauchery, and to make all their business only about toys, only for the promoting of formality and hypocrisie, and seeming goodness.

And thus you see wickedness uncorrected till it grow incorrigible: an unhappy Magistracy asleep, till it wake, like Sampson, with the locks of his strength cut, and overpowred by the Philistins: and a miserable Nation bleeding to death, and weltering in its own blood, because the Physitian would not let blood when he should have done, in due time and in the right vein.

And now do I need to say any thing by way of Application? As the Apostle concerning Abel, He being dead, yet speaketh; so I of Judea, she is here dying, and do you not hear her speak? nay as he of old, Loquere ut te videam. Do you not see her speak? The very looking on her may read a Lecture. As the Lacedæmonians read a silent Lecture against drunkenness to their children, only by shewing them their slaves Swine-drunk. So tis a silent Lecture against neglecting of the execution of Justice and Judgment, and against partiality in executing of Judgment and Justice, only to look upon her, and her undone condition.

It is well known to you all that pass by, behold and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, that is done unto me. And who wrought it to thee, O unhappy Nation? Oh! I was wounded in this house of my friends. Folly and fondness, partiality and foolish tenderness, sloth and sleepiness have been my undoing. Discite justitiam moniti. Take warning by my fate, all Nations and Countries, and set your selves to execute Judgment and do Justice, lest wickedness grow that there be no curbing, and so vengeance follow, that there be no healing.

The Grandees of that Nation, though so careless as to practise this, will tell you, that all the six hundred and thirteen precepts contained in the Law of Moses, are couched and included within those two in Esay, LVI. 1. Keep judgment, and do justice. And indeed how much and how great things are included in those two, keeping or observing Judgment in causes Controversal, and doing just in causes Criminal? The Greek Poet will tell you,

Ἐν τῇ δικαιοσύνῃ συλλαβόντι πᾶσ' ἀρετή ἐστι.

That in Justice is comprehended all Vertues; and the Scripture will tell you, that under the name of righteousness is comprehended all piety, by the use of the name: a righteous man for one after Gods own heart.

I might speak how much piety is comprehended in doing Justice, and how much charity, how much service to God, how much benefit to the Country. But need I to illustrate these things that are so plain?

It is something strange, and not to be passed by without observation, that in the New Testament in several places, the second Table is cited and taken for the whole Law without mention of the first Table at all. In Matth. XIX. 16. when a man comes and asks, what he should do to have eternal life? Christ bids him, keep the Commandments: When he demands, which? He refers him only to the second Table, Thou shalt do no murder. Thou shalt not commit adultery. Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not bear false witness. Honour thy Father and thy Mother. And Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thy self. You have the like reference to the second Table, Rom. XIII. 8. Ow nothing to any man but to love one another, for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the Law. And there going to reckon up the Commandments of the Law, he mentions only those of the second Table. And you may observe the Apostle S. James using the same style, Jam. II. 8. If ye fulfil the Royal Law according to the Scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thy self, ye do well.

one

What then is the younger sister fairer than the Elder, the second Table more lovely than the first, that Jacob must serve his apprenticeship for Rachel the younger, rather than for Leah the elder?

As Micah VI. 8. He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good, and what the Lord requires of thee, to do justly, and love mercy. For these two are the Urim and Thummim of the second Table, the very life of true Christian piety, and of a true Christians acting. And the Lord thus directs men to the duties of the second Table, as the touchstone of Piety, whereby to try whether we love God, by our love to our neighbour; whether he will do God right, by doing right to his neighbour. If time would permit I might speak,

I. How great a duty Justice is of the second Table.

II. How great a charity to a place or Country.

III. How great a tye upon all, not Judges and Magistrates only, but Juries, Witnesses, all in their places to promote it.

IV. How great a misery, and undoing of a Nation to have the current of it stopped.

A SERMON PREACHED AT ELY ASSISE,

Septemb. 12. 1671.

JAMES V. 9.

Behold the Judge ſtandeth before the door.

THE great Court of Judicature at Jeruſalem ſat near the Altar of burnt offerings, half the room where they ſat, being in that holy Court where the Altar ſtood. And they thought they were bound to ſit ſo near the Altar, as long as they might, and they thought they were bound, while they ſat there, to execute impartial juſtice, becauſe of the nearneſs of שכינה the Divine preſence, which they accounted was always upon the Altar.

A very needful, uſeful and proper conception and remembrance for every Court of Judicature to take up; to think, how near the Divine preſence is unto them to overlook them: how God is cloſe by them, near unto them, nay, as David tells us, ſitting among them, ſeeing and obſerving their doing, and demeanour in that great employment: Therefore being to ſpeak to ſuch a Court, if I ſhould be ſo bold as to take on me to direct the way to the impartial adminiſtration of juſtice, I could find no more proper way of direction in that caſe, than to mind you of the noble copy you have before you, viz. the great Judge: Or if I ſhould ſet my ſelf to exhort to the execution of it, I could uſe no more enforcing and perſwaſive arguments or exhortations, than to mind you how near this great Judge is unto you. Behold, the Judge ſtandeth before the door.

But do we behold him? Could we ſee him with theſe bodily eyes, as we ſee that honourable Perſon, I ſhould need to ſay no more. Such a ſight would be Text and Sermon enough and enough again for us. But is there no other eye to ſee him that is inviſible? It is a true Chriſtians motto, I have ſet the Lord always before me: and he ſees him, though he ſees him not; and with God in his eye he frameth all his demeanor, and carriage, and lives, and walks, and does, and ſuffers, and dies, as ſeeing him that is inviſible, as it is ſaid of Moſes, Heb. XI. 27.

But to ſee him as the great Judge, is, as I may ſay, a ſecond contemplation of God, and as needful as the firſt. The firſt I call that, when the Soul contemplates God, as the chiefeſt, choiceſt, only, and moſt deſirable Good, and ſo all its affections, deſires and longings are laid out upon him, ſtriving for the enjoyment of him. But withal the good ſoul contemplates God, ſo as to make him his fear and his dread, as well as his portion and delight: he owns him infinitely juſt, as well as he owns him infinitely good, and as he looks upon him as his God, ſo he looks upon him as his Judge, Job IX. 15. Whom though I were right, yet would I not anſwer, but I would make ſupplication to my Judge.

Such

Such a Contemplation of God may the very present occasion call upon us to take up. For can so great and remarkable an occasion pass us without some spiritual reflection, and heavenly meditation? Occasional meditation is a second sacred concoction, as I may call it, that when the body or sence hath, or hath had the use of an earthly occurrence, turns it to the good and nourishment of the soul. And shall such an occasion as this you are now entring on, pass without some such beneficial, spiritual improvement? For what kind of heart does he carry, that can see the day of an Assise, and never think of the great day of judgment? that can see a Judge, a tribunal, arraignings, sentencings, and never remember that, We must all stand before the tribunal seat of Christ: nor remember with himself, For all these things God will bring thee to judgment?

Therefore Sursum Corda, let us lift up our hearts, and let their thoughts carry us beyond sight and sence, and pick up the hony of some spiritual meditation from so noble a flower. And the Text in some particulars directs us how to do it, viz. that as we see the Judge already come and ready to enter upon the work of the Assise, so to remember the great Assise is coming, the great Judge is coming. For he cometh, for he cometh to judge the Earth. Nay, behold, he standeth, behold he standeth before the door.

But there may be some question, what is our Apostles immediate, and most intent and direct sence in these words. For there are several expressions of the like nature in Scripture, which seem to intend more especially the nearness of the destruction of Jerusalem, and the Jewish Nation. For as Christs pouring down his vengeance in the destruction of that City, and people, is called his coming in his glory, and his coming in judgment; and as the destruction of that City and Nation is charactered in Scripture, as the destruction of the whole World; so there are several passages, that speak of the nearness of that destruction, that are suited according to such characters. Such is that in 1 Cor. X 11. Upon us the ends of the world are come. 1 Pet. IV. 7. The end of all things is at hand. Heb X. 37. Yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come and will not tarry. And to the very same tendency may this be in the words of the Text: Behold, the Judge standeth before the door. As also that in the Verse before, The coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

There is very much mention in Scripture of the last days, and both of exceeding much good, and exceeding much evil that should accrew in them. Our present dealing is about the latter. By the last days are meant the last days of Jerusalem, and of that Nation. And there is foretold of them, that in the last days there should be perillous times; 2 Tim. III. 1. That in the last days there should come mockers; 2 Pet. III. 3. That in the last times there should come many Antichrists, which was an evidence that those were the last times; 1 Joh. II. 18. Under those sad times did the poor professors of the Gospel live, till God gave them some recovery and refreshment by the ruine of the City and Nation. They were times of mockings and scourgings, and imprisonments, and of most bitter persecution of the Church both by the Jews that never believed, and by Apostates, that had believed, but were revolted from the Gospel, and become enemies to it. A sad hour of temptation, Rev. III. 10. Judgment began at the house of God. 1 Pet. IV. 17. A fiery tryal, at the thirteenth verse of the same Chapter.

Therefore the Apostles, to bear up the hearts of the poor persecuted and afflicted Saints of God, mind them concerning Christs coming in vengeance against that City and people, to make an end of the persecution by making an end of the persecutors. Instances might be given of this numerously, if I would insist upon it. Such an one, I suppose, is that in the verse before: Be patient, Brethren, till the coming of the Lord: be patient for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. And that in the verse of the Text, Grudge not, Brethren, one against another, lest you be condemned, with them that grudge at you, when the Judge cometh to plead their cause, and behold, the Judge standeth before the door.

If we should take the words in this sence, and pointing at such a time and matter, I suppose, it might not be far from the Apostles meaning. But do his words reach no further? Are not these things written for our learning, as well as for theirs, to whom he wrote? Is it not a truth spoken to us as well as it was spoken to them, Behold the Judge standeth before the door? Dispute it not, but rather down on our knees, and bless and magnifie the patience and goodness of this Judge, for that he is standing at the door, and hath not yet broke in upon us.

In handling of the words, I suppose, I need not to spend time in explaining the Phrases. For none that hears of this Judge, but he knows who is meant, and none can but know what is meant by his standing at the door, viz. as near at hand, and ready to enter. And if the Apostle speak here of the nearness of the destruction of Jerusalem, our Saviours words of the very same subject may help to explain him; Matth. XXIV. 33. So likewise ye, when ye see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors. So behold, the Judge is near, even at the door. But the Judge of whom? And at the door of whom? These shall be the two things, that my discourse shall enquire after.

The

The Jews in their Pandect, mention several things, of which they say, they are two, and yet are four: and when they explain themselves, they shew they speak very good sence. I may speak much like of the Propositions that rise out of the words, that they are two, but indeed are four. The two are these, That there is a Judge, or God is a Judge: and That this Judge stands before the door. But the very stile and expression doth double it; That God is the Judge of all, and That this Judge stands at the door of all. Because there is no exception about whom he judgeth, nor any exception at whose door he standeth.

I cannot say, it is as essential to God, to be a Judge, as it is essential to him to be holy, infinite, eternal, good, &c. because he had been there had these never been creature to judge; as he was these from eternity, before the creature was: but since there is a creature to judge, I may say, it is as essential to God to be Judge of his creature, as it is to be God. For we may truly say, if he were not Judge, he were not God. For what kind of God were that, that had not to do about judging the creature? I need not to produce places of Scripture, to prove that that is before us; for what more plain, what more frequent, than such testimonies? That God is Judge himself, Psal. L. 6. That he is the Judge of all the Earth, Gen. XVIII. 25. That he is the Lord, the righteous Judge, 2 Tim. IV. 8. That he sits upon the Throne judging right, Psal. IX. 5. That with righteousness he shall judge the world, and the people with equity, Psal. XCVIII. ult.

But because the language of the Text is, Behold the Judge! let me speak, as I may say, unto your eyes, according to the expression, O generation, see ye the word of the Lord, Jer. II. 31. So let me lead your eyes to behold some specimens of this great Judges judging, and some demonstrations and assurances that he hath given, that he will so judge.

Eternal Judgment is one of the first principles of Christian Religion; Heb. II. 6. viz. the judgment that doth determine of every mans state for eternity, for of Gods temporal judgments we shall not speak here. And that judgment is either particular, passed upon every one at death; or general, which shall be at the last day. Of either of these I shall take some prospect.

I. Concerning the particular Judgment. When mans day is done, the day of the Lord begins with him: and when his work is done he is to receive his wages according as his work hath been good or evil. Lazarus and the rich man no sooner dead, but the one is in torment, and the other in Abrahams bosom. And how come they there? Conceive you see their passage. The souls of all, good or bad, as soon as ever departed out of the body are slipt into another world. And what becomes of them there? Do they dispose of themselves? Do they go to Heaven or Hell by their own disposal? There would never soul go to Hell, if it were at those terms. But the departed soul meets with its Judge, as soon as ever it is departed; and by him it is doomed and disposed to its eternal estate. The Judge stands at the very door of that World of Spirits, to dispose of all that come in there to their everlasting condition, according as their works have been here, good or evil. So that those words of the Apostle, as they speak the subsequence of judgment to death, so they may very well speak this nearness, It is appointed for all men once to die, and then cometh the judgment, Heb. IX. ult.

Those words of our Saviour are very regardable, Luk. XX. 30. He is not the God of the dead, but of the living, for all live unto him. Though dead and gone to the World, and to themselves, yet to him they are not dead, but alive, and he deals with them as such as are alive. And though he be not the God of all that so live, yet he is the Judge of them all. He calls himself the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, when they had been now dead and in the dust a long time; for they lived though they were dead. And so Cain, and Cham, and Pharaoh lived, though they were dead; that is, were not utterly extinct, and yet God was far from owning himself the God of Cain, Cham and Pharaoh, but he was their Judge.

And do but think, how these men looked upon their Judge, when they met him. A carnal wretch that never thinks of God, never dreams of judgment, but is all for his pleasures and delights here, when he dies and instantly meets his dreadful Judge to doom him; Can any tongue express what a horrid surprizal that soul is taken at? I cannot but take some scantling of conception of it from that passage, Rev. I. 17. And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. The beloved Disciple to be thus terrified at the sight of his beloved Master? He that used friendly to lean in his bosom, now to fall at his feet for fear, as dead? And Christ not coming to him neither with any message of terror, but in a friendly manner with instructions concerning things that were to come to pass thereafter. And if so dreadful a consternation fell upon him upon meeting and seeing the glory of his dear; what is the wretched souls case, when it so unexpectedly meets with the dreadful terrors of its angry Judge?

II. Con-

II. Concerning this great Judges judging all the World at the laſt day. I ſhall but offer to you that Proſpect: Rev. XX. 12. I ſaw a great white throne, and him that ſat on it, from whoſe face the Earth and Heaven fled away, and there was no place found for them. And I ſaw the dead ſmall and great ſtand before God, and they were judged. Heaven and Earth fled away before God, but no fleeing for ſmall and great, but they muſt be judged. Heaven and Earth that were in being are diſſolved and gone, but the dead ſmall and great that were not in being are brought into being; that they may be brought to judgment. And ſo Chap. VI. 14. Heaven departs as a ſcroll that is rolled up together, and every mountain and Iſland is removed out of his place. But in the next verſe there is a World of wretches that would fain be gon too, but it will not be; would fain be hid ſince they cannot go, but that will not be neither. That ſay to the rocks fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that ſitteth upon the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb. For the great day of his wrath is come, and who ſhall be able to ſtand? II.

II. Now what aſſurances or earneſts, as I may call them, hath God given of this that he will Judge all the World, which is the ſecond thing I mentioned? I might mention divers. The Apoſtle makes the deſtruction of the World by water, and Sodome by fire to be ſuch, 2 Pet. II. 9. Another Apoſtle makes the raiſing him from the dead, that is to be Judge to be ſuch aſſurance, Act. XVII. 31. But I only name three more. That he hath ſet up Judicatures in the World. That he hath ſet up a Judicature in every mans ſoul. And that he hath given his Law and Word, by which men muſt be judged.

I. Are not the Tribunals and Judicatures that he hath ſet up in the World evidence and aſſurance given, that he will Judge the World? Magiſtracy, whoſe image and ſuperſcription doth it carry? The great Cæſars, the great Magiſtrate of Heaven and Earth. And if that deal in matters that concern the body, may we not read in it that he that ordained it, will diſpoſe both of bodies and ſouls?

Take to thoughts that of the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. VI. 2. Know ye not that the Saints ſhall judge the World? i. e. That a Chriſtian Magiſtracy ſhall judge among men. And, Know ye not that we ſhall judge Angels? i. e. That a Chriſtian Miniſtry ſhall judge againſt Devils. Weigh the words ſeriouſly, and I believe you will find them to riſe to this ſence. And then know you not, that the ultimate judging of Men and Devils muſt reſt in him, that inſtituted Magiſtracy and Miniſtry both? I ſaid you are Gods, for in your function you carry his repreſentation and character, but I ſaid, he is much more God, that ordained you Gods, and he much more Magiſtrate and Judge, that ordained you Magiſtrates and Judges. In you Judgment is drawn in little, in him it is in full proportion. Filia exſcripſit Patrem, as he of old of a good daughter, that ſhe had copied out a good father. Your function hath copied out Divine Authority: but yours is but a Copy, the original incomparably fairer.

II. Is not the Judicature that God hath ſet up in every mans ſoul an undoubted aſſurance of Gods judging of all? When a very proper definition of Conſcience is, That it is Præjudicium judicii, a foretaſte, a preface to the judgment to come, doth it not give aſſurance of the judgment to come? And that to every ſoul, when there is a conſcience in every ſoul. That as our Saviour, when the Jews aſk him, what appearance was there of the Kingdom of Heaven, gives them this anſwer, The Kingdom of Heaven is with in you, as ſome read it; ſo if any one aſk, what proof and aſſurance is within you. Aſk Felix alſo, Act. XXIV. 25. As Paul reaſoned of righteouſneſs, temperance and judgment to come, Felix trembled. And how comes a Roman valour to be ſo ſhaken at the word of a poor Jew? A great Judge trembling at the words of his priſoner? He had that within him that gave teſtimony to every word that Paul ſpake, that it was true. A ſtrange thing to him as well as a dreadful, to hear of the Judgment to come in manner, as the Divine Orator ſet it out. But there was that within him, that could not but aſſent to the truth of all he ſpake.

III. Gods very giving of his Law to the World is an aſſurance abundant, that he will once judge the World. Let me draw your thoughts to the foot of mount Sinai, to ſtand with Iſrael there while the Law is giving. Do you not ſee the dreadful terror in which it is given, fire, and ſmoke, and earth-quake, and ſound of trumpet? And do you think that the great Lawgiver, that comes in ſuch dread to give it, will never come to demand an account of it, how men have dealt with it? Muſt thoſe Words be ſcattered in the Air, and God never take more care or account of them?

And let me lead your eyes to mount Calvary, and there let them obſerve the great God, ſealing his Covenant and Goſpel in the blood of his own Son. See Chriſt bleeding there; hands, feet and heart bleeding out his laſt drop of blood, to confirm and ſeal that Truth and Goſpel, that he had preached to the World. And will God and Chriſt never take account, how men uſe the Goſpel, that, as I may ſay, coſt ſo dear engroſſing?

This very thing is an undoubled aſſurance, that God will Judge all the World, becauſe he cannot, but call men to account, how they have demeaned themſelves to his Law and revealed revealed will. As sure as a Law and a Gospel have been given, so sure a judgment to come, to inquire what usage Law and Gospel have found among men, and a reward accordingly. The Jews in their writings do oft bring in the Law complaining to God of injuries done to her by such and such persons, and begging that he would do her right. Hath a despised Law, a contemned Gospel, a scorned Word of God, no cry in the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, and hath the Lord no care to plead their cause? Are they only to cry to men, and if men abuse them, have they no cry to God? And hath the despised blood of Christ, and trodden under foot, no cry to God?

I cannot but remember the Talmudish story about Zacharies blood that was shed betwixt the Temple and the Altar, that no rains, no pains, no water could wash it off the pavement of the Temple, but still and still it was bubbling there, and would never be quiet, till execution of judgment quieted it; the King of Babylon slaying near an hundred thousand persons in the same place. The application is easie. The judgment of wicked men lingreth not, and their damnation slumbreth not; 2 Pet. II. Their sins will not let them linger and slumber, but continually cry in the ears of God for judgment. The injuries they do to Law, Gospel and Blood of Christ will not let them linger nor slumber, but these are continually crying to God to avenge their cause. And will not God avenge his cause?

What need I speak of his Soveraignty challenging, that he dispose of all mens eternal being, as he brought them into being here? What should I speak of his Justice, challenging that every one be rewarded according to his work? And indeed what need I to insist much to prove that God is Judge of all, and that he will bring all to judgment, to any that call themselves Christians, and have the Bible in their hand?

And so I have done with the first double Proposition in the Text, viz. That God is Judge: and Judge of all. And now briefly to speak to the second duplicity, viz. He stands before the door, and before the door of all.

I know the Apostles expression means in general, the Judge is near; but if it should come to particularizing, of this or the other or any person, would he not say the same? And will not any say the same, that will acknowledge a Judge or Judgment? Who can say, who dares say, the Judge stands not before my door? I am sure a good man dares not say so, for he accounts his God and Judge near unto him. Thou compassest my path and my lying down, and art acquainted with all my ways, Psal. CXXXIX. 3. And if any wretched man dare say so, let him take heed that he finds not his Judge a great deal nearer than he supposes; nay the nearer for his putting him so far off.

The Scripture speaks of two kinds of people, but indeed are but one: and they seem to look two several ways, whereas indeed they look but one and the same way, viz. those that put the evil day far from them, and those that desire the evil days coming. You have mention of them both near together in one and the same Prophet. Of the former, Amos VI. 3. Wo to you that put the evil day far away: And of the latter, Amos V. 18. Wo to you that desire the day of the Lord. How they put away the evil day, in their own fooliish fancy and conceit, is no hard thing to understand. I wish that too common experience had not acquainted us with that too much, and too many a time. But how do such wicked wretches desire the day of the Lord? The Prophet Esay tells you of some Chap. V. 19. That say, let him make speed and hasten his work that we may see it; and let the counsil of the holy one of Israel draw near and come that we may know it. And all this in scorn as making a puff at the Word of the Lord, that tells of an evil day, and a day of the Lord to come. Here is talk of the Word of the Lord, I pray you let us see it; and telling of the Lords coming, where is it? Let him come that we may know it. Directly these mockers 2 Pet. III. 2. That say in scorn, where is the promise of his coming?

Now is the Judge ever the farther off for these mens putting him, and his judgment far away? Nay, is he not the nearer? In that place of Esay, the wretches that spake so in scorn are said to draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with cart-ropes. And if they draw these do they not draw judgment on too? Judgment is the neareſt when the sinner is secureſt; and when men cry peace, peace, then sudden destruction cometh upon them; 1 Thes. V. But,

First, At whose door doth not the Judge stand harkening and taking notice of mens behaviour? Rev. III. 20. Behold I stand at the door and knock. He knocks that if it may be, he may be admitted; but if he be not, he stands not in vain, but takes notice of what passes in the house that he may take account of it in his due time, Jer. VIII. 6. I hearkned and heard, but they spake not aright, no man repented him of his wickedness, saying what have I done? Mal. III. 16. The Lord hearkened and heard, and a book of remembrance was written before him. The Judge writes what passes, and in time will have a reckoning about it. And so may the counsil of the Apostle here be very well construed. Grudge not, brethren, one against another, grumble not, repine not one against another, for the Judge is at the door, and he takes notice of every thing that passeth and you must account for it.

It were an excellent lesson for every Christian to get the hundred and nine and thirtieth Psalm not only by heart, but in his heart; and to be convinced and have a feeling of what is there spoken concerning Gods nearness to every man, in what place and posture soever he is. I need no more proof for that we are speaking of than only that Psalm. I would every heart would make the Use of the doctrine there taught, and make Application by his practise.

Secondly, Who can say otherwise then that the Judge is at the door, and may break in any moment by death and judgment? And this needs no other proof than only to remember the uncertainty of death and judgment. Isaac was of this belief, when he said, I know not the day of my death, Gen. XXVII. 2. whereas he lived many a fair year after.

And remarkable is that of the Apostle, that when he is speaking of the Judgment to come, he states it as if it were to come even in his time, whereas so many hundred of years above a thousand are passed since his time. We shall not all die but we shall all be changed, 1 Cor. XV. And 1 Thes. IV. The Lord himself shall descend from Heaven with a shout. And then we which are alive, and remain shall be caught up together with him into the clouds. Why? Blessed Apostle, dost thou think the resurrection and general judgment shall come, while thou art alive? Do it, or do it not, I have learned always to think, that the Judge always stands before the door. And I would teach all generations and ages to believe the same: that the Judge standeth, &c.

And, Thirdly, who can keep him out, when he is pleased to break in? Elisha could shut the door against the Kings messenger, that was sent to take away his life: can any man do it against the great Judge, when he comes to do it? Are any doors judgment proof, when the Lord will batter against them? Rather lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be lift up, O ye everlasting doors, that the King of glory may come in. Prepare to meet thy God, O Israel: that when he comes, thou mayest comfortably entertain him. It may seem a very hard passage, that of the Apostle, 2 Pet. III. 12. Looking for and hasting to the day of God, when the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved. Any one may be ready to say upon it, as Ahab doth to Benhadad, That which my Lord sent to me for at the first, I will do, but this second thing I cannot do. The first thing proposed, To look for the day of God, I shall willingly agree to, but to hasten the day of God, this is a hard saying. For who, as the Judge standeth before the door, dare invite him in? Who dares say as Laban to Abrahams servant, Come in, thou blessed of the Lord, come in, why standest thou without? The generality of men thinketh the day of God hasteneth fast enough of it self, and that there is little need to hasten it. And yet that very consideration is a great perswasive so to do. I am sure it is so argued, Matth. XXV. Behold, the Bridegroom cometh, go forth to meet him. Not sit still till he come up to you, for he is coming, but because he is coming go forth to meet him.

It was a noble confidence and valour in David, that when Goliath came out against him, he ran and made hast to meet him. And he had but coursely incountred that great giant, had he not had that confidence and valour. That man or woman will but coldly incounter death and judgment, that sit still till death and judgment come upon them, and never make out to meet them: that when the Judge stands at the door, have no mind of his entring and coming in.

It were worth disputing how far a good man may be willing to die, or how far unwilling, but I shall not enter upon that at this time. It is past all dispute that every one should be preparing to die, and to meet the Judge when he cometh. He standeth at the door, it is happy to be prepared against he cometh in. Let us all leave our thank-offerings at the Judges altar for his great patience and long-suffering towards us: that he is still standing at the door, and hath not broken in upon us: that his Patience is not outwearied by us, after our so great exercising of it. And let us ever carry the words of the Text sounding in our ears and hearts. That the Judge standeth at the door, beholding all our actions, beholding all our hearts, noting and observing all we do, to demand an account of us at his day of Judgment.

A SERMON PREACHED AT S. MARIES Cambridge,

Octob. 7. 1655.

MATTH. XXVIII. 19.

Go ye therefore and teach all Nations baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

SEven things may be taken notice of from these words at first sight.

I. A permission and commission to bring the Gospel among the Gentiles. The Apostles had been tied up before, Matth. X. 5. Jesus sent forth the twelve, and commanded them saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles. But now he inlargeth them.

II. The end of this inlargement, to bring the Gentiles in to be Disciples. So μαθητεύσατε signifies, as we shall see anon.

III. The way to initiate them for Disciples: μαθητεύσατε βαπτίζοντες, make them Disciples by baptizing them.

IV. The form of the administration of Baptism. In nomine Patris, &c. In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

V. This is the fourth establishment of Baptism. The first was in the hand of John. Secondly, Christ himself was baptized. Thirdly, The Disciples baptized in his Name, Joh. III. 22. Joh. IV. 2. Fourthly, Here in the Text is the full establishment of it.

VI. The Doctrine of the Trinity is in the Text, and professed in every Baptism.

VII. The Office of Ministers: To teach and administer the Sacraments.

Two Heresies especially misconstrue this Text, Anabaptism, and Socinianism. For I must call that Heresie that unchurches all Churches, and ungods God. I shall not intangle myself in these disputes, only consider the sense and propriety of the Text as before us; and that in these parts named.

First, I shall consider the Apostles commission to fetch in the Gentiles. This is called a Mystery, Ephes. III. 4, 5, 6, &c. Whereby when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the Mystery of Christ. Which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy Apostles and Prophets by the Spirit, That the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the Gospel: &c. This is the great business in the Prophets. To bring thy sons from far: All the Ends of the Earth shall see the Salvation of God, &c. In a word, this is a great monument of the Riches of grace, that when the Gentiles had lain rejected so long as two and twenty hundred years; so deep, as to commit all sin, and not know of sin; so inslaved, as to adore Devils; so far from the means of grace, as that they never heard of it: yet not length of time, depth of sin, power of Satan, nor vastness of distance, could hinder the light of the Gospel breaking in upon them. O! the heighth, depth, bredth, and length of the grace of God!

Here is a large field, to consider this Grace. As first, how the Gospel was slighted by the Jews, yet this Grace was not worn out of patience, but God sends it also to the Gentiles.

tiles. And secondly, how it was brought to them that cared not to come to it. I might speak here of our share of this grace, who were Heathen. It was good tidings to all people; as to the Romans, Chap. I. 6. Among whom are ye also the called of Jesus Christ: But I shall keep close to the words of the Text. I shall observe two things concerning this Commission.

I. The time when this Commission was given.

II. The work, which the Apostles were to do by vertue of this Commission.

First, The time. Christ being now risen. And the reasons, why Christ took this time to deliver this Commission to his Apostles, were these.

1. One reason of it appears in the word Therefore. In the 18 vers. All power is given unto me in Heaven, and in Earth. Go ye therefore. All power, as Mediator. He dispenced things before, after his own Will, by vertue of his Soverainty, Rom. IX. 18. Therefore hath he mercy, on whom he will have mercy. But add to this, that now he had paid a price for the Heathens: he had earned his wife as Jacob: had conquered Satan that had them captive: had exhibited a Righteousness, to save the wickedest, where they would apply it: had broken down the partition wall between Jew and Gentile. In Ephes. II. 13, 14. But now in Christ Jesus, ye who sometimes were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ. For he is our Peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us. And in vers. 15. he shews you how. Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the Law of commandments contained in Ordinances, &c. In his flesh he hath abolished the enmity between both. First, By dying for both alike. That the Scripture oft inculcates: his dying for all, i. e. Jews and Gentiles. Secondly, He satisfied what the Ordinaces of the Partition-wall required. Take Sacrifices, Purifications for the Partition-wall, he satisfied them. Take Touch not, taste not, handle not, for the Partition-wall, he exhibited a purity that nothing could taint. Thus, all Power was given him, and such a claim to the Heathen. And therefore Christ now after his Resurrection sends his Apostles to all Nations.

2. Another reason was this, because the Jews had now forfeited their privilege. Beauty and bonds were broke. They were set under a peculiar favour at first: Christ owns that: till they forfeited it, by despising their highest privilege of all, viz. Christ himself born of them, and his Gospel. This is plain by those words of Barnabas and Paul, in XIII. Act. 46. It was necessary that the Word of God should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judge your selves unworthy of everlasting life; lo, we turn to the Gentiles. And Christ had said to them before, The Kingdom of Heaven shall be taken from you. They had sinned worse than the Heathen, the Prophets blame them so. For besides the contempt of means, which the Heathen had not, they out went them in that very sin, that cast the Heathen off. The Gentiles had refused the invisible Creator, I. Rom. 25. but they had but small light. These had rejected God visible, and that for a Murtherer, when the light shone as clear as possible: I say as plainly as possibly God could converse with men and shew himself, viz. in infinite goodness and holiness. They looked for power and glory: he shewed that in his miracles: but that is not the highest way of Gods shewing himself, the Devils can shew power; but he went about doing good and shewing holiness: the greatest evidence and footsteps of God, and yet they rejected him.

This makes me not believe the Call of the Jews; because they sinn'd beyond the Gentiles; because they sinned against such light, as shall never appear to eyes again. Some have dreamed of some glorious appearance of Christ, that shall convert them: if more shall be seen, than they have seen already, I believe it. But more certainly they cannot see.

So that the Apostles now are sent duplici jure: Christ had made good his claim to the Gentiles, and the Jews had lost their privilege. Go ye therefore and teach all Nations.

Secondly, The Apostles Work injoyned them by Christ. Here are three actions of the Apostles mentioned. Go, Teach, Baptize.

I might speak to the first, πορευθέντες, Go. And here I might observe those Propheſies, Deut. XXXIII. 18, 19. And of Zebulun he said, Rejoyce Zebulun in thy going out, and Issachar in thy Tents. They shall call the people unto the mountain, there they shall offer sacrifices of righteousness, for they shall suck of the abundance of the Seas, and of treasures hid in the sand. And in LXVI. Esa. 19. And I will set a sign among them, and I will send those that escape of them, unto the Nations, to Tarshish, Pul, and Lud, that draw the bow, to Tubal and Javan, to the Isles afar off, that have not heard my fame, neither have seen my glory, and they shall declare my glory among the Gentiles. I might observe the Apostles pains and dangers, among Wolves, Dogs, Lions; their liberty to go among the Gentiles, which was not allowed them before by Christs prohibition and his own custom. In Act. X. 28. Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew, to keep company, or come unto one of another Nation. How odious among the Jews was conversation with Gentiles? They

They were duſt defiled, Samaritans, filth. And therefore it was not lawful for Jews to go among them: but now they had liberty to do it. I might ſpeak of the πάντα all Nations, whether all Countries in the World be meant here?

But it is the Apoſtles work that I am to conſider in thoſe words, μαθητεύσατε βαπτίζοντες, Teach them, Baptizing them, for I will take them together. You know what is hence collected, viz. that men muſt be firſt Taught, before they are to be Baptized. But the word is not of that ſtrict propriety; it means not ſo far as Teaching; that is in verſe the twentieth, Teaching them to obſerve all things, &c. but μαθητεύσατε is, bring them in to learn, to be Diſciples, Scholars. Schölars eaſily ſee the ſenſe. Men were made Diſciples, not when already taught, but ut doceantur, that they might be taught. Philip and Nathaniel were Diſciples as ſoon as they cleaved to Chriſt, and were taught afterwards. Will you be his Diſciples? That is, will you follow him, betake you to his School? תח is not always one learned, but that gives himſelf to it, contrary to עם הארץ. The Apoſtles underſtand the word Diſcipling in the tenour of the Nation; and they took the word as if Chriſt ſhould have ſaid to them, Fetch in all Nations to be Scholars to the Goſpel and profeſſion of Chriſt. But they do ὕστερον πρότερον, that ſay, we muſt go to Chriſts School, that we may be Baptized: it is contrary, Baptiſm makes Diſciples, and diſcipling ſets in the way to be taught.

And hence I lay down this Doctrine,

That Baptiſm is Gods appointed way to introduce into Chriſts School.

Make Diſciples. How? βαπτίζοντες, baptizing them. As Circumciſion was the way to Iſraelitiſm, ſo Baptiſm is the way to Chriſtianity. We are upon a ſubject, that ſeems heterogeneous to this Audience; for no Baptiſms are here. Yet hardly is there a ſubject fitter upon better conſideration, ſince here are ſo many Candidates for the Miniſtry, to which this belongs. There are great diviſions about the Sacraments; and I know not what leſſon Candidates may better apply themſelves to for the peace of the Church, than to ſtudy well the nature of the Sacraments.

In proſecution of this Doctrine, I might alledge places of Scripture that urge this, as Act. II. 38. Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt. And VIII. Chap. 36. &c. And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the Eunuch ſaid, See, here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized? But that I may not manage this ſubject at random, I obſerve theſe things gradually.

I. That Scripture doth hold out a clear diſtinction betwixt them that profeſs Chriſt, and them that do not. I ſay, profeſs, as to outward profeſſion. And we muſt learn Scripture ſenſe and language in this caſe, and not be our own Dictionary. When Ephraim ſpeaks finer than Gilead, it ſpoils all: ſo when we ſpeak finer than Scripture, and make words narrower in their ſenſe than the Scripture does, we ſpoil the true meaning. Sometime this diſtinction is taught by phraſes, that ſpeak both parties, viz. them that profeſs, and them that do not: and ſometimes by a ſingle word, that ſpeaks them that profeſs only. I will mention theſe few.

1. 1 Cor. VII. 12, 13. But to the reſt ſpeak I, not the Lord. If any brother hath a wife that believeth not, and ſhe be pleaſed to dwell with him, let him not put her away. And the woman which hath an husband which believeth not, and if he be pleaſed to dwell with her, let her not leave him. Brother, in oppoſition to unbeliever: The Apoſtle here ſtarts the point of Chriſtians married with infidels, whether they ſhould divorſe becauſe of Religion; and what rank their Children were in? To the reſt ſpeak I, not the Lord. He ſpake not without the Lord, but he means, that there was not a Text for this caſe in the Law. See verſ. 10. And unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord. Let not the wife depart from her husband. And ſee Chap. IX. 8. Say I theſe things as a man, or ſaith not the Law the ſame alſo? If any brother, i. e. Chriſtian. See 1 Cor. V. 11. If any man that is called a brother, be a Fornicator, or Covetous, &c. whereby Brother is plainly meant a Chriſtian. A wife that believeth not, viz. a Pagan; And ſo along. The ſame caſe is handled, 2 Cor. VI. 15. What concord hath Chriſt with Belial, and what part hath he that believeth with an Infidel? There Believer and Infidel are oppoſed. Believer here is as large as profeſſor, in oppoſition to Jew or Pagan.

2. Thoſe Phraſes Within and Without. 1 Cor. V. 12. What have I to do to judge them that are without: do not ye judge them that are within? It is a Jewiſh phraſe, and they ſtraiten the ſence, that take thoſe that are without to be meant of Chriſtians.

In one word, ſometime Believer alone, the oppoſite not named, Act. II. 44. And all that believed were together, and had all things common. And here, whole families, children and all, are underſtood. Sometime Diſciples, and Chriſtians, Act. XI. 26. The Diſciples were called Chriſtians firſt at Antioch.

In

In this ſence Church moſt commonly is taken, viz. for the Profeſſors of Chriſt in oppoſition to Jews and Pagans, that profeſſed him not. XVI. Matth. 18. Thou art Peter, and upon this Rock I will build my Church. Which is meant of the Church of the Gentiles in general. So III. Epheſ. 10. To the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places, might be known by the Church the manifold wiſdom of God. So by Saints are meant nothing elſe but Profeſſors of Chriſtian Religion: 1 Cor. VI. 1, 2. Dare any of you, having a matter againſt another, go to Law before the unjuſt, and not before the Saints? Do ye not know, that the Saints ſhall Judge the World? And VII. Chap. 14. For the unbelieving husband is ſanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is ſanctified by the husband, elſe were their children unclean, but now are they holy. Now are they Saints: anſwering to the uſual Hebrew phraſe בקדושה. In Sanctitate.

Here is a ſtudy for a young Divine, to be ſetled in the ſenſe of theſe words. There are great diviſions, and great miſconſtruction of one another from miſtake of theſe things.

II. That God hath appointed Sacraments, as external and viſible marks whereby to ſign out this diſtinction. Badges of Homage; as in the Text, Diſciple all Nations baptizing them. So under the Law Circumciſion ſerved for that end, to be a mark of a Jew: and therefore the Heathen are called uncircumciſed. And when ſome of the circumciſed ſeed degenerated, that they wanted that mark to diſtinguiſh them, then God ordained the Paſsover. So under the Goſpel Baptiſm is the Mark, as in the Text. Children are baptized, that there may be none in our families, that bear not the badge of Homage. Chriſt ordained it for this end, to badge out the owning of his Power, and to introduce into the Profeſſion of him. III. Gal. 27. For as many of you, as have been baptized into Chriſt, have put on Chriſt.

See Joh. III. 5. Jeſus anſwered, Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. Speech is there had of Chriſts Kingdom of Heaven upon Earth, or the ſtate under Chriſt. See verſ. 2, 3. Nicodemus came to Jeſus by night, and ſaid unto him Rabbi, we know thou art a teacher come from God, for no man can do theſe miracles that thou doſt, except God be with him. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot ſee the Kingdom of God. Where mark, how Chriſts anſwer ſuits. He obſerved in Nicodemus words ſignifying that he thought he ſaw the dawning of the Kingdom of Heaven; and now it was, that the Jews thought it would come upon them; and this further confirmed him, that Chriſt was the Meſſias. To this therefore Chriſt anſwers, and intimates to Nicodemus to be baptized.

Why would Chriſt himſelf be baptized? Becauſe he would own the proper way of introduction into the Goſpel, which he was now to preach.

So the Lords Supper is a badge of this diſtinction; See 1 Cor. X. 14, 16. Wherefore my dearly beloved, flee from Idolatry. The cup of bleſſing which we bleſs, is it not the communion of the blood of Chriſt, the bread which we break is it not the communion of the body of Chriſt? As much as if he ſhould have ſaid, becauſe we have the Sacrament of the Communion of the body and blood of Chriſt, therefore avoid Idolatry. It is the badge of thoſe that profeſs Chriſt in oppoſition to Heatheniſm.

I might ſpeak how the word Sacrament ſpeaks ſuch diſtinction, but that is well enough known.

III. As Baptiſm hath ſeveral coordinate ends, ſo all or moſt of them are ſuitable to that that we are ſpeaking of, viz. introducing into the Profeſſion of Chriſt. Both Sacraments have ſeveral ends; therefore it is proper in the diſpute now about them to conſider, whether it is fit to apply them to one only end?

1. Baptiſm hath a doctrinal end. It is a viſible word, Loquitur Deus, ut videas. As it is a viſible ſign, ſo a viſible doctrine. As God ſpeaks in Jer. II. 31. O generation, ſee ye the Word of the Lord. The Lord, to come home to our capacity, brings divine things to our eyes; 1 Joh. I. 1. That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have ſeen with our eyes, which we have looked upon. Thus Baptiſm, when we ſee it adminiſtred, reads the doctrine of our natural defilement and purging from it; Ezek. XXXVI. 25. is ſo underſtood. Then will I ſprinkle clean water upon you, and ye ſhall be clean: from all your filthineſs, and from all your Idols will I cleanſe you. So circumciſion in the member of generation, ſhewed a check to our natural generation, and that God would circumciſe.

So was the Primitive inſtitution of Baptiſm. As it was uſed originally to admit Proſelites, ſo it is uſed in the Goſpel to admit all Nations: it was uſed then to denote waſhing from moral and legal pollution, now under the Goſpel to denote waſhing from natural: and is of this everlaſting uſe. As waſhing in the Temple was a needful introduction into it: ſo Chriſt ordained this, that at our entrance into his Religion, we might read our natural defilements and our cleanſing from them. Baptiſm is the Epitome of of what comes to us from both Adams, pollution from the first, and purifying from the second.

These great doctrines are read in these primis elementis, first elements; the sum whereof is, that if we intend to come into the Kingdom of Christ, we must be purified.

2. As it reads doctrines to us, so it seals the truth of the promises. It is a seal of the Covenant: it is as a seal to a Deed. We put our seal two ways, by believing and obeying; God puts his three, viz. by his oath, (Heb. VI. 17.) by the blood of his Son, and by the Sacraments. These Sacraments are everlasting visible seals: and hence appears the reason of their continuance. Circumcision is a seal, Rom. IV. 11. And he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the Faith. How was it a seal of the righteousness of the Faith? Not to seal Abrahams righteousness, but Gods truth: and therefore it is called his Covenant. It sealed that righteousness that is by Faith. So baptism is a seal likewise in the nature of circumcision. Observe how Circumcision and the Passover answer to Baptism and the Lords Supper.

Circumcision, Passover } Seals of the Righteousness by Faith. } Baptism, Lords Supper } Of the life by Faith.

Now this seal being imprinted upon all in their admission to the Church, 'tis as much as if God should have said, you coming into the administration of the Covenant, here is my mark, that I will perform all I promise.

3. There is an obligatory end of it, to engage them that are baptized on their part. As a Covenant is of mutual obligation, and so are seals. As by circumcision a Jew was made debtor to the Law, Gal. V. 3. I testifie to every man that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to the whole Law. So Baptism makes him that receives it debtor to the Gospel. See the Text for this, and vers. 20. Teaching them to observe all things that I have commanded you. It brings into the bond of the Covenant; a man now becomes בן ברית A son of the Covenant.

Now the equity of this obligation lies in two things. First, in Christs institution. It is equal that he lay obligation on all that come to serve him. And, secondly, in the equity of the things themselves, that are required.

4. There is a privilegial end of Baptism. It brings into the number of the owned people. It badged out some to escape the wrath to come, Matth. III. 7. When he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadduces come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of Vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? God makes a plain difference betwixt the Church and Pagans. There are promises, providences to this, which belong not to them. Now this rite gives admission into that Society. It makes Disciples, so the Text speaks: by this they are admitted into the atrium of the Temple, into the Court of the Church, and stand no longer without among the strangers. As the Sichemites by circumcision came into Jacobs family, and came under his Promises and Providences. Baptism brings the baptised person into the condition of Ruth, puts us under the wings of the Almighty, II. Ruth 12.

Having spoken something to the Apostles Commission and Work; and particularly from μαθητεύσατε βαπτίζοντες, Disciple all Nations, baptizing them, observed how Baptism introduces into the School of Christ, and upon this considered the nature of Baptism, viz. that it is Doctrinal, Sigillative, Obligatory, Privilegial; I shall now make some Application on that, and then proceed to the Form prescribed to be used in Baptism, In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, &c.

Look back then in your thoughts upon the ends named, and Observe hence,

I. The durableness of the Sacraments, because these ends are durable. Things of Divine Institution are as durable as their ends. Both Sacraments now a days are at indifference, nay some assert them needless. As God complained of old that men made his Law a common thing, so he may now take up the same complaint of his Sacraments. And the reason is, because men know not the nature of them. But they rose with the Gospel and they must live with it, because of such affinity betwixt them. They hold forth the same doctrines with the Gospel, and they are seals of the same promises. As Circumcision and the Passover dured that Oeconomy, so these Sacraments, Baptism and the Lords Supper must indure as long as the Oeconomy of the Gospel: and unless there be no Gospel or a new Gospel they must continue; 1 Cor. XI. 25. This Cup is the New Testament in my blood. The New Testament in Christs blood must last with the New Testament.

And observe God would not lay by Circumcision and the Passover, without other rites were brought in in their stead; and one in the place of the other, Baptism in the place of Circumcision, the Lords Supper in the place of the Passover. Let Anabaptists cavil and contend against this assertion as much as they will, it is yet most true. Christ laid down those, thoſe, and took up theſe: and ſo one takes beginning at the end of the other, as the two Teſtaments do: and both like Cherubs wings reach from one ſide of the Houſe of God to the other, and meet in the middle. Joſhua's pillars in the water of Jordan, and at Gilgal where the children of Iſrael ate the Paſsover, muſt indure, becauſe the ends wherefore they were ſet up were to indure; IV & V Chapters of Joſhua: And ſo muſt the two Sacraments, theſe monuments, indure alſo, becauſe their ends indure, viz. To ſeal Gods truth, and our homage. Learn, O ye Candidates for the Miniſtry, the perpetuity of Sacraments: they are not for a moment, they are not arbitrary.

It is ſad to ſee what authority men take over the Sacraments. Some Congregations have had none theſe fourteen years; and what think theſe men of the Sacraments? What light buſineſſes indeed are they, if men may thus diſpoſe of them? I wiſh God avenge not the quarrel of the ſeals of the Covenant. And as he puniſhed the Jews for ſuffering his Temple to lie waſte, I Hag. 9. ſo we may fear his puniſhments may light upon us for ſuffering his Sacraments to lie waſte.

II. Hence we infer the lawfulneſs of admitting Infants to Baptiſm. Look back to the three things laſt ſpoken of concerning the Sacraments, that they are Seals, Obligations, and Privileges. And upon every one of theſe children are capable of the Sacrament of Baptiſm.

Firſt, Why is it not lawful to imprint a Seal of Gods truth upon babes? Memorials of Gods truth and faithfulneſs have been imprinted upon liveleſs and inſenſible things. Thus the Bow in the cloud was ſet for a token of a Covenant between God and the Earth. IX. Gen. 13. And Joſhua wrote Gods Law on the ſtones of the Altar, VIII. Joſh. 32. It was imprinted on children by Gods appointment in circumciſion: why not now? Why do we ſeclude children from that honour now? Why uncapable now?

Miſtake not, in thinking that Sacraments ſeal his righteouſneſs, or intereſt in God, that receives them; no, they ſeal Gods truth whoſoever receive them. Simon Magus received baptiſm, and Judas the Lords Supper: they were ſeals of Gods truth, though not to their profit. Peter, Paul received them for advantage. How? As Seals? Yes, but not ſealing their righteouſneſs, but as ſeals of Gods truth, and ſo they confirmed their faith. Tis ignorance and a blind cavil to aſſert the Sacraments ſeals of his righteouſneſs that partakes of them, and therefore that Infants are not to be baptized.

Secondly, Infants are capable of an Obligation. A man may bind his heir though an infant. So infants were bound by circumciſion. Why not now? Nay ſee Deut. XXIX. 11, 15. You ſtand this day all of you before the Lord, your Captains of your Tribes, your Elders, and your Officers, with all the men of Iſrael: your little ones, &c. That thou ſhouldeſt enter into covenant with the Lord thy God, and into his oath, &c. Neither with you only do I make this Covenant, and this oath: But with him that ſtandeth here with us this day before the Lord our God, and alſo with him that is not here with us this day. Where you ſee, that thoſe that were unborn and diſtant, when Moſes made this Covenant, were bound to this Covenant: and children are no further off than theſe.

For the equity of the obligation lies not in the parties underſtanding the thing, but in æquitate rei, in the equity of the thing it ſelf. How come all men liable to Adams ſin? Æquitas imputationis, the equity of imputing it to them makes them liable, as they are in Adams loins and Covenant. How do men become bound to perform their duty? Not becauſe able, but ex æquitate rei, becauſe it is ſo equal and fit that they ſhould. So children at baptiſm may come under obligation, not becauſe they are able to perform their duty to know it, but the equity of the thing lays it on. They have this natural bond upon them as Creatures, to Homage God; if the Sacramental bond be added, they are bound as Chriſtians to Homage Chriſt. Why ſhould this be ſo monſtrous, ſince they are as much capable to know one as the other?

I may add, they are part of their Parents, and therefore to be brought under the ſame Bond. So I would anſwer an Anabaptiſt, I baptize my child becauſe I am baptized my ſelf. A ſtrange reaſon, will he ſay. Let him give me the reaſon of thoſe two paſſages, Gen. XVII. 14. And the uncircumciſed man child, whoſe fleſh of his foreskin is not circumciſed, that ſoul ſhall be cut off from his people: he hath broken my Covenant. And Exod. XX. 5. I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, viſiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children. Alas! what hath the poor child done? Why doth God viſit the iniquity of the Father upon the child? He is part of his Parent, and in the puniſhment of the child the Parent is puniſhed. Here then is the reaſon, why Parents ought to bring their children to Baptiſm, becauſe they themſelves are not whole under this bond and introduction, if part of them, viz. their children, be out of it. This is the reaſon of baptizing whole families, Act. XVI. 15. 33. &c. Where you may ſee how they were firſt diſcipled by Baptiſm in a minute after hearing of Chriſt, and alſo how the whole Family was baptized with the Parent. It is childiſh to ſay, it may be there were no children in thoſe families, and ſhews their ignorance that plead it. For if never ſo many children they muſt must be baptized. For so was the Custom of the Jewish Nation in their use of Baptism, when a Proselyte came in, his children were baptized with him: and all this upon this ground, that all that were related to the Parent might come into Covenant. But were succeeding generations of Proselytes children baptized? I answer, No, but only the first generation was baptized. Why then are we baptized after the conversion of our Nation? I answer, They had the Sacrament of admission, Circumcision, for true Israelites, and that continued from generation to generation; and Baptism being of the same nature and use, requires the same continued practise.

Thirdly, Baptism is for privilegial ends. And a child is capable of privilege. A child in the cradle may be made a King. Children were capable of Circumcision, that was a Privilege to be admitted into the Jewish Church, why are they not capable of the like privilege now? Talm. Bab. in Jeramoth Cap. 4. disputes this case, and so resolves, That one may be privileged, though he know it not. As one at a distance may be chosen Fellow of a College. Why is not a child capable of receiving a badge of the privilege of being under the Covenant with his Parents?

Object. But these Privileges come by birth of Christian Parents.

Answ. No, not any privilege further than Baptism. Birthright intitles to that, and that admits to the rest of the privileges. He that was uncircumcised was cut off, though of circumcised parentage, Gen. XVII. 14. This argument the Apostle handles, 1 Cor. VII. 14. So that children are not only capable of Baptism as a Privilege, but bound to Baptism as an Introduction to privileges, and cut off without it: as it was in circumcision.

We conclude with that remarkable passage, Matth. XIX. 14. But Jesus said, suffer little children and forbid them not to come unto me: for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven. Who brought these children? Not unbelievers: such to be sure would not: they must therefore have been such as believed on him. But what did believers bring them for? Not to heal, for if it were for that end, why should the Disciples hinder them, rebuking those that brought them? vers. 13. Christs answer to the Disciples shews that they brought them as children of Disciples, and that Christ would own them as his Disciples, which he by his words concerning them professeth them capable to be. And the Disciples rebuked those that brought them, not that they were ignorant, that children were introduced into the Gospel bond and profession with their Parents, but they thought this too much, that they should desire so particular admission by Christ.

It is observable, that Baptism in the first times was the badge of Preservation from destruction. See Matth. III. 7. When John saw Pharisees and Sadduces come to his baptism, he said, Who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? By receiving Baptism they fled from Gods wrath that was coming upon the Jewish Nation. So 1 Pet. III. 21. The like figure whereunto, even Baptism, doth now save us. As the Ark saved Noah and his family from perishing in the general Deluge, so Baptism, the figure of that, saved those that received it from the destruction that was then coming. Would men look upon Baptism under this notion, as it is a badge of preservation, they would not need much perswading to baptize their children.

And thus I have considered the Disciples Commission and Work, Go, teach all Nations baptizing them. I now come to the Form of Baptism, In the Name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

It is not unprofitable to observe, how the Holy Ghost at the story of great actions doth oft intimate the Trinity. Let us make man. Let us confound their language. And at the XVIII. Chap. of Genesis you read of three men that stood by Abraham, who are called afterward Jehovah. And at the settling of the Service of the Tabernacle, Num. VI. ad fin. the Form of blessing that was prescribed to the Priests to use, intimated a Trinity: The Lord bless thee and keep thee. The Lord make his face shine upon thee. The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee. But to spare more instances, at Christs entry into the Ministry the Trinity is at his Baptism; and now at the end of it he proclaims it, and injoyns it to be profest at every Baptism.

Christ giveth no rules for the manner of Baptism, but only this; for that needed not, it being known before. The Anabaptist pleads that there is no precept for Infant-baptism. I say, it needed not; and Christ took up Baptism as he found it. If a Law be made in these words, Let all the University come to S. Maries on the Sabbath, it would be madness hereafter to say, That there ought to be no Sermons there, because there is no mention of them in the Law. That is supposed in the Law as a thing common and known. So Christ makes this Law, that all Nations should be baptized, he directs not in this Law, how to Baptize, nor who to be baptized, because that was so well known to all already. And you may observe that the Jews never wonder at Johns baptism, as to the thing, but all run to him to be baptized, Matth. III. 5. There went out to him Jerusalem and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan; and were baptized of him. And John is questioned only only what authority he had to baptize; whether it was from Heaven or of Men. They would have ſaid his Baptiſm had been from the Devil, if it had been of the nature of a Monſter, never ſeen before. No, Baptiſm was well enough known to the Jews, and both John and Jeſus Chriſt took it up as they found it. And the Form was the only new rule that he gave for the Miniſtration of it: and that he did, becauſe it was neceſſary in the alteration of the Oeconomy, into which Baptiſm was an Introduction.

There were three Forms of Baptiſm as uſed for introduction.

Firſt, The Baptiſm of Proſelytes under the Old Teſtament; theſe were baptized into the Profeſſion of the Father: not verbatim, ſo ſaid, but reipſa it was ſo. I ſhall not diſpute, how far holy men then acknowledged the Trinity. But under the ſecond Temple, when that doctrine was more obſcure, their common appellation of God, was Father.

Secondly, Baptiſm in the Goſpel was at firſt in the Name of the Son only, though not under this title. And this was doubly done by John and by the Apoſtles.

1. John baptized in the Name of the Meſſias now coming, Act. XIX. 4. John verily baptized with the Baptiſm of Repentance, ſaying unto the people, that they ſhould believe on him which ſhould come after him, that is, on Chriſt Jeſus. John baptized half a year before he knew the perſon of the Meſſias, John I. 31. I knew him not. So thoſe baptized by him, knew not Jeſus, yet were baptized into the Meſſias. Hence that Act. XVIII. 25. Apollos ſpake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptiſm of John. And ſuch were thoſe, XIX. Act. 2. that were baptized into Johns baptiſm, but knew not whether there were any Holy Ghoſt. They by their baptiſm took the badge of owning the Meſſias, but knew not his perſon. Thus John baptized into the Name of the Meſſias.

2. The Apoſtles baptized into the Name of Jeſus, as true Meſſias. That in III. John 22. is ſo to be underſtood. After theſe things Jeſus came and his Diſciples into the land of Judea, and there he tarried with them and baptized. By the way we may take notice of two things.

Firſt, That Chriſt bids his Apoſtles here Go to the Gentiles, yet they were not of divers years, Act. XI. 19. They that were ſcattered abroad upon the perſecution that aroſe about Stephen, travailed as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, preaching the Word to none, but unto the Jews only. And Peter preached not to any elſe, till he had the viſion, Act. X. The reaſon of which may be fetched from Act. I. 8. Ye ſhall be witneſſes unto me both in Jeruſalem, and in all Judea and in Samaria, and unto the uttermoſt part of the Earth. By which words Chriſt commands them firſt to preach all Judea through, before they preached to the uttermoſt parts of the Earth.

Secondly, That Chriſt bids them baptize in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt; yet they did baptize all the while they were in Judea, in the Name of Jeſus only, Act. II. 38. Be baptized every one of you in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt. VIII. Chap. 16. They were baptized in the Name of the Lord Jeſus. So the XIX. Chap. 5. When they heard this they were baptized in the Name of the Lord Jeſus. Now the reaſon of this, was to ſeal Jeſus for the Meſſias and true God. The controverſie was whether Jeſus was the Meſſias: hence Jeſus Chriſt is ſo oft joyned together; not ſo much to ſhew Chriſt a Saviour, as to aſſert Jeſus to be Chriſt. And for this end baptiſm among them was in the Name of Jeſus. And hence the Apoſtles benediction, Grace and peace from God, and Jeſus Chriſt, in their Epiſtles.

Where is the Holy Ghoſt, ſays Socinus? Not excluded, though not nominated. If ſatisfaction be given concerning Jeſus, that he is the Meſſias, ſatisfaction is eaſie about his Spirit. The Jews acknowledged the ſpirit of Meſſias of a Divine Nature and acting, even to be the Spirit of God that wrought the Creation. So Zohar on Gen. I. 2. Now therefore that being the thing to be ſetled, that Jeſus was the Meſſias, and Son of God, the Apoſtle applies himſelf to that in the benediction, and the other would follow of it ſelf, viz. a bleſſing from the Spirit of Meſſias, which is the Spirit of God. Let us obſerve theſe things gradually or in order.

I. That whereas the Jews expected Meſſias in his Perſonal and pompous preſence, he reſolves them, that his Preſence is by his Spirit; and his Victory by his Spirit. See that John XVI. 7. Nevertheleſs, I tell you the truth, it is expedient that I go away from you, for if I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you, but if I depart I will ſend him unto you. He ſpeaks there in reference to the Jews opinion, that called Meſſias Menahem, Comforter: and looked for earthly comforts from him. No ſaith he, It is expedient for me to go away, and my Spirit ſhall ſupply comforts unto you. To that purpoſe is that Joh. XX. 17. Touch me not: for I am not yet aſcended to my Father. Greg. Nyſſen. for Adveniat regnum tuum, ſpeaks of Lukes having it Adveniat Spiritus ſanctus tuus: inſted ſted of Thy Kingdom come, let thy Holy Spirit come. The thing is true, though the authority queſtionable.

II. For the juſtifying and evidencing this, that his Preſence is by his Spirit, and ſo his Rule, he ſent his Spirit in powerful Demonſtrations; as you read in the Acts of the Apoſtles: that by the ſight of his Spirit, men might come to own him. Obſerve that paſſage, Joh. XIV. 12. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do ſhall he do alſo, and greater works than theſe ſhall he do, becauſe I go unto my Father. You, my Diſciples, ſhall do greater things than I do; why ſo? For the magnifying of the Spirit. Hence that in Mark III. 28, 29. He that ſhould ſpeak againſt the Son ſhould be pardoned, but not he that ſhould ſpeak againſt the Holy Ghoſt. He that ſhall blaſpheme againſt the Holy Ghoſt, hath never forgiveneſs. Becauſe the Son appeared in meanneſs, and his perſonal preſence was not to be inſiſted on; but the Holy Ghoſt came in all powerful and convincing Demonſtration. Hence Ananias and Sapphyra were ſo ſeverely puniſht, becauſe their ſin was againſt the Holy Ghoſt. Why hath Satan filled thine heart to lye to the Holy Ghoſt, V. Act. 3.

III. The Spirit did by theſe demonſtrations of power aſſert the Deity and authority of Chriſt, and his own, as ſent by him, and to be his Spirit. See Joh. XVI. 8, 9, 10. And when he (the Spirit) is come, he will reprove the World of ſin, and of righteouſneſs, and of judgment. Of ſin, becauſe they believe not on me. Of righteouſneſs, becauſe I go to my Father, and ye ſee me no more. Of judgment, becauſe the Prince of this World is judged. And by that very thing is ſhewed Chriſts Rule and Work in his Church by his Spirit.

IV. That as the Spirit by theſe Demonſtrations was to aſſert Jeſus, ſo the Apoſtles at that time baptized only in the Name of Jeſus. And accordingly the gift of the Spirit was given at Baptiſm. See Act XIX. 2. He ſaid unto them, have ye received the Holy Ghoſt ſince ye believed? Signifying that the receiving of the Holy Ghoſt followed upon Baptiſm. As the Spirit of God, that is, the Holy Ghoſt, reſted on Chriſt at his Baptiſm, ſo the Spirit of Chriſt, that is, the Holy Ghoſt, reſted on His at their Baptiſm. Not on all. Why? Becauſe, he was come for that end, to inable the Diſciples to teach and preach, and to aſſert Jeſus.

V. When the Doctrine of Jeſus and the Spirit were thus manifeſted, then it was ripe to baptize in the Name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt. Each Perſon had demonſtratively approved his Godhead. The Father under the Old Teſtament. Hence is the tenor of Chriſts ſpeech, John V. 19, 20. The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do; for what things ſoever he doth, theſe alſo doth the Son likewiſe. For the Father loveth the Son and ſheweth him all things, that himſelf doth: and he will ſhew him greater works than theſe, that ye may marvel. The Son hath demonſtrated his Godhead by his converſation among us, Joh. I. 14. The Word was made fleſh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his Glory, the Glory as of the only begotten of the Father. And by his Reſurrection, Rom. I. 4. Declared to be the Son of God with power by the reſurrection from the dead. And laſtly, by pouring down of his Spirit, when he was aſcended. The Holy Ghoſt demonſtrated his Godhead by his powerful actings.

VI. Turn your minds back to Babel, Gen. XI. there the Heathen loſt the knowledge of the true God, Rom. I. 21. &c. Becauſe when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their imagination, and their fooliſh heart was darkned. And changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, &c. Thence forward conſider what was done in that peculiar people whom God had choſen, for revealing the true God, Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt. And when all thoſe revealings were full, than it was ripe to bring that manifeſtation of God among the Heathen. Go and teach all Nations, baptizing them, &c. It is as much as if Chriſt ſhould have ſaid to his Apoſtles, The Heathens have loſt the knowledge of the true God, now bring that knowledge among them again, and baptize them in the Name of the true God, Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt. As Baptiſm was in the Name of Jeſus among the Jews, where the queſtion was about the true Meſſias; ſo among the Gentiles, where the queſtion was about the true God, Baptiſm was in the Name of Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt. Lay Rom. I. 25. to this Text. Who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worſhipped and ſerved the creature more than the Creator. The caſting off the Gentiles was becauſe they worſhipped the Creature. What was their Recovery in the Text? Was it to bring the worſhip of the Creature among them again, as the Arian and Socinian gloſs?

gloſs? No, but to bring the knowledge and worſhip of the Creator among them, of the true God, and that was Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt.

I ſhall not go about to confute thoſe curſed opinions, the Lord rebuke them, I ſhall only obſerve theſe things upon them.

Firſt, That as they blaſpheme the greateſt, ſo the plaineſt truths in the Bible. I cannot but wonder at the denial of the Godhead of Chriſt: and though the God-head of the Holy Ghoſt is not in ſo plain terms, yet it is in as plain Evidences as can be.

Secondly, That they go clean croſs to the ſtream of Scripture. The main purpoſe of that is to extol Chriſt and the Holy Ghoſt, the main purpoſe of theſe to abaſe them.

Thirdly, Grant them what they would have, they ſet themſelves further from Heaven and Hope, when the Redeemer and Sanctifier are but Creatures.

Fourthly, Obſerve here the Spirit of old Antichriſt, and how it hath deſcended.

Firſt, The Jews began and blaſphemed Chriſt, 1 John II. 22. Who is a lyar, but he that denieth that Jeſus is the Chriſt? He is antichriſt that denieth the Father and the Son. And that then was the Jew.

Secondly, When they were deſtroyed, then Rome began to perſecute, till Conſtantine.

Thirdly, When that was quieted, then the Arian and the Macedonian appeared in the Jewiſh Spirit.

Fourthly, That curſed Spirit was hardly laid, but then the Papacy begins to riſe, and brings in all Judaiſm againſt the honour of Chriſt.

And, Fifthly, That unmaſked in the Reformation, the Jewiſh Spirit appears again in the Socinian.

A SERMON PREACHED AT ASPEDEN,

April. 5. 1660.

1 COR. X. 2.

And were all baptised unto Moses, in the Cloud, and in the Sea.

ONE great breach in England is the breach about the Sacraments. It is the policy of the Devil to divide Christians even there, where there is the greatest bond of Communion. As poison is to our Victuals, which makes that which in its own nature is the great means of the preservation of our health and lives, to become the destroyer of it. Our knitting together must be in these Sacraments, but they are made the means of our disuniting. Therefore if the present occasion called not for it, yet the present necessity of our Nation does, to inform our selves about these bonds.

For your instruction in the Sacrament or Bond of Baptism I have chosen these words. Wherein we may observe these four things. I. Israel was Baptized. II. All were baptized. III. Unto Moses. IV. In the Cloud, and in the Sea.

I. Israel was baptized, when they came out of Egypt. From whence I make this Doctrine,

That Baptism was no new thing when Christ ordained it in the Church of the Gospel.

This Observation is of excellent use. It is said concerning the times of the Gospel that there should be new Heavens and a new Earth. All new. When God set aside that old people, he chose him a new people, viz. The Gentiles. This change of new for old consisted in two things. First, Some things were laid aside. And, Secondly, some old things were reserved, but the end of them changed. All the Ceremonial Law laid aside, but the Moral reserved, and the Doctrine cleared. The publick Worship of the Temple laid aside, of the Synagogue reserved. But some old things were reserved and changed. At the Passover, the Lamb was laid aside, Bread and Wine reserved, but the end changed. And in this Sacrament, where Baptism was added to Circumcision; Circumcision was laid aside, Baptism received.

The first mention of Baptism is in Gen. XXXV. 2. And Jacob said unto his houshold, and unto all that were with him, Put away the strange Gods that are among you, and be clean, and change your garments. Be clean, the word is טהרו Mundate vos. That Baptism is meant here is confest by the Jews.

The next mention is this in the Text: They were all Baptized unto Moses, &c. And this is the more considerable, that they should be Baptized now, when they were but newly circumcised, to wit, in the three days darkness that was upon the Egyptians, during which which time Iſrael was circumciſed to qualifie them to eat the Paſsover. For no uncircumciſed Perſon may eat thereof; Exod. XII.

A third mention of Baptiſm is at Sinai. So the Jews. And they ſpeak of Proſelytes Admiſſion now.

The Anabaptiſts will not hear this: nothing but the letter of Scripture. But that is a dangerous Text. Tis true, we are to require it for the foundation of Faith, but by inſiſting upon it too rigorouſly for other matters, we loſe infinite profit, that may accrue to us by Examples and Explications.

But let us reaſon with them, that Baptiſm could be no new thing in thoſe times. Firſt, The Scribes and Phariſees were not ſo eaſie to be brought to follow Novelty. But they came in multitudes to Johns Baptiſm, Matth. III. 7. Secondly, See I. Joh. 25. The Jews ſent Phariſees to John the Baptiſt, and they asked him why baptiſeſt thou then, if thou be not that Chriſt? Whereby you may ſee they never queſtioned the thing, and ſhewed alſo that they were eaſily perſwaded, that the Meſſias would make uſe of their rite of baptizing for the admitting Diſciples.

Take this in the diſpute about Pædobaptiſm. They tell us, that there is no example in the Scripture of children baptized. I anſwer, True, but no ſuch example needed to be recorded; for Chriſt took up Baptiſm as he found it in the Jewiſh Church; and they baptized Infants as well as grown perſons. And if Chriſt would not that Baptiſm ſhould have been adminiſtred to children, he would have forbidden it. Therefore there is no Rule or Example given in Scripture of baptiſing children. Luke wrote enough in XVI. Act. 15. & 32. where he tells us of the Baptiſm of Lydia and her houſhold; and of the Jaylor and all his. Now one reading theſe paſſages in Judæa, how would he have underſtood it? Undoubtedly, according to the ordinary practiſe of Baptiſm, as it was uſed among them in admitting of their Proſelytes; which was that when the Maſter of the houſe was baptized for a Proſelyte, all his family, children and all, were baptized too. Tis the beſt rule to come to the underſtanding of the Phraſes of Scripture, to conſider in what ſence they were taken in that Country and among that People where they were written.

II. They were All baptized. Who? All our Fathers, verſ. 1. All paſſed through the Sea. Were there not children here? How? Was there no child in arms, did they carry none on their backs, when they paſſed through the Sea? What ſay the Anabaptiſts here? This Text ſaith All were baptized. They ſay, None ought to be baptized that are children, becauſe they are not capable of underſtanding the Ordinance. What then? Were the Jewiſh children more capable than the children of Chriſtians?

There are two opinions of the Anabaptiſts, which we are to be informed in, elſe we may fall into miſtake.

Firſt, That Baptiſm is not to be adminiſtred to any that are without knowledge.

Secondly, That it is not to be adminiſtred to any, unleſs he be verus filius fœderis, a true ſon of the Covenant. To theſe I will put anſwer into your mouths.

To the firſt, God never ordained Sacraments, that their nature ſhould be changed pro captu recipientis, according to the capacity of him that received them. Ordinances retain their nature, whoſoever receives them. As ſin is ſin, though not felt: and the Word is the Word of God, though he that hears it is not benefitted by it: So Sacraments are Sacraments, as to their nature, whatſoever the Receivers be. Tis true their fruit is pro captu recipientis, but not their nature. The Sacrament is a ſeal whoſoever receives it.

Again, You read of Baptiſm without knowledge in Matth. XXVIII. 19, 20. Go and Diſciple all Nations baptizing them in the Name, &c. Teaching them to obſerve all things that I have commanded you, &c. Baptize and Teach. True indeed, the Adults that were baptized confeſſed their ſins, but this reſtrains not baptiſm to them alone: becauſe there are ſeveral ends of it applicable to thoſe that know not, eſpecially that in the next particular.

As to the ſecond, That Baptiſm belongs to none but ſuch as are in the Covenant, and that it is a ſeal of our righteouſneſs. This phraſe is fetched from IV. Rom. 11. And he received the ſign of circumciſion, a ſeal of the righteouſneſs of the Faith. Which place is expounded to mean a ſeal of the perſons righteouſneſs that receives it. But to examine this place.

1. It is ſaid to be a ſign, now a ſign is to help unbelief and to confirm doctrine, Exod. IV. Moſes miracles there mentioned were to be ſigns, to make the Iſraelites believe his meſſage, 1 Cor. XIV. 22. Tongues are for a ſign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not. And to that purpoſe is that of our Saviour, Except ye ſee ſigns and wonders ye will not believe.

2. The Doctrines there delivered are well worth ſuch a Confirmation; namely firſt, That a ſinner upon his believing in Chriſt becomes righteous, this is the greateſt truth. Secondly, That he becomes righteous by another, this was a wonder to the Jews. Thirdly, That

That it is by a better righteouſneſs than Adams. Fourthly, That it is by a righteouſneſs infinite, viz. A righteouſneſs that outvies condemning righteouſneſs, and that very ſame righteouſneſs that God gives to Chriſt.

So that the meaning of thoſe words, the ſign of circumciſion, a ſeal of the righteouſneſs of the Faith, is, that it was a Seal to confirm that great Doctrine. So Sacraments are to Seal the truth of God. He hath put to his Seal in the Sacrament: as a Seal to a Deed confirms the truth of it. So that Circumciſion is a Seal of the ſame truth to Eſau, Judas, &c. elſe it loſes its nature, which is to confirm Gods truth. And ſo the Sacraments are Seals of Gods truth. Baptiſm ſeals that truth, that waſhing by the blood of Chriſt cleanſeth us from our ſins. So that though children know not what baptiſm means, yet it hath this nature.

III. They were all baptized unto Moſes, i. e. unto his diſcipline. They were circumciſed unto God, viz. unto true religion. Now they are baptized into Moſes, that is, into his Way. Baptiſm is to enter us into the true profeſſion, Matth. XXVIII. 19. Baptizing them in the Name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt; that is, into the profeſſion of the true God. So in the Name of Jeſus, that is, into his belief and religion.

Hence alſo Infants are capable of Baptiſm, as it is a diſtinctive body, that marks us out for Chriſtians. And therefore we are ſaid to be all baptized into one body, 1 Cor. XII. 13. So the children of Iſrael were circumciſed, though they were born Iſraelites, that they might be marked for Gods people.

As to the fourth obſervable in the Text, baptized in the Cloud and in the Sea, I cannot now inſiſt on that.

The Concluſion is, that we retain this Sacrament without doubting. It carries its warrant in its inſtitution, and in its own nature. I will leave two directions with you.

I. Reſt not in a negative Religion only.

II. Let the practiſe of the Church have authority with you.

A SERMON

PREACHED AT

S. MARIES Cambridge,

Febr. 24. 165$\frac{5}{6}$

LUKE XI. 2.

When ye pray, ſay, Our Father which art in Heaven.

THE words are our Saviours. And they are a ſweet condeſcention to a pious requeſt, in the verſe before; where Chriſt praying publickly, as it ſeems, among his Diſciples, one affected with it, prays, Lord, teach us to pray. Where was this Diſciple at the Sermon in the Mount, Matth. VI. 9. where Chriſt had taught them to pray? Was he abſent, or had he forgot? Or did he not rightly underſtand? However it was, Chriſt yields to his requeſt; and gives the ſame directions again here, as he had done there. There it is, After this manner pray ye. Here, When ye pray ſay.

In the Text are two things contained. The one is, Chriſts giving a Platform of prayer, When ye pray, ſay. The other is, The form given, Our Father which art in Heaven, &c. The word Ὅταν, When, leaves us not at liberty, but commands us: and is of the ſame import with another ſaying of our Saviour, when he inſtituted his holy Supper, As oft as ye do this, do it in remembrance of me.

Out of the former I Obſerve two things.

I. That we had need to pray.
II. That we had need to be taught to pray.

Two truths confirmed by three witneſſes, John, this Diſciple, and Chriſt. Ask John, why he taught his Diſciples to pray, he will anſwer theſe two things, viz. becauſe they had need to pray, and becauſe they had need to be taught to pray. Aſk the Diſciple why he aſked Chriſt to teach him to pray, he will anſwer ſo. Aſk Chriſt why he taught his Diſciples to pray, he will anſwer ſo alſo. As there are many Comments on theſe ſubjects, ſo there is as copious handling them. So that I ſhall not handle them at large, but ſpeak to them in a few illuſtrations, and ſo paſs to inſiſt rather on the ſecond, viz. The Form it ſelf.

I. That we had need to pray: And that, firſt, becauſe of our Duty: Secondly, Becauſe of our Wants. In regard of what we owe to God, and in regard of what we expect from him. Theſe both draw and drive us. Accordingly the Lords Prayer conſiſts of two general parts; firſt, we pray in adoration to his Name, Kingdom, Will, in the three firſt petitions, and then for our wants in the laſt. I ſhall not now ſpeak how Prayer is Adoration of God, nor how it is commanded by Scripture on that account. I ſhall only at preſent ſhew, Firſt, That it is a duty, and that we had need pray becauſe of our Duty. And for that purpoſe obſerve;

1. It

1. It is a Duty written in nature. That in Gen. IV. ult. Then began men to call upon the Name of the Lord, however understood, shews it from the beginning. Hence the Heathen prayed, though they mistook in the manner of praying, Matth. VI. 7.

2. It is a Duty for every man and woman in the World to perform. All flesh come to thee, LXV. Psal. 2. And Psal. CL. ult. Let every thing that hath breath praise the Lord. Tis a Duty due upon our creature-ship. It is the Duty of the holiest men, Psal. XXXII. 6. For this shall every one that is godly pray unto thee. And of the wickedest also, even Magus was to pray to God, Act. VIII. 22.

It is so a Duty for the holiest, that it lay upon Adam in innocency. It lay upon Christ in the Flesh, he prayed both because of his Duty and because of his wants, V. Heb. 7. Who in the days of his flesh, when he had offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears, unto him that was able to save him from death, and was heard in that he feared. It lies upon glorified Saints in one part of it, viz. Thanksgiving.

It is so a Duty for the unholiest, that though they sin in their prayers, yet they sin worse if they pray not. Your prayers are not sin as to the Act, but because of other things. External adoration is absolutely required to be given to God by all his creatures, and if that be not yielded, they doubtless sin. This the wicked man, when he prays, gives to God. They mistake foul, that say, Pray not till the Spirit move you. Truth saith, Pray because Duty requires you, and in doing your duty wait for the Spirit.

3. It is a Duty that makes out and sanctifies all our duties: As 1 Tim. IV. 5. Every creature of God is sanctified by the Word of God and Prayer: So is every religious duty that we perform. What is our hearing, reading, meditation, if we pray not that God would sanctifie it, and make it beneficial to holy ends and purposes to us?

4. We had need to pray in reference to our Duty, lest God turn us out of all, and own us not for Tenants, because we pay not our Rent. You read in XXX. Exod. 12. &c. That every Israelite was to give half a shekel for the Redemption of his Soul; the rich was not to give more nor the poor less. This Christ himself paid, Matth. XVII. 24. &c. Prayer is that half shekel to us. The rich can give no more, and the poor hath this to give, viz. To make our humble acknowledgments to God for our lives, and our comforts. This is the greatest owning of our homage: and none is so poor as to be without it. The words that signifie Prayer speak this, viz. התפלל Judging our selves, and החנרה Depending upon grace. We hold all upon grace. The acknowledgment of this is the payment of our Homage to our Creator: Would you comfortably enjoy your Houses, Lands, Studies, Comforts, pay your Rent; Pray, Pray, Pray. See what becomes of them that pay not this Homage, Jerem. X. 25. Pour out thy fury upon the Heathen that know thee not, and upon the Families that call not on thy Name.

II. Secondly, We had need pray because of our wants. This is the only way for our supply. This is the bucket to draw our Water. Ask and you shall have. Call upon me in the time of trouble, and I will deliver thee: Yea, though God know our wants, we must pray for the supply of them. That is a strange motive to prayer, in Matth. VI. 8. Your heavenly Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask them. What need then is there to tell them? If he will give, he will give whether we ask or ask not. Yes, pray for what ye stand in need of, though ye are sure of the grant of those things. Daniel prayed for the restoration of the Captivity, which he knew certain: David for the pardon of his sin, which he knew God would pardon. And that for these reasons,

First, God will have his Homage. Tis reason Elias should have his cake first, that provides meal for the maintenance of the whole family, 1 Kings XVII. 13.

Secondly, We pray not to shew God our wants, as if he were ignorant of them, but to shew that we are sensible of them, and to signifie that we know he only is able to supply them. Saints are called poor, because they know their wants, and know they live on Gods Alms. See Rev. III. 17, 18. Because thou sayest I am rich, and encreased with goods, and have need of nothing, and knowest not that thou art wretched and miserable, and poor and blind and naked. I counsil thee to buy of me gold tryed in the fire, that thou mayest be rich, &c. God would that this Church of Laodicea should know her wants, and buy by prayer the supply of them.

Thirdly, I may add, We had need to pray because of our advantage and benefit, yea, though we receive not particularly what we pray for. Though as Psal. XXII. 2. We cry in the day time and God heareth not; and in the night season we take no rest. Though God seem as in Psal. LXXXVIII. 14. to cast off our Soul and hide his face from us: yet we had need to pray still, because we still want; and if we never receive particularly what we pray for, yet these benefits we shall reap by our prayers.

1. We keep up and refresh our communion with God. Constant prayer hath this advantage, that it suffereth not God to forget us. Lord, why hast thou forgotten me, saith David? Prayer permits not God to forget us, no more than a Mother can forget a crying child. He that prays is Gods Remembrancer, and gives him no rest.

2. The

2. The more we pray, the better God will know our faces at the day of judgment. I know you not, ſhall Chriſt ſay to ſome; why? They never looked towards him, Pſal. XIV. 2, 3. The Lord looked down from Heaven to ſee if there were any that did underſtand and ſeek God. They are all gone aſide, &c. And I. Eſay 4. There tis ſaid of wicked men נגורו אחור that they are eſtranged backward, or turned backward. To theſe methinks the great Judge will ſay another day, Ye were always ſtrangers to me, ſuch as turned their backs upon me, I could never ſee your face; and therefore verily I know you not. But on the contrary, he that now confeſſes Chriſt, and makes himſelf known to him by prayers and humble addreſſes, he will know and confeſs him at the day of Judgment.

3. The more we pray the more the heart is in Heaven, and with God. So that Prayer it ſelf is a bleſſed benefit, Phil. III. 20. Our Converſation is in Heaven. This of all other Converſations is the heavenly Converſation. As Chriſt when he prayed, was transfigured, Luke IX. 29. So in prayer the Chriſtians heart is changed, the ſoul is winged and mounts up till it gets hold of God: as Jacob had him in his arms when he prayed.

4. Time will come that all our prayers and tears ſhall meet us. God puts our tears in his Bottle. God reſerves our prayers, not one of them is left; and we ſhall in time receive the fruit of them. In 1 Kings VIII. 59. There Solomon prays, Let theſe my words wherewith I have made ſupplication before the Lord, be nigh unto the Lord our God day and night, that he maintain the cauſe of his Servant, &c. Prayers are nigh unto God. And thus I have finiſhed the firſt Obſervation, viz. That we had need to pray. I come to the ſecond.

II. That we had need to be taught to pray. There is no doing ſpiritual work, but according to the Patern in the Mount. God preſcribed Forms. As at the offering of the firſt-fruits of the Land of Canaan, XXVI. Deut. 3, 4. &c. Thou ſhalt go unto the Prieſt that ſhall be in thoſe days, and ſay unto him, I profeſs this day unto the Lord thy God, that I am come unto the Country, which the Lord ſware unto our Fathers for to give us. And the Prieſts ſhall take the basket out of thine hand, and ſet it down before the Altar of the Lord thy God. And thou ſhalt ſpeak, and ſay before the Lord thy God, A Syrian ready to periſh was my Father, and he went down into Egypt, and ſojourned there with a few, and became there a Nation great, mighty, and populous, &c. likewiſe there was a form appointed to be ſaid over the beheaded Heifer, XXI. Deut. 6, 7. &c. And all the Elders of that City that are next unto the ſlain man, ſhall waſh their hands over the Heifer that is beheaded in the Valley. And they ſhall anſwer and ſay, Our hands have not ſhed this blood, neither have our eyes ſeen it. Be merciful, O Lord, unto thy people Iſrael, whom thou haſt redeemed, and lay not innocent blood unto thy people Iſraels charge. The Prieſts when they bleſſed the people had alſo a form preſcribed them, VI. Numb. 23, 24. &c. Speak unto Aaron and unto his ſons, ſaying, On this wiſe ye ſhall bleſs the children of Iſrael, ſaying unto them, The Lord bleſs thee and keep thee, The Lord make his face ſhine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee. The Lord lift up his Countenance upon thee and give thee peace. And David appointed Pſalms for the Tabernacle, 1 Chron. XVI. 7. And the Schools of the Prophets no doubt had Forms delivered to them. So John and Chriſt taught their Diſciples to Pray as well as to Preach. He had not been the Great Teacher had he not taught a Form of Prayer. We ſhould have been left untaught in not the leaſt thing.

Conſider alſo in the behalf of preſcribed Forms, that we poor creatures, ſhort ſighted in divine things, know not what we ought to pray for. Peter at the Tranſfiguration prayed he knew not what, IX. Luke 33. We often, as Adonijah, are ready to aſk our own Bane. There is no man but if God had granted all that ever he aſked, it would have been worſe with him. Midas his with may teach this.

But that place of the Apoſtle will be objected againſt me, in Rom. VIII. 26. The Spirit helps our infirmities, for we know not what we ſhould pray for as we ought, but the Spirit it ſelf maketh interceſſion for us with groanings that cannot be uttered. Therefore we need no forms, as long as what we are to pray is dictated to us by the Spirit.

But I anſwer, Tis the Spirit not an Oracle within us to teach us immediately. The Word teaches us what and how to aſk. But the Office of the Spirit is to help our infirmities in asking; our infirmities of memory, our want of application to our ſelves of what we know to be our wants. So in the application of Doctrines, of Promiſes, the Spirit teaches us no new thing, but minds us, and brings home to the feeling of our Souls thoſe things we learnt from the Word.

Conſider moreover, we had need to be taught of God what language to uſe when we are ſpeaking to God. Tis no ſmall thing to betake our ſelves before him, and to ſpeak to him who is the great and living God. Now is it an eaſie thing to ſpeak as we ought to do unto him? Jobs friends ſpake not right things of God, XLII. Job 7, 8. For which God tells them his wrath was kindled againſt them, and requires them to make attonement for it by offering up ſeven Bullocks and ſeven Rams. Moſes could not ſpeak unto Pharaoh, IV. Exod. 10. Much leſs how ſhall the poor creature addreſs unto the great God? Therefore we are adviſed by the Prophet Hoſea when we approach unto God to take words along with us, XIV. Hoſ. 2. Take with you words and turn to the Lord, ſay unto him, Take away all iniquity and receive us graciouſly, ſo will we render the Calves of our lips. Where you ſee are expreſs words put into our Mouths to uſe, when we go and make our Confeſſions unto God.

Ah! Gracious God, how ready art thou to give, that biddeſt us Ask, and teacheſt us to aſk alſo. That putteſt Words into our Mouths, and teacheſt us what to ſay to thee. He muſt needs be ready to pardon ſin, that would prevent ſin in our prayers, that are begging for pardon.

Chriſt well knew the Majeſty of God, and the neceſſities of men, the need of Prayer, and our diſability to pray; and therefore he left not himſelf without a witneſs of infinite mercy and condeſcention, nor us without one of the greateſt things that we could have prayed for, when he left us this Platform of Prayer, When ye pray, ſay, &c. And ſo I come to the Prayer, or Form it ſelf, When ye pray, ſay, Our Father, &c.

It is an opinion then, that I can rather wonder at, then underſtand, that bids when we pray, Say not Our Father. As I have often grieved to ſee the neglect and diſuſe of the Lords Prayer, and to hear the reproach that ſome have caſt upon it, ſo have I as ſeriouſly as I could, conſidered what ground theſe have had for the diſuſing of it, and to this hour I reſt admiring, and no way ſatisfied, why they ſhould refrain it, when Chriſt hath commanded the uſe of it, as plain as words can ſpeak, Matth. VI. 9. After this manner pray ye; and again in the Text, When ye pray, ſay.

The Cavils that are made againſt the uſe of it are obvious.

I. To avoid ſuperſtition, for unto ſuch ends it hath been uſed. Here I cannot but think, how wild it is to extinguiſh a thing good per ſe, becauſe another uſeth it ill. To cut down Vines, to avoid drunkenneſs. How ſubject is he, that makes it all his Religion to run from a Superſtition, to run he knows not whether?

II. Such a narrow Form ſtraitens the heart, is too ſtrait, ſtinting the exerciſe of the gift of Prayer. And here I cannot but think of Solœciſms in pride of apparel. It is monſtrous to make cloths our pride, which are only a badge of ſin, and cover of ſhame. So it is a Solœciſm to caſt away this Prayer upon preſumption that we can pray ſo well, when it is mainly given becauſe we cannot pray at all.

III. It is generally queſtioned, whether it be a Form of Prayer, or a Copy to pray by.

IV. If a Form, yet what warrant have we to ſubjoyn it to our Prayers as we uſually do.

V. And if both, yet that it is not lawful for every one to ſay Our Father.

I ſhall not diſpute theſe Queſtions. The words of the Text plainly anſwer the moſt of them. Nor that I go about to give the ſenſe of the Petitions. There are many good Comments upon them. I ſhall only conſider the nature of the Prayer, and the manner of its giving; that we may be the better ſatisfied in the manner of its uſe.

Firſt, As the Ten Commandments are a Sum of all Duty, or what is to be done, ſo this Prayer is a Sum of all things to be deſired. This is not denied. And as in the Ten Commandments, the things contained in them are of a twofold concernment, ſome things referring to our duty to God, and others to our duty to our Neighbour: ſo in this Prayer, are petitions for Gods Honour, for our Selves, and for Others. That God provides for mans memory, that our Duty might always be in our Eye, and Prayer might be always in our Mind. He gave both the Commandments and the Prayer that ſo we might ſee our Duty, and beg ability to perform it. So that as the Jews account the Law a mercy, we ought to reckon this much more ſo. What is the Law? What is the Goſpel, if we were not taught to pray to improve both? What is the gift of Chriſt to man, if the Goſpel taught not to know Chriſt? And what is the Goſpel it ſelf, if Chriſt had not taught us to pray in it? They that refuſe it know not what Chriſt did for us when he gave it.

Secondly, Chriſt gave this prayer twice, ſo the Tables were given twice, and the Ten Commandments rehearſed twice. Some Harmoniſts of the Goſpel have jumbled both together, and make it but once given, and ſo make but a wild ſtory of the Goſpel. But this was given twice, almoſt a year and an half aſunder: firſt in his Sermon in the Mount, Matth. VI. and that was about Pentecoſt; and then in the Text, about the Feaſt of Tabernacles come twelve months after. There he gave it unaſked, here aſked. He gave the ſame again, becauſe a better could not be given, and indeed becauſe another could not be given.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, There is ſome difference in this Prayer as it is repeated by our Saviour. In one place it is Debts, in the other Sins. One hath σήμερον this day, the other καθ' ἡμέραν day by day: but eſpecially one hath the Concluſion, For thine is the Kingdom, the Power and the Glory, &c. the other hath it not.

Theſe things premiſed I ſhall offer you a view of this Prayer through the Perſpective of ſome things that were commonly received in opinion and practiſe in the Church of the Jews at this time. And thoſe applied hither may give us a judgment, how the Apoſtles that were acquainted with theſe things received and conceived of this prayer. It is worth obſerving how nearly Chriſt complied with things uſed in the Jews religious practiſe and civil converſe, that were lawful. I know not what Reformers ſhould more ſtudy than this. A ſerious ſtudent in the Goſpel, and verſed in the Jewiſh antiquities might trace him every ſtep.

Firſt, Speaking cum vulgo in his ſpeeches.

Secondly, Practiſing cum vulgo & cum Eccleſia, with the common People, and with the Church, where the practiſe was lawful. Himſelf did what he taught, in Matth. XXIII. 1, 2. The Scribes and Phariſees ſit in Moſes ſeat, all therefore whatſoever they bid you obſerve, that obſerve and do. Such compliance with common uſe we may obſerve in this matter in hand.

I. The Jews daily prayers at the time when Chriſt gave this, were eighteen. Of which both Talmuds, and ſo were large and numerous, קר בת מנים being added to them.

II. They reduced all theſe prayers to a brief Epitome; מצין a brief Form, containing the marrow of them all. Every one was not able to pray thoſe prayers, therefore they had מעין & ח"ק Rabbi Akibah ſaith, אם חפלה שגורה בפיו ח"י ואם אין מעין If he have prompneſs in Prayer, pray the eighteen, if not the ſhort Epitome.

Now let us bring the obſervation of theſe things hither. Chriſt nullifies not the Jews prayers, nor other prayers when he gave this, but ſuperduceth this as a perfect form, becauſe ours are imperfect, and an Abſtract of all prayer, when we cannot but fail in ours. And therefore juſtly to be added to ours. Obſerve in Matth. VI. 7. Chriſt there condemns the Heathens prayers not the Jews: and in verſ. 5. he condemns the Jews hypocriſie, not their prayers. And himſelf joyned in their prayers in the Synagogue. And therefore he gave not this prayer to extinguiſh all others, but to be added to others. So the Doctors taught their Diſciples to pray, and gave them forms, Beracoth, not to extinguiſh their other prayers, but to be uſed beſides. And ſo John taught his Diſciples a ſet Form, and ſo be uſed with others. And ſo Chriſt being aſked by his Diſciples to teach them to pray as John did, ſaith When ye pray, ſay. They underſtand not how the Maſters taught their Diſciples to pray, that doubt whether this be a ſet form, or no.

III. They had a Canon, never to pray מעין & ח"ק but in the plural number. Bab. Berac. fol. 30. 1. לעולם ישתוף אניש נפשיה בהדי ציבו ראי A man muſt always joyn in prayer with the Synagogue. Rambam thus חק"בלשון יחיד אלא בלשון רבים אל יתפלל let not a man pray the ſhort prayer, but in the plural number. They have a Rule about מומינין one praying in the plural number, when more are together with him, but ח"ק was to be prayed in the plural number though he that prayed was alone by himſelf; becauſe it ſhould never ſeem, as though a man were cut off from the Congregation. But we may obſerve the like in the Lords Prayer it is plain. Is it not a Prayer for a man to pray alone? Matth. VI. 6. Where we are bid when we pray to enter into our cloſet, and to ſhut the door, and to pray to our Father in ſecret. And yet it runs in the plural number.

IV. They held no Prayer right, where there was no mention of Gods Name and Kingdom. This is a plain Canon, Beracoth 40. 2. And they apply, Deut. XXVI. 13. to this, where he that offered the firſt fruits was to ſay, I have not tranſgreſſed thy Commandments, that is (ſay they) in failing to ſay grace, nor forgotten thy Name and Kingdom. This is obſerved in this Prayer likewiſe, in the two firſt petitions, viz. Hallowed be thy Name, Thy Kingdom come.

V. They uſed the mention of Gods Kingdom and Glory in the Temple for the Antiphon of their Prayers, Hieroſ. Berac. 13. 3. They anſwered not Amen in the Temple, but ſaid ברוך שם כבוד מלכותו לעולם ועד Bleſſed be the Name of the glory of his Kingdom for ever and ever. So in the Rubric of the day of expiation, ſeveral prayers of the High Prieſt are mentioned, and this added, That the people anſwered as before, Bleſſed be the Name, &c.

In Synagogues and Houſes they ſaid Amen, but in the Temple they ſaid this clauſe inſtead of Amen. Chriſt gives this Prayer with this and without it. The reaſon of which they miſtake, that exclude it quite. Why does Chriſt give this Prayer twice? That it might ſerve for a publick and private prayer. Therefore in one place this is the concluſion, For thine is the Kingdom, &c. which is to be uſed in publick prayers; and in another place it is not, viz. when it ſerves for a private. And this is the reaſon why the Doxology is added in St. Matthew, and omitted in St. Luke.

VI. The preface of this prayer is the very Phraſe uſed by the Jews, when they prayed to God or ſpoke of him. אבינו שבשמים Our Father which art in Heaven. The Phraſe is of as large uſe, as the Duty is of extent. Though all have not the Spirit of Adoption, yet all have cauſe to call God our Father by vertue of their creation, Deut. XXXII. 6. Is not he thy Father that hath bought thee; hath he not made thee and eſtabliſhed thee? We may call him likewiſe our Father, as he is our Lawgiver and great Teacher.

And now think how the Apoſtles, that knew theſe things, ſpoke and thought of this.

Firſt, Could they think it otherwiſe, than a Form of prayer verbatim to be uſed, when none were given by the Doctors but Forms, and when it was thus given twice?

Secondly, Could they think it otherwiſe than to be uſed publickly, and privately, when in one place it concludes with a Doxology, and in the other without it?

Thirdly, Could they think it otherways than to be ſubjoyned to our prayers, when Chriſt gives it in ſuch concurrency to theſe known cuſtoms and tenets of the Jews, and annexes no exception againſt the anſwerable uſe of it?

So have we ground to think of it and repute it, a Form, a ſum of all Prayer, to be uſed verbatim in Churches, in cloſets, to be uſed ſingle, eſpecially ſubjoyned: and all the more warrantable, becauſe Chriſt ſaith, When ye Pray ſay, Our Father.

A SERMON PREACHED AT S. MARIES Cambridge,

April. 9. 1658.

1 PET. V. 13.

The Church which is at Babylon, elected together with you, ſaluteth you.

THE places to which this Apoſtle writeth are plain in the beginning of this Epiſtle, and the place from whence, plain here in the latter end. And yet upon that may a juſt queſtion be moved, and upon this a queſtion is moved, though not ſo juſtly. He writeth to the diſperſed Jews in Pontus, Galatia, Capadocia, Aſia, and Bithynia: but you may juſtly queſtion why to them more than other; and why to no other. He dates his Epiſtle from Babylon in the Text, but ſome do too ſcrupulouſly queſtion, what Babylon is here meant. A Romiſh pulpit would ſoon reſolve both, if we would take his reſolution. That will tell you, that S. Peter went to Rome, and that Babylon in the Text ſo meaneth, and that he preached to thoſe places in his way, and ſo now writes to them. It would be a hard talk to prove either that Peter was ever at Rome, or if that granted, that he made theſe places in his journey. If I would inſiſt upon the reaſon why he writes to theſe places, that he was never at, the ſame reaſon might more warrantably be given, that may be given of S. Pauls writing to Coloſſe, whoſe faces he never ſaw, as may be gueſſed from Chap. II. 1. viz. becauſe horrid hereſies, and Apoſtacy were exceedingly grown in thoſe Churches. And what Babylon is here meant we ſhall obſerve in the progreſs of our diſcourſe.

In the words of the Text are four things contained. I. Peter was at Babylon when he wrote this Epiſtle. II. There was a Church there. III. The title that he gives that Church, it was elect, together with thoſe alſo to whom he writes. IV. This Church ſalutes the others. The Hiſtorical diſcourſe of theſe things is firſt requiſite, before we come to the Practical.

I. Peter was at Babylon when he wrote this Epiſtle. For though he ſay not directly, I from Babylon ſalute you, but the Church which is at Babylon, &c. yet it is ſo plain, that he was then with that Church, that none ever ſcrupled it. Time hath been when the place of Peters reſidence and death, was more an Article of Faith, than to determine the place of the reſidence and death of any other mentioned in Scripture. But by craft and deceit it was at laſt brought to be the greateſt Article of Faith in all Religion. For though you believe all the Scripture, yet if you believe not that Peter was at Rome, you know who will tell you, you had as good believe nothing. Let not your thoughts prejudge me to your impatience, as if I were ſetting in to tyre you with diſpute, whether Peter were at Rome or no? I will confine my ſelf to the Text, and that only becauſe this Text is brought as a proof that Peter was there. I ſhall therefore, Firſt, ſpeak ſomething to the riſe and original of that opinion. And ſecondly, examine, whether Babylon in the Text mean ſo or no?

1. In

In all the Scripture you cannot find Peter nearer Rome, than in the Town Joppa; and our Proteſtant Writers have made it as plain as the Sun at noon day, that he was never there. Therefore it is a ſtupendious thing to think, how this conceit hath invaded the World, and got ſo high a ſeat in the hearts of men, and among the Articles of Religion. To trace backward toward the ſpring head of it, I ſuppoſe this is undeniable, that many a good man was of this opinion, before it became an opinion of advantage, eſpecially of that advantage which hath been made of it theſe many hundred years. None almoſt of the Fathers, that lived and wrote before the Papacy aroſe, and that monſter of an Univerſal Biſhop appeared, but he held ſo, but he wrote ſo. For tis far more probable, that theſe paſſages in them to this purpoſe were their own or moſt of them, than that they were foiſted into them all, and into all places where they are met withal in them. I cannot but in my thoughts compare theſe good men to Abſaloms gueſts, in 2 Sam. XV. 11. that went along with him in their ſimplicity, and they knew not any thing: ſo theſe took up this miſtake in their ſimplicity, knowing not any thing of the ill uſe that would afterwards be made of it.

But how ſhould theſe good and learned Men come into that belief, viz. of a thing, that in it ſelf had no ground? For ſatisfaction to which let us conſider two things. I. In general to obſerve the proper cauſes of the riſe of falſhoods in Eccleſiaſtical Story. And II. to apply this particular caſe to them.

The falſities and fictions in Eccleſiaſtical Story, which are not few nor ſmall, have proceeded eſpecially from four Originals, one or more or all.

Firſt, From ignorance or miſconſtruction, when men have framed ſtories from phraſes, or paſſages of Scripture, which they have miſconſtrued or not underſtood. We ſee by experience in common intercourſe, how many lying relations are raiſed upon words of men miſtaken, and not rightly underſtood, ſo it is too obvious in Eccleſiaſtical Story: when men have not underſtood, what ſuch a phraſe, paſſage or relation in Scripture meant, they have been ready to conſtrue it according to their own ignorance, and to frame ſtories upon it according to their conſtruction. I ſhall give but one Example, and that big enough for many, viz. that huge ſtory of John the Evangeliſt, his being boyled in ſcalding oyl, and yet not kild, and when buried at Epheſus, yet his grave beating, as if he lived within it. If you trace to the proper ſpring head, you will find it founded upon ignorance of the meaning of thoſe words, in XXI. John 22. If I will that he tarry till I come what is that to thee? Which were miſtaken when firſt ſpoken: as if that Apoſtle ſhould not dye.

I might ſpeak how ignorance in other Stories and Sciences hath brought in multitudes of falſities, as Domitians killing Davids line, &c.

A ſecond original is over-officiouſneſs of the Relator. And that hath outſhot the other many bow-lengths. Ignorance hath bred its thouſands, but this its ten thouſands. The undoing of Hiſtory is the overdoing. When Hiſtorians over-ſedulous and over-officious to advance the honour of Religion, and religious men, have thought they could never ſay enough, and ſaid they cared not what: and like Poets have never thought enough ſaid, till ſo much is ſaid as none can believe. I ſhall give but one example, and that in the very beginning of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. Menologia, Surius, &c. will afford thouſands. The example is this, that there is hardly one named in the New Teſtament with any credit, or without a brand, but in Eccleſiaſtical Story he is made either a Planter of Religion in ſome Country, or a Biſhop or a Martyr or all. See Dorotheus his Synopſis, and other Hiſtories of thoſe times, and you will find this ſo. Now this is not true, neither is it from Ignorance, nor indeed from their believing it was ſo, who firſt aſſerted it; but from officiouſneſs to do theſe men honour, that they might have more than bare naming in the New Teſtament. There is a particular fabulouſneſs in Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, that I know not whether to refer to ignoronce, or this, or to make it a mungrel of both. Such as that, That Chriſt laid in a manger betwixt an Ox and an Aſſe, becauſe it is ſaid, Eſa. I. 3. The Ox knoweth his owner, and the Aſſe his Maſters crib. And that, That the wiſe men, Matth. II. were three Kings, becauſe it is ſaid, Pſal. LXX. 10. The Kings of Tarſhiſh and of the Iſles ſhall bring Preſents, the Kings of Sheba and Seba ſhall offer gifts. Whether this was the effect of ignornace or officiouſneſs or both, its Father was an Amorite, and its Mother a Hittite.

Thirdly, A third original of this is, ſtudium partium, favour to a party. This is officiouſneſs ſworn and engaged to a ſide. What this hath done in all ſtories, he knows but little of ſtory that hath not obſerved. Officiouſneſs to Religion in general, and to good Men in general, who were unknown and unrelated to, hath done much, this more. When Writers in their Relations were minded to honour ſingular places, perſons, actions, tis hard to find them keeping within bounds. He is an Hiſtorian indeed, that can keep ab odio procul & favore, free from envy and affection; eſpecially when he writes near that time of thoſe perſons and actions, which he writes of.

When

When I read Euſebius de Vita Conſtantini, and Sozomen, and Julian in Cæſaribus, De Conſtantino, I cannot but be ſuſpitious on both hands, that ſtudium partium, odium & favor have made the contrary parties lay on ſo much black and white, that it is impoſſible to diſcern the true viſage. Thouſands of ſuch Relations thus tainted might be produced. Hence are more Martyrs in the Calendar, than ever were in the World, and more miracles than ever men of reaſon, eſpecially that knew Scripture, did or well or can believe. But to pitch near the caſe in hand. How hath it ever been a partiality and Studium ſui in Countries and Cities to father their original upon ſome tranſcendent perſon or other: the Heathens on ſome Deity? So Livy. Datur hæc venia antiquitati, ut miſcendo humana divinis, primordia urbium auguſtiora fiant. Chriſtian Cities or Countries have the like ambition, to refer the original of their Religion to ſome chief Apoſtle, Saint or Martyr.

Fourthly, A fourth origine of falſhood in Eccleſiaſtical hiſtory is Animus decipiendi, a mind and purpoſe to deceive. And this hath been ſometimes done pia fraude, out of an holy craft: becauſe hiſtories do affect, and men are led by example. And therefore if Piety and Religion be promoted, no matter whether it be done by truth or falſhood. But ſometimes this hath been done impiiſſima impudentia, out of a moſt wicked ſhameleſneſs. Some there have been, who have made it a trade to impoſe upon the belief of mankind, either to amuſe mens minds, or to abuſe them, or to interrupt their ſtudy and believing of better things.

II. Now which of theſe four originals ſhall we refer this opinion unto? It is no doubt but animus decipiendi in this laſt and worſt ſence hath maintained, that St. Peter was at Rome, but that was not the firſt cauſe of that Poſition. Therefore let us try the Original of it by the three forementioned. Firſt, Might it not be occaſioned by ignorance and miſconſtruction of Scripture? To make this appear the more probably to be a cauſe of it, let me preface theſe few things.

1. That from the death of Peter to the aſſerting of this opinion by authors of leſs ſuſpition, was not an hundred and fifty years.

2. Obſerve, that the Scripture is ſilent of the place of Peters death, unleſs it be to be collected from hence.

3. Credulity in thoſe times was better cheap: partly, becauſe deceit was not then ſuſpected, nor diſcovered: partly, becauſe neither were Copies of the New Teſtament ſo common, nor generally were men ſo well verſed in them.

4. How eaſie was it to miſconſtrue this place; and take Babylon to ſignifie Rome, and ſo to uſe it as an argument to confirm Peters being there? And this miſtake might be the original of that opinion.

But however this might adminiſter ſome occaſion to this error, I ſhould aſcribe more influence to the two other things before mentioned, viz. Officiouſneſs to Peter, and a ſtudy to advance Rome. For obſerve, Firſt, In ſtory we find that the Church of Rome was always much ſpoken of, and of great authority. And Secondly, Obſerve therefore, how Hiſtory, that it might dignifie that Church in reſpect of its Original, hath brought Paul and Peter to be martyred at Rome, and John near it, and he undoubtedly had been brought thither and Martyred, had not the miſconſtruction of Joh. XXI. 22. hindred; ſuppoſing from that Text, that he never died. I preſume James would have been brought thither too, but that Joſephus had prevented it by his ſtory, relating he was ſlain at Jeruſalem. And Ignatius is brought thither from Antioch. Thirdly, It was thought an honour to have ſuch Patrons. And Rome being chief City, officiouſneſs of ſtory muſt do ſomething more for the Church there. Every place almoſt had had Paul for their Founder: it was fit ſure the Church at Rome ſhould outvy others as being the nobler place, therefore Hiſtorical officiouſneſs brings Peter thither alſo. For that Church ſtrove for dignity of place before it did for ſuperiority of Epiſcopacy. And upon this account tis like it was invented, that the Miniſter of Circumciſion Peter, as well as the Miniſter of Uncircumciſion Paul, was brought thither.

II. Now whenceſoever this opinion ſprang, it was a chief prop for this argument, That Rome is called Babylon by John in the Revelations. True, and good cauſe, but Peter had not ſo good cauſe to conceal its name, Plin. lib. III. cap. 5. Romæ nomen alterum dicere arcanis ceremoniarum nefas habetur. It might be too homely to ſay John was imprudent in concealing the name of Rome under another, but rather it had been danger in him to have called it by its name at that time, when he ſpake ſuch things of its Wickedneſs, and of its Judgments: it might have indangered himſelf and the Chriſtian cauſe to have ſpoken out what City he meant, Rome reigning and raging then as it did. Now Peter had no ſuch cauſe. What was there in his Epiſtle or in himſelf, but he might call Rome Rome, when he would ſpeak of it. Paul doth and why not Peter. He deſerved not to be Biſhop of Rome, if he would not call it Rome.

Therefore

Therefore Babylon here is to be properly taken, viz. for Babylon in Chaldea. And to clear it I ſhall only uſe two arguments or demonſtrations.

Firſt, Peter was the Miniſter of Circumciſion, and what had he to do at Rome the chief City of the Gentiles? Paul was there juſtly, but if Peter had been there, he would have been in Pauls line. Herein he held agreement with Paul, II. Gal. 9. He with James and John, gave to Paul and Barnabas the right hand of fellowſhip, that theſe ſhould go unto the Heathen, and they unto the Circumciſion. Tis true, there were ſome Jews in Rome, but they were but an handful in compariſon, not a fit company to ingage the Miniſter of the Circumciſion to come thither, to live and dye there. But rather on the Contrary. But Babylon was one of the greateſt knots of Jews in the world. Scan that Propheſie, Iſa. XIX. 23. In that day ſhall there be an high way out of Egypt to Aſſyria, and the Aſſyrian ſhall come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Aſſyria, and the Egyptians ſhall ſerve with the Aſſyrian. In that day ſhall Iſrael be the third with Egypt and Aſſyria. Compare this with this ſtory. In Judea were Jews none doubts. In Egypt there were no ſmall number of Jews likewiſe, becauſe of Onias his Temple. Now Aſſyria ſhould be as Egypt, repleniſhed with Jews. Of which Country Babylon was a part. And ſince the ten Tribes and the two had been carried away Captive unto theſe Countries in former times, no doubt there were now no ſmall remainders of them there. And then take Peter chief Miniſter of the Circumciſion in Babylon, and he is in the midſt of the Circumciſion. Need I ſhew how there were multitudes of Jews in Babylon, that returned not with Ezra? Need I tell you, that in that Country there were three Jewiſh Univerſities? Or need I ſpeak how there were ten Tribes ſcattered in Aſſyria? Then how proper was it for Peter to have been there?

Secondly, The word Boſor, in 2 Pet. II. 15. ſpeaks Peter in Babylon. What would they think of it to whom he wrote, if he wrote from Rome? But if from Chaldea, it was the Idiom of that Country. Boſor was the name of the place whereof Balaam was Βαλαὰμ τῦ Βοσὸρ, Balaam of Boſor. But in XXII. Numb. 5. it is called Pethor. Pethor being turned into Boſor, by a change of two letters ordinarily done by the Jews in thoſe times, their language being now degenerated into Syriac, viz. פ into ב and ת into ש. So that פתור in the Hebrew was founded בשר by a Syrian. And Peter ſpeaking in the Dialect of Babylon, it is a fair conjecture he was at Babylon when he ſpake ſo.

I ſhall not add more: every argument, that is uſed to prove Peter was not at Rome, is ſome argument for this that we are upon, viz. That he was at Babylon. And the Conſideration that Peter ended his days at Babylon, is very uſeful, if my judgment fail not, at the ſetting out of Eccleſiaſtical ſtory. I only add one thing, that if Philoſtratus, or his intelligencer Damis, ſpake true of Apollonius Thyaneus his being at Babylon, this calculation of time ſhews, that he was there, when Peter was there. And I doubt not but if Babylon had been rightly and clearly conſtrued, the officiouſneſs of Hiſtory would have had a ſtory of his conteſtation with Apollonius, as it hath with Simon Magus. And ſo

II. We are come to the ſecond thing obſervable in the words, That there was a Church at Babylon.

I will not inſiſt on the word בבל whether it is to be taken for the City or the Country. As for the word Church, tis not in the original, but only ἡ ἐν Βαβυλῶνι συνεκλεκτὴ. But Tranſlations generally ſay Church: and I know not what word elſe could come in, unleſs διασπορὰ the Diſperſion, uſed verſ. 1. of the Epiſtle: and then there is this parity. They to whom he writes are διασπορὰ, & ἐκλεκτοὶ, the Diſperſion and the Elected, and ſo are theſe among whom he is. Under theſe two words διασπορὰ and Eccleſia, the Diſperſion and the Church, joyned, we may beſt come to take up the force of the word συνεκλεκτὴ, elected together. And here again I ſhall, as I did before, make two or three Hiſtorical Obſervations.

I. That the Jews were ſcattered before Chriſt is not ſo hard to prove, as juſt to be wondred at. In which reſpect there was no Nation like them. How they were ſcattered in the Nations neareſt Judea, in Scripture it is plain: how in all parts of the Eaſtern Empire, of Babylon, Media, Perſia, you may read Eſth. III. 8. Haman ſaid unto King Ahaſhuerus, There is a certain people ſcattered abroad, and diſperſed among the people in all the Provinces of thy Kingdom: meaning the Jewiſh people. How in the Weſtern parts, (διασπορὰ Ἑλλήνων, the diſperſed of the Gentiles, Joh. VII. 35.) is apparent in Scripture likewiſe, and all other Writers. In a word, all ſtories ſpeak of Judæi intra Romanum imperium, Jews within the Roman Empire, even in all places; and Dion of Judæi extra Romanum Imperium, Jews without the extent of the Roman Empire, that aſſiſted againſt Titus.

II. As this was an extraordinary thing, ſo there was an extraordinary work of God in it. Gods work appears in this their diſperſion, becauſe he had done that which he threatned them to do, viz. to ſcatter them among the Nations; but withal ſome ſingular Providence

Providence of God appears by his ſingular diſpoſal in managing this diſperſion. Not to ſpeak, how he had promiſed Abraham a numerous ſeed, and now ſo numerous as to be ſcattered ſtrangers through the World. He had choſen them for his own people, yet they were thus diſunited; had promiſed them the Land of Canaan, and yet diſperſed them into all Lands; a peculiar people, and ſtill they are ſo, notwithſtanding their Diſperſion, for they run into one knot, and retain their Families: as the Poets fain the River Arethuſa to remain unmixed in the Sea. Take them as a contrary Religion to all Nations, yet retaining their Religion among all Nations, when there was ſuch promoting, nay forcing them to Idolatry.

III. The great diſperſion was from the two Tribes. The ten Tribes were ſhut up in the remote parts of Aſſyria, in Halock, Habor, &c. And you hear no more of them, but of the two Tribes were all theſe Diſperſions in Babylonia, Egypt, all Perſia over and the Roman Empire.

IV. As the Curſe on Levi, Gen. XLIX. 7. I will divide them in Jacob and ſcatter them in Iſrael, had a bleſſing in it to others, ſo here. They the ſons of Levi were ſcattered, but it was to be Teachers to the Nation. So theſe two Tribes were diſperſed about the World: but whereſoever they came, they carried the doctrine of the true God with them, Ezek. XXXVI. 22. There it is ſaid, That they profeſſed the Name of God among the Heathen where thy were ſcattered, though they profaned it. Here are two things obſervable, Firſt, That the Two Tribes were diſperſed, the Ten ſhut up, becauſe the Two carried the true Profeſſion of God, the Ten had been Idolaters. Secondly, So had the Two indeed been, but after the Captivity never; and from thence they were diſperſed, to diſperſe the Name and knowledge of the true God.

Thus God did prefoce to the Introduction of Religion among the Gentiles: as by ſcattering the Greek Tongue, he made way for the New Teſtament, that was written in that Tongue. Seneca queſtions Ad Helviam cap. 6. Quid ſibi Volunt in mediis Barbarorum regionibus Græcæ urbes? Quid inter Indos Perſaſq; Macedonicus ſermo? What it meant, that the Greek Language and Greek Cities were found among Barbarous Nations? It was ſtrange, but a ſingular Providence, viz. that the New Teſtament might reach to and be underſtood by thoſe remote Countries. So if you aſk, why there were Jews in all Nations? I anſwer, for a puniſhment to them, and withal for a ſingular Providence to all the World, viz. to acquaint the World with the true God againſt the time when the Goſpel came to the Heathen.

V. All this diffuſed diſperſion kept the ſame Religion, nay the ſame Traditions, when they came up. All zealous of the Tradition of their Fathers. The Sadducees indeed differed in the Reſurrection, and in Traditions, yet kept exceeding much in the ſame rites, though they pleaded another original. It is a wonder how the ſame ſpirit ſhould be in all, thoſe in Babylon, Judæa, Egypt, (except about Onias Temple) theſe places to which Peter writes, Greece, all the World over; the Leaven leavened the whole lump. Trace the Apoſtle Paul, you find he hath the ſame oppoſition every where upon the ſame account, becauſe he oppoſed their cuſtoms. See 1 Theſ. II. 14, 15, 16. For ye Brethren became followers of the Churches of God, which in Judæa are in Chriſt Jeſus, for ye alſo have ſuffered like things of your own Country men, even as they have of the Jews. Who both killed the Lord Jeſus and their own Prophets, and have perſecuted us, and they pleaſe not God, and are contrary to all men. Forbidding us to ſpeak to the Gentiles, that they might be ſaved. Where you ſee all of them in general whereſoever diſperſed in Judæa or out of it, yet were of the ſame diſpoſition, all zealous of their own Traditions, and bent upon perſecuting the Preachers and Profeſſors of Chriſtian Religion, becauſe that oppoſed them. There is that think, that ὄγκος, & ἁμαρτία εὐπερίστατος, that weight and the ſin that doth ſo eaſily beſet us, in Heb. XII. 1. meaneth this; that this was the ſin that did hang on the Hebrews. However it were, undoubtedly this was their Epidemical ſin, plague and undoing. For,

VI. For this God gave them up to a reprobate ſenſe. As once for their ſins God turned and gave them up to worſhip the Hoſt of Heaven, Act. VII. 42. So for this God caſt off the generality of the Nation, as in a deſperate and incurable condition, even before he deſtroyed their City. See 1 Theſ. II. 16. There it is ſaid, that wrath was come upon them to the uttermoſt. And that Epiſtle was writ the firſt of all the Epiſtles. And the Apoſtle S. Paul, Rom. XI. even concludes that they were caſt off already, though when he wrote, it was long before the City was deſtroyed. Nay, go further back, Joh. XII. 39. Therefore they could not believe, becauſe Eſaias ſaid, He hath blinded their Eyes, and hardened their hearts, Mark IV. 12. That ſeeing they may ſee and not perceive, and hearing they may hear and not underſtand, leſt at any time they ſhould be converted. Which places ſpeak Gods giving them up, and induration of them. Nay yet further back, Matth. III. 7. O Generation of Vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Even in John the Baptiſts time they were deſtined for Gods wrath. See alſo 1 Pet. II. 10. Which in time paſt paſt were not a people, but are now the people of God, which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy. This is ſpoke of the Diſperſion, that believed. Before they imbraced the Faith, God had rejected them, they were not a People.

VII. But God had a remnant in that Nation, that ſhould be ſaved. Therefore he deſtroyed not the Nation utterly, and continued a publick Worſhip among them. See how S. Peter mentioning the Diſperſion in Pontus, Galatia, &c. ſtyles them Elect, in the firſt Chapter and 2. verſ. and here in the Text, elected together. Take two or three other places, Matth. XXIV. 22, 24. For the Elects ſake thoſe days ſhall be ſhortned. There ſhall ariſe falſe Chriſts and falſe Prophets, and ſhall ſhew great ſigns and wonders, in ſo much that (if it were poſſible) they ſhall deceive the very elect, Rom. XI. 5. Even ſo then, at this preſent time alſo there is a remnant according to the election of Grace. Theſe places infer, that God had a peculiar people in that Nation, that he had not given up. To thoſe this Apoſtle refers in the ſecond Epiſtle III. 9. The Lord is not ſlack concerning his promiſe (as ſome men count ſlackneſs) but is long ſuffering to us ward, not willing that any ſhould periſh, but that all ſhould come to repentance. God ſtayed his judgment that he threatned upon that Nation for ſome time, that ſo all that belonged to the Remnant might come in, and that none of them ſhould periſh.

It might be queſtioned, whether any Jews perſevered in the Goſpel till the deſtruction of the City, but thoſe that were the Elect. True, many had embraced it, but God and trial had ſifted them: and there were many hereſies, and a great Apoſtacy: So that Matth. XXIV. 24. argues that the Elect only held out.

And thus we come to underſtand the Reaſon. I. Why the Apoſtle ſpeaks ſo much of their Election? viz. Becauſe the Nation before were rejected, and there was only a Remnant to be ſaved. II. Why he conceals the word Eccleſia, Church? viz. Partly becauſe the other word συνεκλεκτὴ, elecleded together, ſpeaks it enough: and partly becauſe his mind was to pitch upon that that made and preſerved a right Church indeed in thoſe times, that it was elected, choſen and taken out from among the reſt of people rejected and caſt off.

And now we come to take up ſome Theological Obſervations.

I. A Church at Babylon.

1. How doth Grace appear here to abound, where ſin abounded? At Babel was the Confuſion of Tongues, at Babel was the beginning of Heatheniſm, there was Idolatry practiſed in its height, and from Babel proceeded a continual perſecution of Gods Church of the Jews, and yet now there is a Church. How was that fulfilled, in Pſal. LXXXVII. 4. I will make mention of Rahab and Babylon to them that know me. To which alſo that is conſonant, in Eſa. XIX. 23. In that day there ſhall be a High way out of Egypt into Aſſyria, and the Aſſyrian ſhall come into Egypt ---- and the Egyptians ſhall ſerve with the Aſſyrians. God has delighted to ſet up monuments of his grace for encouragement of ſinners to come in to him; and that both in places and perſons. In places, for Example, Beſides this of Babylon, I will inſtance in Antioch and Egypt. Antioch was built by Antiochus the greateſt perſecutor of Gods people, yet Chriſtians did afterwards ſo flouriſh at Antioch, that believers were firſt ſtyled Chriſtians there. And ſo Egypt was the great enemy of Iſrael, and yet in Pſal. LXXXVII. 4. I will make mention of Rahab, that is Egypt. And out of Egypt God called his Son. In Perſons, Adam after the Devil cauſed his fall was reſtored to a better condition than he was in before it. Paul who once was the great perſecutor and waſter of the Church, was afterwards ſent to the Gentiles, and became the great planter and builder of it among them. And he gives that very reaſon, that God called him by his grace to reveal his Son in him, that he might preach him among the Heathen, Gal. I. 15, 16. So much did the goodneſs of Gods grace out face ſin, and the power of grace exceed the power of the Devil.

2. Places or perſons on this ſide contempt of the Goſpel may be capable of God's turning to, but after that, that capacity is loſt. To that ſenſe is that, in Heb. X. 26. If we ſin wilfully after we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for ſin. This Place and all the Eaſt Country are Witneſſes of this.

3. Peter at Babylon and a Church with him. Ubi Imperator ibi Roma, Where the Emperor was there was Rome. Where the Apoſtles come, preſently there grows a Church: Trace St. Paul and you find it ſo, trace S. Peter, and the reſt of the Apoſtles, and ſtill you find it ſo. Tis obſervable, how God, when the fulneſs of time came, inclined the hearts of the Jewiſh people to come in to the Goſpel. You read of three thouſand ſouls converted, in II. Act. 41. and five thouſand in IV. Chap. 4. and πῆξαι μυριάδες, many myriads, XXI. Chap. 20. And among the Gentiles they flocked into Chriſt as the Doves to the windows, inſomuch that God in the Prophet ſays, Who begot me theſe, &c. they were ſo numerous. Certainly this was more than the effect of mans own Vires naturæ, ſtrength of nature: but rather it muſt be referred to the mighty grace of God. Hence our Saviour, in IV. John 35. uſeth thoſe words, Say ye not, there are four months, and then cometh Harveſt, Harveſt, behold I ſay unto you, liſt up your Eyes, and look on the fields, for they are white already to Harveſt: This Harveſt reſpects the Harveſt of the Goſpel among other Nations beſides the Jews, for he ſpake theſe words when he was among the Samaritans. And that of the Apoſtle illuſtrates this further, viz. of the Gentiles coming into Chriſt; in VIII. Rom. 19. For the earneſt expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifeſtation of the Sons of God. Where creature is to be underſtood as πᾶσα κτίσις, is in Mark XVI. 15. Go ye into all the World and preach the Goſpel to every creature, i. e. to the Gentile World. They had an earneſt expectation of theſe times of the Meſſias, and groaned and travailed in pain together for this Goſpel. But I ſhall not inſiſt on that.

II. The Elect of God, elect together or alike, συνεκλεκτή. Firſt obſerve hence, That Election doth not admit of magis & minus. 1. All are within the ſame act of Election in eternity, Epheſ. I. 4, 6. According as he hath choſen us in him before the foundation of the World, &c. 2. All are elect a like in Chriſt as the Head. 3. All partake of the ſame love; the ſame infinite love is to all alike, in Joh. XVII. Chriſt makes that prayer for them all without any diſtinction. 4. All are appointed to the ſame determinate end, the ſprinkling of blood, obedience, perſeverance and Glory. Perſeverance I ſay, and that is a ſecond thing obſervable. Secondly then, obſerve how much this Apoſtle ſtands upon Election, becauſe of the Apoſtatizing times wherein he lived. So great an Apoſtacy was there in thoſe days, that it might be a queſtion, whether any Jews were then ſo much as in the true profeſſion of the Goſpel, but thoſe that were Elect. See Matth. XXIV. 24. and compare this with it. It was a time of trial and ſifted them out. Whence we might build this Doctrine.

That Election is the great cauſe of Perſeverance.

1 Pet. I. 3. The Elect in the ſecond verſe are ſaid to be begotten to a lively hope, and verſ. 5. φρουρουμένοι they are ſaid to be kept by the power of God through Faith unto Salvation.

A SERMON

PREACHED AT

S. MARIES Cambridge,

Novemb. 27. 1659.

ROM. VIII. 23.

And not only they, but our ſelves alſo, which have the firſt fruits of the Spirit, even we our ſelves grone within our ſelves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our Body.

MANY verſes in the Scripture are facil, taken ſingle by themſelves, but difficult when they are to be conſtrued in connexion with the preceding. Of ſuch nature is this verſe. Take the words ſingly, and they are eaſie to conſtrue; We which have the firſt fruits of the Spirit, even we grone within our ſelves, waiting, &c. They may be interpreted to a facil ſenſe; but conſtrue them in connexion and conformity to the ſenſe of the verſes before, as the firſt clauſe of this verſe. And not only they, but we our ſelves, &c. does argue they muſt be, and there will appear, aliquid difficultatis propter vicinam difficultatem, ſome difficulty in them, becauſe of a difficulty near them. We may take Joh. III. 1, 2, 3. for an inſtance, There was a man of the Phariſees named Nicodemus a Ruler of the Jews: The ſame came to Jeſus by night, and ſaid unto him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a Teacher come from God, for no man can do theſe miracles that thou doſt except God be with him. Theſe words make a difficulty in the next verſe, which is, how our Saviours reply there ſhould correſpond with Nicodemus his words. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Verily, Verily, I ſay unto thee, Except a man be born again he cannot ſee the Kingdom of God. Which words are eaſie in themſelves, but the difficulty is to find out the relation they bear to the former. There muſt be ſomething underſtood to make Chriſts words an anſwer to Nicodemus his. Peter ſaith, 2 Pet. III. 16. that in S. Pauls Epiſtles there are ſome things hard to be underſtood. This tis probable is one of thoſe hard places. But Expoſitors, aut inveniunt aut faciunt, either invent the difficulties or make them before they were ſo: and indeed moſt when they have expounded theſe words, leave them more obſcure than they found them.

The main difficulty is what ſenſe to put on the word Creature, verſ. 19. For the earneſt expectation of the Creature waiteth for the manifeſtation of the Sons of God. And I find eſpecially three.

1. Sedulius applies it to good Angels: they grone for mans converſion. But how are they ſubject to vanity? verſ. 20. He hath an Interpretation for that, which is not worth the trouble of your patience to hear.

2. Primaſius out of Auſtin underſtands it of Man only conſidered ſinful. Signaculo imaginis Dei amiſſo remanſit tantum creatura. Man having loſt the mark of the Image of God, there remained nothing but the creature. And, Creatura ipſa eſt, quæ nondum vocatur filiorum forma perfecta, ſed tantum creatura. The creature is that, which hath not yet obtained tained the name of Sons, but creature only. But how this is applicable to the whole paſſage, without much harſhneſs, I leave to your own thoughts to conſider.

3. A third and which is moſt entertained, is, that by Creatura is meant Ipſiſſima mundi machina cœleſti & elementari regione conſtans, the very fabrick of the world, conſiſting both of the heavenly and elementary region: all ſubject to change and vanity and corruption becauſe of ſin; Et convexo nutans pondere, ready to ſink with its weight, labouring to be got into a better condition. Accordingly Beza renders it, Mundus hic creatus, this created World, and comments largely to this purpoſe: and brings 2 Pet. III. 10, 12. that ſpeaks of the diſſolution of the World, to this purpoſe. Out of which two places ſo taken, what collections are made I need not tell you, viz. That after the Reſurrection, Mundi Machina, the Fabrick of the World ſhall not be diſſolved, but there ſhall be a Bodily creature ſtill, but purified and in an uncorrupt condition. But quorſum hæc? & cur finis? Why is all this, and to what end? But I ſhall not now diſpute this, only I would recommend to you to conſider whether taking up this ſenſe the Apoſtles argumentation be proper.

If I be not deceived there are two phraſes in the verſes, as keys hanging at their own girdle, that do clearly unlock them into a ſenſe far different from theſe, but yet a ſenſe plain and probable enough.

The firſt, I ſhall take up is πᾶσα κτίσις, the whole creation, in the verſ. before we find the word in two places more. The former is in Mark XVI. 15. Go ye into all the World, and preach the Goſpel, πάσῃ τῇ κτίσει to every creature. There it means all Nations. For Matthew ſo renders it in the parallel place, Matth. XXVIII. 19. Go ye therefore and teach all Nations: The ſecond place is I. Col. 23. The Goſpel, &c. which was preached to every creature. There it means the ſame; and is as it were but an eccho to that in Mark. There was the Command, here the performance. The Apoſtle here ſpeaks Attic Language, but Jeruſalem ſenſe, Greek but in a Jewiſh Idiom. For the expreſſion does but render a phraſe moſt uſual among the Jews, viz. כל הברויות All creatures, which they uſe for all men or Nations, as I might ſhew you by multitudes of Examples. Now ſince in the two places mentioned it means all the Nations or Gentiles, he offers violence to Scripture, and frames a conſtruction on his own head, and not on his own heart, that ſhall not conſtrue it ſo here. And for ought I ſee one might tranſlate it omnis mundus Ethnicus, all the Heathen World, with as good warrant, as Beza doth, Totus hic mundus creatus, all this created World.

A ſecond key that I ſhall take up and uſe for the explaining this place, is the Phraſe τῇ ματαιότητι vanity, verſ. 20. τῇ γὰρ ματαιότητι ἡ κτίσις ὑπετάγη, the creature was made ſubject to vanity. It is well tranſlated Vanity, but the word is ill conſtrued. It is generally taken for a vaniſhing fading condition, whereas it ſignifies, Vanity of mind. This Apoſtle is a good Lexicon for this Rom. I. 21. Becauſe when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, but ἐματαιώθησαν became vain in their imaginations, Eph. IV. 17. That ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk in the vanity of their mind: ἐν τῇ ματαιότητι τοῦ νοὸς αὐτῶν. Lay theſe two places to the Text, and ſee how they ſpeak the ſame thing. And now to take up the whole ἀπειχὼ in Paraphraſe, verſ. 18. For I reckon that the ſufferings of this preſent time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which ſhall be revealed in us. For the very Gentiles look after this glory to be revealed, verſ. 19. For the earneſt expectation of the creature, of all Nations or the Heathen, waiteth for the manifeſtation of the Sons of God. God had ſpoke much of his ſons among the Gentiles; and now the Gentiles did wait for the manifeſtation of theſe Sons of God, verſ. 20. For the creature was made ſubject to vanity; the Nations or Gentiles were ſubject to vanity of mind, not willingly, but by reaſon of him, who hath ſubjected the ſame in hope, verſ. 21. Becauſe the creature, the heathen World, it ſelf alſo ſhall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God, verſ. 22. For we know that the whole creation, totus Mundus Ethnicus, the whole Heathen World, groneth and travaileth in pain together until now. For it might be ſhewed, that at this time, there were ſome extraordinary ſtirrings, as the child in the womb, among the Heathen towards this delivery, verſ. 23. And not only they, but our ſelves alſo, which have the firſt fruits of the Spirit, even we our ſelves grone within our ſelves, waiting for the Adoption, to wit the Redemption of our Body. And ſo I am come to my Text.

In it are three words eſpecially obſervable towards opening the ſenſe of it: I. We. II. Firſt fruits of the Spirit. III. Our Body. I will take them up inverſo ordine, the laſt firſt.

I. Body. I cannot underſtand it of the body we carry about us. For the phraſe υἱοθεσία σώματος or ψυχῆς, the Adoption of the Body, or the Adoption of the Soul, ſet alone is unuſual in Scripture, but Adoption is of the whole perſon. But I take it for the myſticael body of Chriſt; of which the Gentiles were the far greater part. And than this acceptation of the word nothing is more uſual. God had promiſed the Adoption of numberleſs ſorts from among the Gentiles, and this was to make up the whole myſtical body. And this we

grone for, waiting for the Adoption, to wit, the Redemption of our Body. This this ſame Apoſtle calls the meaſure of the ſtature of the fulneſs of Chriſt, Eph. IV. 13. He hath ordained in his Church divers orders of ſpiritual men; ſome Apoſtles and ſome Prophets, and ſome Evangeliſts, &c. for the edifying the body of Chriſt, for the bringing it to its full growth: Till we all come in the unity of the Faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the meaſure of the ſtature of the fulneſs of Chriſt. Chriſts myſtical Body was growing up from time to time under the preaching and publiſhing of the Goſpel by the Apoſtles, Prophets, Evangeliſts, &c. and was not yet arrived to a perfect man, but when the Gentile World came in, then it attained to its manhood, to the meaſure of the ſtature of the fulneſs of Chriſt.

II. Firſt fruits of the Spirit. This refers to afterfruits, not to grace or glory. But the firſt fruits of the Spirit implies that the Spirit was firſt given to them, and that it was afterwards to be given to others. As the Prieſts had the firſt fruits, and the afterfruits or the reſt the people had. So 1 Cor. XV. 23. Chriſt the firſt fruits, and thoſe that are Chriſts the afterfruits. And this clears the meaning of the firſt word.

III. We. That is, we Jews among whom God beſtowed his Spirit. I need not prove that God beſtowed his Spirit firſt on the Jews. The Prophets oft call the Jewiſh Nation Pools of Water for this, and the Gentiles a dry Wilderneſs for want of this: but foretel that the Wilderneſs ſhould become Pools of water. And this we grone for, that is, we Jews, for them Gentiles, that they might partake of this Spirit as well as we. Or take it, we Chriſtians or Saints, that have firſt received the Spirit, we grone that God would make good the like upon the fulneſs of the Gentiles.

This Expoſition I leave at your feet. If it be not as agreeable to the Apoſtles diſcourſe; for he preſently after begins with Election and Reprobation, that may fall out to be thought of upon Gods calling of the Gentiles; if not as agreeable to the whole tenor of Scripture; if not as full of plainneſs and clearneſs; if not as warrantable by the Language, as any of the three I mentioned, refuſe it: nay if it were not ſo, I my ſelf ſhould never own it. However I will not ſo confine you to my ſenſe, as to ground the foundation of my enſuing Diſcourſe upon my interpretation; but I take up one clauſe without conſideration of the connexion, and that whoſe conſtruction is unqueſtionable, viz. We that have the firſt fruits of the Spirit.

Not to inſiſt upon the word firſt fruits: I will leave it out: and ſpeak to this Queſtion, What it is to have the Spirit? A queſtion pertinent to be looked after, both becauſe of that in verſ. 9. where it is ſaid, That if any man have not the Spirit of Chriſt he is none of his: and becauſe of the common deluſion, I have the Spirit. I doubt not the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the ſanctifying Spirit, and ſo I ſhall handle it. I ſhall anſwer this Queſtion in ſeven or eight Obſervations.

I. Obſerve, Having of the Spirit is ſpoken of man only conſidered under his Fall. I mean the Spirit of Grace, and ſo the Apoſtle here. I mean not in oppoſition to his recovery, but to Innocency and Glory. Adam in innocency had not the Spirit, nor Saints in glory, but man only in the middle condition. True, Adam was perfectly righteous, intirely holy, and abſolutely able ſo to act, but this was not founded in his having the Spirit, but meerly in his nature. He had the Image of God, not the Spirit of God. God having created him, left him to himſelf, did no more to him, but as Creator. His holineſs was not founded in Sanctification but in Creation. The Spirit created him, but left him to himſelf, and did no more to him. And let me aſk, Could he have fallen, if he had had the Spirit? As the Spirit created him impeccaminoſum, without ſin, ſo if he had had the Spirit inhabiting and acting as in Saints, it had made him impeccabilem without poſſibility of ſinning. The Spirit raiſeth the fallen, preſerveth that good men fall not finally, and yet they are ſinful: allow the ſame property of operation in Adam, and could he have fallen?

Nay he had not ſo much as the Spirit of Propheſie. Which is leſs than the Spirit of Sanctification. For Balaam and Caiaphas had that. His knowledge was great, but it was not prophetick foreknowledge. He could ſee future things as wrapt in cauſes, but not things contingent. Knowledge is part of Gods Image, Col. III. 10. The new man which is renewed in knowledge, after the Image of him that created him. This Adam had, when he knew God, himſelf and the Creature as perfectly as poſſible fleſh and blood could. But to know things to come was not for created knowledge, but the Creators. And the Serpent tickles him not with the promiſe of knowing future things, but of good and evil. And our new Creation in knowledge, Col. III. 10. is to know God, not to know future events.

On the other hand, Saints in glory have not the Spirit noſtro ſenſu, in the ſenſe we are now ſpeaking of; for cui fini, to what purpoſe? They are beyond ſanctification, and now need it no more: the Spirit hath done his work with them. And as Chriſt ſhall deliver up the Kingdom to God, ſo the Spirit his Sanctified ones. Ecce ego, & filii quos dediſti.

dediſti. Behold here I am and the ſons which thou haſt given me. Grace is now turned into Glory, Faith into fruition, Sanctification into impeccability; and there will be no need of the Spirit in our ſenſe any more. So that Having the Spirit, is underſtood of man conſidered only under the Fall.

II. Having the Spirit ſpeaks of having it for mans Recovery. The Spirit is given for his Recovery, viz. what God will have recovered. Let us look back to the Creation. That leſſon is divine and pertinent, Eccleſ. XII. 1. Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth. There is more in it than every one obſerves. It is בוראיך thy Creators in the plural: and teaches two things, That as the firſt leſſon Youth is to learn is to know his Creator, ſo therewith to learn to know the Myſtery of the Trinity, that created him. God created all things, and man an Epitomy of all, by the Word and Spirit, Son and Holy Ghoſt, XXXIII. Pſal. 6.. By the word of the Lord were the Heavens made, and all the hoſt of them by the breath of his Mouth. Joh. I. 3. All things were made by him, and without him was not any made that was made. Job XXXIII. 4. The Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life. Now when Gods creation in man was ſpoiled, by Son and Spirit it is repaired. So that as Chriſt ſaith of himſelf, I come to ſeek and to ſave that which was loſt, ſo the Spirit came to reſtore and repair what was decayed. This is the meaning of the new creature, 2 Cor. V. 17. If any man be in Chriſt Jeſus he is a new creature, Eph. II. 10. For we are his workmanſhip created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works. Who works this? Chriſt and the Spirit. Something Chriſt doth by his blood, viz. reſtores righteouſneſs, the reſt by his Spirit, viz. recovers holineſs.

Nay I may add, the Spirit is given only for mans Recovery. The Spirit created man ſo perfect to try him; Spiritus movens the Spirit moving is to try man: outward adminiſtrations are to try him, but when ſanctification comes, it hath a further purpoſe. Compare man in innocency with man after the fall. His ſtate in which he then was, was to try him. But will the Spirit alway have his work of ſo uncertain iſſue? Will he never act but for trial, and leave the iſſue to the will of man? God when he intended not innocency for the way of Salvation, left man to himſelf; Doth the Spirit the like in a way intended for Salvation? Who then could be ſaved? Spiritus movens, the Spirit moving, I ſaid, was given to try, inhabitans, inhabiting only and undoubtedly to Recover.

III. Having the Spirit preſuppoſeth having of Chriſt, verſ. 9. If any man have not the Spirit of Chriſt, he is none of Chriſts: & contra, If any have the Spirit he hath Chriſt; Theſe terms are convertible, He that hath Chriſt hath the Spirit, and vice verſa, he that hath the Spirit hath Chriſt. As, He that hath the Father, hath the Son, and he that hath the Son hath the Father alſo. As Son and Spirit cooperated in mans creation, ſo in his renovation. Perſonal works are diſtinct, but never ſeparate. Chriſt to Juſtifie, the Spirit to Sanctifie: but never one without the other. The Spirit is called the Spirit of Chriſt, is it poſſible then to have the Spirit abſque Chriſto, without having Chriſt? And he is called his Spirit, not only, quia procedit a filio, becauſe he proceeded from the Son, but becauſe he gives him, and is a purchaſe of his blood. As the Spirit moved on the Waters, ſo he moves on the blood of Chriſt, he comes ſwimming in that, and it is ex merito ſanguinis, from the merit of his blood, whoſoever hath him. See Gods way of cleanſing the Leper, which is an Emblem of cleanſing a ſinner, XIV. Levit. 14, 15, 17. And the Prieſt ſhall take ſome of the blood of the treſpaſs offering, and the Prieſt ſhall put it upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleanſed, &c. And the Prieſt ſhall take ſome of the Log of oyl, &c. And the Prieſt ſhall put it upon the tip of the right ear, &c. Firſt, Blood and then Oyl. On whom is the unction of the Spirit, on him is firſt the unction of blood. As the perſon is accepted before his Service, Gen. IV. 4. The Lord had reſpect unto Abel and to his offering. So the perſon is firſt Juſtified before Sanctified. God doth not new-create a perſon whom he accepts not.

IV. He that hath the Spirit hath a twofold work of the Spirit, common grace and ſanctifying grace. We may conſider the Spirit as Creator and Sanctifier; and thirdly, acting in a Work between both. When he teacheth man arts, indues him with intellectual abilities, he then works as Creator, in bonum Univerſi, for the good of the Univerſe. When he ſanctifieth, he doth it for the recovery of the Soul. Now there is a work between both, that is more than he doth as Creator, and leſs than as Sanctifier; but in tendency to the latter, but as yet it is not it, viz. Common grace. Such is Illumination to ſee ones Condition, Conviction with feeling, Conſcience active, thoughts of Soul. This is called grace becauſe more than nature, Common, becauſe wicked men have it ſometimes, as appears by Heb. VI. 4. And you read of Felix his trembling at S. Pauls Sermon. Now the Spirit never worketh ſanctifying grace, but firſt uſeth this to make way: He plows the heart by common grace, and ſo prepares it for ſanctifying grace. In this Chapter at verſ. 15. There was the Spirit of fear before that of adoption. As the Law was
